37-40 The Effect of St Peter's Speech—37. Many realize that they have crucified their Messias. 38. 'Repent'. The Baptist and our Lord had begun thus, Mt 3:2; 4:17, and the Apostles had been told to continue, Lk 24:47. To Semites the name is the person. 'Baptism in the name' means 'to be, by the fact of baptism, consecrated, dedicated, subjected to someone', F. Prat, op cit, II (1945) 466; § 650a-o. Jesus has been shown to be the Messias. To join his community, to belong to him, his baptism must be received. Thus 'baptism in the name of Jesus' is not a liturgical formula, but distinguishes Christian baptism from e.g. that of John the Baptist, 19:5, or that given to proselytes. Mt 28:19 and St Paul's question in 19:3 show that knowledge of the Holy Trinity was necessary, and each Person is mentioned here in 38-39. Forgiveness of sins, a divine prerogative, comes through Jesus. The gift of the Holy Spirit included the divine Indwelling, Sanctifying Grace and Confirmation. 39. Salvation is first for the Jews, but also for those 'far off', not Jews of the Dispersion, who were already called, but Gentiles. The Prophets had taught that the reign of the Messias would be universal, cf. 2:17, and there were our Lord's express commands. The enlightenment St Peter still required was as to the way men were to be admitted to the Church. See note on 10:1.

824f 40. The perverse generation are the Jews who have rejected the Messias, cf. Mt 12:39.

825a 41-42 The Life led by the Newly Baptized—41. Most would already have been familiar with our Lord's life and teaching. All were perhaps not baptized that day; and see Jn 4:1. 42. 'In the teaching of the apostles and in fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and in prayers'. Vg and DV reduce to three these 'four marks'. There is authoritative teaching from the first, cf. § 819c, and obviously a much fuller doctrine than that to be found in the apologetic discourses of the Apostles. The whole group, Apostles, old disciples and converts form a 'communion', united with each other and with Jesus. Chrysostom and many non-Catholics see in the 'breaking of bread' a reference only to common meals, which are mentioned in 46. It is true that this breaking was originally a Jewish rite of thanksgiving for food, but it soon became the earliest technical term for the Eucharist, which at first was celebrated at a meal. It is used of the Eucharist in 20:7, 11, and very probably in 46, and perhaps 27:35 and Lk 24:35. All the accounts of the Institution say that our Lord 'broke bread'. In 1 Cor 10:16 St Paul uses the phrase, and emphasizes how the Eucharist symbolizes and causes the union mentioned in 42. His teaching came from the Twelve, 1 Cor 15:3, 11. The prayers are those surrounding the Eucharist, the beginnings of the Christian liturgy, held in private assemblies, rather than prayers in the temple.

b II 43-V 42 The Heroic Primitive Days at Jerusalem. II 43-47 The Life of the First Christians—The whole section which St Luke must have derived from an eyewitness in the church at Jerusalem, is broken by three summaries, vv 42-47, 4:32-35, 5:12-16, describing the state of the community, and the impression it made externally. 43. These vv even more than the miracle of Pentecost, reveal the Power that had come to dwell in the Church. Awe was caused by miracles, cf. Lk 5:26, etc., but also by the union and love shown, and it was felt by those outside. 44-45. St Luke in the Gospel stressed our Lord's teaching on voluntary poverty more than the other evangelists, Lk 12:32-34; 16:19; 6:20. Here he shows the Apostles teaching the life they had learned and lived with Jesus. The kingdom is sought first, hence the simplicity and joy, but the sharing of goods, though an effect of detachment, is also the especial proof of mutual love and unity, and attracts those who do not believe, cf. Jn 13:35. See on 4:32-35 for the voluntary character of this 'communism', inspired by faith and love, and respecting individual rights, which is still practised by the Religious Orders. 46. Besides common goods, there are common prayers in the temple, and a common table. All give themselves up to the Spirit. For centuries in the Church, this was the model for a 'religious life'. Parallel with the temple liturgy, the Eucharist (for the technical term can hardly have a different meaning from that in 42) was celebrated in private houses, as in 1 Cor 16:19; Col 4:15, etc. 47. 'And the Lord added daily to the company of those who were being saved'. There is a parallel with our Lord, Lk 2:52. Men 'were being saved', thanks to joining the community, cf. 1 Cor 1:18; 2 Cor 2:15.

c III 1-11 The Cure of the Lame Man—1. The evening sacrifice was at the ninth hour, about 3 p.m. SS. Peter and John are together here, 8:14, and in the Gospels, e.g. Lk 5:10; Jn 1:35. 2. The Gate was probably that to the court of the women, and a good post for a beggar, since all entering the temple used it. 4. The beggar must witness the miracle as plainly as possible. 5. St Peter has obeyed the counsel of poverty. The name represents the Person whose power effects the cure. Our Lord worked miracles in his own Name, the Apostles invoke his authority. 7. 'His feet and ankles'. The man had been born lame, had to be carried everywhere, and was 40 years old, 4:22. 11. Solomon's porch, at the east of the temple, was used by those who wished to teach, 5:12; Jn 10:23.

12-26 St Peter's Speech—This has the same argument as the first discourse. The lesson of the miracle is driven home, Jesus is shown to be the Messias, and there is a concluding exhortation to repentance. The same main themes will be found in every speech of St Peter, and in that of St Paul, ch 13, for all aimed at setting forth the new faith to the Jews.

12-16 The Miracle is the Work of Jesus Risen—12. 'Why do you fasten your eyes upon us, as though by a power or piety of our own we had made him walk?' 13. God is mentioned in a way that would win Jewish hearts. Jesus is his waís, as in 26 and 4:27, 30, translated in Vg and DV 'son' or 'child'. It probably has this sense in ch 4, when used among the faithful, but it also means 'servant'. Here in his speech to Jews, St Peter aims primarily at showing that our Lord is the Messias, the Servant, familiar to his audience, whose sufferings are described in Is 53. He wishes to prove once more, that Jesus, in spite of his crucifixion, is the Messias. The title 'servant' is reserved for our Lord. The Apostles call themselves the 'slaves' δούλοι of God. 14. The Holy One, and the Just are in the OT Messianic titles, cf. Is 53:11, and also especially attributes of God. Our Lord is called the Just One in 7:52 and 22:14, also in speeches to Jews. In this title and that of 'servant', St Luke preserves the names under which our Lord's divinity was partly veiled, for those not yet able to receive it, cf. § 817a and c. St Peter emphasizes Jewish guilt more than in 2:23. 15. Our Lord is the author, not of physical life, for the Jews could hardly yet be told that they had killed their Creator, but of the supernatural life of grace, as in Jn 10:10, 28; 17:2, etc. 16 is awkward and may be tr. 'The name of Jesus, thanks to faith in it, has made this man strong, whom you see and know: and the faith which comes from Jesus has given him this perfect health in the presence of you all'. Thus the power of Jesus is the chief cause of the miracle, and the faith in his power and name, which Jesus gave to St Peter, its instrumental cause.

17-18 The Jews in Ignorance fulfilled the Prophecies concerning the Suffering Messias—Again the scandal of the cross must be removed by showing that all was foretold, Is 53, Ps 21, as our Lord had taught, Lk 24:26-27. On the ignorance, cf. 1 Cor 2:8; Lk 23:34; Ac 13:27.

19-26 Exhortation to Repentance—19. 'Repent', cf. 2:38. 20-21. 'In order that times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord, and that he may send the Christ appointed to you, Jesus . . .'. The conversion of the Jews is a necessary preliminary of the Second Coming, Rom 11:25-26, and this is described not as a judgement, but as the restoration of all things, cf. 2 Pet 3:11-13; Is 65:17. 22-23. Deut 18:15-19 quoted freely. 24. The appeal to the prophets is extended beyond the Second Coming to all Christ's work and the events since Pentecost. 25. The promise to Abraham included all races. 26. 'To you first God has sent his servant, whom he has raised up, to bring you a blessing, by turning every one of you from your wickedness'. God raised up, i.e. sent into the world, his Messias, to save all men, but the Jews first, as in 13:46; Rom 10:11-13. The last phrase is perhaps correctly tr. in DV, with its emphasis on freewill.

IV 1-4 Arrest of St Peter and St John—1-2. The priests, better the high-priests, objected to being accused of murder in crucifying our Lord, the temple police to the crowd in Solomon's Porch, and the Sadducees to the preaching of a resurrection, which implied a general resurrection they denied, 23:8. The Officer, cf. 5:24 and 26, was a priest and like the high-priests, one of the Sadducees, who were always more antagonistic than the Pharisees at this time.

5-7 The Meeting of the Sanhedrin—Annas had been deprived in A.D. 15, but St Luke regards him as associated with his son-in-law Caiaphas, who was high-priest, A.D. 18-36; cf. Lk 3:2. He ruled through his son-in-law, and later through his sons.

8-12 St Peter's Speech before the Sanhedrin—8. He b 826b who had trembled before the servant-maid, is fearless before the high-priest, through a grace of the Holy Spirit, as our Lord had promised, Mt 10:19; Lk 21:14. He rather preaches the new Faith than defends himself. 9. 'A good deed done to a cripple, by what means this man has been healed'. He was present, cf. 14. 10. Cf. note on 3:6. 11. Another prophetic text is quoted, to prove the Resurrection, used by our Lord, Lk 20:17, and repeated in 1 Pet 2:7. The Messiah is the corner-stone of the New House of Israel. 12. Salvation comes through the Person of our Lord, all mention of the law being conspicuously absent, and it is perhaps implied that the saving name of Yahweh has been superseded by the Holy Name.

13-18 The Deliberation of the Sanhedrin—13. 'Unlearned, ordinary men'. SS Peter and John were ordinary citizens and unlearned in the teaching of the Rabbis. Their scriptural knowledge aroused astonishment. 17. The Person of Jesus was not to be the basis of their teaching.

19-22 The Reply of Peter and John—19. God must be obeyed, even against the supreme authority in Israel, and it was from Jesus that the order to preach came, 1:8; Lk 24:47. 21. 'For all men glorified God for what had happened'.

23-31 Thanksgiving Prayer of the Church—24. The first recorded prayer after 1:24, begs for grace and miracles to spread the faith. Gk 'Sovereign Lord'. Cf. Ps 145:6. 25. Ps 2:1. 27. The same word naís is used as in 3:13, here and in 30. Within the Church it seems best translated 'Son', especially in the context of the Ps, in which God calls the Messiah his Son. He is the Christ, proclaimed to be Son, at his baptism, Ps 2:2, 7. Only St Luke describes Herod's part in the Passion. 28. Cf. 2:23 and 1 Pet 1:20. 29. The prayer is not for enemies to be confounded, but for the spread of the Gospel. 31. God shows that the prayer is answered, and a further outpouring of the Spirit enables the Gospel to be preached boldly.

32-35 Summary Description of the Life of the Community—Charity and miracles are the work of the Spirit, cf. 2:43-47. These vv prepare for the accounts of Barnabas and Ananias. 32. Sharing of goods is due to the unity produced by the Holy Spirit, the soul of the Church, cf. Encyclical Mystici Corporis, 55 (CTS). 33. The Apostles gave 'their witness to the Resurrection', now confirmed by miracles. 34-35. The Gk participle here, and the imperfect tense in 2:45 show that property was sold, from time to time, by the owners of it, according as the Church's need dictated. The sharing of goods was always voluntary. 'All things' in Lucan parlance has no absolute sense, and in 32 a general picture is being given. The story of Ananias and Saphira, cf. 5:4, makes it clear that they were not bound to sell, and that after they had, the price was still theirs. When Barnabas gave all his property, such exceptional generosity was chronicled. There are examples of houses held privately at Jerusalem, 12:12; 21:16. St James, in his Epistle, reveals the existence of rich and poor there. The community of goods does not seem to have been very successful, 6:1, and other churches had continually to send alms, voluntarily, 'each man according to his ability', to Jerusalem, 11:29.

36-37 The Generosity of Barnabas—He sold all his property, and later, like St Paul, worked rather than 'live by the gospel', 1 Cor 9:6. St Luke loved this lover of poverty, who wanted to give himself up to the Spirit, and found himself caught in the labours and quarrels of a missionary. He must often have met the Apostles at the Eucharist, in the house of the mother of his cousin St Mark, 12:12, Col 4:10, and enjoyed their confidence. He was a large-minded man, and introduced his fellow Hellenist St Paul to them, 9:27. Later they sent him on the delicate mission to the Gentile church at Antioch. Being 'full of the Holy Ghost', he approved of what had been done, fetched St Paul to help, and together they gave Christianity its orientation, 11:22-26. They went on the relief mission to Jerusalem, and returned with St Mark, 12:25. For the later history of Barnabas see 13-15, and note on 826e 15:39.

V 1-11 Ananias and Saphira—Here and by the murmurings, 6:1, we learn that there were shadows, even in the Golden Age. 2. Through avarice part of the price was retained, through vanity it was pretended that all had been given. 8. 'Why hath Satan filled thy heart?' The evil spirit led them to attempt to deceive the Holy Spirit, who filled and possessed the Church and the Apostles, and hence whose spokesman St Peter was. 4. 'While it remained unsold did it not remain to thee? and after it was sold was it not at thy disposal?' There was no compulsion to give up the whole price. These verses reveal the personality and divinity of the Holy Spirit. 6. 'And the young men rising, wrapped him up . . .'. Both circumstances and climate made quick burial advisable. 8. St Peter wished to enable Saphira to repent and be truthful, cf. Chrysostom, Hom. XII. 9. He does not call down death on her, but announces the judgement of God. 10. The grave punishment was exemplary, to show the respect due to the Church, and preserve discipline, both so necessary for the persecuted infant community. Ananias and Saphira had received the Holy Spirit and many graces, 'yet it is to be believed that after this life God spared them, for his mercy is great'. St Aug. Serm. 148: 1 Cor 11:32 also suggests that death may have a merciful purpose. 11. 'Church' used by our Lord in Mt 16:18 now first occurs in Ac as the name of the community at Jerusalem.

12-16 Miracles and Growth, the Third Summary—12. g As our Lord had promised, Jn 14:12, miracles come in answer to the prayer of 4:30. 13. 'The rest' seem to be those with a certain standing, held back by fear of the Sanhedrin, as contrasted with the people, cf. 4:21 and Jn 7:48-49. 15. 'Beds and pallets', i.e. rich and poor were brought out. What warrant this verse and 19:12 provide for attitudes regarded as typically Catholic! Small examples of that preservation of type, which is the 'first note of a genuine development'. 16. 'And there came also together a multitude from the towns around Jerusalem'. The church had begun to spread in Judaea.

17-21 The Second Persecution of the Apostles: 17-21a 827a Arrest and Release—17. 'The party' of the Sadducees was alarmed in 4:2, by the teaching, now rather, by the popularity of the Apostles. 19. The angel led the Apostles out, in such a way that the sentries who were at their posts could not see them, 23. 20. In Jn 6:69 St Peter says 'Thou hast the words of eternal life', cf. 13:26, the new life of union with God, cf. § 818d. 21a. The day's work begins early in the East.

21b-28 The Apostles re-arrested and brought before b the Sanhedrin—21. 'The council, even all the senate of the Jewish people'. 23. 'We laid a strict command on you'. The high-priest does not refer to the miraculous escape, but accuses the Apostles of disobeying the command of 4:18, and secondly of stirring up the people to seek the lives of the authorities who condemned Jesus, cf. Mt 27:25. Clearly the Christians were already a numerous body.

29-32 The Answer of the Apostles—29. St Peter is the leader. Our Lord's command to preach has the authority of God, cf. 4:19. 30. The main facts are once more outlined. Jesus was raised up from the dead. 31. 'Prince' is a Messianic title, the deliverer. Saviour completes the idea. Jesus is the leader who saves, the 'author of our salvation', 3:15; Heb 2:10. 32. The Holy Spirit witnesses to Jesus by outward signs, by inspiring the Apostles' preaching, and by moving mens' hearts to accept it. On this witness of the Holy Spirit see Jn 15:26-27; Rom 8:16. The Gift of the Spirit is not for the Apostles only, but for all who obey God.

33-39 The Advice of Gamaliel—33-34. The violent reaction of the Council was calmed by Gamaliel the Elder. He was probably the grandson of Hillel, the founder of the liberal party among the Pharisees. According to the rabbinical writings, he was held in 827e great esteem, and given the title of Rabban. It was said that when he died 'the Law ceased to be held in honour'. He was renowned for his tolerant views, exemplified here, and was the master of St Paul, 22:3. 36. Gk Theudas. Jos. Ant. XX. 5, 1. mentions a Messianic movement with a leader of this name, which was put down in A.D. 45. Then a large multitude was involved, and it was with difficulty that they were suppressed. Theudas is a common contraction for many names, and so there must have been a much earlier rebellion, of the kind that was then frequent, to which St Luke here refers. 37. Judas of Galilee, several times mentioned by Josephus, led a rebellion against the census of A.D. 6-7. This was to have been used for taxation purposes; and to pay taxes to foreigners was considered a violation of fidelity to Yahweh. 38a. Gamaliel's advice is in keeping with his character. His prophetic words have lost none of their force. There was a legend that Gamaliel later became a Christian, but his advice was dictated by prudence rather than sympathy, as the comparisons he employs show. And as he is always held in honour in the Talmud, the story of his conversion can hardly be true. St Paul disregarded the prudent advice of his master.

38b-42 The Release of the Apostles—40. The Apostles were scourged, presumably with forty stripes save one, for disregarding the prohibition to preach. 41. They rejoiced to suffer in the interests of Jesus, as he had told them to, Mt 5:11-12. 42. 'To teach and preach Jesus as the Christ', i.e. Messias.

828a VI 1-VIII 3 The Deacons and St Stephen. A.D. 36 (?)—This section describes the advance made by the Hellenist Christians, and St Luke must have derived it from sources preserved by them, perhaps at Antioch, after persecution had driven them from Jerusalem. The transitoriness of the temple and Law are proclaimed, and hence the autonomy of Christianity.

VI 1-7 The Seven Deacons—1. 'As the disciples were increasing in number, the Hellenists murmured against the Hebrews'. Some time had evidently elapsed since the events in ch 5. The Hellenists were the Greek-speaking Jews of the Dispersion (not Hellenes, Gentile Greeks, cf. 11:20), and the Hebrews were Aramaic-speaking Jews of Palestine. The charm of the idyllic years is broken, and the first disagreement, though immediately remedied, has great effects. The care for widows, cf. 9:39, and the reference to the daughters of Philip, 21:9, reveal the esteem in which chastity was held. [An interesting addition in Codex Bezae—'in the ministry of the Hebrews' contains a hint that the Hebrews may already have had deacons of their own—Gen. Ed.] 2-3. The Apostles were teachers, cf. 8:19; cf. 1 Cor 1:17, and must pray continually, v 4, not only privately, but publicly, and at the Eucharist. They were above petty quarrels, and could not undertake the service of tables. 5. All the names are Gk, and Nicholas was not even a Jew by birth. Most probably all were Hellenists, Hebrews forming a small minority. 6. The Seven were chosen by all, and accepted by the Apostles, who by the qualifications they required, v 3, by prayer and the laying on of hands, showed that they were conferring a spiritual power, and making sacred ministers. The deacons not only supervised the distribution of meals, but from the first were chiefly concerned with spiritual affairs; Stephen and Philip preach, and Philip too baptises, cf. DTC Art. Ordre, XI, 1239. Though never called deacons in Ac, the Seven perform the same functions as the deacons of St Paul's Epistles, and St Luke knew he was describing the origin of the office. 7. It seems to be implied that the increase (note especially the numerous conversions among the priests) was due to the preaching of the deacons.

b 8-15 The Preaching, Miracles and Arrest of St Stephen—St Peter and the Twelve had shown that our Lord was the Messias, but like their Master, they still kept the whole Jewish Law. St Stephen now develops the teaching as to the temporary nature of the Law, which the New Covenant was to fulfil and replace, Mt 5:17; 19:7-8, and of which Jesus was the Master, Mt 5:22; 12:8, and the prophecies as to the destruction of the temple, to be superseded by the spiritual temple of Christ's Body, and by adorers in spirit and truth, Jn 4:23-24. Thus St Stephen proclaims the independence of Christianity, he is the father of the Gentile Church, the precursor of Barnabas and St Paul, and for that he is martyred. 8. 'Full of grace and power'. Deacons share the apostolic power of miracles. 9. 'The Synagogue of the Freedmen, as it is called', composed originally of descendants of Jews taken to Rome as slaves, by Pompey, in 63 B.C., who perhaps shared a synagogue with the Jews from Africa. Among the Jews from Cilicia was St Paul. The Hellenist Jews reacted violently to the preaching of their former colleague, and later we find St Paul 'disputing' with them, 9:29. 10. 'They were not able to resist the wisdom and the Spirit, with which he spoke'. Here, and still more in the speech in ch 7, Jesus was keeping the promise of Lk 21:12-15, for this true witness of his. 11-12. The Hellenists resort to false accusers, and stir up the until then friendly people. 13-14. St Stephen's teaching is travestied; cf. Mk 14:58. 15. How often when filled with the Holy Spirit, have saints and mystics had their faces thus transfigured!

VII 1-53 The Speech of St Stephen before the Sanhedrin 829a

—He only indirectly answers his accusers by the reverent way he speaks of God's care of Israel, by his praise of Moses, and by showing he speaks of the temple as the prophets had done. His speech is most skilful. He outlines the whole history of the People of God, and, before his Jewish audience, only thus could he obtain a hearing for his thesis that theirs was a transitory dispensation, to be succeeded by adoration in spirit and truth. The speech is so 'alive' that it leads to the murder of its author. He is not on the defensive, but trying to convince others, a witness, a 'martyr'. St Paul heard the speech, and many of its ideas can be paralleled in his epistles. St Stephen speaks as a Jew to Jews, and uses the allegorical exegetical methods of the Rabbis, whence the closeness of the parallels with Heb. There are also traces of Alexandrinisms, and it is thought that St Stephen had studied in the Jewish schools there.

2-16 Abraham and the Patriarchs—God dealt with them outside the Promised Land, and the Promise and Covenant of Circumcision were made long before the Mosaic Law, which could, it was implied, be followed by a more spiritual regime, cf. Gal 3:17; Mt 19:8. 2. Anxious to win over his hearers, St Stephen begins by addressing them with respect and friendliness. 'The God of the Glory'. 'Glory' refers to the cloud (Shekinah), which made known God's presence. St Stephen recalls that God had appeared outside the Holy Land, and before the temple was built. Gen 12 says Abraham received his command in Harran. Possibly he was twice commanded, cf. Gen 15:7. In any case, here, and in other divergences from the Heb. text in his speech, St Stephen was following LXX, or the current Jewish traditions, and the inspired writer has reported him accurately. The divergences do not affect the argument. 4. Gen 11:26 and 32 imply that when God removed Abraham into Canaan his father was still living. 9. There is implied the comparison between Joseph's treatment by his brothers, and that of Jesus by the Jews. 16. Gen 23:17 and 33:19 say Jacob bought the field from the children of Hemor, and Abraham a tomb at Mambré.

17-43 The Age of Moses—It was the Jews who rejected Moses as they had Joseph. In his conclusion St Stephen returns to this continual rejection by the Jews of their prophets, 51-53. 22 is used by the Fathers to justify the study of pagan literature. 25. The parallel is plain between Moses and Jesus. 30. Holy ground and a revelation of God exist elsewhere than in the temple. An angel appeared, but it was God who spoke. An angel represented God, here and on Mount Sinai, 38 and 53, as we also learn from Gal 3:19 and Heb 2:2.

839a 87. Cf. 3:22. Moses had prophesied Jesus, and in rejecting him, it is the Jews who despise Moses. 42. God turned from his faithless people, and gave them up, i.e. in Heb. parlance, withheld graces, and permitted them to indulge in idolatrous worship of the stars; cf. Ez 20:13. 43. Am 5:25-27. The Israelites even went so far as to carry a tent for Moloch, and the star of the God Rempha, Saturn. St Stephen changed the original 'Damascus' to 'Babylon', interpreting prophecy in the light of history, as was the Rabbis' custom. See also commentary on Am 5:25.

d 44-50 From Moses to Solomon, the Tabernacle was before the Temple—Thus God can again ordain that he should be worshipped elsewhere than in the temple and at Jerusalem, Jn 4:21-24. 44-45. KNT gives the sense, 'In the wilderness our fathers had the tabernacle with them, to remind them of God's covenant: he who spoke to Moses bade him fashion it after the model which had been shown him. And when God dispossessed the Gentiles, to make room for our fathers' coming, our fathers under Josue brought this tabernacle, as an heirloom, into the land which they conquered'. 46. David, so favoured by God, had no temple. 43. This is the climax, God 'dwelleth not in houses made with hands'. Solomon had affirmed as much at the dedication of the temple, 3 Kg 8:27. 49. Is 66:1 had taught the spiritual adoration of Yahweh, before the legalistic exaltation of the temple.

e 51-53 Conclusion of the Speech—The history of the Jews is finished, and St Stephen is about to lead up to the supreme infidelity. Meanwhile the anger of his audience shows the uselessness of pursuing the argument. 'Uncircumcised', no better than pagans, hearts hardened and ears closed to the spiritual meaning of their religion. 52. Cf. Mt 5:12; Lk 13:34. The speech has led up to our Lord, only now mentioned. 'The Just One', see note on 3:14. 53. The mention of angels emphasizes the sacredness of the Law; cf. v 30. Our Lord had often made this final accusation, Mt 23:3.

f 54-59 The Martyrdom of St Stephen—54. The rage of the Jews, accused of not keeping the Law, and hearing Jesus described as Messiah, interrupts the speech. 55. Everywhere else in the NT Jesus is 'seated' on the right of God, as in Ps 109:1, but now he 'stands', ready to aid. Only our Lord calls himself the Son of Man, and only before his resurrection. St Stephen uses the title in the sense that our Lord had at his trial, claiming that he was the Messiah of Dan 7:13. 57. The stoning is outside the city, Lev 24:14. The trial was over, the witnesses had been heard. Perhaps there was not a formal sentence by the Sanhedrin, but a general riot. The date may be A.D. 36 (cf. Gal 2:1, but see §676f,g), during the interregnum between the sudden recall of Pilate and the appointment of his successor. In A.D. 62, during a similar vacancy, after the death of Festus, the Sanhedrin ordered the stoning of St James, bishop of Jerusalem. 58-59. As Jesus had given up his spirit to his Father, so Stephen gives his to Jesus, thus revealing his faith in our Lord's divinity, and completing the intentionally incomplete doctrine of his speech. The parallels between our Lord, and the first witness to imitate him unto death, are many: false witnesses, outside the city, the accusations, the reference to Daniel arousing fury, the commanding prayer, and the prayer for persecutors. St Luke is fond of such parallels. He brings them out too in the case of St Paul, see on 20:22; 21:12. Saul is mentioned for the first time; cf. 22:20. 'If Stephen had not prayed, the Church would not have gained Paul', Aug. Sermo 315.

830a VIII 1-3 The Persecution after the Martyrdom—1. A general persecution was now begun by the Sanhedrin, with Saul as their chief instrument. 22:5. The new governor, Marcellus, only arrived after some months, and was himself superseded a year later. Persecution developed the Church, (1) because it separated Christians off, (2) because the Gospel began to be preached as far as Syria. The Apostles, as 'Hebrews', and strict observers of the Law, were not threatened like the 830a Hellenist Christians with their wider horizon; 8:14 shows there was no question of divergence. 2. The devout men were perhaps Jews, as in 2:5, since most Christians had fled. 3. Cf. 22:4; 26:10.

4-40 Acts of Philip the Deacon—4-9a He preaches in b Samaria—4. The Apostles remaining in Jerusalem, the deacons evangelize. St Luke collected his information from Philip personally at Caesarea. 5. 'A city of Samaria'. If Sebaste, its capital, is meant, half the inhabitants were pagans. In any event, preaching to Samaritans was a further step towards universality. 6. Cf. our Lord's reception, Jn 4:39-42.

9b-13 Simon Magus—Gnostic legend gave him great e importance, but this ch is all that the NT tells about him. 10. Simon gave himself out as the representative of God, and his very title is probably a magical formula. This was the first encounter of the Church with the magic that flourished in the pagan world; cf. 13:8; 16:16; 19:19. 12. Philip preached about 'the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ'. 13. Our Lord did not rate highly faith based on miracles, Jn 4:48; 14:12, and for this magician they were a temptation, 18. 14-17 SS Peter and John sent from Jerusalem—14. On St Peter's position, see § 819d. 15-17. The deacon could not confirm, see § 820b. The giving of the Holy Spirit was accompanied by manifestations like those at Pentecost.

18-25 The Sin of Simon—18-19. He regarded the d external charismata as the magical effects of the laying on of hands. 20. St Peter is not cursing Simon, whose conversion he desired, but expressing horror at the traffic proposed, hence 'Simony'. 22. 'Repent of this wickedness of thine, and pray to the Lord that if possible the thought of thy heart be forgiven thee'. The doubt is due to Simon's wrong disposition, 23. 24. He does not yet repent, but fears a magical efficacy in St Peter's words. 25. The Apostles extend the Church, and preach 'to many villages of the Samaritans'.

26-40 Philip baptizes the Ethiopian—Deut 23:1 for- e bidding admission to Judaism of eunuchs, was not strictly applied, and the word may be used here merely in the sense of 'minister'. Hence many think the pious minister who had come 'to adore' was a Jew, or at least a proselyte who accepted the whole Law, including circumcision, cf. Boudou, op. cit. 174. Others consider he was simply one who 'feared God', see 10:2. In that case Philip, inhibited by none of St Peter's scruples, anticipated the decisive action of the latter, ch 10, but only with an isolated individual, and it was evidently not his usual practise; cf. v 40, and 10:1. However St Luke seems to wish us to understand that the Ethiopian was a real eunuch, for his ministerial office is described separately, 'of great authority', and that after baptizing Samaritans, Philip took a further step in the direction of universality by baptizing one for whom circumcision was a physical impossibility. 26. 'This is desert' is not part of the angel's speech, but is a Lucan parenthesis to explain that 'old' Gaza, a deserted ruin, some little distance from the inhabited city, is meant. 27. Candace was the generic name of the queens of Ethiopia, the modern Sudan. 29. For the interior work of conversion, the guidance of the Spirit is necessary. 32-33. Is 53:7-8, in LXX. 'In his humiliation justice was denied him. Who can describe the wickedness of his generation, which has taken his life', gives perhaps the meaning. 35. Philip uses the same argument as his Master, Lk 24:26. 37, though known to St Irenaeus, is not in the best MSS, and perhaps began as an early gloss to fulfil the need of some confession of faith. 38. Cf. DAC, Art. Immersion, VII, 305. 39. Philip was miraculously removed. Tradition, as far back as St Irenaeus makes the eunuch the apostle of his country. 40. Azotus was predominantly Jewish, but Caesarea, 50 m. N., was a pagan city, though it contained many Jews. It was the political capital, and the Procurator's residence. Herod the Great had rebuilt it on a lavish scale, and made the harbour safe 830e in all weathers. It was, or now became, Philip's home, 2:18.

831a IX 1-30 The Conversion of St Paul—See also §§ 664, 676f, g.—1-9 On the Road to Damascus, A.D. 36 (?) The persecution after the martyrdom of St Stephen, not only spread the Church, but led to the conversion of the man who was to be its chief Apostle in the pagan world. Besides this narrative, St Luke gives two, more oratorical, accounts by St Paul, that to the Jewish mob, 22:6, and the speech before the pagan Festus, 26:12. The slight differences in the accounts reflect their varying audiences and are a guarantee of their historicity. We are meant to understand that here was an event of epoch-making importance, effected, not by the Holy Spirit, but by our Lord in Person, and constituting the new convert an Apostle, on a level with those who had seen him after the Resurrection. 1. The history is carried on from 8:3. After persecuting with all his might in Jerusalem, Saul turns his attention to the Christian centre next in importance, and the date is still soon after the death of St Stephen. 2. From 22:5 we learn that the Sanhedrin as well as the high-priest authorized Saul. The Sanhedrin theoretically had jurisdiction over the Jews of the Dispersion, Deut 17:8 ff., and Josephus tells us that the empire had acknowledged this right, Ant. XIV, 10 and Jos. B.J. I. 24.2. Damascus, 180 m. from Jerusalem, and occupied by the Romans since 65 B.C., was a Hellenistic city with a large Jewish population. The first Christians dwelling there were, no doubt, converts from Pentecost, and were still attending the synagogue. 'Belonging to the way', i.e. way of life; cf. Gen 18:19; Ps 5:9; 17:31. This was a regular term for the new faith, 18:25-26; 19:9, 23; 22:4; 24:14, 22, cf. 16:17, and Jn 14:6. To those outside, Christianity appeared essentially as a new way of life. 3. The place was near enough to Damascus for the journey to be completed on foot, 8. The time was midday, 22:6, and the light that flashed, brighter than the sun. 4. Saul and his companions fell to the ground, and Saul heard a voice that spoke in Aramaic, adding, at the end of this verse, 'it is hard for thee to kick against the goad, 26:14, i.e. the prong used for oxen; cf. too, Eccl 12:11. The phrase seems to have been a proverb, and is applied to the external circumstances of the conversion of Saul, who always insisted that he had acted in good faith as a persecutor, and ascribed his conversion to the overpowering grace of God; cf. 23:1; 24:16; 1 Cor 15:9-10; 1 Tim 1:12-16. The rationalist attempt to explain the vision away, on psychological grounds, as the resolution of a conflict in Saul's mind, has no basis in the known facts. In persecuting his followers Saul was persecuting Jesus. 'Caput pro membris clamabat'; cf. Mt 10:25; Lk 10:16. The Pauline doctrine is here in germ, salvation by faith, cf. 26:18, and by the grace of God, and Jesus one with his followers. 5-7a. Realizing that here is a divine intervention, Saul asks who speaks, prepared at once to obey cf. 26:19. His life is changed in an instant. 'I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. But arise, go into the city, and there shall it be told thee what thou must do'. The intervening words are not found in the Gk MSS, nor in many of Vg. 7b. Saul's companions fell down at the first shock, but had by now risen to their feet. They heard the voice speak, but they did not understand what was said, as is clear from 22:9, which says, 'they heard not the voice'. The word 'hear' in the later passage is used in the sense of 'understand', as in 1 Cor 14:2. The word for 'voice' in 7 is in the genitive, suggesting the sound, but in 22:9 it is in the accusative, suggesting intellectual perception. 'An old and well-known distinction between the acc. and gen. with ἀκούω saves the author of 9:7 and 22:9 from a patent self-contradiction. . . . J. H. Moulton, A Grammar of NT Gk (1908⁸) 66. For a parallel of the fact, see Jn 12:28-29. All saw the light, 22:9, only Saul saw Jesus. The vision is attested independently by Ananias, 9:17; 22:14. 8. Cf. 22:11. Saul is led 831e captive, to learn the faith he had attacked, and later to open the eyes of others, 26:18.

10-19a Saul's Baptism—10. Ananias was a Christian, but also 'a man according to the Law', 22:12. Jesus receives from his followers the divine title of 'Lord'. 11. This famous street, once divided in three by a double row of columns, still runs through Damascus from East to West. Nothing is known of Judas. 12. 'Saul is praying, and he has seen, in a vision, a man named Ananias come in and put his hands upon him to give him sight'. Ananias is reassured, his visit will be expected. Cf. the double vision in the case of Cornelius. Vg and DV take 12 as a parenthesis by St Luke. [It might also be a gloss.—Gen. Ed.] 13. The Church in Jerusalem obtained the name of the 'Saints', derived from the OT, owing to the impression produced by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Its members were those chosen by God as the kernel of the new Messianic kingdom. They were saints because the Holy Spirit had come to them visibly, and dwelt in them. St Paul was to take over the word and the idea, adding that of 'Noblesse oblige'. Cf. 9:32, and L. Cerfaux, ETL 2 (1925) 510. In calling them the saints of Jesus Ananias reveals that for him, Jesus is God. 14. As much is implied by invoking his name, i.e. in the language of the OT, adoring Jesus, cf. 21. This 'invocation' separated Christians from Jews, cf. 4:17; 5:28. 15. The Gk can also be translated 'a chosen instrument', and this metaphor fits better than that of the potter's vessel. The Gentiles are mentioned first because Saul will be their apostle, cf. 22:21; Gal 1:15-16; 2:7. From 22:15 and 26:16 we see that Saul is to be a 'minister and witness' like the other Apostles; cf. 1:21; 1 Cor 15:5-11; 9:1; Rom 1:5. He was to appear before proconsuls, governors, Herod and perhaps Nero himself. 16. Saul will also obtain the blessings promised to those persecuted for Jesus' sake, Mt 5:11, and will learn his sufferings by experiencing them, rather than by revelation, cf. rest of Ac, and 2 Cor 11:23-33. 17. In 22:13-16 St Paul gives more fully the message of Ananias. See too on 26:16. Ananias had the grace of healing, and it may be that the exercise of this and no more, is implied by Saul's being filled with the Holy Spirit. The text, however, leaves it open to us to hold that the outpouring of the Holy Spirit followed the baptism, as always, except in the special case of Cornelius. Then we should say that Ananias, as head of the Christian community at Damascus, had the power to lay on hands for the conferring of the Holy Spirit. 18. A crust had evidently formed over Saul's eyes. The way Luke the physician describes the miracle, rules out the idea that 'as it were scales' should be taken metaphorically.

19b-25 Saul preaches at Damascus—19b. Baptism brings Saul into communication with the disciples. 20. Gal 1:17 says that Saul went to Arabia, and then returned to Damascus, going to Jerusalem three years after his conversion. St Luke omits all reference to this retreat in Arabia. His point of view is that of the external development of the Church, while St Paul was proving that he did not visit Jerusalem for three years. The retreat can be placed at once after 19, or after 22, after a period of preaching in Damascus. The former is perhaps the more likely, if the retreat was sufficiently short to suit the 'immediately' of 20 and if by Arabia is meant the desert near Damascus. St Luke tells us that Saul was only a few days at Damascus, 19, and yet later, 'when many days were passed', he is there again, all of which implies an absence. He preached that Jesus is the Son of God, the only occurrence of the phrase in Ac. In view of St Paul's usage, he was already teaching the Jews that Jesus was God like his Father. 22. Not affirming but 'proving' from Scripture that Jesus was the Messiah. 23. The Jewish plot to slay him (as being an apostate from Judaism) was three years after the conversion. Gal 1:18 (c. A.D. 39?). This date is confirmed by the mention of the Ethnarch of Aretas, 831f 2 Cor 11:32, who seems to have ruled in Damascus c.A.D. 38-40. 24. In 2 Cor the Jews are not mentioned. They were very influential, and had evidently secured the Ethnarch's support. 25. 'But his own disciples'. Saul already had a following. There are still houses built against the walls of Damascus, with windows overlooking.

g 26-30 Saul's Visit to Jerusalem—26. Gal 1:18-19 gives the motive—'to see Peter'. The difficulty in accepting the conversion of Saul may have been increased by lack of information, caused by his retreat in Arabia and by the war between Aretas and Herod Antipas, which interrupted communications. 27. Barnabas was well qualified to act as intermediary; see note on 4:36. 29. Gk has, 'He spoke and disputed with the Hellenists'. The Hellenists here are Jews, not Christians as in 6:1. The differing use of the term is probably due to St Luke's different sources. Saul the Hellenist takes up the work of St Stephen, and arouses the same fury, cf. 22:18. 30. Saul's stay was cut short and lasted only 15 days unless it was St Peter who left after that period; and of the Apostles he saw only Peter and James the brother of the Lord, Gal 1:18. During it he was given the vision in the temple and the command to go to the Gentiles, which also speeded his departure, 22:17-21. Perhaps too, as 31 suggests, the Church in Jerusalem was anxious to avoid another persecution like that following the preaching of St Stephen. Saul returned to his home in Tarsus, till fetched by Barnabas, four years later, c.A.D. 43. Tarsus was a commercial and cultured Hellenized city, on the trade route to Mesopotamia.

832a IX 31-XI 18 Acts of St Peter the Missionary—31 A Summary—During A.D. 39-40 the Jews were resisting Caligula's attempt to have his statue set in the temple, so the Church had peace, and was 'built up', spiritually, as in St Paul's epistles, rather than externally. The description of external growth follows: 'And grew in numbers through the consolation of the Holy Spirit'. The word 'Paraclesis' is used for the consolation imparted by the Paraclete.

b 32-35 St Peter at Lydda—32. St Peter makes a visitation of the churches. Lydda was a small town at the southern end of the plain of Sharon.

36-43 St Peter raises Tabitha to Life—36. Joppe was on the coast, 10 m. from Lydda. Tabitha is Aramaic, Dorcas Gk for 'gazelle'. 40. 'But Peter put them all outside, and knelt down and prayed'; cf. Mk 5:40, where our Lord had no need to pray. 43. A tanner was unclean, since he must touch dead bodies, Lev 11:39. St Peter was beginning to ignore Jewish prejudices, and this prepares for the sequel.

e X 1-XI 18 The Conversion of Cornelius—This is the climax of Ae. St Luke leaves no doubt as to its significance, recounting it, like the conversion of St Paul, three times. The Gospel preaching had made it clear that the new kingdom was for all men, and Ac 1-2; 3:26, etc., bear this out. Yet a decade after the Ascension, Christians were still observing circumcision and the Mosaic Law, as indeed had our Lord himself. Jews despised pagans, and were hated in return, and Christians were still more or less observant Jews. Only when the Law was seen to be abrogated, could the Gentiles enter the Church in numbers. The teaching of St Stephen, and the preaching of Philip to the Samaritans and the Ethiopian, had prepared the way, and now thanks to visions, and finally the descent of the Holy Spirit on the uncircumcised Cornelius and his friends, the last hesitations of St Peter were removed. It was reserved to him to take the greatest decision the Apostles ever made, and to hold the Church to it in spite of strong opposition. The breach with Judaism was irrevocable. Christianity was seen to be an independent religion. The Messianic blessings could be obtained without circumcision. Jew and Gentile could sit together at the feast of the Kingdom. Our Lord's teaching was fulfilled.

d St Peter's Decision gave the Gentiles their Freedom and made possible the developments at Antioch, 11:20, and, still more, the work of St Paul. Logically also it freed the Jewish Christians. St Peter was the link between the 'Saints in Jerusalem' and the new church of the Gentiles. At Jerusalem his decision was accepted, and when later the believing Pharisees disputed it, St James, the bishop of their church, reaffirmed at the Apostolic Council that God had chosen Simon to receive the Gentiles. Although St Peter required so much divine guidance before breaking with the prejudices of his nation, our Lord had taught him, not only that his Church was for all men, but also that the Law was abrogated, Mk 7:2-5, 15; 2:21 ff.; Lk 5:30. This St Peter grasped, at least implicitly. Salvation comes through Jesus, and in Gal 2:11-21 St Paul appeals to a conviction in St Peter dating from before the story of Cornelius; he was disobeying 'the truth of the Gospel', and this is borne out by his words and actions in Ac 2:39; 4:12; 9:43. Still, for him to draw the consequences of his faith, and overcome his repugnance, the divine interventions in ch 10 were needed. The faith was clarified for him first, as in Mt 16:16, and he was able to confirm that of his brethren.

X 1-8 The Vision of Cornelius—1. His name and office show he was a Roman, a Gentile, the descendant of a freedman of a great patrician family, and in rank the equivalent of a non-commissioned officer. Inscriptions reveal the presence of an 'Italian cohort' at Caesarea in A.D. 69, and it may well have been the same one which with four others, constituted the garrison 30 years earlier. 2. 'Fearing God' was the usual term for uncircumcised proselytes, who accepted the Jewish faith, and often many of its practices also. Cornelius had won over his household, and gave alms to the People of God. 8. He was rewarded by an objective vision at 3 p.m., the time for evening prayer.

9-16 St Peter's Vision—At noon the next day, on the flat housetop, where it was common for Jews to pray. 10. Ecstasy suggests a mental vision. 11-12. Cf. Lev 11; 'vessel'=object. 14. St Peter answers with his usual impetuosity, in spite of Mk 7:15. 15. The Voice dealt only with foods, but the application was much wider, 28; 11:5 ff.

17-23a Arrival of the Messengers of Cornelius—19-20. The Holy Spirit still has to persuade St Peter to receive Gentiles into his house.

23b-33 The Meeting of St Peter and Cornelius—25-26. g Cornelius showed great veneration for God's messenger, but, being a believer, can hardly have 'adored' as the Lycaonians did, 14:12, and as St Peter, amazed at such a salutation from a Roman, thought. 28. Cf. Jn 4:9; 18:28, etc. 30. Three days by modern reckoning. 33. 'We are all present in the sight of God', is the better reading. Cornelius waits to hear what God will speak through St Peter.

34-43 St Peter's Speech—The first recorded address h to Gentiles is no longer so greatly preoccupied with the OT, and describes our Lord's life more fully. St Peter must have spoken in Gk, and this is borne out by the involved style, as of one using an unfamiliar language. 34-35 The Principle laid down—cf. Deut 10:17; Rom 2:11. God chooses his elect no matter what their nationality. All are acceptable, i.e. capable of receiving the gifts of God, and justification, if they are in the right dispositions, irrespective of the observance of the Law.

36-39 Our Lord's Public Ministry—36. The Gk is difficult and the text uncertain, but v 36 seems to introduce our Lord's teaching. God sent the Gospel message to the Jews first, announcing peace with God, through Jesus Christ; cf. Rom 5:1. 'He is lord of all men', and so can give this peace also to Gentiles. On the affirmation of our Lord's Godhead, see §817d. 37. Cornelius and the company know 'the story, a story which ran through the whole of Judaea (KNT); cf. 1:22. 38. 'Concerning Jesus'. God 'anointed' his human nature with the graces of the Holy Spirit, viz. those he received at his baptism for his work as Messiah, 832h Is 61:1. His was the Messianic title Emmanuel, cf. Mt 1:23.

i 40-43 Our Lord rose again, and is the Judge who forgives the Sins of all Men—41. Cornelius may be ignorant of the Resurrection, since Christ appeared only to pre-ordained witnesses, but these were qualified; cf. 1:3.

42. St Peter only mentions the command to preach to the Jewish people, but the whole tenour of his speech (esp. 43) shows that the Gentiles were included, as in 1:8. Jesus will judge those who are alive at his Coming, as well as the dead, cf. 1 Pet 4:5. 43. Is 49:6; Mal 1:11; Jon and Ps speak of this remission of sins for all men. Faith in Jesus is alone required, 4:12; Rom 3:22. The joy of the audience is reflected in 46.

j 44-48 The Pentecost of the Gentiles—44. The Descent took place while St Peter was speaking. He points the parallel with the first Pentecost (47); cf. 11:15; 15:8. Circumcision and the Mosaic Law were clearly superseded if Gentiles received the Spirit. 46. Evidently only the Gentiles received the charismata, which were rather those of 19:6 and 1 Cor 14, than different languages. 47. This is the only case of the reception of the Holy Spirit before baptism, see §819c. 48. The Apostles seem to have left baptizing to others, 1 Cor 1:14.

k XI 1-18 St Peter justifies Himself at Jerusalem—2. 'They of the circumcision' is not used in the depreciative sense of later controversy, Gal 2:12; Rom 4:12, and seems to mean rather those especially attached to legal observances, than the whole church of Jerusalem. 3. Cf. 10:28. Indirectly St Peter's whole action is questioned. His defence is that in this turning point he was guided by God at every step. 12. He defends the brethren equally guilty of a breach of the Law. 15. There is no mention of the wind or tongues of fire at this Descent. 16. Our Lord's words apply also to the Gentiles. 17. Cornelius and his friends, though sharing only the Apostles' faith in our Lord and not their Jewish observances, had received 'the same Gift' as they at Pentecost. Thus, not to have baptized them would have been to disobey God. 18. St Peter's decision is accepted. The Gentiles too, have been given that repentance that leads to the new life in God's Kingdom, eternal life begun already on earth; cf. 3:15; 5:20.

833a XI 19-XII 25 The Growth of the Church in Antioch, and the Decline of that in Jerusalem—Hellenists from Cyprus and Cyrene now began to evangelize Gentiles at Antioch, and for the first time, groups of converted pagans were found in the same church with Jewish Christians. Many Gentiles were converted, and so Barnabas was sent from Jerusalem to investigate; see on 4:36. After he had approved and had obtained the aid of St Paul, the converts became so numerous as to make their fellow Gentiles realize that theirs was a religion distinct from that of the Jews, whose Law they did not observe, and for whom a name must be invented. This expansion not only had a profound effect on the internal development of the Church (see on 11:26), but provided a centre far more suitable than Jerusalem for the evangelization of the Greco-Roman world. In a Judaea ruled by Procurators, the Church at Jerusalem had been more or less protected, but it suffered severely from Herod's persecution. The Apostles were killed or scattered, St Peter went elsewhere, and the Church grew more Jewish in outlook, and ceased to be missionary. Antioch thus became, for a time, the capital of the Church and its missionary centre. There is a tradition, supported by Gal 2:11, that St Peter ruled there, cf. J. Lebreton, L'Eglise Primitive, 154. St Luke seems to have come from Antioch, and his information to have been preserved in the church there, which was proud of those who had prepared its path and built it up, St Stephen, the evangelists from Cyprus and Cyrene, and above all Barnabas and St Paul.

b 19-26 The Preaching to the Gentiles at Antioch—'The Queen of the East', the capital of Syria, with over half a million inhabitants, Antioch was the third city of the empire, after Rome and Alexandria. It was famous for its Hellenist culture and philosophers, for its monuments, and for its licentiousness. Jews and proselytes were numerous, and had their own ethnarch, and other privileges. 19. Persecution spread the Church. There were many Jews in Phoenicia, and in Tyre and Sidon its chief towns. The Christians there are mentioned in 21:4, 7; 27:3. There were too a number of Jewish colonies in Cyprus, 13:5. 20. As a result of the news of the Cornelius decision, a new wave of preaching began, this time to 'Hellenes', Gentiles. This would not have been possible, at least as a general practice, before that decision, nor could the delegate of the Church at Jerusalem possibly have approved of it. St Peter expressly stated later, 15:7, that he was the first to admit Gentiles, and St Luke implies as much by the order of his narrative. Dates bear it out, the conversion of Cornelius, c 40 (cf. 9:31 note), the mission of Barnabas, c 42, allowing 43 for the preaching of v 25, since in 44 Barnabas was back in Jerusalem, 11:30; 12:1. For the names of the evangelists from Cyprus and Cyrene, see 13:1. Codex B and other MSS have for those to whom they preached 'Hellenists', instead of 'Hellenes', Greeks, as though the new preaching were still only to Hellenist Jews. This reading is so obviously opposed to the context as to be almost universally rejected. To Jews the preachers would have shown that Jesus was the Messiah, here they preach that he is Lord, God. 21. Miracles showed that the new departure was blessed, cf. 4:30. 22. Cf. on 4:36. Himself a Hellenist from Cyprus, and enjoying the confidence of the Apostles, the warm-hearted Barnabas was the ideal emissary from the Church at Jerusalem, ready now to admit the uncircumcised into the Church. 23-24. When he saw the work of the Holy Spirit in the changed lives of these pagans and in their charismata, being himself so full of the Spirit, he exhorted them to cling steadfastly to our Lord, and not to Jewish observances. Guided by God he judged the situation correctly. 25. Workers were needed for the harvest. Saul was known to be free from Jewish prejudices, and to have a mission to the Gentiles, 9:15; 22:21. He had been preaching for several years in Cilicia (see on 9:30) and seemingly to Gentiles, 15:23. 26. 'Christians'; the great number of converts who were free of the Law, attracted to themselves a definite name, confined probably at first to those who had been pagans. It was derived, perhaps in derision, from him who was the centre of their new lives, cf. 26:28, and 1 Pet 4:16, the only other NT refs. Tacitus speaks of it as a common designation. St Luke's names for Christians are 'saints', 9:13; 'disciples', 'brethren', 'those of the way', 'those who invoke the name', 9:14; 'believers'. The Formation of a Gentile Church hastened Development—The change wrought in pagan converts was striking. Also Christianity was seen to be the whole of religion. There was no magnificent temple liturgy to overshadow the breaking of bread. The new liturgy was clearly the centre of the community; cf. 13:2. The Christian life was not lived more intensely than in Jerusalem, but it was lived alone. 'The Christians of Antioch seemed, from certain points of view, more authentic than those of Jerusalem', L. Cerfaux, La Communauté Apostolique, 85. The Holy Spirit showed his approval by inspiring prophets, and several of them, though not Apostles, had been companions of Jesus, 13:1. The church at Antioch had the authentic mark of charity, and its missionary zeal was soon to make it supersede Jerusalem as the Church's capital.

27-30 The Church at Antioch sends Alms to Jerusalem 27. Following the good reports sent back by Barnabas, some from Jerusalem who had the charisma of prophecy, came to visit the daughter church. This is the first mention of the NT prophets, cf. 13:1, 15:32 and 1 Cor 12 and 14. 28. Codex D has this as the first 'we-section', which shows at least that an ancient tradition held St Luke to be at Antioch, and a Christian at this time. On Agabus see 21:10. There were various famines under Claudius, A.D. 41-54, Judaea suffering in A.D. 46-8. 29. Community of goods may have

833e helped to impoverish the church at Jerusalem, for which St Paul later so often collected alms. From the first this was a sign of the unity and charity which linked the Gentile churches to their mother, cf. note on 21:17-20, and E. B. Allo, O.P., La Portée de la collecte pour Jérusalem, RB 45 (1936), 529-37. 30. The relief was given 'to the presbyters', see §820d. Barnabas and Saul arrived in Jerusalem, after Herod's persecution had broken out, 12:1, and returned after the latter's death, 12:25. Evidently the Apostles were either in prison or scattered. This is borne out by the 2nd cent. tradition that the Apostles dispersed twelve years after the Ascension. It is not easy therefore to identify this journey of St Paul's with that in Gal 2:1-10, see note on 15:1. (See however comm. on Gal, §893d, in favour of this identification.)

f XII 1-25 The Persecution of Herod Agrippa—1-5 St Peter Imprisoned, A.D. 44—1. 'Now about that time', i.e. presumably before the arrival of Barnabas and Saul, who found only presbyters at large, and before the spring of 44, when St Peter was arrested. Herod Agrippa I was the grandson of Herod the Great, who put his father Aristobulus to death in 7 B.C.. He was then at the age of three, sent to Rome with his mother Berenice, and brought up at the Court. He led a disorderly life, and shortly before the death of Tiberius in A.D. 37, he was thrown into prison. Caligula, his companion in debauchery, released him, and gave him some of the territories of his grandfather. Claudius added Judaea and Samaria in 41, thus completing the restoration. He courted not only the great but also his subjects, and his persecution was intended as a proof of his zeal for the Law. At Jerusalem he kept the Law, and offered the prescribed sacrifices, but in his palace at Caesarea he put up statues to his daughters, and eventually allowed himself to be called a god, v 23. The persecution, undertaken to please the Sanhedrin, differed from that after the death of St Stephen in that it struck at the Apostles, whose acceptance of Gentiles had no doubt alienated popular support. 2. St James (cf. Mk 10:39) was presumably accused of a political crime, since the penalty of blasphemy was stoning. This is the last ref. to St John in Ac, though see Gal 2:9. As to his alleged martyrdom at this time see §§607k and 777g. 3. During the week following the Passover no leaven was eaten. Crowds of pilgrims thronged the city, and these too Herod hoped to please. 4. 'Four groups of four soldiers'. In the Roman army each group was on duty for one of the four watches of day and night. Two soldiers remained in the cell, with the prisoner chained to them, and the other two were stationed, one at the door of the cell and one at the outer door. These precautions were in view of St Peter's escapes. He was to be condemned after the Pasch, which must not be desecrated by a public execution. Our Lord's death just prior to the Feast had been at the hands of the Romans. Sentence was to be passed publicly, to please the people; cf. Jn 19:13.

g 6-11 St Peter's Release—6. The night before his trial St Peter lay guarded as usual, 4. 7. The angel 'awoke' him. 8. The girdle which held up the flowing tunic had to be put on, then the sandals and the cloak. St Peter was to be in no hurry. 10. The two guards, 4, were passed, and the outer door opened of itself. The prison was probably the Fortress Antonia; see on 21:31. 11. The street reached, the angel's work was done, and St Peter realized the miracle. 12-17 St Peter leaves Jerusalem—12. 'Becoming aware of what had happened' he decided it would be unwise to return to his own house. On the house of St Mark's mother see on 1:13. On St Mark, probably the source of this vivid account, see comm. on Mk §§724-5. 14. With persecution raging, the door was locked. 15. The disciples anticipated the scepticism of later critics. On the guardian angel see §820g. 17. On St James see on 15:13. St Luke deliberately omits to say where St Peter went, perhaps because, as tradition preserved by Eusebius and others maintains, it was to Rome. In A.D. 63 it may well have been unwise to mention St Peter's visit to the capital, in which he then lived or to which he would soon return. If not Rome, then Antioch, which he certainly visited at some time, Gal 2:11. He was back in Jerusalem for the Council in A.D. 49, and that is the last time he appears in Ac. 18-25 The Death of Herod—19. The soldiers seem to have suffered the usual punishment; cf. 16:27; 27:42. Herod perhaps hoped to put the blame on them. 20-21. St Luke and Josephus give independent accounts. According to Ant. XIX, 8, 2. Herod was celebrating games, probably in thanksgiving for Claudius's return from his expedition to Britain. He appeared in the amphitheatre in a robe of silver. When the morning rays of the sun lit it up, the flatterers cried out that he was a god. The king gave no reprimand, and as he raised his eyes, saw an owl, the bird of ill omen. He was then seized with sudden internal pains, and died in agony five days later. St Luke gives us the precise nature of the illness and its profound cause. As to the embassy from the Tyrians and Sidonians, 'because their country depended on the King's country for food', there seems to have been trade rivalry between them and Herod's port at Caesarea. They depended on Judaea for corn. 22. The people were pagans; see on 8:40. 23. Contrast 10:26 and 14:14. Herod died the death of the impious, 2 Mac 9:5; Is 66:24, in the summer of A.D. 44, and his kingdom was once more ruled by procurators. His children appear in 24:24 and 25:13. 24. With the persecutor dead, and for the next four years strife between the Jews and the new procurators, the Gospel could once more spread in Judaea. This is the end of the history of the Church of Jerusalem in Ac. It only appears again incidentally, and with the Apostles gone, and the church of the Gentiles growing, it declines in importance; see on 15:1. 25. Some MSS including B and Sin. have 'returned to Jerusalem', presumably after distributing relief in Judaea. However, we may safely read, with the great majority of exegetes, as in DV. Barnabas and Saul were planning to continue the preaching to the Gentiles, and saw how valuable the former's cousin would prove, with his personal witness to our Lord's life, and also his knowledge of Gk. The return to Antioch must have been during the second half of A.D. 44.

XIII-XXVIII The Spread of the Gospel throughout the Gentile World. The Preaching and Journeys of St Paul, A.D. 45-63. 834a

XIII-XIV The First Missionary Journey, A.D. 45-9— St Paul now becomes the central figure. The first twelve chapters have prepared the way. He was chosen like the other Apostles by our Lord himself and given a special mission to the Gentiles, 9:15 note. He is still constantly guided by him and by the Holy Spirit. The great vision of 2 Cor. 12:1-6 occurred at this period. The conquest of the Roman world begins, and this first journey leads to the foundation of Gentile churches in Cyprus and S. Galatia.

XIII 1-3 The Sending of Barnabas and Saul—1. On the church at Antioch see §833a, d. 'God has set in the church, first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly doctors', 1 Cor 12:28. There were no Apostles, since they were founders of churches, and were itinerant. The first three names seem, according to the Gk, to be those of the prophets, the last two, those of the teachers of the faith. Manahen, probably a courtier of Herod Antipas, must have been one of our Lord's disciples, Lk 8:3. The church at Antioch had its own hierarchy. 2. 'And while they were worshipping the Lord'. The Gk is the word from which 'liturgy' is derived; the Holy Spirit spoke through the prophets in the assembly. The community was filled with a zeal which the Holy Spirit now directed to the momentous work of converting the Gentile world. 3. The fasting was to obtain the light of the Holy Spirit. Was the laying on of hands episcopal consecration? Barnabas and Saul, though called apostles for the first time, 14:4, 13, already had full powers, 11:22, 25, and were 834b members of the body which is claimed to have consecrated them. It seems preferable to regard the rite as a mandate from the Church for the new mission, and it is described in 14:25 as such a commending to the grace of God.

c 4-12 Barnabas and Saul in Cyprus—4. They sail from the port of Antioch. On St Paul's plan of campaign, see F. Prat, St Paul, ch 2. Cyprus lay on the route to Asia and the Roman world, converts had already been made there, 11:19, and Barnabas was going to his homeland. 5. Salamis was the eastern and Paphos the western port. At the synagogues, besides Jews, there would be proselytes, glad to receive the Gospel, without having to observe the Law or circumcision. 'And they had John (Mark) to help them'. He had not been sent by the Spirit, 4, as events would show. 6. It must have taken many months, allowing for the preaching, to reach Paphos. Elymas was not a mere charlatan, as his presence at the court of such a man as this proconsul shows. 7. But being a 'false prophet' he evidently practised the occult sciences, cf. 8:9. 7. As a senatorial province, Cyprus was governed by a proconsul. An inscription of Sergius Paulus has been found in the island. 'An intelligent man', with a desire to reach the truth, as is gathered too from Pliny the Elder, cf. J. B. Lightfoot, Essays on Supernatural Religion, 294, London, 1889. 8. Bar-jesu had taken the name of Elymas, which is translated 'magician'. As a Jew he would be familiar with many of Saul's arguments. 9. This is the last use of 'Saul', and the first of 'Paul'. Like many Jews he had a Jewish and a Roman name. He was Saulus Paulus. He uses the Roman name, on entering into relations with the Gentile world, where, as a Roman citizen by birth, he was a man of position, and could exert an influence not open to a Jew. The use of it may not be unconnected with his meeting Sergius Paulus. Much more important, he is filled with the Holy Spirit, the real source of his influence, and of the miraculous powers he now exercises. 10. Elymas 'twists the straight ways of the Lord', by trying to poison the proconsul's mind. 11. His punishment was sent to induce him to cease sinning against the light. 12. The proconsul was astonished at the truth so miraculously established. St Luke implies that he became a Christian.

d 13-15 To Pisidian Antioch—13. The phrasing shows that St Paul now becomes the leader of the party, for the apostolate of the Gentiles is beginning in earnest, and he takes precedence of Barnabas except during the Council at Jerusalem, 15:12. In Asia Minor, now divided into Roman provinces, Gk was everywhere understood, even among nations which preserved their own language. At Perge, the capital of Pamphylia, St Paul made clear his decision to cross the Taurus range, and preach in Phrygia and Lycaonia, regions incorporated in the southern part of the province of Galatia. John Mark did not feel bound to face the perils involved; see on 15:38-39. 14. The 100-mile mountain journey was made along a mule track infested by brigands (cf. 2 Cor 11:26) to Pisidian Antioch. It and Lystra belonged to a group of colonies peopled under Augustus by veterans, and intended as a bulwark of the Roman power. Jews had lived and traded here since the time of the Seleucids. St Paul, as always, went first to the Jews. 15. St Luke describes the synagogue service, at which it was the custom to invite distinguished visitors to speak; cf. Lk 4:16.

e 16-41 St Paul's Speech in the Synagogue—This is given as the type of St Paul's exposition to Jews. To Gentiles he gives elementary theodicy, 14:14. Here he outlines the history of Salvation, and shows the conformity of the new teaching with the Scriptures. The three parts of the great discourse are clearly marked by the apostrophe 'Men brethren', 16, 26, 38. The first part runs parallel to the speech of St Stephen, the second and third to the early speeches of St Peter, but the whole is thoroughly Pauline in doctrine and style, cf. § 816b. The conclusion is that justification comes through Jesus.

16-25 The Preparation for the Messiah—16. St Paul 834 addresses not only the Jews, but the many proselytes present 'that fear God'; cf. 10:2. 17. He begins in a way that can only please his audience. 'With an uplifted arm', a Hebrew metaphor for the power of God. 18-20. 'Whose lands he gave them for an inheritance, for about 450 years', i.e. from the time Canaan was promised to the Patriarchs till Josue. 22. God can reject those he has chosen. Ps 88:21 and 1 Kg 13:14 are quoted. 23. Eventually God sent the Messiah, according to his promise, i.e. as the prophecies generally had foretold; cf. Gal 3:29. 24-25. St Paul comes on to the last of the prophets, held in honour among Jews, including those of the Dispersion, 18:25; 19:3. The Baptist preached before our Lord's 'coming' or Public Ministry. As he was 'finishing his life's course' he explained about the Messiah, Lk 3:16.

26-37 Jesus is the Messiah—For he died and rose again, according to the Scriptures. 26. The better reading is 'To us the word . . . is sent', not to unbelieving Jews, but to Christians, and Jews and proselytes of the Dispersion; cf. Eph 1:13. 27. The Jews of Jerusalem and their rulers 'because they did not recognize him, nor the words of the prophets . . . have fulfilled them'. The prophecies of the Suffering Servant, etc., should have been clear enough, 3:17. 28. 'Although they found no cause of death in him, they asked Pilate to have him killed'. 29. Cf. Lk 18:31; 22:37. 32-33. St Paul and Barnabas make known the good news of the promise, to the fathers 'which God has fulfilled to us their children'. This promise was made in various texts, now quoted. Many of the Fathers take 33 as referring to the Incarnation, like 3:22, 26, and 7:37, and 34 to the Resurrection, but even if the whole passage is referred to the latter, it is quite clear from St Paul's epistles that he never thought our Lord became Son of God only at the Resurrection. That was the great manifestation of his Sonship, Rom 1:4. 34-35. St Paul, as always, uses the OT, 'with the respectful freedom of the son of the house, master of the inheritance of his ancestors' (J. Bonsirven, EREP, 338). His very condensed argument is: God, acc. to Is 55:3, will grant the holy privileges he has promised to David. One of these, as God says in Ps 15:10, is that he will be preserved from corruption. 36. 'But David, after he had served the will of God in his own generation' died and saw corruption. 37. Whereas he whom God raised from the dead, saw no corruption. The argument is that of St Peter, 2:27-31.

38-41 The Necessity of Faith in Jesus—38-39. Through him now shown to be the Messiah, 'forgiveness of sins is proclaimed to you'. He is the source of forgiveness and justification, an implicit assertion of his Godhead. St Paul's doctrine of justification for all, by faith in Christ without the works of the Law, is thus early stated. Cf. 'The word of his grace', 14:3. 40-41. Hab 1:5. The Israelites were threatened with the invasion of the Chaldeans, but turned a deaf ear to the prophet. Jerusalem was captured, and the Jews punished with exile. The parallel is clear, and St Paul brings it forward when he sees the resistance to his doctrine.

42-43 Effect of the Speech—The people wished to have the teaching repeated. 'Many Jews and worshipping proselytes followed Paul'. These proselytes seem to be the same as those who fear God, 16; cf. note on 5. All these became disciples, without waiting till the following Sabbath, and received the 'grace' of God. This is the first use of the word in its Pauline sense of a gift of God for our justification.

44-48 The Apostles turn to the Gentiles—44. During the week, the Gentiles had come to hear of the new doctrine of salvation for all, without the Law. 45. The Jews were furious at seeing the synagogue filled with Gentiles, offered equal terms with them. They blasphemed our Lord. 46. In God's plan, the Gospel was to be preached first to the Jews, Mt 10:6; Ac 2:39; 10:42; Rom 1:16, and chh 9-11. St Paul's universalism always aroused their bitter hostility, and the scene in the synagogue was often re-enacted, cf. 18:6. 47.

834j The call of the Gentiles is in accord with the prophecy which foretold that the Servant would be their light and salvation, Is 49:6. Jesus is that Servant, and the preachers of the Gospel are the instruments by which the prophecy is fulfilled; cf. 9:15; Lk 2:32. 48. Gentiles are converted in large numbers, and thus a church comes into being, which is composed from the start predominantly of pagan converts. The Gentiles were ordained by God for eternal life, but not the Jews, who refused to believe; cf. Rom 8:29; Eph 1:5. The context and the Gk show that it was because they accepted the new teaching, that the Gentiles were put in the ranks of those enjoying eternal life. This is the 'life' of sanctifying grace, eternal life already begun, for grace is the beginning of glory, but a 'life' which can still be forfeited.

k 49-52 End of the Stay at Pisidian Antioch—49. St Luke does not say how long the Apostles remained. It must have taken some months to preach through the region. 50. The Jews stirred up 'women of position, who were worshippers', i.e. proselytes, on whom they had influence, and the magistrates, who were perhaps their husbands. 51. Cf. Lk 9:5. 52. The church that had been founded at Antioch was full of joy, due to the Holy Spirit present in souls by grace and manifesting his presence by charismata; cf. Gal 5:22.

835a XIV 1-6 At Iconium—1. This city, the modern Konieh, was a Phrygian town, 80 m. E. of Pisidian Antioch in fertile country at the foot of the Taurus. It lay on the road through the Cilician Gates to the Euphrates, and its trade had attracted a Jewish colony. Now, besides Jews, many Greeks (Hellenes, i.e. Gentiles) were converted, but not, for the narrative is very condensed, all at one meeting. 2. Animosity was aroused against the new church. 3. Yet charismata confirmed the preaching, and leading to divided opinions, 4. helped to avert immediate persecution. Perhaps a year, A.D. 47-8, was spent at Iconium. 5-6. The meaning seems to be that a stoning was plotted by the Gentile mob, and by the Jews with the rulers of their synagogue, but that it was prevented by the flight of the Apostles, who visited Lystra, and then Derbe, and the country round them. This was Lycaonia, which had its own language, different from the Phrygian of Iconium.

b 7-17 At Lystra—One of the colonies of veterans established by Augustus in 6 B.C., 20 m. S. of Iconium, and seemingly too small to have a synagogue for Jews. 8. St Paul noticed this attentive man. He listened to the account of Jesus the Saviour, and his miracles of healing, believed in him, and had sufficient faith to be healed, Mt 9:28. 9. The crowd could not fail to realize the greatness of the miracle. 10-11. The people in their excitement spoke their native Lycaonian. They were perhaps led to think of Jupiter (Zeus) and Mercury (Hermes) because of the legend that these two had been entertained, unawares, in Phrygia, Ovid, Metamorph. 8, 611 ff. Hermes was the spokesman of the gods. 12-18. 'The priest of the temple of Jupiter that was in front of the city', was about to offer sacrifice, at the city gate. When the Apostles heard what was happening beside the city, they 'leapt out into the crowd' to express their horror and prevent the sacrifice.

c 14-16 The Speech of the Apostles—All things to all men, they adapt the truths of natural religion, the argument of 17:24-30 and Rom 1-2, to the simple audience. 14. Cf. 1 Thess 1:9. 15-16. These verses deal with God's apparent abandonment of men. It was only temporary and partial; cf. 17:30 and Rom 3:26. The wickedness of man, following his own will, is gently touched on compared with Rom 1:18 ff. The Gentiles had their graces, and God never left man without the means of reaching the truth. In 17:27 and Rom 2:15 the argument from conscience is brought forward; here to these nature-worshippers, the arguments from order and causality. The participles are subordinate. God does good by giving rain, thus filling our hearts with gladness.

d 18-19 Persecution at Lystra—Since they made a number of disciples St Paul and Barnabas were some time at Lystra, before the Jews, hearing of their success, came even from Antioch, 100 m. away. Stoning was a Jewish punishment, and the Jews, to hide their crime, brought St Paul out of the city, where the vultures would remove all trace of his body. Whether he died or not, St Luke regards his recovery as a miracle, since he could walk back and leave next day, cf. 2 Tim 3:11; 2 Cor 11:25. The converts came out in the evening, and surrounded him, and he regained consciousness or life. Among the disciples were Eunice and Timothy, 16:1; cf. 2 Tim 1:5.

20-27 Derbe and the Return Journey—20. Derbe was the frontier town, 30 m. from Lystra on the road east. Here 'they made many disciples'; cf. 20:4. 21. The shortest route to Syrian Antioch was through the Cilician Gates, but St Paul wished to revisit the new communities, to exhort them to persevere in their faith in Jesus. St Luke then quotes directly; cf. Lk 24:26; Rom 8:17. The context suggests that the kingdom is that on earth, the Church. 22. In spite of the animosities that had been aroused, the return journey seems to have been entirely devoted to the organization of the new churches. The apostles 'appointed' a college of presbyters in each community, see § 82od. They laid hands on them at the liturgical assembly after fasting and prayer, and then commended the faithful to the Lord, Jesus, in whom they now believed. 23. They did not stop to preach in mountainous Pisidia. 24. There had been no preaching at Perge before, 13:13. Attalia was its port, 16 m. away. 25. Cf. 13:2-3. 26. The missionaries are only instruments, cf. 1 Cor 3:7-9. A door had been opened not by the works of the Law, but by faith in Jesus. For the metaphor, cf. 1 Cor 16:9; 2 Cor 2:12. This most successful mission evoked the enthusiasm of the Church at Antioch, which was reached by the winter of A.D. 48-9.

XV 1-35 The Judaizers and the Council of Jerusalem, 835a A.D. 49—St Paul in Gal condemns the Judaizing party; and the question of how best to reconcile his account with that of Luke in Ac has become very complicated. The view here taken is that Gal 2:1-10 refers to St Paul's third visit to Jerusalem, Ac 15.

[According to the South Galatian Theory St Paul wrote Gal just before the Council of Jerusalem to still the repercussions of the Judaizing controversy among his recent South Galatian converts. If this be so, then Gal 2:1-10 can only refer to an earlier visit, viz. Ac 11:30. Nevertheless Gal gives us a wonderful picture of St Paul's mind at the time of this Council, cf. § 893c-d.—Gen. Ed.]

XV 1-3 The Question of the Observance of the Law b raised at Antioch—1. St Peter's action in the case of Cornelius had been decisive, and made possible the Gentile church at Antioch, and the missions of Barnabas and Saul. The church at Jerusalem, though so devoted to the temple and the Law, had accepted that decision, 11:18, and the initiatives of its delegate, Barnabas. Some of its members were now becoming a little obscurantist, with the Apostles gone, and St James emerging as its first bishop, cf. 21:18-26. The reliance it placed on Jewish observances would eventually lead some of its members into heresy; cf. Heb and the history of the Ebionites. Already a party, led by believing Pharisees, 5, and unable to grasp the preparatory and transitory nature of the Law, took alarm at the successful mission of chh 13-14 and the enormous influx of Gentiles into the Church. The Law was a great bulwark of morality, and there was excuse for wondering whether pagans could keep its moral precepts, without observing it entirely. So this party, which did not represent the church at Jerusalem, 13 ff., came to Antioch and insisted that circumcision and the Law were necessary for those who wished to enter the Messianic kingdom on earth, and be saved. 2. A serious controversy arose, and 'Paul and Barnabas and some of the others' went up to Jerusalem, cf. Gal 2:1. It was decided to appeal to the Apostles and presbyters, § 82od, at the mother church, whence the objectors 836b had come. 3. The Judaizing party had evidently little following outside Jerusalem; cf. 20:38; 21:5.

c 4-5 The Welcome at Jerusalem—4. 'They were welcomed by the church and by the Apostles and Presbyters', i.e. with solemnity. St Luke wishes us to realize that the church as a whole did not share the views of the Judaizers. The question had already been decided; cf. 7-11.

d 6-12 The Council. St Peter's Intervention—6. This, the first Council, was composed of the church at Jerusalem only, and so was hardly oecumenical. It re-affirmed the decision accepted a decade earlier, that justification came through faith in Jesus, not through the Law, and promulgated a practical measure, to deal with a particular situation. The affair turned out to be much less grave than appeared at first. 7. Perhaps 6 describes a private meeting, during which 'there had been much debate', and now St Peter announces the result to the multitude. Be that as it may, he speaks with an authority that all accept, and by re-stating his decision in the case of Cornelius, implies that the question should not have been re-opened. 8. God knows hearts, 1:24, and does not respect persons, 10:34. Cf. 10:44. 9. The hearts of the Gentiles were made pure by Faith, not by circumcision and the Law, Rom 3:24-25. 10. In view of the Pentecost of the Gentiles, the Judaizers are tempting God, either because they wish for further miraculous proof of his Will, or better, because they doubt the saving power of faith in Christ. They are trying to re-impose an unbearable yoke, cf. 7:53. 11. We might paraphrase: 'We Jews will be saved, not by the Law, but just like the Gentiles, by the grace of Jesus'. St Paul himself could not have said more. For Jews, too, the Law is unnecessary. 12. Silence shows approval. The objectors hold their peace. But Barnabas and Paul are not silent, they give further evidence that God approves what has been decided by St Peter who exercises a Primacy that none contest, and pronounces authoritatively on the question of doctrine, cf. § 819e.

e 13-21 The Speech of St James—Traditionally and more probably an Apostle as well as the 'brother of the Lord', cf. comm. on James. He was renowned for his devotion to the Law, and seems to have been the first Apostle to become a local bishop; cf. 12:17. His reply to the Judaizers was thus doubly important. 14. He refers again to the case of Cornelius, which shows that God is forming a Chosen People from the Gentiles. 15-17. This is borne out by the prophet Amos, 9:11-12, quoted from LXX. The Heb. promises that the nations once subject to David will be restored to Israel in Messianic times, but this can be understood typically in the same sense as LXX. The kingdom will be restored, so that the rest of men may seek the Lord, and all nations receive a call to enter it. 18. The better reading is 'Saith the Lord, who hath made these things known from the beginning'. 19. From St James' 'I judge' it has been argued that he and not St Peter had the first position, but a word cannot prevail against the context, so favourable, here, as in the rest of Ac, to the Petrine primacy. The phrase bears a very different interpretation. 'For which cause', in view of Simon's action in the case of Cornelius, and of the prophecy, 'I', without wishing to engage others, 'judge', am of opinion, a usual sense of the Gk κρίνω, and one found often in Ac, 'that the Gentile converts are not to be disquieted'. St James shows why he adheres to the decision which has already been given by Peter on the point at issue. He then puts forward a practical suggestion, which so far from being a decree of his own, is expressly attributed to the Apostles and presbyters who adopted it, 15:28; 16:4. 20. The freedom of the Gentiles is recognized, but four practices which Jews found particularly heinous in pagans must be forbidden. Thus Gentile converts will not appear so scandalous to Jewish Christians, and relations between the two will be facilitated. On the 'Western' text of the prohibitions, which is to be rejected, see § 821a.

f The Apostolic Decree is given three times, here, 28-29

and 21:25. 'Pollution of idols' is food offered to idols, 29. Rom and 1 Cor show what difficult questions of conscience this provoked. 'Fornication' finding a place among ritual matters has led exegetes to explain it as the prohibition of marriage within degrees forbidden by the Mosaic Law. The word must be taken literally. There is enough evidence of pagan licence to show how necessary this clause of the Decree was; cf. the warnings found in St Paul's epistles. Pagan and Jewish standards contrasted sharply in this. 'Things strangled', i.e. animals whose blood was still in them, Lev 17, Deut 12. 'Blood', this too was forbidden by the Mosaic Law, ibid. Neither the blood of animals nor meat with the blood in it were to be eaten.

[The correspondence between the four apostolic prohibitions and those of Lev 17:8, 10, 13; 18:5-26, where four prohibitions are laid down as the minimum observance required of Gentiles living in Jewish territory, is too striking to be overlooked. James would therefore appear to be invoking an old legal practice and adapting it to the similar situation of Gentile Christians living in the midst of Christian Jewish communities. The observance of these four prohibitions would provide the Mosaic legal basis for 'intercommunion' between Christians of Jewish and Gentile origin wherever the Jews predominated, cf. CR 20 (1941) 283-94 Art. Except it be for fornication, by R. Dyson, S.J., and B. Leeming, S.J.—Gen. Ed.]

21. The most satisfactory explanation of the bearing of this verse on the argument is that here is a matter of charity and expediency, for these things are forbidden in the Law of Moses, esp. Lev 17-18. This is read each week in the synagogues, and Jewish Christians, or Jews too, will be scandalized if Gentile Christians do not observe them. On the other hand the meaning could be that it is not necessary to announce these prohibitions to Jewish Christians, who know them already.

22-29 The Letter sent to Antioch—22. After St g Peter's speech and St James' plea a unanimity is reached which includes even the Pharisees of 5. Though all were present, the letter was sent by the Apostles and presbyters. Two delegates were chosen to accompany Paul and Barnabas. Nothing is known of Judas. Silas became the companion of St Paul. He was a prophet, 32, and besides being a leading member of the church at Jerusalem, a Hellenist and a Roman citizen, 16:37; 2 Cor 1:19. 23. The letter must in the nature of the case have been carefully preserved. As to the Scope of the Decree, the letter is addressed only to Syria and Cilicia, where the dispute had arisen. It held for any churches that could be said to depend on Jerusalem, 21:25. St Paul communicated it to the cities of S. Galatia, which had been evangelized from Antioch. The essential part of the Decree applied universally, and here St Paul's victory was complete. The four prohibitions must have applied only in the churches mentioned above, where Jewish Christians were numerous; there may be a reference to them in 1 Cor 8:13 and 10:28, but there is none in Gal. They are found observed long afterwards in other parts, but perhaps after they had begun to be transformed into a moral code, as in the 'Western' text. The decision only applied directly to Gentile Christians, but the disagreement at Antioch, Gal 2:11 ff., shows SS Peter and Paul agreeing that it affected Jewish Christians too, which followed from the principle invoked in 11. 24. The Judaizers are strongly disowned. The words 'going out' should be omitted, i.e. 'Some members of our community, but without a mandate'. 25. The Gk emphasizes the complete unity of purpose. The praise heaped on Paul and Barnabas suggests the bitterness of the opposition they had encountered. 26. They staked their lives continually; cf. 9:23; 13:50; 14:18. 28. The Apostles have decided under the infallible guidance of the Holy Spirit. The phrase with which the verse begins is still used by the Church in her conciliar decisions. 29. The four prohibitions (in the same order as Lev 17-18) are 'necessary' to avoid scandal and 836g facilitate relations between the two kinds of Christians ; cf. 20. The Holy Spirit had guided the church of Jerusalem. If its role was now finished, and its horizon was to grow more and more limited and Jewish, at least it had witnessed faithfully to our Lord's command to teach all nations.

h 30-35 The Decree promulgated at Antioch—30-31. The whole church was assembled, and rejoiced at the news that there was no question of imposing the Law, and that the Judaizers had had no official status. As to the extent to which the Law still bound Jewish Christians, see 21:21. 33. The emissaries having fulfilled their mission receive the kiss of peace. 34. There is little authority for this verse, which seems to have been inserted to explain the presence of Silas, 40.

837a XV 36-XVIII 22 The Second Missionary Journey, A.D. 50-2—With the door of faith opened to the Gentiles, the work of preaching must be resumed. This journey brings St Paul, guided as always by the Holy Spirit, 16:6-7, 9 ; 18:9, to Greece, with Corinth as his main centre.

XV 36-41 The Separation of Paul and Barnabas—36. After a short while, in the spring of 50 when travel became possible again, St Paul's solicitude for his converts, so evident in his epistles, made itself felt. 37. Cf. 12:12. 38. He considered that St Mark's inconstancy disqualified him, and he was unfamiliar with the churches that were to be revisited. 39. 'And there arose a sharp dissension'. The conciliatory Barnabas wanted his cousin to repair his fault, and so took him to the field where both had laboured previously. Always a peacemaker, he had introduced Saul to the Twelve, welcomed the first Gentile converts at Antioch, and recently the desire to conciliate the Jewish Christians there had led him to dissimulation, in the company of St Peter, Gal 2:13. Indeed it has been suspected that the difference in that matter was not without its effect on the dissension here described. Nevertheless Barnabas remains the standing refutation of all the theories which try to oppose St Peter and St Paul. He was always in St Peter's confidence, with St Mark as a further link, and he was a wholehearted collaborator with St Paul, during the momentous period between the first preaching to the Gentiles at Antioch and the Council of Jerusalem. St Paul refers to him with obvious friendliness in Gal 2:9 and 1 Cor 9:6, and that is all that the NT tells us. Perhaps he did not live long, as we may infer from the presence of St Mark in Rome without his cousin at the time of St Paul's first captivity, Col 4:10. St Mark ended by becoming once again the fellow-labourer of St Paul, Phm 24 ; 2 Tim 4:11. 40. Silas (cf. 22) must have returned from Jerusalem. He took the place of Barnabas as fellow apostle. St Paul and he were 'recommended to the grace of the Lord' as before. No doubt the same happened to Barnabas and St Mark, but St Luke is no longer recounting their history. 41. St Paul revisits the scene of his earlier labours, 9:30. The second half of the verse is to be omitted. Probably Silas and Judas had already published the Decree in Cilicia.

b XVI 1-5 St Paul in S. Galatia—1. Crossing the Taurus through the Cilician Gates the party reached Derbe and then Lystra. Timothy's mother had instructed him in the Scriptures, 2 Tim 3:15, and St Paul had made him a Christian, 1 Tim 1:2. 2. His reputation fitted him for the office for which St Paul destined him, though he was still very young, Tim 4:12. 3. Being the son of a Jewess he would, if uncircumcised, have been considered an apostate, and all relations with Jews would have been impossible. It was well known that he had not been circumcised, his father being a Gentile, cf. 1 Cor 9:20. In the very different case of Titus, Gal 2:3, both his parents were Gentiles, and circumcision was demanded as though necessary for salvation. 4. Cf. 15:23.

c 6-10 From S. Galatia to Macedonia—6. 'And they passed through the Phrygian and Galatian country, having been forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia'. St Paul's obvious plan was to go to the great coastal towns of the province of Asia, but he was guided due north, through Phrygia to N. Galatia, and (if one accepts the North Galatian Theory) evangelized the North or real Galatians, descendants of 3rd cent. Gallic invaders.

[According to the South Galatian Theory (cf. § 893c-d there is no need to postulate a visit to Northern Galatia, and the phrase a 'Phrygo-Galatic region' (and the corresponding passage in 18:23) would then be taken to refer to the districts evangelized on the First Missionary Journey, which were historically both Phrygian and Galatian.—Gen. Ed.]

7-8. 'And when they had come as far as Mysia', the Holy Spirit guided them away from Bithynia, and right through Mysia to Troas. It was not yet time for the Gospel to be preached in the rich Gk colonies of Asia Minor. Troas was the usual port for Macedonia. The Holy Spirit proceeds also from the Son who works through him, cf. Phil 1:19 ; Rom 8:9 ; 1 Pet 1:11 ; Jn 14:26 ; 16:7. 9. At length St Paul is directed positively, and into Europe. The man of Macedonia was probably recognizable by his dress. 10. The first 'We section' beginning here shows that St Luke now joined St Paul. He seems to have remained at Philippi, where the section ends, 17, for six years, till 20:6.

11-12 At Philippi, A.D. 51—11. They made a direct crossing, stopping for the night off Samothrace. A later crossing took five days, 20:6. Neapolis was the port of Philippi, 10 m. inland, to which it was linked by the Egnatian Way. 12. Augustus had recently refounded Philippi, in gratitude for his victory there over Brutus and Cassius. He colonized it with veterans and conferred on it the Jus Italicum. It was 'the first city encountered' or 'the leading city of that part of Macedonia, and a Roman colony'; cf. 19-21.

13-15 The Conversion of Lydia—13. The Apostles went by the river side, 'where we thought there would be a place of prayer', perhaps open to the air, there not being enough Jews for a synagogue. Women were held in greater respect in Macedonia than in Greece ; cf. 17:4, 12. 14. Lydia was a proselyte from Thyatira in Lydia, which was renowned for its stuffs dyed in purple. 15. Cf. note on 21:5-6 : Though a woman of position she says humbly, 'if [not 'since'] you have judged me faithful'. Her house no doubt became the centre of the church of Philippi, and the home of St Luke. He omits further details of the founding of the church, and relates how the Apostles had to leave.

16-18 The Possessed Slave Girl—16. She was possessed by a 'spirit of divination'. The legend ran that a python had uttered the oracles at Delphi until Apollo killed it and took its place. Hence a pythonical spirit was one that foretold the future. 17. Either the devil was under some compulsion to bear witness, or wished to discredit the Apostles by his praise. 18. Our Lord acted in his own name, Mk 16:17.

19-24 Arrest of St Paul and Silas—19. As in ch 19, loss of revenue leads to persecution. The magistrates at the Law Courts in the Forum were the Duumvirs of a Roman colony, who had the courtesy title of 'stratēgoi', as in 20. 20-21. The owners of the girl appeal to anti-semitism, cf. 18:2, 17. The law forbade Jewish propaganda among Romans. 22. Cf. 1 Thes 2:2 ; 2 Cor 11:25. St Paul perhaps claimed Roman citizenship but was disregarded in the tumult. Cicero, In Verrem II, v, 62, describes such a happening. 23-24. By law imprisonment followed flagellation. This was the first persecution by the Roman authorities and the first for which Jews were not responsible.

25-34 In the Prison at Philippi—25. 'Paul and Silas were in prayer, and singing hymns to God', no doubt psalms, and remembering Lk 6:23. 26. The earthquake and its effects were miraculous ; cf. 4:31. 28. Suicide was frequent among the Romans. 29-30. The gaoler knew something of the preaching of the Apostles. Reassured as to his bodily safety, he is aroused by the miracle to consider the safety of his h 35-40 Release and Departure—35-36. In view of the events of the night the strategoi send the lictors to free the prisoners. 37. The church would have suffered if the preachers of Christianity had escaped like criminals. By the Lex Porcia a Roman citizen could not be scourged, and he could only be beaten with rods after he had been condemned to death. Here there had not even been a trial. The magistrates and the whole colony were in danger. In A.D. 44 Claudius had deprived the Rhodians of their privileges for crucifying Roman citizens. His citizenship often protected St Paul, 22:25 ff. A false claim to it was punishable with death. 39. The magistrates now came personally. 40. On St Paul's love for the church at Philippi, see comm. on Phil.

837g soul. 32. Paul and Silas instruct him and his family, even before their wounds are dressed. 33. The former are washed of their wounds, the latter of their sins, cf. note on 21:5-6. 34. The gaoler rejoiced 'at having found faith in God'.

838a XVII 1-9 At Thessalonica—1. The modern Salonica, 100 m. along the Egnatian Way, was a large port with a mixed population, which included a large Jewish colony. 3. See on 3:18, and for the Resurrection, 26:23; 1 Cor 15:3. 'And that this Jesus whom I preach to you is the Christ'. 4. A few Jews were converted and many proselytes and Gentiles, cf. 1 Thess 1-2. 5. See 1 Thess 2:14-16. Jason must have been well known since his name is introduced without explanation; cf. Rom 16:21. 'The people' is probably the Demos or Assembly of the free city. 6. St Luke calls the rulers by their correct but unusual title of 'Politarchs', which various inscriptions confirm. 'These men who have turned the world upside down are here also'. The MSS of Vg read 'urbem' instead of 'orbem'; cf. 26:26. 7. Cf. the accusations against our Lord. St Paul had spoken about the spiritual Messianic Kingdom. 8. 'The crowd and the Politarchs were disturbed when they heard this'. 9. The Politarchs realized that the Jewish accusations were unfounded, and were content to take security for the good behaviour of the Christians. St Paul departs, anxious to avoid difficulties for the church and his host Jason.

b 10-15 At Berea—10. Then a large town, 50 m. S. of Thessalonica, near Mt Olympus, and with a large Jewish population. 14. Silas and Timothy remained with the newly founded church. St Paul went by sea. The land route took much longer. It seems that he had intended to follow the Egnatian Way to Dyrrachium and Rome, but was deflected by the persecutions, Rom 15:19, 22. 15. Silas and Timothy rejoined St Paul at Corinth, 18:5, yet Timothy was with St Paul at Athens, 1 Thess 3:1, 2. Probably both rejoined St Paul at Athens, only to be sent at once to strengthen the new churches in Macedonia, whence they proceeded later to Corinth.

c 16-21 St Paul at Athens—16. Athens which had been pillaged by Sulla in 86 B.C. and was no longer even a provincial capital, preserved most of its statues and temples intact. It was still one of the intellectual and artistic capitals of the world. Its combination of idolatry and intellectual pride was peculiarly repellent to St Paul, who entered the city from Piraeus, along a road on which stood idols and shrines, cf. 1 Cor 8:4; 10:19, 20. 17. In the market or Agora the Athenians indulged their passion for argument, 21. In it stood the portico, the Stoa Poikile, which gave the Stoics their name. 18. St Luke mentions the two rival schools, the Stoics, pantheistic materialists with a high idea of duty, aiming at a life in accord with reason, as a protection against the ills of life, and the Epicureans, also materialists and making the prudent seeking of pleasure the end of life. St Paul was not a stranger to philosophy, for which Tarsus was noted, the Stoic Athenodorus flourishing there early in the 1st cent. 'Wordsower', lit. a magpie, collector of seeds, hence 'picker up of gossip', and so contemptuously, a babbler. Some commentators think that the Athenians seem to have taken 'the Resurrection' for a goddess's name! 19-20. The Areopagus, the highest judicial court, so-called because it met on the Hill of Ares, took cognizance of religious matters, and possessed enormous influence and prestige. Nothing in the context or in St Paul's attitude suggests that he is on trial. This has led some to see in 'Areopagus' merely a name for the Hill of Ares, just below the Acropolis. 21. All the details in these verses can be corroborated from pagan sources.

22-31 St Paul's Discourse to the Athenians—All things to all men, St Paul adapts himself to his frivolous intellectual audience. He quotes the Gk poets, not the OT.

22-25 (1) The true God is the Creator of all things.

—22. St Paul addresses the Athenians by the same title as Demosthenes. The word tr. 'superstitious' means 'fearer of the gods' and can have a good or bad sense. St Paul wishes to win them and calls them 'extremely religious'. 23. Pausanias and others record that there were several altars to unknown gods in Athens. The altar was erected to whatever god it might be who needed thanking or placating. St Paul takes the title in a mystical sense, and defends himself from the charge of setting forth new gods, 18. 24. Even Plato and Aristotle had not quite arrived at the truth of an absolute Creator. The Epicureans attributed the world to chance, and the Stoics held matter to be eternal; cf. Is 42:5. 25. Gifts and food were offered for the use of the gods.

26-29 (2) He made Man to His Own Image and for Himself—26. God 'from one man' caused every nation to dwell on the earth. The argument is from the unity of the human race. Each nation had its separate god from whom it claimed to originate. Since the human race originates from one man made by God, there is only one God. He has not merely arranged seasons, as in 14:16, and geographical boundaries. His Providence in history fixes the times of prosperity and the territorial limits of the nations; cf. Job 12:23. 27. Man who was made to seek after God, is like one feeling his way in the dark; cf. 1 Cor 13:12. Because of this and of the nearness of God, the pagan is without excuse; cf. Rom 1:20. 28. We depend utterly on God. After what St Paul had said of God the Creator his words could have no pantheistic meaning. The poets are Aratus, Cleanthes and Epimenides, speaking of Zeus.

30-31 (3) They are called to repent because they will be judged by One who rose from the Dead—30. This kind of ignorance does not excuse, but lessens, guilt, cf. Rom 1:20. From 14:16 we see that God has never left himself without witness. Now all men in all places must 'repent'. The Epicureans held that God did not occupy himself with man, and the Stoics that man was sufficient for himself. Neither saw the need to turn to God and repent. 31. St Paul omits the Holy Name for which the Athenians were not prepared. God has given faith, or rather a motive for faith, to all by raising Christ from the dead. Or perhaps the Resurrection is given as a proof of the General Resurrection as in 1 Cor 15:12 ff. Hebrew thought did not separate body and soul in the way we do. For all to be judged all must be raised from the dead.

32-34 Effect of the Discourse—32. St Paul was listened to only while he spoke of the nature of God and Providence. His teaching about our Lord was cut short. Epicureans and Stoics, unlike Plato, denied the soul's immortality, but all alike thought the resurrection of the body an absurdity. St Paul was coldly dismissed. 33-34. Here alone in his preaching does St Paul seem to have met with little success. Pride of intellect was more impervious to the Gospel than pagan licentiousness; cf. 1 Cor 1:18-25. Denis became the first bishop of Athens, Eus., HE III, 4.

XVIII 1-4 At Corinth in the Synagogue, A.D. 51—The capital of Achaia and a large city and port was a byword even in antiquity for immorality. (But see on 1 Cor, § 864d.) 2. Aquila and Priscilla were almost certainly Christians. St Luke tells us they were Jews to explain their expulsion from Rome, 839a 839a presumably that referred to by Suetonius, Claudius 25, after the riots 'impulsore Chresto', A.D. 49.

The Jewish colony in Rome was large, and a few years later Aquila and Priscilla were back in Rome, Rom 16:3. 3. They left Corinth with St Paul, 18 and 26. Their house was the church's centre not only at Corinth but at Ephesus, 1 Cor 16:19, and Rome, Rom 16:4-5. 4. The words 'bringing in the name', etc., have little MSS authority.

b 5-11 The Preaching to the Gentiles at Corinth—5. Cf. 17:15 note. Silas and Timothy probably brought alms from Macedonia, which made tent-making less necessary, see 2 Cor 11:8-9. Cf. also 2 Cor 1:19; 1 Thess 1:1; 2 Thess 1:1. 6. Cf. 13:45. St Paul disclaims responsibility. 1 and 2 Thess were written from Corinth, and mention the persecution, 1 Thess 2:15; 3:7. 7. 'Titius Justus' was a proselyte, and his house now became the centre of the church. 8. Cf. 1 Cor 1:14-16. For St Paul's account see 1 Cor 2:1-5. 9. After the Jewish opposition St Paul is again encouraged and guided by Jesus. He often speaks of his discouragement in 2 Cor. 10. Even in that wicked city many will listen to the call of God; cf. 1 Cor 1:26; 6:9-11. 11. Converts were also made in the province, 2 Cor 1:1. For further details of the building up of the Church in Corinth see § 864h. St Paul left in his own time, when he saw that the new community was solidly established and his work crowned with success.

c 12-17 St Paul before Gallio, A.D. 52—12. From an inscription at Delphi we gather that Gallio arrived to take up office, in 51 or 52, cf. *Foakes-Jackson and K. Lake, op. cit. v, 460 f. He was Seneca's brother, and a weak but agreeable man, faithful to his relatives and friends. 13. The Jews took advantage of the arrival of a new proconsul to accuse St Paul of breaches of their Law. 14-16. Gallio seems to have shared his brother's contempt for the Jews. 17. Sosthenes was probably the author of the accusation against St Paul. 18-22 The Return to Antioch—18. St Luke is anxious to hurry on to tell of the evangelization of the next great centre Ephesus. Cenchreae was the eastern port of Corinth; cf. Rom 16:1. Perhaps during his perils at Corinth St Paul had taken the Nazirite vow that he would not cut his hair, for a period, or till out of danger, Num 6:2 ff. See 21:21. 19-21. It seems that the ship only stayed long enough for one Sabbath. 22. 'The church' is used in its primitive sense, i.e. the community at Jerusalem, as in 5:11. This is the last mention of Antioch in Ac.

d XVIII 23-XXI 14 Third Missionary Journey, A.D. 53-8—Ephesus was to be the centre of this journey, but first, after passing the Cilician Gates, St Paul spent most of the year in Phrygia and Galatia; see 16:6.

e XVIII 24-8 Apollos at Ephesus—24. Apollos, with whom 1 Cor 1:12-3:22 is concerned, is mentioned to explain the beginning of St Paul's apostolate at Ephesus. 25. On 'the way' see 9:2. Apollos taught 'accurately', but not completely. 27. At Corinth 'he helped them much who had believed, through the grace' he had received from God. Cf. 1 Cor 3:6, and for the letter, 2 Cor 3:1.

f XIX 1-7 St Paul and the Disciples of John at Ephesus—1. St Paul 'passed through the upper country', the high inland plateau of Asia Minor. Ephesus, the capital of the province of Asia, which abounded in flourishing cities, was the richest and most magnificent of them all, with a population of a third of a million. See too on 24. It was the meeting place of traders from east and west, and Seneca describes it as one of the most beautiful cities of the world. 2. St Paul assumes that these disciples have been baptized and wishes to make sure that they have also received the Holy Spirit, as in the case of the Samaritans, 8:14. They either did not know all John's teaching, or perhaps meant 'We have not heard that the Holy Spirit is now given'. 3. They seem, like Apollos, to have been disciples of Jews who had left Palestine after hearing only the preaching of John. They had evidently not been instructed by Apollos, before his departure for Corinth. Jn 1:6 and 15 ff. and 3:23 ff. suggest the existence in Ephesus at the end of the century, of followers of the Baptist, more or less opposed to Christians. 4. Cf. Jn 1:26 ff. 5-8. See 2:38. See § 820b. For an almost contemporary description of the speaking with tongues (Glossolalia), see 1 Cor 14.

8-12 The Preaching and Miracles at Ephesus—8. The account of the 18 months devoted to the successful founding of the church at Corinth was compressed into a few lines, and now the long apostolate at Ephesus A.D. 54 to 57 is even more briefly related, and even more successful. 9. On 'the way' see 9:2. The multitude is the assembly in the Synagogue. Tyrannus was perhaps a Rhetor who gave lessons in eloquence or a philosopher. D adds at the end, 'from the fifth to the tenth hour', from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., which was certainly the time when the Hall would be free for St Paul to use. 10 is a pregnant summary of St Paul's activity during the three years, 20:31, that he spent at Ephesus; cf. too 20:18-21. Besides earning his living and preaching in the school of Tyrannus, there were the continual relations with the other cities of the province. There were also letters to be written, e.g. to Galatia where Judaizers were causing havoc, and to Corinth, including 1 Cor which gives an idea of his labours. At Ephesus 'a great door was opened and many adversaries', 1 Cor 16:8-9. See also 4:9-13; 15:30-33. Apoc 1-3 throws light on these flourishing churches. The burning of the books, the account of the riot, e.g. 26, and the friendship of the Asiarchs reveal the extent and depth of St Paul's work. He founded the church in Asia, Aquila and Priscilla only passed through, Rom 16:5. 11-12. Miracles played their part, as the next verses show. On the warrant for the cult of relics cf. 5:15.

13-17 The Jewish Exorcists—13. Lk 11:19. 16. The Gk word tr. 'both' can also have the sense of 'all'. See too KNT note. 17 describes the effect on unbelievers, 18 that on the faithful.

18-20 The Burning of the Books—18. Magic was so ingrained that even many Christians had not given it up. 19. They had practised 'magical arts'. The treatises were no doubt sufficiently rare to be of great value. Ephesus was one of the centres that produced them. Livy records a similar burning of magical books, XL, 29.

21-22 St Paul's Plans—After two years and more he proposed to leave Ephesus. The immediate cause of his departure was the riot some months later. One purpose of the visit to Macedonia and Achaia was to collect alms for Jerusalem, 1 Cor 16. Judging the Church to be now firmly established around the Aegean, St Paul wished to go to Rome, but not to remain there, Rom 1:11-15; 15:20, 23. In all such matters he was guided by the Holy Spirit, although 'purposed in spirit' could be taken of his own mind. On the voyages to Corinth see § 866g-h. Timothy was sent to Corinth, 1 Cor 4:17. This was perhaps a second errand. On Erastus see Rom 16:23; 2 Tim 4:20.

23-40 The Riot of the Silversmiths—An eyewitness's account enlivened by humour. 24. Ephesus was the sacred city of the fertility goddess Diana. Her temple was about two-thirds of the size of St Peter's, Rome, and contained 127 pillars, 60 feet high. Demetrius and the corporation of silversmiths made miniature copies of the temple containing a statue of the goddess. 28. If Demetrius had been speaking in the forum, the shouts would soon attract attention. 29. The theatre is the largest known, and could hold 25,000 people. 30. St Paul wished to save his friends. Aristarchus accompanied him to Rome, 27:2. 31. The Asiarchs were the priests responsible for the cult of the emperor. They were very exalted magistrates. They can hardly have been Christians, but it is clear that St Paul had friends in the highest places. 33. Alexander perhaps wished to disclaim Jewish responsibility. 35. The town clerk was 'the Scribe of the People', who presided over the Assembly and ruled the city. His importance is 839j attested by inscriptions, and he was the city's link with the imperial authorities. His able speech saved the situation. He too was evidently a friend of St Paul. 'The city of the Ephesians is the temple keeper of the great Diana and of the statue that fell from heaven'. Such was the legend, due perhaps to an aerolith. 37. St Paul had attacked idolatry, but his arguments were adapted to the mentality of his hearers, and he avoided offensive words. 40. An unauthorized assembly, a fortiori a riot, might lead to the loss of the privileges of a free city, since only the Roman authorities could sanction a 'city' assembly of this kind.

840a XX 1-6 Travels in Macedonia and Greece, A.D. 57-8—1. Note the liturgical farewell, as always, e.g. 14:22; 16:40. In Macedonia St Paul wrote 2 Cor, and mentioned his trials, 1:8-10; 11:23 ff. St Luke does not refer to the troubles in Corinth, which the two Epistles reveal. 2. St Paul now preached 'as far as unto Illyricum', Rom 15:19. 3. The three winter months were spent at Corinth, 1 Cor 16:5-6. Rom was then being written to prepare for the projected visit, 19:21. The plot was to kill St Paul at the port or at sea. 5-6. Some of the party went ahead to Troas. Another 'we-section'. The first person shows that St Luke joined St Paul at Philippi where Easter was celebrated; see on 16:10.

b 7-12 The Eucharist at Troas—7. It is clear from 1 Cor 16:2 that Sunday had already become the day for the Christian Assembly and Eucharist. By the Jewish reckoning the night would be that of Saturday. On the Breaking of Bread see 2:42. The verb used for 'assembling' has for its noun 'Synaxis', the Gk for Eucharist. 8. The accident was not due to the darkness. 9. St Luke means us to understand that Eutychus was dead, 12. 10. St Paul announces the miracle. 11. The gathering had been for the Breaking of Bread and the 'tasting' of Holy Communion. This is now done, with St Paul presiding. He again speaks long, never expecting to return, 25.

13-16 From Troas to Miletus—13. The ship seems to have been at the disposal of St Paul's party till 21:2. He may have taken the short cut by land so as to have more time with the disciples. 14-15. The details are given to show how no call was made at Ephesus. Miletus was 30 m. from Ephesus, a port at the mouth of the Meander. 16. St Luke now gives the reason for the route taken.

c 17-38 The Discourse to the Presbyters of Ephesus—On presbyters see § 820d. Only here in Ac does St Paul address his own converts, and his words have much to teach Christian pastors. The speech is thoroughly Pauline in style and subject and in the zeal for souls it reveals. Nearly every sentence can be paralleled in the Epistles. He lays bare his soul, his tender memories, his fears for the future, his love for his own.

18-24 St Paul will go up to Jerusalem in spite of the Dangers—18. Asia is the proconsular province. 19. Cf. 19:9; 20:3. 20. Cf. 2 Cor 4:2. St Paul did not teach only in the School of Tyrannus. 22. He is forced on by the Holy Spirit. He goes resolutely forward in obedience, like his Master who steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, Lk 9:51. He is enlightened both interiorly and exteriorly, 21:4, 11. 24 should probably begin, 'But I do not hold my life of any account, nor as precious to myself, so long as I may finish my course'. St Paul's gospel was that of the free gift of God, without the works of the Law.

d 25-31 Pastoral Exhortation and Warning—25. St Paul's statement is a presentiment based on the dangers which threaten him, Rom 15:31, and his plan of going to Spain, ibid. v 28. We learn from the Pastoral Epistles that St Paul did in fact revisit Ephesus. St Luke's report of these words shows that he writes before those Epistles, and before St Paul returned to the Aegean. 26. This is a solemn declaration that he has done his duty. He is innocent of blood, in the matter of pastoral responsibility. The shepherd who does not preach the kingdom is guilty of the spiritual death of his flock. 27. St Paul has declared to them 'the whole counsel of God'; cf. Eph 1:11. Eph. is the best comm.

on 27. 28. The presbyters must not neglect their own salvation, 1 Cor 9:27, nor that of the flock over which the Holy Spirit has appointed them, 1 Cor 12:28, 'to feed the Church'. The pastoral metaphor, so frequent in the Gospels is kept up. 'The Church of God which he has purchased with his own blood' (as in DV) is the best supported reading, Sin, B, etc. D and other MSS have 'Church of the Lord', to avoid the unusual phrase 'the blood of God'. Even this, in view of the reference to Ps 73(74):2 which guarantees the meaning of 'Lord', affirms the divinity of Christ. However the reading as in DV is to be retained, as the more difficult and so probably the original one. 'The Church of God' appears eleven times in the Pauline Epistles, and 'The Church of the Lord' nowhere in the NT. The expression 'the blood of God' is used by St Ignatius, Eph. 1:1, and by other early writers, cf. Lightfoot, Apostolic Fathers, Clement of Rome, II, 13-16, but later became suspected of Apollinarism. It is straining the Gk to translate 'with the blood of his Own' and supply the word 'Son'. Often in the NT it is said that Jesus purchased us with his blood. 29. The Pastoral Epistles and the history of St John at Ephesus (cf. Apoc. 2:2) show the fulfilment of these predictions. 31. Cf. on 19:10. St Paul gives himself as an example and shows his care for his churches, all as in his Epistles.

32-35 He commends the Presbyters to God—32. The word, God's gracious promises in the Gospel, works powerfully in us; cf. 1 Thess 2:13. God will strengthen and instruct the presbyters by means of the truths of Faith at work in them. 33. Clothes formed a large part of riches; cf. Mt 6:19. St Paul's disinterestedness often comes out in his Epistles; cf. 18:3. 35. The presbyters must work so as to support the needy (cf. Eph 4:28) and so that none may say they preach the Gospel for the sake of gain, but cf. 1 Cor 9:14. The saying of our Lord is not found in the Gospels, though nothing could be closer to their spirit.

36-38 The Farewell to the Presbyters from Ephesus—37. St Paul's gift of sympathy showed itself in tears, 19; 2 Cor 2:4; Rom 12:15. Often in the Epistles he exhorts the faithful to salute each other with a kiss; cf. the kiss of peace. 38. The harbour was some distance from the town where the meeting had been held, and all accompanied St Paul, as in 15:3 and 21:5.

XXI 1-6 From Miletus to Tyre—1-2. St Luke is still with the party but of the list in 20:4 only Trophimus and Aristarchus are mentioned again (21:29 and 27:2), and it seems that only these three went on with St Paul. The ship was a coastal vessel, so at Patara in Lycia another ship was taken, going direct to Tyre. 4. The church at Tyre was founded by Hellenists after the death of St Stephen, 11:19; cf. 15:3. St Paul, so anxious to reach Jerusalem, must have been forced to wait till the ship sailed. The Holy Spirit was leading him there in spite of the trials which he knew awaited him. It was not through the Spirit that the disciples tried to dissuade him from continuing his journey. The Spirit made known the trials, and their devotion made them try to prevent him from going further as in 10-12. 5-6. All went down the long sandy strand of the narrow peninsula on which Tyre stood. The conversions of whole families, 16:15 and 33, and this the only mention in Ac of children among the faithful are evidence for the practice of infant baptism.

7-14 From Tyre to Caesarea—7. Ptolemais is the modern Acre. The journey seems to have been continued by sea; see 15. 8. For Caesarea see on 8:40. An evangelist was an apostle of the second rank, Eph 4:11. 9. The daughters of Philip were filled with the Holy Spirit like their father. Their spiritual gifts were closely related to their virginity, which they had chosen as a permanent state; cf. 1 Cor 7, especially v 34. 10-11. St Luke seems to have forgotten that he had already spoken of Agabus, 11:28. The OT prophets often acted symbolically, Is 20:1-4; Jer chh 27, 28, and also our Lord, Jn 13:4. 12-13. Again St Luke suggests the parallel with our Lord, cf. 20:22. Cf. also St Peter's words, Mt 16:22, and our Lord's, Lk 12:50.

840h 14. It is the will of the Lord Jesus, 13, that must be done. He governs all things; he is God.

841a XXI 15-XXIII 35 St Paul at Jerusalem, A.D. 58—The atmosphere in the city was tense, and made more so by the crowds of pilgrims for the feast of Pentecost. The cruelties of Felix (see 23:24) and the fanaticism of the Zealots were preparing the way for the tragedy of A.D. 70. As for St Paul, from now until his release in Rome, his activity was to be limited by a long captivity. Although he would have many visitors both at Caesarea and Rome, 24:23; 28:30-31, the energetic apostolic labours were for the time being at an end. 15-16 The Arrival at Jerusalem—15. The 'preparation' involved finding pack-horses for the party and their, perhaps bulky, offerings, now that the sea journey was over. 16. 'Bringing us to the house of Mnason'. In the house of this Hellenist any Gentile Christians with St Paul would feel more at ease than among Jewish Christians.

b 17-20 St Paul and the Church at Jerusalem—The opposition of the Judaizers to St Paul's preaching, of which we learn from Gal and Rom, did not enter into the theme of Ac, §816d. St Luke does not mention them except for the warnings of 20:29-30 and the account of the Council of Jerusalem in ch 15. Like St Paul, Rom 15:1-12, he is anxious to show the unity of Jewish and Gentile Christians. The church at Jerusalem had long since agreed not to impose the Law on Gentile Christians, and now it was prepared to welcome the great enemy of the Judaizers. Misrepresentations of which he had been the object would be the occasion for demonstrating unity and charity. 18. After a private welcome, 17, there is an official reception by the presbyters and St James; cf. 15:13. The alms which St Paul had collected as a sign of union, Rom 15:25-31, were probably presented, 24:17, but perhaps the gesture was not as effective as had been hoped. The 'We-section' ends here to begin again with the journey to Rome, 27:2. 19-20. The news of the conversion of the Gentiles is received with joy (cf. 15:12) and St Paul is addressed as 'brother' by these zealous Jews, now very numerous.

c 21 St Paul's Attitude to the Law—In view of the false accusations against him St Paul was bold indeed to come to Jerusalem. He had taught that the Law does not justify, which would eventually lead to its abandonment even by Jewish Christians. The Jews rightly concluded that he denied an absolute value to Circumcision, the Law and the temple, 28. On the other hand as long as Jewish Christians acknowledged that salvation came through faith in Christ, he had never forbidden them to observe the Law. It came for them something in the nature of a work of supererogation. The breach with the Synagogue was gradual. It is generally held that after A.D. 70 it was complete, and that then all participation in Jewish rites became unlawful. Thus when St Paul now acceded to the request of St James, he did not go against his principles. He was hardly the man to do that. He acknowledged a relative value in the Law, and he seems generally to have observed it himself; cf. 16:3; 18:18. He claimed to be a strict Pharisee, 23:6; 26:4-5. He protested that he had not offended in anything against the Law or the temple, in which he had come 'to adore', 24:11; 25:8; 28:17. These things were not incompatible with the preaching of the new faith. They prepared the way for it, and found in it their fulfilment, 24:14; 26:22-23, cf. Rom 9-11, 1 Cor 7:18-20.

d 22-26 The Nazirite Vow—22. 'What then is to be done? They will certainly hear that you have come'. St Paul must clear himself of the charges that are reported against him. 23. The four men had taken the Nazirite vow; see 18:18. They could not cut their hair until the period of their vow was over, and they had made their offering in the temple. 24. St Paul must pay the offerings of these four Jewish Christians, whose vow had still seven days to go, 27. He will thus sanctify himself by sharing in their vow, and it will be seen that he 'walks in the observance of the Law'. 841d St James meant St Paul to show that he observed the Law, and to refute the report about his attitude, which implied that he despised it. 25. He is reminded that his vow will not prejudice the case of the Gentile Christians, whose liberty the Apostles and presbyters had recognized at the Council of Jerusalem. Thus his action will not have the effect of that for which he blamed St Peter in the mixed church of Antioch, Gal 2:11 ff. 26. Being all things to all men, St Paul agrees, goes to the temple, and arranges for the day on which the sacrifice is to be offered. He seems to have had ample funds at his disposal at this period, Ramsay, St Paul the Traveller, 310 ff. 'Being purified': cf. Lev 15:13; 'the days of purification': cf. Num 6:5. 27-30 The Riot in the Temple—27. On the Jews of Asia, see 20:19. 28. Cf. the accusations against St Stephen, 6:14. Passing beyond the boundary stones of the Court of the Gentiles was punishable by death for any Gentile, even for a Roman citizen. One of the temple notices giving this warning in Gk and Latin has been found. 30. The Levites shut the gates to prevent a profanation of the temple, as they often did in the stormy years before A.D. 70.

31-36 The Arrest of St Paul—31. The Tribune, Claudius Lysias, 22:28, commanded the cohort which garrisoned Jerusalem. It was stationed in the Fortress Antonia, which stood at the NW. angle of the Temple, overlooking it. The whereabouts of 'the steps' is uncertain. 32. Riots were frequent, especially at the feasts, hence troops were on the alert. 33. St Paul is taken, as the cause of the uproar. 34-35. It being impossible to discover the nature of his crime, he is dragged up the steps to the Fortress whence our Lord had set out for Calvary. 36. Cf. Lk 23:18.

37-40 He obtains Permission to address the Crowd—38. Josephus gives two accounts of this incident, Jos. Ant, 20, 8, 6; Jos. BJ 2, 13, 5. The Murderers or Sicarii, so called from the short dagger each kept under his cloak, were the extreme nationalist party. 39. St Paul has barely escaped with his life from the Jews, and yet all he thinks of is to save their souls. 40. He speaks in Aramaic and with his hands chained.

XXII 1-21 The Speech to the Jews of Jerusalem—1 St Paul tries to calm and win over his audience by showing his devotion to the Law before his conversion, his good relations with the Jews after it, and how wishing to preach to them, he only turned to the Gentiles after a vision. The speech is a masterpiece of apostolic tact, but the mention of Gentiles is too much for his audience.

1-16 Persecution and Conversion—1. The address is respectful like St Stephen's, 7:2. 'Hear the defence'. 3. St Paul is a Hebrew of the Hebrews; see 21:21, Phil 3:3-6; Gal 1:13-14; 'zealous for God', a trait which unites him with his hearers, Rom 10:2. On Gamaliel see 5:33. 5. See 9:2. 6. The conversion is described to show that St Paul was only obeying the call of God. 9. See 9:7. 12. The devotion of Ananias to the Law is emphasized. 14. On 'the Just One' see 3:14. 16. The internal effect of baptism follows, once the external sign has been performed. It is accompanied by a profession of faith, the invocation of the name of the Just One; see 9:14.

17-21 The Call to the Gentiles—17. St Paul emphasizes how he was praying in the temple (on his first visit as a Christian, cf. 9:30 supra), and seems to avoid mentioning our Lord's name. 19-20. He wished to preach to and save his own people, and thought his former zeal would convince them of his sincerity. 21. See note 9:15. Cf. 2:39.

22-29 The Roman Citizen and the Tribune—22. The idea that the Gentiles without becoming Jews could share their privileges aroused fury. 24. St Paul was taken into the Fortress for safety, and the Tribune, who had not understood the Aramaic speech, proposed to resort to the usual method of discovering the cause of the trouble. 25. St Paul draws attention to the twofold injustice. See 16:37. 28. Claudius 841b Lysias was probably a Greek who had obtained his citizenship under Claudius and taken that emperor's name. Claudius' empress Messalina made a fortune out of the sale of this privilege, Dio Cassius, 60, 17. It was rare at this period for a Jew to be born a citizen. St Paul's family must have had some importance. 29. St Paul had been bound in order to be scourged, contrary to the Lex Porcia, and it had been proposed to torture him before trial, which was forbidden by a law of Augustus. He remained chained; cf. 30 and note on 24:23.

1 XXII 30-XXIII 10 St Paul before the Sanhedrin—30. Since the accusations deal with religion, in order to discover what they are the Tribune summons the Sanhedrin, which, so that he can be present, must meet outside the temple. XXIII 1. In preaching the Gospel St Paul has been obeying God. 'In all good conscience' is found twenty times in the Epistles. 2. The high-priest is exasperated at the appeal from his judges to the invisible Judge. Ananias, high-priest from A.D. 47 till he was deposed in 59, was a violent, rapacious man. He was murdered by the Sicarii extremists in A.D. 66, and the prophetic words of 3 were fulfilled. 3. St Paul spoke not to curse but to assert, 'God will punish you'. There is an allusion to Mt 23:27; cf. Ez 13:10. Ananias was proposing an illegal outrage, very offensive from one Jew to another. St Paul's cause would suffer if he, a Roman citizen, allowed himself to be so treated before the Tribune. Cf. Jn 18:23, our Lord's more wonderful conduct. 5. St Paul who may have been looking round the Sanhedrin to see whom he could recognize, heard the high-priest's order, without knowing from whom it had come. 6. St Luke only records a part of the speech. 9 shows that St Paul again recounted his conversion, and our Lord's appearance to him, which proved that Jesus had risen. This led on to the General Resurrection. Perhaps St Paul noticed the different reception the account of our Lord's Resurrection received from the two parties, and hoped to win over the Pharisees, of whom he was one himself; cf. 22:3; 26:5. Our Lord had supported the Pharisees on this very question. The 'hope' is the Messianic hope that God's Kingdom would be set up, of which the resurrection of the dead is a corollary; cf. 26:6-8. Accused of attacking the Law, 21:28, St Paul defends himself by claiming to preach that spiritual kingdom and its consequences, wherein lies the true fulfilment of the Law; cf. 26:22-23. 8. The Sadducees deny a Resurrection, the existence of angels and the immortality of the soul, 'but the Pharisees confess all of them' ('both' meaning 'all' as in 19:16). 9. Some Pharisees admit that an angel spoke to St Paul in 22:7, 18.

11. The Vision of Our Lord—As amid the trials of Corinth, 18:9, so amid those of Jerusalem, Jesus reassures St Paul, with praise for the past and light for the future. He is to preach in Rome, see on 19:21, and with that climax St Luke's history will end. 'Be constant', the same word often on our Lord's lips in the Gospels is there tr. 'Be of good heart', Mt 9:2; Jn 16:33.

k 12-22 The Jewish Plot—12. There are other examples of such oaths under a curse. On the general insecurity see 21:15 and 38, and note the precautions in 23. 16. Nothing further is known of this nephew. 20. The better reading makes it the Tribune who was 'to inquire something more certain'.

l 23-30 The Letter of Claudius Lysias—23. Glad to rid himself of responsibility, the Tribune acted at once and ordered a large escort, perhaps a third of the garrison. The spearmen were probably light infantry. The third hour was about 9 p.m., when in the dark they would attract less attention. 24. Felix the Procurator of Judaea from A.D. 52 to 60, was a freedman of the imperial household. His brother Pallas was the favourite of Agrippina wife of Claudius and mother of Nero. Strong in this protection, the government of Felix was venal and rapacious, and his cruelties during these critical years paved the way for the final tragedy. Tacitus says of him that 'indulging in every kind of barbarity and lust, he exercised the power of a king in the spirit of a slave', Hist. V, 9. He delighted to marry into royal families, and Suetonius describes him as 'the husband of three queens'; cf. 24:24. 25. The part in brackets is an interpolation. Lysias sends the Elogium or letter to his superior magistrate explaining the matter that is being referred to him. St Luke probably obtained a copy while waiting at Caesarea. 26. 'Excellency' was the title of a procurator. 27. Lysias alters the facts to his advantage. He did not find out that St Paul was a Roman citizen till he was about to scourge him. 28-29. He writes contemptuously of the Jewish Law. 31-35 St Paul is taken to Caesarea—31. Antipatris, a pleasure resort in the foothills of Judaea, 30 m. from Jerusalem, was reached by a forced march. 32. On the plain of Sharon the danger of an attack by conspirators was remote. The 400 infantry being badly needed returned to Jerusalem. 35. 'Herod's Palace' was built by Herod the Great; see 8:40. It was used by the Procurators as a residence and prison, hence Lk's reference to it as the 'praetorium'.

XXIV 1-XXVI 32 St Paul at Caesarea, A.D. 58-60.

XXIV 1-9 The Accusation before Felix—1. The high-priest hired 'Tertullus an advocate, and these laid their plea against Paul before the Governor'. 2. As to the praise of Felix for maintaining peace and because 'reforms are introduced through thy foresight on behalf of this nation', see on 23:24. From his reference to 'this nation' Tertullus seems not to have been a Jew. 5. The political accusation will appeal to Felix. 'Author' should be 'Ringleader'. 6-8. Much is omitted in the best MSS. 'He also tried to profane the temple, but we apprehended him. By examining him thyself thou canst learn from him about all these things of which we accuse him'.

10-21 St Paul's Defence—10. In Judaea the Procurator could not take up the attitude of Gallio, 18:15. St Paul appeals to him confidently. He had ruled Judaea since A.D. 52, and Samaria before that, hence he was conversant with Jewish problems. 14. The Way is not a heresy, for in it St Paul serves 'the God of our Fathers, believing all that is according to the Law, and written in the Prophets', namely the Messianic hope; see on 21:21 and cf. Rom 3:31; 10:4. 15. He also shares the Jewish hope of a resurrection. The Sadducees who denied it, were a small minority. This seems to be the only reference in St Paul to the resurrection of the unjust; cf. F. Prat, The Theology of St Paul, II (1945) 360. 16. 'And hence', in view of the belief just stated. 17. '... to offer alms to my nation and sacrifices'. The alms for the church. Omit 'and vows'. 21. See 23:6.

22-23 The Case adjourned—22. In view of Lysias' letter, the hearing just concluded, and his knowledge of the Way, Felix ought to have released St Paul. But he was anxious not to offend the Sanhedrin, and since it was impossible to hand over to them an innocent Roman citizen, he fell back on the expedient of an adjournment. 23. St Paul was under Custodia Militaris. The prisoner was chained to a soldier, but not in a public prison, and sometimes even in a private house, as in 28:16. At Caesarea he remained in Herod's Palace.

24-27 The Interview with Felix and Drusilla—24. Drusilla was the youngest daughter of Herod Agrippa I. She was married at the age of 14, but abandoned her husband after two months and became the third wife of Felix, who was a pagan. 25. St Paul like the Baptist speaks of the virtues the couple flagrantly rejected. Not only his Jewish wife, but Felix too was familiar with the new faith, 22, long peacefully established at Caesarea. 26. Cf. 21:26. 27. The change of Procurators took place about the middle of A.D. 60. Felix was recalled to answer Jewish complaints of his misrule, hence his anxiety to please them.

XXV 1-5 Festus and the Jews—1. Josephus (BJ, 2, 14, 1) describes Portius Festus as an energetic magistrate who dealt promptly with disorder. He was in 842e every way superior to Felix. He only remained one full day at Caesarea before visiting the storm centre. 4-5. He appeals to the law. The case has been brought before the court at Caesarea and must be dealt with there. 'Let those among you that have authority go down'.

f 6-12 St Paul appeals to Caesar—7. Festus acted so promptly that there was no time to suborn witnesses. Cf. 21:28. 10. It would have been fatal for St Paul to admit the competence of the Sanhedrin, even though Festus were present. It would have condemned him to death, with his rights as a Roman citizen abandoned. 11. Thus the weakness of Festus forced him to pronounce the words which suspended all intermediary jurisdiction. Neither condemnation nor acquittal were now possible; cf. 26:32. 12. If there were no adequate grounds, an appeal could be refused, hence the consultation, in this case a formality. Festus makes a statement, 'Thou hast . . . appealed'. According to Lattey, op. cit. 293, 'Strictly speaking it is not an appeal at all, but an ousting of jurisdiction'.

g 13-22 Festus lays the case before Agrippa—13. Herod Agrippa II was born and educated at Rome. He was only 17 at his father's death in A.D. 44 (see 12:1) and did not succeed him. He was given the tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias in A.D. 53, and parts of Galilee and Peraea later. He remained loyal to the Romans during the Jewish War. He was cultured, the patron of Josephus, and interested in all that concerned the Jewish religion; cf. 26:3, 28. He was, however, living incestuously with his sister Bernice. Her conduct was censured by Juvenal, Satires, VI, 156. The Ptolemies imitated the Pharaohs before them in marrying their sisters. Bernice like her brother tried to counsel moderation to the Jews during the War. Later she became the mistress of Vespasian and then of Titus. 14. Festus consults Agrippa who besides being an instructed Jew, had inherited the protectorate of the temple in A.D. 50. 16. Gk has 'hand over' instead of 'condemn'. 18. 'His accusers standing around him', 7. 19. See 23:6. No political charges could be sustained against St Paul. 21. Augustus: the emperor Nero. The title 'Augustus' (Sebastos) was regularly used as an imperial title from Augustus himself onwards.

23-27 Festus introduces St Paul to Agrippa—23. The setting for the last discourse in Ac is one of great splendour. 24. Cf. 22:22. 26. An Elogium (see 23:25) had to be sent to Rome, and Festus now admits that he has no definite charge, 19. The divine title 'lord' was first used of the emperor under Caligula, and became common under Nero.

h XXVI 1-23 St Paul's Speech before Agrippa—His defence resembles that before the Jewish mob, ch 22, but adapted to the cultured audience. It too was interrupted. St Paul shows how the Gospel is the fulfilment of the OT, and that he had acted as a loyal Jew in becoming an apostle.

2-11 St Paul's Jewish Faith—3. The Rabbis praised Agrippa for his knowledge of the Law. 4-5. See 21:21 and 22:3. St Paul's youth was spent in Jerusalem, 'living according to the strictest party'. 6. See 23:6. 8. His preaching was that the hope had been realized in Jesus, whose Resurrection proved that he was the Messiah. 'Why should it be thought incredible among you' who believe in the resurrection of the body, 'that God should rise the dead?' 10. On the saints see 9:13. 'I cast my vote against them'; cf. 7:59. 11. 'Often have I tried to force them into blasphemy', KNT. It was Jesus they were to blaspheme. St Paul wishes to show how utterly he was changed by his vision.

i 12-18 His Conversion and Mandate—See 9:1-18. 16. The message which came through Ananias is attributed direct to its author, as so often in the OT. To mention Ananias served no purpose with this audience; the point to be made was that there had been a revelation from God. 17. How often Jesus delivered him from his own people and from the Gentiles! 18. Cf. I sq2:7, and Col 1:12-14. Justification by faith was learnt at once; see 9:4.

19-23 His Missionary Work, preaching what the Prophets foretold—19. 'I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision'. 20. Gal 1:22 shows that the preaching in Judaea must have been on the second visit, 11:30. The Gentiles were to 'repent' and do works worthy of 'repentance'. 21. The Jews attacked St Paul because he preached salvation to the Gentiles on the same terms as themselves. 22-23. His preaching is the fulfilment of the old Law which foretold our Lord's sufferings (cf. Ac 3:18), his Resurrection (cf. 17:3) and that he would be the light, 13:47. Thus he is the Messias.

24-32 The Discussion with Festus and Agrippa—24. k The references to the Resurrection and to light for the Gentiles seemed absurd to Festus; cf. 17:32. St Paul's learning appeared in his quotations of the prophets, and perhaps Festus had noticed him reading constantly. 25. St Paul answered courteously. 26. The speech was meant for Agrippa, who would understand. Our Lord's life, etc. were well known in Judaea, and elsewhere too, cf. 17:6. 27. Believing in the prophets, Agrippa must feel the force of St Paul's proofs. 28. 'Thou persuadest me to be a Christian in a short time' or 'with small effort' Agrippa is the polite sceptic. Yet the sentence could be tr. 'Thou persuadest me to be a Christian in a short exposition', as though Agrippa had really been moved. 29. 'In short or long time' or 'with small or great effort'. 32. Cf. 25:11.

XXVII 1-XXVIII 31 The Journey to Rome and Captivity there, A.D. 60-3—The preceding chapters, especially 22-26, have formed a kind of defence of St Paul in face of the empire. Again and again his innocence is recognized. St Luke's aim seems to have been to defend not only St Paul but Christians generally, and to show how much they differed from the Jews, who were becoming every day more bitterly opposed to the empire. Instances of the respect of the imperial authorities for St Paul, which contrast with the hostility he encounters from the Jews, continue till the end of the book and his arrival in Rome. At that point the capital of the world having been reached, the church of the Gentiles is fully established. The Apostle of the circumcision had come to Rome, and now the Apostle of the uncircumcision is the only other Apostle to live there.

XXVII 1-12 From Caesarea to Crete, A.D. 60—1. b The last 'we-section' begins. St Luke's eyewitness account is the chief authority for the art of navigation in antiquity. The minute scrutiny of sailors and other experts has confirmed his accuracy and observation; cf. J. Smith, Voyage and Shipwreck of St Paul (1886). The other prisoners were probably criminals condemned to appear in the arena at Rome. St Paul the Roman citizen who might have been set at liberty was accompanied by St Luke and Aristarchus. They perhaps counted as the two slaves allowed to attend an imprisoned Roman citizen; cf. Col 4:10, 'the band Augusta', the Augustan cohort (cohors I Augusta) then apparently stationed near Caesarea. 2. Adramyttium was a flourishing port near Troas. 3. On Sidon, 20 m. from Tyre, see 21:4. Julius treated St Paul with great respect throughout the journey. He visited the church 'to be cared for'. 4. The NW. wind forced them to sail 'under the lee of Cyprus', east of the island. 5-6. For Lystra read 'Myra'. It was the port of call for grain ships from Egypt to Italy when the prevailing NW. wind prevented a direct crossing. They embarked on one of these, a navis oneraria of 300 tons and more. 7. The unwieldy ship made slow progress against the wind. Cnidus is the promontory N. of Rhodes, and Salmon that at the NE. of Crete, under the lee, i.e. along the south of which they sailed. 8. For Thalsassa read 'Lasea'. 9-10. After the Fast, the Day of Expiation at the end of September, with the equinoctial gales, the sailing season ended. Relying on all his experience 'Paul advised them'. 11. As the senior official on board the centurion was in command c 13-20 The Great Storm—13. 'When they had weighed anchor, they sailed along Crete close in'. Vg. mistakes the Gk for 'close in' for a proper name. 14. 'There arose from the land a tempestuous wind called the North-Easter'. This wind blows suddenly from the mountains of Crete, 7,000 feet high. 16. Under the lee of Cauda the boat was hoisted on board. 17. 'helps', supports. Ropes were passed under the ship to hold the timbers together. The shifting Syrtis sandbanks to the South were the terror of sailors: 'the sail yard', probably the mainsail, to act as a sea-anchor. 20. The sun and the stars were the only guides before the invention of the compass. These disappeared for several days'.

843b of the ship. 12. Phenice is probably the modern Phineka, and seems to have been protected from SW. and NW. whence came the dangerous winds; 'looking to south and north of west'.

21-26 St Paul's Vision—21. St Paul refers to his neglected advice to ensure that he is listened to now. 23. God encourages him in his darkest hours, 18:9; 23:11, and after a fortnight of tossing and drifting this was certainly one of them. Notice how he assumes the leadership in this crisis.

d 27-38 The Ship approaches Land—27. Malta is 600 m. from Crete. The progress was at the rate of just under 2 m. an hour, which is said to be that of a ship driven helpless. Adria, the Adriatic, included the central Mediterranean. 28. The fathom is about five feet. 30. The danger that the ship would break up was increased now that it was stationary. 31. The expert help of the sailors was necessary if all were to be saved. God had revealed that this would be so, but prudent means must be used. The respect that St Paul inspired and also his practical sense are continually in evidence. 33-34. There had been no proper meals for a fortnight, 21, and there was exhausting work ahead. 35. The technical 'he broke bread' can mean either an ordinary meal or the Eucharist (see on 2:42), but probably no more is meant here than prayer of thanksgiving for food. 38. The ship must be brought as near shore as possible.

e 39-44 The Shipwreck—39. A bay with a beach was discovered. 40. 'So they cast off the anchors and left them in the sea, at the same time unloosing the ropes that tied the rudders, and hoisting the foresail to the wind, they made towards the shore'. The anchors were now superfluous, but the rudders, long oars on either side of the stern were needed to guide the ship, and the sail to drive it onto the beach. 41. 'Where two seas meet': St Paul's Bay answers to St Luke's description, and the identification is generally accepted. The ship grounded on the western shore of the bay, a little south of the island of Gzeir, which lies across the western part of the mouth of the bay, in the channel separating the western end of Gzeir from the mainland. 42. The soldiers were liable to death if the prisoners escaped; cf. 12:19. 43. Cf. 3. 44. After the swimmers the rest were ordered to come 'on planks and on pieces of the ship'. Omit 'they carried'.

f XXVIII 1-6 The Landing in Malta—1. Originally colonized by Phoenicians, Malta now formed part of the province of Sicily. The Maltese are called 'barbarians' because they spoke Phoenician and not Gk or Latin; cf. 1 Cor 14:11. The island had long been civilized. 2. It was late autumn, and all were without sufficient food, sleep and clothes. 3. The viper fastened on St Paul's hand, and therefore bit it; cf. Mk 16:18. There are no poisonous snakes in Malta today. If this was the case in A.D. 60, one may have escaped from some grain ship from Africa. 4. The Maltese knew that St Paul was a prisoner. 'Justice' personified should be read in place of 'vengeance'. 6. Cf. 14:10.

7-10 St Paul at Malta—7. 'The chief man of the island' was the title of the representative of the Praetor of Sicily, and is found in inscriptions. Publius seems to have found lodging for all those shipwrecked. 8. Luke the physician noted the diseases 'fever and dysentery'.

g 11-16 Malta to Rome, A.D. 61, Spring—11. The journey was continued in a grain ship, which had for 843 sign the Dioscuri, the Twin Brothers Castor and Pollux, the patrons of sailors. 12. Syracuse, the capital of Sicily, was a usual port of call. 13. Rhegium (Reggio) is opposite Messina. It was necessary to keep inshore to avoid the currents. Puteoli, the modern Pozzuoli, with the harbour still in use, was then a trading port of far greater importance than Naples, and the terminus for ships from the East. 14. A Jewish colony had long been settled there, and, as in all the great centres by this date, there was a Christian church. The centurion Julius evidently allowed St Paul much liberty. 15. The week's stay gave time for his arrival to be notified to the church at Rome, 140 m. distant. Appii Forum, the market of Appius, 43 m. from Rome, is described by Horace, Satires 1, 5, as a place where travellers were fleeced. It lay on the edge of the Pontine Marshes, which St Paul may have passed by the canal, which here ran parallel to the Appian Way, the road to Rome. Three Taverns lay 10 m. nearer Rome, the first sight of which was obtained as the Appian Way crossed the Alban Hills. St Paul's labours were well known in Rome, and he had many friends there, Rom 16. The church gave him a tender and reverential welcome, which must have greatly encouraged one so responsive to sympathy. 16. The city was entered by the Porta Capena, corresponding to the Porta di San Sebastiano. After reporting to the Praetorian Prefect Afranius Burrus, a Stoic philosopher, friend of Seneca and former tutor of Nero, St Paul was allowed to dwell in his own hired lodging, 23, 30. This was a modified form of the Custodia Militaris; see 24:23. He remained chained to a succession of soldiers whom he was thus able to evangelize, Phil. 1:12-13; 4:22. Even if the elogium of Festus had been lost in the shipwreck, Julius would have given a very favourable report. No statement of the Jewish case was forthcoming, 21.

17-22 The Interview with the Leading Jews—17. h St Paul lost no time, and as always, turned first to the Jews. Unable to go to the synagogue he invited them to his lodging. Their large colony had recovered from the expulsion under Claudius, 18:2, and enjoyed the protection of the emperor. St Paul had done nothing against the custom of his fathers, because he not only observed the Law (see 21:21), but regarded all his new preaching as the fulfilling of it. 18. Cf. 25:25; 26:31. 19. He explains tactfully why he was constrained to appeal, namely, to avoid assassination or judicial murder. 20. He wishes to speak of the real cause of his imprisonment; cf. 26:6. 21. With winter putting an end to sailing, letters could hardly have reached Rome from the Sanhedrin till some time after St Paul's arrival.

23-29 St Paul addresses the Jews—23. He speaks of i the Messianic Kingdom and the Messiah, foretold in the Law and the Prophets; cf. 26:22. 24. It would seem from the sternness of Paul's farewell that few were really convinced. 25. 'To your fathers' is the better reading, and marks St Paul's separation from Judaism. 26-27. He quotes Is 6:9-10, from LXX, to sum up the attitude of the Jews. Our Lord used the same text; see Mt 13:14 f. 28. These are St Paul's final and prophetic words. The work of the Apostle of the Gentiles is assured. 29 is not found in the best MSS. 30-31 Conclusion—30. The aorist implies that St Paul's situation changed 'after two whole years'. This seems to have been the legal period of detention during which accusers could bring their charge, see §815b. 31. With the cadence worthy of a final sentence St Paul is left at the centre of the Gentile world. St Luke implies that his preaching was very successful even while he was still a prisoner, and this is confirmed by the Captivity Epistles. The Christians are greatly encouraged, Phil 1:14, and numerous, ibid 4:22. St Paul's friends gather round him and he looks forward to release, Phil 1:23 ff.; 2:24, Phm 22. The Church becomes sufficiently known to be Nero's scapegoat in A.D. 64, and a new era opens in which St Paul himself is to die a martyr.

THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS

By A. THEISSEN

844a Bibliography—Origen, Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans c 245, Lat. Paraphrase by Rufinus c 450, PG 14; Chrysostom, Homilies on the Epistle to the Romans c 390, PG 60; St Thomas Aquinas (d. 1274), Expositio in omnes S. Pauli epistolas; G. Estius, In omnes B. Pauli ep. commentarii, Douay, 1614-16; *M. Poole, Synopsis Criticorum, 1684-6, vol. 5; *Joh. Jak. Wetstein, Novum Test. Graecum, 1751 f.; *H. A. W. Meyer, Der Brief an die Römer, 1836, 1899², Engl. Tr. 1876; Bernh. a Piconio, Epist. B. Pauli triplex expositio, 1838, Engl. Tr. 1889; *E. H. Gifford, Romans, 1881; *C. J. Vaughan, St Paul's Epistle to the Romans, 1890; J. McEvilly, An Exposition of the Epistles of St Paul, 1891; R. Cornely, Ep. ad Romanos, CSS, 1896, 1927²; *H. P. Liddon, Explanatory Analysis of St Paul's Epistle to the Romans, 1897; J. Rickaby, Notes on St Paul: Cor. Gal, Rom, 1898; *Ch. Gore, St Paul's Epistle to the Romans, 1899; *A. Jülicher, Der Brief an die Römer, 1905, 1929⁴; *W. Sanday and *A. C. Headlam, A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Ep. to the Romans, ICC, 1907 (abbr. SH); *H. Lietzmann, An die Römer, 1910, 1933⁴; *Th. Zahn, Der Brief des Paulus an die Römer, 1910, 1925²; M.-J. Lagrange, Épître aux Romains, 1916, 1931⁴ (the ref. in this com. are to the 1st ed.); *K. Barth, Der Römerbrief, 1919, 1928⁶, Engl. Tr. 1933; C. Lattey, The Epistle of St Paul to the Romans, WV, 1921, 1927²; *N. P. Williams, The Epistle to the Romans, SPCK Commentary, 1928; *C. H. Dodd, The Epistle to the Romans, The Moffatt NT Commentary, 1932; P. Boylan, St Paul's Epistle to the Romans, 1934; J. L. Lilly, The Epistle to the Romans, CNT, 1942; R. Eaton, St Paul's Epistle to the Romans, CTS, nd.

F. Prat, La Théol. de S. Paul I, 1908, 1934²²; II, 1912, 1933²⁰, Engl. Tr. 1926 f. (the ref. in this com. are to the Engl. Tr.); B. Gut, Introductio specialis in NT, 1938 (372-84 good modern bibliogr. references); K. Vaughan, The Divine Armory (rev. by N. Thompson), 1943; A. Tanquerey, Synopsis Theol. Dogmaticae, vols I-III, 1943-5²¹.

b Theme—The Christian doctrine of justification (= salvation) is generally regarded as the main doctrinal subject of Rom. The text which best expresses this predominant idea is 1:16 f. 'The Gospel . . . is a power of God bringing salvation to everyone who believes, to the Jew first but no less to the Greek. For therein a δικαιοσύνη θεοῦ is revealed out of faith'. The translations of the characteristic δικαιοσύνη θεοῦ differ: the justice of God, DV; the justness of God, WV; God's way of justifying us, KNT; the righteousness of God, AV; a righteousness of God, RV; cf. § 846e. There is a simpler statement of this theme or doctrine by St Augustine, PL 35, 2087 f.: 'Hoc ergo docere intendit, omnibus venisse gratiam Evangelii Domini nostri Jesu Christi' = he (Paul) intended to teach that the grace of the Gospel of Jesus Christ had come for all. It is true, that St Augustine by speaking of grace instead of justice (= justness) changed St Paul's terminology. But it is equally true, that justifying grace (= sanctifying grace) has become the Catholic term for what is the predominant idea of Rom. Hence it may simplify the understanding of Rom for a Catholic reader if he keeps to the term with which he is familiar. The part of Rom which deals directly with this main theme of salvation or justifying grace is 1:18-8:39; cf. § 846b.

In addition to this main doctrinal theme of Rom 844b there is a second major doctrinal topic: the defence of the new Christian doctrine of salvation against the objections from Israel, the chosen people of old (= the church of old) which rejected that doctrine as an innovation contradictory to the Established Torah (= the Law of Moses). This secondary theme of Rom is, however, so closely connected with the first that it may well be called a corollary to it. It is dealt with mainly in chh 9-11. But there are many passing references to it in the earlier parts of the epistle, e.g. 7:1-6; cf. Lagrange XXXIX ff. In any case, it would be a mistake to regard Rom as a treatise of one or two doctrines only. As in all his letters so in Rom Paul touches upon many topics.

Plan—There is a plan of Rom in every commentary and in every manual of NT introduction; e.g. *M. E. Bengel, Gnomon NT, 1862, 494 (on 1:16); *J. B. Lightfoot, Notes on the Epistles of S. Paul, 1895, 239-43; SH XLVII-L; Prat I 482-9; Boylan XXIII-XXXI; Gut 375-8. To understand the differences in the various plans it must be remembered that a letter is not meant to be a well ordered treatise. The sequence of thought in a letter is determined by the momentary associations of ideas rather than by the strict rules of logic or rhetoric. Hence the allocation of details in the analysis of a longer letter is often bound to be subjective. The main divisions in Rom are, however, clearly marked.

A. 1:1-17 INTRODUCTION.

B. 1:18-11:36 THE DOCTRINAL SECTION.

I. 1:18-3:20 The need for the salvation of the Gospel.

II. 3:21-4:25 The way to this salvation.

III. 5:1-8:39 Effects of this salvation:

(1) 5:1-21 Hope of eternal glorification,

(2) 6:1-23 A complete break with sin,

(3) 7:1-25 Christ the New Law,

(4) 8:1-39 The indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

IV. 9:1-11:36 The present exclusion of Israel from this salvation:

(1) 9:1-29 The divine attributes of faithfulness and justice are defended,

(2) 9:30-10:21 Israel's fault is exposed,

(3) 11:1-36 Several other aspects of the problem of Israel's present exclusion from the salvation of the Gospel are mentioned.

C. 12:1-15:13 THE MORAL SECTION.

I. 13:1-13:14 General exhortations.

II. 14:1-15:13 Exhortations to the Weak and the Strong in Rome.

D. 15:14-16:27 CONCLUSION.

Authenticity—According to 1:1-7 Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles, is the author of this epistle. The literal truth of this statement is beyond any reasonable doubt. On the external evidence see SH LXXIV-LXXXIV; Lussrau-Collomb, Manuel d'Etudes bibliques V 1 (1938) 523 f. The internal evidence for the authenticity argues from the agreement of Rom with the genuine Pauline epistles in contents and form. Here the agreement with Gal is to be stressed in particular. On objections against the authenticity of Rom see Lagrange LXI f.; Gut 378, 1.

844d In connexion with the authenticity of Rom the question has been raised, how much of the wording of the letter may be due to Tertius, who in 16:22 signs as the Apostle's amanuensis. This question is incapable of a conclusive answer. But it would seem safe to argue that the theological depth of the epistle, the agreement with Gal, and the numerous unfinished sentences speak decisively against any considerable share of Tertius in the composition of Rom; cf. *O. Roller, Das Formular der Paul. Briefe, 1933, 22.

e Purpose—The first purpose of the Apostle must have been to expound in form of instructions and exhortations the theme which has been explained above. The second object of the Apostle in writing this letter evidently was his intention to prepare for a visit to Rome on his journey to Spain, cf. 1:10-15; 15:22-33; Ac 19:21.

But what was St Paul's purpose in going to Rome? He says himself in 15:20 f. and 2 Cor 10:13-16 that it is against his principles to build upon another man's foundation. According to this principle there was no work for him to do at Rome. For as his own letter proves, Rome already had a flourishing Christian community. Hence St Paul's visit to Rome cannot be said to have been necessary for the expansion of Christianity. The most natural answer would seem to be that it was Rome, the capital of the Empire, which attracted Paul, the Roman citizen, cf. *E. L. Hicks, Studia Biblica IV (1896) 11. Another plausible explanation is that it was to visit his many personal friends among the Christians of Rome, cf. ch 16.

f Much more difficult is the question, why did St Paul write such an elaborate letter to Rome? Surely there was no need for 7,101 words to prepare for a fortnight's stay with his friends at Rome on his journey to Spain; cf. § 863a-b. *F. Godet, Com. on Romans, Engl. Tr. I (1890) 80-99, discusses at length the numerous answers that have been given to this question. The explanation which recommends itself as the most natural is that which points out two reasons for the extraordinary length and depth of this epistle: (1) the practical importance of the subject of justification (= salvation) by faith in Jesus Christ at the time, see Gal and note the absence of other fundamental Christian doctrines; (2) the importance of the church of Rome; cf. the privileged position of the church of Jerusalem, Gal 1:18 f.; 2:1-10; 2 Cor 8:1-9:15; Ac 9:26-28; 11:27-30; 15:1-35; 18:22; 20:16; 21:13. Why St Paul should have considered the church of Rome as especially important is a question which has been answered differently. The answer that the church of Rome enjoyed a privileged position through being St Peter's special field of activity is as reasonable a conjecture as any other that has been put forward, cf. Gal 1:18; 2:1-10; Ac 15:7; Boylan IX f.

g Date—Rom was probably written in the first three months of A.D. 58. To begin with it seems certain from 15:25-28 that Rom was written in the winter months preceding the collection journey referred to in 1 Cor 16:1-4; 2 Cor 8; 9; Ac 19:21-21:19; 24:17. There is less certainty as regards the year. It depends on the year assigned to St Paul's imprisonment at Caesarea, Ac 23:23-35; 24:1-26 which was two years before the recall of Felix and the arrival of Porcius Festus as procurator of Judaea, Ac 24:27. The year of this political event however is disputed; various calculations have led to A.D. 54, 55, 56, 58, 60, the last being the date most commonly held, cf. Prat I 401-404; *Schürer I (1901) 577 ff. For a different method of dating Rom see Lagrange XIX. In any case Rom cannot be dated later than A.D. 58 or 59. The religious importance of this date lies in the theological depth and thoroughness here displayed so soon after our Lord's Ascension.

h Place of Composition—Corinth is generally regarded as the place where Rom was written. There is no explicit statement in the epistle to that effect. But apart from the date, the recommendation of Phoebe (16:1 f.) points to Corinth; and so does the subscription in many MSS, cf. *Tischendorf, NT II 844b (1872*) 457.

The Addressees—That this epistle was addressed to the Christians of Rome in accordance with 1:6 is generally admitted. What is most disputed with regard to the addressees is the question whether the converts from Judaism or from paganism were in the majority. Either possibility has been defended. The result of the controversy which began with *F. C. Baur (d. 1860) seems to be a compromise. In the church of Rome Israelite and Gentile met as in most early Christian communities outside Palestine. There were differences and difficulties between them and dangers of local disturbances, but they were such as must have existed everywhere under similar circumstances at that time. How serious such local disturbances could become Paul knew from what had happened in Galatia, cf. Gal. This may have caused him to take up the question of the Mosaic Law so thoroughly in Rom. But even Gal apart, the Christian attitude to the Mosaic Law (= the OT) is a fundamental question of Christian doctrine and that not only for Israelitish Christians but also for Gentile Christians. It deserves therefore at all times such a thorough treatment as we have in Rom quite irrespective of any immediate controversial issues.

A further point that may be mentioned concerning the addressees of Rom is their social status. There is no direct evidence on this question. But the more the poverty of the early Christians of Rome is stressed in accordance with the conditions of the majority of the Jews at Rome (cf. SH XXIV) and in analogy with what we know from other early Christian communities (cf. 1 Cor 1:26) the more amazing is the theological interest and understanding which St Paul showed that he expected from them by writing such a letter.

Who was the Founder of the Church of Rome?—That Paul was not the founder of the Church of Rome follows clearly from 1:13; 15:19. But so far it is impossible to answer this question positively, because the necessary historical evidence is missing. There are however two conjectures which can claim some probability. (1) The beginning of Christianity at Rome need not be the work of one founder. Rome was a general meeting-place for all nationalities and creeds in the Roman empire, and so it is quite likely that very soon Christians also met there and began to spread the Gospel. That they were Jewish Christians is possible but not necessary; it has been inferred from the well-known custom that the early Christian missionaries began preaching the Gospel in the Synagogue wherever this opportunity existed. The common reference to Ac 2:10 in support of this conjecture, however, is not to the point, because this reference speaks of Jews from Rome who were then living at Jerusalem, cf. Ac 2:5. (2) It may be that St Peter was the founder of the church of Rome. But the available historical evidence only proves Peter's activity and death at Rome, cf. U. Holzmeister, Com. in Epistulas SS Petri et Iudae, CSS, 1937, 40-71. At all events Peter was not at Rome when Paul wrote this letter. Otherwise there would be some reference to him in ch 16. Such a temporary absence of Peter from one of his foundations or special fields of activity is no more difficult to understand than the absence of Paul from the Pauline churches, e.g. Corinth or Ephesus.

The Text—For a good introduction to the critical problems of the text see Lietzmann 1-18. The standard edition of the Greek text is *H. v. Soden, Die Schriften des NT, Text und Apparat, 1913. This has been used for the present commentary. For a select list of textual variants see *Westcott-Hort, The NT II (1882) 108-14. The standard edition of the Vg text is *J. Wordsworth and *H. J. White, Novum Testamentum . . . II 1, Oxford, 1913. The variants of the Vg from the Greek text are noted in the commentaries of Cornely, Lagrange, and Boylan.

Integrity—If allowance be made for accidental textual variants, such as we find in the MSS of every ancient text, only the conclusion of Rom is beset by somewhat 8441 more serious difficulties. No less than six different conclusions can be traced in the MSS. They are :

- (1) 14:23 om. 15:1-16:27 ;
- (2) 14:23 ; 16:20b = 16:24 om. 15:1-16:27 ;
- (3) 14:23 ; 16:25-27 om. 15:1-16:27 ;
- (4) 14:23 ; 16:25-27 ; 15:1-16:24 ;
- (5) 14:23 ; 15:1-16:27 ;
- (6) 14:23 ; 16:25-27 ; 15:1-16:24 ; 16:25-27.

The respective MS evidence can be found in the critical editions of the text and in the larger commentaries ; see § 863f. On the whole the case seems to be far from clear. But there is agreement on the following points : (1) The best attested text is nr 5 = Rom 14:23 ; 15:1-16:27 ; so \aleph BC etc. ; bo, sah ; vet lat, Vg ; pesh. (2) Marcion was the first to omit 15:1-16:27, partly because the contents contradicted his doctrine, 15:1-13 ; partly because they were of no doctrinal interest, 15:14-16:27. (3) The omission of 15:1-16:27 in some MSS may be due partly to the influence of Marcion, partly to the influence of church lectionaries. The contents of 15:14-16:27 were evidently not suitable for reading in church. (4) The theory that Rom 16 is a fragment of a letter addressed not to Rome but to Ephesus can quote no external evidence in its favour. On the internal evidence alleged cf. § 863g. On the whole question see SH LXXXIX-XCVIII ; R. Schumacher, Die beiden letzten Kapitel des Röm, NtAbh, 14, 4 (1929) ; Lietzmann 130 f.

845a I 1-7 The Opening Salutation—also called superscription, inscription, prescript. St Paul begins his letter according to contemporary Jewish, Greek and Roman custom with the threefold statement of sender, addressee and greetings. Examples which illustrate this convention of ancient letter-writing are plentiful. A very similar formula is still used in many papal and episcopal encyclicals. For a different opening of a letter see the seven letters in Apoc 2-3.

The most obvious characteristic of the salutation in Rom 1:1-7 is its length and periodic style. The conventional superscription was short and formal ; see Jas 1:1 which of all letters in the NT best preserves the stereotyped formula of an ancient letter. St Paul was the first as far as we know to break away from the traditional formula by expanding it and filling it with Christian ideas ; cf. the beginning of Gal ; 1 Cor ; Philm ; Tit. But Rom 1:1-7 is the longest and most elaborate of all. Its structure is as follows :

- I. Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, set apart for a GOSPEL FROM GOD :
 - (1) which he had promised before through his prophets in Holy Writ,
 - (2) which is concerning HIS SON, Jesus Christ, our Lord :
 - (a) who was born from the family of David according to the flesh,
 - (b) who was manifested as 'Son of God in Power' according to his holy Spirit from the time of his resurrection from the dead,
 - (c) through whom we have received the GRACE OF THE APOSTOLATE,
 - (a) that for the glory of his name we should win all nations unto obedience of faith,
 - (β) among whom are ye also, being the called of Jesus Christ :
- II. to all who are in Rome, beloved of God, Saints by his call,
- III. grace to you and peace from God, our father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

For a more elaborate analysis see Prat II 425.

The practical importance of Rom 1:1-7 lies in its doctrinal content. Nearly all the prominent articles of the early Christian faith are gathered together here in one sentence : (1) the Gospel as the fulfilment of the OT, 2 ; (2) the descent of the Messiah from the family of David, 3 ; (3) the glorification of Christ, 4 ; (4) the origin, purpose and range of Paul's apostolate, 1, 5, 6. On the theological terminology in this paragraph see SH 17 f.

1. δούλος I. X. = 'slave of Jesus Christ' : contains an important confession of Christian faith. The phrase is not found in the Gospels (contrast Jn 15:15) but occurs frequently in the Pauline and Catholic epistles. All agree that it expresses the Apostle's allegiance to Christ. But opinions differ concerning the definition of this allegiance. The main explanations are : (1) = slave or bondman of Jesus Christ, cf. 1 Cor 7:22 ; i.e. Paul who claimed his rights as a Roman citizen before the Roman authorities, Ac 16:37 ; 22:25 ; 25:10, regarded himself as a slave of Christ. Many commentators insist with great earnestness on this literal translation. (2) = servant or minister of Jesus. This interpretation avoids the idea of slavery by explaining the phrase as an hyperbole. As such it would be in accordance with the oriental convention of calling even high officials 'slaves' with reference to their higher authorities, esp. the king ; cf. 4 Kg 5:6 ; Cowley, Aram. Pap. 1923, nr 17, 30, 31, 37, 38, 39, 54. This explanation would come very near the idea expressed in Jn 15:15 and could be supported by the stress which St Paul lays on his apostolic authority in this context. Δούλος would become synonymous in the NT with διάκονος, θεραπεύων, οἰκονόμος, ὑπηρετής which are all different words for servant or minister. (3) = worshipper of Jesus Christ. This meaning is based on the OT usage in which 'servant of God' is commonly used for those whose life is dedicated to the worship and service of God ; e.g. Abraham, Ps 104:6, 42 ; Moses, Jos 14:7 ; 3 Kg 8:53 ; 4 Kg 18:12 ; Neh 9:14 ; Ps 104:26 ; Apoc 15:3 ; Josue, Jos 24:29 ; Jud 2:8 ; Job, Job 1:8 ; 2:3 ; 42:8 ; David, Jer 33:21 ff. ; Ez 34:23 ; 37:24 ; Ps 17:1 ; 35:1 ; 77:70 ; 88:4, 21 ; Eliacim, Is 22:20 ; Zorobabel, Ag 2:24 ; Daniel, Dan 6:20 ; the OT prophets, Am 3:7 ; Dan 9:6, 10 ; Jer 7:25 ; Esd 9:11 ; the just = saints of the OT, Ps 33:23 ; 68:37 ; 101:15 ; 115:16 ; 118:125 ; 122:2 ; 142:2, 12 ; cf. also Lk 1:38 ; 2:29. The doctrinal significance of this explanation lies in the implicit confession of our Lord's divinity. As the OT saints were called 'servants of God' so Paul deliberately called himself 'servant of Jesus Christ.' (4) = freedman of Jesus Christ. This explanation is derived from the Hellenistic custom of manumission. A slave was freed in a temple by a legal transaction by which his former master transferred his right over him to the God of the temple, a price of redemption being paid symbolically by the God to the former master. Thereafter the former slave was a freedman. In view of this custom Paul could call himself the slave of Christ to signify that he had been bought free (= redeemed) through Jesus Christ from his former master Sin or Satan ; cf. *A. Deissmann, Licht vom Osten, 1923⁴, Engl. Tr. 1927, 319-30. This explanation draws out Paul's belief in the divinity of Christ even more forcibly than the previous one ; and it would also help to explain the NT term for 'redemption'. Of these four explanations the third is the most common.

2-4 describe in a parenthesis the Gospel the preaching of which St Paul has just proclaimed to be his vocation. First, it is a Gospel promised in the Bible long ago, 2 ; secondly, its central figure is Jesus Christ, 3-4. What is said of Christ in 3-4 can be summarized under two points : (1) Jesus Christ, the son of David ; (2) Jesus Christ, the son of God. 3. 'from the family of David according to the flesh' : for the descent of the Messiah from the house of David see 2 Sam 7:12-16 ; Ps 88:36 f. ; Is 9:6 f. ; Jer 23:5 f. ; 33:15-17, 26 ; Am 9:11 ; Ps of Salom 17:23. For the importance of this doctrine in the NT cf. Mt 1:1, 6, 20 ; 9:27 ; 12:23 ; 15:22 ; 20:30 f. ; 21:9, 15 ; 22:41-46 ; Lk 1:27, 32, 69 ; 2:4, 11 ; Jn 7:42 ; Ac 13:23 ; Rom 9:5 ; 15:8 ; 2 Tim 2:8. Paul however does not enter into a discussion of the question how our Lord's origin from the house of David can be proved ; whether it is to be traced through the family tree of our Lady, or of St Joseph or of both. He evidently takes the fact for certain and is unaware of anybody questioning it. 4 is an important proof-text for the divinity of Christ. But 845e there is no agreement as to the structure of the sentence. The main possible interpretations are : (1) Jesus Christ was manifested (i.e. before men) as Son of God by his miraculous power, his infinite sanctity, and by his resurrection ; cf. footnote in DV ; (2) Jesus Christ was manifested as 'Son of God in Power' in accordance with his holy spirit (his sanctity = his divine nature) from the time of (or by means of) his resurrection. This latter explanation is recommended by the threefold parallelism between v 3 and v 4 : made . . . son . . . according to. For details see larger commentaries, e.g. Cornely 38-46 ; differently Boylan 2-4.

f Τοῦ ὁρισθέντος υἱοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ ἐν δυνάμει = qui praedestinatus est Filius Dei in virtute, Vg ; who was predestinated the Son of God in power, DV ; by an act of power . . . marked out Son of God, WV. The text of Vg followed by DV is unfortunate in that it adds to the verb the preposition 'prae' : 'prae-destinatus, pre-destinated. The most natural explanation of this Latin addition is to assume with St Jerome on Eph 1:5 (PL 26, 478) that the Latin usage of the time made no clear distinction between destinare and praedestinare, cf. Lagrange, Zahn. Be this as it may, St Augustine, De praedestinatione sanctorum 15, 31 (PL 44, 982) seized on this text ; and mediaeval theology on the strength of it developed a discussion 'de praedestinatione Jesu Christi', cf. Aquin., ST III q 24 a 1.2. To assess the theological value of this discussion belongs to dogma. The historical exegesis of Rom 1:4 must keep to the Greek text which can be translated : established, set up, constituted, declared, marked out, manifested, or shown as the Son of God in Power. The choice between these possibilities is difficult. What must be avoided is Adoptionism saying that Christ became Son of God through the resurrection.

g 'Son of God in Power' : after describing in 3 the Son of God 'in weakness', Phil 2:6 f., St Paul now raises his eyes to Jesus Christ in glory, power and majesty, seated at the right hand of the Father ; cf. Mt 24:30 = Mk 13:26 = Lk 21:27 ; Mt 26:64 = Lk 22:69 ; Mt 28:18 ; Mk 9:1-7 ; 12:36 ; 16:19 ; Ac 2:33 ; 7:55 f. ; Rom 8:34 ; 1 Cor 15:43 ; 2 Cor 5:16 ; Eph 1:20 ; Col 3:1 ; 1 Tim 3:16 ; Heb 1:3 ; 8:1 ; 10:12 ; 12:2 ; 1 Pet 3:22 ; Apoc 3:21 ; 5:12. So among modern Catholic commentators Cornely, Lagrange ; for a list of others see Cornely 39 ; cf. also commentaries to Mk 16:19 and to the 6th article of the Apostles' Creed. According to another possible translation of the text 'in power' is to be connected with the verb : Jesus Christ was shown to be Son of God 'by power' = by his miracles. These miracles then can be the miracles worked by him and recorded in the four Gospels ; or the miracles worked in his name by the Apostles after his resurrection and recorded in Acts ; or the one great miracle of his resurrection, so WV, Boylan.

h Κατὰ πνεῦμα ἀγιασμένης = secundum spiritum sanctificationis, Vg ; according to the spirit of sanctification, DV ; in accordance with the holiness of his spirit, WV. This phrase is difficult being unique in the NT and peculiar in itself. The simplest explanation seems to be to understand it of Christ's spiritual being in deliberate contrast to his physical being in 3. According to his physical being = 'according to the flesh', Christ was the son of David, 3 ; according to his spiritual being = 'according to his spirit distinguished by holiness', Christ has been shown to be the Son of God in Power from the day of his resurrection (or by the one great sign of his resurrection) ; cf. Jn 3:34 ; 8:46 ; Rom 8:11 ; Heb 2:17 ; 4:15 ; 1 Pet 2:22 ; 3:18. So Cornely 29 ff. Influenced by the more developed doctrine of later cent. we today may feel inclined to substitute for Paul's distinction of 'flesh and spirit' a phrase referring to Christ's 'human and divine nature'. But this would be reading later definitions into the text of St Paul. For an altogether different interpretation see Boylan.

i 'Unto obedience of faith' : can mean (1) obedience to the doctrines of the Christian faith, (2) obedience to God by faith. 7a. 'Called to be saints' = saints 845 by his call, WV. The Apostle is not implying that the Christians of Rome were saints because of extraordinary virtue. What he has in mind is that God has called (= chosen) them to be set apart for him in a special way, cf. 'called to be an Apostle' in v 1. They were called by God not because they were saints in their lives already, but they were saints = consecrated to God, since they had been called by him (Augustine). In this sense 'saints' is a common name for the Christians in St Paul's epistles, Rom 8:27 ; 12:13 ; 15:25, 31 ; 16:2, 15 ; 1 Cor 1:2 ; 6:1 f. ; 14:33 ; 16:1, 15 ; 2 Cor 1:1 ; 8:4 ; 9:1, 12 ; 13:12 ; Eph 1:1 ; 2:19, etc. The origin of this idea is to be found in the OT usage in which 'saints' refers to Israel as God's chosen people, cf. Ex 22:31 ; Lev 11:44 ; 19:2 ; 20:7 ; Deut 7:6 ; 14:21 ; 16:19 ; 28:9, etc. 7b ends the prescript with greetings as was customary. But in the wording of his greetings Paul keeps neither to the Jewish nor to the Greek custom. The Jewish form was šālôm = peace (cf. SB I 380-5), the Greek χαίρειν (cf. Jas 1:1). Paul instead used the formula χάρις καὶ εἰρήνη except in 1 and 2 Tim. As to the meaning of this formula there are two main interpretations. (1) It can be taken as uniting the Jewish and the Greek formulas. Then it has to be translated 'greetings and peace (= happiness)' = all best wishes ; (2) The two nouns can be taken in their specific Christian sense, in which case the translation would be 'the grace of God and Christ (cf. Rom 3:24 ; Eph 2:5) and the peace of God and Christ (cf. Jn 14:27 ; Rom 5:1) be with you'. This second explanation is more in the spirit of St Paul. See Estius.

8-17 Introduction—In accordance with the usage of 846a ancient letter-writing the salutation is followed by an introductory paragraph enlarging on the Apostle's interest in those to whom he is writing. He praises the good repute of their faith, 8 ; he assures them of his prayers, 9 ; and finally expresses his desire to visit them and the hope that his visit will be for their mutual edification and for the benefit of the Gospel. The whole paragraph may well be called a captatio benevolentiae. The only letters of St Paul in which a similar introduction is wanting are Gal ; 1 Tim ; Tit ; cf. *P. Wendland, Die urchristl. Literaturformen 1912, 413 f.

St Paul's intention to visit the flourishing mission in Rome raises the question, how this present plan can be reconciled with his principle not to build on another Apostle's foundations, but to preach the Gospel only where Christ was still unknown, Rom 15:20 f. ; 2 Cor 10:15 f. ; cf. § 844e.

16-17 The Theme of the Epistle—From the literary point of view these two verses clearly belong to the introduction, 8-17, since they explain Paul's statement in the previous sentence, 15, 16a, that the delay of his visit to Rome is not due either to fear or to shame. On the other hand, 16 f. are commonly set apart as a special paragraph because they contain the main thesis of the epistle. The points of this thesis are : (1) in the Christian Gospel God offers to men a real salvation ; (2) this salvation is to be obtained by means of faith ; (3) this salvation through faith is offered to all men without any of the traditional distinctions between races and cultures ; (4) this salvation is not an innovation that contradicts but is in full agreement with what is written in the OT. It is impossible to sound the depth of these thoughts in one reading or in a short explanation. A brief exposition of the principal terms and phrases, however, may be useful.

16. 'The Gospel a power of God for salvation' : 8 σωτηρία = salvation is one of the most comprehensive terms used in the NT to describe the whole purpose of the Incarnation, or to cover the whole range of Christ's mission on earth. Its wide meaning may be gathered from the following list of synonymous or similar terms in the NT : ἀγιασμός sanctification ; ἀνακαίνωσις renovation, renewal ; ἀνακεφαλαιῶν to re-establish, to bring to a head (in Christ) ; ἀπολύτρωσις redemption ; ἀφθαρσία incorruption ; βασιλεία τῶν

846c οὐρανῶν, τοῦ θεοῦ kingdom of heaven, of God; δικαιοσύνη justice, justness, righteousness; δόξα glory; εἶναι ἐν Χριστῷ to be in Christ = union with Christ; εἰρήνη peace; ζωὴ (αἰώνιος) life (everlasting); ἁγιασμός propitiation; καταλλαγή reconciliation; παλιγγενεσία regeneration; χάρις grace. Every attempt to define salvation has to start from the root-meaning: deliverance, safety, security, well-being. This deliverance can be of a temporal as well as of a spiritual character. Here Paul is evidently thinking of deliverance in the religious or spiritual sense. But this can again be understood negatively, as deliverance from the death of sin; or positively, as the imparting of a new spiritual life. In either case the deliverance can be past, present or future. Thus, we have been saved through the Incarnation, Tit 3:4 f.; Eph 2:8; we are being saved through Christ in us, 1 Cor 1:18; we hope that we shall be saved at the resurrection from the dead on the Last Day, Rom 10:11; 13:11; 1 Thess 5:8 f.; Phil 1:19; 2:12. The appeal which the word salvation had for Paul's readers can be gathered from its frequency in the OT and in the Graeco-Roman usage of the time. Among the many synonyms for deliverance in the OT (cf. HRCS II 1328; HDB IV 357) σωτηρία had become more and more a technical term for the salvation expected from the Messiah, so that Messiah and Saviour could be used interchangeably, cf. Mt 1:21. In the Graeco-Roman world 'the cry for salvation was loud, persistent, and universal'. Heroes and kings as well as gods were given the title Saviour and the mystery religions developed elaborate theories and rituals of salvation under the patronage of several oriental deities; cf. *S. Angus, The Mystery Religions and Christianity, 1925, 225-30. To bring out the main differences between the Christian doctrine of salvation and that of the pagan cults, stress is to be laid (1) on the historical character of Christ the Redeemer, and (2) on the moral obligations of the Christian faith, cf. Prat II 385-90.

d 'To everyone that believeth': the emphasis seems to lie on the verb, because of the parallelism with 17b. Faith is the one condition which man has to fulfil, if he wants to obtain the salvation of the Gospel. Without faith neither the privileges of Israel nor the wisdom of the Greeks are of any avail; cf. 1:17b; 5:1; Gal 3:8; Jn 3:36; 7:38; Council of Trent, sess VI cap 8 (Dz 801) 'fides est humanae salutis initium, fundamentum et radix omnis iustificationis, sine qua impossibile est placere Deo (Heb 11:6) et ad filiorum eius consortium pervenire' = Faith is the beginning of man's salvation, the foundation and root of all justification; without which (sc. faith) it is impossible to please God and to obtain fellowship with his sons. On the fundamental necessity of faith for salvation, here clearly stated by St Paul, all Christian theology agrees. The differences of opinion begin with the definition of this faith. A comprehensive Catholic definition of faith was given by the Vatican Council, sess III cap 3 (Dz 1789) 'Fidem . . . virtutem esse supernaturalem, qua, Dei aspirante et adiuvante gratia, ab eo revelata vera esse credimus, non propter intrinsecam rerum veritatem naturali rationis lumine perspectam sed propter auctoritatem ipsius Dei revelantis, qui nec falli nec fallere potest' = Faith . . . is the supernatural virtue by which . . . we believe that what has been revealed by God is true, because . . . of the authority of God himself, who revealed it . . . Faith then is man's assent to truths revealed. This faith is called theological or dogmatic faith. All definitions of faith in the original Protestant sense are based on the translation of πίστις as confidence, trust. And the confidence is understood as trust in God's mercy on account of Christ's redemption. Trust and you will be saved. This faith is commonly referred to as fides fiducialis. For its modification by the Council of Trent see Dz 802, 822. The absence of any reference to sacraments and good works in Paul's thesis in 16 f. has often been noticed. The omission causes no difficulty if faith be understood in the sense of dogmatic faith, which accepts all the doctrines of the Gospel as true and obeys all its precepts as divine commandments. For in this faith sacraments and good works are included, cf. Prat II 254-74; 311-51.

17a. δικαιοσύνη θεοῦ = iustitia Dei, Vg; the justice of God, DV, Boylan; the righteousness of God, AV; a righteousness of God, RV; the justness of God, WV; God's way of justifying us, KNT. The meaning of the term 'justice of God' here used by St Paul is ambiguous. Taken by itself it can mean (1) an attribute of God: the justice which is in God, the justice which God possesses and practises as judge, commonly called the distributive or vindictive justice of God; (2) an attribute of man: the justice which is in man but from God, i.e. the justice, goodness or perfection which man possesses as a gift from God. This is the same quality which we generally call justifying or sanctifying grace. Generally speaking the first of these two meanings is grammatically the more common and the more natural, but the second is possible too, and the context can make its acceptance necessary, cf. Mt 6:33; Rom 10:3; 2 Cor 5:21; Phil 3:9. The meaning of 'justice of God' here is still disputed, cf. Prat II 459 f. To understand it of the justice which is in God, is so natural an explanation from the philological point of view, and so strongly supported by the corresponding 'wrath of God' in 18, that it will probably always have its defenders. Thus Origen-Rufinus, Weststein, etc., saw here the distributive justice by which God does not exclude anyone from salvation. Ambrosiaster and St Thomas Aq. knew of an explanation which thought of the justice (= fidelity) by which God is sure to fulfil his (Messianic) promises, cf. Rom 3:3 f. Theodoretus of Cyrus in very much the same way included a reference to the vindictive justice of God in Christ's vicarious passion and death. Zahn (1910, 82-84) identified it with Christ himself, who is the incarnation of God's justice revealed in the Gospel, cf. 1 Cor 1:30. More opinions have been collected by *M. Stewart, Com. on Rom., 1838, 63 f.; Cornely, 68; Lagrange, RB 11 (1914) 321-31. Nevertheless it remains true that the more common opinion explains the 'justice of God' in 1:17 as the justice which comes from God to man, i.e. justifying grace. So among others, Chrysostom, Augustine, Glossa Ordinaria, Estius, Cornely, Lagrange, Prat I 192 f.; Boylan. To express this explanation the WV introduced the noun 'justness', cf. C. Lattey, WV, NT, III (1927) 243. Protestant exegesis prefers the term 'righteousness' to convey the same explanation that here the 'justice of God' is a quality of man.

The controversy between Catholic and Protestant exegesis from the time of the Reformation concerns the character of this justice—justness—righteousness. According to Catholic doctrine God not only declares man just but by that act also makes him just; cf. Council of Trent, sess VI cap 7 (Dz 799) 'The one formal cause (of our justification) is the justice of God, not that by which he himself is just, but that by which he makes us just, that namely, with which we being endowed by him, are renewed in the spirit of our mind, and we are not only reputed, but are truly called and are just' (J. Waterworth, The Canons and Decrees of the Council of Trent, Engl. Tr. 1848). Protestant exegesis on the other hand argues that δικαιοσύνη is to be translated 'to declare just', cf. SH 30 f., 34-9. As in court a judge pronounces a man free or guilty according to the law without intending to affect the real state of his soul, so in the process of justification God merely declares a man just, without affecting his inner state. Man's 'righteousness', therefore, is merely imputed and not imparted, a fiction rather than a reality. The ensuing paradox that under this supposition man's sinful state remains, though he is declared and treated as just by God, and is expected to act accordingly, is admitted by Protestant theologians, cf. SH 36; *J. H. Holtzmann, NT Theol. II (1911) 137. The old Protestant position has been abandoned in modern times by Jülicher, Zahn, Lietzmann and others, cf. Lagrange, RB 11 (1914) 325 f. For the rejection of g 'From faith to faith': seems parallel to 'everyone that believeth' in 16. Salvation by faith, v 16 = justice by faith, v 17. Repeating himself Paul changed salvation to justice (= justness), but he had no other word for faith. That the justness of the Gospel is to be obtained by faith, therefore, is clearly the general sense. The exact meaning of the phrase 'from faith to faith' is, however, uncertain. One explanation understands it as a formula which could be translated 'faith all the way', 'faith first and last'. In support of this interpretation one can quote the similar formulas in Ps 83:8 from strength to strength; 2 Cor 2:16 from death to death; 3:18 from glory to glory; 4:17 beyond all measure; cf. Jn 1:16. The emphasis then lies on the unique and necessary position of faith in the process of Christian salvation. This would seem to suit the context best, on the supposition that 15 f. are meant to be a summary statement. A second explanation insists on the literal translation 'from faith to faith', which suggests various degrees of faith in the process of salvation. The faith of the Gospel, then, is here described as a living faith, a faith which grows wider and stronger from day to day, cf. Cornely 71 f. A third explanation understands the phrase as meaning 'justice or justness on the basis of faith unto believers', cf. 3:22; Gal 3:22. So Boylan. This third explanation does not differ essentially from the first in meaning, but it would seem difficult to prove that the second 'faith' here means all who believe.

848f the Protestant explanation and doctrine by the Council of Trent see Dz 821.

h 17b. 'The just man will live by faith': Another possible translation is 'He that is just through faith will live'; so Lietzmann, Boylan. This quotation from Hab 2:4 can be taken as a third variation on the theme of the epistle, or as a third attempt as it were, to find a striking headline, 17a being the second as parallel to 16. As the shortest of the three 17b is the one most commonly remembered. St Paul's first intention in adding it was evidently to support his thesis with a text from the Bible. For similar texts which he could have quoted cf. Gen 15:6; Is 7:9 (MT, Vg, not LXX); Mk 16:16. But Hab 2:4 seems to have been a favourite proof-text as it is also quoted in Gal 3:11; Heb 10:38. In each of these quotations, however, the prophet's words are interpreted in a typical or spiritual sense, the literal meaning being 'by faithfulness to God the just man will save his (natural) life', scil. from death in the Babylonian captivity. 'He will live' is the one new idea in this third summary of Paul's thesis. In view of his line of argument in the context there can be no doubt that he is thinking of the supernatural or spiritual life of the Christian soul, as defined in Gal 2:20; 5:25; cf. Rom 6:11, 13; 8:13; 14:8.

Summary. The theme of Rom 1:16-17 then can be summed up as salvation—justice of God—life on the one hand, and on the other faith each time. For the same doctrine cf. Jn 6:29; Gal 2:16; Eph 2:8 f.

847a I 18-III 20 All Men need the Salvation revealed in the Gospel, because all have sinned (3:23) and therefore live under the shadow of the wrath of God—This is true of the highly civilized Greeks = Gentiles, 1:18-32, as well as of Israel, God's chosen people, 2:1-3:20. To prove this universal need for the Christian salvation by convicting all of sin is the Apostle's first point in the section 1:18-11:36, which is generally called the dogmatic part of the epistle.

St Paul's way of opening the discussion by showing in the first place the need for the salvation revealed in the Gospel, 1:18-3:20, leaving the nature of that salvation to be explained later, 3:21-8:39, is throughout logical, once it is understood that such is the line of argument intended. This intention, however, a reader may easily fail to see because the Apostle commences his first point in 1:18 without any introduction or transition in our sense of these terms. His γάρ, 'for' is too weak a particle, for our ears at all events, to be recognized as the beginning of a major section. If this absence of a formal transition is to be explained, one may think of an interval between the dictation of 1:18-17 and 1:18 ff. But the reason can also be found in the style of St Paul who nowhere shows great concern to obey the rules of rhetoric.

The Apostle's actual proof of the universal need for the Christian salvation in 1:18-3:20 is based on the thesis that all men have been caught in the net of sin. But it is impossible to convince every man individually of sin. Hence the Apostle was bound to generalize, and generally speaking, the proof of all men being under the dominion of sin was not difficult. Biblical as well as pagan literature provided plenty of evidence. For similar biblical texts see Gen 6:5; Ps 13:1-3; 52:3; Eccl 7:21; 9:3; Is 6:5; 64:6; Wis 14:23-27; 1 Jn 1:8; 5:19. Similar texts from non-biblical literature can be found in Lietzmann 33, 35 f.; Deissmann (§ 845d) 315 ff.

Plan. It is customary to distinguish two major steps in the argument: (1) 1:18-32 dealing with the case of the Gentiles; (2) 2:1-3:20 dealing with the case of the Israelites. Another arrangement is: (1) 1:18-23 the case of those guilty of gross idolatry; (2) 1:24-32 the case of those guilty of obvious immorality; (3) 2:1-3:20 the case of those who condemn both idolatry and immorality and yet are guilty themselves. Of these two the former analysis is undoubtedly in closer agreement with the whole trend of the Apostle's argument. In the world of St Paul there was a clearly marked distinction between Gentiles and Israelites, and every Israelite, worthy of the name, was proud of it. It must, however, be admitted that St Paul passes from the one to the other in 2:1 without any of the literary devices commonly used to indicate the beginning of a new topic. Moreover, it seems he deliberately avoided referring directly by name to the Gentiles in 1:18-32, and to the Israelites in 2:1-3:20. The result is a certain vagueness as the different commentaries show. But if this indefiniteness is intended for the purpose of ensuring a better hearing in both groups, it cannot be used as an argument against the former analysis, which is followed in this commentary.

I 18-32 The Gentiles' Need for the Salvation of the Gospel—To show the need of the pagan world for the salvation of the Gospel Paul enlarges (1) in 18-23 on the folly of pagan idolatry; (2) in 24-32 on the moral corruption of pagan life. For a more detailed analysis see *A. E. Garvie, CBI 96.

18-23 The Gentiles' Need for the Salvation of the Gospel in view of their Idolatry—The Gentiles know God, yet they do not honour him accordingly. Their worship is not religion but idolatry. Such folly, however, cannot possibly lead to the blessing of peace which every soul expects from God. On the contrary, their whole religion is patently stamped with the indelible marks of God's curse and wrath.

The term idolatry, not actually used in the text, is here understood in its primary theological meaning, in which it stands for all misinterpretations and misrepresentations of God's attributes, i.e. for faulty natural theology in general, cf. 1:23, 25. Only in this wide meaning can idolatry be said to be the beginning of the false and broad way that makes men sink inevitably lower and lower in their morality. And this is evidently the point which St Paul wants to make here. Further, idolatry in the restricted sense, in which it refers to various superstitions practised in connexion with actual idols, would not deserve the first place in this arraignment. For hideous and harmful as many of those superstitious practices may have been, they were hardly as hideous as the perversities referred to in 1:24-27. See also the list of sins in Gal 5:20 where fornication ranks first and idolatry fourth. Similar attacks on pagan idolatry are frequent in the OT, especially in the prophetic and sapiential literature; cf. Ex 20:2-6 = Dt 5:6-10 (the first of the Ten Commandments); Is 44:9-20; Jer 10:3 ff.; Bar 6:3, 72; Wis 13-15; Pss 95:5; 113B:4-8 = 134:5-18. For a list of patristic references see Zorell, Com. in Is, 1923, 181, note after Is 44, 23. That according to d 18. 'The wrath of God is revealed' = is being revealed, is revealing itself. The revelation of the wrath of God is considered as being in progress. This follows from the present tense and the context, 1:24, 26, 28. It is God's wrath working itself out in human history by turning the paths which men choose to get away from God into paths of depravity, degeneration and decay. The evidence in this case is the manifest folly of idolatry on the one hand, 1:22 f.; and the moral corruption of pagan life on the other, 1:24-32. 'Men that detain the truth in injustice': can mean (1) those who hold down (= hold back) the truth through their immorality; 'such as in wickedness are repressing the truth', WV; 'men whose wrongdoing denies his truth its full scope' KNT; (2) those who hold fast or possess the truth but with immorality; cf. 1:32. In either case the Apostle clearly says that the religious failure of the Gentiles is due not to insufficient knowledge of God but to inefficient moral principles. The truth of which the Apostle speaks is the true knowledge of God, such as is accessible to human reason, cf. 1:19-23. 19. 'That which is known': can also be translated, that which is knowable of God = all that which man can know about God by applying his natural faculties. 'Manifest in them' = clear to them, in their mind and conscience. Another possible translation is, manifest among them. 20. 'The invisible things of him' = his invisible attributes, two of which are mentioned in the same verse: his eternal power and divinity. 'Are clearly seen, being understood by means of the things created': that from the visible things man by means of his intellectual faculties can and ought to come to know God, their creator, is common biblical doctrine, cf. Pss 8:3 f.; 18:2; 142:5 ff.; Is 42:5; 45:18; Job 12:9; 36:24 ff.; Wis 13:1, 5; 14:22. The same was defined as dogma by the Vatican Council, sess III, April 24th, 1870 (Dz 1785): '... Ecclesia tenet et docet, Deum rerum omnium principium et finem, naturali humanae rationis lumine e rebus creatis certo cognosci posse; invisibilia enim ipsius, a creatura mundi per ea quae facta sunt, intellecta, conspiciuntur'. For a long list of references to the same idea in Greek philosophy cf. Lietzmann. 23. 'The glory of the incorruptible God' = of the immortal God, WV; of the imperishable God, KNT. 'Into the likeness of the image of . . . man . . . birds . . . beasts . . . reptiles' = into images representing these creatures. Idols in human form are found in all ancient religions. The other three examples of idolatry can easily be illustrated from the religion of the Egyptians who worshipped hawk and ibis; bull and cat; and crocodile.

847c 1:18-23 the pagans' failure to attain salvation was due in the first instance to their false religion or idolatry is a point worth emphasizing in view of so many attempts in all ages to find the root of all trouble in other spheres of human life, e.g. in material or intellectual wants.

f 24-32 The Gentiles' Need for the Salvation of the Gospel proved from the Immorality of Pagan Life—From the Gentiles' idolatry Paul passes on to their immorality. Immorality must here be taken in the general sense of sins against the second part of the decalogue as distinguished from the sins forbidden in the first three of the Ten Commandments. The Apostle verifies his accusation of general immorality in pagan life with a list of 23 vices. They are arranged in three groups: 24 f., impurity; 26 f., unnatural vice; 28-32, a catalogue of twenty-one miscellaneous sins. Each of these groups is marked as such by the same introductory formula παρέδωκεν = tradidit, Vg = God gave them up to, DV in 24 = God delivered them up to, DV in 26, 28.

g 24, 26, 28. 'God handed them over to sin': the meaning of this phrase has been differently explained, cf. Poole 26 f. On the one hand, some Greek Fathers (Chrysostom, Theodoret) explained that God merely permitted men to follow their own free will which, however, when weakened by sin will invariably follow the inclination to evil. On the other hand, St Augustine coined the paraphrase, non cogendo sed deserendo = not by forcing but by abandoning them, i.e. by withholding actual grace as their deserved punishment, cf. Aquin. ST II 1 q 79 a 3; II 2 q 94 a 3 ad 3. a 4 ad 1. With all respect for either attempt to explain how this is possible it would seem necessary to emphasize the greater importance of the fact that here St Paul clearly treats immorality as a regular consequence of idolatry, and that in this sequence he sees a divine arrangement or divine law. According to this text it is God's order that the first commandment is the cornerstone of all religious and moral life. Without it the other commandments are a building that has no foundation. This implication is clearly stated in 28 'inasmuch as they did not think it necessary to have (true) knowledge of God, God gave them up to a reprobate mind; and in Wis 14:27 'the worship of abominable idols is the cause and the beginning and end of all evil'. To explain how this divine order is reconcilable with the absolute goodness of God is part of the general problem of evil rather than of the exegesis of Rom 1:24. For a special note on the relation between idolatry and immorality see Lagrange 36-41. 24 f. 'Uncleanness' = impurity. This can refer generally speaking to any sin as staining man's character. But the context of 24 f. makes it necessary to think here of sins against the sixth commandment = fornication. For the use of the word impurity in this sense cf. 6:19; 2 Cor 12:21; Gal 5:19; Eph 4:19; 5:3, and contrast the Christian reverence for the body in 1 Cor 6:12-20. 26 f. single out from the sins against the sixth commandment two particularly humiliating types, namely, unnatural vice among both sexes = shameful affections, DV = shameful passions, WV. 27c. 'Receiving in themselves the retribution due to their error': refers to the vices of 26, 27ab which are here considered not so much as sins in themselves but as punishment for the sin of idolatry (= error, DV) described in 18-23. 28. 'God gave them up to a worthless mentality' = a reprobate mind, WV. Cf. Tit 1:15 'to them that are defiled and to unbelievers, nothing is clean, but both their mind and their conscience is defiled'.

29-32. This is a summary charge of general immorality in form of a list of 21 (23 Vg) common sins. Similar lists by St Paul can be found in Rom 13:13; 1 Cor 5:10 f.; 6:9 f.; 2 Cor 12:20 f.; Gal 5:19-21; Eph 4:31; 5:3-4; Col 3:5, 8; 1 Tim 1:9 f.; 2 Tim 3:2-5; cf. also Mk 7:21. These lists may have their model in the OT, e.g. Ex 20; 21:1-23:19; 34:14-26; Lev 19; Dt 27:15-26; Os 4:1 f.; Wis 14:25 f. For a number of references to similar catalogues in classical (stoic) and patristic literature see Lietzmann 35. All attempts to discover a systematic order in Paul's enumeration have failed. The later Greek MSS and Vg have two additions which are probably not genuine: 'fornication' in 29; and 'without fidelity' in 31. On the whole subject see Lagrange RB 8 (1911) 534 ff. 29. 'Whisperers' = tale-bearers. 32. 'And they knowing quite well God's sentence, that all who practise such things deserve death, yet not only practise these things themselves but also applaud those who practise them': in one respect this is but another sin to be added to the previous list, viz. the sin of applauding and encouraging wrong-doing. On the other hand, St Paul has obviously set it apart and marked it as the climax of all the depravity mentioned before. This is no exaggeration. For to abet and to applaud evil is doing the devil's own work. The Latin text is uncertain; Vg and WV differ substantially.

II 1-III 20 Israel's Need for the Salvation of the Gospel 848a—Continuing his evidence of the universal need for the salvation revealed in the Gospel St Paul here takes up the case of Israel, the Chosen People. But there is no indication in the text of this change of subject. To make such an abrupt transition intelligible, commentators refer to Nathan's conviction of David in 2 Sam 12:1-9. As David whole-heartedly condemned the man of Nathan's parable, 2 Sam 12:1-5, so every Israelite would whole-heartedly join in Paul's condemnation of paganism in 18-32. But there follows in each case 848a the unexpected 'thou art the man' 2 Sam 12:7 = Rom 2:1-3:20.

The progress of thought in 2:1-3:20 is not easy to follow. The sub-divisions proposed in the various commentaries differ widely. The difficulty arises mainly from the various objections with which the Apostle repeatedly interrupts the course of his argument. In addition, the actual objections are not stated in the text, but must be inferred from his answers. The objector is, of course, imaginary, cf. SH 69 f., on 3:1 ff.

b II 1-2 A General Statement Introducing Israel's Case with regard to the Salvation of the Gospel—Without mentioning a name St Paul here introduces the case of a man who condemns the idolatry and immorality depicted in 1:18-32 but is nevertheless guilty himself. Self-complacent he sits in judgement over the religious and moral life of others, but in reality he needs the salvation of the Gospel as much as they.

1a. 'Thou . . . O man, whosoever thou art, that judgest': of whom is St Paul thinking? So far he has addressed himself clearly to all those who were guilty of gross idolatry, 1:18-23, and immorality, 1:24-32. But these apart, there evidently remained a large group of men who condemned idolatry and immorality as much as St Paul did, e.g. the followers of stoic philosophy and, much more numerous and outspoken than they, the whole of Israel. Hence the question, did St Paul here think only of Israelites or did he include also the so-called good pagans? Both possibilities are defended by different commentators. The opinion that Paul thought exclusively of Israelites has in its favour that in 2:17 he actually mentions 'the Jew' by name, which he seems to have deliberately avoided before, in order to obtain a better hearing. Moreover, the whole description is said to fit the typical Israelite of the time who was proud of his higher religious and moral standards, cf. 2:17-20; Lk 18:9-14. On the other hand there is much to be said in favour of the opinion that here at the beginning Paul is still speaking generally, and includes everybody who fits the description, no matter whether Jew or Gentile. This opinion presents the wider view in every respect. After all, there were good pagans, then as now, and they could not reasonably be said to fall under the accusation of 1:18-32. Hence if they are not included in 2:1-3:20 they escape the Apostle's argument for the universal need of the salvation revealed in the Gospel. This may not be impossible, but there can be little doubt that with 2:1-3:20 he intended to close the ring of his evidence so as to let no one escape from the accusation of being under sin and therefore in need of the salvation of the Gospel.

c 1bc. 'For wherein thou judgest another thou condemnest thyself. For thou doest the same, thou who judgest': this is Paul's summary reply to those who would claim exemption from the previous charges of idolatry and immorality. As can be seen from his later explanations, he does not mean to say that those who belong to this second category are, in spite of their protest, guilty of all the sins enumerated in 1:18-32. But as far as the dominion of sin is concerned they are in the same position as those whom they condemn. For in principle they act in the same way, i.e. they, too, do not live according to their knowledge of God; and that is where their sin begins. Their guilt may be less evident owing to their higher knowledge of God, or because their religious and moral life is more refined, but this does not exempt them from the dominion of sin. They are caught in the net of sin like all the rest. This is no doubt a hard argument and one can well understand that the Apostle takes a long time over explaining it, 2:2-3:20. But, in all he says, nowhere does he go back on his word. Again and again he repeats it: all are under sin. There is no exception. Those who judge others, thereby speak their own judgement. cf. Jn 8:7; 1 Jn 1:10. The practical conclusion which the Apostle wants to be drawn from it all evidently is: living in sin 'you will also die in your sin', Jn 8:21, unless you accept the salvation offered in the Gospel.

3-10 A First Objection—Do not God's kindness, forbearance and patience give a sufficient guarantee that the threatened punishment of men's sins will be averted, 3-4? To this St Paul sternly replies that such a hope is foolish. On the day of God's judgment his justice alone will rule, giving everybody his due according to his works, cf. Ps 61:12 f.; Prov 24:12. On that day God's goodness will certainly not declare sinners to be saints.

11-24 A Second Objection—Will the Torah, the Law of Sinai, not protect Israel from the wrath of God? Paul's reply is substantially the same as before. On the day of God's judgement it is not God's law that will be weighed in the balance but men's works. On that day sin will be punished as sin, without any respect of persons, no matter whether it was sin against God's will as read in the Torah or as voiced in man's conscience, 11-16. 16. Some connexion with 15 must be inserted, e.g. [as will be evident to all] on the day when God judges. The whole sentence seems to have been added here by St. Paul to answer the excuse that the voice or law of man's conscience is something which it is difficult to prove as it is hidden and secret and that it therefore should not be used in a discussion of this nature. Paul replies: this may be true for the present, but it will not be so on the day of God's judgement. Then all will have to confess that they had God's law written in their hearts.

17-24. The Apostle follows up his first answer with an argumentum ad hominem. After a solemn introduction in 17-20 which enumerates all the alleged prerogatives of Israel (but is left without a proper apodosis) he instances in 21-23 the 7th, 6th and 1st commandments against his objector: 'doest thou steal? . . . doest thou commit adultery? . . . doest thou plunder temples?' With reference to these three accusations it would no doubt be an exaggeration to think that Paul regarded every Israelite as a thief, an adulterer, or a temple-robber. His point is rather that these sins were committed by Israelites, though they were expressly forbidden in the Torah, cf. SB III 108-15. The Law, therefore, has not saved Israel from sin in the past nor will it save Israel from the wrath of God on the day of judgement. 'Thou that boastest of the law, dishonourst God by breaking the law', 2:23, cf. Mt 23:3. 'But we know that the judgement of God is according to truth against those who do such things', 2:2. 22. 'Dost thou plunder temples', WV. This is commonly understood of pagan temples, cf. Dt 7:5; Ac 19:37; Fl. Jos. Ant. IV 8, 10. The incentive to such theft seems to have been the great wealth stored up in many pagan temples. Others understand the phrase of defrauding the revenues due to the temple in Jerusalem. In this case 'dost thou commit sacrilege?' is the better translation.

25-29 A Third Objection—Is not circumcision, Israel's first sacrament, a sufficient guarantee for her salvation? St Paul's answer is that circumcision does not make a man a saint before God, if he does not keep the law of God; cf. Dt 10:16; 30:6; Jer 4:4; 9:26; Ez 44:7. And Israel has not kept the law.

III 1-2 A Fourth Objection—If the Law and Circumcision cannot save Israel what then remains of Israel's so highly-praised privileges? Paul's reply begins as if he intended to answer with a long description of Israel's privileged position as in 9:4. In fact, however, he does not get beyond the first point, that she has been entrusted with the Scriptures. 2. 'The words of God': can mean (1) the whole OT; (2) the Messianic promises in the OT, because of v 3.

3-4 A Fifth Objection—What is the use of the Scriptures, since according to Paul's own argument God is no longer bound to his promises after Israel has broken the covenant by unfaithfulness to her obligations? Paul answers as in 2 Tim 2:13 'even if we are unfaithful (= untrue to our trust) God remains faithful (= true to his promises) for he cannot disown himself', cf. also Rom 9:6; Jer 31 (38 LXX):32. True as it is that God's relation to his people is a bilateral covenant, yet this 848f is not all. God's truthfulness and faithfulness to himself are above any changes which man may introduce. Man's untruthfulness and unfaithfulness only serve to bring out the opposite attributes of God all the more clearly. 8. 'If some have "not believed", will their "unbelief" not render ineffective the faithfulness of God?' The words in double inverted commas have been understood (1) of Israel's 'unbelief' in Jesus of Nazareth as the Messiah; (2) of Israel's 'unfaithfulness' to the covenant of Sinai referred to in 2:11-24, 25-29. The second explanation is recommended by the contrast with God's 'faithfulness' in the context and by the same thought in 2 Tim 2:13. But see SH and Lagrange.

g 5-8 A Sixth Objection—If our unjustness (= sinfulness) serves to make God's justness (= justice) stand out the more clearly, why are we still threatened with his wrath, and urged to seek justification? Is God not unjust in punishing such sinfulness? Paul's reply in 6-8 is difficult to follow. It seems to consist of three points, each meant to lead the objector ad absurdum. (1) According to such reasoning God could not judge the world at all, and yet we know that he will judge everyone, and that his judgements will be true, cf. 2:2, 6-8; Ps 118:137, 142; Job 34:10-12, etc. (2) According to such reasoning the Jews could not condemn me (Paul) as a sinner = an apostate, but should rather acquiesce in my apostasy as a means of manifesting and glorifying God's truth in the possession of Israel. Yet the objector, being a Jew, must know very well how harshly Paul is judged by his former coreligionists, 7. So Jülicher. (3) According to such reasoning it would be right to teach as some maintain that I (Paul) do: 'let us do evil that good may come'. Yet, such a doctrine is evidently abhorred by all, 8. 7 is taken by most commentators as a further objection, in which case it is but a weakened repetition of v 5. 8. 'Let us do evil that good may come': is a malicious misinterpretation of St Paul's doctrine of justification by faith and not by works, cf. 6:1, 15.

h 9-20 Concluding Statement of Israel's Need for the Salvation of the Gospel—The Apostle returns from the various digressions in 2:3-3:8 to the principal question of 2:1-2, is he who claims exemption from the charge of idolatry and immorality in 1:18-32 (esp. Israel) entitled to regard himself as 'just' before God, or in such a privileged position that he does not need the Christian justification? St Paul's concluding answer is an uncompromising No. The Jews as well as the Greeks, i.e. Israel, the Chosen People (= the Church of old), as well as the pagan world, all are in the bondage of sin, as the Scriptures prove. The Apostle's proof from the Scriptures in 10-18 is a free combination of the following texts from the LXX: Rom 3:10-12 = Ps 13:1-3 = Ps 52:2-4; Rom 3:13a-b = Ps 5:10; Rom 3:13c = Ps 139:4; Rom 3:14 = Ps 9:28; Rom 3:15-17 = Is 59:7 f.; Rom 3:18 = Ps 35:2. 9. προεχόμεθα = 'Do we excel them' = have we Israelites then still any advantage over the Gentiles? According to this translation the Greek middle is here used for the active, cf. Lagrange, Boylan. If the Greek form is taken as passive, the translation is 'are we excelled' = are we Israelites then in a worse position than the Gentiles? So SH and WV. 'No, not so' = (1) not altogether, (2) not at all. In either case, Paul does not deny that Israel has privileges, but she has none as regards the need for the salvation of the Gospel which is the point here under discussion. 20. Law convinces man of sin (cf. 7:7-12) but does not produce justness or salvation, cf. Jn 1:17.

i Application of 1:18-III:20—St Paul's argument for the universal need of the salvation revealed in the Gospel is still practical and convincing. For laws are still insufficient to make men saints, no matter whether we consider the laws of conscience, or the laws of the various systems of moral philosophy, or the laws of Christian moral theology. All these systems agree in showing the ideal more or less clearly, but they do not produce the longed-for justness—righteousness—salvation, because in practice no one lives in complete accordance with all these laws. 'If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us', 1 Jn 1:8. Because of sin men needed the salvation of the Gospel in the days of St Paul, and because of sin they still need it today. The need for that salvation is the result not of religious speculations but of hard realities.

III 21-IV 25 The Way to the Salvation of the Gospel 849a

—In this second part of the dogmatic section of his letter Paul sets out to describe the means by which the salvation of the Gospel is obtained. The logical connexion with the previous discussion, proving man's need for it, is self-evident. The two sections belong together as man's need and God's answer. At the same time it is easy to notice a gap in the argument. Between man's need for salvation and the way to the salvation of the Gospel one expects a discussion on the nature of this salvation. According to the dogmatic textbooks of today such a discussion would have to deal first with Christ's work of redemption, then with the negative side of salvation = justification = remission of sins, and finally with its positive side = sanctification = infusion of sanctifying grace. St Paul in his exposition of the way to salvation, 3:21-4:25, and of the effects of salvation, 5:1-8:39, does cover the ground of such a modern discussion on the nature of Christian salvation, but in a way that is not systematic according to our standards; cf. Prat I 171; II 250-53; textbooks of dogma, treatises on Christ's work of Redemption and on Sanctifying Grace, e.g. Tanqueray II 749-84; III 34-102.

Plan.—According to the most common opinion b 3:21-4:25 can be subdivided as follows: (1) 3:21-30 the way to the Christian salvation is faith in Christ; (2) 3:31-4:25 the Scriptural evidence in favour of this doctrine. Another arrangement is: (1) 3:21-26 the way to the Christian salvation; (2) 3:27-31 some practical conclusions; (3) 4:1-25 the case of Abraham as proof from Scripture for the Christian doctrine of salvation by faith.

21-26 The Way to the Christian Salvation is Justification by Faith in Christ—In a picture which is very different from that in 1:18-3:20 St Paul here gives a summary description of the new salvation which he is preaching and defending. Unfortunately for us, the description is so brief, compact and sententious that it becomes difficult to understand. The negative picture in 1:18-3:20 is much fuller and easier to analyse. The outstanding importance of the passage, however, is generally recognized. It has been called 'one of the key passages' of Paul's epistles, 'the epitome and mother idea of Paul's theology', cf. Prat I 205. The characteristics of the Christian salvation singled out in this description by St Paul are: (1) it is a justification which does not come by way of any law, 21; (2) it is obtained by faith in Christ, 22a; (3) hence it is open to all, without distinction, 22b, 23; (4) it has its ultimate origin in the propitiatory death of Christ, 24-26. See the similar description in 1:16 f.; and the detailed analysis in Prat I 204-6.

21. 'A justice (justness) of God without law' = independent of, apart from all existing law or legal systems. The law in its various forms (be it conscience, or moral philosophy, or OT Scriptures) offers salvation to all who abide by this law and keep it in every point. From this system of justification the salvation of the Gospel must be clearly distinguished. They are worlds apart. Man's failure in the one is God's opportunity in the other. Another possible explanation translates Law as Mosaic Law, e.g. WV, Boylan. 22. 'A justice (justness) of God through faith in Jesus Christ': the justness which the Gospel promises is obtained by way of faith in Jesus Christ. The law-fulness of the former system of salvation has been replaced by faith-fulness; cf. Council of Trent, sess VI cap 8 (Dz 801), quoted § 846d. On the suitability of faith for playing such an important part in the process of salvation see Prat I 172 f.; Gifford 89. 23. 'All . . . have fallen short of the glory of God' = the perfection of God, cf. 1:23 = the justice of God. In 840d this context it is evidently the justice of God as it was meant to be shared by men, therefore = justness = sanctifying grace; cf. C. Lattey, WV III 245. Others explain δόξα (= glory) here as high opinion, honour, praise, favour from God, which leads to the same idea. All have sinned and thereby lost God's good opinion of them = his favour = his grace. Cornely understands it of eternal life as in 2:7; 8:18, 21.

24-25. 'Justified freely by his grace through the redemption . . . in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set up as a propitiation . . . in his own blood': the Christian justification derives its existence ultimately from the propitiatory death of Christ, which the Council of Trent, sess VI cap 7-8 (Dz 799, 801) called 'the meritorious cause of our justification'. That this central thesis of all Christian doctrine of salvation—justification—sanctification (soteriology) is clearly expressed in our passage is beyond any doubt, and the differences of opinion which exist on the exact meaning of this or that term here employed by St Paul should not be allowed to obscure this fundamental doctrine of the passage; cf. Prat II 181, 184; I 380-4; SH 91-4, note after 3:26. For a dogmatic treatment see textbooks of dogma, Christology; e.g. Tanqueray II 731-8 (736!); 750-4; 776-80. Commentators differ mainly in the explanation of 'redemption', 24, and 'propitiation', 25. 24. ἀπολύτρωσις = redemption. Does this term imply the idea of a ransom being paid, the ransom being the blood of Christ? This question cannot be decided for certain. The word ἀπολύτρωσις, redemption, taken by itself, need not carry the idea of a ransom. For LXX uses it for the 'deliverance' from Egypt; and the NT uses it in the same general sense of 'deliverance' six times out of ten: Lk 21:28; Rom 8:23; 1 Cor 1:30; Eph 1:14; 4:30; Heb 11:35. On the other hand it has the meaning of 'ransom' in Col 1:14; Eph 1:7; Heb 9:15. To these references we must add the passages in the NT in which the idea is clearly expressed that the Christians have been 'bought for a price', 1 Cor 6:20; 7:23; Gal 3:13; 2 Pet 2:1; Apoc 5:9; cf. also Mt 20:28; Mk 10:45; Ac 20:28; 1 Pet 1:18 f.; Prat II 181. The last two groups of texts provide strong evidence in favour of the idea of a ransom being implied also in Rom 3, 24 f. 25. ἱλαστήριον = propitiation. There can be no doubt that this term describes our Lord's death as propitiation = expiation of our sins. But does it define our Lord's death as a propitiatory sacrifice? The doctrine that Christ's death was a sacrifice for men's sins = a propitiatory sacrifice, follows clearly from such texts as Mt 26:28 and parallels; 1 Cor 11:24 f.; 15:3; Eph 1:7; 5:2; Col 1:20; Heb 10:12-14; 1 Pet 1:18 f.; 3:18, etc. The question whether this doctrine is also expressed in Rom 3:25 must be left open. For the word ἱλαστήριον (= propitiation) taken by itself cannot be shown to have had the meaning 'propitiatory sacrifice'. According to etymology it signifies 'something connected with reconciliation, propitiation or expiation'. LXX uses it 25 times for 'the lid of the Ark of the Covenant' = the mercy-seat or propitiatory; cf. Ex 25:17. So also Heb 9:5. The only other text in the NT where it occurs is here, where its exact meaning is consequently largely a matter of conjecture. The main explanations that have been put forward are: (1) a means of propitiation = a propitiatory = a mercy-seat; (2) a propitiator (taking the adjective as masculine which is possible in the Greek); (3) a propitiatory sacrifice. The last of these explanations is favoured in our context by the phrase 'in his own blood', 25. Cf. Prat I 429 f.; II 180-8; SH 91-4.

25-26. The structure of this sentence is: God set up Jesus Christ as a propitiation . . . 25a: (1) with the intention of showing his justice, 25b; (2) the reason being his having passed by the sins of the past in patience, 25c, 26a; (3) with the intention of showing his justice in the present time, 26b; (4) with the intention that he may be found just himself and justifying those who believe in Jesus, 26c. Nr 1.3.4 form a clear and continuous line of thought. But how are we to fit in nr 2? It is evidently closely connected with nr 1 and at the same time there is a contrast with nr 3. Accordingly there are two explanations. (1) If the connexion with nr 1 is stressed then it seems inserted to explain why God manifested his justice with such severity in the death of Christ, 25a, 26c. The Apostle warns against interpreting God's forbearance with man's sins in the past as a proof that God's punitive justice had fallen into abeyance for ever. The cross is the true measure of the rigour of God's justice in punishing sin. (2) If the contrast between nr 2 and nr 3 is stressed, i.e. the contrast between past and present, then nr 2 seems intended to show that God in the past merely passed by sin but did not justify = sanctify = save the sinner, as he has decided to do in the present time. The choice between these two possibilities depends on the interpretation given to 'the justice of God' in this paragraph; cf. note on 25b. 25b = 26b. 'For the shewing of his justice': WV translates in both cases 'the justness of God' = his communicated justice, as in 3:21. This explanation has the advantage of consistency and simplicity. It does away with the necessity of remembering the distinction between justice of God as it is in God and as it is in man; and it concentrates on the main idea of the whole section 3:21-4:25 which is man's justification according to the Gospel. From the practical point of view, therefore, this explanation is certainly the easiest to follow. But it must be admitted that this is not the only possible explanation. In view of the respective contexts many commentators maintain that Paul's usage of the term 'justice of God' is not consistent in this paragraph. The different meanings are (1) = God's justice in man = communicated justice = justness, in 21; (2) = justice in God, in 25; and that with the emphasis on the special meaning of justice as punitive justice, the reference being to God's punitive justice as revealed in the terrible death of Christ for man's sins; (3) = the justice in God, in 26; but with the emphasis on the general meaning of justice = the whole moral perfection of God, as revealed in Christ's propitiation and in the justification of man. See Rickaby, Boylan. 25c, 26a. 'For the remission of former sins. Through the forbearance of God', DV = 'because of God passing by former sins in his patience', so according to the best editions of the Greek text, πάρεσις meaning praeter-mission rather than re-mission. There are two explanations of the idea here expressed. (a) In the past God only passed by man's sins in his patience (cf. Ac 14:15) but there was no real justification of man, as this was reserved for the present time. Such must be the thought if the justice of God in 25b is = justness. (b) God showed his justice so severely in the death of Christ, 25ab, because of his having apparently overlooked man's sins in the past by showing patience. To avoid this patience being misinterpreted as indifference to sin on God's part is one purpose of the terrible death of Christ for man's sins. This must be the idea if the justice of God in 25b is the punitive justice of God. 26b. 'That he may be found just himself and justifying him who believes in Jesus': this text makes it very clear that St Paul uses the one term 'justice of God' in two different meanings: (1) the justice of God as God's attribute; and (2) the justice of God as communicated and imparted to us.

27-31 Three Practical Conclusions from the Christian Doctrine of Justification by Faith—These verses throw further light on the way to salvation by means of three conclusions from its previous description in 21-26. (1) The Christian doctrine of justification by faith excludes all that boastful self-sufficiency and self-complacency which the various claims to superiority in law and lawfulness had spread and always will spread among men. In the Christian doctrine of salvation, law and lawfulness have been dethroned from the first place in the process of man's salvation, and their place of honour has been given to faith in Jesus Christ, 27 f. (2) The Christian doctrine of k 28. 'Justified by faith without works of a law': Christian justification is obtained by faith; no one can earn it by works according to this or that system of law, whatever the name or character of that law may be: be it the law of Israel, or the law of the Gentiles; be it natural, moral or ceremonial law; cf. 3:20-22; Dz 801, 1793; Prat I 180 f. Already Origen uttered a warning against the false conclusion that according to this verse works after justification are of no account. To draw such a conclusion would be to overlook two important points: (1) Paul is here concerned not with the Christian life after justification, but with the way of obtaining justification. 'Initial justification' = the beginning of justification, is his point. (2) When Paul does speak of the life after justification has been obtained he leaves no doubt that works are necessary to retain the justification obtained by faith. The evidence is to be found in his many exhortations, e.g. Rom 12-14. Among the more popular references to the same effect are Mt 25:34 ff.; 1 Cor 3:8; 2 Cor 11:15; Gal 5:6; Jas 2:14, 17, 24-26. But St Paul would call these works 'works of faith' and not 'works of law'. Thus there is no contradiction. Faith leads to virtue, but virtue need not lead to faith (St Gregory the Great, Hom. 19 in Ez., cf. Estius). The necessity and meritorious character of good works after justification had to be defended by the Council of Trent, sess VI cap 7, 10; Dz 800, 803, 834, 842.

849j justification by faith supersedes the old distinction between Israelites and Gentiles based on circumcision. All attempts to retain that distinction in the question of salvation are in vain. For faith in Jesus Christ cannot be made dependent on circumcision or descent from Abraham. And it is this faith which is henceforward the one only condition for salvation required on the part of man, 29 f. (3) The Christian doctrine of justification by faith is in complete agreement with the Scriptures = the Law of Moses = the Pentateuch, 31. The proof of this follows in ch 4.

l Another conclusion from 28 that had to be rejected by the Council of Trent is, that before justification only faith is necessary as a preparation and no other works. To prove such a conclusion it would be necessary to show that Paul considered here not only the immediate preparation for justification which is admittedly faith, but also the possibilities of a more remote preparation and deliberately excluded any such steps before the decisive act of faith. Such a proof is impossible and other texts show that we must leave room for such a more remote preparation. The Council of Trent, sess VI cap 6 (Dz 798, 819), mentions: fear of God's punishment of sin, Eccles 1:28; Heb 11:6; hope of his forgiveness for Christ's sake, Mt 9:2; Mk 2:5; love of God = hatred of sin, 1 Jn 3:14; repentance, Lk 13:3; Ac 3:19; the resolution to receive the Sacrament of baptism and to keep the commandments, Mt 28:19; Ac 2:38; cf. Tanqueray III 54-8, esp. nr 54.

m Verse 28 has also become famous through Luther's translation 'by faith alone' = sola fide. The adjective 'alone' was not in the text from which Luther translated, since no MS or edition has it. He may have added it for the purpose of bringing out the sense of the passage more clearly. In fact, however, the addition has led to the false conclusion that—faith excepted—all other works both before and after justification are of no account according to St Paul's doctrine of salvation. This so-called sola-fides doctrine was rejected by the Council of Trent, Dz 819, 798, 803 f. 30. 'by faith . . . through faith': stylistic variation seems to be the most natural explanation of the difference in the preposition; so Boylan, differently SH.

n IV 1-25 The Justification of Abraham as a Scripture Proof for the Christian Doctrine of Justification by Faith—The purpose of this digression into OT history is to illustrate and prove the three previous conclusions, 3:27-31, esp. the last, 3:31, that in teaching justification by faith and not by the observance of the Law, the Gospel asserts a doctrine which is not against but in complete agreement with the Scriptures = OT, esp. Pentateuch. The argument consists of the following 5 points: (1) 1-8. 'Abraham believed God and that was counted to him as justice', Gen 15:6 LXX, Vg: this is the proof-text. It has a positive and a negative side. The former is the emphasis on Abraham's faith, the latter consists in the omission of any reference to his works. Both aspects must be taken together to make Abraham a suitable type of the justification of the Gospel by faith without works, 3:27 f. (2) 9-12. Abraham's justification by faith, Gen 15:6, took place before his circumcision, Gen 17:9-14, 23-27. The typical significance of this justification of Abraham, therefore, must not be limited to the children of the circumcision (= Israel) only. It is a lesson and example for all. Abraham is first of all 'the father of the faithful', and that is an older and wider title than 'the father of the circumcision', 3:29 f. (3) 13-17 continue the proof of the last point: the typical universality of Abraham's justification by faith. The new turn of the argument is the use made of the promise given to Abraham, that he will be the father of many nations, 13, 17. Abraham received this promise, Gen 12:3; 15:5; 18:18; 22:17 f., in view of his faith and not in connexion with any law or commandment. The children of Abraham according to this promise, therefore, are those who are Abraham's children by sharing his faith. Thus, from the very beginning the promise given to Abraham was founded on faith and grace, and this can indeed be regarded as a secure basis of justification. Had it been otherwise, had the promise given to Abraham been made dependent on the observance of a law, there would today be no plea for the fulfilment of the blessing promised to Abraham, because the Law had admittedly been broken, cf. Deut 11:26-28. (4) 18-22 are not essential to the argument; but to pass them by would mean losing one of the best descriptions of faith in general, and of Abraham's faith in particular. The phrase that believing in God Abraham 'hoped against hope', 18, has rightly become famous. From the earliest times commentators have sought for an adequate paraphrase; e.g. Chrysostom: 'past hope of man, in hope of God'; Theodoret: 'past hope according to nature, but in hope of the promise of God'; Severianus: 'past hope of his own nature, in hope of the power of him that promised' (Gifford). (5) 23-25 apply Abraham's justification by faith as a scriptural type of the justification by faith according to the Gospel and so bring this 'proof from Scripture', 4:1-25, to a close.

p 13-17. The argument that the promise given to Abraham ranks higher than the Law is repeated in Gal 3:15-18. There is this remarkable difference however, that in Gal the superiority of the promise is based on the simple fact of its being 430 years older than the Law. 23-25. There is admittedly a difference between the object of the faith of Abraham and the faith of a Christian. Abraham had to believe that God would give him a son; the Christian has to believe that God grants redemption and justification through the death and the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The difference is no doubt substantial. But this difference is not St Paul's point. His point is rather that in either case it is faith and not works on which man is found to be just = justified. Differently, N. P. Williams 460 f.

850a V 1-VIII 39 Some Immediate Effects of Christian Salvation, or the Fruits of Christian Justification—After the description of the means by which salvation according to the Gospel is obtained (Christ's redeeming death and man's faith, 3:21-4:25) Paul now recommends this salvation by praising some of its immediate effects, its present blessings. The same subject is treated in modern textbooks of dogma under the title: the formal effects of sanctifying grace, or sanctification. As such fruits we normally enumerate: (1) the forgiveness of sin, unless this be considered rather as the essence of justification; (2) divine adoption, 1 Jn 3:1;

850a (3) the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, 1 Cor 3:16 f.; (4) the gifts of the Holy Ghost; (5) the implanting (infusion) of supernatural virtues, esp. of the three theological virtues: faith, hope and charity; cf. Tanqueray III 50 f.

Plan. St Paul's method of treating the effects that follow in the soul upon the acceptance of the salvation offered in the Gospel in 5:1-8:39 is neither systematic nor complete. But the present chapter-division is generally acknowledged to separate the main points: (1) 5:1-21 he who is justified in the sense of the Gospel enjoys a triumphant hope of heavenly glory; (2) 6:1-23 he has ceased to live under the dominion of sin; (3) 7:1-25 he is free from the Law; (4) 8:1-39 he possesses the life and rights of an adoptive son of God. This last chapter can also be taken as a summary presentation of the blessings and principles of the Christian life; cf. Cornely.

b V 1-21 The Salvation of the Gospel gives Hope of Final Salvation = eternal glorification—That Paul in this chapter no longer speaks of faith leading to justification, but of sanctifying grace working in the justified, is beyond any doubt. But it is not so easy to see how many effects of this sanctifying grace (= initial salvation) he meant to single out for his description. Boylan distinguishes no less than eight: (1) peace with God, 1; (2) the hope of glory, 2; (3) gladness in tribulation, 3; (4) constancy and tested virtue, 4; (5) God's love for us, 5a; (6) indwelling of the Holy Spirit and abundance of infused virtue, 5b; (7) imputation of Christ's merits, 6-8; (8) confident hope of salvation and boasting in God, 9-11. Piconio counts four: (1) peace of conscience, 1; (2) the hope and joy of eternal glorification, 2; (3) joy in tribulation, 3-5; (4) joy in God our Father and in Christ our Saviour, 11-21. On the whole it would seem that the argument centres on 'the hope of heaven' as the main point of the passage.

Many commentators prefer to call ch 5 a discussion of the certainty of the Christian hope of final salvation, because this particular aspect of the Christian hope of heaven is given by far the greatest space and prominence in 5-21. Others for the same reason go a step further and treat ch 5 as a section by itself and separate it from 6:1-8:39.

Plan. If the hope of heaven is taken as the main point, then the argument has three parts: (1) 1-4 the hope of heaven as the first fruit of salvation; (2) 5-11 the certainty of this hope proved from God's love for us as revealed in the redemption through Christ; (3) 12-21 a second proof for the certainty of this hope of heaven: Christ the anti-type of Adam.

c 1-4 A First Fruit of the Salvation revealed in the Gospel: the hope of final salvation = of eternal glory in heaven—Paul begins his praise and recommendation of the salvation which he preaches by dwelling on the triumphant hope of final salvation hereafter as the consequence of initial salvation here. Initial salvation is the same as justification = sanctification = the obtaining of sanctifying grace = reconciliation with God. Strictly speaking, the first fruit of salvation here enumerated by St Paul is 'peace with God', 1. But as this is only touched upon here, its full explanation can be left to other passages, e.g. 2 Cor 5:18-21; Eph 2:11-22; see also Rom 5:10 f.; 8:6; 15:33; 16:20; 1 Cor 14:33; Col 1:20; 3:15; 2 Thess 3:16; Lk 1:79; 2:14, 29, etc.

1. 'We have peace with God': So Cornely, Sickenger, Lietzmann, Boylan. The indicative can be defended on external and internal evidence. 2a. 'Through whom by faith we obtained also our introduction into this grace...': is a relative clause to be connected with 1. Its purpose is to remind us that our peace with God which is the first effect of salvation according to v 1 is no more our own doing than our 'introduction to the faith' (= to Christianity). Both are the work of Christ. It should be noticed that the sentence does not introduce d a new fruit of salvation. 2b. 'and [through whom] we also rejoice in the hope of the glory of God': unlike those without hope, Eph 2:12; 1 Thess 4:13, the justified can rejoice, looking forward to the glory to come. It is the hope which we usually call the second theological virtue. Its main, though not only, object is final salvation = everlasting happiness = eternal life = beatific vision. St Paul calls it 'glory of God'. Fuller descriptions of it can be derived from 3:23; 8:18; 1 Cor 2:9; 15:43; 2 Cor 4:17 f.; Phil 3:21; Col 3:4; 2 Tim 2:10. From the grammatical point of view 2b is the second part of the relative clause begun in 2a from which it cannot be separated without doing violence to the text; cf. KNT. But the unfortunate result of this grammatical connexion need not be denied. It is not in accordance with the rules of clear writing to introduce in a second relative clause the point which finally turns out to be the centre of the whole passage. 3-4 is a parenthesis like 2a. It forestalls the common objection that the Christian hope of heaven is a sign of weakness leading to inactivity and indifference here on earth. According to 3-4 the Christian hope of heaven has the opposite effect: it makes men strong in tribulation which is the time when this hope is being tested and tried, cf. Mt 5:4; Rom 8:37; 2 Cor 1:3-11; Jas 1:3 f. 3. 'And not only so': a difficult ellipsis. Probably = We do not rejoice in the hope of the future glory only, but we rejoice also in the present tribulations, knowing that these tribulations strengthen that hope. Boylan treats this gladness in tribulation as a third fruit of sanctification.

5-21 The Certainty of the Christian's Hope of Final Salvation in the Glory of Heaven—In this paragraph St Paul dwells on one characteristic of our hope of heaven, its certainty. This he bases on two foundations: (1) on God's love for us as shown in his Son's death for us, 5-11; (2) on a comparison between the effects of Adam's sin and Christ's redemption, 12-21. In both cases the argument takes a form which follows the first of Hillel's seven rules for the interpretation of Scripture, usually translated as the conclusion from the minor to the major = the conclusion from the less important to the more important; cf. 5:9, 10, 15; SB ad Rom 5:9 f. The certainty of such a conclusion must not be identified with that of a categorical syllogism in logic. Its value is rather like that of an emphatic assertion based on an objective similarity and a subjective intuition. Such an assertion has the authority of the speaker, and that is in the case of St Paul the authority of his inspiration. The originality of St Paul in both arguments can be seen from a comparison with the treatment of hope in the OT and in modern theology. The OT keeps repeating that he who puts his trust (hope) in God will not be put to shame (cf. Ps 21:6; 24:20; Is 28:16, etc.), and it is a general theologoumenon today, that the certainty of our hope rests on God's faithfulness to his promises. Such statements are so frequent that they have become commonplace. But how daring is their application by St Paul to the greatest problem of all, the reaching of heaven; cf. Prat I 237-49.

The doctrine of the Church on the question of individual certainty of final salvation was briefly stated by the Council of Trent, Dz 805, 825, 826. According to Catholic doctrine no one while on earth can be certain of his final salvation without a special divine revelation. In comparing this doctrine with Rom 5:5-21; 8:28-30 it should be remembered that the Council of Trent had to check exaggerations whilst St Paul had to encourage beginnings. All the same, Paul's teaching on the certainty of final salvation in 5-21 needs a corrective, and this corrective follows in ch 6 with its emphatic warnings against sin. This addition by the Apostle himself proves beyond any doubt that the certainty of final salvation stressed in ch 5 is not an unconditional certainty that follows irrevocably on baptism or conversion. Even in Rom there is a condition attached to it, and this condition according to ch 6 is that the Christian convert must live the life demanded by the Gospel.

5-11 God's Love for us as the First Proof for the Certainty of our Hope of Final Salvation—The 850g Christian's hope of eternal glory is no illusion. It is firmly based on God's love for men as revealed in the fact that his Son died for us though we were then still sinners, and therefore 'children of enmity or wrath', cf. 1 Jn 4:10. Starting from this as an acknowledged fact, Paul arrives at his conclusion—the certainty of the Christian hope of final salvation—as follows: If when still sinners (= at enmity with God) we received the grace of initial justification from God's love in view of Christ's death on the cross, how much more can we not now as his friends (= justified by responding in faith to his first love) expect to receive the grace of final salvation from his love in view of Christ's life in heaven? The whole passage is difficult, the main thought being obscured by too many details. It can be reduced to this: If God's love justified us on the day of our conversion though we then stood before him as sinners, how much more will not the same love save us on the day of the last judgement when we shall stand before him as saints = such as have been justified and redeemed by his Son.

h 5b is a stray thought as regards the main argument. Before enlarging on the objective evidence of God's love for us in Christ's death (6-8), the Apostle inserts in 5b a subjective proof to the same effect by appealing to the readers' personal experience and realization of that divine love in the voice and witness of the indwelling Holy Ghost. 6. 'For why . . .?': the interrogative sentence of Vg and DV is better read as a categorical statement in accordance with many Greek MSS, cf. Boylan. 'According to a time' = in due season, WV. This has been explained in two ways: (1) Christ died for us when we were not only sinners but also remained such for a time, i.e. during the time between Christ's death and the readers' conversion. (2) Christ offered himself for us at that time in history which had been appointed by the Father; cf. Rom 3:26; 2 Cor 6:2; Gal 4:4; Eph 1:10; 1 Tim 2:6; 6:15; Tit 1:3. The second is the more common interpretation, but the first is more in harmony with the context, 8; cf. Cornely. 11. 'And not only so': is an ellipsis, cf. 5:3; 8:23; 9:10; 2 Cor 8:19. It can be completed in different ways, cf. Boylan 81. The most probable completion would seem to read: we shall not only be saved on the day of the last judgement, but even now, at this present hour with all its afflictions, we glory in God through Jesus Christ, rejoicing in his love for us; cf. 5:3.

i 12-21 Adam understood as a Type of Christ, another proof for the certainty of the Christian hope of Final Salvation = Eternal Glory in Heaven—'As in Adam all die, so in Christ all shall be made to live', 1 Cor 15:22 WV, might well serve as a motto for this passage. Our physical connexion with Adam brings us sin and death with undeniable certainty; in a similar way and with a similar certainty our spiritual connexion with Christ brings us justification and final salvation. In other words, Adam's fall is the beginning and cause of our sin and death; Christ's redemption is the beginning and cause of our justification and final salvation in heaven. The comparison could also be arranged in this way: Adam → Sin → Death; Christ → Grace (= justification) → Eternal Life. For further details see Prat I 438 ff.; II 171-9.

j This parallel between Adam and Christ and the description of the consequence of Adam's fall as typical of the fruits of Christ's redemption is in biblical theology peculiar to St Paul. Before Rom he had already used it in 1 Cor 15:22, 45-49. But there as here he puts it before his readers without any proof whatever, taking it evidently for granted that they would follow and accept his argument. Thus the idea is not likely to have been entirely unknown to his contemporaries. For attempts to trace it in rabbinical theology see Prat II 171; SB III 477 f. (on 1 Cor 15:45). At all events, the whole argument of 12-21 stands or falls with the existence of this parallel between Adam and Christ. If Christ were not the anti-type of Adam in God's economy of salvation then Paul's second argument for the Christian confidence of reaching eternal glory in 12-21 would collapse.

What then is the proof value of this parallel between Adam and Christ? Reason alone, excluding the doctrine of inspiration from the argument, cannot prove that St Paul's typical interpretation of the story of Adam is necessary from the OT point of view. But once it is pointed out—and in this St Paul seems to be original—reason cannot deny that this parallel between Adam and Christ is full of meaning and beauty. Ultimately, however, our acceptance of the Apostle's argument as a true doctrine must be based on our belief in NT (Pauline) inspiration, cf. §§ 850e, 856d.

In most commentaries on 12-21 much space is given k to the discussion of the evidence for the Christian doctrine of original sin in this passage. That the idea of original sin is presupposed in the argument of 12-21 can safely be taken as certain; but it is only one of several side issues. This probably accounts for much of the obscurity of the passage in this particular respect, as the controversies on original sin constantly point out, cf. note on 5:12d; Lagrange's special note at the end of ch 5; Prat I 213-19, 440 ff., II 57-9.

To translate guilt (guilty) instead of sin in 12-21, seven times, is a special feature of KNT. This translation, though possible according to the dictionary (cf. Liddell and Scott I 77b) would seem a precarious deviation from the traditional terminology touching original sin in this paragraph.

Plan. The passage can be sub-divided as follows: (1) 12-14 the consequences of Adam's fall; (2) 15-17 the benefits of Christ's redemption contrasted with Adam's fall; (3) 18-21 a recapitulation. For a detailed analysis see Prat I 438 f.

12-14 is an anacoluthon. The thought is continued l in 18b and 21b: 'As sin and death through Adam, so redemption and eternal life through Christ', cf. 1 Cor 15:22. 12d. ἐφ' ᾧ πάντες ἥμαρτον: is ambiguous and has been differently translated. (1) = in quo omnes peccaverunt, Vg; = in whom all have sinned, DV. Death spread to all men through Adam, 'in whom all sinned'. This is the customary explanation of the Latin text. It clearly understands the clause of original sin = the inherited consequences of Adam's sin in the individual soul. In this sense the Latin text is quoted in the decree of the Council of Trent on original sin, sess. V, Dz 789. (2) Another translation is: 'because all sinned'. This is the common rendering of the Greek text, cf. note in WV. From Adam's fall death spread to all men, because ever since all men sinned or had sin. Taken by itself this translation could no doubt be understood of every one's personal sin and not of his original sin. It would mean that universal sin (cf. 1:18-3:20) was followed by universal death. The main argument against this last explanation is the fact that it does not harmonize with the context. If all die because of their personal sin then the parallelism between Adam and Christ, on which the argument of the whole passage rests, is destroyed. The parallel: Adam-sin-death; Christ-justness-eternal life is interrupted in its middle part 'sin and justness' which become the work of the individual man. According to St Paul's argument, however, justness is clearly the achievement not of the individual but of Christ. Moreover, in the two sentences, 13-14, which follow upon 12, Paul introduces the case of millions whose death he evidently does not understand as the punishment of their personal sins. It is the case of all those who died before Moses when there was as yet no statutory divine law threatening sin with death. Nevertheless they died, sharing Adam's death; but then they must have had a share in Adam's sin also, if the principle that through one man's sin death came into the world, 12, is to be true. A simpler illustration to the same effect is the case of those who die before they are capable of sin. The practical result of the whole discussion would seem to be, that those who insist in 12 on the translation 'because all sinned', add from the context: 'because all sinned in Adam' = had original sin. The Latin text obtained the same m

850m result less circuitously. 19. 'Many shall be made just': MSS as well as commentators have tried to turn this future into a past tense. To do so is necessary if the whole passage, 12-21, is understood of Christ's justification as it works itself out in the Christian life on earth, i.e. before the Last Judgement. But if the whole passage (as in this commentary) is understood as referring to the Christian's final justification in the Last Judgement, then the future tense causes no difficulty. The adjective 'just' has a meaning wide enough to be used also for the state of 'final' salvation.

851a VI 1-23 A Second Effect of Justification: the Christian's break with sin—There is no shortage of striking headings for this important chapter; e.g. the Christian sanctification of life; the new life in Christ; the Christian's practical holiness; the Christian and sin; the Christian's emancipation from the dominion of sin; no place for sin in the life of the justified; Christian justification implies an irretrievable rejection of sin and the beginning of a new and holy life.

Subject. Whatever heading may be preferred Paul here passes on to another immediate and major effect of Christian justification: the complete break with sin in and after obtaining justification = sanctifying grace. With us today, it is rather the forgiveness of sins that comes to our mind when the effects of justifying grace as regards sin are to be enumerated. But the forgiveness of sins is not St Paul's subject here. All the weight of the passage is concentrated on the Christian's break with sin. The ensuing victory over sin is discussed in 8:1-8.

b Object. The connexion of ch 6 with the previous ch and the precise object of the Apostle in discussing this subject here are disputed. Was his intention to continue the enumeration of the effects of Christian justification begun in 5:1? Or was his purpose to refute lax conclusions from his doctrine, esp. from 5:20 f.? Or did he intend to insert here, as the spirit moved him, a pressing exhortation to a holy life? Each of these possibilities has been and can be defended. Those who regard Rom 6 as the description of another effect of justifying grace can quote in their favour, besides simplicity, a long exegetical tradition. It is an explanation which gives the chapter a place in the whole epistle that can easily be remembered. The second opinion which treats 1-23 as a refutation of morally lax (= antinomian) conclusions falsely drawn from St Paul's teaching is supported by the two introductory questions, 1, 15, and by the fact that such false conclusions have actually been drawn from his doctrine. He himself refers to them in 3:7 f. (cf. Gal 5:13), and the Nicolaitans are accused of similar ideas in Apoc 2:15; cf. the Spirituals in post-reformation days. The third opinion treating 1-23 as an exhortation can appeal to the admonitory and exhortatory tone which runs through the whole chapter, cf. 2, 3, 11, 12-14, 19. The obvious objection is that Paul clearly begins his exhortations proper with ch 12. It is difficult to choose between these possibilities. Perhaps the true solution lies in the combination of all three. The context demands doctrine; the subject matter could hardly be expressed without exhortation; and to think here of a kind of self-defence on the part of St Paul is taking account of what we know from the history of this doctrine.

c Characteristic. St Paul's way of arguing in 1-23 has often been criticized as difficult and complicated, as concealing the real issue under too many words and metaphors and as lacking clear progress of thought. That from a literary point of view these objections are not without some foundation need not be denied. But it must also be remembered that one cause of the difficulty at all events lies in the subject, the problem of sin in life. For it is self-evident that the only straightforward solution of the problem of sin in life is sinlessness. But to be henceforward without sin is not among the effects of Christian justification. Sanctifying grace is a gift but also a task. The task it sets is the sanctification of daily life; and with regard to this task Christians can fail, and do fail. That is so today and that was so 851e in the days of St Paul. But he believed, as we believe, that the fact of justifying grace makes a great difference to the power of sin. To describe, illustrate, and engrave upon the memory of everyone this new Christian counter-power to sin was the Apostle's first object. In judging his style and diction we should not forget that he lacked all the refinements of later theological terminology. But leaving terminology and style alone, can we today really quote any stronger counter-forces to sin than the two here singled out by St Paul: the mystical union with Christ, 1-11; and the hope of eternal reward after a life in the service of Christian holiness, 15-23?

Plan. To prove his thesis that Christian justification brings liberation from the dominion of sin St Paul employs two arguments: (1) 1-14 the Christian's break with sin in the sacrament of baptism; (2) 15-23 the Christian's break with sin because of the punishment of sin on the one hand, and because of the reward of holiness according to Christian doctrine on the other.

1-14 The Christian's Break with Sin in the Sacrament of Baptism—That in baptism every Christian renounces the devil and all his works is a custom handed down from earliest times. Nevertheless Paul, arguing in 1-14 that there is no more room for sin in a Christian life, does not appeal to these baptismal vows of his readers. He goes much deeper and bases his argument on the (mystical) union with Christ which is the primary purpose of baptism. In baptism the Christian is created, as it were, by being united with Christ. Henceforward, therefore, the Christian's attitude to sin must be the same as that of Christ himself. He must die to sin, as Christ died to sin; he must be holy as Christ was holy.

This is the substance of the argument in 1-11 and St Paul could well have left it at that. But to drive his point home, he proceeds to demonstrate or prove the existence and the nature of this union with Christ from the two baptismal ceremonies of immersion and emersion. According to St Paul's own exposition the former of these two ceremonies represents the Christian's death and burial with Christ, the latter his resurrection with Christ. When in baptism the catechumen is immersed beneath the water, he is thereby, as it were, buried with Christ, sharing his being dead to sin; and when the Christian emerges from beneath the water he thereby rises, as it were, with Christ from the tomb, sharing the new life of the Risen Lord. The theological principles underlying this way of arguing in 1-14 are three: (1) the symbolical meaning of the ceremonies used at baptism; (2) the sacramental efficacy of baptism; (3) a real (mystical) union, incorporation, identification of the Christian with Christ as an effect of the sacrament of baptism.

What makes the argument somewhat complicated is the fact that two lines of thought are constantly crossing each other: (1) baptism as dying to sin; (2) baptism as the beginning of a new life. In a systematic treatment the two aspects would be kept separate and discussed as the negative and the positive effects of baptism. The real difficulty of St Paul's argument, however, is the character of the new life instilled in baptism. For in reality this new life remains far behind its ideal, the life of the risen Christ. With this difficulty St Paul wrestles in 5-9. On the one hand he insists on the fact of this new life being instilled in baptism; otherwise his whole argument would fall to the ground. On the other hand, he changes from the past to the future tense in describing the transformation worked in the Christian by the infusion of this new life in baptism: 'we shall also be in likeness of his resurrection', 5; 'we shall also live with him', 8. Contrast Col 2:12; Eph 2:5. The result is that this new life is represented as a life which begins in baptism, 4, but is to be completed in the future, reaching its fullness after death in heaven, 5, 8. This way of presenting the case which is undoubtedly the true one may be compared with 'prophetical compenetration'. But a satisfactory 851e grammatical explanation of these future tenses does not seem to exist.

Plan. There are two clearly marked paragraphs: 1-11 doctrine; 12-14 corresponding exhortation.

f 1. Paul introduces his new point, the banishment of sin from Christian life, with an objection suggested by what he had said on sin and grace in the previous sentence 5:20 f., or by the false conclusions which he knew had been drawn from his doctrine; cf. 3:8; Gal 5:13; 1 Pet 2:16; Jas passim. If in the past man's sin provided the opportunity for God's grace, why not continue in sin to provide further opportunities for God's grace? The same objection is repeated in 15. 2. 'We who have died to sin': is a metaphor for complete separation from sin. In a more detailed explanation account must be taken of the application of the same metaphor to our Lord in 10. In either case there is agreement that 'to sin' is dative and not ablative. The dative is then explained as a 'dative of reference', so that one could paraphrase Paul's thought as follows: as far as sin is concerned we have died; we have done with sin, we have finished with sin. The comparison with death in this metaphor would seem to lie in the complete change and absolute separation from all that was before.

g 3a. 'We who were baptized into Christ Jesus': introduces the sacrament of baptism into the discussion, and thereby the Apostle's first proof for his thesis that there is no longer any room for sin in the life of a Christian, 2. But how far can baptism be said to have this effect? This is briefly explained in 4-5 and then further developed in 6-10. As these explanations show, Paul speaking of baptism into Christ Jesus was here thinking not of the formula of baptism—whether it should be Christological or Trinitarian—but of baptism as 'immersion' into Christ. To combine the idea of baptism and immersion is strange to us, but was natural to Paul and his readers for two reasons: (a) the Greek verb βαπτίζω means to immerse into, to dip into, to plunge into; (b) in the early Christians this idea was kept alive through the ceremony of immersion in their baptism. 3b. 'We were baptized into his death': if baptism is immersion into Christ, 3a, it must include immersion into his death as much as into any other work of his redemption, e.g. resurrection, ascension, etc. Why then does St Paul here single out the death of Christ; and which is the particular aspect of Christ's death that he has in mind? The answer is given in 10: Christ's death was his final settlement with all that concerned sin, and baptism is meant to be the same for every Christian.

h 4. 'As Christ was raised from the dead . . . so we also should walk in newness of life': so far Paul has insisted on the negative aspect of our 'dying to sin' symbolically represented in the baptismal ceremony of immersion reminiscent of Christ's death and burial; now he turns from the negative to the positive aspect, the beginning of a new life, symbolically represented by the baptismal ceremony of emersion, which is reminiscent of Christ's rising from the tomb. The new Christian life, therefore, should be a life concerned only with heavenly things, like the life of the Risen Christ; cf. Col 3:2; Phil 3:20. 10. 'The death he died he died to sin once and for all': that Christ died to atone for men's sins is the general Christian doctrine of the Cross. But this aspect of the death of Christ does not fit into St Paul's argument here, where Christ's dying to sin is quoted as the model of our dying to sin. If the meaning of the metaphor 'dying to sin' from v 3 is to be kept then Paul must here be thinking of the Cross as Christ's final settlement with regard to all that concerned sin in his life. On Calvary sin's claims were settled once and for all; henceforward God's claim alone was of practical importance to him. Death to sin on Calvary is followed by a life for God alone beginning with the resurrection. The application to the Christian life is easy. As Christ settled his account with sin on Calvary so does the Christian in baptism, 11. That Christ's account with sin was of a very different character from ours does not affect the argument. 12-14. Paul passes 851h from doctrine to exhortation.

15-23 The Christian's Break with Sin once more— i The Apostle returns to the question of sin in the life of a Christian raised in 6:1 and shows once more that there is no longer any room for sin in a Christian life. The subject is no doubt important enough to bear such a repetition. The content of the passage can be summarized as follows: the Christian is bound to avoid sin and pursue holiness in his life in view of their respective wages according to Christian doctrine, death being the wages in the service of sin, eternal life the wages in the service of holiness. The connexion with 1-14 is disputed. Some would connect it with ch 7 which discusses the liberation from the Mosaic Law and regard it as a third effect of Christian justification; cf. SH. The wording of the introductory question in 15 can rightly be quoted in favour of this view, but the trend of the argument speaks against it.

16-22 develops the parable that man is a servant j = slave either under the rule of sin or under the rule of holiness. 16b. 'Servants . . . of obedience unto justness': what one expects in the antithesis is: servants of justness (or of the Gospel, or of God) unto life. This conclusion actually follows in 22 f. From the strictly logical point of view therefore 16b-21 forms a digression. Its object is to impress the necessity of obedience = of being a servant or slave. The simplest proof is the vocabulary: obedience, 16 (twice); to obey, 16, 17; slave, 16, 17, 20; to be enslaved, 18, 22. It is, however, possible that in 16b obedience is but a synonym for Gospel, cf. 1:5; 15:18. 17. 'The form of teaching unto which you were handed over': the normal phrase would be, the form of teaching that has been delivered unto you. In any case it is clear that the phrase presupposes a set of dogmas in early Christianity. On the question what these principal doctrines were, cf. Prat II 28-35. 19. 'I speak in human terms' WV = I express myself in terms which you are certain to understand, cf. Gal 3:15; Rom 3:5. Paul apologizes for using the obedience of a servant or slave to illustrate the Christian's obedience in the service of God. For in other respects to be a Christian is to have found true freedom, cf. Gal 5:1, 13; 1 Cor 9:19; 2 Cor 3:17; Rom 8:15, 21. But see also Mt 11:29; 1 Cor 7:22; Rom 1:1; 7:25; 14:18; Eph 6:6; Phil 1:1; 2:22.

20-22. The life of 'the servant of sin' (= slave to sin) k and of 'the servant of God' (= slave of God) are compared once more. 20b. 'You were free as regards justness', WV = you were without it. 21. The inter-punctuation is uncertain. Many commentators translate: 'What fruit did you reap then? Such as you are now ashamed of . . . death'. 22. 'Now . . . you have your fruit unto sanctification': a difficult phrase because the common meaning of ἀγιασμός = sanctification, does not fit easily into the context. If this meaning is kept, the Apostle's thought is: now you have your fruit in such things (virtues, cf. Gal 5:22 f.) as lead immediately to sanctification and thereby finally to life everlasting. But does the structure of the sentence bear such an interpretation? Many commentators prefer to translate: 'now you have your fruit in justness'. And this is what one expects in the context: now you have your fruit (= reward) in the possession of justness (= sanctifying grace) for the present, and in the hope of eternal life for the future. 23. 'The wages of sin is death, the gift of God eternal life': sums up the whole passage 15-23. Both the death and the life of which Paul speaks are eternal, cf. Mt 10:28; Gal 6:7 f.; 2 Cor 5:10; Apoc 20:14; but it would be a mistake to think that therefore they do not begin till after the grave, cf. 6:4; Col 2:12; Eph 2:5; Jn 17:3. VII 1-25 A Third Effect of the Justification revealed 852a in the Gospel: Christ the new principle of life in the place of the Old Law; or the Christian's New Law—There is no conversion without obvious changes in essential religious convictions, and there can be no such changes without the need of defending them against the charges from former friends of disloyalty or apostasy.

852a These are the two general truths which form the background of this chapter. The Christians addressed in Rom were baptized converts and the change defended in ch 7 is their new attitude to the Old Law. Our Lord touches on the same problem in Mt 5:17-48: . . . it was said . . . but I tell you. Paul takes it up both in Gal and Rom 7. For us today the main points in such a discussion are the fact that the Christian convert was taught a new attitude to the Old Law, and the content of that teaching. In this respect, however, Rom 7 is no great help, because St Paul takes the new Christian attitude to the Old Law for granted, and all his labour goes into defending it, just as the fact and doctrine of baptism is taken for granted in ch 6; cf. the similar method in modern apologetic treatises.

b Natural as this apologetic method no doubt was in the days of St Paul, it makes his argument in Rom 7 difficult for us unless we begin, as his first readers did, with a real and true conception of that new Christian attitude to the Old Law according to the mind of the Apostle. This new Christian attitude to the Old Law, therefore, may here be briefly stated. For the Christian the Old Law is no longer the first ruling principle in life. This first place of honour and importance the Old Law must yield to Jesus Christ who for our salvation (which is to be obtained in union with him) descended to earth and after his death and resurrection ascended again to heaven. This doctrine is the Christian's first ruling principle in life, and since two cannot be first the Old Law must give way. In other words the centre of Christianity is Christ, not Law; Christianity is Christo-centric not nomo-centric.

c The point in this doctrine which needs explanation is the term 'Old Law'. We are accustomed to make clear distinctions between the natural moral law and the Mosaic Law; and again between the moral and the ceremonial law of the OT. Which of these laws then was St Paul thinking of when writing Rom 7? This question draws attention to a serious difficulty in the explanation of this ch. The ultimate cause of the difficulty is the ambiguity of the term 'law' used by St Paul. Taken by itself 'law' can have any of the four meanings quoted above, and commentators do not agree in their choice. At first it seems clear from ch 7 that the Apostle was thinking of the Mosaic Law. But if the whole epistle, addressed to Gentile as well as Jewish Christians, is taken into account, it appears that it would be oversimplifying his teaching in ch 7 if we limited it to the discussion of the abrogation of the ceremonial law of the OT. For what reason is there to think that Paul did not apply the principles of Rom 7 also to the natural moral law of the Gentiles, which if codified would have all the advantages and the disadvantages of the Mosaic Law pointed out in this chapter: the law is good but man does not keep the law. In view of the whole epistle therefore it seems better to accept the wider interpretation of 'law' in Rom 7, i.e. the Apostle was thinking first of the Mosaic Law = the Torah, but as representative of and including all other law. The sum total of the argument, then, is that for Paul the Christian's union with Christ superseded all that philosophy or theology had ever taught; he excepted nothing, not even the Torah of Moses, much less any other law.

Plan. Ch 7 falls into three paragraphs: (1) 1-16 for the Christian the law is no longer the first guide in life; (2) 7-12 the refutation of a first misinterpretation; (3) 13-25 the refutation of a second misinterpretation.
d 1-6 For a Christian the Old Law is no longer the First Rule in Life, or 'the transition from Law to Grace', SH—It is no superficial objection against Christianity from the OT or rabbinical point of view to argue that speaking of a New Testament Law is as precarious as speaking of a new natural law. What was 'divine law for ever' in the days of God's revelation at Sinai must remain so till the end of this world. And yet it is clear Christian doctrine that there is a New Testament = a New Law. 'Nova sunt omnia'. How is this possible, and what are the practical consequences?

Plan. Paul bases his argument on the legal principle that the binding force of law ceases for the individual at death, 1. This principle is first illustrated by an example from marriage law, 2-3; and then applied to the Christian attitude to the Old Law in 4-6.

1. No one will question St Paul's premise that death makes law irrelevant. It is a commonplace truth. What gives colour to its quotation here is the fact that it was used in rabbinical theology to denote a unique privilege of the Mosaic Law. According to rabbinical theology only death could set the Israelite free from the laws of the Torah. With regard to the Torah there was neither dispensation nor abrogation; cf. Targum to Ps 88:6; Weiststein and SB on Rom 7:3. Paul keeps the principle but turns it against the Torah by introducing the Christian's sacramental death in baptism. 2-3 make a digression. Instead of at once applying the principle of 1 to the point under discussion, the Christian's liberation from the Old Law, the Apostle goes out of his way, first to illustrate his principle with an example taken from the law of marriage. A married woman bound to her husband under the penalty of adultery becomes free to re-marry after his death. Here then is a clear case in which death cancels law, cf. Ruth 1:9. As long as 2-3 are taken as no more than an illustration of this principle generally stated in 1, the argument is simple and clear. The difficulties begin when these two verses are understood further as an allegory applied in 4-6. To quote 2-3 as direct NT evidence for the doctrine of the indissolubility of marriage (because of the omission of any reference to the possibility of divorce according to Deut 24:1 ff.) is perhaps basing too much on an argumentum ex silentio; cf. Lagrange.

4-6 contain (a) the application of the principle of 1; (b) the application of the illustration of that principle in 2-3; (c) the positive description of the New Law = the new dispensation.

(a) The application of 1 in 4-6 is clear. The Christian having died with Christ in baptism, 6:1-11, has in this mystical death the charter which sets him free not only from the dominion of sin but also from every allegiance to the Old Law. The result is that he can enter into the new union with Christ without feeling guilty of any disloyalty or apostasy since 'death' frees man from old obligations. The point which deserves special attention in this argument is the reality of the union with Christ through baptism presupposed in this application. How deeply conscious must the early Christians have been of their union with Christ to accept such an argument! To a student of rabbinical theology it cannot have meant anything. To him it must have been sheer hair-splitting folly to dispose of the Torah by a ceremonial-sacramental death in baptism. And so it must still appear today to any system of thought which does not accept the Catholic doctrine of the sacraments. The sacramental effects of baptism behind the argument of 4-6, therefore, cannot be stressed too much.

(b) The explanation of 4-6 becomes much more complicated as soon as these verses are understood as an application not only of the principle of v 1 but also of the illustration of that principle in 2-3. The main difficulty is that the example, 2-3, speaks of two persons where the application, 4-6, has only one. In the example it is the husband who dies whilst the law ceases for the widow so that she is free to re-marry. According to the application, 4-6, however, it ought to be one and the same person, for it is one and the same individual who dies in baptism and is then free to enter into a new union with Christ. Now to make two persons = one, or one = two, is evidently not in accordance with the rules of grammar or logic; and the history of the exegesis of the passage shows that this difficulty has never been convincingly solved, cf. Cornely 349 f. A summary of present-day exegesis would seem to be: (1) To acknowledge that 7:2-3 is both an illustration of v 1 and at the same time a parable or allegory applied in 4-6. (2) To admit a b (c) The description of the New Dispensation = the New Law in 4-6 must be the third point in every explanation of this passage. And it is the most important point for us, since for us the liberation from the Old Law (esp. in the sense of the Mosaic Law) is no longer a practical question. But even in the days of St Paul nothing could possibly be gained merely by an abrogation of the OT Law. All depended, then as now, on what was to take its place, or what use was to be made of the freedom obtained. The answer in 4-6 is very clear. The law is not so much abrogated as superseded. The freedom obtained in baptism is intended to make room for a new guide or principle or master, viz. union with Christ risen from the dead; cf. Gal 2:19.

852g certain amount of inconsistency in detail between parable and application which no one explanation can dispel. (3) To limit the interpretation of the parable to what is essential in St Paul's own application, i.e. (a) death sets aside law, and so does the death undergone in the sacrament of baptism, (8) once this death has taken place the Christian is free to transfer his loyalty to Christ in the same way as a widow is free to marry again.

i 4. This union with Christ as the new guiding principle of life instead of the Old Law is first described as marriage with Christ, risen from the dead, cf. 2 Cor 11:2; Eph 5:25, 29. The metaphor is in agreement with the illustration used in 2-3. But it may be true that it should not be pressed. Cornely denies that it is continued in 4c and 6. In any case, what St Paul stresses most, is that it must be a union which bears fruit, and thereby proves its superiority over the former state. 'By their fruits you shall know them', Mt 7:16f.; Gal 5:22. 5. The fruits of the pre-Christian time are then reviewed by way of contrast. That was the time of the 'old man' = the man in sin, or in the flesh, the man under the law, the man ruled by passions stirred up only to greater heat when encountering the law in the way, cf. 6:6; 7:7-12; 8:13; Gal 2:19; 5:17; Eph 2:3; 4:22; Col 2:11; 3:9. 6. But all this has passed in the death with Christ; and in the mystical-sacramental union with him, risen from the dead, there is the 'new man' = the inward man, the man in the Spirit, the man 'born again out of water and the Holy Ghost'. In him all is new, and his works must bear it out; cf. 7:22; Eph 4:24; Col 3:10; Gal 5:25.

852a 7-12 The Refutation of a First Misinterpretation—The new Christian attitude to the Old Law must not be misinterpreted as if the Old Law were identified with sin. The doctrine that the Christian is no longer under the Old Law, 1-6, has always been liable to misunderstandings. Already in the days of St Paul there were misinterpretations which he had to correct. Here he takes up one of them. Instead of quoting the actual misinterpretation, however, he puts it in the form of a question: 'is then the law sin?'. To explain the problem in Paul's mind the following paraphrase may be helpful: If on the one hand it is so important for a Christian to get away from the Old Law as is suggested in 1-6 and if, on the other hand, the Law is so closely connected with sin as is maintained in 5:13, 20; 7:5, then the logical conclusion would seem to be that the law itself is sin. This conclusion is evidently absurd. But it was drawn by St Paul's opponents to discredit the whole of his doctrine of justification. The objection does not go very deep, and St Paul's refutation is easy to follow. If the law applauded sin it would indeed have to be identified with sin. But, in fact, as everybody knows the law clearly forbids sin, so that there can be no disputing that the law is good and holy, 12. But at the same time, there can be no question of withdrawing the former statement, 5:13, 20; 7:5, that there is a close connexion between sin and law. True as it is that the law forbids and exposes sin, it is equally true that in doing so the law at the same time stimulates man's attraction (concupiscence) to sin. This may be strange but the fact cannot be denied.

The proof is to be found in the experience of temptation, 852a 7-11.

b For the purpose of tracing some of the details of Paul's analysis of temptation in 7-11 it may be helpful to treat his description as a scene with four actors: (1) the Law 7, 8, 12 = the Commandment 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. (2) Sin 7, 8, 11. (3) Ego or Self 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. (4) Concupiscence 7, 8. The central figure is Self whose service both Law and Sin are equally anxious to win. The discussion is opened by Law = Commandment, exposing sin as sin so that Self is left in no doubt as to the character of the next speaker, Sin. Nevertheless, the Law loses its suit, thwarted by Concupiscence in man. The result is that Self enters the service of Sin, which means he loses the life promised by the Law, Ez 18:5-9, to earn the wages of Sin, which are misery and death, Rom 6:23; Eccles 2:11. The main questions of theological interest in this paragraph are: (1) Who is the Ego or Self? (2) What law is St Paul referring to? (3) What does he mean by Sin? (4) What is meant by Concupiscence?

c (1) Who is the Ego or Self? It is characteristic of this and the following paragraph, 13-25, that St Paul argues in the first person. The natural conclusion is that he relates his own experience. On the other hand, to argue from a purely individual experience is out of place in such a general discussion as is developed in Rom. This forces upon us the further conclusion that Paul regarded his own experience in this case as typical. And since he speaks in the past, obviously referring to the time before baptism, it can be further described as typical of the pre-Christian time. Then the question arises whether it is to be considered as a typical experience of Israelites and Gentiles alike or only of the former. The answers differ. All who limit the theme of Rom 7 to a discussion on the Mosaic Law must limit the typical value of Paul's experience accordingly because it is the basis of the whole argument. On the other hand, Rom is addressed to a Christian community consisting of former Israelites as well as of former Gentiles (cf. 1:18-3, 20) and there is no evidence that in our chapter Paul is speaking to the former Israelites only. In view of the addressees, therefore, it seems more natural to think that he looked upon his own experience in the matter as generally typical of the time before becoming a Christian without distinguishing between former Israelites and Gentiles.

d (2) The law of which St Paul speaks here has been identified with the natural moral law, the Mosaic Law, and both together. The last is the most satisfactory answer. That he foremost had the Mosaic Law in mind follows from the fact that he speaks in the first person. At the same time he must have included the natural moral law because of the former Gentiles among his readers. The simplest solution therefore is to take the law here as the Mosaic Law but as typical of the natural moral law in the same sense as the first person in this description is meant to be typical of man in general, Israelite and Gentile alike. This wider interpretation of 'law' is not contradicted by the commandment 'Thou shalt not covet', 7. No doubt this is a quotation from the Decalogue. But the quotation is so free (cf. Ex 20:17; Deut 5:21) that it fits the natural moral law as well. Nor can it be urged against this explanation that it entails the abrogation of the natural law which is clearly against Christian doctrine. The point of the whole chapter is not the abrogation of the law, but 'who is to be given first place', Christ or—as it has been heretofore—the law?

e (3) The sin which takes the leading part in this section is not a specified sin against such or such a commandment, but sin in general or sin personified. At the same time it is sin resident in the speaker, 9, 18; and that, before it is shown up as such by the law. 'When the commandment came sin re-vived' ἀνεζησεν, 9. All this combines to describe it as 'original sin personified' resident in the speaker, i.e. in St Paul as in everybody else. If so, it must be remembered that Paul is analysing the pre-Christian state of the soul and f (4) As to the concupiscence of 7, 8 Paul is evidently using the term ἐπιθυμία not in its widest sense of desire in general, but of evil desires or inclinations towards the forbidden. Moreover, he seems to be thinking of concupiscence at that state in which it becomes or already has become sinful. 'I did not recognize covetousness (scil. as such, i.e. as forbidden and sinful covetousness) if the law did not say: 'Thou shalt not covet', 7. Our moral theology calls this concupiscentia consequens = the evil desire approved of and upheld by the will against the law, cf. A. Lehmkühl, Theol. Moralis I (1898) 25; M. Prümmer, Manuale Theol. Mor. I (1923) 53.

853e that we have here the fact of original sin rather than a definition. To find an unassailable definition of original sin was left to later centuries.

g 13-25 The Refutation of a Second Misinterpretation—The new Christian attitude to the Old Law must not be misinterpreted as blaming the law for the consequence of its transgressions = death. According to 7-12 there would be no death without sin, and no sin without law. The logical conclusion would seem to be, that according to such doctrine it is after all the law which causes all the trouble, including death. The purpose of this conclusion is again (as in 7) to lead the Apostle's doctrine to absurdity. This second objection does not go any deeper than the first in 7. Paul's reply in 13-25 is substantially the same as in 7-12. The law is good, 14-16; the villain of the piece is sin which frustrates the good intentions of the law, 13, 23. The proof is again taken from the experience of temptation. The description of temptation in 13-23, however, is much more detailed than that in 7-12. In this more detailed analysis of temptation lies the importance of the passage.

h For a closer study of St Paul's analysis of temptation in 13-25 it may again be helpful to treat it as a scene with four speakers: (1) Sin 13, 14, 17, 20 = the other law in 23 = the law of sin in 23, 25. (2) The carnal Self 14, sold under sin 14 = the flesh 18, 25 = the body 24. (3) The Law 13, 14, 16 = the law of God 22, 25 = the law of my mind 23. (4) The better Self 15, 19, 21 = the inner man 22 = the mind 25. The conflict takes place between 1 and 2 on the one hand and 3 and 4 on the other, with the result that 3 and 4 are defeated. This result is deplorable: first because it means the death of the better Self = the inner man who has all our sympathy; and secondly because it establishes the rule and sovereignty of Sin and its satellite, the carnal Self. Thus the analysis of temptation and sin necessarily leads to the vital question: whence is man to expect help and deliverance from this unhappy state? Paul answers: not through the Law but 'through Christ, our Lord', 24 f. This is the point he wants to drive home, and the practical conclusion to which the whole discussion is meant to lead.

The peculiar and most noteworthy features of St Paul's analysis of temptation in 13-25 can be studied under the following four questions: (1) What is the origin of the idea of 'the divided Self' (= the carnal Self versus the better Self) which is the most striking addition to 7-12 in 13-25? (2) Is Paul here speaking of the time before or after his conversion? (3) Is his description of the combat between Sin and Law = between the carnal Self and the better Self, historically true? (4) Is not his picture of man's inability to resist Sin in 13-25 so gloomy that it almost appears as if man were possessed by Sin, so that he is no longer responsible for his actions?

i (1) 'The divided Self' can be described as the carnal Self, always on the side of Sin, on the one hand; and the better Self, the inward man, well meaning but weak and overruled by the carnal Self, on the other. 'For the good which I will, I do not; but the evil which I will not, that I do' 19; and 'I am delighted with the law of God according to the inward man: but I see another law in my members, fighting against the law of my mind . . .', 23. What suggested this picture to St Paul we do not know. There are rabbinical as well as Greek and Latin parallels; cf. SB III 238-40; IV 1, 466-83 excursus on yēser hārā'; Wetstein ad 7:15. On the other hand literary dependence on the part of St Paul on any of these sources cannot be proved, and the experience seems too general to call for such an explanation. Moreover in this context the divided Self might be but a development of the ἐπιθυμία, concupiscence in 7, 8, to which St Paul strangely does not refer again in 13-15 under that name.

(2) Modern commentators agree that both context and contents point decisively to the time before conversion. It is the characteristic experience of the soul before conversion to the Christian faith to be 'sold under sin', 14, and to be unable to carry out its higher aspirations, 15, 18, 23, 25b. To regard this experience as remaining after conversion is against the whole line of the argument, cf. 6:6, 9, 12-14, 17, 22; 7:6; 8; and also against all the moral exhortations in St Paul's epistle. Nor is it necessary to understand the picture as a reflexion of the Apostle's own state of soul when writing because he uses the present tense. There is no reason against taking this as an historic or graphic present to denote what is past, so that there is no real change of tense between 7-12 and 13-25. However, the Latin commentators of earlier centuries did commonly refer 13-25 to the time after conversion and baptism. This was due to the influence of St Augustine who used this passage in the Pelagian controversies as an illustration and proof-text for the Christian struggle towards perfection. Details in Cornely 373-6.

(3) Was the power of sin really so overwhelming and was the law really so unable to make men carry out its commandments before Christian faith and grace came to their help? To begin with, history can rightly object that the natural moral law as well as the Mosaic Law, the Roman law as well as the law of any other state have prevented millions of sins and crimes long before Christianity and that they still do so today. And as regards the Mosaic Law in particular it is a well-known fact, that the Bible is full of praise for it (cf. Pss 18; 118) and that the Pharisees have never been worried very much about the failures of the Law. Against these objections St Paul can be defended by pointing to the other millions of sins which all those laws taken together did not prevent, cf. 1:18-3:20. Nor does St Paul's description stand alone. There is confirmatory evidence from Israelites as well as Gentiles. The Israelites read pictures just as dark in the Prophets and the Pss; cf. Is 1:2 f.; Jer 17, 1, etc.; Pss 13 = 52; 50; 94, 106, etc.; cf. further the rabbinical sayings on the yēser hārā', the evil impulse, SB III 238-40; IV 1, 466-83; Lietzmann, 75 ff. The confirmatory evidence from Greek and Latin literature, too, is plentiful, e.g. Ovid, Metamorph. VII 19 ff.; Epictetus, Enchiridion II 26, 4; see Wetstein ad 7:15. Finally it must be remembered that St Paul would necessarily view life under the law from the glorious height of his newly gained Christian ideals and that as an outstanding saint. This, too, will help in comparing his view of the weakness of human nature with the more optimistic pagan view.

(4) There is no denying that the picture of man's weakness in 13-25 is dark. But St Paul's object in using such dark colours was to show the insufficiency of the law. He wanted to show that the law had proved a failure in the real issue of life which is not merely to forbid sin, but to prevent and overcome sin. And in this respect he argues, sin has ruled up to now in spite of the law; and all he expects from his readers is to admit this failure of the law as an historical fact. Bent on scoring this point Paul could and did abstract from the question of free will. The failure of the law to overcome sin is either admitted or not. Man's responsibility as the result of his free will has its place in other discussions. And if we want to find the Apostle's ideas on free will and man's full responsibility for sins committed against the law we must consult 8531 those other passages, e.g. 1:18, 20, 21; 2:1, 9. There is plenty of evidence that St Paul did hold the sinner responsible for his sins. For further details on these four points see larger commentaries.

854a VIII 1-39 More Effects of Justification = Sanctifying Grace, or the indwelling of the Holy Spirit—Other common headings of this chapter are: the Christian life; the life of grace; the life in the spirit of Christ; union with Christ; the principles, blessings and fullness of the Christian, the spiritual, the supernatural life. Of these titles 'the spiritual life' is probably the most common today. But when used to summarize the contents of ch 8, it must not be limited to special groups or vocations in the Church. Paul speaks of the spiritual life of every Christian. In this general sense it can safely be asserted that 'blessings of the spiritual life' expresses the topic of Rom 8, though Paul himself does not use those words. His own descriptions of what we usually call the spiritual life vary almost from sentence to sentence. To be in Christ Jesus, 1; the law of the spirit of life in Christ, 2; to walk according to the spirit, 4; to mind the things of the spirit, 5; to be in the spirit, 9; the indwelling of the spirit, 9, 11; to have the spirit of Christ, 9; the indwelling of Christ, 10; to be guided by the spirit of God, 14; to be sons of God, 14; to be heirs of God, 17; to be joint-heirs with Christ, 14. All these must be taken together whenever we think of the spiritual life in the sense of St Paul, and even then we must add the contrast to the natural life which is there like a cross-current all the time. On the different meanings of 'spirit, spiritual', etc., in Paul's letters see Prat II 405-7; on the union with Christ in the spiritual life, cf. P. de Jaegher, One with Jesus, 1937.

b A general characteristic of the effects of justification or sanctifying grace enumerated in this chapter is the positive presentation of the doctrine of redemption; whereas all that St Paul has said so far on the benefits resulting from redemption was expressed in a form which may be called negative. In ch 5 it was redemption or deliverance from the wrath of God; in ch 6 from the rule of sin; in ch 7 from the rule of the law. In ch 8, however, it is the life and power and triumph of the indwelling Holy Spirit. The doctrine of the indwelling Holy Spirit which is generally recognized as another characteristic feature of ch 8 should not be studied without bearing in mind the place which it holds in Paul's theology as a whole; cf. 5:5; 8:9, 11; 1 Cor 3:16; 6:19; 2 Cor 1:22; 6:16; Eph 1:13; 4:30; also Jn 14:17, etc. and Prat II 406 f. Dogma deals with the same doctrine under the effects of sanctifying grace.

Connexion. It was a fortunate choice to begin a new chapter with 8:1. For the connexion with what precedes, esp. with 7:24, 25a, is so close that otherwise the transition to a new point would easily be missed.

The plan followed here traces the spiritual life or the work of the indwelling Holy Spirit, (1) before death 1-8; (2) in death 9-11; (3) after death 12-17; (4) in the present longing for heaven 18-30. (5) A concluding summary: God's love for us in Christ 31-39.

c 1-8 The Victory of the Indwelling Holy Spirit over the Flesh—The ruler of this world cometh but in me he has nothing' is one way in which our Lord describes his triumph over Satan and sin; and to his disciples returning from their first missionary journey he said, 'I saw Satan like lightning falling from heaven. Behold I have given you power to tread upon serpents and scorpions and upon all the power of the enemy; and nothing shall hurt you', Lk 10:18 f.; cf. Mk 16:17 f.; Jn 14:2 f., 12, 21. Here Paul, too, speaks of victory over Satan and sin, but his approach to the question and his manner of discussing it are different. Paul is looking at the conflict between the spirit of Christ and the spirit of sin or of Satan in every man's own heart. Hence it is the internal victory over Satan and sin rather than the external results on which 1-8 throw light. It becomes a victory over the flesh or the carnal Self.

The force from which this victory over the flesh first came and still comes according to 1-8 is Christ. To begin with, it was the very purpose of the Incarnation to conquer sin, to break its until then unbroken rule. What was not only unheard of but impossible before Christ has since come to be a fact. Sin has been overcome and it was Christ who set the first example. But not only that, it is part of God's economy of salvation that Christ's victory over sin should continue by means of that same spirit of Christ dwelling in men's hearts. Hence all who have that spirit of Christ can be sure of their victory over the flesh. They will not be spared the conflict between the spirit of Christ and the spirit of Satan in their own souls, but the victory of the spirit of Christ is as certain for the future as it is proved for the past, for the spirit of Christ is neither dead nor changeable.

A special feature of this passage is the contrast between sāpš and meōia, the flesh and the spirit. In this Paul may have been influenced by the rabbinical discussions on the yēšer tōb and the yēšer hārā' = the good and the bad instinct (impulse), cf. SB IV 1, 466-83.

A practical difficulty in this passage is the certainty with which St Paul speaks of the victory of the spirit over the flesh. Did he not know our Lord's warning, 'the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak', Mt 26:41? and does the Apostle not speak here as if in a Christian the inclination to sin (fomes peccati) had been extinguished by the grace of justification? Such conclusions could indeed be drawn, if 1-8 stood alone. But there is plenty of evidence in other parts of Paul's epistles that he, too, was kept well aware of the fact that the victory of the spirit over the flesh can by no means be taken as a matter of course in Christian life, cf. 1 Cor 5:1-6:20. His many exhortations show the stress which he laid on co-operation with the spirit of Christ dwelling in us. But in 1-8 Paul is not concerned with the duty of co-operation with grace but with the actual victory of those who are in fact guided by that spirit of Christ. Here, his point is, that the spirit of Christ is by its very nature a spirit of victory over the flesh; cf. Council of Trent, sess V decretum de pecc. orig. (Dz 792).

Plan. There is no agreement among commentators as to the divisions to be made in 1-11. Many regard 1-11 as one paragraph combining the victory over the flesh and over death, cf. v 2. Others separate 1-4(5) and 5(6)-11. Cf. § 854b (plan), e (on v 2), h (connexion).

Style. The exact sequence of thought in detail is difficult to ascertain, cf. the use of the connecting particles: γάρ 2, 3, 5, 6, 7; δέ 8, 9, 10, 11.

1. 'Now therefore': has been explained (a) as introducing a summary of chh 5-7; (b) as indicating the connexion with 7:24, 25a; (c) as taking up 7:6; (d) as referring back to 5:11. 'Condemnation': has been taken (a) as a sentence of condemnation, cf. Council of Trent, sess V (Dz 792); (b) as the punishment inflicted in the sentence of condemnation; (c) as the consciousness of being under condemnation. This last meaning, if it could be proved, would suit the context best. 'To be in Christ': is a phrase which is essential for the study of Pauline mysticism. On its use and meaning see Prat II 391-5, note M. Other figures of speech used in the NT to express the same idea of union with Christ are: the vine and its branches; the head and the members of the body; the marriage between Christ and the Church; to be baptized into Christ; foundation and building. 2 states the theme developed in 1-13. 'The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus': is one phrase. It is important but difficult to find a suitable rendering. Equivalents that have been suggested are: the law of the life of grace, the spiritual principle of life, the order of the spiritual life, the Christian life, the supernatural life, the spiritual life. 3 states necessity, mode and fruit of the Incarnation (Thomas Aq.). The sentence can be explained (a) as an anacoluthon: what the law could not effect, God [carried out; and] sending . . .

854f he condemned . . . , cf. WV ; (b) as an apposition in the nominative or accusative : God condemned sin in the flesh, which the law could not do. 'His own son' : perhaps chosen deliberately instead of Jesus or Christ, to distinguish him from the adopted sons in 15 f. 'In the likeness of sinful flesh' : so the Greek text against Vg, DV, cf. Lagrange ; notice the bearing of the text on the pre-existence of Christ. περι ἀμαρτίας, 'of sin' DV = (a) on behalf of sin ; (b) as sin offering. 'Condemned' : according to the context = God made sin stand condemned in the life of Christ, cf. Jn 12:31 f. 4. 'That the demands of the law may be fulfilled', WV. The purpose of the Incarnation is to make obedience to the law of God possible for those whose life is spiritual. 5. 'The things . . . of the flesh . . . of the spirit' : cf. Gal 5:15-25.

g 9-11 The Victory of the Indwelling Holy Spirit over Death, or the indwelling Holy Spirit as the pledge of the resurrection of the body—From the victory of the spirit of Christ over the flesh in the present life Paul passes on to the victory of the same spirit over death, in the resurrection of the dead body. The pledge of our participation in that resurrection is the indwelling spirit of Christ. This step from the victory of the indwelling Holy Spirit over the living body, 1-8, to the victory of the same Spirit over the dead body, 9-11, which the Apostle's argument here implies is tremendous, and the wide gulf that separates the two should not be overlooked because Paul takes it in his stride. For a fuller treatment of the question of the resurrection of the body see 1 Cor 15 and commentaries.

h The characteristic of 9-11 lies in the precise wording of the doctrine of the resurrection of the body with the special emphasis on the indwelling of the spirit of Christ as the bond of our union with Christ. The body that has been the temple of the spirit of Christ will be raised from the dead by God as he raised Christ from the dead ; cf. 1 Cor 6:14 ; 15:20, 23 ; 2 Cor 4:14 ; Phil 3:21 ; 1 Thess 4:14. The value of this argument from the resurrection of Christ to the resurrection of every Christian must be judged not by the rules of logic but by the specific Christian and Pauline doctrine of every Christian's mystical-sacramental union with Christ, the living head of the living Church. Unless this union is believed and understood St Paul's argument has neither force nor meaning.

Connexion. The beginning of a new paragraph with 9 must appear arbitrary from the literary point of view. But it has the advantage of a clear distinction between the two victories of the Spirit (a) in life, (b) in death, cf. v 2.

10. 'Dead' = mortal, cf. v 11. 'The spirit liveth' = the soul in the state of sanctifying grace, cf. Lagrange. 11. The text is uncertain. It can be : through or because of his spirit dwelling in you, i.e. the indwelling spirit is either efficient or meritorious cause of the resurrection.

855a 12-17 The Victory of the Indwelling Holy Spirit for all Eternity, or the indwelling Holy Spirit as the pledge of a glorious inheritance in heaven—With reference to his faithful servant's life after death our Lord said, 'because thou hast been faithful over a few things I will place thee over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy lord', Mt 25:23. What Paul says in 12-17 is substantially the same. A life on earth according to the spirit of Christ will be followed after death by a life of eternal happiness and glory with Christ glorified.

The first distinctive feature of St Paul's argument is that he calls those who have the spirit of Christ not servants or slaves but sons of God, 14, or children of God, 16 f. The proof which he quotes is the very nature of the spirit received, and its utterance in prayer. The Christian who acts according to the spirit of his baptism knows from experience that he has the spirit of the true children of God, 14 ; cf. Jn 7:17 ; 8:31 f. against Jn 8:44. And again when the Christian prays it is to God as his Father. No matter how much stress others may lay on God's absolute omnipotence or terrifying justice, the Christian owing to the spirit of Christ dwelling in his heart cannot but call out to God, first and above all, as his Father, 15 ; cf. Gal 4:1-7. 855a

The second characteristic feature of Paul's argument is that he calls the Christian's eternal glorification not his reward but his inheritance, 17. This follows logically from the former characteristic. For the servant's reward is his pay, but the child's remuneration is his inheritance. The Christian as the child of God becomes the heir of God his Father, and the joint heir with Christ his brother. God does not do things by halves. Adoption into the royal family of God implies more than a new name. With the title it also gives the right to share in the possessions of the kingdom ; and the one possession here singled out and put before us is the glory of Christ, that glory into which he entered as his inheritance on the days of his resurrection and ascension. That adoption is followed by heirship is nothing out of the ordinary in the natural order. What must astonish, however, is St Paul's conclusion that the one will follow the other also in the supernatural order. This conclusion, or better application, again defies all logical explanations. As in the question of the resurrection of the body the whole argument presupposes a union between every Christian and Christ which is above and different from any even spiritual union known to us in time and space. Its existence and character must simply be accepted as one of the mysteries of God revealed in the Gospel. But however incomprehensible this mystery may be, without a firm hold on its meaning, no reader can follow St Paul's argument. For the same idea cf. Gal 4:6-7 ; Tit 3:7 ; 1 Pet 3:22 ; Apoc 3:21.

12-18 can be taken as conclusion to 11 or as introduction to 14 ff. The sense is not affected. 14. 'Sons of God' : is a title used in the Bible (a) for the angels, Job 1:6 ; 2:1 ; 38:7, etc. ; (b) for the Israelites, Ex 4:22 f. ; Dt 14:1 f. ; 32:6-10 ; Os 11:1-4 ; Is 1:4 ; 30:9, etc. ; (c) for the just, Eccles 23:1-4 ; 51:10 (MT) ; Wis 2:13-18 ; 5:5 ; (d) for the Christians, 2 Cor 6:16 ff. ; Gal 3:26 ; 4:6 ; Phil 2:15 ; Jn 1:12 f. ; 1 Jn 3:1 f. ; 5:1, 4 f. From these metaphorical usages (the meaning of which differs only in degrees) must be distinguished the metaphysical use implying pre-existence and divinity which the name has when applied to Christ in such passages as 8:3, 32 ; Gal 4:4 ; cf. Prat II 140-2 ; Tanqueray II 662 f., III 50 f. 15b

'Spirit of sonship' = state of sanctifying grace, cf. Dz 796. 15c. 'Abba! Father!' : The repetition has been explained (a) as a Greek translation of the Aramaic Abba = father, cf. Gal 4:6 ; Mk 14:36 ; (b) as a figure of speech (anadiplosis) for the purpose of emphasis ; (c) as a relic of an ancient bilingual liturgical (Aramaic-Greek) prayer or ejaculation. The meaning of the phrase cannot be that to pray to God as Father was a Christian innovation or privilege. To think and speak of God as Father is a custom that can be found also in non-Christian religions. For the OT see Ex 4:22 ; Deut 32:6 ; Is 1:2 ; 63:16 ; 64:8 ; Jer 31:9, 20 ; Os 1:10 ; 11:1 ; Mal 1:6 ; 2:10 ; Eccles 23:1, 4 ; 51:10 (MT) ; Wis 2:16 ; 11:10 (11 Vg) ; 14:3 ; 18:13 (LXX) ; Tob 13:4 (LXX) ; Ps 67:6. Here add the OT proper names compounded with 'Ab' = father, of which *G. B. Gray, Studies in Hebr. Proper Names, 1896, counts 31. For the same idea in the OT apocrypha see Jubiles 1:24 f., 28 ; 19:29 ; 3 Macc 5:7 ; cf. 7:6 ; 6:3, 8 ; Test. Jud. 24. For the same usage in rabbinical literature, including the 'Shemone Esre' in which two petitions are addressed to God as Father, see SB I 393-6, on Mt 6:4 ; but here it should be remembered that Abba about this time became also a title of the Rabbis, cf. JE I 29-35. Apart from Israel, the idea of God as Father was known also in other Semitic religions, cf. Lagrange, ERS 110-18. For the same usage in the religion of primitive races see W. Schmidt, The Religion of Earliest Man (CTS Studies in Comparative Religion, no 2) 17. Against false conclusions from the study of comparative religion, however, it is worth pointing out, that to speak of God as Father is much more common in the NT than 855d anywhere else. No less than 263 references in the NT are tabulated by *J. Drummond, Via, Veritas et Vita, 1894, 175. At all events the full meaning of the phrase 'Abba! Father!' in 8:13 is not to be found by insisting on the form (which is common to many religions) but must be derived from the spirit in which it is used in Christianity. This spirit is new and sufficiently explained by the context, 14-16.

e 18-30 The Indwelling Holy Spirit and the Present Longing for Glorification = Perfect Happiness, or the certainty that the Christian life will lead to the glory of heaven—From the height of his contemplation of the Christian's inheritance in heaven, 12-17, Paul is forced back to earth by the contrast between those things to come and things present. In spite of all that he has said in praise of the salvation revealed in the Gospel the present life seems a life of tears everywhere. Nature, animate and inanimate, groans under a law of corruption and longs for the time of its freedom from pain and its full measure of happiness, 19-22; and the very same feelings and longings still linger in the Christian soul, in spite of all that the grace of justification may have changed, 23-25(27).

To avoid misunderstandings it is necessary before going further to limit the discussion to the kind of suffering which Paul here has in mind. He is not speaking of this or that suffering in particular, this or that physical pain, this or that social or political evil. He is thinking of the general suffering which may be described as the absence of full happiness, or the universal want of glory, the general longing for glorification or the universal hope and desire for greater things one day to come. But if Christianity does not remove even this 'spiritual suffering' what then is the immediate use or benefit of the indwelling Holy Spirit, or for that matter of the salvation of the Gospel in general? The simplest and today most common Christian answer is the general rule, that suffering is the path to glory. The best proof is the life of our Lord, cf. Lk 24:26, 46; Ac 17:3; 26:23; Heb 2:9 f. For the same rule in the life of the Christian cf. Mt 10:38; 16:24; 20:22 f.; Mk 8:34 f.; 10:38; Jn 12:24-26; Rom 8:17c; 1 Cor 12:26; 2 Cor 1:5; 4:10; 13:4; Gal 6:17; Phil 1:29; 3:10; Col 1:24; 2 Tim 2:12; 1 Pet 1:6, 11; 2:21; 3:14, 17, 18; 4:13; 5:11.

f The points to be noted in St Paul's reply to this universal cry of suffering rising from the earth are the following three: (a) He makes no attempt to deny the existence of this suffering or to belittle its painfulness. (b) He answers that this spiritual suffering is not against the indwelling Holy Spirit, but rather its very own voice and expression, 26 f. The reason is that the present indwelling of the Holy Spirit is not the end but only the beginning of the Christian life, 23; it is not the fullness but only the pledge of the complete glory to come, cf. 2 Cor 1:22; 5:5; Eph 1:14. It is by its very nature a spirit of hope, 23 f. Those as yet unfulfilled longings in nature as well as in the Christian soul, therefore, are like the pains foreboding and preceding the world's new birth = the final and general glorification of the sons of God, 21 f. In the meantime, i.e. in the present time of want and suffering, nature as well as men must and can hold out in this hope of final glorification supported by the indwelling Holy Spirit. (c) The Apostle anticipates the objection: is not this hope of unseen glory to come just one more empty promise to the harassed souls of men? Far from it! It is the hope that God will carry out to the end his work of redemption. True enough it is hope, and that means for us waiting. But it is a hope, that is as certain as any hope can be, inasmuch as God is certain to complete the work he has begun, 28-30.

g For a deeper appreciation of 18-30 it would be useful to pursue the question, in what does the 'glory to come' here discussed consist? St Paul himself does not develop this question, the answer can be found in the explanations of 'eternal life', in the last article of the Apostles' Creed, or in the dogmatic treatises on the 'last things'. The relevant Bible texts are collected in K. Vaughan, 95-104, 427-36.

Object. The explanations of the Apostle's object in 18-30 differ considerably. Some maintain that his purpose was to enlarge on the greatness of the Christian justification by adding a further triumph of the indwelling Holy Spirit over a practical difficulty in life: the universal want of happiness. This explanation has the advantage of showing progress of thought in accordance with the main argument in ch 8. But others see in 18-30 a new discussion on the certainty of the Christian hope of glorification, cf. ch 5. In this case 18-30 becomes a kind of scholion or digression to the heavenly inheritance discussed in 12-17. The former explanation is followed in this commentary.

Plan. The commentators who take the certainty of the Christian hope of eternal glory as the keynote of 18-30 gain an easy division of the passage into four paragraphs according to the four proofs for this certainty. They are the witness (1) of creation, 19-22; (2) of the Christian soul, 23-25; (3) of the Holy Ghost, 26-27; (4) of God's economy of salvation, 28-30. If 'the victory and triumph of the indwelling Holy Spirit' is taken as the keynote the following plan may be followed: (1) the victory of the Spirit over the suffering (longing) of irrational nature, 19-22; (2) the victory of the Spirit over the suffering (longing) of the Christian soul, 23-25(27); (3) the certainty of this victory, 28-30. The difficulty of this plan lies in placing 26 f.

19-22 The Longing of Irrational Nature for Glorification and the Holy Spirit dwelling in the Christian Soul

—It is unusual for St Paul to give his attention to irrational nature. But when in 19-22 he voices its agony under the burden of its age-long curse we need not think of a sudden flight into poetry. The ideas here expressed are Biblical throughout. That irrational nature was affected by man's (first) sin is clearly stated in Gen 3:17 f.; and its share in man's redemption follows no less clearly from such messianic prophecies as Is 65:17-25; 66:22. For the same idea in the NT see Mt 19:28; Ac 3:21; 2 Pet 3:13; Apoc 21:1. Rabbinical parallels are collected in SB III 840-7, on Apoc 21:1. There remains however something original and unique in the way in which St Paul here personifies these two Biblical doctrines and argues from them to the greatness of the Christian glorification as that 'divine event to which the whole creation moves'.

What is the burden from which irrational creation longs to be redeemed? St Paul calls it her enforced submission to ματαιότης = purposelessness, senselessness, vanity, 20. This has been understood (a) as its physical mutability, transitoriness; (b) as its physical corruption, decay, death; (c) as its moral abuse by sinful man; (d) as the disturbance of the harmony of creation, or rather the absence of fullness of harmony and order = the absence of something that should be there; i.e. in Biblical language = the curse of Gen 3:17; in theological terminology = the consequences of original sin. Of these explanations the last seems the most satisfactory, because the third is too narrow, and the first two raise points of natural science which were hardly in the mind of St Paul. For there is nothing in his letters to support the idea that he regarded nature as free from mutability and death before man's fall.

What will the glory to come bring for irrational nature? Paul answers with 'the glory of the children of God', 21. Instead one might have expected him to speak of the renovation of nature in the sense of Apoc 21:1, cf. WV note. But Paul's wording is negative and may be compared with the negative definition of our redemption = freedom from the curse of sin. Hence, the various speculations on the way in which nature will eventually obtain her freedom from the curse of Gen 3:17 cannot claim the authority of St Paul. It is one of the mysteries not revealed to us, cf. Pesch, Prael. Dogm. III propos. 54.

What has the longing of irrational nature for glorification, 19-22, to do with the Holy Spirit dwelling 855k in the Christian soul, 23-27? The two voices agree in the longing they express, and thus become supplementary to each other. But if 19-22 were left out the argument would hardly be affected.

856a 23-27 The Longing of the Christian Soul for Glorification and the Indwelling Holy Spirit—'I desire to be dissolved and to be with Christ' in heaven (Phil 1:23) would be a good summary of the contents of this passage. In spite of all that St Paul has said in praise of the effects of justifying = sanctifying grace from 5:1 onward, and esp. in ch 8, there still remains a big gap to be filled in the soul. However highly the praises of justification or sanctification on earth may be sung, experience teaches that the soul longs for greater things still. It is with this that St Paul is dealing in 23-27. The commonly accepted term for the object of this desire of the Christian soul is glorification or heaven. Neither term is used in 23-27, but see 18, 21. The terms used in 23-27 are (the full) adoption of the sons of God, and the redemption of our body, 23. For practical purposes, however, it simplifies matters to keep to the established distinction between sanctification and glorification, or between sanctifying grace and glorifying grace. But it must be remembered that the latter distinction is not a distinction in essence but only in time and degree, i.e. sanctifying grace is the beginning of glorifying grace, 23; cf. 2 Cor 1:22; 5:5; Eph 1:14.

b An important point in the explanation of 23-27 concerns the distinction between the voice of the Christian soul, which has the Holy Spirit, 23-25, and the voice of the Holy Spirit in the Christian soul, 26 f. In either case it is evidently the voice of the indwelling Holy Spirit, i.e. of the Holy Spirit dwelling in the soul through sanctifying grace. The difference then seems to be but a difference of intensity in prayer. In 26 f. most commentators think of the charisma of tongues or glossolalia, a form of ecstasy frequently quoted in early Christian literature, e.g. Mk 16:17; Ac 10:46; 1 Cor 14:1-23. But this may be too narrow or too exact an interpretation. Ecstatic prayer in general satisfies the text.

Plan. Two points can be distinguished: (1) the voice of the Christian soul, 23-25; (2) the voice of the Holy Spirit, 26 f.

c 23. 'Awaiting adoption' = the fullness of the blessings conferred on us as sons of God. The context and the comparison with 14-17 make it necessary to insert some noun like: fullness, manifestation, realization, consummation. 24. 'By hope': cannot be dativus instrumenti, because it is by faith that we are saved and not by hope. Hence it is commonly taken as dativus modi = with hope, i.e. we are saved with the hope (of glorification) as a part in the present state of justification = sanctification, but cf. SH. 26. 'Infirmitas': i.e. of our prayer. 'As we ought to': can be connected with either verb: (a) we know not...; (b) we should pray. The former is the better connexion, because the context leaves no doubt as to what we ought to pray for—our final glorification. But we are far from knowing the form, contents, etc., of this glorification as we might wish or ought to know.

d 28-30 The Christian's Longing for Glorification is certain to be fulfilled—The longing for glorification described in 19-22, 23-27 implies not only a vision of still greater things to come but also an element of hope, 23 f. Now hope always needs encouragement to prevent the inevitable thought of possible disappointment from weakening it. The normal form of such encouragement is a reassurance that the object hoped for will materialize. Such a reassurance of the Christian hope of glorification in heaven is the subject of 28-30. The reason on which St Paul bases this reassurance is 'the chain of Providential care with which God does accompany the course of his chosen', SH 214. Providence has started our Christian life on earth; Providence will also lead it to perfection in heaven, cf. Phil 1:6. Partly different reasons are given in ch 5.

The first point in St Paul's argument is the design of Providence exhibited in the Christian life here and now. Paul enumerates four turning points in this life which bear evident traces of this divine Providence, 29 f.: (a) God foreknew us; (b) he predestinated us; (c) he called us; (d) he justified us. The second point in the argument is the conclusion that these four steps are but four steps before a fifth, which is to be the last and final step, i.e. our glorification in heaven. 'Whom God has justified (= sanctified) he will also glorify', 30. What is the logical value of this conclusion? St Paul's conclusion in 30 that there must be this fifth step after the previous four is not meant to be a logical deduction. The Apostle presents it as faith based on the works of Providence in the past, 29 f., and on the nature of God who is love, 28. For us it is, in addition to two motives, belief in the inspiration of St Paul, cf. § 850j.

Does St Paul teach in 28-30 that every Christian can be certain to reach his final salvation and glorification in heaven? The question can and must be answered in the affirmative for every true Christian, i.e. every Christian who lives up to St Paul's idea of the Christian life. This is, no doubt, introducing a very important condition. But the Apostle himself clearly made this condition in the numerous and urgent exhortations that fill his letters. Once this condition of a true Christian life, however, is accepted the uncertainty of final salvation for the individual follows as an inevitable practical consequence, cf. 5:5-21; Dz 825.

28a. 'All things work together unto good' = God worketh all things together unto good, WV. The translation depends on what is considered to be the subject of the verb. The form of the text allows (a) θεός, God; (b) πάντα, all things; (c) πνεῦμα, the spirit, from 26. In any case the content is a general theological principle, cf. Ps 45:2-3; 2 Tim 4:8; Jas 1:12, etc. Four parallels from Greek literature are quoted by Wetstein; for rabbinical stories to the same effect cf. Wetstein and SB. 28b. 'Those who are called according to a plan' (design or decree scil. of God) = those who love God in 28a, cf. Eph 1:11; 3:11; 2 Tim 1:9. It connects the general statement in 28a with the application in 29 f. Discussions on absolute predestination ought never to have been built on such an obiter dictum. On the history of its exegesis see Cornely and SH. 'To be saints': not in the Greek text.

29-30 give a summary description of the process of salvation, apparently in the order of time, cf. Eph 1:3-14; 2 Thess 2:13 f. 29. 'Foreknew': cf. 1 Cor 8:3. As a rendering of the OT yāda it may also have the meaning of the verbs: to elect, prefer, choose, favour, fore-approve of, etc. At all events Paul puts it down as the first stage in man's salvation. The distinction between ante and post praevisa merita belongs to later theology. 'Predestinated to be made conformable to the image of his Son': at the general resurrection, cf. 8:17; Phil 3:21; 1 Cor 15:49; WV note on Rom 8:29. 30. 'Called': refers to the moment of becoming a Christian, cf. Jn 6:44. 'Them he also justified': cf. 1:17; 3:21-30. This fourth stage in the process of man's salvation coincides temporally with the previous 'call'. 'Them he also glorified': refers to the future glory in heaven. The past tense is a prophetic perfect (aorist).

31-39 A Concluding Paragraph summarizing the blessings of the spiritual life in the assurance of God's love for us in Christ—Coming to the end of his exposition of the Christian life Paul seems to have felt that his explanation (like all later ones) must leave a great number of doubts and difficulties unanswered or untouched. For it lies in the nature of human life that no doctrine can in advance dispose of all difficulties that may arise in practice. But in so far as these difficulties belong to the religious sphere, the Christian life has one general answer which can never fail. All these personal difficulties become insignificant as soon as our eyes turn away from them to contemplate that one great act of the love of God in which he did not spare his own Son for our salvation, cf. Jn 3:16. No one 856g who believes and considers this truth can doubt that God wills his best under all circumstances. It is true that there will be an examination after death of which we are all afraid, but sanctified by God, 30, we need fear no accusation, 33. There will be a judgement, but redeemed and defended by Christ we need fear no condemnation from his lips, 34. Before that there may be sufferings and violence, but the love of Christ for us will remain unaffected as the sun remains unchanged by the clouds that may hide it for a while. Christ will not forsake us, 35. It may even come for us to a choice between life and death; to a struggle with the evil spirits and devilish powers; to battles with enemies known or still unknown, from above the earth or below the earth, yet all combined they will not be able to wipe out or mar in our souls the picture and reassurance of the love which God has shown us in Christ. However dark the earth may turn, God's love for us in Christ will remain undisturbed and continue to reign above like the spirit of God above the turbulent seas, Gen 1:2. And in his love we are eternally secure, 38 f.

h Connexion. The opening question 'what then shall we say', 31, does not here introduce an objection as in 3:5; 6:1; 7:7; 9:14, but a summary, cf. 9:30. God has given his elect the victory over sin and death, 1-8, 9-11; he has adopted them as sons and heirs, 12-17; he will fulfil their longing for glorification in heaven, 18-30: what more can be said? Paul has come to the end of his argument and looks for a fitting conclusion. The thoughts which occur to him centre round God's love for us in Christ. Thus the passage becomes a summary of ch 8, and at the same time the description of another and last blessing of the spiritual life. This explanation of the connexion between 31-39 and 1-30 is not accepted by all commentators. Some see in 31-39 merely the continuation of 28-30 and therefore treat it as a further, i.e. a fifth reason for the certainty of final salvation. Others regard it as the summary of the whole doctrinal part as the beginning of which they quote 1:16 or 3:21 or 5:1. The truth probably lies in the combination of these opinions. Here as so often Paul shows very little concern to follow the rules of classical composition.

i Characteristic. In any case, it must be remembered that when Paul concluded the first part of his letter with praise of the love which God has shown us in Christ, he did not intend to give a comprehensive or systematic treatment of the subject, cf. 1 Cor 13. His object in writing so far had been to recommend and preach the Christian life by presenting to his readers its greatness, benefits and glory. To crown these praises with a hymn on God's love for us in Christ was a fortunate choice. He could hardly have concluded on a higher or more suitable theme.

Plan. The progress of thought in 31-39 is clearly marked by the four ascending rhetorical questions (Lagrange speaks of four stanzas): (a) 31 f. Who shall be against us, if God is for us? (b) 33 Who shall accuse us? (c) 34 Who shall condemn us? (d) 35-39 Who shall separate us from the love which Christ bears us?

j 32. 'All things': all the Christian needs to obtain, the glory of heaven. 33, 34a. The interpunctuation is uncertain. Consequently the translations vary: (a) Who shall accuse the elect of God? God who justifieth them? [Answer: certainly not.]—Who shall condemn them? Christ Jesus who died for them? [Answer: certainly not.] Cf. Boylan. (b) Who shall accuse the elect of God, when it is God himself who acquits them? Who shall condemn them, when it is Christ Jesus who died for them...? Cf. C. J. Vaughan, KNT. (c) Who shall accuse the elect of God? When it is God who justifieth, who will condemn? [Certainly not] Christ... who died for them? Of these translations b is the most symmetrical, but c has the support of Is 50:8, a passage which may well have been here in the Apostle's mind. The sense of the argument is not affected. 35. 'From the love of Christ': has been understood (a) as an objective 856j genitive = our love for Christ; (b) as a subjective genitive = the love which Christ bears us. The context which discusses the certainty of the glory to come decides in favour of b; cf. 37, 39; Rickaby combines the two meanings. 'Tribulation', etc.: for similar lists of temptations in stoic literature cf. Lagrange. 38. 'Nor angels nor principalities' can mean: (a) good spirits, Gal 1:8, and bad, Eph 6:12; Col 2:15; 1 Pet 3:22, or (b) evil spirits of two different kinds; or (c) spiritual and temporal powers = earthly authorities. δυνάμεις = fortitudo, Vg; might, DV; powers, WV: position peculiar and disputed, often after principalities.

IX 1-XI 36 The Present Exclusion of Israel from the Salvation revealed in the Gospel, or the present separation of Israel from the Church of God—The problem which St Paul sets himself in these three chapters is the failure of the Gospel to convince Israel. How can the Gospel be the true fulfilment of the Messianic promises, when its central doctrine declaring Jesus of Nazareth to be the Messiah is rejected by the very Israel to whom God had promised the Messiah. With reference to St Paul's answer to this problem it must first be noticed that the Apostle discusses the exclusion of Israel as a whole from the salvation of the Messiah and that only here and now, i.e. in the Church on earth. It would lead to grave misunderstandings to think that his subject is Israel's exclusion from heaven at the Last Judgement, which judgement, needless to say, is not collective but individual; cf. Prat I 250; A. Charue, L'Incrédulité des Juifs dans le NT, 1929, 283 ff. and 343-52 where an extensive bibliography on the whole subject can be found. 857a

The connexion of the subject with the preceding parts of the epistle is not stated in the text. Probably its importance at the time was responsible for its place here, cf. Gal. Of the commentators who look for definite points of connexion some go back as far as 1:16, 'the Gospel is a power of salvation... for the Jew first', cf. 2:9; others point to 3:1 f., the privileges of Israel; and others to 8:30, divine election.

Importance. In the days of St Paul the theological problems raised by the separation of the Church from Israel and vice versa were probably the subject of daily conversations among Christians as much as other doctrinal differences in the days of later heresies or as social problems are today; cf. Ac; Gal; Charue VII f. Compared with Israel the Christians were but a small minority, with all the external advantages (power, organization, scholarship, tradition, money) on the other side. In this situation Paul more than anyone else, as far as we know, set himself to defend the Christian cause in a scientific theological way; and Rom 9-11 is his most complete effort in this respect that has been preserved. The primary importance of these chapters, therefore, is that they present the first scientific vindication of the Christian cause in combat with the well-equipped theology of the synagogue. They are the first chapters of early Christian apologetics. The terms 'scientific' and 'theological' must, of course, be taken here not in their modern western sense, but in accordance with the methods used at the time in the world of St Paul, cf. Philo and rabbinical theology. Apart from this apologetic aspect of the question which was no doubt foremost in Paul's mind these chapters remain important for theology also because of the principles employed by the Apostle, especially those concerning the problem of evil and divine election or pre-destination to salvation within the Church. Why are the Gentiles in the Church and Israel is not? Why B and not A?

Plan. Chh 9-11 can be divided as follows: (a) 9: 1-5, introduction; (b) 9:6-29, the vindication of God's justice and faithfulness in the present exclusion of Israel from the salvation revealed in the Gospel; (c) 9:30-10:21, this exclusion is Israel's own fault; (d) 11:1-36, other points of view from which light can be thrown on the problems raised by Israel's present unbelief and rejection.

857c IX 1-5 Introduction of the New Subject, Israel's exclusion from the salvation of the Messiah—This paragraph is evidently meant to be the introduction to a new topic. It has even been taken as the preface of an entirely separate letter. Nevertheless it does not state in one clear sentence what this new topic is. As so often in St Paul's letters the real problem becomes apparent only as the argument proceeds. In this case it is the problem created by the exclusion of Israel, the chosen people of old, from the blessings of the Gospel.

Connexion. There is none according to the rules of literary composition, but cf. § 857a. Instead of connecting the new topic with what precedes the Apostle begins by expressing his deep sorrow over the fact that Israel as a whole has not accepted Christ and his Gospel of salvation. Thus 1-5 becomes a kind of captatio benevolentiae.

d The first characteristic feature of this passage is the list of Israel's privileges, 4 f. This list is without a biblical parallel, though the Bible is full of references to this or that prerogative of Israel in particular. The purpose which the list fulfills in the context is twofold.

It explains the Apostle's grief, and reveals the importance of the problem before us' (SH). The prerogatives of Israel enumerated in 4 f. are: (1) the name 'Israel'—a title of honour and divine favour, cf. Gen 32:28; Ps 113:2; Eccles 17:15; Gal 6:16; Eph 2:12. (2) 'Adoption, as sons of God'—cf. Ex 4:22; Deut 14:1; 32:6; Jer 31:9; Os 11:1. (This adoption is different from that of Rom 8:15 f.) (3) 'The glory'—of God manifested in his special presence at Sinai, Ex 16:10; 24:16-18; in the tabernacle, Ex 40:32, 34; in the first temple of Jerusalem, 3 Kg 8:11. (4) 'The divine covenants'—made with the Patriarchs, Gen 15:18; Ex 2:24, etc.; at Sinai, Ex 19:5; 24:7 f., etc.; with Phinees, Num 25:12 f.; by Josue, Jos 24:25; with David, Ps 88:4, 29, etc.; by Joiada, 4 Kg 11:17; by Ezechias, 2 Par 29:10; by Josias, 4 Kg 23:3; by Esdras, Esd 10:3. (5) 'The law'—of Moses or the Pentateuch. (6) 'The service of God'—the liturgy according to the law of Moses in the tabernacle and later in the temple of Jerusalem. (7) 'The promises' concerning the Messiah. (8) 'The fathers'—the Patriarchs Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, Ac 3:13, etc. (9) 'The Messiah'—who is of their race.

e A second characteristic feature of this paragraph is the statement of the divinity of Christ in 5. This text is discussed at length in every commentary. The different opinions as to its historical meaning are shown in the different punctuations of the text, cf. SH 233-8. The first explanation punctuates: 'Christ according to the flesh, who is over all things, God blessed for ever, Amen', DV. In this form the meaning of the passage is clear and the sequence of thought natural. Besides being the most natural this explanation has also the support of Christian antiquity, cf. J. B. Franzelin, De verbo incarnato, 1874, 71-82; A. Durand, RB 12 (1903) 550-70. In dogma v 5 holds an established place among the Scripture proofs for the divinity of Christ, cf. Tanqueray II 634. For other doxologies addressed to Christ, cf. 16:27; 2 Tim 4:18; 1 Tim 3:16; Eph 5:14, 19; Prat II 130. The second explanation argues that the explicit use of the name 'God' for Christ is without a parallel in St Paul's letters and that this makes it necessary to avoid such a usage here if that is at all grammatically possible. Those who accept this argument find a corresponding interpretation by inserting a full stop after 'flesh' or after 'all things'. The remainder of the sentence (5c) then becomes a praise (doxology) not of Christ but of God: 'God, who is above all, be blessed for ever'; or 'God blessed for ever, Amen'. This is the exegesis among others of Wetstein, Tischendorf (1869), Jülicher, Lietzmann, cf. also RV margin. Its main weakness is its artificiality which betrays itself in the far-fetched arguments necessary to make it appear plausible. More specific reasons which can be urged against it are: (a) 5c has not the recognized form of a Biblical doxology which is: 'Blessed (be) God', and not 'God (be) blessed', cf. Lk 1:68; 2 Cor 1:3; Eph 1:3. (b) It is against Pauline usage to begin a doxology with a new sentence; cf. 1:25; 2 Cor 11:31; Gal 1:5; 2 Tim 4:18, etc.; Lagrange. (c) What is ultimately gained by this exegesis is less than the extent of the controversy suggests. For the first explanation remains at least equally possible and the doctrine of the divinity of Christ remains unimpaired because it is clear from other texts of St Paul, cf. Phil 2:5-11; Col 2:9, etc.; Cornely; Prat II 124-31.

1. For similar assurances of sincerity cf. 2 Cor 1:23; 12:17; 11:31; 12:19; Gal 1:20; Mt 5:37; Jas 5:12. 3. ἠυχόμεν = (1) I wish, DV; (2) I could wish, WV. Either translation is possible, cf. S. G. Green, Handbook to the Grammar of the Greek NT, 1904, 300; Blass-Debrunner, Grammatik, 1931, § 359, 2. On the moral character of this wish cf. Clem. Rom. I 53; Rickaby, ad loc; A. Piscetta and A. Gennaro, Elementa Theol. Moralis II (1938) 134; Lietzmann quotes 'the heroic act' as an analogy.

6-29 The Vindication of the Divine Attributes of Faithfulness and Justice in the Present Exclusion of Israel from the Salvation of the Gospel—The argument in this section is apologetic. The difficulties to be solved are objections against God's faithfulness, 6-13, and justice, 14-29, in the case of Israel and the Gospel. The practical purpose of these objections—evidently coming from orthodox Israelites—is to prove the Gospel wrong. God has promised Israel the Messianic blessings. If they have now come with no share for Israel then God has broken his solemn promises. This being impossible, the only alternative is that the Messiah has not yet come and that the salvation offered in the Christian Gospel is a heresy which Israel rightly rejects.

Characteristic. The passage 6-29 is generally known as difficult. But the difficulties are doctrinal—dogmatical, not textual or exegetical. They centre round the terms: election and predestination; grace and free will. For history of exegesis see SH 269-75. 6-13 The Vindication of God's Faithfulness in the Present Exclusion of Israel from the Salvation of the Gospel—The objection here to be rejected tries to refute Christianity by arguing that if the Gospel were true, then God would not have kept his Messianic promises to Israel. In his reply Paul tacitly admits that since the Messianic promises were given to Israel their fulfilment also must have come to Israel. Nevertheless there is a fallacy in the objection. The mistake lies in the popular definition of the Israel to whom the divine promises were given. The objecting Synagogue takes it for granted that this Israel is the race of Abraham. Paul rejects this definition. The divine promises were not given to all the lineal descendants of Abraham. From the very beginning the Scriptures insist on the additional principle of God's free election as the examples of Ismael, 6-9, and of Esau, 10-13, prove. Both were descendants of Abraham and yet both were excluded from the blessings of Abraham their father, and of Isaac and Jacob their younger brothers. And these two cases cannot be set aside as exceptions, for they are typical of the Messianic times like the whole of the OT, cf. Gal 4:23 ff. As in the case of Abraham's and Isaac's children so also in the history of the Chosen People, it is God's election that constitutes the true Israel of the Scriptures. 'Jacob I have loved and Esau I have hated', 13; Mal 1:2.

Besides this main argument, 6-9, Paul finds in the case of Esau and Jacob a further illustration of his thesis that God acted freely in electing whom he wished to the membership of Israel. According to Gen 25:23 Jacob was chosen and Esau rejected before either was born. If the election of the one and the rejection of the other had taken place later in their lives their moral conduct might have been made responsible for the distinction. As it is, the lesson which that Bible record wants to drive home can be none other than the freedom of God's election irrespective of descent from Abraham and also irrespective of works, 10-12.

8571 The final conclusion then to be drawn from St Paul's reply to the Synagogue is: with regard to Israel to whom the Messianic promises were given we must distinguish between the Israelites who are Abraham's children only by physical descent and the Israelites who are Abraham's children by God's special election, like Isaac and Jacob. Only the latter, irrespective of their number, constitute the true Israel. Hence the self-exclusion of the majority of national Israel from Christianity does not put the Gospel into contradiction to the divine and unchangeable promises of the OT.

J A false interpretation. St Paul's argument in 10-13 has been wrongly quoted as scriptural evidence in favour of absolute predestination in the sense that each individual's eternal destiny is predetermined by an unalterable divine decree. Against such a false conclusion it must be remembered: (1) the two Scripture texts quoted in 13 f. are concerned not with the eternal salvation of Esau and Jacob but with their earthly life; and again Paul himself is discussing the election to the Messianic promises of Israel, not the election to heaven or hell; (2) the expression 'I have hated' in 13 is not to be pressed since it is part of a quotation. And further, when contrasted with 'I have loved' it may be taken as a Hebrew idiom and translated 'I have loved less' = I have not chosen, cf. Gen 29:30 f.; Lk 14:26; Deut 21:15-17; Jg 14:16; Prov 14:20; so Cornely.

K A slightly different form of the same misinterpretation uses St Paul's subsidiary argument in 10-12 to prove a false doctrine of predestination to heaven or hell in the specific sense of predestination 'independently of works', i.e. independently of merits or demerits, because Esau was rejected before there could be any works against him. Some commentators have tried to meet this difficulty by introducing the idea of God's foreknowledge of Jacob's and Esau's later sins and virtues. The distinction between predestination before and after the prevision of merit (ante vel post praevisa merita) is no doubt right and helpful, but was it in the mind of St Paul when writing 10-12? It seems simpler and more in accordance with what the text actually says, to disown all theological speculations in 6-13 as regards predestination to heaven or hell because they are outside the scope of the argument. Paul is disputing Israel's claims to the Messianic promises as a nation; and he does not carry the discussion beyond the limits set to it by this immediate object. The exclusion of (Ismael and) Esau from the Messianic promises proves these claims false and that is all the Apostle wants to prove. St Paul did not intend to prove that Esau could not save his soul because he did not belong to the Chosen People. And there is no evidence to that effect anywhere else in the Scriptures.

6. For a similar distinction within Israel cf. 1 Cor 10:18; Gal 6:16; 10. 'At once' = from one.

I 14-29 The Vindication of God's Justice in the Present Exclusion of Israel from the Salvation of the Gospel—The objection to be refuted in this paragraph is based on Paul's reply to the first. It argues: if Christianity appeals to divine grace as the one and all important condition for belonging to the Elect = the Church, then a terrible injustice is done to all those who are left standing outside. Such a doctrine of grace in the fundamental questions of belonging to the Church is a doctrine of divine favouritism which contradicts God's justice.

Plan. This objection raises a serious theological difficulty and the Apostle argues the point at some length. The following four points may be distinguished in his reply: (1) 14-18, an answer from God's sovereignty; (2) 19-21, the answer from God's sovereignty repeated; (3) 22-24, another possible explanation; (4) 25-29, the answer of the Scriptures.

(1) An answer from God's sovereignty, 14-18. The objector has appealed to the divine attribute of justice; Paul replies with God's omnipotence, or sovereignty. The two Scripture texts which he quotes as his evidence are, if possible, even more 'predestinarian' than those used before in 12 f. The one, Ex 33:19, is taken from the history of Moses; the other, Ex 9:16, from the history of Pharaoh. God is the sovereign Lord, and as such can choose for his elect whom he likes. 'God hath mercy on whom he will and he hardeneth whom he will', 18.

(2) The answer from God's sovereignty repeated, m 19-21. The dispute with the objector continues. Paul has referred him to the Scriptures and to the Scriptures he goes. If the sovereignty of God's omnipotent will is to be stressed to such an extent, why then does God still accuse and punish men for their unbelief, disobedience and sinfulness? The Scriptures are full of such accusations and punishments. Surely God cannot be called just and yet, as in the case of Pharaoh, punish men for doing what is nothing but his own omnipotent will. In his reply (20 f.) Paul repeats his previous argument: God is the Sovereign and as such can treat man like the potter his clay. By using this well-known scriptural simile (cf. Is 29:16; 45:9 f.; Jer 18:2-6; Wis 15:7; Eccles 33:13) the Apostle goes beyond his first answer, 14-18, in that he specifies the sovereignty of God as that of the creator, and man's dependence as that of the creature. The evident conclusion is that man as God's creature has no more right than clay to question his maker's designs, plan or actions.

(3) Another possible explanation, 22-24. Paul's n answers so far have been more suppressing than solving the difficulty. Now he introduces the idea of God's mercy mitigating his sovereignty. Unfortunately the sentence remains unfinished. Most commentators complete it in the form of a rhetorical question: 'But [what would you say] if God with such patience endured vessels prepared (= due) for destruction, intending [on the one hand] to express his wrath and display his power, and [intending on the other hand] to make known the wealth of his glory in vessels of mercy which he had made for glory, among whom he called also us both from Jews and Gentiles?' The answer which the Apostle expects would then seem to be, that God's long suffering and forbearance, giving time for repentance, can of course set everything right. But then obviously the same divine mercy must be applied also to Israel. And this application indeed follows in ch 11.

(4) The answer of the Scriptures, 25-29. The divine o forbearance with vessels of wrath mentioned in 22 is as so often with St Paul no more than a thought thrown in but not followed up. Without even finishing the sentence, 22-23, he seizes on another point in 25-29. However serious the intellectual difficulty from the point of view of justice may be, it is at all events definite scriptural doctrine that the members of the Church in the Messianic time are to come (a) from all the Gentiles, and (b) from a remnant of Israel. Hence whatever the Synagogue may say, the Church as she is with but few converts from Israel, is in full agreement with the Scriptures. Things have come to pass as they were foretold. The failure of the Gospel to convince the majority of Israel is no argument against Christianity. Thus the argument is brought back to the point from which it started in 6. The Scripture texts which St Paul quotes are: (a) for the conversion of the Gentiles, Os 2:23; 1:10 (LXX ed. Swete) = 2:25,1 (LXX ed. Rahlfs); (b) for only a small number of converts from Israel, Is 10:22 f.; 1:9. All these texts are used by St Paul in a typical sense. For details see larger commentaries.

18. 'He hardeneth': for a full discussion see the p dogmatic treatise on grace. There are two opinions. The Thomist school explains it by means of the distinction between sufficient and efficacious grace. God's grace in such a case is sufficient but not efficacious. Because of bad disposition God does not add what would be necessary to make this grace efficacious (non apponendo gratiam). According to the Molinists the grace God gives is sufficient, but man does not co-operate. According to man's reception this grace is either efficacious or merely sufficient. In either case the real problem remains, viz. the beginning of evil. Cf. 3 Kg 18:37;

857p 22:21 f.; Is 6:10. 22. 'If God . . . endured with much patience vessels of wrath': is the one clause in Paul's argument which explicitly refutes the false conclusion of an 'arbitrary' omnipotence. To bring out the importance of the clause it may be helpful to separate it from its adjuncts which are: (1) 'to show his wrath . . .' (a first subordinate final clause); (2) 'to show the riches of his glory . . .' (a second subordinate final clause); (3) to give time for repentance (a third clause added by commentators to complete the thought of St Paul). 'Fitted for destruction' = (a) made for; (b) prepared for by themselves (Chrys. Cornely); (c) due for, ready for (Lagrange). 25. 'Not-my-people' = Lo-ammi, which was the symbolical name of a son of Osee, cf. Os 1:9. 'Her-that-had-not-obtained-mercy' = Lo-ruhamah = no mercy, which was the symbolical name of a daughter of Osee, cf. Os 1:6. 27. 'Remnant': cf. Is 1:9; 6:13; 10:20-22; 11:11-16; 37:4, 31 f.; 46:3; Jer 6:9; 23:3; 31:7; 40:11, 15; 42:2, 15, 19; 43:5; Ez 5:10; 6:8; 14:22, etc. See § 859b.

858a IX 30-X 21 The Present Exclusion from the Salvation of the Messias Is Israel's Own Fault—Paul continues his debate upon Israel's exclusion from the salvation of the Messias begun in 9:1 but from another point of view. If the blame for Israel's present position outside the Church cannot be laid on God, 6-29, it is natural to raise the question, who then is to blame. This is the question now taken up and the blame is put on Israel herself. Thus Israel, hitherto the plaintiff in the discussion, now becomes the accused.

Plan. The argument proceeds by three steps: (1) 9:30-33 contains the summary statement of the accusation of Israel; (2) 10:1-13 gives the main proof; (3) 10:14-21 refutes various objections.

IX 30-33 Summary Statement of Israel's Fault—Israel's fault is her mistaken idea of 'justness' = sanctification. Trying to attain to justness by fulfilling the law, Israel finds herself with no room for Jesus, the Messias, who demands faith. As a result the Messias has become for her a stone of stumbling rather than a rock of salvation, as foretold in the Scriptures.

30. 'Follow . . . attain': metaphors taken from the race course, cf. 9:16; 1 Cor 9:24; Phil 3:12; 1 Tim 6:11 f. 33. 'A stone to stumble at and a rock to trip over', WV. The phrase is taken from Is 8:14; the rest of 33 is a free quotation from Is 28:16. The same two texts from Is appear together in 1 Pet 2:6-8. Since Rom 9:33 and 1 Pet 2:6-8 agree in textual variants against LXX a common source has been suggested in the form of an early Christian anthology similar to the testimonies of Cyprian, cf. SH 281 f. 'The stone' refers (1) to YAHWEH in Is 8:14; (2) to Christ in Rom 9:33; 1 Pet 2:8; cf. Ps 117:22; Mt 21:42; Ac 4:11.

b X 1-18 Israel's Fault Is Explained—The argument is not carried further, for Paul merely enlarges on the mistaken idea of 'justness' already stated in 9:31 f. as the cause of Israel's stumbling. The main line of thought presents no difficulty. In the introduction, 1 f., the Apostle shows once more (cf. 9:1-5) how anxious he is to avoid the impression that his argument is coloured by prejudice or antagonism. In 10:3 f. he repeats 9:31 f., i.e. the point which he wants to prove: Israel strives after justness in her own way, but her way is not the way of God, who makes justness dependent on faith before works. In 5-13 the two ways of striving after justness are further contrasted. The first, v 5 = Lev 18:5, is that of the law, discussed at length in 1:18-3:21. The second, 6-13, is that of faith, fully explained in 3:21-4:25, but here once more summarized in a series of free quotations from Deut 30:11-14; Is 28:16; Joel 2:32 Vg = 3:5 MT, LXX. The main purpose of the OT quotations in 6-13 must in this context be to show that justness according to the Scriptures is to be obtained by faith, cf. 9, 10, 11, 13. At the same time they evidently have the further object of impressing upon the reader that the new way of faith is superior to the old (1) because less difficult, 6-11, and (2) because open to all, 12 f. The vivid 858b language used to express this second object easily obscures the first and main point, that Israel's guilt is her neglect of the theological principle of faith.

A question of general interest on which commentators disagree is the use of the OT in 6-8, where Paul quotes Moses against his own law. The simplest solution of this difficulty is that the Apostle here uses Deut 30:11-14 not as scriptural evidence for his thesis but that he has no further intention by this quotation than to clothe his own thoughts in scriptural language. This solution is based on the Greek text in which there is no change of subject at the beginning of v 8 (against Vg, DV) so that personified justness is speaking throughout 6-8. If this explanation be accepted then we have here an example of what is called in Hermeneutics 'the accommodated sense', cf. Bar 3:29. So Cornely. For the opinion that Paul uses these texts in a 'typical sense' see Lagrange, Boylan; cf. also SH 302-7.

Another question of general interest in 1-13 is the meaning of the title Lord given to Jesus in 9: κύριον ὁμολογήσης . . . κύριον Ἰησοῦν = if thou confess . . . the Lord Jesus, DV; Jesus for Lord, WV; that Jesus is Lord, Boylan; cf. 1 Cor 12:3; Ac 11:20; Phil 2:11; 1 Jn 4:2. In general Boylan explains well: 'The title Lord includes all that was preached and believed concerning Jesus—His divinity, Incarnation, Work of Redemption, Resurrection and Glorification'. For a more detailed exegesis the following main interpretations may be mentioned. 'Lord' when used as a title of Jesus Christ by St Paul has been taken: (1) for Hebrew YAHWEH, because LXX often translated the tetragrammaton in the OT with kyrios, cf. HRCs II 800; and because Paul often applied such texts to Christ, cf. note on 13. So Lattey, Paul, 1939, 54. (2) For Aramaic mari = my Lord; maran(a) = our Lord, found in early Christian prayers to Christ, cf. 1 Cor 16:22; Apoc 22:20; Didache 10:5; G. Dalman, Worte Jesu, 1898, 276; Boylan 169. (3) In opposition to kyrios, kyria in the contemporary cults of hellenistic-oriental syncretism; so W. Bousset, Kyrios Christos, 1913, 113-25; Deissmann, Licht vom Osten, 1923, 298 f. (4) In opposition to kyrios in the Roman Caesar cult, cf. Martyrol. Polycarpi 8:2. Of these four explanations the first two seem preferable because more in agreement with the continuity of apostolic doctrine. But it may well be granted that according to circumstances the other connotations were stressed; e.g. the divine king against the Roman emperor cult; the one Lord of all, of Israelites as well as Gentiles, against the pagan cults of the time, cf. Rom 10:12; 1 Cor 8:5. In any case it is generally admitted that St Paul's usage of the title Lord for Jesus clearly implies the divinity of Christ and so does everyone of the above four explanations if logically thought out. On the whole question cf. Prat II 117-24; 437 f.; L. de Grandmaison, Jésus-Christ, Engl. Tr. III (1934) 379-83; BGDW, s.v. Kyrios; Lietzmann 97-101 on Rom 10:9; *H. J. Cadbury, Beginnings of Christianity V (1933) 360-62.

1. 'Paul would not have prayed if he had considered Israel to be irrevocably rejected' (Bengel). 2. 'Zeal but not according to knowledge': cf. Jn 16:2; Ac 22:3; Gal 1:14; Phil 3:6; 1 Tim 1:13; see also Lightfoot on Col 1:9. 3. 'The justice of God' = justness, justification, cf. 1:17; 3:5, 21 ff.; 9:31 f.; Phil 3:9; 2 Cor 5:21. 4. τέλος νόμου = the end of law: can mean (a) the fulfilment of the law, cf. Mt 5:17; Gal 3:24; (b) the abolition of the law, cf. 6:14; Eph 2:15; Col 2:14. 'The law': has here been understood (a) of law in general = all legal systems; (b) of the Mosaic Law. The latter is more in keeping with the context, cf. 9:31 f.; 10:3 f. 5 f. 'Who shall ascend into heaven . . . or descend into the deep': is used in Deut 30:13 f. as a metaphor for something impossible. Paul's application of the second part to the resurrection of Christ, 7, contains a noteworthy reference to Christ's descent into limbo, cf. Ac 2:27; 1 Pet 3:19; 4:6. 8. 'But what saith it': scil. the justice = justness of v 6 f. 9. 'If thou confess with thy mouth . . . and believe in thy heart': develops the metaphor 858e for something near and easy quoted in 8 from Deut 30:14. The sequence 'mouth-heart' is therefore not to be pressed. In the process of justification faith comes before outward profession, cf. 10. 10. A clear text against any theory that faith of the heart alone is sufficient. The profession of faith here demanded is the practice of faith in everyday life. There is no reason for limiting it to times of persecution. 'Justness . . . salvation': appear to be parallel. 12. 'The same is Lord over all' = Christ, not YAHWEH; because of context, cf. 9 ff.; Mt 28:18; Ac 10:36; Eph 3:14 ff.; Phil 2:11. 13. 'Lord': here refers to Christ, but in Joel 3:5 (= 2, 32 Vg) it refers to YAHWEH. Similar examples of YAHWEH texts applied to Christ are 1 Cor 1:31 = 2 Cor 10:17 = Jer 9:23 f.; 1 Cor 2:16 = Is 40:13; 1 Cor 10:21 = Mal 1:7; 2 Cor 3:16 = Ex 34:34; Phil 2:10 = Is 45:24.

f 14-21 Israel's Fault is further Explained—There is no change of subject here. The discussion of Israel's guilt continues. The Apostle's object, however, is no longer merely to show the fact of Israel's fault as in 1-13, but rather to prove that she is also fully responsible for that fault. She is culpable; she has no excuse.

The four excuses that might be made, 14-15a, 16a, 18a, 19a, are not convincing. First excuse, 14-15a: Where, in the case of the Gospel, is the authority which all preaching needs to make faith reasonable? How can Israel believe the Christian missionaries, without their having proper credentials? Answer, 15b: The principle of authority here invoked is perfectly true. But to question the Christian missionaries' authority is forgetting Is 52:7 where the authority of the evangelists (εὐαγγελιζομένων = messengers of the good news) is clearly foretold. Second excuse, 16a: If so, the authority of these evangelists must be considered insufficient because they have been unable to convince and convert Israel. Answer, 16b, 17: 'That complaint is as old as Isaiah's time' (C. J. Vaughan) and therefore no more disproves the authority of the Apostles than that of Isaiah himself, Is 53:1. Third excuse, 18a: But has Israel really heard the Gospel? Answer, 18b: All the world has heard of it. Fourth excuse, 19a: But is Israel aware of what is at stake? Does Israel understand the Gospel? Answer, 19-21: Surely Israel can understand what the Gentiles can understand. The true explanation is not lack of understanding, but that principle of rebellion which underlies all the history of Israel. As in the days of Moses and Isaiah, so now; it is disobedience and contradiction in spite of all that God has done for Israel. This explanation of 14-21 follows St Chrysostom; cf. Lagrange. Its advantage is that it brings out clearly what is generally considered to be Paul's main line of thought. But it must be admitted that it strains the text. To explain the OT quotations in 15b and 16b as answers is a possible but at the same time a harsh construction. For a similar construction, however, see 11:8. For two other arrangements of the text see Cornely, v. Soden, Jülicher.

g The style of 14-21 has been described as obscure by such careful philological scholars as Jowett and SH. The obscurity arises from the method employed in this argument. St Paul answers various objections with Scripture texts, but does not explain the relation of these quotations to the points under discussion. The reason for this is easy to see. When the Apostle dictated the text his intonation would leave no doubt whether, e.g. 15b was meant as a question or as an answer. But to read such a compressed dialogue is a very different matter.

h A point of special interest in 14-21 is the meaning of the four questions in 14, 15a. They are, of course, not four real difficulties but four rhetorical questions, arranged according to the figures of speech called climax. It is also clear that these four questions express only one objection: Israel cannot be expected to call upon the name of Christ, 13, without accredited preachers or teachers = apostles. But the amazing feature is the solemnity with which this objection is expressed, arguing 'back from effect to cause through the series of Prayer, Faith, Hearing, Preaching, Sending' (Gifford). Why so elaborate and solemn? The best explanation would seem to be that 'apostolic' (= sent) authority and continuity were points of general interest and great importance in the Church at that time, cf. 1:1, 5; 1 Cor 12:28; 2 Cor 5:20; Gal 1:1; 1:18-2:9; Eph 1:1; 2:20; 4:11; Col 1:1; 1 Tim 1:1; 2:7; 3:1 ff.; 2 Tim 1:1, 11; Tit 1:1, 5.

14. 'Whom they have not heard', WV. 15 quotes freely Is 52:7. The original text speaks of the messenger (singular!) that brings to Jerusalem the good news of the return from the Babylonian Exile. The LXX by using the verb εὐαγγελίζεσθαι = to evangelize, favoured St Paul's application of the text to the Christian missionaries = apostles. 17. 'Through the word of Christ' = (1) the commandment of Christ, cf. Lk 5:5; so Cornely, Eaton; or (2) the Gospel, the message of salvation as in 8; so Lagrange. Boylan seems to combine the two meanings.

XI 1-36 Further Points bearing on the Problem of the Present Exclusion of Israel from the Salvation of the Messias—The main theological issues raised by the present exclusion of Israel from the salvation of the Messias in the Church have been decided in chh 9 and 10: God is free in his spiritual government of the world in spite of the election of Abraham and Israel, ch 9; and Israel is responsible for having missed the way in spite of the primary importance of grace in the process of salvation, ch 10. Here St Paul could have left the subject. But in ch 11 he pursues the discussion by viewing the problem from other points of view which he thinks might help to simplify the evident difficulties in the existing situation.

Plan. The whole chapter can be divided into five paragraphs. Israel's rejection: (1) is not complete, 1-6; (2) is not without purpose, 7-12; (3) should give no occasion for contempt of Israel, 13-24; (4) will not last for ever, 25-32; (5) epilogue, 33-36. For another arrangement see SH, Cornely, Lagrange; and Lietzmann, Sickenberger, Boylan.

1-6 The Present Exclusion of Israel from the Salvation of the Messias must not be Exaggerated, it must not be regarded as complete—The popular use of the phrase 'the rejection of Israel' can easily cause exaggerations. It is not true that the whole of Israel is excluded from the salvation revealed in the Gospel. There are many examples to the contrary. The Apostle himself is one (cf. 1:1, 5; Gal 1:1) and there are many more. In fact the situation may well be compared with the days of Elias, when in spite of all appearances to the contrary, 3 Kg 19:14, God reserved for himself no less than 7,000 out of Israel, 3 Kg 19:18. As in those days so now, there is a 'Remnant' of Israel that has been selected by God to become the nucleus of the new Church.

The idea of a remnant or nucleus had already been touched on in 9:27-29. Here it is further developed but not so elaborately as later in 13-24. Still, there is one important addition in 1-6. Anxious to prevent any misunderstanding or weakening of his former doctrine of justification not by works but by faith the Apostle in 6 goes out of his way to stress that this remnant has not been selected because they had been more punctual in the observance of the law. Their election is due to God's grace not to their own works. Grace—faith—works: this is the sequence in the process of salvation. In 1-6 Paul is concerned only with the first of these three.

1a. Another rhetorical question continuing 10:18 f. 3. 'What the Scripture saith in the chapter' (= paragraph) of Elias: 'an ancient way of quoting the OT; cf. Mk 12:26 ('in the bush'). 5. 'Remnant': a noun from the verb translated 'I have left', in 4; only here in NT. Cf. § 857p.

7-12 The Present Exclusion of the Majority of Israel from the salvation of the Messias must not be represented as a rejection that is arbitrary or meaningless—From the chosen remnant, 1-6, Paul turns to the 859c majority of Israelites now outside the Church. Their exclusion from the salvation of the Messias is admittedly a fact and a problem. But there are also answers which simplify at least parts of the problem. One such answer, 8-10, recalls that the spiritual blindness or hard-heartedness to which their present unbelief in the Messias is due is a divine punishment foretold in the Scriptures. The texts which St Paul quotes as his proofs are: (1) Deut 29:4 (plus 'a spirit of stupor', WV, from Is 29:10) and (2) Ps 68:23 f. LXX. A further answer, 11 f., to the problem is that which takes into account the good effects of this punishment. They are two: (1) Owing to the unbelief of Israel the doors of the Church were at once thrown open to the Gentiles, cf. Ac 13:46; 14:1; 18:4 ff.; 19:9; 28:28. (2) The conversion of the Gentiles is meant to rouse the jealousy of Israel and thereby bring her back in due time to the one true Church of God on earth.

d 7-10 is in many commentaries connected with 1-6 under the heading: Israel's rejection is only partial. 8-10. The final clauses in these OT texts are treated as consecutive clauses by some commentators, cf. Mk 4:12; Lk 8:10. 9. 'Table': a metaphor for Israel's blessings. 10. 'Bow down', Ps 68:24 LXX = 'make their loins shake', MT: is a metaphor for weakness, here for spiritual blindness, contrast Lk 13:11. 11-24 appears as a new paragraph in many commentaries under the heading: the rejection of Israel is only temporary. 11a. 'That they should fall': The context makes it necessary to add: for ever or irrevocably. 12. An argument a fortiori. 'Offence' = failure to embrace the faith, is left without its antithesis. 'Diminution': either quantitative = in number; or qualitative = in their position in the Church. 'Fullness': antithesis to 'diminution'; therefore again either quantitative = referring to the numerical completeness of their final conversion; or qualitative, referring to the fulfilment (= consummation) of their mission in their final conversion.

e 13-24 The Present Rejection of the Greater Part of Israel must not be made an occasion for contempt of Israel or for spiritual pride on the part of the converted Gentiles—From the unbelieving Israelites, 7-12, the Apostle turns his attention to the Gentiles who have taken their place in the Church. This time, however, his purpose is not to defend their rights as in Gal but to exhort them to humility.

To begin with, 13-16, Paul stresses a third time (cf. 9:1-5; 11:1-2) that his missionary work among the Gentiles is in no way meant to be a reflexion on Israel's privileges, cf. 1 Cor 9:20. His being pro-Gentile is not equal to being anti-Israel. He is no renegade, and Israel in spite of all has not lost the holiness which she has inherited from the Patriarchs who are, as it were, both her 'firstfruit' and her 'roots'. This means, that the holiness of the Patriarchs sanctifies the whole of Israel in the same way, as that small first portion (= firstfruit) of dough which according to the law, Num 15:17-21, was set apart for the temple consecrated the whole dough. And again, Israel is holy because she is sanctified by the Patriarchs in the same way as the branches receive their life from the roots of the tree. Boylan compares the objective holiness or 'consecration' of the children of Christian parents, cf. 1 Cor 7:14.

f After this introductory defence of Israel Paul enlarges in 17-24 on the second metaphor of 16 in which he had compared Israel to a tree whose branches must be as holy as its roots (= the Patriarchs). No sooner had he used the phrase than it occurred to him that the Gentile Christians might use it in their favour by arguing that genuine branches of this tree were lopped off, to engraft 'gentile branches'. Hence they might claim now to be alone the living tree and despise Israel as dry wood. The object of 17-24 is to condemn such an attitude towards Israel on the part of the converted Gentiles, and to recommend humility instead.

First, 17 f., the Gentile Christians should remember that before their conversion they belonged but to a 'wild' olive tree compared with Israel. Therefore when they were engrafted on Israel's ancient stem, it was done contrary to all human standards. They brought nothing to the old tree; they were engrafted only out of mercy to obtain new life from the ancient stem. Hence all the debt of gratitude and duty of humility is on their side. For another explanation of the simile developed in 17 f. see W. Ramsay, Pauline Studies, 1908, 223 f.; S. Linder, Palästina Jahrbuch 26 (1930) 40-3.

g In 19-24 Paul derives further motives for humility from the simile of the olive tree in 16, 17-18. He evidently has reason to think that the Gentile Christians may feel inclined to insist on the fact that whatever their origin may have been, at present they are the living branches of the Church while almost all the old branches have been cut off and thrown away on the heap of dry wood. This fact is undoubtedly true. But what the Gentile Christians should learn from it is: (1) fear of God's severity, since he did not spare even his own chosen people, 21, 22a; (2) gratitude for the grace of their own faith, 22; (3) respect for God's omnipotence, 23. The wonderful way in which God, contrary to all that could be expected, has engrafted the Gentiles into the ancient stem of Israel should be a constant reminder to them that he can do the same at any time with those branches that are at present rejected. To belong to the Church is a grace of God; the one condition on men's part is faith. Gentiles have been received into the Church because they believed, and Israelites have been excluded because they refused to believe.

h 13 f. are taken as a parenthesis by those commentators who regard 13-24 as a development of 11 f., in which case the new paragraph begins with 11. So Cornely, SH, Lagrange, Jülicher. 15. 'Loss' = rejection, WV. 'Receiving' = restoration to favour, Boylan. 'Life from the dead': can be taken (1) metaphorically = an increase of the spiritual life in the whole church on earth so great that it could be compared to a resurrection from the dead, cf. Ez 37:3 ff.; Lk 15:24, 32; or (2) literally = the new life after the general resurrection from the dead, i.e. the last and perfect stage in the history of the kingdom of God, inaugurated by the conversion of Israel, cf. 1 Thess 4:17; 1 Cor 15:52. The latter explanation seems more likely because 'the life' of nr 1 is essential to the Church of all ages. For a history of exegesis cf. Cornely. 16. 'Holy': refers to Israel's objective holiness, i.e. her being set apart for God = her election, cf. 11:28. It must not be identified with the personal sanctification by grace and faith in the Christian sense. 17-24. Olive tree: a metaphor for Israel in Jer 11:16; Os 14:7; cf. also the vine in Is 5:7; Ps 79:9; and the fig-tree of Lk 13:6 ff. In 17-24, however, it is no longer the symbol of the church of the OT only, but of the Church in general, i.e. the church of the OT continued in the church of Christ, in which Gentile branches are grafted on the old tree, and not planted as new trees. 22. 'If thou abide in [his] goodness' = kindness of God towards thee.

i 25-32 The Present Exclusion of Israel from the Salvation of the Messias must not be regarded as Final—From the present, 1-24, St Paul turns his attention to the future. The time will come when the present problem of Israel's exclusion from the salvation of the Messias will cease to exist because of her conversion, which will follow upon the conversion of the Gentiles.

The final conversion of Israel could not be known to St Paul from any natural source. He himself calls it a mystery, 25, cf. Mt 13:11; 1 Cor 2:7; Eph 3:3 f. Nevertheless he does not claim a special revelation as the authority for his statement but argues the point. The reasons which he advances are taken (1) from the Scriptures, (2) from Israel's history, (3) from the divine plan of salvation (= oeconomia salutis = soteriology). (1) The evidence from Scripture, 26 f., is the prophecy of Israel's restoration in Is 59:20 f., plus the concluding clause 'when I shall take away their sins' from Is 27:9.

8591 See also Jer 31 (38):31-34. (2) The reason from Israel's history, 28 f., is the election of the Patriarchs. This is a dogmatic-historical fact which cannot be undone. The promises made to the Patriarchs must one day be fulfilled in every respect, because God is unchangeable, cf. Deut 4:31. (3) The reason from the divine plan of redemption, 30-32, is taken from the doctrine so often repeated in Rom that salvation is the gift of God's mercy (= grace = pardon) after man's failure to obtain 'justness (= holiness) by his own efforts. In this divine plan, therefore man's failure becomes Mercy's opportunity. So it has been in the case of the Gentile Christians to whom Paul is speaking, so it will be in the case of the now disobedient (= unbelieving) Israelites. 'God has abandoned all to their rebellion (= disobedience, WV = unbelief, DV) only to include them all in his pardon', 31, KNT, cf. 10:12.

25. 'Mystery': Lagrange, Ev. selon S. Luc, 1927, 396, on Lk 13:35 finds this mystery already revealed by our Lord himself. 'Fulness of the Gentiles': need not be pressed so as to mean every individual, nor, 28, 'all Israel'. 31. 'For your mercy': is dative in the Greek, and as such can be explained: (1) as causal dative to 'they have not obeyed', i.e. the salvation of the Gentiles has become the cause of Israel's unbelief; (2) as instrumental dative, to 'that they may obtain mercy', i.e. when roused to jealousy through mercy shown to the Gentiles. Nr 2 yields a clear sense but strains the structure of the sentence; nr 1 follows the natural structure of the sentence but yields a sense which many reject because it would be contradicted by the fact that Israel disobeyed the Gospel before the conversion of any Gentiles. This contradiction, however, need not be pressed. When Paul wrote Rom the mercy shown to the Gentiles was a cause that stiffened the resistance of Israel.

k 33-36 Epilogue—The long list of arguments collected by St Paul in chh 9-11 to explain God's dealing with Israel in past and present has come to an end; and he 'concludes on a note of baffled wonder and prostrate homage', WV. It is true, election as well as rejection are facts in Israel's history, and one may call either predestination. But nevertheless and in spite of all the difficulties that remain unsolved Israel's election as well as her present rejection are both part of a wonderful plan, designed by God's mercy, wisdom, understanding, and omnipotence for the purpose of the salvation of all. God is free and can do as he chooses, ch 9; Israel is responsible for her failure, ch 10; the salvation of Gentiles and Israelites alike is God's ultimate aim in all his ways, ch 11.

l 33-36 develop v 32, cf. the similar conclusion in 8:35 f. 33. 'O the depth of the riches, and of the wisdom, and of the knowledge of God': three coordinated genitives. 'The riches': scil. of his mercy, cf. 10:12. 'Judgements': passed on Jews and Gentiles in the course of history to bring them to a realization of their misery and their need of divine assistance, Boylan. 35 is taken from Job 41:3 MT. The sense is: no one can earn the grace of salvation, so that he can claim it as his right. That Paul is not thinking here of meritorious works and their reward follows from the context and from such passages as 2:5 f.; 1 Cor 3:8; 2 Cor 11:5; Gal 6:7 f.; 2 Tim 4:8, etc. 36a. 'From him, through him, and for him is everything': God is the efficient, sustaining and final cause of all; cf. Rickaby. The appropriation of the first to the Father, of the second to the Son, and of the third to the Holy Ghost, is not stated in the text but common in the commentaries of the Latin Fathers after St Augustine, cf. Cornely 633 f. Alleged parallels in stoic literature are collected by Lietzmann 107, e.g. M. Aurelius IV 23.

860a XII 1-XV 12 The Moral Section of the Epistle = Exhortations—The purpose of these chapters evidently is to conclude the epistle with counsel and advice for the Christians of Rome in their daily life.

Plan. None of the various plans that have been drawn up to present the contents of these chapters in the form of a logical scheme has found general consent.

The reason seems to be that the Apostle passes from one point to the next as he pleases without following any prearranged plan. It may, however, be convenient, to distinguish: A. 12:1-13:13, general exhortations; B. 14:1-15:13, exhortations to the Strong and the Weak at Rome.

XII 1-XIII 14 General Exhortations—These two chapters contain a series of exhortations which cannot be brought under one heading. But it is customary to treat them together as a separate group because of what follows, 14:1-15:13. This long discussion of the relation between the Strong and the Weak evidently stands out as a section by itself.

Plan. No more than a separation of the main exhortations can be attempted. The arrangement followed in this commentary is: (1) 12:1-2, the Christian's service of God; (2) 12:3-8, the various functions in the Church; (3) 12:9-16, various precepts; (4) 12:17-21, love your enemies; (5) 13:1-7, the Christian and the State; (6) 13:8-10, charity; (7) 13:11-14, vigilance.

XII 1-2 The Christian's Service of God, or consecration of body and soul to the service of God—The Apostle begins with an exhortation which many commentators would like to treat as Paul's one basic moral principle. Moral theologians reject this claim as exaggerated. Yet it helps to bring out the importance of these two verses and to explain the extraordinary length of the commentaries.

The main idea is, no doubt, the consecration of body and soul to the service of God. This idea is not new, cf. 6:12-23; 8:12-17. Its expression in 1-2, however, is of special interest because of the liturgical language employed in 1. Serving God with one's body (and soul?) is here described as the Christian's sacrifice and worship. This worship is then further recommended as one that is 'reasonable' and the sacrifice as one that is 'living, holy and well-pleasing to God'. To look at our moral duties in this way has always been found striking, helpful and worthy of the highest praise. See Chrysostom's explanation showing how our eyes, tongue, ears, hands and feet can and should take their share in this sacrifice and worship. On the other hand, this liturgical presentation of our moral duties must not be exaggerated so that it becomes the one and only true Christian sacrifice and worship; cf. A. Keogh, The Ministry in the Apostolic Church, WV III 224-42. It must be remembered that this liturgical language is metaphorical as in Phil 2:17; 4:18; 2 Cor 2:14, 16; Rom 15:16. A mere dictionary interpretation easily reads too much into the text.

1. The meaning of this verse is often limited to the body exclusively, so that it becomes a warning against sins forbidden by the 6th Commandment and an exhortation to purity, like 1 Cor 6:12-20; 1 Thess 4:3-5. This interpretation is unnecessarily narrow; cf. the use of 'body' in 6:12-23; 7:4-6; 8:11 f. To be a sacrifice that is 'living, holy and pleasing to God', all spheres of life must be included. λογικόν = reasonable, DV; spiritual, WV; cf. 1:9, Deut 11:13; Jn 4:24. The exact meaning depends on the contrast intended. This contrast some would find in the forms of worship observed by Israel according to the OT. But these forms cannot be called un-reasonable. Others, therefore, see the contrast in the forms of worship observed by the pagans of the time. This explanation implies that St Paul regarded the pagan liturgy as un-reasonable, which is quite plausible. In any case, the mistake to be avoided is to regard this verse as presenting the one and only 'reasonable' Christian worship. For history of exegesis see Cornely and Lietzmann. 2. If the wider interpretation of v 1 be accepted then 2 becomes parallel to it. 2c. 'That you may discern what is the will of God, i.e. that which is good, and well pleasing, and perfect': The three adjectives seem to be in apposition.

3-8 Let Everybody be Content with his Function in the Mystical Body of Christ, i.e. the Church—Every Christian must be content with that position, function

860d or work that has been assigned to him in the Church through his 'measure of faith', the special grace, charisma or talent, given to him by God. All who argue differently lack sobriety—moderation, temperance and humility. They forget that the Church is a community and as such like a human body in which the perfect service of every part, small and great is necessary for the welfare of the others. The allotment of the different functions (= charismata) in the Church is the work of God. The Christian's duty is to fulfil his task as best he can, no matter whether his task is (1) prophecy or (2) some other service such as (3) teaching, (4) preaching, (5) almsgiving, (6) organizing, (7) performing works of mercy.

Connexion. The reason for this exhortation may have been Paul's vivid recollection of the recent disturbances in the church of Corinth dealt with in 1 Cor 12:1-14:40. At all events these three chapters of 1 Cor are the best commentary on 3-8.

Plan. The sequence of thought can be made easier by distinguishing (1) 3-5, the Mystical Body of Christ as the principle on which all community spirit in the Church is to be based; (2) 6-8, the application of this principle to seven different activities in the Church.

The doctrinal importance of the passage is its bearing (1) on the charismata = gratiae gratis datae, and (2) on the unity of the Church. The larger commentaries discuss here also (3) the relationship between the charismata of 6-8 and the regular early Christian Ministry, e.g. SH 358-60.

5. 'Even so we many are one body in Christ and members each of the other', WV. The human body is frequently used by St Paul as an image of the Christian community = Church, cf. 1 Cor 12:12-14, 27; Eph 4:15, Col 1:18. 6-8 contain the application of the principle of the Mystical Body laid down in 3-5; cf. 1 Cor 12:27-30 as the application of 1 Cor 12:12-26. The same idea also in 1 Pet 4:9-11. The structure is difficult because of a double anacoluthon. Hence the additions to the text in the translations: . . . [to be used] according to . . . v 6, DV; . . . [then let it be] in ministering, v 7, Boylan. KNT divides 'the one sentence into four. 6. κατὰ τὴν ἀναλογίαν τῆς πίστεως = secundum rationem fidei, Vg; in conformity with the faith: is a very much discussed phrase. There are two main interpretations: (1) = according to the rule of faith, DV. Then the meaning is, let prophecy be checked by what is established Christian doctrine (= fides quae creditur) and there will be no room or occasion for such subjectivism, extravagances or exaggerations as bring the charisma of prophecy into disrepute. (2) = as far as the measure of his faith will let him (scil. the prophet), KNT; cf. also WV note on 12:3. Then the meaning is, let every prophet keep to the measure of the faith (charisma) assigned to him by God (= fides quae creditur), and say nothing except what his charisma of faith prompts him to say. If the prophets are honest, then there will be no abuse. Both explanations agree that Paul's object is to encourage the right use of the gift of prophecy and to check abuses. The first explanation suits this purpose better, because the rule of faith, the doctrine or contents of the faith, offers an objective means for checking any extravagant prophecy, cf. Gal 1:8; 1 Cor 14:29; 1 Thess 5:21.

- 9-16 Further Precepts of Christian Morals—It is a common and tempting suggestion to regard this paragraph, in view of its beginning in 9, 10a, as a treatment of the commandment of charity. But the precepts which follow this beginning vary so much that they cannot easily be brought under any one heading; and the commandment of charity is more fully treated in 13:8-10.

The style of 9-16 is aphoristic and elliptic. The free transition from participles to imperatives, to infinitives and then to imperatives again is not in accordance with the rules of syntax.

11c. On the inferior reading 'serving the time', cf. H. A. W. Meyer and Lietzmann. 13. On the virtue of hospitality, cf. Tit 1:8; Heb 13:2; 2 Jn 10 f.;

K. Vaughan 171; Hasting's Dictionary of the Apost. Church I (1915) 586. 14 cannot be a quotation of Lk 6:28, but it may be a reminiscence of our Lord's words, cf. 13:9 f.; Mt 5:44; 1 Cor 4:12; Lietzmann. 17-21 Conduct towards Enemies—From duties towards neighbours in general, 9-16, St Paul passes on to conduct towards unfriendly neighbours in particular. Whether the enemies whom the Apostle has here in mind were Christians or non-Christians cannot be decided for certain, nor would it seem necessary to make this distinction. The rules of 17-21 apply in either case.

Similar views on conduct towards enemies. The topics of anger, envy, strife, contention, hatred, enmity, punishment, revenge, war, etc., figure largely in all parts of the Bible. For a collection of references see K. Vaughan 177-81. The main parallels to the Christian teaching in the OT are Ex 23:4 f.; Prov 25:21. See also the literature on the imprecatory Ps and on Mt 5:38-48. Every Christian discussion of the subject must start from the relevant passage in the Sermon on the Mount, Mt 5:38-48. To this St Paul's short treatment here adds nothing new, except his proofs from the OT, Deut 32:35; Prov 25:21 f. The rabbinical theology of NT times does not seem to have had a clear and authoritative teaching on the subject 'love thy enemy', cf. SB I 368 ff. on Mt 5:44; III 301 f. on Rom 12:20. A parallel from classical literature that may be quoted is Plato, Rep. I 335, where Socrates rejects the popular maxim 'do good to thy friend, and harm to thy enemy' (Gifford). For more but doubtful parallels see *C. T. Ramage, Scripture Parallels 1878, 280-3. Our textbooks of moral theology treat the various aspects of the commandment 'love thy enemy' under the sins against charity, under the 5th commandment and under the capital sins of anger and envy. To avoid wrong conclusions from 17-21 it must be remembered generally that Paul is concerned with the Christian's private conduct towards his enemies. The right and duty of the State to punish and control what is evil, is not in his mind. With this he deals in the next passage, 13:1-7.

20. 'Coals of fire': have been understood as a metaphor (1) for the feelings of shame and remorse, (2) for God's judgments.

XIII 1-7 The Duty of Obedience to the Authority of the State—The Apostle passes on to summarize the Christian's duties towards the State. He first insists on the duty of submission and obedience to the ruling government as a divine law. Leaving all questions of the natural law aside he proves this divine law from the fact that no government could obtain or retain power without God's will. Every citizen therefore is bound to render submission and obedience to the de facto government because disobeying would be disobeying a divinely appointed authority, a sin which would not be left unpunished, 1-2. In 3-4 the Apostle gives a brief description of the government as it should be, its main function being to support all good and suppress all evil. After this the way is clear for the conclusion which follows in 5. The submission and obedience due to such a government is a matter of conscience, i.e. the Christian is to obey for God's sake, and not for fear of being found out and punished. The laws of such a government are not merely penal laws but moral laws. The law of taxation, 6, serves as an example. Finally, in 7 the Apostle concludes with a summary which is reminiscent of the words of our Lord in Mt 22:21 'Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's'.

Some of the questions and objections to which St Paul's statements in 1-7 have given rise may here be reviewed. But they must be regarded as belonging more to the history of the exegesis of the paragraph than to its literal interpretation. Most of them are read into the text.

(1) Can a Christian honestly regard and respect as divinely appointed every de facto government even when it is resented as usurping, illegitimate, enforced, foreign, tyrannical, pagan, anti-religious, or anti-

861b Christian, 1-2? Yes, in view of God's justice and providence; cf. Ex 9:16; Rom 9:17 (Pharaoh); Jer 21:7; 29:4-14; 51:24 (Babylonian captivity); Mt 22:15-22; Jn 19:11 (Roman rule in Palestine); see also Origen-Rufinus, on Rom 13:1; Augustine, De civ. Dei 5, 21; St Thomas, Sum. theol. I q 19 a 9; reference from sub-apostolic literature are collected by SH 371 f. For a different answer see Chrysostom and St Thomas ad loc.

(2) Can v 2 be quoted to show that a Christian must acquiesce in such a state of affairs as described under nr 1 and regard such a government as established for ever? No, to wait for and co-operate with God's opportunities by using all legitimate means to bring about improvements in such a government or even to replace it by a better, would seem to be every citizen's right by natural law. At all events every one by natural law has the right to resist injustice even when this injustice is done in the name of a government. In either case, however, the means employed must be in accordance with the moral law; and here in many cases conscience will have to be the final arbiter for the individual; cf. Boylan, on 13:2; SH 372 (on passive obedience); Lehmkuhl, Theol. Moralis, I (1898) 472; Génicot, Theol. Moralis, I (1922) 287 f.

(3) Can v 2 be quoted to show that a Christian is bound to obey government orders also when they are against the divine law? No, the scriptural guidance in such a situation, however, must be taken from such passages as Mt 22:21; Ac 5:29, etc., not from our passage which presupposes normal conditions, cf. 3-4.

(4) Can v 2 be used in favour of the State when in conflict with the Church? No, according to the same principle as under nr 3. See DV (1582) note on 13:4; Gore II 124.

(5) Can 1-2 be used to prove that monarchy, the actual form of government at the time, in Rome is the one form of government approved of by St Paul against any other? No, the terms here used are general. The contrast intended (if any) is not monarchy as against democracy or any other form of government, but government, law and order on the one side, against anarchy, the ruin of every state, on the other.

(6) Can the political conditions under which St Paul wrote Rom be regarded as normal, 3-4? Opinions differ. For a favourable description of the Roman government at that time see SH XIII-XVIII. The evidence to the contrary comes mostly from the administration of the provinces, cf. CAH XII 712 f. In any case, Paul is here not discussing the grievances of Roman subjects, but stating every citizen's duty of obedience to the state in general. What kind of government, however, he has in mind can be seen from 3-4.

(7) What does St Paul teach in 3-4 about the duties of a Christian government? Nothing directly. He is concerned with the duties of subjects to their government. But from 3-4 one may rightly conclude that if the pagan government is to be 'power on the side of good', how much more must a Christian government live up to this first of all its duties.

(8) Did St Paul himself and the early Church uphold the same principle of obedience to the government even during and after persecution in the Roman empire? Yes, Paul had suffered injustice at the hands of government authorities before he wrote 1-7; cf. Ac 16:37; 2 Cor 11:25, 32. That his attitude remained the same later can be seen from 1 Tim 2:1-7; Tit 3:1. The early Church remained true to the same principle also during the time of persecution, cf. 1 Pet 2:13-17 and the numerous references from the sub-apostolic literature collected by SH 371 f. The government of Rome is judged from a different point of view in Apoc 17:6; 18:24; cf. 2:13; 6:9 f., but this does not contradict St Paul's principles in 1-7.

(9) Can v 5 be quoted to prove that all state laws bind a Christian in conscience? No, Paul is concerned with obedience to state law in general, not with the questions whether this or that state law might be unjust and therefore not binding in conscience, cf. nr 3. 861d

(10) Can v 6 be used to prove that not paying all the taxes imposed by the Government is necessarily sinful? No, Paul is again speaking of taxes in general not of this or that tax in particular which can quite well be unjust. Cf. Catechism of the Council of Trent pt 3 ch 8 qu 10; Génicot, Theol. Moralis I (1922) 497-501; H. Davis, Moral Theol. II (1935) 308 f.

(11) Is the exhortation to the Christians of Rome in 1-7 nothing but the prudent advice of an opportunist, arguing that resistance to the Roman government would only do harm, cf. Jn 11:48? No, the duty of obedience to the government is clearly stated to be a duty imposed by God, 1, 2, 5, and as such is a precept of the moral law, whilst opportunism is ruled by circumstances and selfishness; against Renan, cf. Gifford 211. 8-10 Exhortation to Charity—From loyalty to the government, 1-7, St Paul passes to charity towards one's neighbour. The way in which he treats of charity here is short and precise. For the many different aspects under which he could have considered this characteristically Christian duty cf. 1 Jn passim; 1 Cor 13; Jas 2:8-10; K. Vaughan 160-88; textbooks of moral theology, e.g. Noldin II (1921) 85-147.

The special feature of 8-10 is the stress laid on the place charity ought to be given among the commandments. The Apostle puts it first. His reason is that he who loves his neighbour will be anxious not to wrong him, cf. Mt 7:12. Where there is charity, the 6th, 5th, 7th, 9th and 10th as well as all other commandments will be kept as a matter of course. The objection arises that our Lord in Mt 22:39 clearly puts love of one's neighbour second and not first. Some commentators in defence of St Paul refer to 1 Jn 4:20 and Gal 5:14 arguing that in practice the love of one's neighbour implies the love of God, cf. Cornely 683 f. A simpler solution is that Paul called charity the first of the commandments ruling our conduct towards men. This means abstracting from the love of God as not finding a place in the argument: (1) because the context deals with man's duties towards man and not with those towards God; (2) because the examples of 9 are all taken from the second table of the decalogue and not from the first; (3) because our Lord's words in Mt 22:39 are so clear and, if not actually quoted here, yet seem to have been in the Apostle's mind.

11-14 Exhortation to Vigilance and Sanctity—It is difficult to find one name for the Christian ideal described in this short paragraph. St Thomas calls it 'honestas', honourableness, sense of honour, purity of life. It is described both negatively and positively by a series of metaphors mainly taken from time. On the one hand we have sleep, night, and the works of darkness: feasting and drinking, fornication and lewdness (wantonness), wranglings and jealousies; all these are to be shunned and cast off. On the other hand, there are the marks of a Christian life: vigilance, the light of day, and—one would expect—the works of light. But the metaphor is changed to 'the armour of light' which the Christian is to put on.

Connection. Some commentators do not regard 11-14 as a paragraph by itself but as an afterthought to 8-10. Then the meaning of the passage is: let the thought of the coming day of judgement be a further motive to fulfil all the demands of charity set out in 8-10; cf. Cornely.

The metaphors of 11-14. On their understanding depends the appreciation of the passage. But the exact meaning of some is difficult to ascertain. (1) The sleep from which the Roman Christians are to rise, 11, must be the state of their spiritual life at the time. We may think of sleep then in the sense in which even the five prudent virgins 'slumbered and slept' before the bridegroom arrived, Mt 25:6 (Gifford). Perhaps we are allowed to go further and think of that carelessness, lukewarmness or indifference which often follows when the first fervour has spent itself, Apoc 2:4 f.; 3:15 f.; so Cornely who speaks of 'socordia, ignavia, tepiditas'. But it would certainly be exaggerating to interpret this 861g sleep as the soul's sleep of death or state of mortal sin ; cf. Apoc 3:1 ff. (against Estius). (2) The vigilance to which Paul exhorts in 11 is the same as that of Mt 24:42 ; 25:13 ; Lk 21:36 ; 1 Cor 16:13 ; Eph 6:18 ; Col 4:2 ; 1 Thess 5:6 ; 2 Tim 4:5 ; 1 Pet 4:7 ; 5:8 ; Apoc 3:2 f. ; 16:15. (3) The night that is far gone, 12, has been explained (a) as the whole period of human history before the day of the Last Judgement, (b) as the readers' life on earth looked upon as the night that precedes the day of their glorification in heaven, (c) as the 'dark ages' of pagan morals, so Lagrange. (4) The day that is near, 12, has been interpreted (a) as the day of the Last Judgement (Parousia), (b) as the day of the readers' glorification, (c) as the period of Christianity (Christian morals) enlightening the darkness of heathendom. (5) The works of darkness, 12 = all manner of sin. (6) The armour of light, 12, which the Christian is to wear is amply illustrated in the list of Christian virtues in 1 Thess 5:8 ; Eph 6:10-17.

h The nearness of the Parousia or the Second Coming of our Lord, 11. This point is discussed at great length in all modern commentaries. Paul refers to it in 11c when reminding his readers that the day of their final salvation is nearer now than when they were baptized. The purpose of the reminder is evidently exhortation to vigilance, cf. Lk 12:37 ; 1 Cor 7:29 ; Hebr 10:25, 37 ; 1 Pet 4:7. The modern discussions, however, turn round the question whether this text proves that St Paul regarded the Parousia as imminent. For a full answer to this problem see the commentaries on 1 Thess 4:17. All that need be said here is that inspiration covers no more than what the sacred author actually wrote and with this limitation 11c offers no difficulty. The case seems well put by SH 378 'The language is that befitting those who expect the actual coming of Christ almost immediately, but it will fit the circumstances of any Christian for whom death brings the day'.

11. 'Our salvation': the Greek text can also be translated 'now the salvation is nearer to us than when . . .'. What the Apostle means is the final salvation or glorification = the revelation of the children of God in 8:19 = the redemption of the body in 8:23 = the restitution of all things in Ac 3:21. 'When we believed': Aorist = when we became believers, or Christians, cf. C. J. Vaughan. 14. 'Put on Christ': here in the moral sense, cf. Eph 4:24 ; Col 3:12. The same phrase is used in Gal 3:27 in a dogmatic sense for the sacramental effects of baptism.

862a XIV 1-XV 13 Exhortations to the Weak and the Strong in the Church of Rome—Peace and unity in the church of Rome are the subject of this long exhortation. But this time, as distinct from the previous exhortations to the same effect, 12:3-8, 9-16, 17-21 ; 13:8-10, it is peace and unity in one particular point. St Paul has heard of Christians at Rome who abstain from meat, 14:2, and wine, 14:21, and have fixed days set apart for special religious purposes, 14:5. On the other hand he knows that there are others who regard these formalities as having been made unnecessary by the Christian doctrine of salvation, and who therefore judge those who continue to set a great value on their observance as weak in the faith. The Apostle fearing that their differences of opinion might grow into serious disturbances of peace and harmony uses the opportunity of exhorting to unity and mutual tolerance. For the want of exact modern equivalents, the two parties may conveniently be called the Weak and the Strong. On the whole subject cf. M. Rauer, Die Schwachen in Korinth und Rom nach den Paulusbriefen, BS 21 (1929).

Connexion. Most commentators see the connexion in the contrast with 13:13. It is equally possible that the Apostle left this exhortation last on purpose. The general exhortations in 12:1-13:13 are well suited to prepare the way for the discussion of what was evidently a delicate problem.

b Plan. The whole section can be divided into three parts : (1) 14:1-12, avoid mutual criticism ; (2) 14:13-23, avoid giving scandal ; (3) 15:1-13, avoid selfishness. Difficulties. The general outlines of the situation which the Apostle has in mind are clear. But as soon as attempts are made to reconstruct the argument in detail commentators begin to differ widely. The main controversies centre round these questions : (1) Who were the Weak ? (2) What is meant by the observance of special days ? (3) Why does St Paul not treat the Weak in Rome in the same way as the Weak in Gal ?

(1) Who were the Weak of Rom 14:1-15:13 ? Six answers have been given : (a) Converts from the Synagogue who in these matters continued to live according to the Mosaic Law and Jewish custom, cf. Col 2:16. (b) Converts from Essenism, a Jewish religious body with very severe rules of abstinence, cf. Philo, De vita contemplativa ed. Mangey II 477. (c) Another type of the Weak in 1 Cor 8, who refused to eat meat that had been offered to idols. The Weak of Rom then are understood to have gone a step further and abstained from meat and wine altogether to avoid every possibility of taking meat of this kind, cf. Cornely 692 ff. (d) Converts from some form of Orphic-Pythagorean Mystery-religion, in which these practices were in vogue at the time ; cf. Lietzmann 114 f. (e) Christian ascetics, who for various reasons regarded such mortification as the sign of a good Christian life ; cf. Lagrange 335. (f) Christians of 'excessive scrupulousness'. The complete abstinence from meat and wine, and the observance of special days are in this case no more than illustrations ; cf. SH 401 f. Each of these six answers assumes a particular type of religious practice at Rome in the days of St Paul. But none of them can be shown by independent historical evidence to have existed in the Christian community of Rome in those days, and it is easy to raise objections against each of them. (a) Complete abstinence from meat and wine was never enjoined in the synagogue. (b) The existence of Essene communities outside Palestine cannot be proved, Schürer II (1907) 656 ; nor can abstinence from meat and wine be shown to be characteristic of Essenism, Schürer II 664. (c) The situation in 1 Cor 8 is clear and Paul's exhortation essentially the same as in Rom 14:1-15:13. But all this does not explain the 'exaggeration' in Rome and the observance of special days. (d) Orphic-Pythagorean influence is possible but difficult to prove in this particular case. (e) Strong ascetical tendencies no doubt existed in early Christianity, cf. Ac 4:32-5:11 ; 1 Tim 5:23 ; Col 2:16 ; Didache 8 ; cf. also the later Encratites, Irenaeus, Adv. haer. 28 ; and the Ebionites, Epiphanius, Haer. 30:15, 3. But the question is, whence this unusual type of asceticism among the Christians of Rome ? (f) Scrupulousness is a common spiritual disease, the existence of which at Rome as anywhere else in the times of St Paul can readily be admitted. But can complete abstinence from meat and wine and the observance of special days be reasonably regarded as typical examples of what we call scrupulousness ? They may have been such under the circumstances, but then they are more than mere illustrations, cf. 1 Cor 8. Further, the concessions which St Paul makes to the Weak of Rome cannot be applied to the scrupulous in general. In view of so much uncertainty most modern commentators refuse to decide in favour of one of the above six explanations. Instead they prefer to speak vaguely of a combination of various influences and tendencies known to have existed at the time. Briefly, as far as we know, Jewish as well as pagan current tendencies, pre-Christian as well as Christian thought, may have contributed to the complicated situation presupposed in Rom 14:1-15:13 ; cf. SH 399-403 ; Lagrange 335-40 ; Boylan 211 f.

(2) What is meant by the observance of special days in 14:1-15:13 ? The only reference to this practice of the Weak is 14:5. But it may be implied in 14:21c. St Paul's description is so vague that one can only discuss the possibilities. (a) The special days observed by the Weak may have been holy days = feast-days. In this case the holy days of the OT calendar (Sabbath, New Moon, etc.) would seem to be meant, cf. Gal 4:10 f. ; Col 2:16 f. This opinion is naturally held by 362d all who regard the Weak as converts from the Synagogue, cf. Cornely 702. But if they were holy days, one can also think of Christian holy days, e.g. Sunday, Apoc 1:10. (b) The special days of the Weak more probably were fast days. This explanation is based on the context in which abstinence is the predominant feature. So Lagrange, Boylan. In this case the practice of the Weak may be compared with the early Christian custom of fasting Wednesdays and Fridays, Didache 8, or later every Wednesday and Saturday in Rome. The two extreme possibilities which the text theoretically allows, that the Weak fasted every day, and the Strong never, can safely be neglected.

(3) Why does St Paul not treat the Weak in Rom in the same harsh way as the Weak in Gal? The difference in St Paul's attitude to very much the same question is beyond any doubt. In Gal the Weak stand clearly condemned as being in the wrong; in Rom Paul pleads for sympathy and understanding. The difference cannot be explained as a change in the Apostle's doctrine, because the doctrine of justification by faith and not by observance of law is essential to his teaching and to Rom in particular, cf. 3:21; 4:3 f.; 5:1. The true explanation then can only be found in the different circumstances. And in fact it can be shown from the texts that the two cases were fundamentally different in spite of external similarities. The Weak of Gal tried to enforce circumcision with all its subsequent observances as a sacrament necessary for salvation. Thus the observance or non-observance of the Mosaic Law became a matter of dogma, heresy and excommunication. On the other hand, though the Weak of Rom also had a high opinion of their observances, there is no indication that they regarded them as necessary for salvation. For them as well as for their opponents these observances were a matter of opinion and practice, comparable with pious customs of today. That they preferred to associate with those who shared their views and mode of life was only natural. Nor is it difficult to understand how this preference could become a matter of conscience. 'The stricter the rule, the holier the life', sums up a very common experience. At all events the Apostle's positive teaching with regard to this point in 14:1-15:13 does not go beyond the conclusion that whenever this or that rule of life comes to be considered as the more perfect, its acceptance or non-acceptance becomes a matter to be decided by the conscience of the individual in question. But that does not make it a matter of dogma, heresy or excommunication in the Church at large. In brief, there is no contradiction between Gal and Rom 14:1-15:13. For similar concessions on the part of St Paul see 1 Cor 8; Ac 16:3; 21:20-26.

f XIV 1-12 Let the Strong and the Weak avoid criticizing each other—The Apostle admonishes to mutual tolerance but does not deny the existing difference between the Weak and the Strong. The reasons which impose the self-restraint necessary for this mutual tolerance are: (1) 4-9, the Weak as well as the Strong are Christians and as such belong to Christ. As long as this bond of allegiance to Christ as the one Lord of all exists, no Christian can without trespassing on his Master's rights take it upon himself to condemn a fellow-servant who belongs to Christ as much as he himself. (2) 5c, cf. 22c, 23, it ought to be remembered that besides dogma there is in Christian life also a large province in which it must be left to each Christian to make sure of his own conviction and to follow his own conscience. (3) 10-12, one day each man's conduct will be judged before the tribunal of God; then each will have to give an account of himself, not of his fellow-Christian. (4) Condemning each other in matters of practice and conscience endangers peace and unity. This fourth reason is derived from the trend of the whole exhortation.

1. 'Weak in faith': has been explained (1) as weak in the theological virtue of faith; (2) as weak in the comprehending of the Christian doctrine of faith; (3) as weak in applying that faith; (4) as weak in conscience; (5) 'him who is weak receive in faith', Sahidic version. Of these nr 4 is the simplest and perhaps the most practical, but nr 3 philologically the more accurate. For whatever the context, faith is wider than conscience. 5c. 'Let each be fully assured in his own mind', WV. For if he acted against his own conviction, he would commit sin, cf. 14:23. The phrase must not be understood as being satisfied with one's own mind. 7 f. is a Christian principle of fundamental importance, cf. 2 Cor 5:15; Gal 2:20; Eph 1:21; Phil 1:21; 2:9, 11; 1 Thess 5:10.

13-23 Let the Strong avoid scandalizing the Weak—g Having warned both parties against mutual criticism St Paul passes on to the positive duty of mutual edification. This exhortation he addresses to the Strong, excepting perhaps 20, 22 f. In brief: sympathy is Paul's way of meeting the scrupulosity of Christians who are still so weak in their faith that they cannot forget their inherited pious customs through which the kind of food they eat has become part of their religious life, cf. 1 Cor 8:7-13.

Plan. The Apostle's thoughts flow backwards and forwards. But studying the reasons with which he tries to persuade the Strong to sacrifice their rights for the benefit of the Weak will help to trace the main sequence of thought. These reasons are: (1) 15b, 20-23, the commandment of charity which forbids giving scandal = endangering anyone's supernatural life. (2) 15c, 20a, the disproportion between the gain of a dish of food and the loss of a soul for which Christ has died. (3) 16, 18, the good reputation of the Christian faith. (4) 17 f., the spiritual character of the kingdom of God, which lies not in the freedom from this or that ceremonial law, but in its supernatural graces and virtues—holiness, peace and joy. (5) 19a, the duty of preserving peace and unity in the Church. (6) 19b, the duty of mutual edification.

18b. 'Stumbling-block or scandal': of these two synonyms the latter has been adopted in the CTS Catechism q 206 and 208. Its earliest occurrence in the Greek Bible is Lev 19:14 LXX; in the Latin Bible Ex 10:7 Vg. The main passage in the NT to be consulted is Mt 18:7; cf. also St Thomas, Sum. theol. II 2 q 43 a 1. 14 is important in the discussion whether and why the Mosaic Law of clean and unclean foods in Lev 11 has been abrogated. As Paul here clearly says, the authority for this abrogation is 'in Christ', cf. Mt 15:10 f., 15-20; Mk 7:14 f., 17-23; Ac 10:9-16. This verse has also been quoted in defence of indecent art, literature and amusement, cf. 1 Tim 4:4. These are said here to be sanctioned for those who resemble the Strong in faith of 14:1-15:13. But this argument, if it were serious, would overlook the evident fact that 14:1-15:13 is concerned with the importance of pious customs not with border cases of immorality. And further, even where pious customs are concerned, in 14:14-23 the Strong are clearly admonished not to insist on their opinion. 19. 'Thus we pursue peace and mutual edification': the metaphor 'to build up, to edify' is frequently used by St Paul for the growth and progress of Christian life, cf. 1 Cor 3:9 f., 16; 8:10; 14:26; 2 Cor 6:16; 10:8; Eph 2:21; 1 Thess 5:11. There were occasions when St Paul 'pursued peace' along different lines, cf. Ac 15:1 f.; Gal 2:3 f. 22b. 'He that': can be (1) the Strong, whose conscience must condemn him if he chooses to go his own way regardless of the scandal to others; (2) the Weak, who is advised to follow his own conscience in this matter of foods regardless of the stronger faith of others; (3) anyone without a scrupulous conscience. 23b. 'Because his eating is not the outcome of faith', WV = he acts in bad conscience, KNT. It is generally acknowledged that faith here does not mean abstract dogmatic faith, but applied faith, personal conviction, conscience. 23c. The doctrine of this sentence can be expressed in the form of two possible translations. (1) 'All that is done in bad conscience is sin', cf. KNT. In this form the verse states a principle which is true for all men, Christians as well as pagans. (2) 'All that is not the 862i outcome of faith is sin', WV. In this form the principle is true only of Christians. For whatever a Christian does must be in accordance with his faith. To let every action be the outcome of his faith is the Christian's ideal of sanctity according to St Paul, cf. 1 Cor 10:31; 2 Cor 10:5; Col 3:17. This second explanation is to be preferred because of the context, which is concerned with Christians only, and not with pagans. This verse therefore should never have been applied by later theology to the actions of pagans. 23 fn. is followed by 16:25-27 (doxology) in some MSS, cf. § 863l.

j XV 1-18 Let the Strong in their Relations with the Weak Imitate Christ's Example of Unselfishness—St Paul continues his exhortation to the Strong, 1, 8-12; but there are sentences in this paragraph which can be applied also to the Weak, 7a, 2? 4-6? The ambiguity arises from the main object of this exhortation which is to impress the duty of preserving peace and unity in the Church, 5, 6, 7a, 13; cf. 14:19. Enlarging and insisting on this duty, the Apostle could hardly exclude the Weak, but there can be no doubt that he puts the main burden on the shoulders of the Strong.

In addition to the reasons given in 14:13-23 let the Strong remember the example of Christ's humility during his earthly life in general, 1-6. He, our Lord, did not follow the principle of pleasing himself, but submitted for our salvation to all kinds of humiliations—well described in Ps 68:10. Now if Christ acted thus to save and help us, though we were infinitely inferior to him, we too ought to do the same to help those who are weaker than ourselves. No doubt, it is humiliating for the Strong to humble themselves and live like the Weak. But it is equally true that this kind of humiliation is hallowed by Christ's example, 3, approved of by the Scriptures, 4, and deserves to be blest in prayer, 5 f.

k In particular, 7-12, let the Strong bear in mind the unselfishness of Christ in submitting to circumcision and all it implied, 8a, though his mission was not only for Israel, 8b, but also for the Gentiles as the Scriptures abundantly prove, 9-12. Christ submitted to circumcision and lived according to the law of Moses in order to work for the greater glory of God among the Israelites as well as among the Gentiles—among the Israelites by making them see the faithfulness of God to his promises; among the Gentiles by causing them to acknowledge and praise the mercy of God. Thus, by aiming at the greater glory of God in everything rather than by thinking of his own ease and pleasure, Christ overcame the difference between Israelites and Gentiles, a difference much greater than the difference between the Strong and the Weak in Rome. If the Strong follow this example and go the humbler way, making the honour of God their rule as Christ did, then the present trouble between the two parties at Rome will soon pass. In brief: as in Phil 2:5-11 our Lord is described as the model of obedience so in Rom 15:1-13 as the model of all peace-making by unselfishness and charity to the greater glory of God.

l The connexion with what precedes is so close that the beginning of a new paragraph at first must seem more disturbing than helpful. On the other hand, 1-13 could stand by itself without 14:13-23. What binds the passage 1-13 together is—and this explains why it is generally treated as a new paragraph—the new motive on which Paul dwells in this exhortation to peace and unity, viz. the example of Christ's unselfishness.

One of the more important points on which commentators disagree in this paragraph concerns the place which the difference between Israelites and Gentiles in 8-12 holds in the main argument. Some assign to it a central place in the discussion by taking Israelites and Gentiles as the true name for the Weak and the Strong in the whole section 14:1-15:13. Others treat it as no more than an illustration of the argument for peace and unity beginning with 15:1.

m 8. Why does St Paul quote a text from OT prophecy rather than facts from NT history to illustrate Christ's 862n self-sacrificing charity? For a refutation of the answer which sees the reason in Paul's ignorance of or indifference to the historical Christ see Prat II 22 f.; 154 ff. The true explanation seems to be: (1) the OT text recommended itself as a suitable summary of all the relevant historical facts in our Lord's life; (2) since a Christian cannot be expected to imitate Christ in everything St Paul by quoting the OT gained the scriptural proof that imitating Christ in this matter is an indisputable duty of every Christian. 5. 'According to Jesus Christ': has been explained as in accordance with Christ's (1) will or precept, (2) Gospel or doctrine, (3) spirit, character or example, (4) union with us. Nr 3 suits the context best, cf. 15:3, 7. 7. 'Wherefore' = (1) because of the principle stated in 15:1 f. and explained in 3-6; or (2) in view of the example of Christ, last mentioned in 5, cf. 7b; or (3) for the sake of unity in the Church, stressed in 6. 8 f. The simplest construction of this difficult sentence is: Christ submitted to circumcision (1) that he might confirm the promises of the fathers, (2) that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy. 9-12. The purpose of the four quotations is to prove the statement of 9a from the Scriptures. Though Christ lived like an Israelite, he aimed at and achieved the glory of God among the Gentiles.

XV 14-XVI 27 Conclusion—In the matter of greetings, 16:3-16, 21-24, the conclusion of Rom follows the custom of the time. The rest is peculiar to this epistle. Its chief interest lies in what it tells us about St Paul personally.

Plan. (1) 15:14-21, Explanatory comments to avoid misunderstandings. (2) 15:22-33, The immediate purpose of this letter. (3) 16:1-2, Recommendation of Phoebe. (4) 16:3-16, Greetings. (5) 16:17-20, Warning against heresies. (6) 16:21-24, Greetings. (7) 16:25-27, Concluding sentence.

XV 14-21 A Retrospect with Apologies and Explanations—Paul has come to the end of his letter and he begins the customary conclusion by looking back on what he has written, and to whom he has written. As for the contents: the letter before him has grown far beyond the size of an ordinary letter, and much in it may sound bold and daring when read at Rome. As for his readers: why should he have put all this into a letter to Rome, a place where he had never preached? Why did he not leave the care of the Romans to the Apostle(s) of Rome?

Plan. Distinguishing the explanations which St Paul here gives for writing such a letter to Rome will help to analyse the sequence of thought. (1) 14: This long letter does not imply any criticism of the Christians at Rome. On the contrary, Paul shares the widespread admiration of their strong faith and their exemplary Christian life, cf. 1:8. (2) 15: Bold though the language of this letter may be in parts (e.g. 6:12-21; 8:9; 11:17 ff.; 13:3 ff., 13 f.; 14:1-15:13) Paul makes no claim to have said anything new. His intention does not go beyond 'refreshing their memories' on essential points of Christian doctrine, which is the intention of every Christian preacher. (3) 16: What he has written he has written as the Apostle and 'the priest' of the Gentiles in accordance with his particular mission in the Church. (4) 17-19: Apart from the grace of his office as the Apostle of the Gentiles, however, there is still another reason which he could use to defend the authority assumed in writing such a letter to Rome. But to avoid any impression of self-conceit he will mention this other reason only in passing. It is based on the works he can boast of, his achievements in setting up new missions from Jerusalem to the Adriatic coast (Illyria). (5) 20 f.: What follows in these two verses is not a new point, but merely describes in scriptural language the character of Paul's missionary activity. If looking back on his achievements he speaks with more than usual confidence, it is at all events not the empty boasting of one who had the good fortune of reaping what others had sown. In preaching the Gospel it has been one of his constant principles to go where the name 863b of Christ had not as yet been heard of. The numerous missions he can quote to his credit are new foundations.

- 16 is remarkable because of its liturgical (sacrificial) language in three terms: (1) 'that I should be a priest of Christ Jesus unto the Gentiles, (2) that I should sacrifice in the service of God's gospel, (3) and that my offering of the Gentiles should be acceptable, being sanctified in the Holy Spirit', WV; cf. DV and KNT. The essential point in every explanation is to realize that the sacrificial terms used here are metaphorical, and that therefore this verse cannot be quoted against the existence of a specially consecrated priesthood in the Church when Paul wrote, cf. Prat I 342 ff. The difficulties lie in the analysis of the metaphors. How can the conversion of the Gentiles become St Paul's sacrifice? Cornely works out a solution by introducing the idea of baptism in which every convert dies with Christ and thus may be said to participate in Christ's sacrificial death. Most commentators rightly maintain that the exact method or manner of Paul's offering the Gentiles as his sacrifice is not contemplated in the metaphor of v 16. To bring the Gentile world as a worthy sacrifice to the altar of God is probably all that Paul meant to say. For the same idea cf. Is 66:19 f. For an interesting application to the foreign missions see Gore II 180.

17-19 is an involved sentence owing to two intentions in the Apostle's mind: (a) to defend his authority, for which purpose he appeals to all he has achieved in spreading the Gospel; (b) to avoid the impression of vainglory for which purpose he transfers all the honour of his achievements to Christ. The main difficulty is the connection of the second negative in 18; cf. WV against KNT. That appealing to his labours and achievements for the Church is not out of keeping with St Paul's character can be seen from the similar passages, 1 Cor 15:10; 2 Cor 11:1-12:18; Gal 6:17.

- d 22-33 St Paul's Programme for the Immediate Future: Journey to Jerusalem-Rome-Spain—It is not before he comes to the end of his letter that the Apostle states the special occasion which caused him to write. His work east of the Adriatic Sea is done and he is preparing his long desired missionary journey to Spain. Now, on this journey he hopes to call at Rome. The immediate occasion of this letter, therefore, is Paul's wish to prepare for this visit, 22-24. There has to be, however, a delay on account of a collection from the churches in Macedonia and Greece for the church in Jerusalem. For Paul is determined to be personally present at Jerusalem when this token of communion, goodwill, and gratitude on the part of the Gentiles is handed over to the mother-church in the Holy City, 25-29. At the same time he is under no misapprehension of the dangers such a visit implies. For the majority of the inhabitants of Jerusalem his return will mean the return of an apostate of a particularly dangerous kind, and for many of his own brethren in the faith he is still suspect on account of his battles and victories for the rights of the Gentiles in the church. Nevertheless Paul is determined to go to Jerusalem, but realizing the dangers he asks for prayers at Rome, 30-33.

The special points discussed in larger commentaries on this paragraph are: (1) the Christian community of Rome not St Paul's foundation, cf. 20, 24, 28; (2) his collection journey to Jerusalem, cf. 25-29; Act 24:17; 1 Cor 16:1-4; 2 Cor 8-9; Gal 2:10.

- 23 f. is an anacoluthon which can be remedied with the textus receptus by adding the apodosis here given in brackets: 'and having been intent on coming to you for many years [I will now do so] when I make my journey to Spain. For I hope, as I pass . . .' Differently in WV. 24, 'Spain': cf. 28; the earliest references in Christian literature to St Paul's actual visit to Spain are Clement of Rome, Cor 5:6 f.; Muratorian Fragment, l. 35-9. 26 is important for fixing the date when Rom was written. It must have been after 2 Cor 8-9 when the collection for Jerusalem was still in full progress (A.D. 57) and shortly before his journey to Jerusalem, Ac 20:1-21:16. 28. 'Having consigned' = having sealed, which is a metaphor that can mean many things: e.g. (a) authenticated = declared genuine, (b) completed, (c) safely delivered; cf. Lagrange, Boylan. 30-33. Paul asks for prayers at Rome. For similar requests cf. 2 Cor 1:11; Eph 6:18; Phil 1:19; 1 Thess 5:25; 2 Thess 3:1; Phm 22. 32b. 'And with you may have a rest'.

XVI 1-2 A Note of Introduction for Phoebe—About 1 to finish his letter with greetings to his friends at Rome and from his friends in Greece (Corinth or Cenchreae) Paul remembers first from among the latter a Christian lady named Phoebe. He gives her what may be called a note of introduction. Its purpose is to secure for her the welcome and the help of the Christians at Rome on her arrival. Phoebe too must, therefore, have been preparing for a journey to the capital. About the date and purpose of her journey Paul says nothing. But it is an ancient conjecture that he intended to use her journey as an opportunity for sending his letter by a personal carrier; cf. the subscription in many MSS, Tischendorf, NT II (1872) 457.

Phoebe is described by St Paul (a) as διάκονος, deaconess or helper in the church of Cenchreae; and (b) as προστάτις, patroness or benefactress of many Christians, Paul himself included. The exact meaning of both titles is disputed. On the one hand, it is certain that the corresponding masculine nouns are official titles—the first signifying the office of deacon in the church, cf. Ac 6:1-6; and the second signifying the office of a president, patron, or legal representative in Jewish as well as Greek and Roman religious organisations, cf. BGDW. On the other hand, the feminine use of these titles is found nowhere else in the NT. Further, the second remains unknown in the organization of the Christian Church during the following centuries. And as for deaconesses the four earliest references that can be quoted are: (a) Pliny the Younger, Epist. X 96, 8, written c. A.D. 112; (b) Didascalia, chh 9 and 16 ed. R. H. Connolly (1929) 88, 146-48 = Apost. Constitutions, ed. Funk II 26, III 12, written c. 3rd cent.; (c) Apost. Constitutions VIII 28, written c. 4th cent.; (d) Ps-Ignatius, Letter to Antioch, 12:2, written c. 4th cent. Under these circumstances the less technical interpretation of either description remains at least possible if not more probable, cf. Vg, DV, WV, KNT. Phoebe is mentioned in the Roman Martyrology on Sept. 3rd and her praises are sung in a sermon of Chrysostom, opp. ed. Montfaucon XII (1735) 352.

- g 2-16 Greetings—Having recommended Phoebe especially, St Paul sends greetings to no less than 26 individual Christians and two households at Rome. The following alphabetical list is meant to simplify the various discussions connected with this paragraph. (1) Ampliatus 8, (2) Andronicus 7, (3) Apelles 10, (4) Aquila 3, (5) Aristobulus (the household of) 10, (6) Asyncritus 14, (7) Epaphroditus 5, (8) Hermas 14, (9) Hermes 14, (10) Herodion 11, (11) Julia 15, (12) Junia(s) 7, (13) Mary 6, (14) Narcissus (the household of) 11, (15) Nereus 15, (16) Olympias 15, (17) Patrobas 14, (18) Persis 12, (19) Philologus 15, (20) Phlegon 14, (21) Prisca 3, (22) Rufus 13, (23) Stachys 9, (24) Tryphena 12, (25) Tryphosa 12, (26) Urbanus 9, (27) Mother of Rufus 13, (28) Sister of Nereus 15.

Many of these names are well known from Greek literature: e.g. 2:3, 5:7; others are Latin: 1:4, 11:12 (13?) 21:22, 26; the only Hebrew name is 10 and possibly 13. Names that are considered rare are 6, 16, 17, 18. It is not necessary to think that Paul knew personally all those to whom he sends special greetings. The names and importance of some can have been known to him from hearsay: e.g. (1?) 3, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 20 (23?) 24, 25 (26?). The number of women in this list has often been commented on. They are eight or nine apart from those that may be included in the two households 5, 14: viz. 11 (12?) 13, 18, 21, 24, 25, 27, 28. Commentators differ as to the number of groups = house-churches, that can be distinguished in this list. Some distinguish three: (1) the house-church of Prisca and Aquila, 3-5a, with its members 863g in 5b-13; (2) the house-church of Asyncritus, etc. 14; and (3) that of Philologus, etc. 15. Sickenberger distinguishes four groups: 3-5a, 5b-13, 14, 15. These house-churches are regarded as the beginning of the Christian parish-organization, cf. Ac 12:12; Col 4:15; Phm 2. The religious interest of this list does not lie in the identification of the persons on which most modern commentaries concentrate but in the indisputable evidence which they give of the personal and human side in St Paul's missionary activity. The mention of so many names in a town which Paul had never visited proves an extraordinary interest in personal contacts. The later history of these names in Christian literature can be traced by means of dictionaries to the NT, dictionaries of Saints, indices to the NT apocrypha, and the Roman Martyrology. Cornely 775 gives as mentioned in the Roman Martyrology 1.5.6.8.10.14.17.19.20.22.23.24.25.26. In addition to these the Greek Menology commemorates 2.3.7.12.15.

h The attempts of archaeologists to identify the names of 3-15 concentrate on the inscriptions of the Roman columbaria from the 1st cent. Nearly all have been found there. But the discovery of a name in a sepulchral inscription does not reveal the identity of the person. The Ampliatius whose name is inscribed over a cell in the Domitilla Catacomb need not be the Ampliatius of Rom 16:8. Whether there is a historical connexion between the house of Prisca, 3, and the Church of Sta Prisca on the Aventine, between Nereus, 15, and the Church SS Nereo ed Achille is disputed. The same uncertainty surrounds the conjectures of Lightfoot (on Phil 4:22, ed. 1888, 171-8) concerning the identification of Aristobulus, 10, with the grandson of Herod the Great, the brother of Agrippa I; and the identification of Narcissus, 11, with the secretary of the emperor Claudius. Still archaeology has contributed to the study of this chapter by proving the occurrence of these names at Rome in that time.

Is Rom 16:3-15 part of a letter to Ephesus? The theory that it was so originally is based mainly on the following argument. Paul lived at Ephesus for more than two years, Ac 19:8-10. Writing to Ephesus, therefore, one may well expect him to remember a great number of Christians personally, whilst it is difficult to imagine how he could know so many at Rome where he had never been. Cf. B. Gut 380 ff.; Lagrange 370 ff.; N.P. Williams 447 f.; Boylan XVIII-XXII.

i 17-20 Warning against Heresies—This is a digression which may have been caused by the reference to 'all the churches' in 16. If so, this mere reference to 'all the churches' was enough to call to Paul's mind the persistent attempts to distort the true doctrine of the Gospel which he had everywhere to fight, cf. 2 Tim 3.

What heretics the Apostle had in mind the text does not say. The charges are quite general. Paul accuses them (1) of battenning on doctrinal novelties, 17, (2) of material self-interest, 18a, and (3) of deceitful oratory, 18b. Commentators think of Judaism as in Gal 3:1 or of Antinomianism as in Rom 3:8; 6:1; Phil 3:17-21. Whether these false teachers were already at work in Rome or are here considered merely as a possible future danger is another question on which commentators differ, cf. SH and Lagrange. On the whole it does not seem likely that Paul would leave the treatment of an immediate danger to a parenthesis in the conclusion of his letter, cf. 16:19.

j 21-24 Greetings from Corinth—These greetings from Paul's companions continue the greetings from 'all the churches' in 16. These companions listed in alphabetical order are: (1) Erastus 23, (2) Gaius 23, (3) Jason 21, (4) Lucius 21, (5) Quartus 23, (6) Sospater 21, (7) Tertius 22, (8) Timothy 21.

All these names with the exception of 5 and 7 occur in Ac or elsewhere in the Pauline epistles. Two or possible three, 2 (6?) 8, are mentioned in Ac 20:4 as Paul's companions on his collection journey from Corinth to Troas via Macedonia. But the same name need not mean identity of person. The only exception is Timothy 21. All are agreed that he is the Timothy 863 whose history we can follow from his joining St Paul at Lystra, c. A.D. 50 (Ac 16:1) to his episcopacy at Ephesus, c. A.D. 65 (1 Tim 1:3; 2 Tim 4:21).

25-27 Concluding Sentence—Paul finishes not as is his custom with good wishes but with a doxology similar to 11:33-36; Gal 1:5; Eph 3:21; Phil 4:20; 1 Tim 1:17; cf. also Heb 13:20 f.; Jude 24 f.; Clem. Rom., Cor 65:2; Martyrdom of Polycarp 22:3. Of all these doxologies, however, 25-27 is the most elaborate. Nearly all the main points of the whole letter seem to be gathered here in one powerful finale: the power of God unto salvation; the revelation of God's plan of salvation in the Gospel; salvation by faith in Jesus Christ; the Christian salvation offered to all; the Apostle's divine mission; the continuity with the OT. As the Greek text stands in the modern critical editions (with ϕ in 27) the whole epistle ends in an untranslatable anacoluthon. The effect in the Greek text, however, is a threefold doxology: (a) to God the Almighty, 25 f.; (b) to God the All-Wise, 27a; (c) to Jesus Christ, 27b. Differently WV.

The following analysis may be helpful in tracing the somewhat complicated sequence of thought.

Glory be to God

- (I) Who is able to strengthen you [so as to persevere] 25:
 - (1) in accordance with my Gospel
 - (2) which is the same as the preaching of Christ,
 - (3) which in turn is the same as the revelation of a (divine) mystery.
- (II) This mystery is [God's plan of man's salvation]:
 - (4) which was veiled in silence for eternal ages 25,
 - (5) which however has now become manifest [through the Incarnation] 26,
 - (6) and which has [already] been promulgated by the Apostles 26.
- (III) This promulgation means 26:
 - (7) that it has been preached to the Gentiles
 - (8) for the purpose of making them obedient to the faith = Gospel
 - (9) in accordance with a command from God the Eternal,
 - (10) with the help of [the evidence from] the prophetic writings [of the OT].

The order of (7)-(10) is slightly different from that in the text, 26. Points (1)-(3) can be taken as synonymous, each explained by that which follows; (4)-(6) mark the three main stages in the history of salvation; (7)-(10) stress four major features in the last and present state of that history, i.e. the promulgation of God's salvation. These four features are: (7) its universality, (8) salvation by faith in Jesus Christ, (9) the Apostle's mission from God, (10) its connexion with the OT. Vg = DV create two unnecessary difficulties (i) by putting 26 in brackets, and (ii) by obscuring the coordination of the three relative clauses in 25 f., (4)-(6): the mystery (a) which was kept secret, (b) but which has now been made manifest, (c) and which has been made known.

The genuineness and textual history of 25-27 have been the subject of much dispute. The difficulty arises from the differences in the MSS. A few omit the passage completely: D* (Claromontanus) F^{er} (Augiensis), G (Boernerianus). A number of MSS have the passage after 14:23: c 200 minuscules, mainly von Soden's K = Antiochian recension of Lucianus. The oldest MSS as well as our modern critical editions place it after 16:23: \aleph (Sinaiticus) B (Vaticanus) C (Ephraemi rescriptus), etc. A few have it twice, after 14:23 and after 16:23: A (Alexandrinus) P (Porphyrinus), etc. The confusion is nowadays generally traced back to the influence of Marcion who according to Origen-Rufinus X 43 interfered with the text of Rom 15-16 as early as the 2nd cent.; cf. Lagrange 380-6; Boylan 256-61; Lietzmann 131; § 844m.

I and 2 CORINTHIANS

By W. REES

- 864a Bibliography for 1 and 2 Corinthians—Among earlier commentaries the best are those of St John Chrysostom (English trans. in Oxford Library of the Fathers) and St Thomas Aquinas (no English translation). Both are still most valuable for their profound insight into St Paul's meaning. Among modern Catholic commentaries the recent French ones on both epistles by Allo (1934 and 1937) are the fullest and best, a monument of up-to-date learning. There is a very good shorter French commentary by Huby. In English the best is that of Cardinal MacRory, both epistles in one volume 1935¹. Among non-Catholic commentaries the fullest and ablest are those in the ICC: Ep I by Robertson and Plummer 1911 and Ep II by Plummer 1915. Menzies has a good commentary on the Second Epistle, 1912, and Goudge has commentaries on 1 and 2 Cor. (1899).
- b In connexion with the special problems of the Second Epistle the best defences of the 'Kennedy theory' are J. H. Kennedy's own book The Second and Third Epistles of St Paul to the Corinthians (1900) and Kirsopp Lake's Earlier Epistles of St Paul (1911) pp 112-227. Plummer adopts the theory in its fullest form. Allo, Goudge and Menzies accept it in a moderate form, while MacRory rejects it altogether.
- c Of more general works we may mention F. Prat: The Theology of St Paul [Eng. trans. 1926-7] above all. Other works will be found in the list given in the article 'The Life of St Paul', § 663a.

1 CORINTHIANS

INTRODUCTION

- d A. The City of Corinth—Corinth occupied the site of an old Greek city, famous for its commerce, its pottery and fine bronze work, and notorious for its luxury and immorality. But this city had been destroyed and after a century of desolation a new Roman city had been founded there. It was a 'colonia' deliberately planted by the Roman government to serve as an outpost of Roman influence. It was not till the following century that its people began to regard themselves as the heirs of the Greek city. In Paul's time they still thought of themselves as Romans.
- e Corinth was not a settlement of veteran soldiers like Philippi and Lystra, but of civilians, and a considerable proportion of them are said to have been emancipated slaves or their sons, mainly of Italian origin. The descendants of these men now formed the core of the population, a civic aristocracy, proud of the name of Romans, and still largely imbued with Italian tradition and sentiment. Only Roman citizens could be citizens of Corinth, and the official language was Latin. No doubt a number of Greeks and Asiatics had settled at Corinth by Paul's time, but these for the most part would be outside the citizen-body, and in an inferior position in many ways. The Roman element was still dominant, and although the non-citizens might include some very immoral sections, Corinth was probably one of the more wholesome of the cities in which Paul preached, certainly superior in this respect to Antioch, and very likely to Tarsus and Ephesus also. We have no right to identify Roman Corinth with the vanished

Greek city. There is no evidence whatever that the Roman colonists had revived the gross immorality formerly connected with the worship of Aphrodite at Corinth. 864a

The prosperity of Corinth depended on its control of the Isthmus, across which merchandise and even small ships were frequently being transported. The city profited also by the Isthmian Games, held every two years, which attracted a greater concourse than even Olympia. The city was now the capital of the province of Achaia, the seat of the Roman governor. Corinth was not actually on the Isthmus but a few miles southwest of it, finely situated on a terraced slope two miles from the Corinthian Gulf, and overshadowed by the steep rocky summit of Acrocorinthus (1,880 feet) on which its citadel had once stood. The great central square of the city and some newly planned straight streets had now been adorned with colonnades. A basilica or city hall had been built near the square, as its foundations show—it was probably the place where Paul had appeared before Gallio (Ac 18:12). The great temple of Apollo, of which some pillars are still standing, was five or six centuries old when Paul saw it.

There seems to have been a fair number of Jews living at Corinth. An inscription which stood over the entrance to a synagogue is so rudely lettered that it points to a poor and ignorant community, but perhaps this was not the only synagogue. In any case most of the Jews would not be citizens of Corinth and seem to have been unpopular, as we should expect in a city of Roman traditions. Corinth was the first place west of Antioch where the Jews tried and failed to interrupt Paul's work. g

B. The Corinthian Church: Foundation, Crisis, Pacification—Our only sources of knowledge are Ac 18; 19:21; 20:1-3; Rom 15:23-26; 16:1-2, 21-23, and the two epistles. Paul first arrived at Corinth in A.D. 50 or possibly in 49, § 676f. He spent at least eighteen months there, and for most of the time Silas and Timothy were with him. He gained converts first among Jews and half-proselytes and later among the pagans. In general they seem to have been non-citizens and of humble position, although one name (Titius Justus) suggests a few citizens too. The Jews were very hostile but they had not sufficient influence either with the city council or with the populace to raise effective obstacles. Their appeal to the proconsul Gallio was a failure, Ac 18:12 ff. Paul departed probably towards the end of 51 and perhaps did not see Corinth again for something like four years, but he may have paid a short visit in the intervening time, which he spent chiefly at Ephesus, not very far away by sea.

Within a year of his departure Apollos arrived at Corinth, Ac 18:27. He not only kept Paul's converts together but, having been brought up in Alexandria, where he had received a more thoroughly Greek education than Paul, he gained new converts, both Jewish and pagan, from among men of similar education. After perhaps a year at Corinth, Apollos joined Paul at Ephesus. Later some close associates of St Peter came and made some converts at Corinth. Possibly Peter himself paid a short visit. During the next year 1

864I or two Corinth received a much longer visit from some Jewish Christians from Palestine who had once been zealous missionaries but had now deteriorated. Paul calls them 'false apostles' (2 Cor 11:13) and it will be convenient to adopt this name for them. Boasting of a close connexion with the original Twelve Apostles, they made it their chief aim to undermine Paul's influence. They seem to have also tolerated a dangerous laxity in the relation of Christians to paganism, and the force of their example would naturally encourage other sections of the church to self-assertion and extravagance. Their influence lowered the whole spiritual level of a promising church. Disturbing rumours about Corinth reached Paul at Ephesus, and at last (in the spring of some year which may be anything from 54 to 57) three leading Corinthian Christians crossed the sea to him. They brought a letter from the loyal Corinthians, which asked for advice on several subjects including the relations of Christians to pagans. The visitors gave Paul a full account of the False Apostles and they probably urged him to come to Corinth at once.

J Paul however seems to have decided to postpone a direct clash with the False Apostles till he had secured the loyalty of a number of doubtful and wavering Christians who must be given some time for reflexion. He therefore wrote our First Epistle: he answers the questions in their letter, severely rebukes several sections of Christians for various faults, and exerts all his eloquence and tenderness to win back the hesitating, but the persons who were the main cause of the troubles are mentioned only twice and then in a reserved manner. At Corinth this letter was backed up by Paul's tried assistant Titus. It was successful. Many who had been confused by the False Apostles returned to their allegiance to Paul. But a minority remained defiant. On hearing the result of his letter, Paul, knowing that he now had the support of the majority, decided that the time had come to speak more plainly. He therefore wrote our Second Epistle, in which he first expressed his joy at the reconciliation, revealing the distress which the crisis had caused him, and then clearly denounced and condemned the False Apostles, and gave a last warning to their followers. Some time later he arrived at Corinth and spent three months there. He may have had to excommunicate some rebellious members, but on the whole the church was restored to peace and order.

This seems to be the most probable account of the crisis at Corinth. Different views are held by many modern scholars, and these will be considered later.

865a C. The False Apostles: (1) Who and what they were —The False Apostles and their party are the main subject of the last chapters of the Second Epistle. It seems practically certain however that they had been active at Corinth for some time before the First Epistle was written. This is the view of Goudge, Plummer, and others. Briefly the evidence for it is: 1. The interval between the epistles (probably well under six months) seems too short for a new trouble of so serious a kind to have arisen. 2. The hostile party mentioned in Ep 1 chh 4 and 9 have many points in common with that of Ep 2. Both deny Paul's equality with the Twelve (1 Cor 9:1-3; 2 Cor 11:5; 12:11-12) and both claim a superior kind of eloquence or style (1 Cor 4:19; 2 Cor 10:10; 11:6). 3. The bitter and sarcastic tone in which Paul refers to his opponents in Ep 1 is very like that used in Ep 2 (see Comm. on 1 Cor 4:1; 9:1). 4. If the party of 1 Cor 4 and 9 is not identical with that of 2 Cor 10-13, who are they? Can we believe that they suddenly disappeared and that another party, strongly resembling them, as suddenly arose?

b We therefore conclude that the enemies whom Paul speaks of in 1 Cor 4 and 9 are none other than the False Apostles of Ep 2. The tone of these two chapters shows how seriously he thought of them, and they must have been in his thoughts all through Ep 1. Therefore this is the best place to give a sketch of them, based on indications given in both epistles.

c They were Jews and claimed to be of the purest Jewish stock, Palestinians and probably Aramaic-speakers (2 Cor 11:22). They may have been among the early converts at Jerusalem, and at one time they had done some work as Christian missionaries (2 Cor 11:23) and had suffered for their faith. Very likely they were personally known to some of the Twelve, may once have been highly esteemed by these, and may have received letters of recommendation from them (2 Cor 3:1). But in the course of fifteen or twenty years they had greatly deteriorated. Fervour and even honesty had gone, and they were now little better than adventurers, trading on their former reputation.

d It has often been thought that they were Judaizers, but there seems to be no good ground for this view. It is true they boasted of their Jewish descent, but so did St Paul. If they were Judaizers, we should have expected the chief points at issue between Paul and the Judaizers (circumcision, ceremonial purity, etc.) to be much more plainly referred to. But they are hardly given a passing allusion (e.g. 1 Cor 7:19; 9:20) and in a matter-of-fact tone. One longish passage might be equally well directed against Judaizers or Jews, 2 Cor 3:6-18. There is no hint that Paul had the False Apostles in mind when he wrote it, and the calmness of its tone is not favourable to that idea.

e Others have suggested that they were 'liberal' Jews, men who had gone too far in seeking compromise with paganism. (See e.g. Lake: Early Epistles, p 226.) Their probable laxity towards pagan rites and even immorality (see below) fits in with such a view, although such Jews indeed are more commonly found among the Dispersion, whereas the False Apostles seem to have come from Palestine [2 Cor 11:22.] While there are few signs of any tangible false doctrine, yet the use of certain catchwords: 'knowledge', 'liberty' and the phrase: 'All things are lawful' harmonizes with the pretension to a false liberalism which was doubtless a matter of practice rather than theory. Such a practical 'liberalism', based on pure self-interest, must have been common among Jews connected with the Herodian princes and their courts (A. H. M. Jones: The Herods of Judaea, p 212).

f Paul does not explicitly accuse them of encouraging laxity, but there are strong arguments for connecting them with this fault: (1) There are only two evils which are mentioned at some length in both epistles: (a) The intrigues of the False Apostles, (b) The danger arising from too close association with pagans (1 Cor 8 and 10, and 2 Cor 6:14-7:1). This implies some connexion between the two evils. The association between pagan rites and immorality, though not specially close at Corinth, was always a fact (1 Cor 5:11; 10:8). (2) In the First Epistle the ninth chapter, which certainly refers to the False Apostles, is abruptly inserted in the middle of the section on the dangers of intercourse with pagans, an insertion which appears much less surprising if we suppose a connexion between the two subject-matters.

Many believe that the party formed by the False Apostles at Corinth called itself the 'Christ Party'. This view is based on certain interpretations of 1 Cor 1:12 and 2 Cor 10:7. But it is very doubtful if there existed any party calling itself the Christ party (see last note on 1 Cor 1:12), and even if there was one, its identification with that of the False Apostles would be very far from proved by 2 Cor 10:7 which can be quite naturally interpreted without reference to such a party.

It is very unlikely that the False Apostles headed the party which over-rated spiritual gifts, 1 Cor chh 12-14. Paul's tone to this party lacks the bitterness of his references to the False Apostles.

(2) Their Intrigues at Corinth—We may suppose that these persons on their arrival received an enthusiastic welcome owing to what was known about their early missionary work and their connexion with the Twelve

865h (from some of whom they may have produced old letters of commendation), and that they established themselves as honoured visitors without at first showing any ill-feeling towards Paul. But before long they began to form a party of their own, using the double method of self-praise and disparagement of St Paul. They boasted of their acquaintance with the Twelve, dating perhaps from a time before Paul's conversion, and of their labours and sufferings for the gospel. In all this there may have been a considerable amount of truth. On the strength of these merits they assumed an imperious and arrogant manner very different from Paul's. As they found that Paul had refused to be supported by the Christians, they thought it wise to pretend to do the same (2 Cor 11:12 note) but they managed to extract contributions from the Corinthians on some excuse or other (ibid. 20). They claimed the title of apostles (ibid. 13) but not in the full sense in which it was given to the Twelve. They said that they themselves and also Paul, Barnabas, etc., belonged to an inferior class of apostles; that only the Twelve were entitled to live at the cost of the Church (1 Cor 9:6), and Paul, by refusing to do so, admitted that he was not on an equality with the Twelve (2 Cor 11:5; 12:11). This device by which they turned Paul's self-denial into a weapon against him is a good specimen of their mean cunning. They said that Paul had nevertheless contrived to make money from the Corinthians (2 Cor 12:16-18) by getting his assistants to take presents. They said Paul had no dignity, and they ridiculed his delivery and perhaps his language also (2 Cor 10:10). They very likely called him ignorant, and perhaps they even said he was crazy (2 Cor 5:13). Although they did not want to see Paul at Corinth, yet they may have made the postponement of his visit an occasion to accuse him of apathy (1 Cor 4:19) as they on a further postponement accused him of fickleness (2 Cor 1:17).

866a Many of these slanders were no doubt put out stealthily so that it was difficult to trace their authors. The simpler Corinthians, remembering the past record of the visitors, might long fail to penetrate their true character and designs. They would become uneasy and perplexed, and probably their anxious desire that Paul should in future accept maintenance from the Church (2 Cor 11:7 f.; 12:14) was due to the calumnies about his inferiority. If the False Apostles did, as seems likely, countenance an easier intercourse with pagans, they would soon gain many followers among those Christians who for prudential or social reasons were loth to cut themselves off entirely from paganism (see Comm. on 1 Cor 8:1).

b The Corinthian Church was now grievously divided, but the serious division was into two parties only—the followers of the False Apostles and those who were at heart loyal to Paul. A large number of scholars (probably a majority) including those who believe that the False Apostles were Judaizers, are agreed on this point. Few think that the parties of Apollos and Peter were a grave danger to unity, nor was the hypothetical 'Christ party' unless this party was identical with that of the False Apostles. Between the two important parties there seem to have been many wavering and confused Christians.

c Perhaps the False Apostles directly encouraged some smaller groups who feared Paul's disapproval. But even without such encouragement, all sorts of unwholesome tendencies would naturally gather momentum as soon as it was realized that Paul's authority and that of the presbyters he had appointed were being undermined. Of this kind were the misuse of the gift of tongues, and the erroneous teaching about the Resurrection and about marriage. The same atmosphere would cause an increase of offences against chastity.

d D. Other Troubles at Corinth—Though eclipsed by the plots of the False Apostles, the other troubles were no doubt grave in themselves, as St Paul's language proves. The danger of compromising Christian truth by some sort of tolerance of pagan religious rites (whether or not it was aggravated by the action of the visitors) was an urgent one, owing to the worldly advantages which tolerance would secure (see Comm. on 1 Cor 8). The increase of unchastity was another serious matter. Paul opens this subject by speaking of the incestuous marriage and the failure of the church authorities to pronounce excommunication (5, 1). Other passages (1 Cor 5:10-13; 6:9-20; 10:8; 2 Cor 7:1; 12:21) indicate that the evil was widespread and obstinate. It was terribly easy for men who had once been pagans and still lived among pagans to fall away from the higher Christian standard after the bonds of discipline had once been relaxed. (See Comm. on 6:12-20 and 7:1.)

The bad example set by the visitors had probably given an impetus to party-spirit in many forms. It is seen not only among the parties expressly mentioned by Paul (1:12) but in a still more odious shape at the very gatherings which preceded the Mass, when the congregation was split up into a number of exclusive circles, the plainest sign of the ruin of Christian charity. (See Comm. on 1:12 and 11:21.)

Corinth had received an abundance of those extraordinary spiritual gifts which God bestowed on the earliest Christians to enable them to gain converts and to weld them together into one body. A number of Corinthian Christians had been particularly fascinated by the miraculous power of speaking new languages, and had made it a regular and disproportionate part of Christian worship (a use for which it was never intended), till it had become a burden and a nuisance to the general body of Christians. (See introd. to ch 12 and ch 14.)

False ideas about the Resurrection had appeared, based probably on Greek popular or learned notions about matter and the body, and leading to denial of the resurrection of the body, and apparently opening the door, in the case of some minds, to doubts about immortality itself. (See introd. to ch 15.)

E. Sequence of Events leading up to the First Epistle g

—The epistle was written in March or April (1 Cor 16:8). Perhaps as far back as the summer before, Paul had very likely promised to visit Corinth and all his churches in Greece for the sake of the collection for the Jerusalem Christians.

Some time during the autumn or winter he sent Timothy and Erastus to Macedonia probably in connexion with this collection, Ac 19:21-22.

About the same time or a little later he wrote to the Corinthians a letter which has not been preserved, 1 Cor 5:9. In it he asked them to help in the collection and made known a definite plan for his visit: in the spring he would sail directly across to Corinth, then visit Macedonia and return to Corinth (2 Cor 1:15-16). He had heard of Corinthian Christians lapsing into grave sins, and asked the faithful to break off association with these, 1 Cor 5:9-11.

Probably towards the end of winter he had news of Corinth from 'Chloe's people' (1 Cor 1:11) either by letter or word of mouth. He now heard of the serious division caused by the intrigues of the False Apostles, and of other signs of party-spirit. He seems to have taken no immediate action—perhaps the news was confused or incomplete.

At the beginning of spring, as it seems, the three visitors from Corinth arrived at Ephesus to see him (1 Cor 16:17), sent by the loyal Corinthians who had now reached a state of great distress and alarm. They brought a letter from the church, but for some good reason the chief matter which they wished to lay before him (the mischief which the False Apostles were doing) was communicated to Paul by word of mouth.

Other grave matters raised orally by the visitors were: 867a
(a) The failure of the church authorities to deal firmly with the case of incestuous marriage, 5:1-8;

867a (b) uncharitable conduct of some group or groups at the Lord's Supper, 11:17-34; (c) false teaching about the Resurrection, ch 15.

b We can make a plausible guess at some of the contents of the letter which the visitors brought, for in seven passages in the First Epistle Paul's expressions seem to show that he was replying to questions raised in that letter. Two of these subjects are treated at great length: (a) the question of eating food which had been offered to pagan gods—this involved the whole topic of social intercourse between Christian and pagan (chh 8-10); (b) the right use of extraordinary spiritual gifts, especially the gift of speaking strange languages (chh 12-14). The five other points receive less space. (c) They asked for clearer directions about intercourse with notorious sinners (5:9-13) and they asked four questions connected with marriage; (d) about some false notion that marriage was sinful (7:1-7); (e) about the best conduct for converts whose wives or husbands remained pagans (7:8-16); (f) whether a father should choose marriage or celibacy for his daughters (7:25-38); (g) whether widows were free to marry again (7:39-40). Finally the letter seems to have asked him to send Apollos over to Corinth (16:12)—no doubt as an alternative to an immediate visit from Paul himself.

d F. The Composition of the First Epistle—St Paul had now before him a full and reliable picture of conditions at Corinth. The problems he had to deal with fell into three groups: (1) The plot of the False Apostles, whose activities have been described (C 1.) This was by far the worst problem. (2) The other troubles laid before him orally by the visitors: the incest, the disorders at the Lord's Supper, and the errors about the Resurrection. (3) The matters contained in the letter from Corinth, especially intercourse with pagans and the use of the 'gift of tongues', etc.

e To us it may well seem that the natural course would have been to denounce the False Apostles plainly and immediately, either at Corinth or by letter. But Paul decided otherwise. He again postponed his visit (1 Cor 16:5-6; 2 Cor 1:15 ff., see notes). He did indeed write at once (our First Epistle) and sent Titus to Corinth, but the letter makes little direct mention of the False Apostles—his plain denunciation was postponed to the Second Epistle, written perhaps three months later. We must believe that Paul had strong reasons for this mode of action. Two possible reasons may be suggested: (1) Perhaps the False Apostles were such accomplished hypocrites that even now Paul was not convinced that the disaffection was due chiefly to them. He was not a suspicious or jealous man—his cordial acceptance of Apollos's work at Corinth is itself a proof of that, and cf. Phil 1:15-18. He may have decided to wait for Titus's report before believing the worst about these men. (2) It is more likely however that he was aware of their true character, and that his delaying policy was due to that almost limitless patience which was as much a part of him as his fiery energy. He suspected that many Corinthians had erred from thoughtlessness and ignorance and were still loyal to himself at heart. It would be dangerous to force them at once to decide on the purely personal issue. It would be wiser to test their obedience on some matters of principle first, and to do this by letter in order to give time for reflexion and thus to lead them back quietly to their former attachment to himself. (See notes on 2 Cor 1:23; 7:12; 13:10.)

g The First Epistle therefore deals frankly with all the subjects of the second and third groups, but is reserved about the first. The points raised in the letter from Corinth are treated in the middle portion, while the first and last portions are about the subjects reported by the three visitors. Like the Epistle to the Galatians, it is essentially a letter of reprimand. On at least eight topics he condemns the Corinthians or certain sections of them. His tone is that of an offended 867f father, often stern, sometimes bitter or sarcastic. But he intersperses sentences of tenderness and humility, and several passages of his most moving eloquence. His purpose was not only to test their obedience but also to bring back before them the living image of himself which had been blurred by long absence and calumny; he wanted both to regain his authority and to re-awaken their dormant affection and devotion; he desired, as he expressed it later, 'that your zeal for me might be made manifest to yourselves' (2 Cor 7:12, see note). In two passages only it is clear that he refers to the False Apostles (chh 4 and 9). Did these vehement words burst from him in spite of himself contrary to his intention? We cannot tell, but we can well believe that they were written 'out of much affliction and anguish of heart . . . with many tears' (2 Cor 2:4).

b As Apollos was unable to go to Corinth, his first idea was to ask Timothy, who was then in Macedonia, to go on there (4:17; 16:10), but Titus, an older and more experienced assistant, seems to have arrived at Ephesus unexpectedly after the letter was finished, and it was he who actually went as Paul's deputy, either with the three Corinthians or soon after them. Timothy, as far as we know, never came to Corinth till he accompanied Paul there later in the year.

868a G. Value of the Epistle—Certain passages in the epistle, above all chh 13 and 15, are probably, to the average man, the most familiar things in all St Paul's writings, and well-known phrases meet us everywhere. For its variety of precious matter it is surely unequalled among all the letters, because besides its doctrinal and spiritual value it is a most important historical document.

b As regards doctrine, it contains St Paul's fullest exposition of the organic unity of Christ's church as his mystical body (ch 12), a subject which appears under other aspects in many places. It also has his fullest passages on the Resurrection (ch 15), on the Holy Eucharist (11:17-34) and on Christian chastity (chh 6 and 7). The supernatural character of the whole Christian religion, founded and maintained by superior Divine wisdom and strength, is insisted on at the beginning (1:18-3:2).

e To the ordinary Catholic reader the letter holds out spiritual and devotional treasures of the highest kind. First of all, there are the grand outstanding passages—on the wisdom of the Cross (1:18-2:8), Apostolic renunciation (4:9-14), the foundation of chastity (6:15-20), detachment from the world (7:29-32), consideration for weaker Christians (8:11-13 and 9:19-22), charity (13) the resurrection (15:35-58). Although Paul wrote to meet temporary emergencies which are only half understood by us, he dealt with them in the light of eternal principles, so that his words outlast their occasion. He solves every passing problem by looking to Christ and considering the union of the soul to him. Besides these longer passages, nearly all sections of the letter frequently contain weighty and profound sentences, e.g. to take a page at random: 'All things are yours' (3:21), 'he that judgeth me is the Lord' (4:4), 'What hast thou that thou hast not received' (4:7), etc. A great part of the spiritual value of the epistle comes from its revelation of the author's personality, his wonderful union of tenderness and indomitable courage, of practical sense and high speculation. In this epistle there is one outstanding passage (9:14-27) and some others of note (2:1-6; 3:3-8; 4:14-21; 14:17-19; 16:15-18). But every chapter and every section of it bears the mark of its writer—those trumpet-notes, as St John Chrysostom calls them—down to the very last sentences, than which nothing is more characteristic.

g As a historical document it is more valuable than any other epistle in the New Testament, for none of the others give us so much material for forming a picture of a Christian church in the Apostolic age, at a time of crisis, it is true, but such crises could not have been 868a uncommon. We see here not only the difficulties which we hear of elsewhere (internal rivalries, external temptations, invasions of false doctrine, etc.) but better than anywhere else we see the more prosaic troubles—correction of refractory members, social intercourse with pagans, marriage problems, irreverence at services, questions of dress, control of thoughtless devotees, etc. The view of this unmanageable material is in itself a proof of the superhuman power which the Apostles wielded.

f H. Short Synopsis—1:1-9 Salutation and Thanksgiving. 1:10-4:21. The evil of party-division. This includes the description of the true and false wisdom (1:18-3:4), a section on the true function of Christian teachers (3:5-23) and a direct complaint about the False Apostles (ch 4). Chh 5-7. Matters connected with the relations of the sexes. This begins with his complaint about the case of incest (ch 5), followed by a digression on litigation among Christians (6:1-11). Then 6:12-20 gives the basic teaching on chastity. Ch 7 deals with three questions about marriage: its lawfulness (1-7), relations between a convert and a pagan wife or husband (8-24), and the marriage of daughters (25-40).

g Chh 8-11:1. The problem of social intercourse between Christians and pagans, arising from the question of the lawfulness of eating food offered to pagan gods. Ch 8 shows how this must be solved in the light of the Christian law of charity. This is illustrated by reference to Paul's own example (ch 9); then the danger of presumption is illustrated from Old Testament history (10:1-13). Detailed instruction for conduct, based on these two considerations, are then given (10:14-11:1). 11:2-16. Women are to veil their heads at prayers. 11:17-34. He condemns the selfishness, party-spirit and irreverence shown at the suppers preceding the Mass.

h Chh 12-14. The over-estimation of certain spiritual gifts, especially the gift of languages. Ch 12 teaches that all the gifts are from God and each one has its place, but only a limited place, in the church. Charity is superior to the rest for it is eternal (ch 13). Ch 14 condemns the way in which the Corinthians have misused the gift of languages and lays down rules for its public use.

Ch 15. The resurrection of the body. He gives the evidence for Christ's resurrection (1-11) and the proof of the resurrection of Christians drawn from it (12-34). He then draws some conclusions about the nature of the resurrection body (35-58).

Ch 16. Brief directions about several matters, especially the collection for Jerusalem (1-4), his coming visit to Corinth (5-9) and the three visitors from Corinth (15-18). Then come his last greetings.

COMMENTARY

869a I 1-3 Salutation—1. 'Called', etc.: lit. 'a called apostle'—an apostle appointed by Christ. Elsewhere the phrase occurs only in Rom 1:1. But cf. Gal 1:1. He insists on the Divine commission which placed him on a level with the Twelve (cf. 2 Cor 11:5; 12:11) not in the same class as Barnabas, etc., still less in the same class as the False Apostles at Corinth. 'Sosthenes': he is inscribed here as nominal joint author of the letter, as Timothy is in the Second Epistle. A Corinthian Jew named Sosthenes had once been one of Paul's chief enemies at Corinth (Ac 18:17). He may have been converted and followed Paul to Ephesus, but we cannot tell; the name was common. 2. 'Called to be saints': lit. 'holy men called (by God)'. Paul's usual term for Christians is 'holy men' for Christians was not yet accepted. The call means conversion. See note on v 24. 'That invoke, etc.': 'That invoke in any place the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, their Lord and ours'.

b 4-9 Thanksgiving for God's Favours to the Corinthians

—He begins with a few cheerful words, so as not to start the letter with fault-finding. These words seem to show that he had good hopes of regaining the loyalty of a large proportion of the Corinthians—God's rich blessings to Corinth would surely not be in vain. 4. 'For you', probably means 'about you'. 'Utterance', i.e. power of expression, eloquence. 6-7. All that had been said to them about Christ (by Paul and others) had been proved true among them by various miraculous signs, such as those spoken of in ch 12—these are the 'graces' mentioned here. 7. 'Manifestation': the Second Coming of Christ (see 7:26). The thought that this might happen very soon was vividly present to the minds of early Christians. 8. 'Confirm', etc.: 'Make you steadfast unceasingly so as to stand faultless in the day, etc.' 9. 'Fellowship', etc.: 'To share the society of his Son' or 'into union with his Son'.

I 10-IV 21 The Party Divisions at Corinth—

e This is the first large section of the letter, setting forth Paul's first complaint against the Corinthians. Although he names several parties, and does not expressly name that of the False Apostles, this last seems to have been in his mind throughout, for ch 4 is directly aimed at it, and seems to be the climax to which the rest leads up. The chief sub-divisions are: (1) The False Wisdom and the True Wisdom (1:18-3:4). (2) The true place and function of the Christian teacher (3:5-23). (3) Paul's reply to his critics and rivals (ch 4). (See Introd. §867d.)

1:10-17 Paul states his Accusations in general terms—

d 10. 'Speak' etc.: 'Agree together', have no disputes. 'Schisms': 'Divisions'. 11. 'The house of Chloe': 'Chloe's people'. A vague expression: it may mean relatives, servants, or even friends. We know nothing of Chloe, not even whether she herself was a Christian. He evidently means he had first heard of these divisions from Chloe's people, but the three visitors would no doubt have told him more. 12. 'This I say': 'This is what I mean'. 'Of Paul': 'I follow Paul', am one of Paul's party. These would be the first converts at Corinth, and would very likely for that reason feel somewhat superior to the later comers. 'Apollo', e more correctly 'Apollon'. He was the Alexandrian Jew who had been converted by Aquila and his wife, had made converts at Corinth since Paul's departure from there, and was now with Paul. (See notes on Ac 18:24-28.) Luke there calls him an eloquent man—he probably had a command of that rhetorical style which was popular in the Greek-speaking provinces: thus he would appeal to a rather more educated class at Corinth. His converts therefore tended to form a group which felt some cultural superiority to Paul's. (See note on 2:4.) 'Cephas': i.e. St Peter. Our Lord f had said, speaking in Aramaic: 'Thou art a rock (kepha) and on this rock I will build my church'. His original name, Simon, had in course of time been supplanted by Rock, either in its Aramaic form Kephas, or in its Greek translation Petros. Paul uses both names. In view of this verse and 9:5, several scholars have concluded that Peter had paid a short visit to Corinth just before this. This is quite possible but cannot be proved. The 'party of Peter' at Corinth may well have grown up round some friends or converts of Peter's, even if Peter had never been there. Owing to Peter's long association with Christ and his unique position among the Apostles, such a party might feel a little superiority to both Paul's converts and Apollon's. There would probably be a strong Jewish element among them but it is most unlikely that they were Judaizers for (1) It would be the height of impudence for Judaizers to shelter themselves behind Peter's name. (2) We have no evidence that there g were any Judaizers at Corinth. (See Introd. §865d.) Nor is it likely that this is the party of the False Apostles: St Paul seems to admit (see esp. 3:22) that they had a right to use Peter's name, whereas he would have flatly denied such a right to the False Apostles. 'Of Christ': many have thought that Paul here 869g names a fourth party, who denied that the other parties were true Christians, and some have held that this 'Christ party' is to be identified with those who over-estimated spiritual gifts (chh 12-14) or with the party of the False Apostles or with both. But there is no other hint in this part of the letter that there was a Christ party, and no evidence that either of the two groups referred to laid claim to any such title. (Introd. C 1.) It seems best therefore to suppose that these words are spoken by Paul in his own person, as a protest against the use of party names: 'But I (Paul) am a follower of Christ.' This fits in well with the next sentence.

870a 13. 'Is Christ divided?' A division in his mystical body, the Church, is as monstrous as a division in Christ himself, in his real body or his person. 14. 'Crispus': the synagogue-governor whom Paul had converted (Ac 18:8). Gaius, more correctly Gaius, was his host during his next visit to Corinth (Rom 16:23). Most converts were baptized by his helpers, Silas, Timothy, etc. 15. 'That you', etc.: accusing him, not of using another formula, but of intending the converts to be Paulists rather than Christians. A slander of the Judaizers perhaps. 16. 'Stephanas' was one of the three Corinthians now visiting Paul (16:17, Introd. E). Perhaps he heard Paul dictating this, and reminded him of his baptism. 17. 'Made void': 'Deprived of its power'. Same thought in vv 18, 22-24 and 2:5.

b I 18-III 4 The Lower Wisdom and the Higher Wisdom

—Paul does not content himself with particular criticism. He writes two passages of much wider scope, as he loves to do. The first is a magnificent contrast between the inferior wisdom of Judaism and Paganism and the higher wisdom of God as revealed in Christ. Its application to the present case is deferred till its close.

1:18-31 The Lower Wisdom—Human wisdom in itself is an excellent thing, yet in fact many of its possessors have overlooked truths or fallen into great errors. Knowledge has its special temptations as riches and power have. 18. 'Word': 'Announcement', 'preaching', 'that perish', i.e. have rejected the gospel. 19. From Is 29:14. 20. 'Where', etc.: based on Job 12:17. 'Scribe', i.e. scholar, learned man. 21. God in his wisdom permitted the human wisdom of the world to become so distorted that it was no longer able to know him. 22. 'Both': 'The Jews on the one hand . . . on the other'. 'Signs': i.e. miracles. The Jews wanted chiefly superhuman power in the Messiah, power proved by stupendous miracles. They wanted an emperor mightier than the Roman emperor. A suffering and dying Messiah was a stumbling-block to them, i.e. they would not accept him. But the Greeks wanted a teaching which completely satisfied the intellect. They were impatient of anything unexplained or mysterious. They hated to accept any great truth on another person's authority. Faith was not in their line. Moreover the idea that suffering could do more than wisdom would appear nonsense to them. 24. 'Called': i.e. Christians. Our Lord said: 'Many are called but few are chosen'. But the Apostles usually confine the word 'called' to believers, and use 'called' and 'chosen' as identical in meaning. (See 1:2.) 25. 'The foolishness of God'—God's ways which the world considers foolish.

d 26. 'Vocation': 'Consider your call', i.e. your conversion. The converts were nearly all of humble station. 'Flesh'. A word of many shades of meaning in the New Testament: 1. The body. 2. Mankind. 3. Human nature. 4. Human nature in its fallen state, without grace or Christian truth. This is the meaning here. Practically synonymous with 'the world'. 27. 'The foolish things', etc.: i.e. things which the world calls foolish. 28. 'Base': i.e. 'common' not high-born or refined. 'Contemptible': 'despised'. 'That are not': Those whose very existence the world ignores, or perhaps those yet unborn but known to God. 29. 'Flesh': i.e. man—the second meaning given at v 26. 'Glory': 'boast', 'feel pride'. 30. 'But it is from Him that you have your being, through Christ'. Their (spiritual) existence, the life of their souls, is from God; they are his children, born by grace. 31. 'So that . . . let him glory', etc. Not a quotation but a summary of a long sentence in Jer 9:23-4.

II 1-III 4a The Higher Wisdom—The spiritual man, i.e. the true Christian, derives from God not only a higher wisdom but power and eloquence superior to those which the world admires. In proof of this Paul confidently appeals to their own experience of his preaching at Corinth. 1. 'of Christ': better 'of God'—i.e. the message about God's love. 2. Better: 'I decided not to know anything', etc. 3. He came after sufferings and anxiety in Macedonia, and disappointment at Athens, and may have been actually ill, cf. Ac 18:1-10. Yet St Paul's letters contain many passages which are marvellously eloquent. (See ch 13.) His preaching surely displayed the same gift, and we can hardly believe that he was unaware of it. The eloquence that he here disclaims must be the more or less artificial Atticising style, which was then popular and usually taught in the schools of rhetoric, the style of Wis. of 2 Mac, and of the Jewish writer Philo. Very likely both the False Apostles and Apollos could preach in this style. (See 2 Cor 10:10.) Paul's eloquence is more natural and direct. If he had any model, it was the popular philosophers, whose language is preserved in Epictetus's discourses (§ 602c). 'In showing', etc.: 'With clear evidence of the Spirit and of the Power', i.e. the power of God. He probably includes miracles, and also the power to read, enlighten, and move the heart. 6. 'We speak', etc.: our words are seen to be wise by perfect men, men fully under the influence of grace. The Greek word τέλειος (complete) can mean both perfect and full-grown, adult, and Paul likes to keep the double meaning in sight. (See 3:1-3; 14:20.) Here the word means the same as 'spiritual' further on. 'Princes' 'Great men' of all kinds. 7. 'We speak the wisdom of God, the secret wisdom which has been hidden', etc., i.e. the gospel truth, once only faintly revealed even to prophets, but now open to all who are willing to accept it. 8. 'The Lord of glory': either 'the glorious Lord' or 'the master of all renown and eminence'. 9. To be attached to the first half of 7. 'That eye', etc.: 'Things which eye, etc. . . all that God has', etc. Paul is freely combining two verses of Is (64:4; 65:17) and describing not so much the wonders of Paradise as the wonders of the new truth revealed in Christ. 11-12. An argument from human nature, to show that the Holy Spirit can communicate (to all those in whom he dwells by grace) truths inaccessible to ordinary man. (Note that later theologians usually speak of 'grace' or 'sanctifying grace' where Paul would commonly have spoken of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit—different aspects of the same thing.)

11. 'For among men, who knows a man's thoughts? Only the man's spirit, which is in him, knows them. In the same way nobody except God's Spirit knows God's thoughts'. 12. 'The spirit of this world': the false wisdom condemned in ch 1. 'The things', etc.: the new truths in all their meaning. 13. 'Not in words taught by human wisdom but in words taught by the Spirit, joining spiritual things to spiritual' (Or: 'interpreting spiritual things in spiritual words'). In either case the last words mean that the words are as spiritual, as devoid of human artifice, as the Divine truths themselves.

11. 'For among men, who knows a man's thoughts? Only the man's spirit, which is in him, knows them. In the same way nobody except God's Spirit knows God's thoughts'. 12. 'The spirit of this world': the false wisdom condemned in ch 1. 'The things', etc.: the new truths in all their meaning. 13. 'Not in words taught by human wisdom but in words taught by the Spirit, joining spiritual things to spiritual' (Or: 'interpreting spiritual things in spiritual words'). In either case the last words mean that the words are as spiritual, as devoid of human artifice, as the Divine truths themselves.

II 14-III 1—The terms change: the spiritual man on one side and the 'natural man' the 'man of flesh' on the other. 14. 'Sensual': 'Natural', i.e. worldly-minded. 'Examined': i.e. only a mind purified by grace can scrutinize, discern, and appreciate it. 15. 'Judged . . . judged': better: 'Examines . . . examined'. Same Greek word as in 14. Not that the spiritual man is subject to no authority, but that he must not bow to the verdict of the worldly-minded, the rulings of public opinion or of false science. 16. The first part is from Is 40:13; Who knows God's thoughts that he may lay down the law to Him? (as 871a false human wisdom is constantly doing). 'We', etc. : the spiritually-minded know the thoughts of Christ, which, as he clearly means, are identical with God's. The Divinity of Christ is taken as acknowledged by all. III 1. 'Could not' : when he was among them. 'Carnal' : 'fleshly', with the same meaning of 'flesh' as in 1:26. Even after their conversion they were only infants in the spiritual life, weak in faith, spiritual insight, and also in charity, as appears later. Only moderate demands could be made on them. This is what he means by 'milk'. 2. 'Meat' : 'Food', solid food of any kind. See Heb 5:12-14, where the same metaphor is fuller and clearer. 3. 'Envy' : 'Rivalry'. 'According to man' : In man's way, as distinct from God's way. A fourth term, meaning precisely the same as worldly, natural, and fleshly.

b III 4b-IV 21—Paul has given a profound and grandly-worded description of the two wisdoms. He now applies this to the Corinthians : their devotion to this or that teacher is a foolish human feeling ; the spiritual man must see in every teacher a mere instrument of God. But the passage goes on to speak of the value and place of teachers in general. Although Paul never names anybody except the three already mentioned, there are now signs that he is thinking of other teachers at Corinth, men of pernicious influence whose party is hostile to himself. These can hardly be other than the False Apostles. See Introd. C, D and F for the evidence for this, and the explanation of his reserve.

c 4b-9 Over-estimation of Teachers—5. 'Servants (of God) by means of whom you have believed (in Christ) and each has done only what the Lord gave him power to do'. 8. 'Are one' : i.e. in the same class. Both are mere instruments, one is as good as the other. 'And every man', etc. : 'Though each (teacher) will receive', etc. They keep their own personalities, even as instruments. 9. 'Coadjutors' : 'Fellow-workers with God'. 'Husbandry' : cultivation. The meaning hovers between 'farming' and 'farm'. So also with 'building'—the same double meaning as in English.

d 10-17 The Parable of the Building—Like all St Paul's parables, it melts and changes. The builders are the teachers, but the building seems to be first the doctrine, then (16-17) the Christian community. 10. 'Architect' : 'Master-builder'. 'Another' : perhaps loosely used for 'others'. The next sentence seems the first hint that some teachers at Corinth have been blame-worthy. 12. 'Precious stones' : or perhaps 'costly stone'—marble, etc. The first three materials stand for sound instruction, the others for useless or unsound. 'Stubble' : 'Straw'. The building may turn out to be either a palace or a thatched hut.

e 13. The best texts omit 'of the Lord'. 'For the Day will show it, for it (i.e. the Day) will be revealed amidst fire'. The Day of Judgement is sometimes called simply 'the Day' or 'that Day' both by Christ and Paul. If the house still stands for doctrine, the fire means God's judgement on it. 15. 'If any man's work is burnt down, he will be a loser, though he himself will be saved, but only like something which has been through fire'. He will be like one pulled out of a burning house, scorched but alive. The unworthy teacher will not lose his soul (he is not therefore guilty of mortal sin) but will lose his work and his special reward. The last words clearly imply some penal suffering, and as Paul connects it so closely with God's judgement, it can hardly be confined to suffering in this world, but seems to include the idea of purificatory suffering after this life, i.e. in purgatory.

f 16-17. The new turn in the parable is accompanied by a sterner tone. Not useless but pernicious teaching, grave sin, and eternal punishment are now the subject. It is most natural to suppose that he was referring to the men whom he later called the servants of Satan 'whose end shall be in accordance with their works' (2 Cor 11:15). 17. 'If any man is destroying', etc.—same Greek verb twice. 'Which' : 'Which temple', etc.

g 18-23 Continuation of the Warning of vv 4-9—The first words take us back to the Two Wisdoms. 871g Note that the first three verses may be addressed to the unnamed teachers as well as to their followers. 18 'Seems' : 'Imagines he is wise'. 19. The quotation is from Job 5:13 : 'He who grips', etc. ; Paul substitutes a more picturesque word for the Hebrew 'catches'. 20. From Ps 93:13, which however has men, not the wise. 21. 'Glory' : 'take pride in', by giving their whole devotion to some human leader. If they gave their first thoughts to God, all men and all creation, being God's, would be theirs too.

IV The Apostolic Office and the Hostile Party—The chapter strongly resembles 2 Cor ; there is irony, severity, strong emotion, evidence of unfriendly criticism, and a statement of the strange contradictions of the apostolic life. The simplest explanation is that the False Apostles were already active at Corinth, but Paul felt the time had not yet come for a pitched battle : these words were forced from him almost involuntarily by his bitter anxiety. Hence the obscurity of some sentences. See ch 9 and Introd. C (1) and F.

IV 1-8a The Apostles are answerable to God only—1

(cf. 2 Cor 5:9-11 ; 12:19). He condemns the presumption of persons at Corinth who have adopted a superior and judicial attitude towards him. 1. 'Ministers' : 'Servants'. 'Dispensers', etc. : 'Stewards of God's secrets', i.e. of the new truths hitherto hidden. A steward was usually a slave administering his master's property under orders. 2. 'Faithful' : it is his master's will that matters, not the opinions of strangers. 3. 'Judged' : called to account. 'Man's day' : a curious unexplained phrase. The least improbable view is that Christians were so used to 'the Day of the Lord' (i.e. of Judgement) that Paul could coin the phrase 'day of man' (judgement of men or of the world) as an antithesis to it. For the malicious things said by the party of the False Apostles about Paul, see Introd. C2 (§865h). 'My own self' : only a great saint can confidently leave his own imperfections to God. 'I live now not myself but Christ lives in me' (Gal 2:20). 4. 'I have no sense of guilt', i.e. for unfaithfulness in his apostolic work. 5. 'Hidden', etc. : 'Things hidden in darkness' : the secrets, good or bad, of each soul. 'From God' : (emphatic)—not from man. 6. 'I have diverted (or adapted) these words to Apollos and myself' : i.e. 'I have made us two the ostensible or nominal theme of my words.' (By these words he probably means the entire passage on party divisions.) This is the interpretation of Chrysostom, Lightfoot and Plummer. He means therefore that his own party and Apollos's (probably Peter's also) were not causes of serious trouble, and that the authors of the grave division were persons whom he does not choose to name—evidently the False Apostles. 'That in us', etc. : 'That you may learn from our case the rule "Keep to what is written" that you may not grow conceited for one man or another in opposition to somebody else'. The maxim 'Keep', etc., is otherwise unknown, and there is probably some allusion which escapes us. It may however have been used by Jews to mean 'Keep to essentials or to certainties' and may here be a warning against dangerous liberalism of doctrine, or the calumnies spread by the False Apostles against Paul. 7-8. Usually thought to be addressed to members of parties, but may include the unnamed leaders too. The sudden use of the singular in 7 may or may not be significant : such changes were common both in the Old Testament and in the discourses of popular philosophers. 7. 'Who has made you a better man than your neighbours?' 8. Here and in 10 the bitter irony is comparable to that of 2 Cor 11:19-20 ; 12:13. 'Full' : i.e. full-fed : they want nothing Paul can give. 'Reign' : 'You are like kings, and that without help from us'.

8b-13 The Heroic Patience required from the Apostles b—This passionate outburst resembles two great passages in 2 Cor (4:7-13 ; 6:3-10). It was no doubt 872b provoked by the effrontery and spite of the False Apostles' party. The moderate partisanship of the other groups would never have stung so sharply. 9. 'For God, I think, has kept us the apostles to the end of the show, as they do with men sentenced to death'. In the hideous sports of the amphitheatre a group of criminals was often the last item: they killed one another or were massacred. 10. i.e. you care too much for the respect of this world (of pagans and Jews). See §865f (also 10:14-22; 2 Cor 6:14-18) for evidence that the False Apostles allowed a compromise with paganism. 18. 'We are slandered and we answer with persuasion . . . the off-scouring of mankind'.

c 14-21 An Appeal to the Misguided and a Threat to the Stubborn—This mixture of tenderness and sternness ends the tempestuous episode. These sentences let us see Paul's mind as he wrote—there were many at Corinth whom he hoped to reclaim, but there were others of whom he hoped little. Compare the last chapter of 2 Cor. 15. 'Instructors': the Greek word usually means a trustworthy slave whom a father employed to look after his son at school or university. 'Not many': 'Not several fathers' (there can be only one) . . . it is I who have begotten you', i.e. by founding the church at Corinth. 17. Timothy had probably left Ephesus for Macedonia a little time before this letter was written, Ac 19:22. Apparently Paul had written to him asking him to go on to Corinth, where he was well known, for he had been Paul's helper there, Ac 18; 2 Cor 1:19. 'Have I sent': 'I am sending'. 18. 'Some, thinking (or declaring) that I am not coming to you, have become arrogant, conceited'. Perhaps Paul had already once postponed his visit (Intro. E) and the hostile party had become bolder and may d have made the delay a ground for slander. 19. 'Power': see on 2:4. Note the strong resemblance of this passage to 2 Cor 13:2-4, where 'power' is also used. 20. 'Kingdom of God': here (as in Rom 14:17) it means 'the spiritual life of Christians'. Usually in St Paul it means Paradise (as 6:10). In the Gospels it usually means the Church, on earth or in heaven or both. 21. 'Which do you want?' i.e. unless they repent and change, he will have to punish them. Cf. 2 Cor 13:2. 'If I come again, I will not spare'. In both places he seems to be addressing the same party.

e V 1-VII 40 Christian Chastity—The three chapters on the relations of the sexes form the second big division of the letter. The arrangement of parts is rather complicated (see Outline §868f) and there are some short digressions. The subject is abruptly introduced, as if Paul were afraid of saying more about the last one, but for a chapter and a half his tone is still sharp. This is far the fullest treatment of the subject in all St Paul's letters and indeed in all the NT. The heart of the matter is in 6:12-20, where the basis of Christian chastity is profoundly and magnificently stated. Pagans and Jews alike would think St Paul's standard fantastically high, cf. §§601, 596a f. Briefly stated, the Christian revolution consisted in this, that the highest standard of chastity ever demanded from women was now made obligatory on men also: the sexes were placed on a moral equality.

f 1-8 Laxity in handling a Case of Incest—Very likely Paul had just heard of this from the three visitors. The weight of his censure falls not on the sinner but on the church authorities, i.e. the priests or some of them. The position of this section, and the continuance of a stern tone, points to some connexion of thought with ch 4. It is possible that the slackness of the priests was due to the influence of the False Apostles. 1. As regards the incest, we cannot tell whether the woman's husband was alive or dead, nor whether the stepson and stepmother were legally married or not, nor whether, if married, they had been married before his conversion. Such a marriage was prohibited by Roman law (which was the law of Corinth) and by the law of most Greek cities, but might well be permitted in some communities in Asia or Egypt, from which these two may have come. There had been 872 such marriages in Greek royal families, e.g. Antiochus I and Stratonice. 2. 'that he': i.e. till he should be removed. A question-mark should probably be placed at the end. 4-5. This is the sentence mentioned in v 3—excommunication. We may be sure that Paul knew that gentler methods were useless. 4. This v should end with a comma, and 'in the name', etc., should be taken closely with 'to deliver'. 'My spirit': he joins his authority to their act. 'With the power', etc.: the Church has power to act in His name. Excommunication was well known among the Jews, Jn 9:22. Its purpose always is to bring the sinner to penitence. 5. 'To Satan': the man's soul, deprived of grace by his sin, was already to that extent in Satan's power. He was now visibly expelled from God's kingdom. But Satan is probably here referred to as the author (by God's permission) of bodily ailments (as in Lk 13:16) which the apostles had power to inflict as punishment, Ac 13:11. 'Flesh' seems to partake of both the first and fourth meaning noted under 1:26, and 'destruction' will mean something short of death. 6. 'Leaven' (yeast) stands for sin spreading from this sinner through the community, like yeast in dough. 7. Just before the Pasch every good Jew carefully removed all leaven from his house and for eight days only unleavened bread was eaten. For the Christian the Crucifixion is a Pasch which has inaugurated a period of unleavened bread (i.e. sinless life) which must continue for ever. 'Christ', etc.: 'our pasch has been sacrificed—it is Christ'.

9-13 No Association with notoriously Sinful Christians 873a of any Sort—Some Corinthians had misunderstood a recent letter of Paul's. The three visitors had probably asked for further explanation. 9. 'the epistle' (not 'an'): no doubt many letters, now lost, had been written by him to Corinth during his three years at Ephesus, §866h. 10. 'Of this world': i.e. pagan fornicators, or 'fornicators in general'. 'Covetous': unscrupulous money-makers who stop short of crime. 'Extortioners': thieves and swindlers. 'Otherwise', etc.: therefore in a country nominally Christian one must sometimes associate with scandalous Christians. 11. 'But now I write', i.e. in this present passage. 'Brother': i.e. Christian. 'Idols': this implies that some Corinthians did still take part in pagan worship. See 8:1. 'Railer': one who reviles a man to his face; occurs again in 6:10. Both are lists of mortal sins. Perhaps some of the hostile party had been outrageous in their abuse of those faithful to Paul. 12. 'Without': outside the Church. 13. 'Put away', etc. Here the emphasis lies on the last words.

b VI 1-11 Litigation before Heathen Courts—This is a digression, inserted here apparently because the word 'judge' in the preceding verses has reminded Paul of it. Note the continuation of the severe tone—e.g. the phrase 'Do you not know . . .?' occurs six times in this chapter. This present fault is a failure in charity. 1. 'Unjust': i.e. pagans. 'Saints': Christians, cf. 1:2. 2. The redeemed will be judged, but will also be judges with God, Mt 19:28. 3. 'Angels': i.e. fallen angels. 'Of this world': secular questions, about property, etc. 4. 'Despised': if the Christians were all that they ought to be, the most insignificant would be sufficiently upright and wise to arbitrate in disputes. But as things are at Corinth, the sentence is hardly meant to be taken literally, as the next words show. 5. 'Is it', etc.: 'Are you so unprovided with a single wise man', etc. 7. 'That you have lawsuits . . . is in itself a defeat for you'. A play on words: The very existence of disputes is a defeat for charity, you have lost your case even before you go to court. 8. He turns suddenly from the injured party in disputes to those who, by sinful rapacity, provoke the disputes. And this leads him back to the thought of the grave sinners in general at Corinth, as at the end of ch 5. 9. 'Kingdom': i.e. Paradise. Therefore the sins that follow are mortal. 'Err': 'be deceived'. Implies that lax 878e teaching on this matter was current at Corinth and that many were slipping, if not already fallen. Nearly half the sins are sexual, and the placing of 'idolaters' in the midst of these seems a sign that the two temptations were closely connected in their thoughts at least. The work of the False Apostles seems to have contributed to this relaxation of Christian discipline, §865h. 11. 'Washed': i.e. baptised, and the two next words describe the grace of the sacrament.

d 12-20 The Foundation of Christian Chastity—The first three verses are answers to false teaching. 12. 'All . . . me': probably a saying of Paul's, which had been perverted at Corinth to justify immorality. (Quoted again 10:23.) In Paul's mouth it meant either 'everything not wrong in itself' (i.e. including things prohibited in the Jewish ceremonial law, etc.) or 'everything which the perfectly spiritual man wishes to do' for he never wishes to do evil and has no thwarted desires, cf. Gal 5:23; 1 Tim 1:9. 'Expedient': in the widest sense, including the spiritual good of fellow-Christians. 'I will', etc.: 'I refuse to be dominated by anything'. Difficult, but probably refers to his teaching that sin is slavery and grace freedom, fully set forth in Rom 6, especially 13-16. Cf. Gal 5:1, 13. 18. He quotes the poor quibble with which the impure of every age stifle their conscience: 'God has given us stomachs and it is right and natural to eat. In the same way it is natural and right to satisfy unchaste desires'. Reason alone will demolish this fallacy, but Paul prefers to appeal to revealed truth: eating will cease but the body itself will live in God's presence for ever. Therefore the body made for God must not be debased for present pleasure. 'Meat': 'Food'. 'Destroy': a forcible way of saying that eating will cease. 'For the body', etc.: an extraordinary expression—Christ subordinates himself, as it were, to our salvation. Cf. Imitation of Christ, 3, 10, 3: 'The parts are reversed: Thou servest me rather than I Thee' and St Thomas Aquinas's tremendous stanza, never adequately translated: 'Se nascens dedit socrum', etc. 14. Proof that the body is eternal and should be respected. Vv 15-20 are crucial: chastity is bound up with the mutual love between the Christian and Christ, and unchastity is unfaithfulness to his claims on us. Christian teaching here is as revolutionary as on charity, cf. §602. 15. 'Members': 'Limbs'. Christ animates the Church by grace as the soul animates the human body. Paul says 'your bodies' to contradict those who would confine religion to the soul. 16. Quotation from Gen 2:24, 'The two shall become one flesh'. 17. 'One spirit': it is chiefly through our spirit, the highest part of us, that we are united to God, but the whole man, body and soul, is elevated by the union. 18. 'Without (i.e. outside) the body': a natural exaggeration; the body is more deeply involved in sexual sins than in any others, even e.g. gluttony and drunkenness. 19. 'Your own': 'Your own property'; they are Christ's slaves, bought with his blood. 20. Good texts omit 'great' and 'bear': 'Come then, glorify God with your bodies'. A splendid final hammer-blow to the false Greek 'spiritualization'.

f VII is almost wholly devoted to matters connected with marriage. There is none of the sharpness of the last three chapters. The tone is rather matter-of-fact except for two somewhat digressive passages (vv 17-24, 29-32) which are more animated. For Paul's most impressive utterance on marriage we have to look elsewhere (Eph 5:22-33). But this is his longest passage and a most important one.

g 1-7 Marriage is Right and Natural—He answers a question in their recent letter, §867b, c. Vv 1, 28 and 36 seem to show that some Corinthians were inclined to think marriage sinful, a false doctrine taught by many later heretics and usually connected with the oriental idea that matter is essentially evil. The Jewish Essenes seem to have held this view about marriage.

1. 'It is good', etc. Paul's words, not a quotation from the letter. 2. Permission, not command. 'For fear', etc.: 'In consideration of the prevailing immorality'. 4. 'The wife has not absolute power . . . but her husband (shares her power)'. 5. 'For your incontinency: 'On account of your want of self-control'. 6. 'This': probably means all the last four verses. 7. 'Gift': The word (charisma) means a special grace to carry out a good work, to consecrate to God a married life no less than a celibate life. See 12:1.

8-16 Separation, Divorce, and the Pauline Privilege—h—He begins with a restatement of vv 1-2. 9. 'If they have not control over themselves'. 'To be burnt': 'To be on fire'. Refers to unlawful desire and the torturing struggle to resist it, not to hell, cf. 2 Cor 11:29. 10-11. First he speaks of separation, which is discouraged, but allowed for grave reasons (adultery, cruelty, drunkenness, etc.), then makes it clear that the marriage cannot be dissolved. 11. 'If she does depart'. 'Put away': i.e. divorce. He does not explicitly treat of cases where a husband desires separation. 12-16. A married pagan who becomes a Christian has the option of divorcing the other partner who still remains pagan, and will not live peaceably with the Christian. It only applies to unbaptized persons, and of course is useless if it clashes with civil law, as it would in many modern countries. (In ancient countries civil divorce was much easier than among us.) Although a divorce (not separation), it does not dissolve a sacramental marriage, for unbaptized persons cannot receive as sacrament. 12. Omit 'for'. 'The rest', i.e. those not included under 8 and 10, 'I say, not the Lord': Paul had not heard of any pronouncement of Christ on this subject. It does not mean that the rule which follows is only a private opinion of Paul's. He speaks as an apostle, authorized to decide in Christ's name. 14. 'Sanctified by' (better 'through'): a strong expression, for there can be no question of sanctifying grace; it can only mean that the unbeliever's tolerance brings a blessing which will make his conversion easier. 'Should': 'Would be'. Evidently the pagan partner allows the children to be brought up as Christians. 15. 'In peace': 'It is to peace that God has called us'; i.e. the purpose of our conversion is to increase peace and harmony not to disturb it. 'Call': same sense as in 1:2, 26, etc. 16. An equally probable translation is: 'How knowest thou, O wife?—thou mayest save thy husband'—to be taken closely with what precedes.

17-24 Conversion should cause only Necessary Changes, 874a no more—Few passages show Paul's solid common-sense so well. It is he who calls conversion a new birth, etc. The inevitable change caused by it was enormous, suppression of life-long habits and pursuit of an ideal unimagined before. But once that was secured, tolerance was to be shown to everything that was not wrong in itself, though perhaps liable to abuse. Therefore war, slavery, taxation, property, etc., are tolerated. Where sin is in question, Christianity brings 'not peace, but a sword'. But in all else 'it is to peace that God has called us'. Hence Christianity is at once revolutionary and conservative, and has been both praised and reviled under either name. 18. 'Called': i.e. converted. 'Procure', etc. Some Jews who wished to mix freely in pagan society (athletics, etc.) disguised their circumcision by a surgical operation—practically a denial of their religion. 19. 'Nothing': an emphatic statement that the Jewish ceremonial laws had been abolished. 'But the observance . . . is everything': he means all the commandments in force under Christianity. 20. 'Calling': (note the double sense of 'call') 'in the same state of life in which he was converted'. 21. 'Care not': for a slave can be a perfect Christian. 'But if . . .': best taken as a parenthesis ('Yet, if you can obtain your freedom, choose that rather'). Others think that Paul advises him to remain a slave even if he might be free. This seems an unreasonable demand: man's desire for freedom is natural, and slavery might be a great obstacle to religion. 22. 'Freeman': 'Freedman'; emancipated 874b slave. 23. 'Bought . . .': same words as 6:20. Christ has now a greater right over the slaves than their masters have; therefore they must serve these masters chiefly for Christ's sake: in this way they will not be 'slaves of men'. Paul's great passages on masters and slaves are in Eph 6:5 f. and Col 3:22 f. 24. 'With God': 'In God's sight'.

c 25-40 For the Sake of God's Service Celibacy is Preferable to Marriage—This is the main theme, but 29-32a have a wider scope and 36-38 deal with a special application, advice to a father about his daughters' marriage.

25-28 Main Theme—25. 'Virgins': i.e. probably unmarried girls. The Corinthians had asked for directions on this subject in their letter, §867c, and Paul eventually gives them in 36-38. But he decides to use this opportunity to deal with the whole subject of celibacy and marriage. 'No commandment . . .': see note on v 12 above. 'Faithful': probably worthy of trust, i.e. 'as one whom God in his mercy has deemed worthy of trust'. The trust is the Apostolic office. Cf. 1 Thess 2:4. 26. 'Because of the present distress': for the meaning see v 29. 'So to be': i.e. to be unmarried. 'Loosed from . . .': rather awkward expression for 'without a wife', i.e. bachelor or widower. This and 33 show that he has both sexes in view. 28. 'Tribulation': see 29. 'I spare you': The 'I' is emphatic. 'But I, for my part, would spare you (this tribulation)'; they would escape it if they took his advice.

d 29-32a The Need of Detachment from the World—Three reasons for this need seem to be in Paul's mind: (1) The growing hostility of the pagan world. Hitherto only the Jews had been consistently hostile, but Paul probably foresaw bitter opposition from pagan masses and their governors. This is most likely the distress (26) and tribulation (28) already spoken of. An unmarried person is better able to bear persecution, private or public. (2) The possibility of an early Second Coming of Christ. Many non-Catholics believe that Paul was convinced that Christ would come in the next few years—a rash inference from passages like this one. He knew no more than we do, but whereas we unreasonably ignore the possibility, it was always vividly present to him. See his warning against too confident expectation of it (2 Thess 2:1 f.) written some years before this. (3) The shortness and precariousness of human life. 29-31. Not a plea for neglecting earthly concerns, but for concentration on God's service and for treating other things as of secondary (but real) interest. 29. 'This is what I mean'. 30. 'weep . . . rejoice': i.e. men must take earthly sorrows and joys more lightly than they once did. 31. 'Like men who do not use it up' (not like men who owned it and could never be deprived of it). 'Fashion': splendour, pomp. 32a. 'Solicitude': the same word as Mt 6:25, 'Be not solicitous for your life . . .'.

f 32b-35 Continuation of the Main Theme—He now applies the ideas of the last few verses to the question of marriage. 32. 'Is solicitous', etc.: i.e. if he so desires. It is this desire alone that places celibacy above marriage. Without it celibacy has every chance of being on a lower level than married life, more self-centred and self-indulgent, and many do in fact choose it for this reason. Motive is everything. 32-34 are the core of this half-chapter. 33. 'Is solicitous': i.e. is liable to be so. 'Divided': finds it difficult to put God's service first. 35. 'Snare': lit. noose or halter. Probably he means that his words are a counsel and must not be taken as a precept (cf. v 2), he does not wish to create unnecessary difficulties for them. 'Impediment': 'distraction'.

g 36-38 Advice to Fathers of Unmarried Daughters—It was the universal custom, even among the Romans, that the parents chose husbands for their daughters. Christianity tolerated this custom (which is contrary to natural human right) for the sake of peace, just as it accepted slavery, etc. (see 17-24 supra and §602a), and Paul therefore recognizes the father's right also to keep his daughter unmarried for her spiritual good.

Great efforts have been made to prove that the man here concerned is not her father but her fiancé or else a 'spiritual husband', but there is no respectable evidence for this, and the use of γαμίζω (give in marriage) in 38 seems decisive against it. 36. 'If a man thinks he is treating his unmarried daughter unhandsonably (or unfairly)'. 'Above the age': probably means 'of marriageable age'. 'If she marry': 'Let them marry'. 37. 'Necessity . . . power', etc.: probably mean that he is not compelled to give her in marriage by inability to make provision for her otherwise.

39-40 Conclusion of the Main Theme—39. The words 'by the law' have crept in erroneously from Rom 7:2. 'Die': 'Falls asleep'. 'In the Lord': i.e. she must marry a Christian. The whole verse of course is equally applicable to men. 40. 'I too think that I have . . .': i.e. 'I as well as others have authority to speak in Christ's name'. It seems an ironical understatement, aimed at some persons at Corinth who falsely claimed such authority—very likely the False Apostles.

VIII 1-XI 1 Social Intercourse with Pagans— 875a

This is the real scope of the third large section of the letter, though it deals primarily only with the question: May a Christian eat food which has been offered to pagan gods? Paul's answer is: Yes, provided it can be done without injury to two Christian duties: (1) The duty of consideration for over-scrupulous Christians (8:7-9:22). (2) The duty of vigilant avoidance of any participation in pagan worship (9:23-10:13). Paul ends by giving some detailed directions (10:14-11:1). The primary question itself is of no practical importance to us, but the principles invoked by Paul are eternal and living. Passion, sternness, and irony appear again, and we hear of Christians hostile to himself (9:3)—signs, as it seems, that the party of the False Apostles is involved, §865 and note on 8:1-6.

It was a question of great importance to the Corinthian Christians. Sacrificial meat would be served at all public dinners and at many, perhaps most, private dinner-parties given by pagans (see §600h). A Christian slave in a pagan household would often be offered such meat, and holders of public offices would be expected on certain ceremonial occasions not only to eat it but to take part in the sacrifice. Were Christians absolutely bound to abstention, which might often involve refusing a friend's invitation, angering a master, etc.? Were they bound to avoid butchers who dealt in sacrificial meat? (See 10:25.)

VIII 1-6 The Argument for Complete Freedom to eat —It seems clear that this question had been put to St Paul in the letter from Corinth, and backed with this argument. We gather that there were many at Corinth who prided themselves on their enlightened and rational attitude towards paganism, their freedom from superstitious scruples. They used 'knowledge' as a catchword, and probably also 'liberty' and 'power'. Paul accepts their argument in itself, but shows that in applying it they offend against charity. It seems likely that the argument was put forth or encouraged by the False Apostles, and that they were pushing it very far, using it to justify participation in pagan worship. This seems to be hinted at in 10:7-8, 14-21. 1. 'Knowledge': used with some irony throughout the chapter, most clear in vv 10-11. 'Edifieth': 'builds up', i.e. strengthens and enlarges our spiritual life. An OT expression often used by Paul, connected with the idea that the soul and the whole Church are God's temple, cf. 3:9, 16. The contrast between knowledge and charity is finely set forth in 13:8-12. 3. 'Known by him' (God): in OT language, to be known by God means to be approved by him, e.g. Nah 1:7—the knowledge that chiefly matters is God's knowledge of us. 4. 'There is no idol in the world': 'Idol' had come to be a synonym for 'heathen god', therefore: 'No heathen god exists'. 5. 'For although there are so-called gods both in the sky (sun and moon, adored by pagans) and on the 875d earth (i.e. the idols)'. 6. 'Unto him': he is our goal, destination. 'By him': probably refers to their regeneration by grace, cf. 2 Cor 5:17, 'If any man is in Christ, he is a new creation'. Such is the argument. Its obvious conclusion, not stated here, is that the eating of sacrificial food is perfectly allowable. As heathen worship is all empty mummery, the food is just like any other food.

e 7-13 St Paul's Objection and Contrary Decision—He allows the force of the above reasoning, but objects that they have overlooked Christ's teaching about stumbling-blocks (skandala): that an act lawful in itself may become even a mortal sin if it is foreseen that it will place difficulties or temptations in the way of a weaker Christian. This springs from the new and higher law of charity taught by Christ, cf. Rom 14:1-15:6, written a few months after this. 7. According to the best texts: For some even now, from long habitation to the false god, eat it as a thing consecrated to him. They cannot shake off their ingrained awe of the god, they feel like men taking part in pagan worship and sinning against Christ. 8. 'Meat': Food. 'have the more . . . less': 'gain anything . . . lose anything'. He means that all ordinary food is morally indifferent—obviously he would exclude Holy Communion (11, 27-29). f 9. 'Liberty': 'power', probably another catchword, cf. 9:12. 10. 'If a man sees you, who have knowledge, reclining at table in an idol-house': i.e. at a dinner-party given after a sacrifice. 'Emboldened': 'edified', see 1. Intense irony, for the weak Christian will in fact be undermined, not built up: he will be encouraged to act against his (erroneous) conscience, and all acts against conscience are sinful. 11. 'Yes, and so, thanks to your knowledge, the weak man is lost, a brother for whom Christ died'. 13. 'Scandalize': i.e. impel to sin. He is willing to become a vegetarian in order to smooth the way for weaker Christians.

g IX 1-22 Illustrations from St Paul's Own Practice—He wished to show that he had often abstained from lawful actions for the sake of the salvation of others. In the sequel he mentions many kinds of forbearance (19-22) but the first-named one (his refusal to live at the expense of the Corinthians) eclipses all the rest and is spoken of with such abruptness and vehemence that the passage seems at first sight to be a digression, which it is not. Somebody—in all probability the False Apostles—had denied Paul's right to maintenance (3-6) on the ground that he was not an apostle in the same sense as the Twelve. (See §865h, i and 2 Cor 11:5-15.) Here then for the second time the strength of his feelings makes him depart from his plan of postponing a direct clash with this party (see ch 4). Hence also some of the 'boasting' which we have in the Second Epistle, appears here also. Nevertheless the passage breathes the spirit of heroic charity, which for God's sake and the salvation of souls thinks nothing too hard.

h 1-14 Proof of his Right to Maintenance—1. 'Free': i.e. from the Jewish Law and from irrational scruples. See its use in verse 19. Perhaps it was also a catchword. 'Seen Christ': his meeting with Christ on the Damascus road is mentioned as proof of his Apostolic vocation, Gal 1:15-18. 2. 'Seal': their conversion proved his vocation, as the seal on an article would prove it to be genuine or somebody's property. 3. 'Examine': call to account: same word as in 4:3, where the same people probably are in view. 'This': i.e. the following verses. 4. 'We': in view of the singular in vv 3 and 15, it is clear that throughout this passage 'we' means Paul alone. 'Eat', etc.: i.e. to receive food and shelter from the faithful. 5. 'To carry about': to bring with him, and expect the same hospitality for her. 'A woman a sister': the first word can mean either woman or wife, the second is taken by nearly everybody to mean Christian here. Two interpretations therefore are possible: 1. A Christian woman. 2. A Christian wife. Although some of the Twelve Apostles (including Cephas, i.e. Peter) had wives, Catholic commentators have generally preferred the first version, taking the words to refer to devout women such as those who assisted our Lord with their money and service (Lk 8:3). Only here is it implied that our Lord's brethren (i.e. cousins) had travelled outside Palestine. Peter may have visited Corinth—see 1:12. St Paul's critics evidently maintained that only the Twelve had a right to maintenance. Paul says that all missionaries have it, and therefore does not here labour to prove his equality to the Twelve (Introd. C 2 and 2 Cor 1:5-15). 6. 'Or is it only myself and Barnabas who have no right to cease from working (for our living)?' Barnabas may have visited Corinth. In any case his name must have been well known at Corinth and he seems to have been disparaged by the False Apostles. Paul and Barnabas had not met, as far as we know, since their disagreement at Antioch five or six years before, Ac 15:37-9. 8. 'According to man': as a private opinion. 9. Quotation from Deut 25:4; see note there. 'Treadeth out': 'threshes'. The text of course had its literal sense, but the principle, here confirmed by God, applied a fortiori to men. 10. 'For', etc. 'Yes, it was written for our sake'. 'Receive fruit': 'receive his share'. 11. 'Carnal': 'earthly, material things'. Only necessities are in question. 12. 'Others' probably means some true missionaries, perhaps St Peter, etc., not the False Apostles who seem to have prided themselves on disclaiming the right to maintenance (see §856h, i and 2 Cor 11:12). But the meaning may be: Others, i.e. all Christians, possess the same 'power' as you do (same sense as in 8:9)—power to do anything not wrong in itself. 13. Refers to Jewish priests, who were largely supported by the use of the meat, bread, etc., of the offerings. 'Who work', etc.: 'Who carry out sacred rites'. 14. 'The Lord ordained', etc.: clearest in Lk 10:7, where he tells the Seventy to live on the charity of those they visit, and adds 'The labourer has a right to his wages'. 15-18 St Paul's Renunciation of this Right—St Paul's chief reason was the one given in 12—to prevent the Jews and others from being able to say that he profited by the gospel. In Corinth and Ephesus he insisted on earning his bread, but accepted gifts from the Christians of Philippi (2 Cor 11:8-9; Phil 4:15) perhaps because there were few Jews at Philippi to calumniate him. 15b 'Neither do I write these (present) words in order that (I may receive free hospitality)'. 'For', etc.: 'For I would rather die than—Nobody shall rob me of my boast'. The first sentence is broken off and left unfinished. 16. 'A necessity', etc.: i.e. I have no choice. The compelling force was twofold, love of Christ and fear of being held responsible for the loss of souls. 17-18. St Paul's thought as a whole is clear, but there are difficulties about single words, and our text may be corrupt somewhere. This is a paraphrase rather than a translation: 'If I did this (preaching the gospel) by my own free choice, I should deserve a reward. But if I have no choice about preaching the gospel, then I am like a slave carrying out a commission entrusted to him (and deserving no credit for doing so). How then am I to merit any reward? Only if I preach the gospel for nothing and do not make full use of the power that a missionary has'. By reward he means God's special approval.

19-22 His Renunciation of Other Rights—Putting aside the thought of his critics at Corinth, he takes a wider scope and in a serener tone shows how he had habitually assumed burdens which he was not bound to carry, for the sake of making converts or of smoothing the path of Christians. 19. 'Free', etc.: 'Subject to no master'. 20. When living among Jews, he observed the Law in his actions so as not to shock them, cf. Ac 21:21-24. He did not mislead them into thinking he was no more than an ordinary Jew. 21b 'To men who have no law I became like a man without law'. To pagans he made it clear that he was not bound by the Jewish ceremonial law (which repelled them) and moreover he tried to meet them on some common ground—a bare belief in some Divine power—or he 876e appealed to something already familiar to them, e.g. the altar to the unknown god. See his speech at Athens, Ac 17:16 f. 22. 'Weak': Christians burdened with scruples and doubts (as in 8:9). For their sake he acted as if he shared their scruples. 22b. 'That by any and every means I might save men'.

d 23-27 The 'Unfading Wreath' is worth the Uttermost Effort—This is really a bridge to the next section—the subject is no longer the salvation of others but our own. 23. 'Partaker': i.e. that I too may (with those for whom I work) share in its blessings. 24. Short parable from Greek athletic contests which were extremely popular throughout the eastern provinces. The only moral is: a man may be a Christian and yet not be saved, just as a man may run and not win. There is no exact parallelism, and we must not press the comparison. 25. 'Everyone who enters for a contest practises the utmost self-denial', in diet, etc. 'Corruptible crown': a perishable wreath (or garland). A garland was the usual prize given to athletes. At the Isthmian Games, celebrated every two years close to Corinth, the garlands were of pine foliage. 26. 'at an uncertainty': 'aimlessly'. 'Fight': 'box'. 27. Probably: 'I hammer at my body and make it my slave': he is speaking, it seems, of mortifications over and above the great inevitable hardships of his life. His picture is of a boxing-match between his soul and his body, in which the body gets the worst of it: 'a castaway': i.e. rejected by God.

877a X 1-13 The Need of Vigilance and the Danger of Presumption—This is illustrated from the ancient history of Israel. The section grown naturally out of the preceding: 'I myself do not feel secure about my salvation: neither must you. The ancient Israelites received great privileges, yet many fell into grave sins, including pagan worship and pagan vices. You are even now in danger of the same sins, and must not presume foolishly on your strength and rush into temptations'.

1. 'Fathers': Christians are the spiritual descendants of the ancient Israelites. 'All': Emphatic, and therefore repeated four times. 2. 'In Moses': For or into Moses, so as to belong to Moses. By the crossing of the Red Sea and by the presence of the Pillar of Cloud they were bound to Moses (i.e. became his followers) as Christians by baptism are (in a higher way) united to Christ. 3. 'Spiritual food': the manna, which was 'spiritual' as being miraculous and as a foreshadowing of Holy Communion. We might say 'mystical food'. 4. 'Spiritual rock': he means that Christ (as God) accompanied them in their journey. God is often called a rock in the OT. Later Jewish writings have a story about a miraculous rocky spring which followed the Israelites, but Paul can hardly be referring to that. 5. All enjoyed the blessings, yet many were lost. 6. 'In a figure of us': As foreshadowings (or types) of us. The past events had an inner meaning which looked forward to Christianity, cf. §§ 101e, 102, 383a, c. But another translation is possible: 'as examples for us' (for our imitation or avoidance). 'Coveted,' probably refers to o their desire to return to Egypt, Num 11:4. 7-10. Very serious warnings, showing how unstable many Corinthians were, and (probably) how pernicious the influence of the False Apostles had been. 7b. From Ex 32:6, just before the worship of the golden calf. Evidently hints that the dinners mentioned in 8:10 might become a step towards paganism. 8. Refers to Num 25, where the Israelites join in the idolatry and unchastity of the Moabites. 9. 'Tempt Christ': 'Tempt the Lord'. The serpents were sent (Num 21:5) after the people had grumbled about the manna. 'To tempt God' often describes an unreasonable demand for miracles. 10. 'Destroyer': probably refers to the plague of Num 14:37 which Paul ascribes to a destroying angel. 11. 'In a figure': or perhaps 'by way of example', cf. v 6. 'Upon whom', etc.: probably: 'to whom the fulfilments of past ages have come', i.e. what was dimly foreshadowed in past events has now become a reality. Christ has come and has founded his kingdom. 13. According to the best texts: 'No trial has yet come upon you except what is human' (i.e. ordinary, moderate). To be joined closely to v 12. They have no ground for self-complacency as they have never endured severe trials. And God', etc.: 'But God . . .'. A kind of parenthesis of comfort inserted in the midst of warnings, as if he feared to depress them too much. 'Issue': 'will provide a way of escape' (or perhaps: 'will appoint the outcome of it', implying that resistance will be possible).

X 14-XI 1—Having put forward his two guiding thoughts (see beginning of ch 8) St Paul applies them to the question of sacrificial food. Both thoughts are in his mind during the rest of the chapter.

14-22a There can be no Intermixture or Compromise between Christianity and Paganism—Here the second principle is more prominent. The Mass is set in sharp opposition to pagan sacrifices. Holy Communion unites the faithful to Christ and to one another (obliging each to consider the other's welfare) and separates them utterly from everything outside the Christian religion, every god or worship. It is on this separation that Paul here insists. The Real Presence is clearly asserted in v 16 and the comparison of the two worships implies the sacrificial character of the Mass. 14. 'Wherefore': looks back to 12 and 13a, not to the last words. 16. 'Chalice of benediction': perhaps two ideas: 'Blessed (by God) and the source of blessings'. 'We bless': i.e. consecrate. 'Break': in Ac 2:46; 20:11, etc., the Mass is regularly called the 'breaking of bread'. The Host is still broken at every Mass, but in early times one large loaf was used for the whole congregation, instead of separate particles, cf. next verse. 17. Probably: 'As the loaf is one, we, though many, are one body, for we all share in one loaf'. 18. 'Israel', etc.: i.e. the unconverted Jews. 'Partakers', etc.: they are united to the altar and therefore to the God whose altar it is. He wishes to establish the general truth that a worshipper is united to the power (good or bad) which he worships. 19-20a. 'What then do I mean? That what . . . is anything (different from ordinary food)? Or that a false god is anything real? (i.e. has any existence apart from the image). No. But that the things', etc. 20a is from Deut 32:17. He does not mean that each god was to be identified with a particular devil (this would contradict v 19 and 8:4) but that devils encouraged paganism in general, as it kept men in error and sin. In so far as paganism contained good elements, it was under God's influence. 20b-21. This means that they must not go to a dinner if it involves their attendance at pagan rites. Such attendance destroys the union of the soul to Christ, and unites it instead to something evil. It is substantially the same as his reason against unchastity, 6:13b-20. 21. 'The Lord's table': the altar of Mass may properly be called a table. So could the altars of pagans and Jews, Mal 1:7. 22a. 'Or are we going to provoke God to anger?' An echo of the same passage (Deut 32:21.). 'Are we', etc.: i.e. we shall not escape punishment.

22b-33. Rules about Sacrificial Food—Here the first principle (regard for scrupulous Christians) is dominant. Paul's solution may be called a compromise: Eat the food as long as you do not offend another's conscience. 22b. 'All things . . . me': this maxim which had been used to justify unchastity (6:12 note) had also been used to defend unlimited freedom about sacrificial food. 23. 'Edify': see 8:1 note. 24. 'Nobody must aim at his own good only but must consider that of others as well'. 25. 'Shambles': 'Provision-market'. Some temples would sell their surplus offerings to butchers, etc. 'Asking', etc.: 'Asking no conscientious (i.e. scrupulous) questions'. 26. 'For "to the Lord belongs the earth and all it contains"', (Ps 23(24) 1, i.e. though consecrated to some heathen god, the 87h food was still God's creation and good. 27. 'Asking no conscientious questions'. 28. 'This', etc.: 'this is sacrificial (or consecrated)'; The best texts omit 'to idols'. The speaker uses the respectful term customary among pagans, betraying the strength of his old pagan associations. 29-30. With bewildering suddenness he turns round and gives a sharp rap to some of the 'weaker brethren' who had presumed to condemn all eating of sacrificial food as sinful in itself. Such uncharitable judgements by scrupulous Christians are more fully criticized in Rom 14:3-4, 6, 10, 13. The scrupulous are not entitled to impose their scruples on others. 'Liberty' to eat sacrificial food. 'Judged': 'condemned'. 'Partake' of the food. 'Give thanks' to God for the food. Cf. Rom 14:6, 'The eater eats in honour of the Lord, for he gives thanks: and the abstainer abstains in honour of the Lord'. Tolerance and kindness must be mutual. 32. 'Jews... Gentiles': 'Jews... Greeks'; apparently means non-Christians in both cases, for they also must be considered, cf. 1 Thess 4:11. 33. 'Please': 'Try to please', cf. 9:19-23. 11:1. 'Followers'—imitators in his charitable self-denial.

87r XI 2-34 We now have two very strongly worded sections about order and decency at Christian worship. 2-16 Women are not to be bare-headed at Worship—St Paul affirms two things: 1. That the male sex has a certain right to precedence. 2. That therefore it is improper for women to be bare-headed at worship. To us this seems very illogical, but no doubt it was the general custom in the eastern provinces that women should always have the head covered in the presence of men, except men of their own family, and it was Paul's rule that established customs, if not sinful, should be scrupulously observed. Hence the heat and bluntness of his language. Modern custom is less strict, and St Paul would no doubt have written differently today. He was certainly no woman-hater, cf. Rom 16:12-13; Phil 4:3. If we call him unchivalrous, we must at least remember that he was the first to break the soil from which chivalry sprang. b Paul here speaks of women as praying and prophesying, but in 14:34 he says: 'Let women keep silence in the assemblies. . . . This has driven some commentators to believe that in this present chapter he is speaking of devotions confined to one household (family and servants). They point out that 'church' (i.e. assembly) is not mentioned in this section, as it is in 14:34. This view is certainly difficult, but other explanations of the seeming contradiction (e.g. that Paul had changed his mind by ch 14, but forgot to strike out this earlier paragraph) appear to be at least no better.

4. 'Prophecy': speaking by special inspiration, not necessarily about the future, cf. 12:10; 14:3. 5. The most common headgear of women was a portion of the outer garment, the himation, drawn up from behind over the head, § 603a. It was easily and quickly done. It could be made to cover the face too, but that was not usual. 6. 'Shorn': 'Let her cut her hair short'. 'Made bald': 'Have her head shaved'. 8-9. Referring to the creation of Eve, Gen 2:18, 21. c 10. 'Because of the angels': these words are a puzzle. All proposed explanations are very improbable. e.g. Plummer says: 'If a woman thinks lightly of shocking men, she must remember she will also be shocking the angels, who of course are present at public worship'. Can the angels be so sensitive about human conventions? Others consider the words a marginal note which has slipped into the text. This would solve the difficulty if only some positive evidence for it were found, but there is none. 11. 'Neither man nor woman can be independent of the other . . . for as woman was created from man, so man is born of woman. But all the creation is from God'. 14. 'If he lets his hair grow long'. It was the universal custom among Jews, Greeks and Romans for men to wear the hair short. 16. He silences any possible objectors by appealing to Christian custom: 'If any man chooses to be contentious, (then I say that) we have no such custom (of letting women pray bare-headed) neither have the churches of God'.

17-34 Disorders at Mass—In the Apostolic age the Mass was usually celebrated on Sunday evening, as it seems. The small congregation ate supper together before the Mass, in memory of the Last Supper and of the suppers at which the risen Christ had appeared to the Apostles. The food was provided by the richer Christians and the supper was called 'the Charity' (Agapé). There was therefore as yet no fast before Communion. The change to Sunday morning Mass and fasting Communion was made some time before A.D. 112, and may have taken place in the lifetime of the Apostles. On this subject and the Eucharistic doctrine underlying this passage see §§ 637b, 644h, 652f. By the term 'the Lord's supper' Paul here seems to denote supper and Mass together.

17-22 The Supper—17. Probably: 'After giving you these directions, I do not praise you for the fact that you come together', etc. The words 'do not praise' look back to v 2. 18. 'The church': 'an assembly or congregation'. In the New Testament the word never means a building. Mass was usually in a private house then and for long after. 'Schisms': 'Divisions'. Members of some of the various parties (including, no doubt, that of the False Apostles) gathered into exclusive circles at the supper, and did not share their food with outsiders. 19. 'Even factions' or 'cliques'. The word haeresis still had usually a neutral sense (group or party, Ac 5:17; 15:5, etc.) but Paul always uses it in a bad sense. 'Approved', i.e. by God. Party-divisions, though an evil, help to sift the true Christians from the bad. 20. 'It is not possible to eat . . .': the meal no longer deserves to be called the Lord's supper. 21. Two faults are condemned: 1. Each little group began supper as soon as their own members were assembled, without waiting till the whole congregation had come. 2. The food was not evenly shared out. Latecomers and the poorer members who belonged to no party would not receive enough. 'Every one . . .': 'Individuals eat their supper before the others'. Loose use of 'every' as in 7:2, etc. 'Drunk': Perhaps some natural exaggeration, caused by his disgust at their selfishness. 22. 'Have not': probably refers especially to slaves, who had no houses of their own. 'Do I . . .': 'Am I to praise you?' 'Praise you not': ironical understatement, again referring back to v 2.

23-34 Reminder of the Meaning of Mass—To convince them that this unchristian supper is no right preparation for Mass, he formally recalls to them the foundation of the Mass and its meaning. 23. 'Of the Lord': no doubt indirectly through the other apostles. 24. 'My body . . .': the best texts read (literally): 'This is my body which is on your behalf'. Doubtless we may supply given or offered to make the meaning clearer. 25. 'chalice': the Greek word is the ordinary one for 'cup'. 'The new testament . . .': the Greek word is translated sometimes covenant and sometimes testament. In either case the meaning is contract or agreement. The first contract between God and Israel was made through Moses and ratified by a sacrifice—it was the Mosaic Law, the Jewish religion. The new contract is the Christian religion and is ratified by the sacrifice of Calvary. Therefore 'in my blood' means ratified with my blood. 'Drink': i.e. drink this. We have four accounts of the institution of the Mass (in Mt, Mk, Lk and here), with slight differences in wording. Luke closely resembles Paul, but the other two have: 'This is my blood of the covenant'. The form in the Roman Missal is nearer to the latter though not identical: 'This is the cup of my blood of the new and eternal covenant'. 26. 'You shall shew': 'You proclaim'. Paul writes this to remind them of the close connexion of the Mass with Calvary. 27. 'Guilty . . .': the phrase seems to hover between two meanings: (1) Guilty of the blood (i.e. death) of Christ. (2) A sinner 878g against the body and blood, etc. Both are true: in Heb 6:6 every mortal sin of a Christian is called a re-crucifixion of Christ. Paul does not labour to prove to the Corinthians that the bread and wine become Christ's body and blood: he treats it as an accepted fact, both here and in 10:16 above. 28. 'Prove': i.e. make sure that he is worthy, examine and approve himself, cf. 16:3; 1 Thess 2:4. 29. The best texts omit 'of the Lord'. 'Not discerning': 'not distinguishing'—making no distinction in act between the Body and ordinary bread. Their sin was not unbelief but irreverence. 30. 'Sleep': i.e. are dead. The verse describes the penalties ('judgements') sent for their good, as he says in 32. The word 'sleep' implies a strong hope of their salvation. 31. 'Judge . . .': 'form a right judgement on ourselves'. 32. 'Whilst . . .': 'by being judged', i.e. visited with sickness, etc. 33-34. He returns to the subject of supper. 'Wherefore': i.e. because the supper is a mere preliminary to the Mass.

h XII-XIV—The general subject of these chapters is the right estimation and use of special spiritual favours (charismata), but the main fault which Paul has in view, the abuse of the gift of languages, is not set forth at the beginning, but postponed to ch 14. We first have two chapters on general principles.

St Paul groups together a very large number of things, apparently every Divine help over and above what was necessary for salvation: this may be seen by reading the four lists, 12:8-11; 12:28; Rom 12:6-8; Eph 4:11-12. We may make three rough divisions: (1) Graces for those holding authority, whether permanent (Apostles and all in Holy Orders) or occasional (teachers, evangelists and recognized prophets). (2) The strikingly miraculous powers (miracles of healing etc., prophecy, speaking in new languages, etc.). (3) Powers to enable ordinary virtues or duties to be exercised in a more perfect way (faith, works of charity, almsgiving, prayer, etc.): to these we may add the graces to enable men to be good husbands (7:7), good fathers, sons, masters, etc.

1 Some of these gifts are visibly miraculous, others are not. Some are closely bound up with sanctifying grace (the third group especially), others may exist without it. Some (especially the second group) were much more common in the first few generations of Christianity than they have been since, and seem to have been temporary helps given to the infancy of the Church. The gifts of this second group were being disproportionately valued at Corinth and against this St Paul makes a threefold protest: (1) All special favours (not this class only) are Divine, 12:1-11. (2) All are equally necessary for the good of the Church, 12:12-31a. (3) Without charity all gifts are vain, 12:31b-13:13. (See §§ 646-9).

879a XII 1-11 All Special Favours are equally from God—The Corinthians had asked him some question on this subject, cf. 7:1, 25. Introd. E. 1. 'Things': 'Gifts'. 2. 'Went': 'You were led away (or astray)'. 3. The idols were dumb, but they now have to deal with spiritual powers, both holy and unholy also, which speak through their human lips, and they need a rule to distinguish good from bad. 'Anathema . . .': 'May Jesus be accused'. A Christian uttering such words when he felt himself gripped by some force beyond his control must be considered as under diabolical influence. Baxter says that Puritan fanatics used to utter 'most hideous words of blasphemy' in moments of supposed inspiration. 4. 'Graces': here Paul has 'charismata' (plural of charisma, ordinary Greek word meaning 'favour') as an all-embracing word for these graces. 5. 'Ministries': i.e. modes of serving, duties. All the charismata are given for the service of the one Master, Christ. 6. 'Who operates always in all men', i.e. in all those endowed with the charismata. The doctrine of the Holy Trinity clearly underlies vv 4-6 for 'Lord' surely means Christ. 7. 'To this or that man however the manifestation of the Spirit is given for the highest good': i.e. God's mode of distribution is not haphazard but planned for the widest spiritual good. 8. 'Word': 'words', 'utterance'. The first gift is probably higher than the second, but the exact distinction is uncertain. 9. 'Faith' must mean some exceptional kind or degree of faith, the faith that could work miracles perhaps, as in 13:2 below. 10. 'Discerning of spirits': power to distinguish good inspiration from bad or pretended inspiration, in cases where such easy rules as that of v 3 were not applicable. 'Tongues': 'languages', cf. 14:1. 'Speeches': 'languages', the same Greek word as before. 11. 'Dividing': 'distributing'.

12-26 Parallel between the Church and the Human e

Body—It is Paul's longest allegory and remarkably consistent, cf. 3:10 f. and 2 Cor 3:1-3. Compare our Lord's allegory of the Vine, on a closely similar subject, Jn 15:1-8. The comparison of a society to the human body was familiar to Greeks and Romans. Here the spiritual meaning is present throughout. A threefold lesson: 1. Those who are without the more showy gifts must not be depressed or discontented, 15-16. 2. The most richly endowed are useless except as parts of the Christian society, 17-20. 3. The plainer graces are equally needed and nobody must despise them, 21. 13. 'Members': i.e. parts or organs. 'Christ': logically we should expect 'the Church', but Paul wishes to insist on the oneness of Christ and his church, as our Lord himself had done in his first words to him: 'Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?' cf. Mt 25:40; Jn 15:1, etc.). 13. 'Baptized into . . .': 'made into one body by baptism'. 'In one Spirit . . .': probably: 'We have all had one Spirit poured out upon us', cf. Is 29:10. 'The Lord has poured out upon you the spirit of drowsiness', where LXX uses the same Greek verb; Ac 2:17; Tit 3:6. But many prefer: 'We have all been given one Spirit to drink'. 15-17. To console those who had not received the popular and spectacular charismata. 15. 'Not of the body': i.e. not part of the body. 22. 'More feeble': the choice of this word may well be meant to recall the 'weak brethren' of ch 8, the ignorant and scrupulous Christians. 23. 'Honour . . . comeliness': probably refers to clothing. 24. 'tempered': 'subtly compounded or proportioned . . . giving all the more honour to that which lacked it'. 25. 'Schism': 'division'. 26. 'glory': 'is honoured'. The human body as a whole feels the pleasure or pain of any part. It ought to be so in the Church.

27-31a Application of the Allegory—27. 'Members . . .': probably: 'and individually you are parts (organs)'. 28. 'Doctors': 'teachers'. 'Helps . . .': 'Gifts of assistance, of government'. Probably refers to the local Christian office-holders, the deacons and priests, for these also had received charismata through ordination (note on 12:1, cf. 1 Tim 4:14). The priests are called 'presidents' in Rom 12:8 and 'shepherds' in Eph 4:11. In Ac and the Pastoral Epistles they are called Seniors (presbyteroi) and that was the name that lasted. No doubt some of the prophets and teachers were priests or deacons too. The honourable place assigned to prophets, etc., in these lists has led to the unfounded theory that there were unordained or 'charismatic' priests. (§§ 657-9). 31a. 'Better' or 'best, greatest'. He puts the gift of languages last but one in both lists here, and it is clear from 14:5 that the higher gifts were those that 'built up', i.e. had a greater social value (e.g. prophecy, teaching).

XII 31b-XIII 13 The Perfect Way—Charity— f

Charity is necessary for all, as a condition of salvation, but in a higher degree it may be a charisma. Both as virtue and as charisma it stands first in its class, for 1. Without it all the rest are vain. 2. It outlasts all other charismata. This is certainly one of the grandest passages written by Paul: an extraordinary combination of close reasoning and poetic language. The poetic form owes little either to Hebrew or to Greek 879f models, but is free and unartificial, the natural dress assumed by the exalted thought. The exact scope of Love is not directly stated, but it must be understood throughout in its full sense—love of God and of man for God's sake. Outside the Gospels the other great passage on this subject is 1 Jn 4:7-21, which in its very different way is as fine as this.

g 31b-XIII 3 Virtues and Charismata are Vain without Love—He takes five or six charismata in turn, the miraculous gift of languages being naturally placed first, as it had been especially over-prized. 31b. 'And moreover I can show you a perfect way'. XIII 1. 'Charity': the Greek word has much the same range of meaning as 'love' in English. 'Brass': i.e. trumpet or gong. 'Tinkling': 'Clashing'. He seems to choose instruments which cannot play a tune. 2. 'Mysteries': secret unrevealed spiritual knowledge. Perhaps this charisma is 'the utterance of wisdom' in 12:8. 'Faith': see note on 12:9. 3. 'Distribute . . .': almsgiving is among the charismata in Rom 12:8. It must mean almsgiving on a heroic scale. 'To be burned': he is probably thinking of the fiery furnace in Dan ch 3 or of the Maccabean martyrs (2 Mac 7) for we do not know that any Christian martyrs were burned till A.D. 64, some years after this. But the two best Greek manuscripts read: 'If I lay down my life for vainglory and have no love . . .'

h 4-7 Description of the Beauty of Christian Love—4. 'Dealeth not perversely': probably: 'is not ostentatious'. 5. 'Is not ambitious': 'does nothing dishonourable'. 7. 'Rejoiceth with the truth': i.e. shares in the joy which God and all good men receive from goodness and holiness. Truth here means practically goodness, cf. 2 Cor 13:8; 1 Jn 3:21; 1 Jn 1:6.

8-13 Other Charismata are Transitory, Love is Eternal

—The other charismata are bound up with the weakness and imperfection of our present state, and become superfluous hereafter. It now becomes clear that God, not our neighbour, is the first object of love. 8. 'Falleth away'; 'Is never done with, never becomes obsolete', cf. Lk 16:17. 'Prophecies': i.e. various instances of the prophetic charisma. 'Made void . . . destroyed': 'superseded'. The Greek word is the same in both cases and also at the end of v 10. 9. 'In part': or 'imperfectly'. The knowledge that he speaks of is knowledge of God, cf. 12 f. In this world our knowledge of God is indirect and imperfect, based on comparisons and contrasts to things which come within our experience. This dim picture will be abandoned when we know Him directly, 'face to face'. So also the prophet's shadowy foreknowledge is superseded by the reality, and the gift of languages is clearly useless after this life. 10. 'When . . .': i.e. in the future life.

880a 11. Our present life is compared to childhood. 12. 'See': i.e. see God. 'Glass': 'mirror', i.e. indirectly, by a reflexion, which in ancient mirrors (they were only polished metal) would generally be rather dim. 'In a dark manner'. The Greek word ainigma (riddle) is used in the OT sense of parable or comparison or figurative language. Therefore 'by means of (earthly) imagery'. 'Am known': or perhaps 'have been known', and there may be the incidental thought that God's knowledge means God's approval (8:3) though this is unessential to the argument. The conclusion of all this reasoning (8-12) had already been stated at its commencement, and is not repeated. Charity on earth and in heaven is essentially the same, differing only in degree, and is therefore an eternal virtue. 13. 'And now' seems to mean 'For the present' or 'meanwhile', for Paul himself intimates elsewhere that faith and hope are only for this life, 2 Cor 5:7; Rom 8:24: they naturally cease when we see what we have believed in, and attain to what we have hoped for.

b XIV 1-25 Comparison between two Charismata—Prophecy and Languages—The term prophecy seems to have a wide sense, including a miraculous insight into doctrine, morality, and perhaps the thoughts of other men. Ancient Jewish prophets had the same powers. As regards the charisma of 'tongues' (i.e. languages—one word for both in Greek) by far the best view is that it was the same gift as the Apostles received at Pentecost: the miraculous power of speaking languages not previously learnt. Its purpose, as Paul says in v 22, was the conversion of unbelievers, and to make it a frequent part of Christian worship, as had been done at Corinth, was an abuse. This is, in brief, the complaint that Paul makes. There are two other views about the gift: (1) That it was the sort of unintelligible utterance which we hear of in certain sects, Christian and otherwise, caused by unwholesome religious excitement—in fact, gibberish. In that case Paul would not merely have restricted it, but would very certainly have banned it. (2) That it was the use of unusual words (obsolete, poetical, dialectical, etc.) to give an impression of a lofty style. Objections: (a) We cannot believe God would inspire eccentricity and affectation; (b) It would not be unintelligible—its drift at least would be understood; (c) It would be entirely different from the gift of Pentecost, yet Paul uses precisely the same term as is used in Ac.

1-6 Prophecy is Superior because it benefits Others—

1. 'Rather': 'especially'. 2. 'Heareth': 'understands'. 'By the Spirit': i.e. by inspiration. The word spirit in this chapter seems sometimes to mean 'spiritual gift' or 'inspiration' especially in v 12. 3. 'Edification': cf. 8:1. 'Exhortation': 'encouragement'. 6. 'Unless . . .': compressed, according to Greek idiom. In full: 'I shall profit you only if I speak . . . in revelation . . .'. 'Doctrine': 'teaching'. Revelation and prophecy seem to mean the same thing, and so with knowledge and teaching. He seems to be thinking of the gifts of the prophet and the teacher, cf. 12:28.

7-13 Sounds are Useless unless their Meaning is understood—He argues from music and ordinary speech.

7. 'Distinction . . .': Or perhaps 'a definite arrangement of notes'. 'How . . .': i.e. how can the tune be known or recognized? 9. 'Tongue' here probably means the organ itself. 'Speaking . . .': i.e. wasting your breath. 10. Probably 'There are, I suppose, so many kinds of speech in the world, and nothing is speechless', i.e. no race (or perhaps: no living creature) is without its language or utterance. 11. 'Power': 'meaning'. 'I shall be a barbarian to him who speaks'. 'Barbarian': rather a contemptuous word applied by Greek-speakers to all who did not speak Greek, cf. Ac 28:2; Rom 1:14. 12. 'Spirits': i.e. spiritual gifts, cf. note v 2. 'To abound in them but in such a way that the church may be built up' (knit together, strengthened)—for which purpose the gift of languages is useless. 13. 'Pray . . . interpret'. From this and 5 it seems that sometimes the speaker in a language could not translate what he said.

14-20 Among Christians themselves (whether in praying or preaching) all Incomprehensible Speech is out of place—His argument is that as the human intellect is not exercised, the benefit cannot be communicated. 14. 'My spirit': either 'the inspiration within me' or 'the innermost part of my soul'. 'Without fruit': unfruitful, i.e. unprofitable to others. A truth may be grasped by some sort of intuition, but cannot be communicated without intellectual activity. 15. 'What is the conclusion?' or 'What is to be done then?' 'I will pray . . .': i.e. he will welcome every divine inspiration in his (public) prayer, but by the exercise of his intellect he will put his prayer into ordinary Greek words. 'I will sing': Compose songs or hymns (probably), cf. 26. 16. 'Otherwise, if you pronounce a blessing in the spirit only (i.e. in an unknown language) how are those who fill the place of ordinary members to say Amen to your thanksgiving?' The 'ordinary member' is the Christian who has no charisma or who does not understand the language used. The words blessing and thanksgiving were often used of the consecration at Mass (10:16) and may mean that here, but may also refer to the grace said at the preceding supper. 18. 'I thank God that I can speak (strange) languages better than any of you'. 19. 'In the church', i.e. in a gathering 880e of Christians. 20. 'In sense': 'in mind'. The gross misuse of 'tongues' argued a silliness worthy of children. 'perfect': 'grown-up'.

f 21-25 The Gift of Languages is 'a Sign to Unbelievers'

—21. 'The law': often used loosely for the whole OT, cf. Jn 10:34. 'In other tongues . . .': 'through men of foreign language and through the mouths of foreigners I will speak to this people, and even so they will not listen to me'. A paraphrase of Is 28:11: as the Jews had refused to listen to Isaiah, God says he will send the foreign-speaking Assyrians to attack them—the strange language will be, as it were, a Divine voice calling them to repentance. God has given the charisma of languages for a similar purpose. 23-25. He now seems to go a step further and to argue that even for unbelievers the prophetic gift is more beneficial than that of languages. 23. 'Unlearned', i.e. ungifted, cf. v 16. 24f. 'Convinced . . .': 'he is convicted by all . . . examined by all'. The prophetic gift enables them to penetrate into his thoughts and to awaken his conscience without necessarily betraying his secrets to others.

g 26-40 Rules for Orderly Services—We should naturally suppose that he is referring to Mass, and therefore to the first part of it, devoted to Scripture reading, exposition and exhortation, but some think another service is meant. Evidently great liberty of action had been allowed to members endowed with charismata, but we must remember that some of these were priests or deacons. Paul suppresses four abuses: (1) Too many gifted members had spoken at one service. (2) Members had spoken in strange languages without any interpretation given. (3) Several gifted members had spoken simultaneously on the ground that inspiration could not or should be checked. (4) Women endowed with charismata had been allowed to speak. 26. 'How . . .': the same phrase as in v 15. 'Every one', i.e. each of the specially gifted ones, or perhaps: 'individuals', cf. 11:21; 12:7. 'Psalm', which he had been inspired to compose, see v 15. 'Doctrine': 'something to teach': he had the teacher's charisma. 'Revelation': the prophetic charisma, cf. v 30. 27. 'Two or . . . three': at any one service.

h In course': 'In turn'. 'One': 'someone'. 28.

'Him': the member who wishes to speak in a strange language. 'Hold his peace': a drastic change in Corinthian practice. 29. 'Two or three' in turn at any one service: this is obvious from v 27. 'The rest' seems to refer loosely to all who had the gift of 'discrimination of spirits', 12:10. 30. 'The first', i.e. the prophet who is at the moment speaking. 31. 'All prophesy': seems to contemplate the possibility that the majority might possess the prophetic charisma. 32. 'The spirits': 'the inspiration is under the control of the prophet'. Therefore there was no need for him to insist on speaking here and now. The same could be said about the gift of languages. For this meaning of 'spirit', see vv 2, 12. 33. 'Dissension': 'disorder'. The best texts omit 'also I teach'. 'Saints', i.e. Christians, as in 1:2, etc. 34-35. This seems to be inconsistent with 11:2-16, where we hear of women praying and prophesying. See note there. Either ch 11 refers to more private devotions, or 'speak' here means preaching or instructing and does not include prayer and inspired utterances at the meetings. 34.

881a 'Churches': 'assemblies, meetings'. 'Subject': 'in subjection'. Women are not to exercise any authority in the church. Among men some authority, formal or informal, seems often to have been connected with certain charismata. (See 12:28.) 'The law': perhaps refers to Gen 3:16. 35. 'It is disgraceful in a woman . . .'. 36-38. These stern words refer to all the regulations just given in 26-35. They are aimed at possible objectors and opponents. 36. The Corinthian church has no right to set itself up as a pattern in opposition to other churches. 'Did the gospel originate with you? (i.e. were you the first Christian church?) Or are you the only ones who have received it?' 37. 'Whoever claims to be a prophet, or to have any spiritual gift, let him recognize that what I write to you is the commandment of the Lord'. If he disputes that, his claim to inspiration is false. 38. 'Know not': that Paul's words are the commandments of Christ. 'Shall . . .': better 'Is not known'—by God, 8:3. 39. Prophecy is encouraged, but the public use of languages is only tolerated.

XV The Immortality of Body and Soul—This is the last big topic of the letter, and Paul's last complaint. Some persons at Corinth were spreading erroneous views on the subject, about which his three visitors had probably told him. Two opinions are possible about the nature of the false teaching:

(1) That only the soul is immortal—the body perishes after death and is never raised up or restored. Such belief in immortality as existed among pagans of the Greek tradition was of this kind. They regarded the idea of bodily immortality as ridiculous, Ac 17:30-33. Such a doctrine among Christians would therefore very likely have a pagan origin.

(2) That only those Christians who are alive at Christ's second coming will receive immortality—those who die before that perish altogether. This opinion, though uncommon, seems to have been taught in some Jewish apocalyptic tracts (not included in Scripture) and some such view was circulating among the Christians of Thessalonica about five years before this, 1 Thess 4:13-16.

The first view best fits the chapter as a whole, and is much the more widely held. Yet some passages seem to imply that the immortality even of the soul had been denied, vv 19, 29-32, and it appears that the false teachers had not all denied the bodily resurrection of Christ, as we should have expected if they all held the first error only. It is possible that both kinds of error were taught at Corinth, and in that case Paul first directs his words at the two (vv 12-34) and afterwards at the first one. For the history of pre-Christian beliefs about immortality, see §§ 595a, 598f, and E. F. Sutcliffe's The Old Testament and the Future Life.

1-11 Evidence of Christ's Resurrection—This is a summary of what he had previously taught them.

1. 'Make known': for 'remind'—perhaps a sign of impatience. 2. 'If you hold . . .': most scholars prefer a different order: ('I wish to remind you) in what words I preached to you, if you hold them fast . . .'. 3. 'Received': from the other apostles. 3-4. 'Scriptures': refer to the OT prophecies, not to the Gospels, most of which were not yet written. 5-8. He mentions six appearances of the risen Lord, chosen no doubt because there were still living and well-known witnesses of them all, and omits others (e.g. to Mary Magdalen) probably because the witnesses were dead or unknown. 5. 'Cephas': Christ's appearance to St Peter on the day of his resurrection is nowhere described but is alluded to in Lk 24:34. 'The eleven': the best texts say 'the twelve'—a round number, for it must refer to the supper on the day of resurrection, when both Judas and Thomas were absent. 6. Either some occasion not mentioned in the Gospels, or the meeting on a mountain in Galilee described in Mt 28:16-18. 7. 'James': not John's brother, who had been dead many years, but James the Less, the cousin of our Lord, who was still alive and was seen by Paul about a year after this, Ac 21:18f. This appearance of our Lord is mentioned nowhere else in the NT. 8. 'Born', i.e. his conversion with his call to the Apostolate was a violent and sudden change comparable to a premature birth. 10. i.e. it is the grace of God that has made me what I am. 'More abundantly': he means that he has gained more converts. 11. 'I . . . they': something like 'laboured more fruitfully' must be understood.

12-28 If there is no Resurrection, Christ has neither risen nor conquered Death—The erroneous teachers admitted the Christ had risen—Paul argues in 12-19

881f that if they were consistent, they would deny it, and thereby deny all his work of redemption. It is in this portion (12-34) that the second type of error seems at times to be in Paul's mind. 13. i.e. any argument which they used to show the impossibility of a resurrection would tell equally against Christ's. 14. The resurrection was the proof of the atoning power of the Passion: without it we must believe that Jesus was merely a good man who had sacrificed himself in vain. (See v 17.) 15. 'Against God': 'About God'. 17. 'in your sins': their baptism was an empty ceremony if Christ's work had been a failure. 18-19. His opponents seem to teach that even the souls of dead Christians no longer exist. 19. 'This life': this present world. Its good things often have to be renounced for the sake of fidelity to God. But the verse may perhaps mean: 'If in this (new) life in Christ we possess nothing but hopes (i.e. empty hopes) we are . . .'. 20-28. If the dead do not rise, Christ has not fully undone the evil wrought by the Fall, nor has he been made king of all created things. 20. 'Firstfruits', i.e. first instalment or earnest. Originally the word meant the consecration of the first sheaf, but was now used much like ἀπαρώων, cf. Eph 1:14. 21-22. The comparison between Christ and Adam is often in Paul's mind (see vv 45-49 below, and above all Rom 5:12-21). 'In Adam': owing to Adam's sin. 'All . . . alive', seems to refer primarily to the spiritual life, and therefore to the redeemed only, the resurrection of sinners being ignored for the moment. 23. 'But every one (will rise) in his own rank (or class) . . . next they that are Christ's (will rise) at his coming'. The last-mentioned are the faithful who had died before Christ's second coming—this seems clear from 1 Thess 4:15-16. He again omits the resurrection of sinners as irrelevant. 24. 'Kingdom': 'His royal power'. This seems to mean our Lord's office of redeemer and Messiah, which ceases when all the redeemed are gathered. A mediator is no longer needed: v 28 seems to have the same meaning. God the Son of course retains his human nature for ever. 'Virtue', i.e. power. The three words refer to hostile powers, human or diabolical. 25. 'He (Christ) must reign (as Messiah) until he (God the Father) has, etc.' Adaptation of Ps 110(110):1, 'Sit thou at my right hand until I make thy enemies thy footstool'. 26. 'After all other enemies death himself shall be destroyed, for he (God the Father) "has placed ALL things under his (Christ's) feet"'. The last words are from Ps 8:8. Paul means that, if there were no resurrection, this prophecy would remain unfulfilled. 26c-28. Perhaps the best way to take these difficult words is: 'When he (Christ) shall say that all things are subject to himself (with the exception, of course, of him (i.e. the Father) who has made all things subject to him)—when, I say, all things are subjected to him, then the Son himself will become subject . . .'. In this way the first words of 28 are taken as a repetition of the last words of 26. 'All in all': everything in all creation, i.e. in all the redeemed creation there will no longer be anything alien or opposed to God.

1 29-34 Other Arguments for the Resurrection—29. For what good will they do . . . The meaning is very doubtful. Perhaps some persons at Corinth had desired to become Christians but had been overtaken by death before they could be baptised and some Christian friends had been allowed to undergo a (purely symbolical) baptism for them to show that the dead were counted as Christians. If so, the practice was soon dropped for fear of misunderstanding. Here again and in 30-32 Paul seems to be dealing with a teaching that dead Christians had perished. 30. Why do we (the Apostles) risk death, if our only hope of immortality is to remain alive till Christ comes? 31. Apparently when Paul was at Corinth, in frequent danger and bodily weakness, some Corinthians had said of him: 'He dies daily'. Paul now reminds them of these admiring words. 'I die daily—I call to witness your own boast, which I have to my credit, thanks to Christ

Jesus'. Cf. 2 Cor 4:11-12. 32. The phrase 'fight with wild beasts' apparently meant 'lead a hunted, insecure life'. 'If I have lived a hunted life (as the world would call it) at Ephesus, what have I gained by it? He was still at or near Ephesus. The dangers he refers to seem to have been owing to Jewish plots (Ac 20:19), not the great riot which came after this date. (Ac 19:23-40). It seems best to join the next two sentences. 'If the dead . . . let us', etc. The last words are from Is 22:13. 33. 'Evil . . .': a line from a comedy of the Greek poet Menander, but it had probably become a proverb. 'Bad company is the ruin of a good character'. It is here a warning against the authors of the false ideas on immortality. 34. Come to your senses, as you ought to do, . . . it is an ignorance (not a knowledge) of God that some of you have. There seems to be another scornful reference to the word knowledge as in ch 8, cf. Christ's words to the Sadducees on the same subject: 'You err, not knowing . . . the power of God', Mt 22:29.

35-58 Bodily Resurrection is not contrary to Reason— k The doctrine of a bodily resurrection is a part of revealed truth, an article of Catholic faith. Paul does not attempt to give here a proof of it, but only to remove some difficulties and objections. On the question how far the risen body will be materially identical with the body that dies, theologians differ: the majority teach that some particles at least will be common to both, but others (e.g. Billot) hold that this is not necessary.

This passage is an equally good answer to either of the two possible errors (see Introd. to chapter). Next to ch 13 it is the most eloquent passage in the letter, and shows the same wonderful originality of poetic writing used as a vehicle of close argument. It may conveniently be taken in three parts.

35-41 Some Parallels in Nature— l First, the history of a seed shows resemblances to both death and transformation. 36. 'Quickened': 'Brought back to life'. 37. 'Bare grain', i.e. without stalk, blade, husk, etc., yet all these will appear again as the plant grows. 38. 'As he will': 'As he has decreed', i.e. in fixing the laws of nature. 39-41. He shows that in the visible universe the words 'body' and 'flesh' are applicable to a vast diversity of forms, suggesting that there may be other and even more marvellous 'bodies' as yet unknown to us. 40. 'Bodies celestial'—the sun, stars, etc. named in 41. Though not alive, each has its own unity and a certain independence. 'Glory', i.e. excellence, perfection. 41. 'For star . . .'. The 'for' may indicate that he is quoting a familiar saying or proverb. 42-50 The Risen Body far excels the Natural Body— 882a This is inferred both from the preceding facts and from the resurrection of Christ. 42. 'It'—the body. 'Is sown'—dies and is buried. 44. 'Natural body', endowed with that natural life which we share with all men (good and bad). 'Spiritual body': not a body made of spirit, an immaterial body (which would be a contradiction), but a material body perfectly fitted to be the instrument of a soul elevated and transfigured by union with God, in short, a body like our Lord's body after his resurrection. 'If . . .': 'As surely as there is . . .'. 45. He begins a comparison between Adam and Christ, Adam being considered as type of the 'natural' i.e. unregenerate men. 'Living soul': (Gen 2:7) animate being. 'Quickening': 'Life-giving'. 'Spirit': the word implies supernatural life. 46. 'It was not the spiritual (life) that came first'. 47. 'The first man was from the earth, made of dust. The second man was from heaven'. So run the best texts. 48. 'Such as the man of dust was, such are the men of dust (in general)—meaning men in this present life, especially the non-Christians. 'They . . .': the redeemed after their resurrection. They will resemble the risen Christ, the 'heavenly man'. 49. 'Let us bear', etc. Logically we should expect: 'We shall bear', etc. (the natural conclusion of his reasoning) and one of our best texts in fact reads thus and may well be right. The Douay 882b text must mean: Let us live so that we may bear, etc. 50. 'Flesh and blood': human nature in its present frail state. There must be a change, to make this material body everlasting.

- 51-58 The Last Change and the Triumph over Death—51. 'Mystery': 'A secret': a newly revealed truth. The best texts read: 'We shall not all sleep (i.e. die) but we shall all be changed', i.e. those who are living at our Lord's appearance will undergo an immediate transformation (see end of 52). 52. Fuller description in 1 Thess 4:13-17. 'And we . . .', i.e. the living. The use of 'we' does not mean that Paul was certain that he would himself be alive, cf. §914g-l. 54. 'Death . . .' From Is 25:8, where the meaning of the Hebrew text, as Paul knew very well, is: 'He has swallowed up death for ever'. The Hebrew of 'for ever' could be literally translated 'in victory' and Paul here chooses to use the literal sense so as to join it with the first words of 55 which are an adaptation of Os 13:14. 56. Death derives its power from sin, for it came into the world as a punishment for sin, and sin would not be recognized as sin if the Law did not denounce it. The two thoughts are fully set forth in Rom chh 5 and 7. 58. 'Knowing. . .'. Their glorious future is secure even if they die before Christ's coming.

- d XVI 1-18 Directions about the Immediate Future—In twelve verses he deals rapidly with four practical matters, the collection for Jerusalem Christians, his coming visit to Corinth, Timothy's visit, and Apollos' plans.

1-4 The Collection—At this time Paul was organizing a collection to be made in all the churches he had founded (in four provinces: Achaëa, Macedonia, Asia and Galatia) for the mother-church at Jerusalem. (See Introd. E and §889a ff.) Besides relieving their needs, it was to be a practical proof of his own loyalty and that of his converts to the teaching of Christ, and an answer to the slanders of Judaizers. It had evidently been spoken of in some previous communication. A good deal more is said about it later in 2 Cor 8 and 9. 1. 'Galatia': we do not know when these instructions were sent. 2. 'First day', i.e. Sunday. 'With himself': by him, in his own keeping. It was not therefore to be handed in at Mass, apparently. 'Laying up what he can afford'. 3. More likely: 'I will send them with letters (from myself) to carry your gift'. 4. 'That I . . . go'. He did in fact accompany them, Ac 20.

- e 5-9 His Coming Visit—His promised visit had apparently been already postponed: see 4:18 and Introd. E. He now announces a further delay, caused partly by a postponement of his departure from Ephesus and partly by a change, as it seems, in his route—he was going through Macedonia instead of crossing directly by sea. This delay (which in fact amounted to some months) was a deliberate act, in order to give the Corinthians time to decide whether they would be loyal to him, 2 Cor 1:23-2:3; see Introd. F. 5. 'When . . .': best interpreted as a change of route, the same change as is referred to in 2 Cor 1:15-17, which his enemies used against him (§§883b, 885ef). 5-6. 'For I . . . abide': 'for I am (only) passing through Macedonia, but with you I shall stay some time perhaps'. 6. 'That you . . .': the 'you' is emphasized. 'Bring me . . .': probably included the idea of helping him with necessities for his journey. If he did not go to Jerusalem, he meant to go to Italy and Spain, Rom 15:23-24. 7. 'Not . . . now . . . by the way'. These words might imply that he had once already 'seen them by the way', i.e. paid them a short visit since his long stay with them. Such a short visit may have taken place—see 2 Cor Introd. D 3. But 'not . . . now' may have another sense, e.g. 'not as I originally intended' or 'not now, whatever may happen in future' (for he perhaps regarded this as his last visit—see Ac 20:25). 'Some time': he spent three months in Achaëa, most of it at Corinth no doubt, Ac 20:3. 8. 'Until Pentecost'. This implies that he was writing some time in March or April, for Pentecost is generally about the end of May. 9. 'A great and effective door', i.e. opportunity (for spreading the Gospel). 'Door' is a Jewish expression. 'And there are many adversaries'. The riot stirred up by the pagan shrine-makers at Ephesus probably took place in May of that year, and Paul no doubt could already see signs of coming trouble, Ac 19:23-40.

10-11 Timothy's Visit to Corinth—This proposed visit has been mentioned in 4:17. 'If Timothy come'. Probably: 'Whenever Timothy comes'. 'Without fear . . . despise him'. Five years before this, when Timothy first came to Corinth with Paul, he would have been hardly more than a boy. Paul feared they would still treat him as a boy. 11. 'Conduct him . . .': same term as bring in v 6. 'The brethren'. Erastus was one of Timothy's companions, Ac 19:22.

12 Apollos's Plans—Probably the loyal Corinthians had asked for Apollos, if Paul could not come. St Paul's desire that Apollos should go over to Corinth is a clear proof of his confidence in this friend. He knew that Apollos was not supporting the 'party of Apollos' at Corinth and that he was the best man to restore harmony there. 'The brethren', i.e. the three visitors from Corinth, see v 17. 'Not his will': Or perhaps: 'Not God's will'.

13-18 Last Messages—These relate largely to the three visitors, whose presence has not hitherto been mentioned, though one of them, Stephanas, was named in 1:16. About the purpose of their visit see Introd. E. Stephanas was probably a priest, and the other two may have been. 13. 'Watch': 'Keep awake'. 'Be strengthened': summon up all your energy, pull yourselves together. 14. 'Things': 'Actions'. 15. The best texts have only the name of Stephanas here. The other two have slipped in by mistake from v 17. 'The house' may include not only relatives but also freedmen and slaves. 'Firstfruits of Achaëa' (cf. 15:20). They were among the first converts made in the province, not necessarily the very first, for these seem to have been Athenians, Ac 17:34. Perhaps they were the first at Corinth. 16. This probably means that Stephanas and one or two members of his household were priests. Cf. similar language in 1 Thess 5:12. 17. Fortunatus and Achaicus may or may not have been members of Stephanas's household. 'Because . . .': i.e. they have brought messages of loyalty (and perhaps gifts) which ought to have come sooner. This seems however an ungracious thing to say at the end of a letter, and another meaning is possible: 'They have satisfied the need which you felt'—the desire felt by the better Corinthians to send their good wishes and perhaps gifts to Paul. 18. 'They have cheered my heart and yours', i.e. the faithful at Corinth have derived as much happiness from sending the messengers as Paul has had from receiving them, a kind and affectionate thought. 'Know . . .': 'Therefore pay them all respect'.

19-24 Conclusion—19. 'Asia': the Roman province called Asia, the western part of Asia Minor. Aquila and Prisca (as Paul always calls her) were well-known at Corinth, for they had been there with Paul, Ac 18:2-3. They had lived at Ephesus during Paul's long stay there. 'With whom . . .': Erroneous addition, not in the Greek. 22. 'Kiss': common salutation among friends in ancient times, Mt 27:49. Here it perhaps refers to the solemn kiss given at Mass, of which the Pax is a relic. 21-24. He writes the last few lines with his own hand, after dictating the rest. He had adopted this practice as a proof of the genuineness of the letters, as he explains in 2 Thess 3:17. 'Anathema': i.e. accursed, cf. 12:3. There should be a full stop after this. 'Maran atha': an Aramaic sentence: 'The Lord is coming'. Paul gives the same thing in Greek in Phil 4:5. Evidently it was one of those short Hebrew and Aramaic expressions which had become familiar even to converts from paganism, like Amen, Alleluia, Pascha. 24. Either 'My love is with you all', or 'May my love be with you all'. The second would be a wish that even the most hostile of the Corinthians should be reconciled to him.

2 CORINTHIANS

INTRODUCTION

883a Bibliography—See § 864a

- b A. Events between the Two Epistles—The troubles which occasioned the First Epistle are described in the Introduction to it. The letter was written at the height of these troubles, in the spring of some year between A.D. 54 and 57. The Second Epistle was written a few months later. St Paul's assistant Titus was sent to Corinth as Paul's envoy with, or shortly after, the First Epistle, armed with special powers for dealing with the crisis. The effect of the letter, backed by Titus's words, was profound. Many well-meaning Corinthians had been dazzled and confused by the specious language of the False Apostles (see 1 Cor Introd. C), and Paul's long absence had dimmed the impression made by his former visit. But now the stern warnings of the letter, joined to its marvellous eloquence, brought them back, as it were, into his very presence. Their old loyalty and reverence were re-kindled. His enemies were not silent however, for it is probably now that three offensive statements of theirs were heard: (1) 'His letters indeed are impressive and vigorous but his appearance is undignified and he is contemptible as a speaker' (2 Cor 10:10). (2) From the words in 2 Cor 1:12-14 (see notes) we gather that they said something like this: 'Paul writes about every subject except the one which he has most at heart—his desire to turn you against us and to destroy our influence. It is a shifty and dishonest letter.'
- e There was a grain of truth in the first part of this, which made it dangerous (1 Cor Introd. F). (3) They called Paul fickle and irresponsible (2 Cor 1:17) because he had again postponed his visit to Corinth and was going to Macedonia first.

But the time for intrigue and slander had gone by. A considerable number (probably a majority) had been brought to their senses by Paul and Titus, and refused to listen to Paul's enemies. They promised to correct all the abuses of which he had written. The man who had contracted the unlawful marriage was excommunicated. Titus was received with the greatest respect and humility, and was able to start the collection for the Palestinian Christians (2 Cor 8:6). He then set out for Asia by way of Macedonia. But a section of the Corinthians remained hostile to Paul, friends of the False Apostles, and men who would not give up the dangerous compromise with paganism, which the False Apostles had at least connived at. While Paul was at Ephesus in great suspense about the result of the letter, new troubles had broken out at Ephesus itself (2 Cor 1:8-10). This must be the pagan outbreak described in Ac 19:23-40, caused by Demetrius's agitation among the shrine-makers, and culminating during the great feast of Artemis (Diana) in May of the same year. Perhaps an attack of his chronic malady occurred also. After the disorders, he left Ephesus to await Titus at Troas (2 Cor 2:12). But anxiety and perhaps illness so oppressed him that he left a half-founded church there and crossed to Macedonia. Here, probably at Philippi, he caught Titus on his way and heard the good news. His joy was immense (2 Cor 7). Assured of the substantial loyalty of the Corinthians, he now felt able to deal plainly with the rebels there, and soon afterwards wrote the Second Epistle in order to carry the re-conquest of Corinth a step further.

- d B. Structure and Composition—Although the language throughout the letter shows signs of careful choice and deliberation, the structure is certainly odd, and this oddness is by no means confined to chh 10-13, as is sometimes said. Paul must have had two distinct objects in the letter: (1) To seal his reconciliation with the majority of the Corinthians, who had now re-affirmed their loyalty to him. (2) To make an outspoken attack on the defiant minority, to denounce their leaders, and by threats or appeals to win over as many of this party as possible. We may briefly call these two purposes Reconciliation and Controversy. 883d

But St Paul's recent experience (intense misery and triumphant use of it for good) had stamped on his mind a new and overwhelming impression of the meaning of the Cross for the Christian and the Apostle, the paradox of power in and through suffering, and this thought is so dominant throughout the epistle that his two immediate purposes are not only seen in its light, but are sometimes eclipsed by it. We may call this the Paradox.

He had decided that his controversial purpose must involve something resembling self-laudation, and this was no doubt one reason why he shrank from it and postponed the main controversial passage to the end, although in several earlier passages he seems to be on the point of embarking on it (1:12-20; 4:1-6; and above all 6:11-7:3).

Two feelings therefore, the mighty impression of recent events and distaste for the task of self-assertion, have so much interfered with the plan which he no doubt had in his mind, that this letter is the most confused of all the Pauline epistles. The postponement of the great denunciatory passage to the end is only one instance of this: the long digression in the story of his meeting with Titus (2:14 to 7:4) is at least equally extraordinary, so is the abrupt passage 6:11-7:3 which many radical critics want to cut out as spurious or misplaced. Indeed the first six chapters are the least orderly in the letter, much less so than chh 10-13. In some places the disorder is our gain: the great digression in the first half contains some of the grandest passages in the epistle.

The distribution of the three chief subjects may be seen from this list: Reconciliation: 1:23-2:13; 7:4-16. Controversy: 1:12-22; 2:17-3:3; 4:1-6; 5:11-13; 6:11-7:3; 10:1-11:29; 12-11:13:10. Paradox: 1:3-11; 2:14-16; 4:7-15; 6:3-10; 11:30-12:10. The paradox, as it figures prominently in both parts of the letter, gives it a real measure of unity, and also gives it its chief spiritual value.

C. Other Views about Intermediate Events—A new theory which arose during the last century was first made widely known in England by J. H. Kennedy's book in 1900 (§ 864b). For brevity's sake we may call it Kennedy's theory. It has been accepted wholly or partly by many scholars, both Catholic and Protestant. In Section B above I have noted and tried to account for Paul's postponement of his denunciation of the False Apostles to the end of the letter. The comparative calm of the first nine chapters is succeeded by four chapters of reproaches, irony, threats, and appeals. It is something unique in Paul's letters. Kennedy offers a different explanation, namely, that the Second Epistle is not one letter but two, which by mistake have been joined together in the wrong order: chh 10-13 are a severe letter which has lost its beginning, and chh 1-9 are a 'letter of reconciliation' written after the severe letter. We therefore have three letters to Corinth: (a) Our First Epistle, (b) chh 10-13 of our Second Epistle, (c) chh 1-9 of our Second Epistle.

Further arguments for this theory are: (1) If 2 Cor 1-9 belong to a third letter, then the letter referred to in 2 Cor 2:4 and 7:8-12 is not the First Epistle but the severe letter (i.e. 2 Cor 10-13). It is argued that the First Epistle is not nearly severe enough to fit the terms used in these two places. (2) An individual offender is mentioned in 2 Cor 2:5-11 and 7:12. It is said that the language used is inappropriate for the incestuous man of 1 Cor 5:1-5 (to whom it is traditionally applied) and must mean somebody who had been guilty of a personal offence or insult to Paul, and that this further implies that important events had taken place since the First Epistle. (3) This suggestion of intermediate events seems to be corroborated by five passages in the Second Epistle (mostly in chh 10-13) which seem to indicate that Paul had paid a recent visit to Corinth 883h and had met with opposition and disappointment there. This visit would be between the First Epistle and the severe letter, and the offender mentioned in 2 Cor chh 2 and 7 may well be somebody whom he had then met at Corinth.

1 Therefore, according to Kennedy's theory, the intermediate events may be summarized thus: 'About the time when the First Epistle was written, a party opposed to Paul (whoever they were) was gaining influence at Corinth, encouraged by some visiting missionaries. When this Epistle was read at Corinth, the opposition became open rebellion, in which a large proportion of the church was involved. Paul, on hearing of this, sailed from Ephesus to Corinth. He failed to quell the rebels, and one of them distinguished himself by some offensive act or words. After a short and stormy visit, Paul returned to Asia, and wrote a stern letter, the bulk of which is preserved in 2 Cor chh 10-13. He condemned the chief offender (this passage is now lost), denounced the visitors, and said he would shortly return and would excommunicate all who had not submitted. On hearing this letter, which was brought by Titus, the majority returned to their allegiance to Paul, and the offender was excommunicated. The visitors departed, if they had not gone already, and Titus was able to re-start the collection, which had been dropped. On hearing this news, Paul wrote a letter to Corinth, consisting of 2 Cor chh 1-9'.

884a This theory has three main items: (1) Paul wrote an intermediate letter. (2) Our 2 Cor is divisible, and chh 10-13 are the intermediate letter. (3) Paul paid an intermediate visit to Corinth.

The theory contains nothing which is irreconcilable with Catholic doctrine. It offers a simple and complete solution to one vexatious question (the character of 2 Cor chh 10-13) and on that ground one could wish to see it proved. But it raises serious new difficulties, as will be seen. Fifty years ago, however, there seemed a fair hope that further investigation might both increase the evidence for it and reduce the difficulties in its way. This hope has been disappointed. Painstaking investigation by many scholars has failed to add anything noteworthy to the case as stated by Kennedy, while the objections to it appear, after mature consideration, stronger than ever. It is now unlikely that any more evidence will be found. Kennedy's theory seems destined to remain an unproved hypothesis for ever. It has had half a century to establish itself and has failed to do so. It seems best to reject it in favour of a view which is at least equally arguable and has the support of tradition. Several scholars (especially Allo among Catholics, and Goudge, Menzies, etc., among non-Catholics) accept the first and third points of the theory, but not the second. But these two parts are at least as difficult to prove as the second, and in fact the whole theory is a unity and is essentially an attempt to explain the difficulty of 2 Cor chh 10-13—the second point is its chief attraction, without which it would never have gained such wide support. Without this, the raison d'être of the theory is gone. It seems best to reject it as a whole. We will briefly examine each part.

b The Question of an Intermediate Severe Letter—Cannot the letter referred to in Epistle II be Epistle I? Catholic tradition till this century has held that it can be, and this view is upheld by some very eminent non-Catholic scholars such as B. Weiss and Zahn. But all supporters of Kennedy's theory deny it:

(1) From 2 Cor 2:4 we learn that the letter was written 'in much tribulation and anguish of heart . . . with many tears'. It is said that this is hardly applicable to our Epistle I. But there are two passages (chh 4 and 9) which may well have been written in anguish and tears. St Paul wept more readily than northerners do—see Phil 3:18 and Ac 20:19, 31.

(2) From 2 Cor 7:8-11 we gather that the earlier letter was a stern and sharp-toned one. It is absurd to say that the First Epistle cannot be described as sharp and severe. On at least eight distinct subjects, beginning at the first chapter and ending with the fifteenth, Paul reprimands and censures his readers. Some of his expressions may almost be called ferocious. What modern bishop would venture to use language like 4:21; 5:2; 11:5-6; 14:23? If this is not severity, it is hard to say what is. It is true there are quiet passages like chh 7 and 12, and the two great poetical ones which have a perfect serenity (chh 13 and 15: 35-58) but half the letter has the note of reproof.

(3) In 2 Cor 2:5-11 an individual wrongdoer is mentioned immediately after the 'severe letter', and in 7:12 an individual seems to be mentioned as having been the partial cause of the letter. It is said that both passages clearly mean somebody who had wronged Paul personally, and therefore cannot refer to the incestuous person of 1 Cor 5:1-9, who is the only individual plainly mentioned in Epistle I. But (a) It is not clear that both passages of Epistle II refer to the same person. (b) The second may well refer to one of Paul's slanderers—see note on 2 Cor 7:12. (c) In the first passage Paul protests that they must not regard the offence as particularly directed against himself, and to take his denial as a proof that it was so directed seems highly precarious reasoning. There seems no good reason why the case of 1 Cor 5 should not be the one referred to. (See notes on 2 Cor 2:5-11.)

It seems therefore permissible to believe that the letter alluded to in Epistle II is none other than Epistle I.

D 2. Is the Second Epistle one letter or two?—The objections against dividing the letter may be briefly stated thus:

(1) There is no external evidence whatever in favour of dividing the letter. There is no sign in any manuscript or in any early writer that the two portions had ever existed in separation from one another. From its very first publication therefore the letter was in its present form.

(2) There is a real though not obvious unity of theme. It is the thought of the conjunction of grandeur and suffering in the apostolic office. This thought is explicit enough in the first part, but it is with us all through the last chapters also and emerges clearly in 11:30-12:10 (see B supra).

(3) Although the idea of peace and reconciliation is no doubt prominent in the first half, the sky is by no means unclouded: there are repeated signs that the trouble is not over, that there are still things to be set right. They occur in nearly every chapter. (See the notes on 1:12-2:3; 2:17-3:3; 4:2-5; 5:11-12; 5:20-6:2; 6:11-7:3; 8:20-21.) In particular 6:11-7:3 is noteworthy. These passages do form a preparation for chh 10-13. They are rumblings of a coming storm.

(4) St Clement of Rome, writing about A.D. 96, shows himself familiar with the First Epistle, but unacquainted with the Second. It seems likely therefore that the First Epistle was in circulation about A.D. 80 or earlier, while the Second was published many years later. The delay could only have been due to some fear that misunderstanding or discredit might arise from chh 10-13. But there could have been no possible objection to the publication of chh 1-9 if it was a separate letter. Must we conclude that the two letters were already mutilated and attached well before A.D. 80? That is not easy to believe.

(5) If the offender of 2 Cor 2:4-11 is not the incestuous man of 1 Cor 5, he must be somebody mentioned in the lost portion of the 'severe letter'. Again, if the change of route mentioned in 2 Cor 1:15-16 is not the same as that of 1 Cor 16:5, this change must also have been mentioned in the lost first portion of the 'severe letter'. But these reasons would lead us to believe that whole passages, not merely a few lines, had been lost—a difficult view when we consider the probability that these letters were frequently read to the church.

(6) The accidental combination of two documents!

884f generally leaves much more tangible clues than we have here. But if we once admit the possibility of editorial changes in order to harmonize the two parts, then the authenticity of every passage in the epistle is brought under suspicion.

(7) From 2 Cor 7:14 we gather that Titus's recent visit to Corinth was either his first visit or his first one as Paul's envoy. But 12:18 refers to some visit of Titus as Paul's envoy. If 12:18 belongs to an earlier letter than 7:14 it contradicts the plain meaning of 7:14.

(8) Several small peculiarities of language are more common in each of the two portions of this epistle than they are in the epistles of St Paul in general, e.g. the phrase ἐν παντί.

(9) It is not necessary to suppose that the last four chapters are addressed to the rebellious minority. They are aimed at this minority, and this is made sufficiently clear at the beginning (in 10:2, see note). After that the 'you' would naturally be taken as meaning more particularly those who were still defiant, though it is not apparently confined to these till near the end of ch 12—perhaps because a much larger number had once erred.

g D 3. The Question of an Intermediate Visit—Did Paul ever visit Corinth between his first long stay and the writing of Epistle II, and if so, when? No such visit is mentioned in Acts, but Acts is not an exhaustive history. The two questions must be considered separately. (1) Was there an intermediate visit? The answer to this depends on the interpretation of seven sentences in the two epistles. No less than five of these (1 Cor 16:7; 2 Cor 2:1; 12:14; 12:21; 13:1) are more or less ambiguous, and can be interpreted either as implying or as not implying such a visit. See the commentary on these verses. Of the remaining two passages, one (2 Cor 1:15-16) seems definitely against the visit, and the other (2 Cor 13:2) seems just as definitely in favour of it (see commentary). Evidence could hardly be more equally balanced. Either view seems possible, but if there was a visit, several of the above passages would show that it was connected with painful memories of some sort. (2) If we assume a visit, was it before or after Epistle I? If we place it before, there is no great difficulty, but if after Ep. I, then we are practically forced, it seems to me, to accept the account given of it by Kennedy (883i) which is improbable in the highest degree. How can we believe: (1) That Paul was defied to his face, not by a party but by the whole Corinthian church. (2) That Paul ran away from his rebellious converts or at least gave all the appearance of doing so. (3) That having retreated from Corinth he wrote a letter on the lines of chh 10-13, full of threats about his next visit. (4) That this letter subdued those whom his audible words had failed to move. (5) That Titus succeeded where Paul had failed. We conclude that if there was an intermediate visit, it took place some time before Epistle I (the view of Lightfoot, Sanday, and Zahn), perhaps a year or two before it, and was occasioned by some temporary trouble which was quickly and completely settled and has left no record in the New Testament. There must have been many such unchronicled troubles.

885a E. Value of the Epistle—Its doctrinal value is much smaller than that of the First Epistle. It is however of great historical interest, its spiritual teaching is immensely valuable, and for the biography of St Paul it is perhaps the most important of all his epistles. As to doctrine, the theme of the union of the church to Christ is here modified by the additional thought of the relation of the Christian minister (especially the apostle) to both, his authority and the conditions for its fruitful exercise. We may again recall St Thomas's words that the letter is about the Christian ministry, good and bad. There are important passages too on the purpose and meaning of the Mosaic Law and on the resurrection. Chapters 7 to 9 are of considerable historical value, but for the history of Paul himself the whole epistle is most interesting. Not only does it contain many facts about the Corinthian crisis, but also about his previous life (11:16-12:19). In addition, the lively feeling which here is given free and ready expression endows the letter with a pictorial or dramatic quality beyond any other epistle (e.g. 1:23 f.; 3:1; 6:11; 7:2; 10:10; 11:1; 11:11; 12:11). Unfortunately we have not the key to all the allusions and this uncertainty often repels the casual reader. As a spiritual work the epistle is surpassed by none. Its insistent theme is the efficacy of suffering in union with Christ. It is true that Paul is speaking more particularly of the sufferings of an apostle, but the principle is in fact the foundation of all Christian sanctity. This theme appears at the beginning (1:5) and remains with us to the end (13:4). Coming from the apostle's deepest conviction it retains an indestructible freshness. Two passages are of outstanding eloquence (4:7-12 and 6:3-10), but perhaps the most impressive of all is the autobiographical statement (12:7-10). We must also mention the magnificent passage on the hope of immortality (4:16-5:9) and the tender affection of the two reconciliation passages (1:23-2:11; 7:5-16).

F. Short Synopsis—1:1-11. Salutation, and the lesson of recent events.

1:12-22. Answer to two recent calumnies.

1:23-2:13. The previous letter and the repentant sinner.

2:14-3:3. Affirmation of Paul's Apostolic commission.

3:4-6:10. A picture of the True Apostle. The Apostolic office is superior to the ministry of the Mosaic Law (3:4-18). The Apostles are outspoken and fearless by God's power, though weak and afflicted (4:1-15). They can look confidently beyond death (4:16-5:10). Paul again protests his sincerity and the greatness of the Apostolic mission (5:11-6:2) and concludes with a splendid passage on the strength-in-weakness manifested in the Apostles (6:3-10).

6:11-7:3. Urgent appeal to the disobedient members.

7:4-16. Titus's report and St Paul's joy at the reconciliation.

8 and 9. Arrangements for the collection for Jerusalem.

10 to end of letter, Paul vindicates himself against the False Apostles and gives a last warning to the rebellious. After defending himself against some mean slanders (10:1-11) he asserts that his opponents are braggarts and intruders and roundly denounces them as 'false apostles' (10:12-11:15). He then makes his 'boast' about his sufferings for Christ (11:16-29) and mentions his visions and his infirmity (11:30-12:10). He speaks of his coming visit, makes a last appeal to obstinate sinners, and threatens severe measures against those who will not listen to it (12:11-13:10).

13:11-13. Conclusion.

I 1-III 3 Recent Events and St Paul's Comments— 886a

It is not the events themselves but their inner meaning, the eternal truths behind them, that fill St Paul's mind, and above all, the truth that God's power operates through human weakness and suffering: this appears in every Christian life but most startlingly in that of the apostles. This is the grand law of strength-in-weakness, the theme which dominates the whole epistle, cf. § 883e and the notes on 1:3-7; 4:7-15; 6:2-10; 12:9-10.

I 1-2 Salutation—1. 'Timothy'. His name is joined to Paul's in the salutation of five other letters. He was well known at Corinth for, when little more than a boy, he had been with Paul during his long stay there.

3-11 Thoughts suggested by his Recent Agony— b
3. 'Comfort'. The same Greek root-word (παρακαλέω, etc.) is unfortunately translated by three different words (consolation, comfort, exhortation) in the next

886b verses. Better to keep consolation and console throughout. The word is far more common in this epistle than in any other. Here at the very beginning (3-7) he sets forth the law of victorious suffering forcibly and clearly, joined with that of the union of the faithful to Christ. Christ, the apostles, and all the faithful, share the same sufferings, which by this union become a means of consolation and power, not only to the sufferer but also to others. 4. 'Us'. In this passage the 'we' seems to mean all the apostles. In the epistle as a whole 'we' very often means Paul only. 5. 'Our comfort' probably means both the consolation he felt and that which he could impart. 6. 'Whether . . . whether'. Not successive but simultaneous, two aspects of the same thing. It is the joy in suffering that is the secret of his power. 'Consolation': omit clause beginning: 'or whether we be exhorted' which has crept in by mistake and read: 'it is for your consolation which operates in endurance', etc. He implies that they too have sufferings. We do not know what these were. Compare 1 Cor 10:13. 7. 'That our hope', etc.: 'And our hope for you is steadfast'. He is now looking farther, to the supreme consolation of heaven. 'The sufferings': Christ's and Paul's. 8. It is only now that he mentions the terrible experience which had occasioned his previous words. The riot at Ephesus, when he and his friends were in danger of death from a furious mob, must be a part of the ordeal, Ac 19, and §883e. 'Strength' of man, not of God, as we see in a moment. 'were weary': despaired of life. 9. 'But we received (or perhaps passed) sentence of death on ourselves (i.e. he felt convinced that life was over, and bowed to God's will), that we might not rest our confidence in ourselves', etc. The words confident and confidence are unusually common in this epistle. 11. 'Withal': also. 'this gift': 'the blessing or mercy'. He is thinking chiefly of future mercies of God, which he knows he will need (at his visit to Jerusalem perhaps). 'Many . . . many': the prayers of a multitude, being answered, end in a multitude of thanksgivings.

12-22. He now answers two recent calumnies, which were probably put forward by his enemies at Corinth when the First Epistle was read there, §883b.

d 12-14 That his Letters were not straightforward—

12. 'Glory': 'pride' or 'proud boast'. 'Simplicity': 'with God-given honesty and sincerity'. 'Carnal wisdom': 'worldly wisdom'. 'In the grace', etc.: 'trusting only in God's mercy'. 'Conversed': 'lived'. 13-14. 'For we write nothing to you except what you acknowledge as true, and I hope you will acknowledge it always, as you have practically acknowledged in regard to us that we are your pride, as you yourselves will be our pride in the day of the Lord Jesus'. It seems likely that in regard to 1 Cor Paul's enemies had said that he cared little about the faults which he explicitly condemned in it, and that its main purpose was to undermine their own power—a terribly plausible lie because it contained an element of truth. 'In part': 'more or less'. 'In the day': i.e. at His second coming.

e 15-22 That Paul had been fickle and inconsiderate—

—Great and natural disappointment was felt by the Corinthians when they found on reading 1 Cor 16:5 that he had delayed his visit again and was going to Macedonia first. (Note on 1 Cor 16:5, 4:18, and §867e.) His enemies said that this change of plan (which may well be the second change) showed that he was both fickle and careless of the feelings of the Corinthians. 15. 'Before': i.e. originally, some time before 1 Cor was written. 'A second grace': a second blessing—which the apostle's presence would be certain to bring. The natural meaning of these words would be that Paul had never been to Corinth since his first long visit. We cannot possibly attach these words to the proposed visit on his return from Macedonia (see next verse) for in that case their right place is in the middle of v 16, after 'come to you'. Nor can 'second' mean 'double' either in Greek or in English, §884g.

f 16. 'Pass by you': 'to take you on my way to Macedonia':

he meant to cross by sea from Ephesus to Corinth, then go overland to Macedonia. 'Brought on my way': they would escort him to the port and provide him with some necessities. cf. the same phrase in 1 Cor 16:6, 11. 17. 'Use lightness': act in a capricious, fickle manner. 'According to the flesh', i.e. to suit his own comfort or vanity. 'That there', etc.: 'So that with me it is "Yes, Yes and No, No"', i.e. so that I am the sort of man who says 'Yes' today and 'No' tomorrow. In the next few verses also it is best to substitute Yes for It is and No for It is not. 18. So 'As surely as God is faithful, our language to you was not Yes-and-No'. It is a kind of oath: as truly as God is faithful to his promises, so Paul also does not promise lightly, or change his plan without strong reason. 19. 'For the son of God . . . was not Yes-and-No, but in him there has been only Yes', i.e. the gospel which Paul had preached was as unchangeable as Christ himself. 'Sylvanus': the full form of the name Silas. Silas had been with Paul at Corinth, Ac 18. 20. 'For he is the Yes to all the promises of God'. God's promises (of a Saviour, etc.) are all fulfilled in Christ. 'Therefore', etc.: 'Therefore it is in Him (in virtue of his redemptive act) that the Amen is pronounced by us to the glory of God'. It was already the custom to end a prayer with some words of praise followed by Amen, cf. Apoc 3:14. 21. The thought is enlarged: as the apostles reflect God's own constancy, so the faithful also are God's and partake in his steadfast strength. 'Confirmeth': 'keeps us steadfast'. 'Anointed': very likely he is thinking of baptism. 22. 'Sealed'. The seal was used to mark something as a man's property: God has marked the faithful as his own. He may refer to baptism or to confirmation. 'The pledge of the Spirit', i.e. the pledge consisting of the Holy Spirit. The presence of the Spirit (what we usually call sanctifying grace) is the pledge (i.e. the first instalment) of eternal life, cf. Eph 1:14, 'the Holy Spirit . . . who is the pledge of our inheritance'.

23-II 4 The True Reason for his Change of Plan—

His delay in coming was not a selfish whim, but due to a desire to win more of them back to repentance and loyalty, that he might find fewer to punish when he came. 23. i.e. I call God to look into my soul and to bear me witness that, etc. 'To spare you': he was determined to excommunicate those whom he found still defiant, cf. 13:2. 'I came not': 'I gave up the thought of coming'. 'Not because . . . stand': the last words mean that their faith was sound (cf. 8:7), and therefore did not need correction but could be strengthened and made into 'joy and peace in believing' (Rom 15:13); and for this purpose he offers himself as their helper, not their master.

II 1. 'Not to come', etc., may either mean 'not to pay another sorrowful visit' or 'not to pay another visit if it was going to be sorrowful'. Only the first interpretation would indicate that there had been already one sorrowful visit, §884g. 2. It would grieve him to punish beloved friends who should be his joy and delight. 2 and 3 are a grand expression of true spiritual love, wounded by its own severity, like our Lord weeping over Jerusalem. 3. 'For this very reason I wrote to you', i.e. wrote the First Epistle. 'That my joy', etc.: a touching appeal to the undutiful to repent in order to spare him. 4. 'Affliction': now that the letter has done its work, he admits the anguish it cost him to write so many harsh words. 'That you might know', etc.: one of his marvellous unexpected endings. We should have expected: 'that you might repent', but he boldly says that they would understand that his severity was a proof of love.

5-11 Reconciliation of the Incestuous Man—The man who had married his stepmother (1 Cor 5:1-5 notes) had at once been excommunicated as Paul had directed. He had quickly repented and separated from her, but the sentence had been allowed to stand till St Paul could be consulted, and therefore the sinner had been excluded from the church for weeks.

886j Paul protests that not he but they are the party chiefly injured, and begs them to receive him back at once. Many modern scholars however think that this passage refers to another person, §884c. 5. 'Whoever has caused sorrow has not caused it to me (only) but to all of you to some extent—that I may not be too hard'. The last part is difficult and uncertain. 6. 'Rebuke': 'penalty', i.e. the excommunication. 'Many': 'the many'—the Corinthian church in general. 7. 'swallowed up', etc.: he might despair of pardon and relapse into the same sin or worse. 8. 'Confirm', etc.: 'give him an assurance of your love'. He evidently means that they were to welcome him back to the church. The sole object of the sentence (his penitence) had been attained. 9. 'Know', etc.: 'put you to the test'. In 7:8–12 the same statement is made about the same letter.

k Obviously it cannot mean that he was indifferent to the particular faults condemned in it, but that they were overshadowed by the question: Would the Corinthians in a body desert him when they read his severe criticisms and his many demands on them, and attach themselves altogether to the False Apostles? 10. 'The one whom you pardon, I also pardon'. 'In the person', etc.: or perhaps 'in the presence of Christ', cf. 1 Cor 5:4, where he tells them to excommunicate the man 'in the name of the Lord Jesus . . . with the power of the Lord Jesus Christ'. 11. 'Satan': another echo of 1 Cor 5 'to hand such a man over to Satan'; see note. He must no longer be left in Satan's power, i.e. cut off from the Sacraments.

12-13 The Journey to meet Titus—first part—The subject changes abruptly. He begins to tell how Titus brought him the good news that the majority of Corinthians had remained loyal to him. 12. 'Troas', the port near the entrance to the Dardanelles. He travelled there from Ephesus, and apparently he had arranged to meet Titus there. 'For the gospel': 'To preach the gospel'. 'Door', i.e. an opportunity, cf. 1 Cor 16:9. He means that he was gaining many converts. 13. He was in such suspense about events at Corinth that he sailed to Europe, probably to Philippi, knowing that Titus would travel that way.

l 14-17 God's Power as seen in his Apostles—Just when we expect to hear of his meeting Titus, he breaks off, and we have to wait till 7:5 (nearly four chapters) for the continuation. Nothing could show better that Paul's mode of writing is unique: he is a law unto himself, and it is dangerous to argue about him from the analogy of other writers. He again praises God for manifesting his power through such weak instruments as himself, cf. 1:8–10; 7:5–7. 14. 'Maketh us to triumph': more likely: 'Leads us (as captives) in his triumphal procession'; a daring image: God's conquering love seems almost to overstretch human capacity and to drag his apostle after him. 'The odour', etc.: 'The perfume of the knowledge of Himself', i.e. the Gospel. 15. 'In the nostrils of those who are saved and of those who are lost we are a sweet perfume of Christ rising up to God'. The next verse makes the meaning clearer. The image in his mind seems to be that of the incense smoke which accompanied the daily sacrifice in the Temple. The saved are those who have accepted the Gospel and are in a state of grace. 16. 'To some (we are) a perfume (which operates) from death to death, i.e. becomes more and more deadly, cf. 3:18; Rom 1:17. Christ often says the same, e.g. 'To him that hath shall be given', etc. Nobody who hears the Gospel can remain where he was. He is either better or worse, and so on progressively. 'These things': i.e. this task (of an apostle). It requires an extraordinary grace. Paul knows he has received it, but says 'Our sufficiency is from God' (3:5). Omit the 'so' in DV. 17. 'adulterating': or perhaps: 'Making a trade of'—using the Gospel to gain profit or influence (an allusion to the False Apostles at Corinth). 'From God': 'inspired by God'. 'In Christ': 'In union with Christ'.

887a III 1-3 Paul needs no Letter of Recommendation—The allusion to the False Apostles brings him back for a moment to current events. 1. 'again': perhaps his enemies had accused him of self-praise in 1 Cor chh 4 and 9. 'Epistles', etc.: the False Apostles had either brought such letters to Corinth or obtained some from the Corinthians. 2. His work at Corinth is a 'letter of introduction' which will prove to all the world what sort of apostle he is. 'Our hearts': We should have expected your, but he suddenly decides to bring in the additional thought that their names were written in his heart, as he expressly says in 7:3. 3. His letter (i.e. work) is Christ's, and Paul is only a secretary (minister). 'Stone': His work is now compared, not to a letter, but to an inscription on stone, in fact to the Two Tables of the Law. It is all an excellent example of Paul's elusive imagery. Cf. 1 Cor 3:10.

III 4-VI 10 A Picture of the True Apostle—This b is the second large division of the letter. Though it comes in almost like a digression, it is the most important passage except chh 10–13, for which it is a preparation, §883d. There are three predominant ideas: (1) The apostles are the ministers of a revelation far greater than that of Moses (3:4–18). (2) Yet in themselves they are nothing: it is God who works through them (4:7–15; 6:3–10). (3) Though surrounded by misery they have a serene confidence which can look beyond death (4:16–5:11). Much of what he says of the apostles has an application to all Christian sanctity, and the plainest and richest spiritual treasures of the epistle lie in this portion. Intermingled with these sublime thoughts are verses which show that Paul never forgot present circumstances for a moment. In him the mystic and man of action were always united (4:1–6; 5:11–14; 6:1–2).

III 4-18 As Christianity is greater than Judaism, so c are its Ministers endowed with Greater Power—4-5. He takes up the thought of 2:14–16, as appears from 'sufficient' in 5. 'Of ourselves': 'From ourselves, by our own strength'. 6. 'Testament': the Greek word is regularly used to describe the covenant (i.e. contract) made between God and Israel on Sinai. The new covenant therefore means practically the religion of Christ. 'In the letter': 'Ministers not of the letter', etc.'. By 'letter' he means the whole Jewish religion, based on the written Law of Moses, and by 'spirit' the religion of Christ. The first was essentially a body of regulations bringing knowledge of God's will, but not in itself giving the supernatural strength to carry it out: Christ did give that strength. The one therefore kills, because its only direct result is a deeper sense of sin and guilt. This thought is fully set forth in Rom 7. 'Quickeneth': 'gives life'. 7. 'Glory': the unbearable radiance of Moses' face when he returned from his meeting with God is described Ex 34:29. 'Is made void': 'was transitory, destined to fade', as indeed the Mosaic Law itself was. 8. 'Rather d in glory': 'More glorious'. 9. 'Ministration of justice': 'The (apostolic) office which guides men to holiness'. 10. 'For even that which was glorious (i.e. the Mosaic Law) has become inglorious (has been outshone) in this respect by reason of the superior glory' of the Gospel. 11. 'That which remaineth': i.e. the Gospel, which is eternal. 12-18. He is arrested by another thought suggested by Moses' veil—the obscurity of the earlier revelation, and the failure of the Jews to penetrate to the hidden truth within it, which was Christ. The Gospel reveals clearly what had been dimly foreshadowed in the Law. 12. 'Confidence': the Greek word means especially boldness of speech. 13. 'On the face', etc.: On the termination of that which was passing away, i.e. the disappearance of the radiance. Or perhaps: On the fulfilment of that which, etc., i.e. on Christ who was the fulfilment of the Law. Unlike Moses, the preacher of the Gospel uses no veil, no reserve, but can put forth the whole truth. 14. e 'Senses': 'Minds'. 'Old testament'. The term is not yet used in our sense, but means the first five books (Genesis to Deuteronomy), called the 'Law', a portion of which was read every Sabbath in the synagogue.

887e 'Because', etc.: 'Because it is only in Christ (at the coming of Christ) that it is removed'. 15. 'Heart': In Jewish diction the heart was the seat of intelligence. 16. 'But when a man turns to the Lord, the veil is taken away'. When a Jew accepts the Gospel, he sees the real meaning of the Law. 17. 'A spirit': 'The spirit'. This verse is a parenthesis to explain 16. Paraphrase: 'When I say "the Lord" I mean "the spirit" (i.e. the Gospel and the grace it leads to, see 6) and where this Divine grace is, it brings liberty from that slavery which is the condition of those who are under the Mosaic Law—slavery to ignorance and sin'. 18. 'But we all, with face uncovered, beholding', etc.' Two ideas are compressed together: (1) The Christian, having known the wonderful revelation of God in Christ ('the glory of the Lord') proclaims it fearlessly without reserve ('with face uncovered'). (2) By gazing on Christ, he at once begins to acquire something of Christ-like splendour which grows brighter till it is made perfect in heaven. 'From glory to glory': i.e. to greater and greater glory.

f IV 1-6 The Openness of True Apostles and the Shiftiness of False Ones

The passage is suggested by the recent verses, but turns definitely to the doings of his enemies at Corinth. (1) 'Mercy' probably means both his conversion and his call to the apostleship. 'Faint not': 'Remain undaunted'. 2. A protest against the underhand methods of the False Apostles. 'Hidden', etc.: 'All shameful subterfuges'. 'Conscience': i.e. he is not content to captivate the ear or the emotions. 3. 'But if our gospel is hidden', i.e. if it does remain obscure or meaningless to anybody. It was, and is, impossible so to present Christian truth that it carries conviction to everybody. What impedes the act of faith is often some affection to sin, as he explains in 4. The verse may be an answer to some complaint or slander. 4. 'The god', etc.—Satan, whom our Lord calls 'the prince of this world' (Jn 16:11). The power which he wields is usurped but real; worldly men do choose him as their god. 'The minds of unbelievers' practically means: 'He (Satan) has blinded their minds so as to prevent them from believing'. 5-6. The apostle's greatness comes from God, not from himself. 5. 'Preach not ourselves': his message is not something he has invented, and he does not preach it to gain power or applause for himself. 6. The revelation which had burst upon him on the Damascus road was as much God's act as the first creation of light. 'The face of Christ': it was no vision, but his bodily presence, as Paul says in 1 Cor 15:8.

g 7-15 Divine Power and its Weak Instruments

A more forcible re-statement of that paradox with which the epistle began (1:3-11). 7. 'We': the apostles. 'Treasure': the light of the Gospel, and also no doubt the apostolic grace. These gifts are entrusted to men who have no great learning or polish or impressive appearance, like gold hidden in an earthenware jar, not displayed as an ornament. The jar denotes not only the apostle's body but his whole human equipment. 'Excellency': 'pre-eminence, distinction'. 'May be', etc., i.e. that everybody, especially the apostle himself, may see that his eloquence, miracles, success, etc., are due to the Divine power in him, not to himself. 8. 'We are oppressed but not crushed, perplexed but not in despair'. 9. 'Cast down': 'Struck to the earth', like men on a battlefield. In their agonizing h trials they are spared nothing except defeat. 10. 'Mortification': 'execution, death'. The Crucifixion is reproduced in the apostles, and their suffering, borne for Christ's sake, is merged in his. 'Saul, why persecutest thou me?' 'Life' means in the first place the marvellous grace of apostleship. This sentence shows that their sufferings were actually a means towards their work. Perhaps there is also a glance forward towards final glory, as in 14. 11. A re-statement of 10. 'Delivered unto death': 'we are at death's door', from whatever cause (prosecution, plots, riots, sickness, etc.). 'Mortal flesh', i.e. even in this world they become superhuman agents. 12. Sums up the last four verses. 13-15. These verses form a bridge to the next subject, Apostolic Confidence. 13. 'Having that spirit of faith which is expressed by the words of Scripture': 'I believed', etc. 'Spirit of faith': divine inspiration to believe, God-given faith. 'I believed', etc.: quoted from Ps 115:1 (116), in LXX. 14. Faith and hope (confidence) go together and they will not allow him to be silent. 'Place us': 'Present us (alive before him) and you also'. 15. 'Everything (my preaching and suffering) is for your sakes'. Or perhaps: 'I would do anything for you': almost the same words come in 12:19. 'That the grace', etc., i.e. that God's grace may be spread wider by being received into more souls, and may thereby multiply the words of thanksgiving which rise to God's glory, cf. 1:11.

IV 16-V 10 The Apostle's Confidence

St Paul gives the deepest reasons which nerve an apostle to unceasing effort: the firm hope of a glorious life with God, and the thought of the account he must give for the extraordinary gifts bestowed on him. There are few finer passages in his writings. The impressive preface in the Mass for the Dead is based on it. On the same subject cf. 1 Cor 15:47-58; Rom 8:11-23. 16. 'We faint not': he goes back to the thought and words of 4:1. 'Though', etc.: 'Though our outward self (the body) is wearing out, yet the inward self (the soul, transformed by grace) gains new strength daily'. 17. 'Our temporary and light tribulation wins for us', etc. It is made 'light' by faith and hope—viewed by ordinary standards it is a 'death' (12). 'Weight of glory'. He compares eternal life to a mass of treasure, as our Lord often did, Mt 6:20; 13:44, etc.

V 1. 'If', etc.: 'When this poor hut, our earthly home, falls to pieces, we have . . .': i.e. it is as certain as if the glorified body were already made and waiting for us. 2. 'In this'—the earthly body. Omit 'also'. 'Clothed upon with our habitation': a mixture of images, not uncommon in Paul, cf. 1 Tim 6:19 ('Storing away a good foundation'). 3. Probably: 'Because when once we have put it on, we shall not find ourselves naked'. The thought seems to be the same as in 4, where it is clearer. 4. 'Tabernacle'—the poor hut, our body. 'Groan': there are two pains, present suffering and the longing for the glorious life with Christ. But relief from the first alone is worthless to him. He states this in homely language: 'We wish not to put off our clothing (the misery of bodily life) but to put on more clothing'. Immortality is pictured as a cloak enveloping the whole man, body and soul. 5. 'Maketh us': 'Has prepared us'—perhaps a new image of ourselves as a field tilled and sown by God. 'The pledge', etc., see 1:22. 6-9. The thought of a glorious home concentrates itself into a desire for that Person without whom heaven itself would be nothing. Of this 'pain of exile' Paul speaks some years later in Phil 1:21-25. 8. Omit 'but'. The sentence is a continuation of v 6. 9. 'We labour': 'We do our utmost'. He reminds himself that his present business is to do Christ's will here, and therefore goes on to mention the Judgement. This smooth return from heaven to earth is as fine as anything. Paul was no visionary though he had visions. 10. 'The proper things', etc.: 'The due reward of his earthly life'.

11-14a Protest of his Honest Intentions

Difficult sentences: he is evidently defending his own apostleship against the False Apostles. 11. 'Persuasion' may refer both to winning converts and to keeping them faithful, as he is now doing in the case of the Corinthians. He has to use 'persuasion' (i.e. coaxing and tact), but his fundamental honesty is clear to God and ought to be clear to the Corinthians. 12. 'To glory'—to speak with pride. 'Who glory in face': 'Who boast of their external advantages and are without goodness of heart'. These advantages were Jewish birth, early acquaintance with the Twelve, etc. 13. Apparently: 'If we are mad, we are mad for God's sake; if we are sane, we are sane for your sake'. Perhaps they

887k had accused him of craziness. 14. 'Christ's love holds us in its grip': the memory of Christ's great love for men dominates all his actions.

1 14b-17 New Life—He dwells on the superhuman power of Christianity, which has made a new world. Resembles the thought of ch 3. 14b. 'We're dead': 'Have died'. All Christians have (in baptism) died to their old sinful selves and risen to a new life of grace, lived for Christ. More fully in Rom 5:3-14. 15. 'All': The colon following 'all' should be a comma. 16. 'We know...': we no longer look at men according to the world's standards, but as God sees them. 'And if...': 'Even if we knew Christ...': probably means: Even if some of us (the Twelve, etc.) knew Christ as neighbour, relative, etc., this is nothing in comparison with the knowledge of him as Saviour. A reply perhaps to his enemies' interested praise of the Twelve. 17. 'Whoever is in Christ is a new creation'—such is the effect of grace on the soul.

888a V 18-VI 2 The Apostles as God's Ambassadors—18. 'To us'—the Apostles. 'Ministry': 'Service or work'. 19. It is almost a re-statement of 18. 'The message of reconciliation', the Gospel. 20. His appeal is addressed to the world, not to the Corinthians, but is no doubt meant to remind the defiant Corinthians that they are still unreconciled to God. 'God, as it were...': 'For God appeals through us'. Omit 'you'. 21. 'Hath made sin': i.e. 'Has made Christ to be sin', a saying deliberately meant to be startling. God allowed Christ to suffer a punishment fit only for sinners, and in that sense made him a sinner. There may be some further meaning. 'Justice...': i.e. men endowed with supernatural justice (holiness). VI 1. 'Helping'—sharing in God's action. This verse seems to be more particularly addressed to the rebellious Corinthians. 2. A kind of parenthesis. The quoted words are spoken by God in Is 49:8. 'Accepted'—opportune.

b 3-10 Final Statement of the Apostolic Paradox—This is the most eloquent of the three passages, cf. 1 Cor 4:9-13; 2 Cor 4:7-12. He describes first the apostles' sufferings, then God's gifts to them, then the incomprehensible figure which they presented to the world's eye. 3. 'Offence'—anything that discourages the weaker Christians, see 1 Cor 8:7. 4. 'Let us...': 'Winning a good name for ourselves'. 5. 'stripes': he had been flogged eight times, as he tells us in 11:24. 'Seditions': 'Riots'—when insulted or beaten by angry mobs. 'Watchings': 'Sleeplessness'. 'Fasting': probably means hunger owing to poverty, travel, or pressure of missionary work, for he seems to omit all deliberate mortifications here, cf. 11:27. 6. 'Chastity': 'Innocence or purity of intention' (including both chastity and uprightness). 'Knowledge', i.e. theological insight, a grasp of the intellectual side of Christianity. 'Sweetness', i.e. kindness, gentleness. 'The Holy Ghost': the Spirit is of course the giver of all the gifts mentioned in 6 and 7, but here he seems to be named as the source of the extraordinary and miraculous powers such as prophecy, healing, strange languages, etc., powers which Paul certainly possessed but which nowhere else appear in this list, see 1 Cor 12.

c 7. 'The word of truth'—the plain and faithful preaching of the gospel. 'The power of God' which made his preaching powerful to move and convince. 'Bearing the arms proper to goodness on the right, etc.'—the sword in the right hand and the shield on the left arm. So the whole means 'a fully armed soldier of goodness', cf. Eph 6:13-17. 8. 'Amidst honour and dishonour (or disgrace) amidst good report': there now come seven pairs of terms: the second always gives the perfect truth, the first term states a falsehood or half-truth. 'Known': 'well-known'. 9. 'Dying' refers perhaps to both bodily frailty and danger. 'Chastised': perhaps 'flogged but not executed'. In Roman practice the one often preceded the other. 10. 'needy': 'poor'. The whole verse forms the pinnacle of the first half of this letter, just as 12:9 perhaps maybe called the pinnacle of the second half.

VI 11-VII 8 Urgent Appeal for Reconciliation and Reform—Those who wish to divide the letter (cf. § 884d) find this passage such an insuperable difficulty to their theory that many of them consider it an interpolation, for they hold that a complete reconciliation has already taken place. But there is no evidence against its genuineness. It is found in every manuscript, and its last sentences lead on naturally to the following passage, see 7:4. In all the first nine chapters this passage is the clearest proof that Paul still had much to set right at Corinth. It may be that he actually began here his direct attack on the False Apostles but changed his mind and postponed it in order first to demonstrate clearly his reconciliation with the majority. See Introd. B and D, 2(3). In these verses he complains of two things: a want of friendliness to himself and a grave laxity in their dealings with pagans and paganism. Such laxity, we may believe, had been allowed or encouraged by the False Apostles. (Introd. 1 Cor C.)

11. i.e. I have opened my heart to you, to show you all my thoughts and to welcome your confidence in return. 12. 'Straitened in us': 'Faced with a barrier on my side: the barrier stands in your own hearts'. 13. 'Give me a just recompense (i.e. friendship for friendship) and throw open your own hearts'. 14. Here begin six verses of warning against contamination with paganism, see parallel in 1 Cor 10:14-21. Marriage between Christians and pagans is certainly included, but the warning has a far wider sweep than that. 'Yoke': the metaphor is taken from the two plough-oxen, joined together by the wooden bar (yoke) which rested on their necks. 'Do not be harnessed to the plough with an unbeliever'. Then five sharp questions, all condemning such dangerous associations. 15. Belial in the New Testament seems to be practically another name for Satan. 16. The quotation, from here to the end of 18, is a patchwork (as St Paul's long quotations often are) based chiefly on Lev 26:12 and Is 52:11 with echoes and adaptations of other passages, all chosen to show that the union of the faithful to God involves a separation from false religion.

VII 1. A milder tone. But the content of the verse is very serious for 'defilement of flesh and spirit' seems clearly to imply that some Christians, after conversion, had been guilty of both pagan worship and pagan unchastity. 2. He now returns to the subject of mutual confidence. 'Receive us': 'Make room for us' (in your hearts), do not, shut the door against us, cf. 6:12. 'We have injured...': three sentences which either deny false accusations or denounce the False Apostles or perhaps both. 3. 'We have said before' seems to refer to 3:2 above.

4-16 Titus's Report on his Visit to Corinth, and St Paul's Joy—He now takes up the narrative of recent events just where he had dropped it at 2:13 (q.v.) and then puts aside, for the moment, every thought except that of his immense happiness because the majority of the Corinthians had proved loyal to him in the hour of crisis. It is the tender joy of the prodigal's father, or of the shepherd, a joy that seems almost to make light of the sin. 4. Probably: 'I speak with great frankness to you, I speak with great pride about you... after all our tribulation'. Note the ease with which 'I' becomes 'we' and vice versa throughout the epistle. 5. Continuation from 2:13. There he spoke of his spirit, here of his flesh, but in these passages both words seem to mean the whole man, though they often are opposed terms. 'Combats': we do not know what troubles this refers to. 6. 'the humble': 'the miserable or helpless'. 7. 'Relating': meaning practically 'for he related your desire' to see Paul and to please him. 'Your mourning': their sorrow for their transgressions.

8-9. Another picture of severity inspired by true charity, as in 2:2. 'If I did repent...': i.e. when Titus first related their bitter contrition, Paul feared he had been too severe in the First Epistle, but later he felt that the good accomplished was well worth the pain.

888h 'For a time': God does not desire the pain of contrition to last after it has served its purpose. 'Unto penance': 'in a way that led to repentance'. 'According to God': 'In God's way', the spiritual, supernatural way, not 'according to man' or 'according to the flesh'—Paul's regular expressions for life lived on the natural or worldly level. 'Damage': that they might be gainers, not losers, by his severity. But it may mean 'that we may not need to inflict punishment on you'. 10. 'Penance steadfast unto salvation': a slight play on words 'Repentance not to be regretted and leading to salvation'. But possibly it means: 'a better mind leading to a salvation which cannot be better'. 'The sorrow of the world', e.g. the torture of jealousy, offended pride, disappointed ambition, etc. 11. 'Carefulness': 'What keen zeal (or energy) it has inspired in you'. 'Defence': i.e. pleas in defence of their conduct as far as it was innocent. 'Indignation' against the guilty ones among them, and probably in particular against the False Apostles. 'Fear' of Paul's anger, 'Desire' to see him. 'Revenge': 'retribution, infliction of punishment' on notorious offenders, such as the incestuous man. 'To be undefiled': he cannot mean that they have proved that they never were to blame, but either that they were rid of the fault now or that a large number of them had been guilty of apathy and thoughtlessness rather than malice. 12. 'For his sake . . .': It is not likely, on the whole, that this refers to the incestuous marriage. The one who suffered wrong is very likely Paul himself, as the victim of slander, and the author of the wrong will then be some outstanding person among the False Apostles' party. Or the singular is used for a class or group of persons: 'the wrongdoers'. In any case the not is best taken as not so much, for the correction of individuals certainly was one object of his letter. He must mean that his chief purpose was to regain the majority. 'Our carefulness'. This gives an easy meaning, but some of the best manuscripts read: 'in order that your devotion to us might be made apparent to yourselves in God's sight', i.e. petty human considerations had misled them, but his letter forced them to search their consciences, to look at the matter from God's standpoint, to choose between Paul and his enemies: they discovered that they must side with Paul. 13. 'Therefore': 'That is why we are consoled'. 'In our consolation': Perhaps 'over and above our own consolation'. The 'all' here and in v 15 must not be pressed, in view of 6:11–7:3. It is what he wishes and appeals for, rather than a present fact. 14. 'Whatever words of praise I spoke to him of you'. The natural conclusion from this is that Titus had not previously been to Corinth. 'As we have spoken . . .': Very condensed: 'The kind words which I spoke to Titus about you have proved true in spite of my own fears. Believe then that there is equal truth (i.e. honesty and faithfulness) in every word I have ever said to you (in spite of my severity and other men's slander)'. 15. 'Bowels': 'his kindness or sympathy'.

889a VIII-IX The Collection for Jerusalem—The space given to this proves what importance Paul attached to it. There may well have been desperate poverty among the Christians at Jerusalem, but this gift meant much more than material relief: it was a visible proof that Paul's converts were loyal to the apostolic body and regarded themselves as one with the Jewish Christians, not as a separate Pauline church, as Judaizers no doubt said they did. Hence the collection was made in all the four provinces where Paul had last worked, and the chief cities were asked to send delegates to carry it. Seven or eight delegates did assemble in the following spring and accompanied Paul to Jerusalem, Ac 20:4.

b VIII 1-15 He urges them to keep up their Contributions—See §866g. Paul had given instructions in 1 Cor 16:2 about the mode of collection, and it appears from the present passage that this plan had now been set in operation under Titus's direction. Paul himself was at present encouraging the collection in Macedonia and several times half-playfully fans the spirit of emulation between the two provinces. 1. 'The grace': the power of giving gladly. 2. This verse explains what the grace was: 'That under the heavy ordeal of distress their overflowing joy and their deep poverty have made more abundant the riches of their generosity', i.e. their hardships had made them more liberal, not less so. 3. 'Were willing' is not in the Gk, but some such verb has to be understood. Perhaps 'they are giving' would be better. 4. 'The grace . . .': 'the favour of a share in the service . . .'. 'The Saints': the Christians of Jerusalem. 5. 'Going beyond all our hopes, they gave': Paul had hoped for gifts from them, but they placed themselves and all they had at his service, subject only to God's will (as the last words mean). 6. 'grace'—work of charity. Titus had started, or accelerated, the work of collection and would now return to speed it to its conclusion. 7. It is best to supply mentally some word like 'I appeal to you' at the beginning and to change the colon to a comma. 'Word': 'eloquence'. Their knowledge and eloquence are mentioned at the very beginning of the first letter (1 Cor 1:5) and it is sometimes implied that they thought too highly of both. 'Carefulness': 'Zeal, fervour'. 'Charity', i.e. love. 'This grace', the power to give unstintingly. 8b. 'testing the genuineness of your charity by means of the zeal of others': a half-confession of his little manoeuvre. 9. This appeal to Christ's example and to the very act of incarnation, is very like Paul. 'grace': 'kindness, mercy'. 10. 'advice', as distinct from a command—cf. v 8. 'Is profitable', or perhaps 'is becoming, proper'. 'To do . . .': As the text stands it seems to imply that the wish is greater than the deed. Have the two words been transposed by a slip of the tongue or pen? But some solve the problem by taking 'have begun' as 'were the first to . . .'. 'A year ago': 'last year, as far back as last year'. We do not know whether he refers to the civil year which began some time in October, or to the Jewish religious year which began usually in March. The former would be more natural in writing to so many non-Jews and would indicate the previous autumn, but the latter would fit the circumstances better, giving a date about February, §866g. 11. 'to perform according to your means'. 12. 'For if the goodwill is there. . .'. 13. 'By an equality': probably a current phrase which could stand by itself without verb, like 'share and share alike'. The sharing of course is voluntary. 14. 'Their abundance' may either mean that a time may come when Corinth may be glad of money from Jerusalem, or may refer to the next world where the Corinthians will reap the benefits of the spiritual gifts (the Gospel) which came to them from Jerusalem. 15. (Quotation from Ex 16:17, about the gathering of manna. Better: 'He that had gathered much . . . that had gathered little. . .').

16-24 The Return of Titus with two Companions—Titus's arrival at Corinth would precede Paul's coming by perhaps a few weeks. There can be little doubt that he was to carry this letter with him. His visit therefore had the double purpose of hastening the collection and of bringing Paul's last warning (chh 10-13) to the still defiant party at Corinth. 16. 'the same carefulness' (i.e. eagerness) probably means an enthusiasm equal to Paul's own, which fits in well with 7:13-16. 17. 'Accepted': 'Has accepted'. 'Exhortation': the request to re-visit Corinth. 'More careful': more eager than one who went merely to please Paul. 'Went': 'Is going'. This verb, together with 'have sent' in 18 and 22, are probably epistolary past tenses (common in Greek and Latin letters) and mean the same as an English present. 18. 'Have sent': 'Are sending'. 'The brother, who has won praise through all the churches by his preaching of the gospel'. Neither of Titus's two companions is named, though both (especially the first) were men of some note. It is almost incredible that Paul omitted

889] these names. The name is vital in a recommendation of this sort. It seems therefore likely that these two afterwards apostatized or otherwise disgraced themselves, and that the names were omitted from the letter in later public reading, to avoid painful memories or misunderstanding, and thus had been lost before its publication, which was about forty years after this. The first man was one of the delegates to Jerusalem and his name may be in the list in Ac 20:4. It has been widely believed however that the first-mentioned is Luke, but it is hard to see why Luke's name should ever have been expunged. 19. 'Ordained': 'Appointed'. 'Travels', i.e. the journey to Jerusalem. 'Grace': 'Charity or kindness'—the collection. 'Our . . . will': 'To prove our own zeal'. 20-21. A parenthesis. Paul had asked them (1 Cor 16:3) to send the money by their own delegates (and was sending this delegate with Titus) in order to put himself above any suspicion of having profited by the collection. 20. 'Avoiding', etc. 'For we wish to safeguard ourselves against any blame in connexion with this large sum . . .'. 21. 'Forecast': 'Plan, arrange'—disarming even unreasonable suspicion, as far as possible. An echo of Prov 3:4. 22. 'Have sent': 'Are sending'. This second brother is not apparently a delegate. 'Proved': 'Found by experience'. 'Confidence' seems to indicate that this brother had been at Corinth before. 23. 'As for Titus, he is . . . and as for our brethren, they are the apostles', etc. Both had at some time acted as delegates or envoys for churches—not 'delegates of Christ', which is the usual meaning of apostle in the New Testament. 'Glory of Christ': either 'men whose lives commend the name of Christ to mankind' or 'men in whom Christ delights'. 24. 'Show . . . by hastening on the collection, which would be heard of in other provinces. h IX 1-5 Paul will be Disgraced if they are Backward—He appeals to their affection towards himself as well as to their emulation. Too frank and jocular to be called diplomatic. The whole paragraph is an explanation of 'boasting' in 8:24, hence the 'for'. 1. 'Ministry': 'Assistance' (the collection). 2. 'Forward mind': 'Eagerness'. Achaia of course includes Corinth, its capital. Omit 'also'. 'Has been ready since last year'; cf. 8:10. Paul seems to have assured the Macedonians that the Corinthians made very short work of anything they had begun. 'Your zeal has roused to action very many'. 3. 'I am sending': see note on 'went' in 8:17. St Paul evidently wished the Corinthian collection to be complete or nearly so before his arrival, although he intended to make a long stay at Corinth. 'In this behalf': 'In this point'. 4. 'the Macedonians': probably the three first men named in Ac 20:4, 'me . . . we': both singular and plural seem to mean only Paul. He can assume that his reputation is as dear to them as their own—he must have already felt very sure of the majority among them. 'Matter': the Greek word can also mean expectation or confidence. Same doubt exists in 11:17. 5. 'blessing . . . covetousness': 'an act of charity, not a scheme of exploitation'. i 6-15 The Blessings of Open-handed Charity—6. 'in blessings': 'with an eye to (gaining) blessings', i.e. gives material goods, confident of a reward from God. 7. 'Every one': a verb such as 'ought to give' must be supplied. 'sadness', i.e. a sullen, grudging spirit. 'of necessity'—with a feeling of compulsion. 'For God', etc.: cf. LXX (but not the Hebrew) text of Prov 22:8. 'God blesses a cheerful man and a ready giver'. 8. 'to make every blessing abound for you', i.e. to reward their charity by spiritual and also temporal blessings. 9. From Ps 111(112):9 (one of the Sunday Vespers psalms). 'He' is the good man. 'Dispersed': 'scattered' (his gifts). 'His justice', etc., i.e. his deeds of charity will always be remembered by God, here and hereafter. 10. The subject now is God. 'bread . . . seed', i.e. both enough for themselves and to give in charity, which, like the sown corn, will again produce a fruitful harvest. 'justice': 'goodness'. 11. 'generosity which worketh', etc. Here a new thought enters, which fills the rest of the chapter—the gratitude of the Palestinian Christians, both to God and to their benefactors, and the friendly interest and understanding which the gift would promote between Jewish and Gentile Christians. To Paul this moral relief meant more than anything else. 'Through us', i.e. Paul (or Paul and his assistants) as organizer of the collection. 12. 'administration . . . office': he must surely intend to include the givers, therefore: 'the assistance (or relief) given by this act of charity'. 13. Another case of a loosely attached participle ('glorifying'): 'On seeing the evidence furnished by this relief, they will glorify God for your humble assent to the gospel of Christ and for your open-handed charity to themselves and to all men'. 14. There may be some fault in the Greek, but the general meaning seems to be: (1) The brethren at Jerusalem will pray for you. (2) They will feel a strong affection towards you because of this proof that the same Spirit is exerting his mighty influence at Corinth and at Jerusalem. It is this fellow-feeling between such diverse Christians that Paul calls an 'unspeakable gift' in v 15.

X-XIII St Paul vindicates Himself against the False Apostles and gives a Last Warning to their Friends—890a

The tone of persuasive appeal in ch 9 suddenly changes to a very stern one, which prevails to the end of the letter. The main problems of this section have been dealt with in the Introduction. We need only repeat here the conclusions arrived at there: (1) One main purpose of the whole letter is to deal squarely and firmly with the party of False Apostles. This is done in these chapters, and much of the first seven chapters are a preparation for them. (2) Although he does not speak directly to this party, except apparently in most of ch 13, yet it would become clear from 10:2 that the whole of this part of the letter is directed at them. (Intro. D 2 [9].) (3) On the postponement of this subject see what is said in §883d and note on 6:11.

X 1-11 Denial of some Mean Slanders—The slanders call up a very ugly picture of their authors, men of vulgar spite and base cunning. 1. 'I Paul myself'. Perhaps he wishes here to speak strictly in his own person, excluding Timothy the joint author, cf. 1 Thess 2:18; Col 1:23. 'Who', etc.: this description is obviously false and must be an ironical repetition of a sneer of his enemies. 'Lowly': 'Insignificant'. 2. 'Wherewith', etc.: more likely: 'Wherein I consider myself able to take strong action against some who reckon', etc. This would be readily understood as a reference to the False Apostles and thus would introduce them clearly as the subject of this part of the letter. 'According to the flesh': in a worldly manner. Ambition, avarice, etc., are probably meant. 3. 'In the flesh': in the body and subject to its infirmities, including his chronic disorder, cf. 11:30; 12:7. 'War': we should have expected 'walk', but it is very like him to introduce this new idea which fills the next three verses. 4. 'Carnal' of human make and strength. 'mighty in or through God'. 4-5. 'destroying', etc.: loosely joined participle—see 9:13. 'We destroy reasonings and every towering structure that is erected against the knowledge of God'. Probably refers not so much to heretical doctrine as to unseasonable reasoning such as is noticed in 1 Cor 8:1-6. (See 11:4 below.) 5. 'Bringing', etc.: i.e. we bring, etc. 6. We shall be ready to punish all disobedience, as soon as your obedience has reached its height—the highest point to which it can be brought by persuasion and warning. Those who were still rebellious after receiving this letter would be excommunicated as he says more clearly in ch 13. 7. 'See', etc. Uncertain, but probably 'Look at what is before your eyes', i.e. at the plain facts. 'Whoever trusts . . .': this refers to the False Apostles. Paul admits that they are, or were, 'ministers of Christ' (11:23). Others have taken these words to refer to the 'Christ party' (1 Cor 1:12 last note). 8. 'More', i.e. more than the modest claim he had made in v 7. 'Edification': lit. 'building up' of a Christian community, as of a spiritual temple to God. 'Not . . . ashamed'—his 890d boast could be made good. 10. 'Say they': more likely: 'says he'—a quotation from one of his enemies whose name he does not think worth giving us. 'Bodily presence . . . speech': the False Apostles themselves may well have approached much nearer than Paul did to that rather theatrical figure which was already becoming fashionable in Greece, the popular orator-philosopher, like Euphrates with his 'tall stature, noble features, waving hair, and immense white beard' (Pliny Ep 1, 10). Paul, it seems, was without these charms. He was also without the artificial eloquence which was then in vogue and was possessed by many Jews, such as Philo. Paul had a finer but less fashionable eloquence, and certainly made a deep impression on many, even on educated and unsympathetic persons like Felix and Agrippa II.

12-18 The False Apostles are Braggarts and Intruders

—St Paul drops his defensive tone and becomes aggressive. This continues till it reaches a climax at 11:15. Paul had done with hints and skirmishing, and was resolved on battle. 12a. 'Match': 'Put ourselves on a level with'. 12b. The more probable Greek text means: 'They foolishly measure themselves by themselves and compare themselves with themselves', i.e. they make themselves the pattern of perfection. 13. 'beyond our measure': 'inordinately. But (we will glory) in accordance with the size of that portion which God has given us as our share, a size large enough to reach as far as you'. 14. 'For (in order to touch and include Corinth) we do not stretch our hands unduly as if', etc. 'For we', etc., more likely: 'We were the first to come preaching to you the gospel of Christ'. It was this prior arrival of his which made Corinth his domain, and made his enemies intruders and busybodies. 15. 'having hope', etc. From here to the end of 16 the DV is very confused. Read: 'having hopes that with the increase of your faith we may so prosper within our allotted sphere as to overflow it and preach in still more distant regions—instead of entering another's territory and bragging about gains which have cost us nothing'. This complaint about intrusion had already been made in a gentler form in 1 Cor 4:15. He refers here to his desire to preach in the west. He was thinking chiefly of Spain, but he wished to visit Rome on his way there. (Rom 15:19-28.) 17. Summary of Jer 9:23-24, cf. 1 Cor 1:31. 18. 'Is approved': 'passes the test', when judged by the true (i.e. divine) standard. God's 'commendation' then must be the various forms of grace given for sanctification and effective influence.

11 1-15 He prepares for Self-assertion, and roundly denounces the False Apostles—1.

'My folly': 'a little folly from me'. The folly is the self-praise which begins in 22. This is the first hint that it is coming, but he digresses again as if he shrank from the painful necessity. 2. 'Jealous for you' with God's own jealousy, a divine jealousy. He uses language familiar from the OT. God was the bridegroom of his people, his church, and Paul was the bridegroom's friend, vigilant against rival suitors and lovers. It is clearly implied that the false teachers are enemies of God. 3. 'Subtily': 'craftiness'. 'From the purity and innocence that are due to Christ'. 4. 'He that cometh': 'the newcomer, the visitor'. It seems to denote some one of the False Apostles, or else is a collective term for them all. The best interpretation is: If the new teachers had brought a religion which surpassed what the Corinthians had already received from Paul, there would be some reason for honouring them. But instead of the word 'honour' Paul characteristically substitutes 'endure' for they had been haughty and exacting (see v 20). This sentence therefore implies that their doctrinal teaching was not unsound. (1 Cor Introd. C.) 5. 'I consider that I have not in any way been inferior to the greatest apostles', i.e. to the Twelve. Many scholars think that Paul meant the False Apostles here, calling them ironically 'the great apostles', but it is incredible that Paul should have honoured these adventurers by calling himself their equal, when his apostleship was in fact incomparably superior to theirs. 6. 'Rude': untrained (in the professional orator's art), see 10:10. 'Knowledge'—of God, as 890g in 10:5. 'But . . . you'. The Greek may be corrupt, but the general sense probably is: 'But we have revealed (the truth) fully to you'. 7-11. These verses are an answer to the malicious lie that Paul by working for his living had admitted his inferiority to the Twelve. The False Apostles said that only the Twelve had a right to maintenance. Paul had already denied this in 1 Cor 9:1-15, and claimed the right for all missionaries. In order to be consistent and to outface Paul, the False Apostles had to make a pretence of earning their living (cf. v 12 and §865i). 7. 'Humbling myself' refers to manual work, more despised by pagans than by Jews. 'Exalted': raised to the dignity of Christians. 'Freely': without payment or cost. 8. 'Taken from': 'plundered other churches'—a natural exaggeration (see 9), but it does mean that the poorer Macedonians had felt the sacrifice 'For your ministry': 'in order to serve you'. 9. Probably refers to his first visit to Corinth. He seems to have been ill and depressed, and perhaps not able to earn enough, but Silas and Timothy arrived with gifts of money from Thessalonica and Philippi, Ac 18:5; Phil 4:15; 1 Thess 3:1-8. 'Wanted': 'was in need'. 10. 'As surely as the truth of Christ is in me, this boast shall not be denied me in Achaia'. He observed the same rule in Asia and Macedonia. 11. He had given them his reasons, partly at least, in 1 Cor 9:15-18. Some loyal Corinthians had evidently been hurt at his refusal of help, and thought him cold and unfriendly. Other friends may have wished to support him in order to vindicate his equality to the Twelve. 'God knows': implies that the preceding words are absurd. 12. 'That I', etc. That I may not give any handle to those who are looking for a handle: that in their boasted mode of life they may be seen to stand just where I do. They had paraded their self-denial in refusing support: if Paul had accepted support, they would have used this as a handle, and redoubled their accusations of usurpation and rapacity, cf. 12:16. Some critics, relying on v 20, believe that the False Apostles did accept maintenance (cf. 1 Cor 9:12), and that Paul continued to refuse it so that they could not say they stood on an equal footing with him in this matter. But v 20 need only mean that their self-support was a pretence and that they extorted gifts, etc. 13-15. The most downright attack in the epistle. Paul at last feels able to speak plainly. 13. 'For such men are false apostles, dishonest workmen'. These last words may include a sarcasm about their pretence of working for their living: 'disguising themselves as'. 'Transform' has the same sense in vv 14 and 15. 14. 'Of light': belonging to God's glorious realm, cf. 'sons of light'. 15. 'Therefore it is nothing remarkable if his servants . . . justice', i.e. of divine goodness. Their reward will be what their deeds have deserved.

XI 16-29 St Paul indulges in the Foolishness of Boasting—

Paul at last embarks fairly on the disagreeable task which he seems long to have been nerving himself for, and frankly compares his own service of Christ with that of the False Apostles. He does not here seek to prove his equality to the Twelve by appealing to Christ's direct commission, as he does in Gal, chh 1-2. This for some good reason he considers unnecessary here. Many ideas and phrases in this passage carry us back to chh 1-6, especially to the picture of the true apostle (3:4-6:10). One passage supplements and completes the other. There we have the ideal, here the embodiment of it.

16. When he began the sentence, he intended apparently to repeat v 1: 'Again I say, bear with a little folly from me', but he breaks off and makes a new beginning: 'Again I say . . . Let no man think', etc. The brackets therefore are misleading. 'Take me': accept me, indulge me, as a fool. 17. 'According to God . . . flesh'. The same meanings as in 5:16 and 7:9. He is going to appear to imitate the worldly-wise, not the saints. 'This matter'. Or perhaps 'this confidence' or 'purpose'. The same doubt 8901 as in 9:4. 19-20. Ironical praise referring to the past conduct of the great number who had once been imposed upon by the False Apostles. Indignation and pity, smothered for months, and only half-revealed in the First Epistle, now find a free outlet when he feels sure of their loyalty. 'Devour you'. As the Pharisees 'devoured widows' houses'. 'Take from you': the Greek word probably means 'take you in, victimize you', as in 12:16—deceit as well as rapacity. 'Lifted up': 'Is arrogant'. 'Strike you': 'treat you as dirt, trample on you'. 21. 'I confess with shame that I myself have indeed "cut a poor figure"'. It is practically a quotation of his enemies' description of him in 10:10. He apologises for being such a poor bully. 'Wherein', etc.: 'But wherever boldness is shown . . . I am bold too'. 22. The three terms (Hebrews, Israelites, seed of Abraham) all seem to mean precisely the same, and the repetition is only for emphasis. But perhaps the first may include the capacity to speak Aramaic. 23. 'Ministers': 'servants'—a vague word which might mean any active help in spreading the gospel. 'I speak madly: I am a better one'. 'Stripes': blows. 'Deaths': i.e. dangers of death. 24-27. His heroic sufferings for Christ since his conversion, which had taken place seventeen to twenty-five years before. It is clear that the tale of endurance told by St Luke in the Acts falls far short of completeness—Luke's omissions probably belong mostly to the earlier years of Paul's work. Of the eight floggings which Paul mentions, only one is recorded by Luke (Ac 16:22). 'Forty . . . save one'. When flogging was imposed as a penalty by Jewish law, forty lashes was the maximum, and it was customary to make it thirty-nine for fear of a miscount, Deut 25:1-3. The Jews' power to inflict such penalties outside Palestine must have been confined to those large cities where the Jewish communities were autonomous, §587a. Therefore Damascus, Tarsus, and Antioch at an early date in Paul's career are the most likely scenes of these sufferings. 891a 25. 'With rods', i.e. on the order of some Roman official. We know of only one case, the illegal flogging at Philippi (Ac 16:22). Only the higher provincial governors could order a Roman citizen to be flogged, and therefore the two other floggings were probably ordered by the governor of Syria on some accusation of causing disorder. 'Stoned': this was at Lystra by a mob incited by Jews, eight or ten years before this (Ac 14:18). 'Thrice . . . shipwreck'. The shipwreck in Ac 27 was still to come, therefore these three disasters were probably in early voyages which are omitted in Ac. 'Depth of the sea': 'on the open sea', i.e. far from land, on a raft or wreckage. 26. 'Waters': 'dangers from rivers'—flooded rivers which had to be crossed by fords or boats. 'Wilderness': waste uninhabited areas through which some of the roads of Asia passed, e.g. the high passes over the Taurus. 'False brethren': men nominally Christians, who hated him and were unscrupulous in their opposition. He gives this name to Judaizers in Gal 2:4, but there were many other shades of opposition—the unsound mystics and rigorists, to say nothing of mere impostors. b 27. 'Watchings': 'loss of sleep'. Paul chose to do two men's work, to be a missionary and a manual worker, and therefore often had to encrouch deeply on the night. Moreover the Christians often could only meet for services at night or before daybreak (Ac 20:7-11). 'Fasting': most likely to be loss of meals owing to poverty, journeys, etc., cf. 6:5. 28. 'Without', i.e. external things, bodily trials and dangers. He goes on to speak of mental trials. 'Instance': 'care, anxiety'. There are several doubtful points however in this verse. 29. He gives one example of his anxieties. 'Who is weak without my sharing his weakness?' Paul regularly uses the word 'weak' about Christians who were over-scrupulous especially in regard to food, holy days, etc., and insists that others are bound to make things easier for them even at the cost of inconvenience to themselves, see 1 Cor 8:9-13; Rom 14. 'On fire' may mean both indignation and anxiety.

XI 30-XII 10 St Paul's Ecstasy and his Chronic Infirmity—This difficult passage has three parts: (1) The escape from Damascus. (2) The ecstasy. (3) The infirmity. The words 'weakness' (infirmity) and 'to be weak' mark both its beginning and end, and come six times in all. This word certainly means his bodily infirmity or disease in 12:9. It seems best therefore to take 'infirmity' throughout the passage as referring to this. Vv 30-33 are therefore a preparation for the definite mention of it in 12:7, but right in the middle of the passage he puts his ecstasy, no doubt because he considered that the best setting for it. If we assume that his infirmity was some sort of nervous trouble (a widely held view), it seems quite possible that it was caused or aggravated by the manner of his escape from Damascus, and this would explain (what is otherwise incomprehensible) the special emphasis on that event here. He does not expressly connect the two, but that might be unnecessary in writing to anybody who knew the exact form of his disorder. The famous story about Pascal's carriage-accident, if it is true, would be a parallel. Many scholars however think that 'weakness' at the beginning and end of this passage refers back to the heroic sufferings of 24-27, while admitting that in 12:9 the word means his disorder. But in that case the word changes its meaning twice in the 14 verses. Moreover the sufferings of 24-27 are proofs of strength not weakness; they are glorious, not humiliating. And why should Paul apologise for mentioning them if he thought they were signs of weakness?

31. Referring to the connexion between his escape and the infirmity. 32. The event occurred two or three years after his conversion, at least 15 years before this letter. 'Governor': 'the ethnarch of King Aretas'. Aretas was king of the Nabataeans, whose territory, called 'Arabia', stretched along the east and south of Palestine. Damascus seems to have been added to it about A.D. 38. The ethnarch would be the local governor appointed by Aretas. The event is described in Ac 9:23-5. 33. 'Basket'. The Greek word means a large flexible basket, used to carry hay and sometimes corn.

XII 1. The 'if' is omitted in the best MSS. Paraphrase: 'Boasting is the order of the day. It is true that it is not for our good, but at any rate I will proceed, and speak of my visions . . .'. It is of only one vision that he does speak. We get the impression that he had never mentioned this before, that it was different from other visions and that he had approached as nearly as a living man can to the direct contemplation of God. He was not specially reserved about all visions. He had already told the Corinthians about the one on the road to Damascus (1 Cor 9:1; 15:8). Four others are mentioned in Ac (16:9; 18:9; 22:18; 27:23). But here all the signs, especially the strangely ambiguous language, show that he was claiming something far beyond the other visions, an overwhelming experience. 2. 'A man': there can be no doubt that he means himself. 'In Christ': Either 'in the Church' (as Rom 16:7) or 'rapt by the power of Christ'. Omit 'above'. The date (thirteen years past, according to our expression) would be A.D. 41 to 44, not long after the escape from Damascus. 'Whether', etc. This doubt does not seem to arise in most visions, and helps to mark this one out—an ecstasy. 'Third heaven': he is using the language of some astronomical system which he had heard of (there were many). He certainly means the highest (or farthest) sphere, regarded as the place where God dwells. 3. Doubtless the same vision. 4. 'Paradise': evidently means the same thing as 'third heaven'. The word meant a park, but it had now come to denote the place where the souls of the good awaited the resurrection (Lk 23:43). 'Secret'. Or perhaps unutterable. 'Not granted' probably means that they are of their nature incommunicable. 5. 'For', i.e. 'about'. 6. 'Shall . . . will'. More natural to say should and would. 'That nobody may impute to me 891f something more than he sees . . . or hears . . . This seems to mean that he was afraid that, if he said more, some of his converts from paganism might regard him as semi-divine. Such ideas were common, cf. § 598q. 7. The Greek is very strange. It seems likely that Paul began a sentence and left it unfinished, cf. 11:16. 'And owing to the grandeur of the revelations—Therefore that I might not become proud. . . . ' He at last discloses that he has been speaking of himself. 'Sting': 'a thorn for the flesh'. The image is that of a thorn or splinter embedded in the body. But 'flesh' may be wide enough in meaning to cover both body and mind, the natural man. St Paul's ailment is expressly mentioned only here and Gal 4:13-14, where we gather that it was a severe trial to those around him. Nervous disorder, ophthalmia, and malaria, are the best suggestions, and the first has the largest support and the special advantage that it might explain the reference to Damascus (see on 11:30). 'Messenger of Satan', i.e. something sent by him, for all disorder is ultimately traceable to him. 8. 'Thrice': perhaps during the three first attacks. 9. Christ's answer might be taken as a summary of the whole epistle. Man's weakness is, in his present circumstances, often the best condition for God to achieve great things through him; see 1:3; 4:10. 10. 'I please myself': 'I gladly accept'. 'Infirmities', etc., i.e. the 'thorn', whatever it was. He here adds it to a summary list of the sufferings enumerated before. 'In outrages (the word means always insult and generally violence), in hardships, in persecutions, in the last extremities. 'For when', etc. Another summary of the deepest thoughts of the epistle.

h XII 11-XIII 13 Last Protests and Last Warnings—XII 11-18 Last Protests—These eight verses are a kind of appendix to the whole self-assertive passage. The question of maintenance again comes in. 11. 'Foolish . . . ' echoes 11:16 and refers to the intervening passage. 'No way', etc.: practically a repetition of 11:5. 'Nothing': cf. 1 Cor 15:9 ('I am the least of the apostles') and 1 Tim 1:15 ('. . . sinners of whom I am the chief'). We should set these words against the unwilling self-praise of this letter. 12. Omit 'yet'. 'The marks (proofs) of an apostle have been produced before you in the form of patience under all kinds of sufferings and of signs', etc. The three words 'signs . . . deeds' all mean miracles. He ranks his patient endurance above miracles, but he can and does confidently appeal to miracles done by himself at Corinth. 13. He means apparently that the marks of apostolic grace have been as plain at Corinth as in any church founded by another apostle. 'For in what respect have you been less favoured than the rest of the churches, except that I indeed (as compared with other apostles in their churches) was not burdensome to you?' 14. The first sentence can mean either: 'For the third time I have made ready to pay this visit', or: 'I am now ready to pay my third visit'. The second, which fits the context somewhat better, would imply that there had been an intermediate visit, § 884g. 'The things': i.e. their money. 'Lay up': 'to save money'—to make provision for their children's education. Later the grown-up children of course might be bound to support their parents, but this later stage does not come into St Paul's picture: they are his little children and cannot be expected to do anything for him. 15. 'Although', etc.: the better Greek texts read: 'If I love you more, am I loved less in return?' i.e. does every new sign of my love cause a diminution of yours? 16. He abruptly cites and rebuts one of the false accusations of his enemies: 'Granted—I myself was not a burden to you, but, like the rascal I am, I played a trick on you, I suppose?' The accusation, as the next verse shows, was that his assistants had taken presents at his suggestion and for his use. 17. 'Overreach', i.e. make some profit out of them. 18. Probably epistolary tenses as in 8:17, 18, 22; 'I have asked Titus (to visit you) and I am sending the brother'. It is the same visit as arranged in ch 8 and is referred to almost in the same words—strong evidence that ch 8 was written before this. The 'brother' is probably the first of the two mentioned in ch 8. § 884f. Titus is the only one who has been to Corinth already, so the following question is only about him. The 'we' means Paul and Titus. XII 19-XIII 10 Last Warnings and Appeals—The stern chapters have hitherto been addressed to the majority of the Corinthians, for many now repentant had allowed themselves to be misled. But the remainder is addressed to the still rebellious members—this becomes clearer in 13:2. Many tender expressions are mingled with the sternness. But it is an ultimatum: those who have not repented and submitted before his arrival will be excommunicated.

XII 19-XIII 6 Last Warnings—19. 'Have you been thinking all this time that we have been on our defence before you?' He has in fact been defending himself, but he says he did so freely at his own choice, he is not answerable to them, but to God. 'We speak . . . Christ': exactly the same words as in 2:17, see note. 'But all things', etc.: meaning: 'But I would do anything for the good of your souls, my dearly loved ones', i.e. he will not stand on his dignity when it is a question of winning them back. The verse which begins so roughly ends in marvellous gentleness. 20. 'I shall be found', etc., i.e. be forced to act as a stern judge: 'dissensions', etc.: 'party-divisions, backbiting, malicious whispers, conceit, confusion, should still persist among you'. This verse and the next enumerate the chief faults condemned in 1 Cor with one great exception (laxity towards paganism). Paul seems to fear that the party of the False Apostles had become a rallying point for all kinds of bad Christians at Corinth. 21. The beginning is ambiguous in the Greek, and can be translated either as in the DV or 'Lest, when I come again, God should humble me'. The DV implies that he had already undergone one humiliation at Corinth, i.e. that there had been a 'painful intermediate visit'. The other translation does not imply this, cf. § 884g. 'And I mourn': i.e. 'And lest I should mourn . . . ' He calls their sin his humiliation, such was his charity. 'Done penance': 'repented'. 'Lasciviousness': 'licentiousness'—a wide word. Who are these 'former sinners' who have never repented of unchastity? Probably Gentile converts who have never given up the immorality which they practised as pagans. Perhaps they have also continued to participate in pagan rites. In that case they may be the persons addressed in 6:10-7:3. The omission of any express mention of pagan practices here seems to make this more likely. The same persons are again meant in 13:2 onwards. XIII 1. The first words are again ambiguous, and mean either 'This is my third visit', or 'For the third time I am on the point of setting out to visit you'. In the latter case the point would be: I have not been hasty in coming: the sinners have had time to reflect, cf. 1:23 ('It was to spare you that I put off my visit to Corinth'), § 884g. 'Every charge must be proved by the evidence of two or three witnesses'. This was the rule of Jewish criminal procedure, and is quoted from Deut 19:15. Here St Paul means that he is going to use the same fair procedure in deciding which of the Corinthians deserve excommunication, cf. 1 Tim 5:19. 2. 'To former sinners and to all the rest I gave notice and I give it now, as present the second time so now while absent, that when I come again I shall not spare' (i.e. shall act severely). An involved sentence, but it seems to indicate that he had already paid them a second visit, and during the recent troubles. It therefore appears to contradict 1:15 (see note there) and is the strongest evidence for such a visit, cf. § 884g. The Greek may be corrupt. If there was no recent visit, the words 'I gave notice' would probably refer to what he has said in 1:23 or 10:2. For 'former sinners', see note on 12:21. 3. 'For you seek a proof . . . ' In you', i.e. among you. He says he must be severe with the defiant members because they have asked for evidence that Christ speaks through Paul, i.e. they have denied that he is an apostle in the full sense, as the

891j

892a

b

c

892a Twelve are. How will his severity prove that they are wrong? It seems clear that it must be severity wielding a miraculous power of punishment, such as Paul had used when he inflicted temporary blindness on the sorcerer Elymas (Ac 13:8-11). Only the Apostles seem to have had such powers. From 1 Cor 5:3-5 we gather that physical suffering (intended only to bring repentance) was a frequent consequence of excommunication. If Paul's excommunication of these rebellious Corinthians were immediately followed by some bodily affliction, he would have furnished all the 'proof' that they could have desired. 4. 'Weakness', i.e. the weak nature and humble condition which he assumed at his incarnation, cf. Heb 2:14-18; 5:2. 'Weak in him': weak with and for Christ, in union with Christ, joining our infirmities to his and accepting ours for his sake. The verse again recalls that thought of strength-in-weakness which underlies the whole epistle. By his own weakness Paul here meant everything that would make the world despise him, as a poor Jewish worker, unpolished and physically afflicted. d 'We shall live . . . towards you'—yet by the same union he would give evidence of divine life and power in his dealings with the rebels. 5. He asks them to search their consciences which will at once tell them that they are in the wrong: 'Test your own selves to see if you are sound in your religion (i.e. in a state of grace)'. For 'faith' must be taken in a wide sense here. He has twice commended their faith in the strict sense (1:23; 8:7) and can hardly be casting doubt on that now. Another translation is possible: 'If you are sound in faith (as you are), test your own selves', etc. 'That Christ', etc., i.e. that you are in the state of grace. The opposite to this is meant by 'reprobate' (lit.: rejected by God)—in a state of mortal sin. Their self-examination would in fact show them that they were reprobate and lead to their repentance. In all other passages of St Paul the word ἀδόκιμος has this sense of 'rejected by God' and therefore it seems very unlikely that it has any other sense here. But most commentators prefer in these three verses (5-7) to interpret it as 'failing to give the proof'—the visible proof of divine power mentioned in 3. This gives a good meaning but seems a hazardous departure from

Paul's regular use. 6. Either their self-examination or (failing that) his divinely enforced sentence would prove to them that God was on his side. 892d

7-10 Last Appeal—The menacing tone changes to one of touching appeal. He protests that to win them back to Christ would be worth almost any sacrifice of personal honour or reputation. 7. 'do no evil', i.e. cease from doing wrong. For the moment he ignores past wrongdoing. It is just possible however that he said: 'Would to God that you had done no evil'. 'Not that . . . ' i.e. 'My prayer and desire is, not that we may be clearly vindicated (by God's evident act) but that you may do right even at the cost of our appearing no better than reprobates (i.e. sinners)', cf. Rom 9:3 ('I could wish that I myself were accursed and cast away from Christ for the sake of my brethren (the Jews)'). 8. 'The truth': he means either the Gospel (the whole Christian revelation) or the rules of truth and justice as far as they applied to the case now before him. 9. 'For we rejoice' that we should count for little (should be despised) provided you are great (i.e. in holiness). 'This also', etc.: this is our very prayer (the very desire of our hearts). 10. Omit 'more'. The last half of the verse is repeated exactly from 10:8.

11-13 Conclusion—Probably written with his own hand. 11. 'For the rest': 'In conclusion'. 'Take comfort (or courage)': very natural after this stormy letter. 'Have peace': 'live in peace'. 12. 'Holy kiss': as in several other letters, always probably refers to the kiss of peace at Mass. 'The saints', i.e. the Christians at the Macedonian city from which he wrote, cf. §883c. 13. This benediction is unique. There is no other short passage in St Paul where the doctrine of the Holy Trinity is so clearly indicated. 'Grace': the root-meaning is mercy or favour. 'the charity of God': 'God's love' (for men). This seems to be the regular meaning of 'love of God' in St Paul. 'Communication of the Holy Ghost'. Many shades of meaning are suggested. Perhaps the most probable are: (1) Participation in the Holy Ghost, parallel to 1 Cor 10:16 ('partaking of the body of the Lord'). (2) Union with the Holy Ghost, parallel to 1 Cor 1:9 ('fellowship of his son Jesus Christ').

GALATIANS

By DOM B. ORCHARD

898a Bibliography—F. Amiot, Épître aux Galates, Paris, 1946¹ (Verbum Salutis XIV); Dom J. Chapman, St Paul and the Revelation to St Peter, Mt 16: 17, RBn 29 (1912) 133-47; Cornely, Commentarius in epist. ad Galatas, Paris, 1892; *De Witt-Burton, A critical and exegetical Commentary on the Epistle to the Galatians (ICC), Edinburgh, 1921; *W. L. Knox, St Paul and the Church of Jerusalem, Cambridge, 1925¹; M.-J. Lagrange, O.P., Épître aux Galates, Paris, 1918 (Études Bibliques); *Kirsopp Lake, The Earlier Epistles of St Paul, London, 1930¹; *J. B. Lightfoot, Saint Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, London, 1884²; John MacEvilly, An Exposition of the Epistles of St Paul, vol. 1, London, 1855; Dom B. Orchard, A New Solution of the Galatians Problem, JRB 28 (1944) 154-74; B. à Piconio, Epistle of St Paul to the Galatians (Exposition of the Epistles of St Paul, vol. II, tr. Prichard, London, 1890); *W. M. Ramsay, A Historical Commentary on St Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, London, 1900¹; F. Prat, S.J., La Théologie de Saint Paul, Paris, 1920¹; Steinmann, Der Brief an die Galater, Bonn, 1935; E. Tobac, Galates (Épître aux), DTC.

b Authenticity and Genuineness—Suffice it to say that the Epistle itself and its attribution to St Paul have been accepted by all the ancient ecclesiastical writers and by all modern critics, save certain radical members of the discredited Dutch School of Bauer and his associates, and by Loisy in his later years. Our Epistle is certainly quoted by St Ignatius of Antioch, St Polycarp and St Justin; it is explicitly attributed to St Paul by St Irenaeus and his contemporaries, and is already found in the Muratorian Canon and in all the catalogues drawn up by the earliest Councils. Moreover the internal evidence reveals in every line the unique hand and personality of St Paul, as every serious reader will agree.

c Date and Destination—The researches of Professor Sir William Ramsay (cf. op. cit.) have proved that in the time of St Paul the Roman Province of Galatia straddled Asia Minor from north to south and embraced not only the basin of the R. Halys (Galatia strictly so-called) but also the territory of the ancient countries of Lycaonia and Pisidia, as well as a great deal of the ancient kingdom of Phrygia. At the end of the 3rd cent. the Province of Galatia was divided by Diocletian, only the northern portion retaining the name of Galatia. It was probably ignorance of this fact that led St Jerome and other 4th cent. writers to believe that the letter was addressed to the Galatians of North Galatia. It is certain from the itinerary of Ac 13-14 that Paul did not visit northern Galatia on his first journey, and the later narrative of Ac (16:6-8; 18:23) does not suggest that he ever did so during his second or third journeys. If Galatians can also mean the south Galatians, evangelized on the first missionary journey, and if the internal evidence of Gal can be harmonized with the data of Ac, then there is an overwhelming case for accepting the modern view that it was written after the first missionary journey but before the Council of Jerusalem (A.D. 49). For the epistle is so obviously concerned with the circumcision question debated and settled at the Council of Jerusalem, Ac 15, that it is most embarrassingly difficult to date it after this event.

Moreover all the internal evidence of the Epistle favours the view that it is dealing with that same controversy—all, that is, except Gal 2:3-5, which seem to constitute an obvious reference to St Paul's third visit to Jerusalem at the time of the Council. If we admit this reference then, of course, we are bound to date the letter after the Council (with all the attendant difficulties of explaining why there is no reference to the decrees of the Council in the Epistle, and so on). If, however, we take Gal 2:1-10 as an account of events that occurred during St Paul's second visit to Jerusalem (recorded in Ac 11:29-30), with a couple of parentheses and a reference to 'false brethren' inserted in view of the controversy raging when he wrote the epistle, then there is no longer any serious objection to accepting the early date of Gal. Full discussion of this important point is impossible within the scope of the present commentary, but the outline of the exegetical argument will be found below in the comments on 2:1-10. The view adopted here, therefore, is that Gal was addressed to the converts of St Paul's first missionary journey, being despatched probably whilst on his way up to Jerusalem for the Council in A.D. 49, cf. Ac 15:3. (For details see my article in JRB (1944) 154-74.) Gal is thus the earliest of St Paul's epistles, and throws most valuable light on Ac 13-16.

Occasion and Object—The occasion of the Epistle was the news that his Galatian converts (mostly Gentiles, as it would appear from Ac 13-14; Gal 4:8) were being won over by certain 'false brethren' to the doctrine that circumcision and the Mosaic Law were as necessary to salvation as faith in Christ, 2:16; 5:2. Acceptance of this doctrine would logically result in the conclusion that faith in Christ, and therefore the redemption on the Cross, was insufficient to justify a man without adherence to the Law of Moses; in other words, all converts to Christianity were bound to Judaize, i.e. live as Jews. This would have been a mortal blow at the universality of the Church and clean contrary to the teaching of Christ and the subsequent instruction to St Peter, Ac 10-11.

These Judaizers, Ac 15:1, 5, 24, had gone down to Antioch and there, it seems, had wrongly alleged the authority of the Apostles for their doctrine. Not content with causing mischief at Antioch, some of them had secretly, 2:4, gone into southern Galatia to attempt to win over Paul's converts to their way of thinking.

Their chief arguments were the agreed fact that the Law of Moses was divinely instituted and that Christ had said he came 'not to destroy but to fulfil the Law', Mt 5:17. To overcome any scruples of the Galatians they declared that their teaching had the support of the Twelve whose authority was in any event superior to that of Paul, who (they claimed) was probably also in agreement in his heart of hearts. Paul's reaction was swift and violent. Stirred to his depths and quivering with just indignation he at once dictated this passionate vindication of his apostolic authority and crushing denunciation of their wicked error and of all who followed or favoured it. He put the true issue to the Galatians with unmistakable force and clarity: 'If you be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing', 5:2. We know that in the 893f main his appeal succeeded because not only did the Council of Jerusalem fully endorse Paul's policy and action but there is also no hint of any dissidence when a short time afterwards he again passed through the southern Galatian region 'delivering unto them the decrees for to keep that were decreed by the apostles and ancients that were at Jerusalem', Ac 16:4.

g Doctrine—Like all the letters of Paul, Gal is embarrassingly rich in dogmatic content not only directly but also by way of countless allusions to doctrines which he presupposes his readers to know thoroughly. Thus we have his allusion to the peculiar and pre-eminent position of St Peter, whose example is sufficient even to detach Barnabas from his allegiance to St Paul, 2:13, his assumption of the existence of one authoritative Church, universal in extent, entered by baptism, one in doctrine, and ruled with infallible and absolute authority by the Apostles, Gal 1:9, 2:9; 3:27, 28; 6:16. There are also invaluable references to the doctrine of the Blessed Trinity (1:3; 3:2, 5, 14; 4:6) and to that of personal union with Christ, and of our union with one another in Christ, 2:20; 3:27, 28; 4:19; 6:15. But its main teaching concerns the general economy of salvation for all, Jew and Gentile, based on faith in God's promises, and the relation of the Law of Moses to it.

It has been well said that the starting point of this epistle as of St Paul's theology is his vision of the glorified Christ on the road to Damascus, 1:16. In the splendour of that vision he knew Christ to be the only begotten Son of God who became man to redeem the world and who by his sacrificial death on the Cross and resurrection from the dead compensated in his own person for the sins of the whole world and merited pardon for sin, sanctifying grace and the promise of eternal life for all who believe and obey him, without distinction of race, class or sex, 1:4, 3:20, 28; 4:5.

h The Judaizers, however, insisted that in order to participate in the benefits of the redemption every catechumen must observe the Law of Moses, including the rite of circumcision, and asserted that salvation was impossible without it. Now these Christian Pharisees were affected by the strongest school of thought in contemporary Judaism, the school that esteemed the Law of Moses as eternal and immutable, even, it would seem, identifying it with the divine wisdom and regarding it as the source of grace and life, of joy and peace (J. Bonsirven, Le Judaïsme Palestinien, Paris, 1934, I, 302-3). But though he admitted the Law to be divinely given, 3:19, St Paul refused to allow it any redemptive power or power to justify, for that would be to put it in the place of the unique and utterly sufficing sacrifice of Christ on the Cross, 3:21. The error was fundamental and had to be instantly crushed, for compromise was impossible without nullifying the Cross of Christ, 2:21. So in this Epistle, while showing that for all men for all time salvation has been, is, and always will be based on belief in Christ and his justifying grace, he devotes more space to showing the Galatians why the Law cannot justify and what its true place in the economy of salvation is.

894a For St Paul there are three stages in the religious life of the world from the time of Abraham, the founder of the Jewish race and the greatest hero and saint of ancient Israel: (1) from Abraham to Moses: during which justification came through faith in God's promises, without any positive law properly so-called (circumcision being only the sign of God's covenant with Abraham, Gen 17:11); (2) from Moses to Christ: during which justification came through faith in the promises, but with the obligation besides of keeping the Law positively given on Sinai (faith, not Law, justifying); (3) since Christ: justification by faith in him and at the same time by the keeping of the Law of the Gospel (which is much more than a new and improved edition of Judaism).

b Christianity is not so much an addition to and a completion of the imperfect OT regime as a positive religion of pardon, justification, salvation and life through Christ and in Christ, prolonging beyond the interlude of the Law of Moses the covenant concluded by God with Abraham and his posterity. In this Epistle the extrinsic, adventitious and transitory character of the Mosaic Law clearly appears. It is emphasized by the fact that the Law was promulgated by the mediation of angels and of Moses and under the form of a bilateral contract which the apostasies of the Jewish people could render inoperative. The promises, on the contrary, were made to Abraham directly and unilaterally; they are by way of favour, are without any condition (circumcision was only imposed later as a sign and seal of the covenant) and concern all the peoples of the world. For St Paul the essential thing for every human being is the establishment and promotion of the divine life in the soul through union with Jesus—which cannot be done by adherence to the Law, 3:20, 21. This divine life Abraham received by faith in God's promises independently of the works of the Law and by a pure favour of God, 3:6-9. Justification (δικαιοσύνη), which means for St Paul the passage from the state of enmity with God resulting from original and actual sin to the state of sonship in which we possess the divine life of Christ in ourselves, is always the free gift of God to us in virtue of the gift of faith. Christians, whether Jew or Gentile, are now the true sons of Abraham and heirs of the promises because they too have received justification by faith in the Son of God, likewise entirely out of God's liberality. Christ by dying on the Cross as the representative of the whole human race satisfied for the sins of the whole human race whether committed explicitly against the Law of Moses or against the natural law. Like Christ the Christian must die to the Law through the Law so that he may live to God, 2:19. This mystical death to all the impulses of his lower nature which the Christian undergoes in baptism makes him live on a new plane in which he 'walks in the Spirit,' 5:25f., and so is no longer under the Law, 5:18. This liberty of the sons of God comes from the doing to death of the vices and concupiscences of the flesh; he is a new creature, 6:15, whose life, being the life of Christ, of whom he is a member and also of whom he is a temple, 2:20; 3:6; 1 Cor 6:15, 19, shows forth the fruits of the Spirit, 5:22-23, against which there is no law, the life of faith that worketh by charity, 5:6.

The True Nature of the Law of Moses—Since justification has never at any time in the religious history of mankind come through the observance of the Law but only through faith in the promises, what is the position of the Law in the history of the Jews?

The Law imposed a curse on all who were subject to it, yet failed to keep it, but did not supply the means to keep it; it merely provided a standard or code by which the Jews were judged and by which their transgressions were revealed (and even increased because of their failures to keep the Law), 3:19. The Law was like a prison, for it revealed the unhappy servitude of the human race and itself offered no means of escape, 3:22; but it did at the same time perform the useful function of isolating the Jews from pagan vice and idolatry, did in fact keep them together and directed them towards the future Messias, 3:22. In this sense before the coming of Christ, mankind was a minor and a pupil, and the Law was his pedagogue and tutor, 3:24. Now that Christ has come the task of the pedagogue has ended; the Jews are no longer under his authority but have entered into full sonship and inheritance, 4:5-6. Thus the part of the Law in the history of the Jews was that of a provisional and transitory dispensation suitable for the adolescence of the human race and destined to pass away when the coming of Christ inaugurated its full maturity. There is now in consequence no distinction between Jew and Gentile, 3:28.

St Paul gives the following proofs of the abrogation of the Law of Moses and of its powerlessness to justify, 894e 2:16-21: (1) The Apostles and faithful have always acted on the assumption of its powerlessness; (2) Scripture itself declares it, Ps 142(143):2; (3) the abandonment of the Law on the strength of the sufficiency of the redemption would, if the Law still retained its obligatory character, be sin, the blame for which we should have to place upon Christ—which would be blasphemous: whilst on the contrary those who are putting themselves again under the yoke of the Law must admit the sin of having abandoned it in the first place; (4) the Christian, being mystically crucified, has died to the Law with Christ; (5) since the death of Christ, which is the source of all graces, has infinite value, to set up another means of arriving at perfect justice is to deny the redemptive power of the Cross of Christ (cf. Prat, op. cit. I, 198-9); (6) the characteristics of the regime of Law are incompatible with those of the Promise; for whereas the Promise is the source of freely given spiritual goods, the Law always offers a quid pro quo, a measured recompense for a measured service, 3:12; (7) Christ by his death on the Cross, in which 'he became a curse for us', 3:13, redeemed us from the curse of the Law by fulfilling in his Person all the requirements of the Law perfectly and at the same time making complete and perfect satisfaction for all the transgressions of the Jews (and mankind in general) against the Law. The Law thus satisfied has no further claims on him nor on the rest of the human race in so far as they are united to him by baptism. The Law therefore has no further power over him or over us and hence Paul can say, 'For I, through the Law am dead to the Law, that I may live to God: with Christ I am nailed to the Cross', 2:19.

f (8) To conclude his argument St Paul gives the famous allegory of Agar and Sara, representing the two testaments. Agar the slave represents the synagogue; Sara, the free-woman, symbolizes the Church. Their respective sons take after the condition of their mothers. Therefore those who wish to Judaize rank themselves with Ismael, the son according to the flesh, and renounce the patrimony given to Isaac, the son of the promise, which is also that of Christians who are the true spiritual heirs of Abraham. The point of the comparison is that the lesser and imperfect testament must give place to the new and perfect one, for the two are incompatible, and cannot co-exist: 'Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman', 4:30; Gen 21:9-13.

This is one of the best examples of the use of the spiritual sense of Scripture to prove a thesis, cf. Amiot, op. cit. 202, Note 1; J. Bonsirven, Exégèse Rabbínique, 275, 309-10, Prat, op. cit. I, 221-2; Lagrange, op. cit. 118-22.

For further treatment of the Law and Justification cf. commentaries on Rom and Heb, and art. 'Christianity in Apostolic Times'.

g I 1-II 21 Vindication of his Apostolic Authority—

The haste in which this Epistle was composed is shown by the abruptness of the beginning and the deferment of any greeting to his correspondents till v 3.

I 1-5 Introduction—1. From the first word Paul claims the fullness of the apostolic authority, for his, too, is from God (unlike that of false apostles which is 'of men'); and like the Twelve he has been commissioned not by the mediation of men ('by man') but directly by Jesus Christ, (Ac 9:3 f., and so by God the Father, who thus constituted Paul a true witness of the Resurrection. 2. 'All the brethren who are with me' probably refers to his small band of companions 'The churches of Galatia' refer to the local churches founded during the first missionary journey, Ac 13:14 f.; the omission of all commendation of them is pointed. 3. These words of greeting are found in all the epistles of St Paul save Hebrews, and they clearly show that the Galatians believed without question Paul's teaching of the complete equality of the Son with the Father.

Κύριος (Lord) is always a divine title with St Paul 894e (cf. J. Lebreton, Histoire du Dogme de la Trinité, 1927, I, 368, and 1 Cor 8:6). 4. Paul will later show them that their readiness to accept circumcision demonstrated their failure properly to value the atoning death of Christ. 5. Doxology. The everlasting character of God's Kingdom is contrasted with the present evil age.

6-10 A Stern Rebuke for their Apostasy—6. According to the view of the date and occasion of the Epistle taken in § 893c-d no more than a few months had elapsed since Paul had left them; cf. Ac 14:22 f. Lightfoot notes that this is the sole instance in which St Paul omits to express his thankfulness for their faith in addressing any Church, substituting for it this indignant expression of surprise. 'I wonder that you are so soon in process of abandoning him (God) . . . for another gospel—which is not another'. 7. There can be no other gospel: it is merely a matter of certain men (Judaizers) presenting a false teaching utterly incompatible with the true gospel. 8. Any such teacher should be regarded as given over to destruction, utterly excluded from the Kingdom of God (anathema), and hence by inference excommunicated also. The Church in its Councils has taken over the use of this same formula. 9. His solemn anathema clearly shows that he regards himself as infallible, and Christianity as a religion of authority. 10. Clearly his Judaizing opponents had falsely accused him of compromising and of lack of consistency in the past; cf. 5:11.

I 11-II 21 The Mission of St Paul by God the Father 895a

I himself—The Judaizers of Galatia maintained that their gospel came from Christ through the Twelve Apostles, but Paul declares that the Gospel of Jesus Christ was directly revealed to him by God the Father in the same way that St Peter himself received it, Mt 16:16 f., Gal 1:16 (cf. Chapman, RBn 29 (1912) 133-47); hence his gospel is as authoritative as that of Peter and identical with it. 11-12. His gospel is not a man-made doctrine, nor has it been transmitted through a man but it came, as Chapman says, 'by a revelation of Jesus Christ, which taught me who He is' (rather than Lightfoot's subjective genitive, 'by a revelation from Jesus Christ'). 13 f. He begins explaining in detail how his Gospel teaching has always been independent of, though fully in accord with, that of the Twelve. 13. 'Conversation': i.e. manner of life. 'Beyond measure': far more than the other Jews. 14. Cf. Phil 3:5-6. He advanced more quickly in knowledge and authority than any of his contemporaries, because of his greater zeal for the traditions (added to the Law by the Pharisees); cf. Mt 23 passim. 15. There is perhaps here a play on the meaning of the word 'Pharisee'. Paul, already 'a Separated One' from his birth, had been in a more profound sense 'separated' or pre-destined before his birth (cf. Jer 1:5) to his Christian vocation. 16. The reference here is primarily to his conversion, Ac 9:3 f. 'Immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood': this revelation of the Son to him by the Father was so all-sufficing that he had no need to seek further enlightenment even from the Twelve, including St Peter. 17-24. He now gives a list of his movements in subsequent years to prove that his few contacts with the Twelve had not been for the purpose of obtaining doctrinal information.

17. 'The apostles who were before me', i.e. the Twelve, chosen in point of time before him. 'Arabia' probably means the country south of Damascus, the kingdom of the Nabataeans, rather than the district of Sinai. We have no record of what happened during these three years, but while the opinion of the Fathers is that he immediately started preaching, many now prefer to think that he devoted himself to a life of prayer and meditation similar to that of St Benedict at Subiaco. 18. 'After three years', i.e. three years from his conversion according to the Jewish mode of reckoning; cf. Mt 16:21. On the date of St Paul's conversion, cf. § 895c. 'to see' (ιστορησαι): to make the direct official acquaintance of Peter, cf. Ac 9:26-30.

895b 19-20. Paul declares on oath that of the Twelve he saw only Peter and James on this visit. 'James' is most probably James the Less, the first bishop of Jerusalem, a cousin of our Lord; cf. §§ 672-3. 21. Paul now evangelized the regions near his native city of Tarsus in Cilicia and around Antioch in Syria; cf. Ac 9:30; 11:25. 22-24. Outside Jerusalem he was not known in Judaea at that time save by reputation, though he was to become much better known to the Churches of Judaea during his next visit, the Famine Relief visit, Ac 11:29-30.

c II 1-10.—The complicated question of the identification of this visit to Jerusalem with the corresponding visit in Ac has been briefly discussed in § 893c-d. The visit recorded here is therefore taken to be identical with the famine relief visit of Ac 11:29-30; cf. also Chrys. Hom. in Ac 25:2, PG 60, 193. 1. 'After fourteen years': St Paul is still pursuing the same line of argument as in the latter part of the preceding chapter; he means 'fourteen years' from his conversion according to Jewish reckoning, cf. § 124g, i.e. anything between say 12½-14 full years after his conversion. The date of this visit could not have been later than the winter of A.D. 46-7, when the famine was at its height; cf. Ac 11:29-30 for further details. According to the view taken here St Paul's conversion must have occurred between A.D. 31-4; but cf. § 831a for a different view. 'Titus' was one of St Paul's early Gentile converts. His name is not mentioned in Ac, but several times in 2 Cor. St Paul wrote to him the Pastoral Epistle of the same name.

d 2. Paul's going up to Jerusalem in obedience to 'a revelation' is quite compatible with his other purpose of taking the famine relief. Indeed, it is not forcing the text to make it mean that he went up in response to the 'revelation' made to Agabus (Ac 11:18). But if we take it as a special revelation made to himself, then in this revelation he was instructed to compare his teaching with that of the Twelve not for the purpose of reaching an agreement (which already existed), but for mutually confirming their complete doctrinal harmony and in order to forestall future possible sources of disagreement over matters of practical policy. 'Communicated to them . . .': instructed by his revelation Paul thought it prudent and necessary, not to ask for approbation but privately to compare his teaching with that of the Twelve and to secure recognition of their complete harmony and agreement lest there should be any misunderstanding or threat of rupture between him and Peter, James and John, i.e. lest he had, or should, 'run in vain'; 'but privately before the authorities'; τοῖς δοκοῦσιν is a term of honour, not of depreciation. This action of Paul was therefore taken to safeguard unity, and in view of the storm that arose in Ac 15 it was well to have secured in advance the full trust of, and complete accord with, the Apostles.

e 3-5 form a parenthesis that interrupts Paul's account of his private conference with Peter, James and John; what happened at their conference and what resulted from it is told in 6-10. 3. We have seen that on this visit Paul brought with him the Jew Barnabas and the Greek Titus, both his friends and helpers. This verse begins a parenthesis as Paul suddenly introduces a new consideration, viz. that in tacitly approving of his having Titus as a collaborator, uncircumcised Gentile though he was, the Apostles showed that they were already committed in principle to the admission of uncircumcised Gentiles into the Christian fellowship. The question of circumcising Titus never arose at all; the question, St Paul means, was not raised on that occasion, though it would have been, if the Apostles had ever accepted the views of the Judaizers. 4. 'But (your liberty is now in danger) because of false brethren . . .': the words in brackets, or some clause such as 'I only mention Titus here', are required to complete the sense, both subject and verb being wanting in the Gk; cf. Orchard, art. cit. supra. These 'false brethren' are the persons mentioned in Ac 15:1-2. 'into servitude', viz. by insisting on the necessity of circumcision and the observance of the Mosaic Law by all Gentile converts. 895e 5 sums up the resistance described in Ac 15:2 f., and concludes the parenthesis. 6 resumes the description of Paul's private conference. The authorities, i.e. the three Apostles, imparted no fresh knowledge to him, saw nothing defective or incorrect in his teaching, but on the contrary heartily recognized his mission as being directly from God. 'But of these who are looked up to as authorities': St Paul is depreciating not the Twelve themselves, but the extravagant and exclusive claims set up for them by the Judaizers, viz. the fact that the Twelve knew Jesus in the flesh before his Resurrection did not give them any special advantage over him, for God does not judge according to this. Both he and they are Apostles in the fullest sense and God does not regard the difference between him and them in the circumstances of their call. While admitting fully their Apostolic Authority his own is not dependent on their approbation. 7. ' . . . in the same way as to Peter was that of the circumcision': the revelation made to Paul in Ac 9:3 f. is comparable only with that made to Peter in Mt 16:16 f.; cf. Chapman, art. cit. supra. 8. 'He who wrought for Peter', by making his apostolate fruitful among the Jews, 'wrought for me also among the gentiles'. 'The gospel of the uncircumcision' means 'the uncircumcised Gentiles as the object of the apostolate' (Lagrange). This mission of Paul to the Gentiles must not be understood in any exclusive or monopolistic sense, but he himself had been called in the designs of God primarily for work among the Gentiles. Peter as the Chief of the Apostles and the centre of unity had the responsibility of welding the Jewish and Gentile elements in the Church into one whole and because of his closer contact with the mother-church of Jerusalem and of his pre-eminence among the Apostles (cf. Roiron, RSR [1913] 501-4) he personifies for Paul the principal agent in the conversion of the Jews, at this particular time at any rate. Of course St Paul never renounced, nor did St Peter ever confine himself to, the evangelization of the Jews; cf. Ac 10-11; 1 and 2 Pet passim. 9. 'the grace', i.e. of the Gentile apostolate; cf. Rom 1:5. 'James and Cephas and John'. Lightfoot (in loc.) remarks that when St Paul is speaking of the missionary office of the Church at large, St Peter holds the foremost place, 7, 8: when he refers to a special act of the Church of Jerusalem, St James is mentioned first, as here; cf. Ac 12:17; 15:13; 21:18. On St Paul's relative use of Cephas and Peter, see Chapman, art. cit. 143. 'Who are regarded as pillars', a statement without any touch of irony or depreciation. The accord here made between the Three Pillars and Paul on the latter's second visit to Jerusalem was to be renewed on his third visit to the Holy City, Ac 15 passim. In all probability they agreed on a territorial delimitation of their spheres, the Pillars retaining the evangelization of Palestine, whilst St Paul kept to the westward; cf. also Rom 15:20. 10. 'Only (they would) that we should be mindful of the poor; which was the very thing I had also been careful to do'. The aorist ἐνομούσα can bear here a pluperfect sense. The reference is clearly to the famine relief collection, Ac 11:29-30. St Paul's constant solicitude for the welfare of the mother-Church in Jerusalem is also seen in 1 Cor 16:1-4; 2 Cor 8-9; Rom 15:26-27; Ac 24:17; also § 637a.

h 11-21 The Incident at Antioch.—It would appear that the incident at Antioch took place either immediately before or immediately after the first missionary journey of Paul. 11. Cf. also 14 infra. This statement implies that St Paul both recognized and venerated the authority of St Peter as being superior to his own (Lagrange); there is no ground for the assumption that Paul considered himself superior to Peter. The use of the title Κηφᾶς and its contrast with Πέτρος, 7-8, show that he was fully aware of Peter's position as The Rock; cf. McNabb, New Testament Witness to St Peter, London, 1928, 43-6. 12. St Peter was 895h scandalizing Gentile Christians. It is clear from this verse and from Ac 10:5-10 that Peter now made no distinction between clean and unclean foods. It is also clear from Ac 15:24 that the emissaries from Jerusalem must either have exceeded their powers or abused them. It was presumably for the sake of peace and to avoid serious friction that Peter 'withdrew gradually' from taking meals with the Gentile converts in Antioch. Peter's authority led the rest of the Jewish Christians and even Paul's own lieutenant, Barnabas, to follow his example. 18. Though Peter's attitude was negative, it was nevertheless 'hypocritical' in the sense that his action was not in conformity with his convictions, and the truth of the Gospel and the liberty of the Gentiles (not to mention the Jews as well) from the Mosaic Law would very soon have been endangered. 14-21 sum up St Paul's speech on this occasion to Peter and to the faithful of Antioch. 14a. 'the truth of the Gospel', i.e. liberty of conscience with respect to the ritualistic prescriptions of the Mosaic Law. Paul reproached Peter not with a doctrinal error, but with not holding firm in the principle which he recognizes, 'conversationis vitium, non praedicationis' (Tert., De praescript. 23). 'before them all', i.e. before a formal gathering of Jewish and Gentile Christians. 14b. Peter is accused of exerting a moral pressure in favour of Judaizing since the Gentile Christians would feel themselves bound to submit in order not to be separated from the chief of the Apostles. N.B.—For the local compromise agreed on for the storm-centre areas of Syria, Cilicia and Galatia, see Ac 15:28-29. No word is said there about Jewish Christians and the Mosaic ritual, but Gentile Christians are to observe four prohibitions, which seem to be identical with those formerly imposed in the OT upon Gentile minorities in Jewish territory, for the sake of peaceful living, cf. Lev 17:8, 10, 13; 18:26. 15. Said perhaps with a slight touch of irony, but the verse emphasizes the special privileges of Israel as a race possessing a rule of conduct vastly superior to anything found among Gentile nations, whom they therefore referred to as sinners. 16 gives the essence of Paul's position. Cf. Ac 15:11. 'Justification' in St Paul means an interior purification by which a man's sins are utterly blotted out and he is made acceptable to God in virtue of faith with charity, and good works, cf. § 894c, and Rom 2-5. The last part of the verse is a free quotation of Ps 142(143):2; no one under the Old Dispensation was justified, not even by the works of the Law, save by the foreseen merits of Christ, and through faith in God's promise of Redemption. It would seem that Paul is in fact using this text in an accommodated sense, cf. RB (1938) 503-4.

896a 17. A difficult verse, which seems to mean: seeing that in order to be justified in Christ it was necessary to abandon our old ground of legal righteousness and to become 'sinners' (i.e. to put ourselves in the position of heathen), may it not be argued that Christ is thus made a minister of sin? (Lightfoot). 'Heaven forbid that anyone should teach that justification by faith without the Law makes a man a sinner; for Christ would be responsible'. 18. But to put oneself back again under the Law after having abandoned it would indeed be 'to make oneself a transgressor of it'. This verse seems to hint at the possible consequence of Peter's action. Renunciation of the Law is then absolutely imperative. If the Jew who abandons it apparently makes himself a 'sinner', he does it in reality in order to be at once justified in a marvellous participation of the life of Christ. He will have gained infinitely more than he has lost.

b 19. 'For I died to the Law through (the) law . . .': he died to the Mosaic Law through a mystic death realized through faith and baptism, by which a Christian puts on Christ and is united to his death; cf. Gal 3:29; Rom 6:3. 'Through (the) law' is a difficult phrase, and is easier, perhaps, to understand as 'through the law of faith', cf. 6:2, than 'through the Law of Moses', which, in causing as it were the death and Resurrection of Christ, does the same for us in virtue of our solidarity with him. Being freed from the bondage of the Law by this mystic death, the Christian now lives with the life of God and in union with him. 'With Christ I was and am crucified': the perfect tense of the Greek verb indicates that the state acquired by a man on the day of his justification by baptism still endures. For further development of the idea of concrucifixion, cf. Gal 5:24; 6:14; Rom 6:6.

20. 'And it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me'. These words have inspired a great mystical literature which has attempted to draw out their meaning. 'Walking in the spirit' (5:25) the Christian is 'another Christ' in virtue of his mystical union with him. His present physical life since his conversion is a life elevated and animated by faith in Christ. 21. To return to the practice of the Law of Moses would be to spurn this incomparable gift of divine life. If justification could be gained through the Law then the Redemption was unnecessary and a mockery.

We are not told the effect of these words on Peter, but obviously Paul would not have related the incident unless the issue had been favourable to him and Peter had seen his mistake. At the subsequent Council of Jerusalem, Ac 15:6 f., the conditions laid down for the fraternization of Gentile Christians with the rest of the Church (in which Peter concurred) marked a complete victory for St Paul on all the essential points.

III 1-V 12 The Gospel of Paul agrees with the Promises of the Old Testament—Paul, having established fully the independence and authority of his teaching and its full acceptance by the other Apostles, including Peter, now demonstrates its full harmony and continuity with the doctrine of the OT. The Judaizers had misunderstood the relation between Christianity and the OT, so he sets out the doctrinal basis of his doctrine of the liberty of the Gentiles from the Mosaic Law, by showing that they are the heirs of the promises and of the blessing given to Abraham before the Law and before Circumcision. The New Dispensation is not merely superimposed on the Old Dispensation, nor an enriched edition of it. But the two are incompatible, the New driving out the Old.

3:1. Omit 'that you should not obey the truth'. 'Before whose eyes Jesus Christ crucified has been exhibited': these words show the important place held by the Passion in the preaching of Paul. 2-5. He tells them to recall to mind that it was the wonderful and beneficent activity of the Holy Spirit among them that had transformed their lives, and not adhesion to the Mosaic Law; cf. Ac 13-14. 2. 'The hearing of faith' here and in 5 means 'faith which has come through hearing'. 4. 'Suffered': the Greek could also equally well mean 'experienced'; in which case the reference would be to the magnitude of their supernatural experiences. 6. The answer to the question put in 5, viz. 'By faith of course' is omitted by St Paul as being too obvious to require statement. 'It is written' is not in Gk, but the sense is 'And so it was with Abraham who believed . . .'; cf. Gen 15:1-6. Abraham was justified because of his faith in God who had just promised him a numerous posterity (and ultimately the Messiah) at a time when humanly speaking it was impossible for him or Sara to have a son. The comparison between Abraham and the Christian rests on the fact that in either case it is faith in God's promises and not the works of the Law that makes them pleasing to God. 7. The only true sons of Abraham are those who imitate his faith. The virtue of faith brings the Gentiles closer to Abraham than carnal descent brought the Jews. 8. 'evangelized Abraham in anticipation', i.e. gave him the good news in advance. The Scripture blessed the Gentiles in and with Abraham because it foresaw that faith would play the same part in their salvation and bring them the same blessings. Abraham was justified by faith fifteen years before ever the law of circumcision was imposed; cf. Ramsay, op. cit.

896e § xxxi. 9. Those who rely on faith in Jesus Christ for their justification shall be blessed with the faithful Abraham. 10. But everyone who is under, or who puts himself under, the Law is morally obliged to keep it in its entirety under pain of malediction, Deut 27:26. It is true that before Christ for a Jew faith also required the faithful observance of the Law. 11. But this is no longer so; since Christ abrogated the Law, faith in Christ alone suffices. The quotation from Hab 2:4 refers in its original context to the faith of the Jewish exiles in the accomplishment of God's promise regarding the return from the Babylonian captivity; it may be translated either 'the just man shall live by faith', i.e. in virtue of faith, or 'he who is just by faith shall live'. 12. The Law, as such, has not faith for its principle. The quotation from Lev 18:5 proves that the Law is concerned solely with works and with nothing else. St Paul means that the vivifying principle even in OT observance of the Law was faith. 13. But now redemption through Christ has taken away all value from legal observances. The Law could only reveal the deficiencies of human conduct; it could not cure them or atone for them. This Christ himself did in redeeming us by the sacrifice of the Cross. As regards Deut 21:23 it is clear that in the case of Christ the curse is only apparent and in the common estimation of men. But he took upon himself all the penalties due to the human race for its transgressions of God's Law, and atoned for them by his death, thus completely negating the curse. 14. And because Christ is God as well as man, 'the blessing of Abraham' (which is justification by participation in the life of God through the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of Jesus) is given alike to Jew and Gentile through his death and resurrection.

g 15-29 The Blessings of Abraham are Inherited solely through an Indefectible Promise—15. He institutes a comparison from human affairs. 'A man's will, if it be valid, no man annuls or adds fresh clauses to it'. 16. Cf. Gen 13:14-17; 17:5-8; 22:15-18. St Paul, with the Jewish Rabbis, takes the promise of the possession of the land of Canaan symbolically of the glorious and eternal Messianic Kingdom. 'Thy seed' is Christ, considered as the principle of unity of the human race, and through whom the promises were fulfilled. 17-18. The Law coming 430 years later did not in any way modify the testament of the inheritance by God's free promise. Paul follows the LXX; cf. Ex 12:40 and §§ 124-5. 19. 'because of transgressions', i.e. to reveal sins. Jewish tradition held that the Law was given to Moses as mediator by means of angels. 20. Though this verse might mean that the Law is inferior to the Promise because it comes from God indirectly whilst the Promise comes without intermediary, St Paul probably means that the Mosaic covenant was a bilateral alliance involving a mediator (Moses) and the possibility of the covenant failing through the transgression of the Jews, whereas God's Promise was unilateral, unconditional, indefectible, and could not be modified by the Law. 21. The Law could only be against the promises if it could give life. 22. 'hath shut up all under sin' as in a prison—the Scripture is here represented as doing that which it declares to be done; cf. Deut 27:26. 23. 'were guarded', i.e. protected, by being shut up. 24. The pedagogue was a superior slave entrusted with taking a boy through the streets to his schoolmaster. 25. The coming of the faith means the fulfilment of the Promise, and all who believe become sons of God. 27. Baptism is the consequence of the act of faith, and the newly baptised are as it were clothed with Christ, nay more (28) they are one person with him. A magnificent proclamation of the unity and spiritual equality of all human beings. 29. The Christian is the true seed of Abraham and true heir to the Promise; Christians are the true 'Israel of God'; cf. 6:16.

h IV:1-11 At Christ's coming the Period of Tutelage gives place to that of Full Worship of God—3. 'elements of the world' probably signify those imperfect rules of conduct which held humanity in a kind of slavery—for the Jews their legal observances, for the Gentiles their pagan rites and customs. 4. A very important verse from which we learn of the pre-existence of the Son, of his taking flesh from a Woman, cf. Apoc 12:1-2, at a time predetermined by God, and of his further condescension in his submission to the Law, cf. Lk 2:21. 'Fulness of the time', the time fixed by God for the ending of the minority of the human race, cf. Eph 1:10, also Heb 1:1. 'born of a woman': the only direct mention of the Blessed Virgin in the Pauline writings; the Gk γενόμενον, 'made', is practically synonymous with γεννώμενον, 'born', and so we render with WV and RV. 'born under the law': subject to the Mosaic Law. 5. The two-fold object of the divine plan, to redeem the Jews from the Law and to confer divine sonship on all. 6. The Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Jesus, gives the Christian this sonship and the intimate conviction thereof. 7. Sonship gives inheritance of God's kingdom. 8-10. 'by nature', i.e. in reality. These verses imply that most of the Galatian converts were Gentiles; nevertheless they have already started to observe the Jewish calendar. 11. He fears lest his work among them may have utterly failed.

12-20 A Digression revealing his Anxiety concerning their Lapse—12. A plea for unity. 13-14. This 'infirmity' or weakness of health, though a 'trial' to them, did not diminish their welcome. 15. sc. What has now become of your rejoicing? Some think this verse hints at St Paul's having some disease of the eyes. 17. 'They pay court to you for bad motives; and they would hatch you out' (in order to exploit you, cf. JTS 40 (1939) 149-51), so that you in turn may pay court to them'. 18. 'But it is always good to be courted for a good motive', i.e. by Paul himself. 19. Owing to their lapse he has again to go through the labour of begetting them in Christ. 20. 'Change my voice', i.e. modify my severe tone, 'because I am perplexed about you'.

21-31 The Allegory of the Two Covenants—On 897a rabbinic exegesis, cf. Bonsirven, Exégèse Rabbinique, 275, 309-10. Paul assumes the existence of the mystical sense (cf. § 40) in Scripture, in which events and figures of the OT are types of the NT. Taking yet another illustration from the history of Abraham, he shows that those who rely on the Law instead of faith in the Promise are to be excluded from the inheritance; cf. Prat, op. cit., I, 221. 22. Cf. Gen 16:15; 17:15-21; 21:2, 9. 23. 'According to the flesh': on the one side all happened according to nature; but on the other, according to a divine promise, miraculously realized. 24. 'Which things are allegorically interpreted' as follows. 25. '(For Sinai is a mountain in Arabia)': a supplementary confirmation of his interpretation inserted in parenthesis; for Ismael is connected with Arabia through being the ancestor of the chief Arab tribe. Arabia then denoted all the land S. and E. of Palestine. 'She corresponds to that Jerusalem. . .'. 26. i.e. the Church. 27. Cf. Is 54:1, with which the Rabbis connected Is 51:2. 28. '... children of a promise'. 29. The hostility of the Ismaelites to the Israelites was a commonplace in rabbinic writings, cf. also 1 Par 5:10, 19; Ps 82(83):6-8. 30. Cf. Gen 21:10. 31b. [V:1a]. A variant reading gives the sense: 'Christ freed us in order that we should be free, not slaves'. V:1 [V:1b]. Having escaped the slavery of paganism, they are exhorted not to fall again into slavery—of Judaism this time. 2. The Judaizers must have told the Galatians that circumcision was necessary for salvation (cf. Ac 15:1). 4. 'made void from Christ', i.e. made nothing and separated from him. 5. 'in spirit', viz. acting by the Holy Spirit. 'The hope of justice', i.e. the good things received through justification. 6. Faith working through charity is all-sufficing.

7-12 An Attack on the Judaizers—9. Though few in number they are capable of ruining the Church.

897b 11. Cf. 1:10. It appears from this verse that the Judaizers claimed St Paul as at least a secret supporter of circumcision for Gentiles. His reply is that if he were such, (1) he would not be persecuted as he is, and (2) then also what is for them the 'scandal of the cross' would—per impossibile—be set aside. 12. 'Let them who trouble you castrate themselves!' A strong sarcasm. If these Judaizers are so interested in the question let them go one better than circumcision!

e V:13-VI:10 Christian Liberty is not Licence and requires Good Works done in Charity—The danger that freedom from legal observances may lead Christians into excesses of other kinds can only be guarded against by the practice of Christian charity. 14. Cf. Lev 19:18. 17-18 form a slight digression. 17. By 'the spirit', St Paul means the intelligence and will of a man when guided by the Holy Ghost; by 'the flesh', the same powers divorced from the guidance of the Holy Spirit and so leading to evil. 18. 'But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the Law of Moses'. 19-23 contrast the works of the flesh with the fruits of the Spirit. 19. 'fornication': porneia signifies rather sexual irregularity in general. 'Luxury' is not in Gk. 20. 'Emulations', i.e. jealousies. 21. 'Revellings', i.e. sacred orgies. 22-23. DV following Vg makes the number of 'fruits' up to twelve, by adding 'longanimity, modesty, chastity'. 23. Cf. 18. The Law was largely negative; there is now no limit to the practice of virtue under the influence of the Spirit. 24. The Christian by his baptism has died to all 'the works of the flesh'. 25. Yet the complete victory over ourselves is not yet ours, but will be if we follow the Spirit.

26-VI:10 Injunctions regarding our Neighbour—VI:1. 897c 'If any man be caught out . . .' 2. 'Burdens': i.e. both spiritual trials and the moral weaknesses of ourselves and others which we must help to carry. 4. Let each man examine his own conscience, and thus find his ground for boasting in himself and not by comparison with others. 6. 'And let him that is instructed in the Word (i.e. the Gospel) share with his teacher all his (temporal) goods'. 9. ' . . . let us not lose heart'.

11-18 Autograph Epilogue—It was St Paul's custom to dictate his epistles to an amanuensis and only to write the last paragraph in his own handwriting as a proof of genuineness; cf. Rom 16:22; 1 Cor 16:21, etc. 11. 'See with what large letters . . .', i.e. in a large hand. 12. ' . . . as desire to make a fair show in the flesh . . . that they may not be persecuted for the cross of Christ'. Fear of persecution by the synagogue was therefore a leading motive in the Galatian movement towards circumcision. 14. ' . . . through which the world is crucified. . . ' 15. All that matters now is to be 'a new creature' transformed by baptism into a Son of God, being made one with Christ by the seal of the Holy Spirit. 16. 'The Israel of God', i.e. the Church in general. 17. St Paul orders that there be no further disputes on these matters. 'The marks of the Lord Jesus' are almost certainly the marks of the ill-treatment he had already received in Galatia during his first missionary journey; cf. Ac 14 passim.

18. sums up the teaching of the epistle: it is by 'grace' that we are saved and not by the Law; cf. Ac 15:11.

THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS

By D. J. LEAHY

898a Bibliography—*T. K. Abbott, Ephesians and Colossians, ICC, 1897; R. P. Benoit, L'Horizon Paulinien de l'Épître aux Ephésiens, RB 46 (1937) 342-61; H. Coppieters, Les Récentes Attaques contre l'Épître aux Ephésiens, RB 9 (1912) 361-90; St Chrysostom PG 62 (tr. Library of the Fathers, vol 6); G. S. Hitchcock, The Epistle to the Ephesians, London, 1913; P. Ketter, Eph, Phil, Col, Phm in vol. 15 of Die h. Schrift für das Leben erklärt, Freiburg i. B., 1937; I. Knabenbauer, S.J., CSS, 1912; R. P. Médebielle, Épître aux Ephésiens (vol. 6 of La Sainte Bible, ed. Pirot), Paris, 1938; R. P. Médebielle, DBVS, vol. II, 638 ff., art. Eglise; J. Rickaby, S.J., Further Notes on St Paul, London, 1911; *J. Armitage Robinson, St Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, London, 1914; S. Thomae Aquinatis, In Omnes S. Pauli Ep., vol. II, Turin, 1929; J.-M. Vosté, O.P., Commentarius in Epistolam ad Ephesios, Rome, 1932; *B. F. Westcott, St Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, London, 1906.

b Place of Origin and Date—Eph is one of the four Captivity Epistles, all written whilst St Paul was a prisoner, as he mentions in each. According to Ac the Apostle was imprisoned for two years at Caesarea, and he was also imprisoned at Rome. For eighteen centuries nobody suggested that these epistles were written at any other place than Rome, but in modern times Caesarea and Ephesus have been suggested in its stead. Neither has more than a little support from internal evidence, and none at all from tradition. We can safely assume that the epistles were written in Rome. Tychicus (6:21) is the messenger who carries Eph to its destination. The same man, with Onesimus, is the bearer of Col and Phm (Col 4:7-9). Now in Phm (22) St Paul says that he expects to be released shortly, since he asks for a lodging to be prepared for him. Hence, we can place the Captivity Epistles towards the end of the Apostle's first captivity in Rome, in A.D. 63. This is the opinion of practically all Catholics and of the majority of non-Catholic writers of note. There is no clear indication whether Col preceded Eph, but most writers think it did (cf. F. Prat, The Theology of St Paul, vol. I, 280). Eph and Col are companion epistles; on their relation, cf. Introduction to Col, § 909i.

c Destination—On one point nearly all modern commentators are agreed, viz. that Eph was not written exclusively to the church at Ephesus, the only writer of note who maintains the contrary being Fr Cornely, S.J. The chief reason for this agreement is the impersonal character of the epistle. Paul had lived for nearly three years at Ephesus and had many friends and co-workers there (cf. Ac 20:17 ff.). In view of this fact the omission from the epistle of all allusion to his experiences there is disconcerting for anyone claiming that the epistle is addressed to the Ephesians alone. Phil, written about the same time, abounds in personal allusions. Moreover, Timothy is at the Apostle's side, and he is well known to the Ephesians (cf. Ac 19:22), yet there is no mention of him in the greeting of this epistle, though he is mentioned in all the other Captivity epistles. Admittedly, this point decides nothing by itself: Rom abounds in salutations, although the Apostle had not visited Rome at the time of writing. Similarly, 1:15 is not relevant: the verse does not imply that Paul knew only from hearsay of his readers' conversion; it refers to the spiritual progress which had been reported to him.

Nearly all commentators, then, are agreed that Eph d was not written to Ephesus exclusively. Beyond this point agreement ends. There are two main opinions on the precise destination: (1) Eph is a circular (encyclical) epistle. This view, first suggested tentatively by *Theodore Beza (1598) and developed by *James Ussher (1722), is the more popular among commentators today, Catholic and Protestant. Among Catholics we may mention Fouard, Belser, Lagrange (cf. RB 38 [1929] 290-3), Prat, Merk, Lusseau-Collomb, J. Schmid (BS 22 [1928]), Hitchcock, Médebielle. This theory explains why the epistle is impersonal; it has still to explain why the title in Ephesus appears in the greeting according to most MSS. Here the supporters of the encyclical theory divide among themselves. Ussher and many others claim that the words in Ephesus are not authentic. They are absent from the important Vaticanus and Sinaiticus codices, from the Chester-Beatty papyrus (P 46) which dates from about 200, and from the important cursives codex 1739 of Mt Athos (10th or 11th cent.) and codex 424 of Vienna (11th cent.). Ussher suggested that in the autograph a blank space occurred at this point, to be filled in by the names of several churches in Asia Minor, as occasion offered itself. The difficulty against this theory is that no other names occur in the MSS. Indeed, the words in Ephesus are found in all the MSS (including the important codices A and D) other than those mentioned above.

M.-J. Lagrange (RB 38 [1929] 292) is more plausible e in retaining the words in Ephesus. The epistle is an encyclical addressed first to the Ephesians, who were then to pass it on to the churches of Asia Minor. It is very probably the letter which Paul mentions, Col 4:16. The words in Ephesus could easily have disappeared from certain copies, either by design (as 'in Rome', Rom 1:7, 15, missing in codex G), or accidentally.

(2) Eph was written to the church at Laodicea. This f theory, too, explains the impersonal character of the epistle; for Paul had not personally evangelized Laodicea. Moreover, it provides an answer to the question: Why, if Eph is an encyclical intended for several churches, did Paul not mention them (cf. 2 Cor 1:1; Gal 1:1-2)? Thirdly, it regards Col 4:16 as a reference to this epistle. Lastly, there is the testimony of Marcion. We learn from Tertullian (Adv. Marcion, 5, 11, 17, PL 2, 532-4) that Marcion read 'in Laodicea' in place of in Ephesus. Since there is no doctrinal reason why Marcion should change in Ephesus for 'in Laodicea' many writers, Protestant and Catholic (among the latter are Knabenbauer, Delatte, Simon-Prado, Vosté, Huby) think the epistle was written to the Laodiceans.

The great difficulty in this theory is to explain why the name Laodicea disappeared from the MSS to give way to Ephesus. Most of the supporters suggest a reason drawn from Apoc 3:14-19, where the angel of Laodicea severely reprimands the city. Copyists thought they ought to erase the name of a city which no longer merited the name of holy and faithful. But 898f the reproach levelled at Laodicea was the outcome of love (Apoc 3:18); the threats were conditional; and in fact the Laodiceans repented later on. But by that time, says Vosté, it was too late: the name Laodicea had already disappeared from the copies. But why had Ephesus been substituted? There is no extant MS with the title in Laodicea; on the contrary, patristic tradition, beginning with St Irenaeus, is for an original in Ephesus.

g Authenticity—The first doubts on the authenticity were expressed by De Wette (19th cent.). But the standard work against the authenticity was written by *H. Holtzmann (Kritik der Epheser u. Kolosserbriefe, 1872). In England the common view among non-Catholic writers is to admit the authenticity (Lightfoot, Hort, Westcott, Salmond, Abbott, Robinson, Murray, Lock, etc.). There are still a few who follow Holtzmann's lead, though they discard or modify several of his arguments. Thus *J. Moffat (An Introduction to the Literature of the NT, Edinburgh, 1911); *E. J. Goodspeed (The Meaning of Ephesians, Chicago, 1937), both of whom suggest that the epistle was the work of a disciple of St Paul's. Goodspeed suggests that Paul's letters were first collected when attention was drawn to his life by the publication of Acts. The collector of the letters wrote Eph (on the basis of Col and other letters) as a kind of covering letter, or summary, for the collection.

h The arguments used by writers who deny the authenticity are exclusively internal. The chief argument of Holtzmann's is the literary resemblance between Eph and Col. The latter is said to be genuine, but Eph is said to be merely a general doctrinal essay written later on the basis of the particular letter to the Colossians. Coppieters in 1912 and Benoit in 1917 dealt satisfactorily with this objection to the authenticity. They explained the undoubted literary resemblance on the basis of the traditional view that St Paul was the writer of both epistles.

Other arguments used by those who deny the authenticity are based on the vocabulary and style of Eph. The hapax legomena in Eph, however, number only 43; they are roughly equal to the number found in the undoubtedly genuine Gal, and a dozen are found in the description of the Christian's armour (6:10-17).

The argument based on different doctrines in the two epistles is no longer used. There is no contradiction, but a development easily explained by the traditional teaching that the two epistles were written by St Paul about the same time.

i Contents—In captivity at Rome the Apostle's thoughts turn to the empire founded by Christ, our Redeemer in Heaven. The epistle is a non-controversial exposition of how mankind is one in Christ, and of God's purpose for the world through the Church. He sees the redeemed, Jews and Gentiles, bound together in one body ascending from earth to Heaven, to the body's head, Christ. In short, the doctrinal part of the epistle is a theological treatise on the Church.

P. Benoit describes the horizon of Eph as a diptych. In one picture we see Christ triumphant in Heaven (1:20). From Heaven he, as Head of the Church (1:22; 4:15; 5:23), distributes the vital force to the body which enables it to grow (4:16); he builds the house, of which he is the chief corner-stone (2:20). Moreover, he loves the Church, as a husband loves his wife (5:28), since at the time of the marriage he gave himself up for her (5:25) and saved her (5:23) by washing away all stain at baptism (5:26 f.).

In the other picture we see the Church saved and won by Christ, thanks to his atoning sacrifice, a new man (2:15), one body (2:16) subject to him, as wife is to husband (5:24); yet at the same time growing—developing as a body which keeps receiving nourishment from its head (4:16). The Church is like a building (2:20 ff.), the growth and construction of which are pointing to the goal of 'a perfect man' (4:13); of 'a holy temple'; of 'a dwelling of God'

(2:21 f.). There at its goal the Church will have achieved its role of complement to Christ the Redeemer (1-23)—will have reached 'the full measure of maturity' (4:13).

The Church—Three metaphors indicate the nature and the characteristics of the Church. It is one; for 'to one single head belongs one body; otherwise we have a monstrosity. As there is only one natural Christ, it is impossible that there should be more than one mystical Christ' (Prat, The Theology of St Paul, II, 279; cf. commentary on 4:3-6). It is holy: its members are in Christ (a characteristic expression of the epistle), and in him they are made holy (1:13-14, 23; 3:16, etc.) and are saved (1:4-5, 7, 15, 18, etc.). It is universal: the despised Gentiles without hope are now with the Jews 'fellow-citizens of the saints and the household of God' (2:19; cf. Col 3:11). It is apostolic: to Christ the Apostles and Prophets are joined as the foundations on which the temple of the Holy Spirit, which is the Church, is raised up (2:20). Finally, the Church is a visible society. It was to a Church that must teach and rule that Christ gave Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Shepherds and Teachers (4:11). In this epistle, however, St Paul supposes, rather than diligently expounds, the visible nature of the Church, and this chiefly because his main theme here is the mystical union between Christ and the Faithful in the Church. (Cf. Prat, loc. cit., 275-83; Vosté, 42-58.)

In the Captivity epistles especially (and nowhere more deeply than in Eph) St Paul leads us into the inner nature and working of the Church. The Apostle sees the history of humanity under two heads, Adam and Christ. By Adam's sin all men were lost; by the merits of Christ all members of his body, the Church, are saved (cf. Rom 5:12, 19; 1 Cor 15:22). And the influence of Christ as head reaches deeper and wider than that of Adam's sin (Rom 5:12-21). In the 'Great Epistles' St Paul used the teaching of the 'Whole Christ', the Mystical Body, mainly for exhortatory purposes; he was concerned with the union of members among themselves in Christ, rather than with their union with Christ himself. But in the Captivity epistles the theme of the Mystical Body is no longer incidental; it is the central teaching. More precisely, St Paul concentrates on the active role of the head, Christ. Pius XII wrote: 'Christ is in us through His Holy Spirit, Whom He imparts to us and through Whom He acts within us so that any divine effect operated in our souls by the Holy Spirit must be said to be operated in us also by Christ. . . . It is due also to this communication of the Spirit of Christ that all gifts, virtues and miraculous powers which are found so eminently, most abundantly and in their source in the Head, stream into all the members of the Church and in them are perfected daily according to the place of each in the Mystical Body of Jesus Christ, and that, consequently, the Church becomes as it were the fulness and completion of the Redeemer, Christ in the Church being brought to a complete achievement. . . . Christ, Head and Body, is the whole Christ' (MCC, 76, CTS ed. 1944).

St Paul may well have learned his physiology from the 'beloved physician', St Luke (Col 4:14). It is that of the Greek medical writers, and may now be out of date. No matter. It serves only as a vehicle to convey the teaching, an envelope to deliver the message that although Christ is in every respect superior to the whole organism, he is nevertheless present everywhere in the Church. All the life of the members, all the force, perfection and merit comes from the vital and continuous flow of grace from the head. Christ is the Head and Saviour of the Body (5:23). The Body is the Church, a living organism, growing in charity (4:16), the chief agent of its development, the bond uniting and consolidating the whole organism. Christ, then, is in the Christian; the Christian is in Christ. It is only in and by the Church that men can live in Christ. And without the Church Christ would 898m be incomplete (1:23). In Eph we see that the Church is Christ, always living, always doing the work of Christ, adoring, thanking and praising the Blessed Trinity, leading men to God to save and sanctify them. 'It is not enough to represent the Church as a society endowed with legislative power, custodian of a sacred teaching and rite conveying holiness, like a wonderful bureaucracy in charge of a factory founded by God himself. That would be seeing only the external architecture, the Church from the outside. In its inner nature, and in its essence, it is Christ himself, always visible, always living, unfolding in her and by her all the riches and the magnificence of divine life' (Médebielle, DBV(S) II 668).

n Analysis—Introduction 1:1-14.

1. Greeting, 1:1-2.

2. Prologue, The Mystery of God's will decreed in eternity, 1:3-14.

Part I. Doctrine. 1:15-3:21.

1. God's power shown in raising Christ to be Head of the Church, 1:15-23.

2. God's power shown in raising us to salvation in Christ, whether we are Jews or Gentiles, 2:1-10.

3. Hence, Jews and Gentiles alike are fused into One New Unique Man. The 'Mystery', then, fulfilled in the Church, 2:11-22.

4. How the 'Mystery' was promulgated to the Gentiles, 3:1-21.

Part II. Moral. The Christian Life. 4:1-6:20.

1. General Injunctions, 4:1-5:21.

2. Family Life, 5:22-6:9.

3. Epilogue, The Christian Warfare, 6:10-22.

4. Conclusion, 6:23-24.

899a I 1-2 The words at Ephesus are absent from the most important MSS. This raises the interesting question of the destination of the epistle; on which see § 898c. 3-14 Prologue—The Apostle is overwhelmed by feelings of gratitude as from his prison cell in the centre of the Roman Empire he contemplates God's love for mankind. In this 'Magnificat' (one unbroken sentence in the original) he is not content merely to praise God's bounty; he qualifies the word with rich.

3-6 God's eternal purpose—Paul contemplates God the Father's loving plan in eternity to choose us out and to heap on us blessings that are both spiritual and supernatural by reason of our being in Christ. The goal of that eternal election is that we be holy (4b), i.e. separated from the world and consecrated to God; unspotted in his sight: so that our charity can withstand the penetrating gaze of God. 5. How can such holiness be possible? It is made possible by God's fore-ordaining us to be his adopted children in Christ. The notion of the adoption of children is frequent in St Paul (e.g. Rom 8:15-23; Gal 4:5), and except for Rom 9:4 always denotes the interior dignity of those who are in Christ. At our rebirth (Baptism) God infuses into us his own nature, and at once our relation to God is that of child to father. In his beloved son (6c) God loves us and makes us lovable only in so far as we are one in and with Christ.

b 7-13a Realized in Christ—The Redemption and the Mystery—7-8. Paul descends to speak of the greatest proof of God's love for us: our redemption in Christ. This means that we are loosed from the shackles of sin and from God's anger, the price being the sacrifice of Christ's blood (cf. Heb 9:22). Secondly, we are engulfed by the treasure of God's grace. Equipped in this way we are able to understand things in the light of eternal truth—such is the meaning of wisdom (cf. 1 Cor 2:7)—and to conduct our lives accordingly (prudence). 9. But if the benefits of the Redemption are to wield an influence in our lives, the Redemption itself must be made known to us. That is why the Apostle attaches the greatest importance to the revelation of what he calls 'the mystery of his (God's) will'. The expression mystery is characteristic of Eph and Col. Its general meaning is an idea or work of God which is out of reach of man's natural knowledge, and which having been held secret by God for a long time is at length revealed. In these two epistles, however, it has a particular sense; it refers to God's redemptive plan for all mankind (cf. 10c), long a secret, now revealed in Christ (cf. Col 1:26).

Having mentioned the secret (9a) the Apostle describes its unfolding. First, it is centred in Christ (in him, 9c). Secondly (10), it is executed and revealed in the fullness of times (10a), i.e. in the Messianic age. Before the Incarnation there was a succession of periods; but they were incomplete, without harmony, unless they were seen as preparing the way for a period which would make them an harmonious whole (cf. Gal 4:4). Hence the Divine secret was a 'dispensation' (10a), i.e. a systematic arrangement.

10b The Contents of the Mystery: all things are gathered up into one under their head, Christ. DV 're-establish' and Vg 'instaurare' express only part of what St Paul says. The verb ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι is derived not from κεφαλή 'a head' but from κεφάλαιον 'a sum total'; a 'recapitulation'. And the preposition ἀνά means not repetition (as in Vg), but 'together'. It refers back to elements that had been scattered, and which now are together again. The etymological sense, then, of this compound verb is 'to present as one whole' (cf. Vosté). St Paul uses the same verb in this sense (Rom 13:9), and many writers think that its meaning here is only what the etymology allows. But the same writers observe that in the sequel the Apostle shows that the work of unity is in fact brought about by Christ being the head of the body. It seems best to interpret the word in the context. The context is about the 'Head' of the body. May we not see already in this word not only the bringing together of all things in Christ, but also the way in which he makes them all one in him, viz. by becoming the head of the body (cf. § 898k-l). E. Leen ('The True Vine and its Branches', 34) writes: 'The idea . . . is not merely that Christ restored order in creation out of the chaos created by the Fall. Nor is it that Jesus summarizes or synthesizes all creation in Himself. His thought is much more profound. It is that God, in order to reward Christ for having laid down His life to expiate the sins of humanity, made Him to be a new Head for Humanity. Humanity supernaturally slain, or, to use a metaphor, decapitated by the disobedience of Adam, is "recapitated" or "re-headed" by the obedience of Christ' (cf. E. Mersch-Kelly, The Whole Christ, Part II, ch 2, 'St Irenaeus and the "Recapitulation"').

The Apostle goes on to say what things must be gathered under the head, Christ: 'all things . . . that are in heaven and on earth'. Under Christ as head, then, the whole universe must be gathered together and presented as one. Previously it had been scattered by sin, cf. Col 1:20.

11-13a. In the verses that follow the Apostle descends from the universal aspect of the Redemption to contemplate its effect on the two classes of humanity, the Jews converted to Christ (11-12) and the Gentile converts who are also in Christ.

13a-14 God's eternal purpose perfected by the Holy Spirit—Two metaphors characterize the mission and function of the Holy Spirit. He is the seal stamped on our souls at Baptism as the mark of ownership; he is the pledge (the word denotes an actual portion of a whole) of the blessed life paid in full in Heaven. The refrain, unto the praise of his glory, sung for the third time brings the hymn to its conclusion, and shows that the whole expansion of the mystery of salvation, in time and in eternity, by the work of the Three Persons, reaches its final goal in exalting the glory of God.

15-23 Christ ascended to glory, head of the Church f—From the hymn of triumph St Paul turns to the prayer which introduces the doctrinal part of the epistle (which ends at 3:21). 15-17. First, after thanking God for his readers' faith and charity, the Apostle begs God, the source of all glory, to develop 899f in them the gift of wisdom (i.e. a firm grasp of supernatural truths) and revelation (which lays bare truths once hidden); that thus equipped they may possess a deeper understanding of God, unto the full knowledge of himself. 18-19a. In other words, he asks God to bestow the gift of burning faith and love enabling them to appreciate both the blessings which God has in store for the elect, and the mighty power of God at work in the lives of us who believe.

g 19b-23. They can measure the working of God's almighty power by the Resurrection and Exaltation of Christ. 20. The Apostle fixes his eyes on Christ, risen, ascended, glorified and made Head of the Church—no need then for them to be despondent when they reflect on their human frailty. 22. The sequence of the glory and exaltation conferred on Christ by God has a remarkable crescendo up to the climax, he is 'head over all the Church'. This, in the mind of St Paul, is a greater dignity than that of being sovereign over all the angels and all things. The Church is raised to the hypostatic order. 'Look again whither he hath raised the Church! As though he were lifting it up by some engine, he hath raised it up to a vast height, and set it on yonder throne; for where the Head is, there is the body also. There is no interval of separation between the Head and the body; for were there a separation, then were the one no longer a body, then were the other no longer a head' (Chrysostom). Between the head and the body there is a common nature; hence Christ is bound more intimately with the faithful than with the Angels. Cf. § 898k-l.

900a 23 The fullness of him— perhaps the most remarkable expression in the whole epistle' (Robinson). A head without a body is incomplete. Every body gives completion, fullness, to its head, and it is clear that the Church, the body, is the fullness, or completion, of Christ, the head. But the Church is no ordinary group of persons, and Christ is no ordinary head. Comparing the Mystical Body with a moral body we must also notice between these a difference which is by no means slight. . . . But in the Mystical Body there is in addition to this common aspiration another internal principle, really existing and operative both in the whole structure and in each of its parts, and this principle is of such excellence that by itself it immeasurably transcends all bonds of unity by which any physical or moral body is knit together' (Pius XII, MCC, 60). The Church continues Christ; it is united with him like an organism with the life that quickens it. The Church expresses Christ; without her Christ would be incomplete; with her he has completion, 'fulness'. Of course the body adds nothing new to Christ; for the body has all its growth, all its life from him, the head. 'It is from him that grace and strength descend upon the whole Church, and God sees us and blesses us only for His sake, in Him and through Him. But He had to have this supernatural expansion, in order that the eyes of all might contemplate the plenitude that was not manifest in His individual existence' (Mersch-Kelly, 121).

b At Col 1:24 St Paul uses this conception when speaking of his sufferings on behalf of the Colossians. He can rejoice in them; for the sufferings of the members of the Church and the sufferings of Christ are one. Christ goes on suffering in the sufferings of the Church. 'Just as Christ receives the complement, the pleroma, of His own life in their lives, so in their sufferings He receives the consummation and the pleroma of His Passion' (Mersch-Kelly, 132). We give fullness, completion to Christ largely through our sufferings. Christ's satisfaction works its effect in us inasmuch as we are incorporated with Him, as the members with their head. Now the members must be conformed to their head. Consequently, as Christ first had grace in His soul with bodily passibility, and through His Passion attained to the glory of immortality, so we likewise, who are His members are freed by His Passion from all debt of punishment, yet so that we first receive in our souls the "spirit of adoption of sons", whereby our names are written down for the inheritance of immortal glory, while we yet have a passible and mortal body: but afterwards "being made conformable" to the sufferings and death of Christ, we are brought into immortal glory, according to the saying of the Apostle (Rom 8:17), "And if sons, heirs also . . . yet so if we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified with Him" (Aquinas, III, 49, 3 ad 3). 'The daily passion of the Christian, who is united to Christ by faith and charity, wears to God the aspect of the Passion of His only Begotten Son. This consoling thought sheds a new light on the baffling problem of human pain. The holy souls who recognize Christ suffering in, and through, themselves, learn to attach positive value to what human nature shrinks from as a great evil. The heroic souls who, rising above the patient endurance of pain, positively look for it, in order that their assimilation to Christ may be made more perfect, do more than sanctify themselves by their sufferings. They take an effective part in redeeming the human race. They co-operate subordinately to Christ, in the work of redemption' (Leen, op. cit., 76). 'The Church is the fullness of Christ, because it completes and perfects him in the plan of redemption, the nourishment of grace being able to go from the Head to the members only through the medium of the body' (Prat, op. cit., 1, 299). We have given an active sense to the word fulness. This is the common view, and it fits in well with the context and with St Paul's thought (cf. Col 1:24). Nevertheless, certain writers regard the word as passive, the sense then being that the Church is the fullness of Christ, because it is the receptacle filled by him with all supernatural blessings. Among those sharing this view are Knabenbauer, Lightfoot, Schmid, Huby.

The expression, 'who is filled all in all', is patient of two or three senses in the Greek. The main point to decide is whether the verb is in the middle (with active meaning) or passive voice. We follow Vg in regarding it as a passive (thus conforming to the passive sense found in 87 other instances in the NT). The Church, then, completes Christ, who is himself completed (filled) only by all his members.

In Eph St Paul speaks of the fullness of Christ, Christ being the centre of the perfection which he gives to and receives from the Church. In Col he speaks of the fullness in Christ, Christ being the centre of that perfection which he possesses in himself absolutely. Cf. VD 14 (1934) 49-55.

II 1-10 Convert Jews and Gentiles: What they were, and what they are (viz. members of the same Body of which Christ is the Head)—They can measure God's power by contemplating their deliverance from Satan (whom the Jews regarded as wielding power from the air). 3. The Jews were in the same state of guilt (cf. 5): 'by nature children of wrath, even as the rest'. The context does not refer directly to original sin, and St Paul here by the expression 'by nature' seems to mean simply 'by natural impulse'. This is the sense understood by the Greek Fathers and by St Jerome. St Augustine, however, took the sense to be 'by birth', and he pointed to this text as a direct reference to original sin, when he was writing against the Pelagians. 5. 'Dead in sins': convert Jews and Gentiles alike are quickened together, not merely along with Christ, but in him—in the Body of which Christ is the head and they the members, cf. Col 2:13. 8. This great privilege issues from a twofold gift: grace on the part of God, faith on the part of man—faith being the instrument for grace to act. This gift is wholly from God, and the Council of Orange (529) used this text to prove that the beginnings of faith are a gift of grace (Dz 199). 10. The reason why all this issues from God and not from ourselves is that we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus—a new creation just as surely as our entry into natural life was a creation.

900f 11-22 Christ's Atonement—The Apostle's readers were converts from paganism. 12. They were outside the society (DV 'conversation') of Israel, despised by the Jews, immersed in the terrestrial order, without Christ . . . without God in this world; for before their conversion they had no clear idea of God. 13-14. How was the distance between privileged and unprivileged bridged? How did peace in Christ come about? St Paul explains that the barrier between Jew and Gentile (symbolized by the barrier in front of the Court of Israel in the Temple) was broken down by the blood of Christ, by the cross (16a). 15. This expiatory sacrifice of Christ 'in his flesh' (14c) abrogated the Law consisting of peremptory commands enforced by the decrees of Rabbis. Rickaby translates the last word well as 'comminations', i.e. curses on transgressors. The first result of the abrogation of the Law is that Jews and Gentiles are not merely fused into one people: they are made one in one man. 17. Christ, the author of our peace, brought the thrilling news (DV 'preached') in person for the Gentiles, who were afar off, and for the Jews, who were nigh. 18. By his merits and propitiatory sacrifice ('by him') we are both introduced into the presence of ('access') the Father in One Holy Spirit. The bond of love and peace which joins the Father to the Son is also the bond of union for the members of the Church. 19-22. To explain the full enfranchisement of the Gentiles, St Paul uses metaphors, because 'the union of the Faithful with Christ is closer than words can tell' (Rickaby). The convert Gentiles are fellow-citizens of God's own household. The second metaphor: they are stones in the building which is the Church. This edifice has for foundations the Apostles and the NT Prophets (cf. 4:11; Ac 11:27; 13:1; 1 Cor 12:28, etc.). And Christ himself is the corner-stone 'which binds together both the walls and the foundations' (Chrysostom). The third metaphor (21) is complex. We have to picture the holiest part of the Temple in process of being built. At the same time this Temple is a living organism, the life and growth of which comes from Christ. In this holy-of-holies, which is also an organism, the Gentiles are living stones. Cf. the hymn 'Caelestis urbs Ierusalem' sung at the feast of a Dedication of a church:

'Thou heavenly, new Jerusalem, Vision of peace in prophet's dream,
With living stones built up on high And rising to yon starry sky'.

(M. Britt, O.S.B., The Hymns of the Breviary and Missal, London, 1925.)

The Apostle has set forth the vocation of the Gentiles to the One Church of Christ. He now proceeds to describe how Christ is the Revealer of this mystery, and how Paul himself is the herald.

901a III 1-21 How the mystery was promulgated to the Gentiles—1. He begins a prayer to conclude what he has been saying in ch 2, but mention of the Gentiles sets him off on a digression (2-13), and it is only in 14 that the idea of 1 is taken up again.

In this digression he writes of his God-given work on behalf of the Gentiles. He is the herald of the mystery. In a few words he describes the contents of the mystery. 6. The Gentiles are blessed equally with the Jews; for they are fellow-heirs in the same Messianic inheritance, members of the body of Christ (WV 'concorporate'). In a word, they have 'the same benefits, the same body and the same spirit' (Médebielle). 7-8. His gratitude is deep: he is less than the least of the faithful, yet his mission is no less than to enlighten all men on the inexhaustible riches of Christ. 10-11. Even the angels will come to know the merciful, manifold, and eternal wisdom of God, as they watch the Church continuing Christ's mission on earth. No room, then, for craven fear; in Christ we are led to the Father.

b So far the Apostle has been thinking of his mission, but now 'he hears, as it were, the clink of his chain, and remembers where he is and why he is there'

(Robinson). His readers must not lose heart: imprisonment does not spell the end of his mission (cf. Col 1:24). 14-15. When he returns to utter the prayer begun at 1, he turns directly to the Father . . . of whom all paternity in heaven and earth is named'. This seems best understood as follows: Just as a family (πατριά) comes from a father (πατήρ), so every family, every society, every group among angels and men has God for Creator and Father. The point is that God is the prototype of all Fatherhood; human fatherhood is the copy and derivative of the divine, cf. §§ 640a, f, 649b. 16. He prays that the Holy Spirit will make their souls supernaturally strong, (17) that Christ will take up his permanent abode (κατοικεῖν is distinct from παροικεῖν 'to take a lodging') in their hearts. It is by faith, living by charity, that Christ comes to take possession of our hearts. From faith St Paul passes on to charity. By a twofold metaphor he points to a very strong charity ('rooted'; 'founded') which he prays will be the working principles of their lives. 18. Ultimately, the prayer is for light to know. 9 To know what? The Greek Fathers (followed among modern writers by Vosté, Huby, Robinson) suggested it was the mystery described above. It seems better, however, to regard 19 as explanatory of 18, with the result that Paul is here praying that they will be given light to grasp how great is the love of Christ. Of course, that love was shown forth in the mystery; so the two opinions are not in conflict. Christ's love is described by four words grouped under one article—an arrangement that conveys the idea of the vastness of that love. 19. In fact, the love of Christ can never be fully comprehended.

20-21 The Doxology—The doxology, which concludes the prayer and the doctrinal part of the epistle, invokes, first, the boundless generosity of God, and then, the twofold instrument of God's glory: Christ and the Church.

The Christian Life—The last three chapters of the epistle apply the teaching of the first three to the Christian's life, as a member of the Church and of society, and to his individual life. This is called the moral part of the epistle. It has two sections, the first (4:1-5:21) consisting of General Injunctions, the second (5:22-6:9) concentrating on Family Life. There follows an Epilogue (6:10-22) and the Conclusion (6:23-24). 902a

IV 1-8 Eagerness to preserve Unity in Love—Their privileges in Christ are great; their practical daily life must reflect their vocation—noblesse oblige. 2. The first of four duties that St Paul calls for are those which Christ described as characteristic of his heart (Mt 11:29), humility and meekness; (3) but the main concern here is an appeal for a positive eagerness (DV 'careful') to keep intact the unity of the spirit—regarded as already existing. There is one body, and hence one spirit, regarded as distinguishable from (though of course dependent on) the Holy Spirit. The 'unity of the spirit', then, means the mutual harmony among the members of the body. 'In the bond of peace': there can be no union without some bond. Here the bond joining the minds together is peace (the genitive of apposition). Peace shrinks from any wilful break of union. Cf. Jn 14:27. Robinson (pp 92-3): 'At any rate no separation of "body" or "spirit" is contemplated: and the notion that there could be several "bodies" with a "unity of spirit" is entirely alien to the thoughts of St Paul. It is especially out of place here, as the next words show'.

4-6 The sevenfold Unity of the Church—The seven elements of this unity are arranged under three main considerations. 4. The first consideration is that we are members of one body, i.e. one visible society. This key-word implies that just as in any body there is only one principle of life and unity, so all the members of the Church should be animated by one and the same supernatural spirit, which issues from the Holy Spirit (cf. 2:22). Moreover, by reason of God's call-902b ing, we have one and the same hope—eternal life. So we ought to journey to the same goal hand in hand. 5. The second main consideration has for its operative word, One Lord, i.e. Christ. We all have the same Lord and Master. This implies that we are all united to him by the same interior faith, and that we have the same baptism into Christ, conferred once and for all. 6. The third consideration concerns God the Father. St Paul indicates three perfections which serve unity. He is 'above all' (no place, then, in us for pride, the source of discord); he is throughout all—in the sense that he makes us his instruments for good (no place, then, for contempt of one's neighbour, another potent factor of discord); he is 'in all'; cf. 2:22; Rom 8:11; 1 Cor 6:19, etc.

6-7-16 Unity not uniformity—7. Grace here does not mean sanctifying grace, but the spiritual gifts given to every one of us in view of the common good of the Church (cf. 13, 16; Rom 12:3; 1 Cor 12; 2 Cor 10:13). 8. To emphasize the fact that all these gifts are from God alone, the Apostle points to Christ victorious in Heaven distributing freely the gifts after his triumph on earth. He uses the LXX version of Ps 67:19, and dwells especially on the words 'he ascended' and 'he gave'. The psalm in its literal sense describes a triumphal procession. A rich booty is offered to Yahweh, who receives it. But the Targum on this psalm regards God as receiving presents to be given to men; hence effectively giving presents to men. So St Paul's change from the MT and LXX 'he received' to 'he gave' was probably a common interpretation. In any case the Apostle uses the psalm in a typical sense. God's distributing gifts to men typifies Christ after the Ascension enriching members of his Church with spiritual gifts. The rest of the citation is incidental. He led captivity (abstract for concrete) captive is equivalent to 'He has triumphed like a victorious king'. As St Paul mentions this only, as it were, in passing, there is no need for us to try

d to identify the captives. 11-18. The point he makes in his list of gifts given to members of the Church is that their aim is to enlarge the range of the unity of the Church, and to develop its intensity, until we all (as one man) attain to the unity of the faith and of the full knowledge of the Son of God (13a WV). Then, all of us together will become a perfect man, God's new man, grown to manhood, to the measure of the stature which belongs to the body of Christ (13b Médebielle). Cf. 1:23. 14-16. The corollary of this is that the Christian must put into practice Christ's teaching, especially Charity; for Christ is at once the head and the pattern of a Christian's development. 16. Christ's body (the Church) owes all its growth to the head (Christ). Hence (a) the solidity of the whole organism; (b) mutual dependence of the parts—each joint contributes to the working of the whole; (c) the perfection of each member—according to the function of each limb; (d) the growth—by reason of the union with Christ. The final phrase 'in charity' marks the principle by which the holy shrine grows.

17-24 Put off the Old Man, put on the New—22. The old man is that corruption of heart and mind which concupiscent nature, bereft of grace, brings on man; it is the 'natural' man as opposed to the 'spiritual', Rom 1:18-32; 6:6; 1 Cor 2:14, 15. 23. Baptized people must be constantly at work to keep fresh and new their inmost thoughts—that is the meaning of 'the spirit of your mind'. The old man was stripped off at Baptism, but the new state then created has to be carefully watched (renewed)—like the permanent way on the railway. 24. St Paul gives the chief reason for the remarks in 22-23: Baptism is a new creation (cf. 2 Cor 5:17; Gal 6:15).

f 25-31 Examples—The sins here mentioned are against fraternal charity. 26a. 'Be angry: and sin not' is a quotation of Ps 4:5 according to LXX. The first clause is concessive: if we feel anger rising within us (even when the anger is righteous) we must refuse to let it master us; we must combat it externally by showing a readiness to forgive. 26b. 'Let not the sun go down upon your anger' is a figure denoting quick pardon. 27. 'Give not place to the devil' is perhaps a metaphor borrowed from the boxing ring. 31. Five nouns here mark the progressively strong feelings and acts of the 'old man' when irritated. First, bitterness, i.e. sullen resentment, then anger, which is the outburst of passion; then indignation, the settled feeling of passion. Finally, abusive language (DV 'blasphemy').

32-V2 We must copy Christ—St Paul has shown that we must co-operate with divine grace first, negatively, by putting off the old man. He now declares that we should exercise the virtues that belong to one who is baptized into Christ. 1. We are most dear children of God in Christ. A father likes to find his image in his child. 2. Christ gave his life on our behalf; his death was a voluntary expiation. The words oblation and a sacrifice are borrowed from the OT sacrifices for sin, and they are applied to the sacrifice on the Cross. 'For an odour of sweetness' is a common biblical metaphor suggested by the smoke of incense rising to heaven. The metaphor, then, refers to a victim pleasing to God. Prat (2, p 185) says: 'It is, therefore, probable that, having in view the general idea of sacrifice, of which Jesus is the perfect antitype, he denotes by "victim" (θυσία) the bloody sacrifice of Calvary, and by "oblation" (προσφορά) the voluntary and loving offering which Christ makes of himself to his Father. The two notions of priest and victim would, therefore, be associated here; and, as in the epistle to the Hebrews, be reunited in the person of Jesus'.

V 3-14 Purity—5. 'No fornicator . . . hath inheritance in the kingdom of Christ.' The verb is in the present tense. The sinner deprives himself of the spiritual blessings of the Church on earth, and loses all right to eternal reward. 10. 'Proving what is well pleasing to God', i.e. searching out carefully 'like a money-changer who is not content with a glance at a coin, but who weighs and sounds it' (St Jerome). 14. The quotation here is from some Christian baptismal hymn.

15-21 Life in prayer—15. The phrase 'redeeming the time' is a metaphor from the market place. Food is short; you must seize the opportunity to buy. In God's intention each moment of our lives is given to us in view of our eternal destiny in Heaven. We redeem time whenever we use it in doing a good work. The effort is all the more urgent, since the days are evil (cf. Phil 2:15).

22-33 Family Life: man and wife—Down to this point in the moral part of his epistle St Paul has been giving general injunctions on how we must live the Christian life. Now he gives special consideration to the family, and first of all to husband and wife. 22. 'As to the Lord' provides the key to the thoughts here expressed. Baptism confers equality on all individuals from the point of view of religion, but in society (of which the family is at once the smallest and most important unit) there is a natural hierarchy. The husband is the head; the wife is subject to him. By Baptism this order is not broken; it is ennobled. St Paul compares it with the love of the Church for Christ, the head. There should, then, be no room for either despotism or craven fear. Pius XI ('Casti connubii', 31 Dec. 1930): 'If the husband is the head, the wife is the heart'.

25. In using his authority the husband must take as his model Christ's love for the Church. 'Thou hast seen the measure of obedience, hear also the measure of love. Wouldst thou have thy wife obedient to thee, as the Church is to Christ? Take then thyself the same provident care for her, as Christ takes for the Church. Yea, even if it shall be needful for thee to give thy life for her . . . refuse it not' (Chrysostom). Christ's love for the Church was perfect: he delivered himself up for it. 26. And this supreme act of love had for its goal and its effect a baptism of the Church, 903e whereby at once it is made holy. 'The laver of water' is a metaphor based on the bath of water solemnly presented by Greeks to a bride on the eve of her marriage. This Greek custom had a purificatory and religious significance. 'In the word' is best read in connexion with what immediately precedes (i.e. the laver of water). The sense, then, is that the purification-sanctification conferred on the Church by the death of Christ is a baptism of water accompanied, or conditioned by, a sacramental formula. 28. That men should love their wives as their own bodies suggests in the context not a carnal love, but generous love. Moreover, it must be a love ennobled by the fact that it reflects the supernatural love of Christ for the Church, the body of Christ, of which (30) we are members.

f 31. In consideration of the unique union between husband and wife ('for this cause') 'a man shall leave . . . and shall cleave to his wife'. In citing Gen 2:24 here St Paul implies that marriage connotes complete unity, and this by its very nature as instituted by God in the time of our first parents. 32a. 'This is a great sacrament.' As in 1:9 and 3:3, 9 Vg translates the Greek μυστήριον by 'sacramentum', which in turn has become DV 'sacrament', in the sense of having a hidden meaning. The union of man and wife as described in Genesis has a hidden meaning besides the obvious giving and receiving of each party. This hidden meaning is great, not in the sense that it is hard to understand, but that it is important, far-reaching; (32b) I mean in reference to Christ and to the Church (WV). There is no doubt about the general sense here: in uniting husband and wife God created a type of the future union between Christ and the Church. g Some theologians (Palmieri, Perrone, etc.) demanded that the type (marriage) and the anti-type (union between Christ and the Church) must correspond exactly. Marriage must, then, imply not only unity and indissolubility, but holiness as well. In other words, the unity in marriage would be a bond of supernatural grace. If that is so, then St Paul must have had in mind here Christian marriage as a sacrament in the strict sense of that term. The Council of Trent was not so explicit. It used this text not as proof of the sacrament, but as providing a suggestion of the sacrament ('Innuity', Dz 969). Moreover, none of the Greek or Latin Fathers claimed that this text of itself proved that Christian marriage is one of the seven sacraments. Most theologians now take the view that once we know from Tradition that matrimony is one of the seven sacraments, we can use this text to show how Christian marriage is the living expression and realization of the union (and all that this union implies) between Christ and the Church. In the context St Paul is looking at matrimony only in so far as it is a sign of unity, and he has in mind matrimony of all time, from Adam through all ages. He does not say that this unity is an outward sign conferring a special grace on man and wife ex opere operato. Yet, these reservations made, it is clear that if any lawful union between man and wife can be referred to Christ's union with the Church, surely that is true in a fuller sense of the union between Christians, when the bond not only signifies, but effects the union of God with man. That union is by sanctifying grace. The origin of this 'mystery' can be traced through the OT (Ps 44(45); Cant, Ez 16:1-63, etc.) to the teaching of Christ in the NT (Mk 2:19-20; cf. Jn 3:29; Mt 22:1-14). 33. Nevertheless St Paul returns to the practical: Supposing you have not quite grasped the symbolism latent in the union of matrimony, at least let every one of you . . . fear, i.e. reverence.

904a VI 1-4 Children and Parents—1. The expression 'in the Lord' at once points to the right motive and to the limits of the obedience of children to parents. 2. In the decalogue the fourth commandment is the first (and only) one carrying with it an explicit promise. 3. The Jews understood the promise to refer to temporal blessings, but in the Christian dispensation it is transferred to the region of spiritual favours. 4. Fathers must be firm and kind; they must bring up and encourage their children in the Christian way. 5-9 Slaves and Masters—The civilization of the day was built on slavery. As in Col 3:22-25, St Paul does not openly denounce the system; he is content with instilling principles which prepare the way for its abolition. He regards the slave as a person depending on Christ, possessing, then, the key to eternal happiness in Heaven. 9. And masters must reciprocate with kindness based on the same religious viewpoint. God is the master of masters.

10-22 Epilogue: The Christian Warfare—The Apostle's thought at the close is that if all is well within, there is still a foe outside for every Christian to face.

10-13 A Call to Arms—St Paul describes the Christian armed for the spiritual struggle in terms borrowed from the equipment of the Roman soldiers. We have to be clothed from head to foot, if (13b) we are to stand in all things perfect, i.e. if having fought, we are to stand upright, victorious. 12b. Without the armour of God we stand powerless against the deceits of the rulers of the world of this darkness, i.e. men enmeshed by the darkness arising from sin; against the spirits of wickedness in the high places, i.e. evil spirits whose wills are fixed in wickedness, and who envelop and besiege us from all sides (cf. 2:2).

14-17 The Divine Panoply—The seven weapons, defensive and offensive, are described by metaphors drawn from both the armour of the Roman soldier on active service and from the description of the weapons borne by the divine Warrior (Messias) in Is 59:14, 17 (cf. Is 11:5; 52:7; Wis 5:17-20). The chief pieces of the Christian's armour are: breast-plate, shield, helmet, and sword. 14b. 'The breast-plate of justice' undoubtedly refers to sanctifying grace guarding the virtues, just as the soldier's breast-plate guarded the heart. In 1 Thess 5:8 the breast-plate is faith and charity. 15. 'Your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace' seems to have the sense: zealous to carry with speed the glad tidings which effect peace, cf. Is 52:7-9; Rom 1:15. 16. 'The shield of faith' refers to the door-like shield rounded to the shape of the body. The Christian's protection and inspiration is in the principles of faith, in which the flaming missiles of the most wicked one are put out. 17a. 'The helmet of salvation'. The helmet guards the head and inspires confidence amid danger. According to 1 Thess 5:8 (cf. Is 59:17) it is the hope of salvation. 17b. 'The sword of the spirit'. The sword was a double-edged weapon. The spiritual sword is provided by the Holy Spirit and is endowed with his power. It is the word of God, not specifically the Gospel (λόγος), but every message from God (ρῆμα Θεοῦ). Since, however, the divine utterances have culminated in the Gospel message, we may in fact regard the sword as the Gospel teaching, cf. Heb 4:12 f.

18-20 Prayer—The victorious use of the weapons described is bound by one condition, prayer. 18. The Apostle here recommends the different kinds of prayer: of adoration and of petition, vocal and silent ('in the spirit'). And he tells his readers what qualities earnest prayer should have. 19-20. He asks them to place him, an ambassador in a chain, in the forefront of their prayers (cf. 1 Cor 9:16); for he needs grace to preach boldly, assuredly and persuasively.

21-22 Mission of Tychicus—These two verses are found substantially the same in Col 4:7 f., and they constitute the only personal words of the whole epistle. In Col we do not find the words 'that you also may know . . . what I am doing', and many writers see an indication here that Col had already been written, the 'you also' implying that the Colossians (and possibly others) would already know. Tychicus is mentioned in Ac 20:4 together with Trophimus as a native of proconsular Asia, perhaps of Ephesus

EPHESIANS VI

9041 (2 Tim 4:12). He met St Paul at Troas when the Apostle was on his way to Jerusalem in the third missionary journey. He may well have gone with Trophimus (Ac 21:29) on that occasion to Jerusalem. He appears again as bearer of this epistle and of Col, towards the end of the Apostle's first Roman captivity. Some five years later we find him again with St Paul, who speaks of sending him to visit Titus in Crete (Tit 3:12), and who not long afterwards sent him to Ephesus (2 Tim 4:12). He merited by long service the title of 'my dearest brother and faithful minister in the Lord'. 22a. 'Whom I have sent' is the past tense (aorist) used in letters. It does not mean that at the time of writing Tychicus was already in the readers' midst. When he arrives, he will tell them 9042 of the position of St Paul and his companions in prison, and he will console them. This may well mean that while the Apostle's friends thought he would die in prison (cf. 3:13), he himself was hoping for an early release.

23-24 The Concluding Salutation—This is remarkable in its solemn, impersonal and indirect tone, cf. § 898c. The Apostle asks God to give his readers peace, i.e. the tranquil possession of spiritual favours; then charity with faith (cf. 1:15 f.), finally grace, i.e. God's love which is given to all who love Christ, and which equips them for immortality and incorruptibility (St Jerome).

PHILIPPIANS

By C. LATTEY, S.J.

905a Bibliography—Chrysostom (PG 62); J. Knabenbauer, S.J. (CSS 1912); Cornelius a Lapide, S.J. (Rome 1908); A. Goodier, S.J. (WV 3, 1939³); F. Prat, S.J., Theology of St Paul (London 1938); J. Huby, S.J., Les Épîtres de la Captivité (Paris 1935); DTC 12, 1414-34; 8, 2339-49; CBQ 1 (1939) 296; *J. Lightfoot, Philippians (London 1903); *R. Vincent, Philippians and Philemon (ICC 1902); *H. Moule (CSCB 1918); *H. Alford, Greek Testament (London 1880); *J. Michael, Philippians in Moffatt Commentary (London 1943); *G. Duncan, St Paul's Ephesian Ministry (London 1939); *F. Badcock, Pauline Epistles (S.P.C.K 1937); *Moffatt, Introduction to the Literature of the New Testament (Edinburgh 1912²; with full bibliographies); *Ramsay, St Paul the Traveller (London 1895, and other works and articles); C. Lattey, S.J., Theses Paulinae (Rome 1926); C. Lattey, S.J. (ed.), The Incarnation (CSSL Cambridge 1926); *Moulton and Milligan, The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament illustrated from the Papyri and other non-literary Sources (London 1930).

b Authenticity and Canonlicity—The evidence for these is so strong that it does not appear worth while to draw out the proofs at any length. Already St Polycarp, early in the 2nd cent., mentions in his epistle to the Philippians that St Paul wrote them letters, ch 3, probably grouping with the Philippian epistle those to the neighbouring church of Thessalonica (so Moffatt, 174). And it is fairly obvious that ch 2 sect. 1 of his epistle is drawing on Phil 3:21; 2:10, and ch 9 sect. 2 on Phil 2:16 (Gal 2:2 is not so likely) and most clearly of all ch 12 sect. 3 on Phil 3:18. In the Martyrdom of Polycarp (ch 1 sect. 2), written probably soon after the middle of the 2nd cent., there is a reference to Phil 2:4. A little earlier than this Marcion accepted it, and about A.D. 200 the Muratorian Fragment also names it among St Paul's epistles. Irenaeus (post A.D. 150: PG 7, 1026; 1158), Tertullian (2nd-3rd cent.: PL 2, 826; 863), Clement of Alexandria (do., PG 8, 312; 408; 557) all quote the epistle as Paul's. There has been practically no variation in the Catholic tradition. Text and commentary should make it clear that no attention need be paid to the not very plausible attempts to prove the epistle a composite work.

c Philippi—Philip II of Macedonia (359-336 B.C.) founded (or more strictly, re-founded) Philippi in 356 B.C., naming it after himself; it had formerly been called Krenides ('little fountains'), from the many springs in the mountains to the N. of it. It became part of eastern Macedonia, very near Thrace, and on the edge of a great plain which stretches inland to the N. and NW. It had easy access across Mt Pangaeum to the fine harbour of Neapolis, Ac 16:11, and the gold mines in the neighbourhood were of enormous value to Philip, furnishing him with the sinews of war and diplomacy. Rome conquered Macedon in 168 B.C.; but there was a great development in the position in 42 B.C., when Antony and Octavian (later Augustus) defeated Brutus and Cassius, and founded a Roman colony there, the Colonia Iulia Augusta Philippensis, in honour of the victory. The word Iulia signifies the triumph of the cause of Julius Caesar. Eleven years later Augustus strengthened the city with a second foundation. The city thus acquired the Ius Italicum, with the right of proprietorship according to Roman law, and exemption from poll-tax and land-tax; it would have its own duumviri (supreme magistrates), the 'praetors' of Ac 16:20, 35-39. Cicero (De Leg. Agr. 2:34) speaks with amusement of such claims to be called praetors; and we may note the touch of pride also in 'us Romans', Ac 16:21.

Christian Beginnings at Philippi—The story may be said to begin at Ac 16:1, when St Paul chooses Timothy to accompany him, for the Apostle associates Timothy with himself in the opening address of the epistle, as one already well known to the Philippians, and proposes to send him to them, Phil 2:19-24, for his own further information about them, adding at the same time a warm commendation of one who was doubtless his most beloved disciple. But Silas was his chief helper at this time, Ac 15:40; 16:19, 25, 29. After having visited the churches already evangelized, they were directed by the Holy Ghost and the vision of a Macedonian into Macedonia, sailed to Neapolis and thence proceeded to Philippi, Ac 16:12. From the fact that there is no mention of a synagogue but only of a place of prayer, 16:13, we may infer that Jews were not numerous there, nor indeed should we expect them to be so in a Roman colony. Still, as usual, they attended the Jewish meeting-place, evidently with some fruit, and Lydia, a seller of purple from the city of Thyatira, a proselyte, Ac 16:14, was baptized with her household, and they took up their abode with her, 16:13-15. But St Paul's exorcism of the girl with a divining spirit caused her masters to lose their profit from her, and they dragged Paul and Silas before the magistrates, who beat and cast them into prison, whence a miracle caused the chief gaoler to take them into his house and tend them, so that in the end he and his household were baptized, 16:33. It is gratuitous in such cases as those of Lydia and the gaoler to suppose that the baptizing stopped short at the babies: it is against the texts, and supposes a prejudice at variance with St Paul's teaching of new life in Christ. The magistrates came to realize their own injustice, and were content to release the prisoners; but St Paul protested that they were Roman citizens, and bade the magistrates come themselves and do so. Hearing that they were Roman citizens, the magistrates accordingly came in some trepidation and excused themselves, for they might have been brought into serious trouble; and they asked Paul and Silas to leave the city, which they did, 16:40.

The fact that St Luke ceases to write in the first person from the time that St Paul's party crosses over to Macedonia, Ac 16:10, to the time when they had just left Philippi on their way to Jerusalem towards the end of the third missionary journey, Ac 20:5, makes it fairly clear that he was left behind there to organize and develop the local church. From Phil itself we gather that the Apostle had planted and Luke had watered with much success, and that 'the beloved physician', Col 4:14, had infused into them some of his own love and care for Paul.

The Epistle—The Pauline epistles divide into definite groups with marked similarities in each group, though each epistle also has its own characteristic features. 1-2 Thess obviously belong to each other and stand 905e apart. Gal and Rom deal with the same fundamental theme of justification by faith, the former as an intensely practical question, the latter a more dogmatic exposition to a non-Pauline church. 2 Cor has something of the fire of Gal and of the highly personal character of 1 Cor. In the same way the epistles of the captivity (Eph Col Phil Phm) are usually shorter, and more Christocentric. Eph and Col are especially similar, the former more concerned with Christ in the Church and the latter with Christ in himself. Phil has the finest passage of all upon the person of Christ, and something of the delicate charity of which Phm is full. The Pastoral Epistles obviously have a character all their own; Heb alone stands out as the address of a rabbi trained at the feet of Gamaliel to the church which would understand best such a manner of exegesis.

Thus we are led naturally to envisage the epistles of the captivity as a group by themselves, in which Phil takes its place: a group which we accordingly suppose to have been written about the same time, and under the same circumstances. All of them show St Paul a prisoner, Eph 3:1; 4:1; 6:20; Col 4:3, 10; Phm 9, 23; Phil 1:7, 13, 14, 17. The unanimous witness of tradition points to Rome as the place of his imprisonment, and this is confirmed with especial force in the case of Phil, because of the mention of the praetorian guard in 1:13; the soldiers would naturally relieve each other in the custody of Paul. See e.g. Vincent's note on the passage, 51-52, confirming Lightfoot's view. The mention of Caesar's household in Phil 4:22 is another strong argument.

The date of the epistles would thus fall in the year of the first Roman captivity, c. A.D. 59-61; from the second captivity there was to be no deliverance; contrast Phil 1:25-26 with 2 Tim 4:6-8. The main reason why Paul wrote Phil seems to have been the outburst of gratitude and affection at their renewed alms and their solicitude for his welfare (see especially Phil 4:10-20), in which we can hardly be wrong in seeing the hand and heart of St Luke.

Hence there seems to be no single strong dogmatic or moral purpose underlying the epistle. Incidentally, however, two doctrines are touched upon in a manner that deserves special attention, though a detailed explanation of the texts is left to the commentary.

f Doctrine—The passage on the divinity of Christ, 2:5-11, the most striking treatment of the subject in the Pauline epistles, first deserves attention. It should be noticed that St Paul has no intention of teaching his readers anything new, but presupposes the doctrine as already known, in order to draw from it a lesson of humility. In the same way in Rom 9:5 the emphatic statement of the same truth is merely to show that he is fully aware of the privileges of the Jews, their supreme privilege being that God himself took flesh as one of them. Similarly in 1 Cor 11:17-34 the Apostle presupposes the Real Presence as already believed, in order to draw from it the lesson of greater reverence in the celebration of the Eucharist. Humility is to lead to greater harmony, especially among the women, 4:2-3, who held a better position in Macedonia than elsewhere, a fact illustrated to some extent by Lydia, Ac 16:14-15, 40, with whom St Luke probably took up his abode.

The subject of justification is treated fully elsewhere, but some light is thrown upon it in this epistle. Justness (or righteousness) is not merely the favour of God, but comes from God, 3:9, being therefore something in the soul itself, springing from faith, which itself is a gift of God, not being the reward of merit strictly so called, 1:29. This justness means unity with Christ in his passion and death, so that from being crucified with him we partake also in the newness of his risen life, 3:10-11, 20-21, a theme expounded with fuller emphasis in the other epistles of the captivity, Eph 2:1-10; 3:14-19; 4:15-16, 22-23; Col 2:6-13; 3:3-11. The Christians are to 'work out your salvation with fear and trembling', Phil 2:12, a strong expression for awe and reverence, not to be taken too literally, as we see from Ps 2:11; Eph 6:5-8; 2 Cor 7:15. It is not to hinder the joy to which he exhorts them in 3:1; 4:4.

I 1-2 Greeting—St Paul, after his gracious manner, associates Timothy with himself in the greeting, since he was well known to the Philippians and had worked among them; he may well have talked over the epistle with Timothy, but the latter is not really a joint author. The epistle is much too personal to be anything but exclusively Paul's own. In the opening greeting of 1 Cor even Sosthenes finds a place. 'Christ' (Anointed, Messias) gradually came to be used as a proper name, but as yet might either precede or follow 'Jesus', 'saints', holy as members of the Church, and as possessed personally of sanctifying grace, which Paul usually presupposes in his Christians in general; cf. Eph 2 etc. 'bishops', as yet equivalent, it would seem, to 'presbyters'; compare 'presbyters' (DV 'ancients') in Ac 20:17 with 'bishops' in Ac 20:28; and so elsewhere. The churches were still ruled by colleges of priests, visited at intervals by the Apostles, or by delegates with episcopal powers, such as Timothy and Titus. The college of diocesan bishops was to succeed the college of Apostles, but was not to be appointed by the latter at once.

2. Paul's fairly frequent custom of putting Christ in this way on an equality with God the Father is one sign of his belief in Christ's divinity, though of course not so explicit as 2:5-11.

3-8 Thanksgiving—5-7. 'communication' or 'fellowship', probably alluding to their alms and sympathy; cf. 4:10-18. 8. 'bowels', where we should say 'heart'. But in Holy Scripture the latter word has a more intellectual implication.

9-11 Intercession—10. 'approve the better things', the more perfect way; similarly in Rom 2:18. 11. 'the fruit of justice' or righteousness which cometh through Jesus Christ, the whole supernatural state etc. 12-14 The Furtherance of the Gospel—13. 'so that my bonds', what I have said and done while in bonds, 'have become manifest in Christ', through his power and grace working in me, 'throughout the whole praetorian guard', the soldiers of which would relieve each other in guarding me, 'and to everybody else besides', the many visitors coming to see me. 14. 'the greater number of the brethren in the Lord', in Christ's Church and in his grace, 'confident by reason of my bonds', what I have said and done in bonds.

15-20 Though with Various Motives—There are jealousies at work, perhaps among some disciples of St Peter (cf. 1 Cor 1:11-12; 3:3-4) or among some Jews or Judaizers (cf. 3:2-9); but the whole tone of the letter forbids us to suppose that St Paul was seriously alarmed at the Judaizing, as he was in the case of the Galatians. 17. 'thinking to embitter my bondage'. 18. 'by all means, whether for motives false or true'. Evidently there was no danger of grave errors. 19. Quoting Job 13:16 (LXX). 'the Spirit of Jesus', as in Rom 8:9; cf. Jn 15:26. The Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Son as one.

21-26 The Apostle's Own Mind—21. Cf. Gal 2:20. This unity with Christ is both individual and corporate, through his Mystical Body. 22. 'fruitful labour', implied again in 24. 23. 'a desire to set forth': the Greek word is both a nautical and military term, to 'weigh anchor' or 'strike camp'. It cannot mean 'to be dissolved', as in Vg. 25. 'And this I know confidently, that I shall remain, and remain close beside you all, unto your progress and joy in the faith'. 26. 'that you may have abundant ground in me for boasting in Christ Jesus', owing to my fruitful labour; cf. 22, 24. 'Boasting' is a favourite term of St Paul's, but it must be 'in the Lord' (1 Cor 1:31; 2 Cor 10:17; cf. Jer 9:23-24), all glory being ascribed to God for what he has accomplished in or through oneself. The Magnificat is a supreme example of this spirit.

27-30 His Care for the Philippians—27. 'let your conduct'. 'one spirit . . . one mind': St Paul was 906c afraid of dissensions among them; cf. 2:2-4; 4:2-3. 28. 'adversaries', such as the Apostle's own, 30, whether pagans, as at Philippi itself, Ac 16:19-34, or Jews, Phil 3. In itself such conduct was a sufficient token of predilection to those acting in bad faith and malice; but Paul himself longed eagerly to convert both Jew (cf. Rom 9:1-5) and Gentile, cf. Rom 1:13-16. 29. An important statement that faith itself is not the reward of merit strictly so called. 30. 'and now hear to be mine' still.

907a II 1-11 Humility, after Christ's Example—This passage is treated at some length in The Incarnation (op. cit.). 1. 'any consolation' etc. on your part towards me; this appears reasonably certain from the final imperative corresponding to the if's, 'fill up my joy'. 'any encouragement through charity, any fellowship in the Spirit', in the Holy Ghost; see on 1:19, also Eph 4:3-4. 'any affection and compassion'. 2. 'Fill up my joy by thinking alike . . . the same (i.e. mutual) charity . . . with one soul and one mind'. 3. 'better than themselves'. Such a precept, if taken quite literally, could only lead to false conclusions; but human nature so inclines all to think too well of themselves that effort must be put forward in a contrary direction. 4. 'each looking not merely to his own interests, but also to those of others'. 'also' is in the Gk, though not in Vg, and thus makes it necessary to insert 'merely' to bring out the sense; Paul does not mean that one is not to attend to one's own affairs. 5. We must aim at the same dispositions that were Christ's in his Incarnation. He humbled himself by becoming man at all, and still further by his crucifixion. Paul presupposes Christ's Godhead as already believed; no readiness to lower oneself can compare with his. 6. 'in the form of God'. This word (μορφή) is the regular technical term in Aristotelian philosophy for 'form' as opposed to 'matter'; but we must beware of interpreting it too strictly along these lines, for St Paul was no peripatetic or scholastic. The Greek Fathers take the word as equivalent to 'nature', in the rough and ready language of popular philosophy, and in full accord with St Paul's meaning; still, it is very difficult to believe that the word had entirely lost any implication of visible appearance, and it is more easy to suppose that he slightly stretched the meaning of the word, in order to contrast with it 'the form of a slave' in 7. Such is the opinion expressed by Père Prat (Théologie de S. Paul, 1st ed. Paris 1908, p. 442), though he seems to have withdrawn it afterwards. In any case there can be no doubt of St Paul's meaning.

b 'Who, being in the form of God'. The Greek word, ὑπάρχων, here translated 'being', probably means more than that, and is best taken to express previous existence; however, as examples can be produced to the contrary, it is wiser not to press the point, and merely to insist that the mere meaning of 'being', taken in this particular context, must in any case signify such previous existence: 'being in the form of God, he took the form of a slave'. 'thought it not robbery': this word 'robbery' translates Vg rapinam, but not the rather difficult Greek word ἀρπαγμὸν, a noun with a masculine termination giving the object of the verb, whereas a neuter termination (in this case ἀρπαγμα) would be a more usual way to express the action of the verb. 'He counted it not a prize to be on an equality with God' (RV) seems the best English rendering; but 'prize' needs explanation. The Gk means something to be grasped and held fast, a festzuhaltendes Gut, as the Germans say. He did not insist on being God and nothing but God, but took the form of a slave. This interpretation has been expounded and proved by Lightfoot at considerable length. It is also the earliest Christian interpretation, for the letter of the churches of Lyons and Vienne (c. A.D. 178), quoted in Eusebius' Church History, in referring to the humility of Christ, stops at the words just quoted, as already sufficiently indicating that humility, and do not add the words, 'but he emptied himself' etc. (Eus., HE 907b 5, 2, 2). This is the natural flow of sense and sentence: 'He did not count it a prize . . . but emptied himself'; if the text meant 'He did not count it robbery, usurpation etc.' then it would have to continue, but nevertheless he emptied himself'. There would be a strong contrast implied, whereas Paul (as often) is merely using parallel expressions to bring out his full meaning. 'to be equal to God': so Vg aequalem, somewhat simplifying the Gk, which is really an adverbial expression, which we might render roughly, 'to be as good as God'; but the sense is the same.

7-9 'emptied himself': such is the literal meaning of the verb, but of course it is used metaphorically, as always in NT (5 times, always by St Paul himself), 'to make of no account (as here), futile, meaningless', etc. Similarly the corresponding adjective 'empty' is used 18 times in NT, but likewise always metaphorically, 'empty-handed, useless', etc. Christ evidently could not empty himself of his Godhead, even in part; but outside the Church this expression, 'he emptied himself' has been misinterpreted to imply something like this. Such are called 'kenotic' theories, from the Greek words in question, κενός 'empty' and κενόω 'I empty'. Mgr R. A. Knox has explained this matter in an excellent lecture on 'Kenotic Theories' in The Incarnation; cf. § 905a.

What St Paul himself stresses, indeed, is Christ's Divinity, and that so strongly that if we had not the guidance of a multitude of other passages (Rom 5:15 etc.), we might think that his Humanity was something unreal. Here, for example, we have 'the form of a slave', 'in the likeness of men', 'in habit found as man' (rather, 'in outward form' or shape). But these expressions are preparing the way for the tremendous emphasis on Christ's Godhead which follows; Christ's Person is divine, and it was the Divine Person that assumed human nature. 8. 'He humbled himself': the whole emphasis is here, the example for the Philippians to follow. 9. 'hath exalted him', a very strong word, lit. 'super-exalted': WV 'exalted him above the highest'. 'the name', the name Jesus, as is clear from the following verse. 'Lord' in itself is not a name at all, but a very common word, used even by slaves to their masters; nor was it 'given' in the obvious sense to Christ, like the name Jesus, as narrated by St Paul's follower St Luke (Lk 1:31).

10-11. 'at the name'. There is a reference to Is 45:23: 'to me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear', where we should say in English, 'by me every tongue shall swear'. Absolute Godhead is asserted in Isaiah, and is here ascribed to Christ. But for 'swear' Paul substitutes 'confess', and goes on to give what is to be the subject of that confession. As Christ has suffered in his sacred humanity, so he is to be glorified for ever in that humanity, which is to receive divine adoration in virtue of the Divine Person who has assumed it. Every tongue is to 'confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father'. Possibly we should translate with Vg 'in the glory', for it seems to make rather better sense of the special allusion to God the Father, and there is no doubt that the preposition εἰς with the accusative (as in the Gk here) could at this period bear this sense. See, for example, Milligan, Selections from the Greek Papyri (Cambridge 1912), no. 13 (= P. Oxy. 294), ad init., where ἐν with the dative is used in the sense of 'place to', and εἰς with the accusative in the sense of 'place at'. Every tongue is to confess that 'Jesus Christ is Lord', which is the confession of Christ's Godhead, since the Jews did not use the proper name of God, Yahweh, but spoke and read 'the Lord' in its place, a practice followed by Vg and all except some modern versions. St Paul's usual practice is not to use 'Lord' for God the Father or the Holy Ghost, nor yet for God as such (the Blessed Trinity), except where he is quoting the OT. The fact that he uses 'Lord' for God in OT passages would compel him to explain that he did not mean 907d it in this sense when he applies it to Christ; but on the contrary he lays stress on the confession that 'Jesus is Lord', here and in Rom 10:9 and 1 Cor 12:3. And indeed, even apart from all this, there is ample proof that he taught that Christ is God.

6 12-30 12. 'with fear and trembling', a phrase implying reverence and awe, as again in 2 Cor 7:15; Eph 6:5. Vincent here well calls it 'a filial dread of offending God'. The English words are apt to give an exaggerated idea of the 'fear' involved, which is not incompatible with joy; cf. Phil 3:1; 4:4; Ps 2:11. 13. 'We can do no good work of ourselves towards our salvation; we need the help of God's grace' (Catechism Q. 138). 15. Cf. Deut 32:5. 17. 'Even if I am to be poured out' as a libation (drink-offering) 'over the solemn' or ceremonial, ministerial, liturgical, or even priestly 'offering of your faith'. 'sacrifice of your faith'. In this metaphor the Philippians are the priests, offering their own faith, i.e. their whole life of faith. Rom 12:1 is somewhat similar. St Paul again compares the shedding of his blood to a libation in 2 Tim 4:6; there it is impending, here it is as yet a mere possibility. The figure seems to suit the pagan sacrifices rather better than the Jewish, in which latter the libations were poured around and not on the altar, and were less prominent. 'and share the joy of all of you'. 18. 'and share my joy'. 21 has always been a puzzle, for St Paul usually speaks highly of his fellow-workers, e.g. of Epaphroditus, 25-30. Perhaps he found Timothy the readiest to serve him without excuse. Of Epaphroditus we only know for certain what we find here and in 4:18; it hardly seems likely that he is the Epaphras of Phm 23; Col 1:7; 4:12 (which last verse makes him a native of Colossae). 25. 'your messenger', sent on a special commission: the Greek word is 'apostle', which bears also this meaning. 30. 'hazarding his life', a word taken from gambling, like κυβία (lit. 'dicing') in Eph 4:14 (DV 'wickedness'). 'that which on your part was wanting': perhaps with a slight hint that St Paul had not expected any neglect on their part; cf. 4:10.

f III 1-21—Practically the whole of this chapter is directed against the Jews and Judaizers, but for the most part rather in the calm spirit of Rom than in the heat of Gal; the danger of Judaizing does not seem to be a pressing one, nor do the Jews seem to have been numerous at Philippi. 'Their numbers at Philippi appear to have been very scanty' (Lightfoot, 52). 1. Paul himself is joyful, 4:10, and is eager that the Philippians should be so likewise, 4:4. Very likely he had written to them before, and with the same exhortation. 2. 'Look at those dogs': a term of contempt. 'evil workers', more especially as practising and inculcating circumcision. 'concision', a play on the word 'circumcision', with the implication that it has now become mere mutilation. 3. The true circumcision is now of heart and soul; cf. Ac 7:51. 4. Even from their own point of view there is more to be said for Paul than for them. 5. 'a Hebrew born of Hebrews, in observance of the Law a Pharisee, 6, in zeal a persecutor of the Church. 8. 'by reason of the excellence of the knowledge of Christ Jesus', i.e. in comparison with such knowledge. 9-10. For this unity and utter fulfilment of the Christian in Christ, and of Christ in the Christian, see Eph and Col; for justness, not from the Law, but from God, based upon faith, see Rom and Gal. 12. 'Not that I have already secured this, or am already made perfect; rather I press on, in the hope that I may lay hold of that for which Christ Jesus hath laid hold of me'. 14. 'to gain the reward of God's heavenly call, i.e. held out by the call. g 15. 'as are mature' in the faith, understanding its implications etc.; cf. 1 Cor 2:6 ('among the mature'). 16. 'Nevertheless whereunto we are come, by that same let us walk', i.e. whatever truth we have attained, let us order our lives by that. What is added in Vg does not belong to the original text. 17. 'Unite in imitating me'. 18. 'many', i.e. Jews and Judaizers; but the general impression one gets is that relatively 907g they are not very numerous or important at Philippi itself, though always a dangerous element for the Christian communities. 'enemies of the cross of Christ' in several ways, not understanding that thereby Christ had taken wholly upon himself the curse attaching to the non-observance of the Law by Jews, Gal 3:13, as well as atoning for all the sins of mankind etc. 19. 'whose God is their belly': this has nothing to do with greediness, but refers to their insisting on the distinction between clean and unclean foods, now obsolete; cf. Rom 14:14; 16:18. 'whose glory is in their shame', i.e. in their shameful parts, their circumcision, also now obsolete. 20. 'our citizenship' or 'country', for which, 21, our Saviour will glorify our bodies, making them like to his own glorious Body; cf. 1 Cor 15.

IV 1-9 The Dissensions—1. A touching verse, but the Latin superlatives are not in the Gk: 'beloved . . . desired . . . beloved'. 'so', as set forth above; but the Apostle immediately goes on, 2, to press his exhortation to concord (cf. 2:1-7) on the two ladies whose squabbles were presumably the chief cause of trouble. He even goes on, 3, to urge his 'loyal yoke-fellow' or comrade to 'assist them', evidently to compose their differences, 'seeing that [such is the force of the particular Greek relative pronoun used here] they have toiled with me in the gospel, as have also Clement' etc. Some (e.g. Knabenbauer and Vincent) think that 'Synzygus' (here translated 'yoke-fellow') is a proper name, and that instead of 'loyal' we should translate 'rightly so named', i.e. genuine. But such a name does not occur in the NT nor (so far as is known) out of it, and it would be surprising that Paul should not have mentioned elsewhere one whose worthy claim to the name he should so emphatically assert. Such an emphasis on the name, however, would not in itself be strange; cf. Phm 10, 11, 20. To the present writer it seems likely that Silas may be meant; he may have been at Philippi about this time, and so prominent a companion of Paul, who had first evangelized Philippi along with him, would not need to be named. The prominence of the two ladies as a source of trouble illustrates the greater importance of women in Macedonia, of which the position of Lydia, Ac 16:14-15, 40, is another example; cf. § 905f. 'Clement' was early identified with Clement of Rome (e.g. by Origen in Ioann. 1:29; PG 14, 293), generally admitted to be responsible for the well-known letter to the Corinthians. The 'Clement' here in question was a prominent fellow-worker of St Paul, and there is no serious chronological difficulty; still, the name was common, and the identification must remain uncertain. 4. Cf. 3:1. 5. 'your modesty' or general forbearance. This exhortation doubtless has some connexion with what has preceded; and so of the next two verses. 'The Lord is nigh'. There are certainly passages in St Paul which create a difficulty because he seems to speak of the end of the world as imminent; but this need not be considered one of them. There is nothing in the context about the end of the world; the Christians are to live in joy, gentleness, freedom from care, trustful and thankful prayer, peace in Christ. And on the other hand the notion of the Lord being nigh would be familiar from Ps 118 (119) 151; 144(145) 18. And it is reinforced here by 7; cf. 1:21; 3:9; etc. 7. 'will guard your hearts'. 8. 'modest' in a general sense, seemingly, dignified. 'lovely', rather 'lovable'. 'whatever is virtuous and praiseworthy'; omit 'of discipline'. 10-21. An affectionate ending—10. 'Indeed in this b matter you were thinking (about me all along), but you lacked opportunity'. Paul lovingly excuses them. 11. 'Not that I speak because I was in want'; lit. 'according to want'. He does not deny the want, but it is not his motive in speaking; he was hardened to that. 'I have learnt to be self-sufficing in whatever circumstances I am'. 12. 'I have been initiated in everything and in

PHILIPPIANS IV

908b all things, both to plenty and to hunger'. 'initiated' is a term taken from the pagan mysteries, the verb of which our word 'mystery' itself is a noun. St Ignatius of Antioch (martyred early 2nd cent.) in his letter to the Ephesians, ch 12, calls them 'fellow-initiates of Paul'. 14. 'You have done well in sharing with my affliction', i.e. with me in my affliction. 15. 'when I departed from Macedonia (cf. Ac 17:1-15) no church entered into relation of giving and receiving with me', i.e. 'opened a debit and credit account with me'; the terms are financial, as again in 17, 'accumulating to your account'. St Paul is referring to the return of temporal gifts for spiritual, but not of course as a strict bargain; cf. 1 Cor 9:11-14; Rom 15:27. 17. 'the fruit' could likewise probably bear the sense of 'interest' on an investment, meaning here the recompense for the charitable deed, and, 18, 'I have' (or, as one might render it in this sense, 'I have received') is a technical expression in drawing up a receipt, found also in the Sermon on the Mount, Mt 6:2, 5, 16. They have received full payment, the transaction is finished, they must be content to sign the receipt and expect nothing more. For these various terms cf. Moulton-Milligan, Vocabulary. 'an odour of sweetness': cf. Ex 29:18, and often in OT for the sweet savour of an acceptable sacrifice, here in a metaphorical sense. 19. 'from his riches my God will in Christ Jesus satisfy with glory your every need'. 'glory', as often in Paul (Col 1:11; Eph 3:16; Rom 3:23) for grace, which is here chiefly in question.

22-23. 22. The imperial household was enormous, containing men and women of every status, and even slaves might hold high and confidential positions. Paul may have come to know some of them through the praetorian guard, and may be paying tribute to their importance and help. His salutations in Rom 16, sent even before his arrival in Rome, are also significant, as is likewise the epistle of St Ignatius of Antioch to the Romans, in which he expresses a fear that their influence may deliver him from the martyrdom for which he longs. 23. St Paul probably writes this verse with his own hand, after dictating the rest; this was a custom of the time, a kind of signature and a guarantee of genuineness; cf. 2 Thess 2:2; 3:17; 1 Cor 16:21; Gal 6:11; Col 4:18.

THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS

By D. J. LEAHY

909a Bibliography—*T. K. Abbott, Epistle to the Colossians, ICC nd; St John Chrysostom, PG 62 (tr. Library of the Fathers, vol. 14); J. Huby, S.J., Les Epîtres de la Captivité (Verbum Salutis series), Paris, 1935; P. Ketter, Die Heilige Schrift für das Leben erklärt, vol. 15, Freiburg in B., 1937; J. Knabenbauer, S.J., Commentarius in S. Pauli Epistolas (CSS), Paris, 1912; *J. B. Lightfoot, St Paul's Epistle to the Colossians, London, 1890; R. P. Médebielle, Epître aux Colossiens (in La Sainte Bible, ed. Pirot), Paris, 1938; F. Prat, S.J., The Theology of Saint Paul, London, 1942; *L. B. Radford, The Epistle to the Colossians (Westminster Commentaries), London, 1931; J. Rickaby, S.J., Further Notes on St Paul, London, 1911; S. Thomae Aquinatis, In Omnes S. Pauli Epistulas, vol. II, Turin, 1929.

b The Church at Colossae—The origin of the town's name is unknown; it has nothing to do with 'Colossus' or 'Colosseum'; it is probably an adaptation of the name of Lake Koloe, not far distant. The town lay in the south-western corner of Phrygia. The traveller setting out eastwards to the Euphrates from the seat of Government, Ephesus, would take the great trade road through the Meander Valley for about one hundred miles to Laodicea. Eleven miles farther on he would come to Colossae; or six miles northwards he would come to Hierapolis. These cities lay in the Valley of the Lycus, a tributary of the Meander. Colossae itself was situated among mountains which marked the upper reaches of the valley and the point of entry into the tableland of central Asia Minor. Today the district is desolate, but in ancient times it was prosperous. Xerxes halted there on his famous march against the Greeks in 481 B.C., and later Cyrus stayed there for seven days (Xenophon, Anabasis, I, 2, 6). Josephus (Ant 12, 3, 4) relates that Antiochus III, the Great (223–187 B.C.) transferred two thousand Jewish families from Babylonia and Mesopotamia into Lydia and Phrygia. These were allowed to use their own laws and were well treated. Some of them must surely have settled in Colossae. St Paul's epistle supposes that there is a Jewish element among the people there.

In the first cent. of the Christian era the town was already in a state of decay. It had been outstripped by nearby Laodicea, founded in the third cent. B.C. and renowned for its trade in black wool and medicine. Indeed, as J. Huby (p 1) declares, if St Paul had not written this epistle, the name, Colossae, would be known only to specialists in ancient history.

c St Paul did not found the churches in the Lycus Valley personally; they are not included in the description of the Apostle's journeys in Acts, and in this epistle he writes of the Christians gathered together at Colossae and Laodicea in terms which suggest that he had never seen them face to face (Col 1:7; 2:1). Nevertheless, the Church at Colossae was closely bound to the Apostle, and he hoped to visit it personally after writing to Philemon (Phm 22). Hearing your faith (1:4) does not mean that the Apostle was only then for the first time becoming acquainted with the Christians at Colossae. How the Church at Colossae came to be founded was probably in the following way: St Paul spent over two years at Ephesus, and after he had been thrust out of the synagogue there and was preaching daily in the school lent by, or rented from, Tyrannus (Ac 19:9), 'all who dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord, both Jews and Greeks' (Ac 19:26). Among those who came from the Lycus Valley were the Colossians, Epaphras (4:12) and Philemon (4:9; the slave, Onesimus, was from Colossae; hence also his master, Philemon). Epaphras acted as a missionary in his native valley, founding churches at Hierapolis and Laodicea (Col 4:13) as well as in Colossae itself (Col 1:7; 4:12–13). He was assisted by Philemon, who provided accommodation for a church in his house (Phm 1–2). It is likely that both of them were Gentiles, since Paul mentions specially Jesus Justus as a Jew (Col 4:11). Indeed, the majority of the Christians at Colossae appear to have been Gentile converts; cf. 1:21, 27; 2:13, etc. But that there was a Judaic element is, as we have seen, a priori probable, and it is confirmed by several allusions in the epistle (2:11, 14, 16; 3:11, etc.).

Date, Occasion and Purpose—This epistle is one of the four Captivity Epistles, all written whilst St Paul was in prison and all within a short time of one another. The captivity was the Apostle's imprisonment in Rome (61–63, cf. § 898b).

St Paul intended this epistle for all the Lycus Valley churches (cf. 4:16), but that does not imply that it is a circular letter, like Eph. The people in the Lycus Valley were closely bound together; they shared the dangerous tendencies which were the direct occasion for the writing of the epistle. It was doubtless the affair of Onesimus and the letter to Philemon which led Paul to direct the epistle in the first instance to Colossae. Whilst in prison in Rome, the Apostle received a visit from Epaphras, who told him of the growing faith and charity of the people at Colossae (1:7; 2:5; 4:13). This news was good; but there was something disturbing in the report too. There were false teachers there. In brief, they were saying that Christians should worship spiritual beings who were alleged to be intermediaries between God and man. The effect of this false teaching was to rob Christ's person and work of their unique and supreme importance. To combat these errors St Paul wrote this epistle, which, then, can be described as a polemical treatise. His method was to make clear the supremacy of Christ's person and work—to exalt both above intermediate beings.

In detail, the Errors were essentially Judaistic (cf. P. Benoit RB 54 [1947] 624), though they were shot through with a false asceticism and false speculation which came from Hellenistic syncretism (cf. Abbott, xlix). The Apostle supposes that his (Jewish) readers see a close relation between the Law of Moses and the angels. This idea was not new: there are traces elsewhere in the NT (Ac 7:38, 53; Gal 3:19; Heb 2:2), and it was taken for granted by many Jews in rabbinical circles which regarded the Torah as a supernatural being, the real value of which was judged not in its creation, but in its promulgation through angels (cf. J. Bonsirven, S.J., Le Judaïsme Palestinien, Paris, 1934, I, 250). The angels were regarded as guardians of the Torah, and they would destroy those who refused to accept it (J. Bonsirven, loc. cit., I, 232; cf. SB III, 554–6). At Colossae, then, the Judaizers wanted the Old Law to stand; they wanted divine worship to be given to those celestial beings and all they stood for. J. B. Lightfoot (p 71): 'Even the f At the same time there was a tendency which Lightfoot (ibid.) describes as 'an element of theosophic speculation, which is alien to the spirit of Judaism proper . . . a shadowy mysticism which loses itself in the contemplation of the unseen world'. It was a tendency later to develop into Gnosticism (cf. Lightfoot, 74-111). Meanwhile, it appeared as a claim to an exclusive and profound knowledge of celestial beings (cf. 2:18).

909e enforcement of the initiatory rite of Judaism may be inferred from the contrast implied in St Paul's recommendation of the spiritual circumcision (2:2).

The two bad tendencies had one common root: matter was evil and therefore hateful to God. Between God and man, between infinite and finite, yawned a chasm that could not be bridged. In their bewilderment the false teachers, yearning to approach God, turned to angelic beings as instruments of communication between God and man, and as objects of worship.

In his refutation St Paul shows that it was only Christ who filled that chasm; his Person—the Word Incarnate—was their solution; the celestial beings, the alleged intermediaries, to whom St Paul gives the name angels (2:18), or thrones, dominations, principalities, powers (1:16; 2:10, 15) are not divine, are not mediators. They are not closer to man than Christ is; they are subordinate to Christ, the Divine Mediator.

g The Doctrinal Teaching is in perfect harmony with the rest of St Paul's teaching—salvation by union with and in Christ; deliverance from the old man of the flesh and from the Law; entry into the new man by possession of eternal life, already acquired by Baptism but awaiting development in Heaven.

But 'The distinctive feature of this epistle is its Christology. The doctrine of the Person of Christ is here stated with greater precision and fulness than in any other of St Paul's epistles'. (Lightfoot, 120.) Positively, the Apostle here lays great emphasis on the Divinity and Manhood of Christ. He is pre-existent and is supreme over all creation; he has a function in the creation and government of the world; he has a function as Redeemer of the world; he is Head of the Church, the mystical body.

h Authenticity—Abbott (op. cit. p. L) 'About its early and uncontroverted reception as the work of St Paul, there is no doubt'. There are probable allusions to the epistle in Clement of Rome (1 Cor 49, 2; Col 3:14); in Barnabas (12, 7; Col 1:16); St Ignatius (Eph 10, 3; Col 1:23). St Irenaeus quotes from every chapter and attributes the epistle explicitly to St Paul (Adv. Haer. 3, 14, 1). Similarly, there is no doubt about its authenticity in the works of Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, Origen. In the Muratorian Canon the epistle occupies the same position as in our MSS. The Chester-Beatty papyrus (P 46), which dates from the first half of the third cent., reproduces it, and Eusebius mentions it as one of the uncontested epistles. Even the heretics, Marcion and the Valentinians, quote it as the word of God.

Attacks on the authenticity have been based on purely internal or subjective reasons. Thus Mayerhoff (Der Brief an die Kolosser, Berlin, 1838) excited interest by declaring that the epistle was a treatise against Gnostics, and since the earliest Gnostic writer known is Cerinthus, the epistle could not have been written until two centuries after the date of St Paul's death. At the same time Mayerhoff viewed with suspicion the connexion between St Paul and the Christology of the epistle. Though Mayerhoff attracted a few critics to his view, the fact is that today the vast majority of non-Catholic commentators admit that the epistle is from the hand of St Paul.

i Relation between Col and Eph—These two are called companion epistles, first because they were written about the same time, and especially because of their striking literary likeness. Abbott (p. xxiii) quotes a list of parallel passages compiled by De Wette. It comprises some fifty verses of each epistle. It is noticeable that the parallels occur mostly in the moral section of each epistle, and this is not surprising, since once St Paul had formulated precepts for domestic behaviour, for example, he would naturally frame the same instructions in similar language in a second epistle written at the same time (possibly on the same day) to churches which he had not known personally. The contexts, the doctrinal ideas, are not the same in each epistle.

The principal idea of Col is the pre-eminent dignity of Christ's person, whether considered in his eternal life or in his relations with the world—'in all things holding the primacy' (1:18c). The moral teaching develops from this. The principle of man's perfection is not something external (3:21-22); it is within him, for it is Christ dwelling in his soul (3:17). It is in virtue of his union with Christ that man achieves merit: man's perfection is not so much a fleeing from sin, as a continual progress up to God by and in Christ.

The principal idea of Eph is the Church, the union of the faithful with and in Christ, as members of the body of which he is the head. This theme occupies the first three chapters, but corresponding to this Col has only ch. 1. Indeed, the whole of Col 2 has no parallel in Eph. The moral teaching of Eph is an exhortation to lead the Christian life in view of the doctrine expounded in the first three chapters. The Apostle insists especially on unity in and with Christ, the head of the body: internal unity with him by faith, hope and charity; external by professing the same Christianity, all doing their part to build up the whole Christ. The striking passage on charity in unity (4:1-16) has no parallel in Col. 'It must be recognized that nowadays those who deny the authenticity of Eph are abandoning the argument drawn from the literary likeness between that epistle and Col. Nobody now speaks of a servile reproduction, or of an imitation without any show of originality.' (Coppieters RB 9 [1912] 371.)

I 1-3a The Greeting—1. It is noteworthy that St Paul uses his title 'apostle of Jesus Christ' even to a church which he had not personally founded (cf. § 909c). What he is going to write in this epistle is authoritative; that is why he begins by quoting his credentials (cf. 1 Cor 1:1; 2 Cor 1:1; Eph 1:1, etc.). With his own name he associates that of Timothy, a brother in affection, who ministered to the Apostle in captivity (cf. Phil 2:19-23), and who is mentioned in all the Captivity Epistles, except Eph. Indeed, Timothy appears to have written out this epistle at the Apostle's dictation (4:18). 2. Those who are addressed are the Christians at Colossa (the orthography of the town's name varied), and, as in all his later epistles beginning with Rom, St Paul describes them as 'the saints', i.e. the new Israel consecrated to God by Baptism in Christ; they are also 'the faithful brethren', i.e. whose faith in Christ is firm (cf. Ac 10:45; Eph 1:1; 2 Tim 4:3, 12, etc.). 3a. The 'grace' is the supernatural bounty of God and Christ; it is the foundation on which 'peace' or union with God, is built. As in Eph, Paul raises the common Greek and Hebrew salutations to the supernatural order.

3b-8 Thanksgiving—St Paul has heard from Epaphras (7) of the state of their faith, hope and charity; for this he gives thanks always. 5. The dominant note here is hope of the good things awaiting them in Heaven. Radford: 'The future glory casts a new light on the present struggle'. We may infer at once that it is perfectly lawful for Christians to practise their religion with a view to eternal recompense (cf. Eph 6:6-9; 1 Pet 1:3-22; Apoc 14:13). The Council of Trent (Sess. 6, cap. 16) has stated the Catholic doctrine of merit: every good work done in the state of Grace is rewarded by God with a title to an increase of eternal bliss. The Church has condemned the proposition attributed to Fénelon, 'There is an habitual state of love of God without admixture of any motive of self-interest, and this is perfect charity'

910b (Dz 1327). The important word in this quotation is, of course, 'habitual'. 6. The Apostle's view of the Gospel territory is 'the whole world'. Already the Gospel had been preached in most provinces of the Roman Empire (cf. Rom 1:8), and it is probable that the Apostles had already evangelized Africa, Egypt and Gaul. The Gospel came to the Colossians as part of the world-wide movement.

9-14 Prayer for their spiritual progress—9.—'Therefore' sums up what he has written of the good they possess. Chrysostom: 'For as in the games we cheer on those most who are near upon gaining the victory, so truly does Paul also most exhort those who have achieved the greater part'. The Apostle is thinking of the false teachers, with their speculations, their claim to know (gnosis). He prays daily that his readers will be equipped intellectually with the perfection of knowledge (epignosis, DV 'the knowledge')—the deepest understanding—of God's will (cf. Lightfoot, 248-54). Further, he prays that this intellectual conviction be accompanied by 'all wisdom' (whereby a man sees all things with reference to God) and 'spiritual understanding' (whereby he clearly discerns between right and wrong). 10. Thus equipped by God the Christians life should show four qualities: (i) Zeal to please God (this being the probable sense of 'in all things pleasing'); (ii) 'fruitfulness', like a tree, 'in every good work', accompanied by a deepening knowledge of God; (iii) 11. Determination to carry out God's will patiently, without wrath (DV 'longsuffering') and joyfully; (iv) 12. A spirit of thanksgiving for the whole favour of salvation through Christ's redemption (cf. Eph 1:6-7; Ac 26:18).

More precisely, this thanksgiving embraces three effects of the Redemption. First, the Father 'hath fitted us for our portion of the inheritance of the saints in light' (WV). All the supernatural benefits and God himself, their source, are described by the figure of light (cf. Ac 9:3; Eph 5:7-13, etc.). 13. Second, we have been snatched from being slaves to the power of darkness—'from an arbitrary tyranny' (Lightfoot)—to the well ordered 'kingdom of his beloved Son' (WV). 14. Third, we have 'redemption', i.e. liberation from a state of guilt, forgiveness of former sins (cf. Eph 1:7).

d 15a Christ and God the Father—St Paul here begins the doctrinal part of the epistle; he continues it down to 2:7. Christ is the 'image of the invisible God'. 'Image' (εἰκών), says St Thomas (op. cit.) connotes three qualities at the same time: (a) it must have a likeness with the original prototype, (b) it must be derived from the prototype, (c) it must belong to the same species as the prototype. Hence, mere likeness alone would not be enough. A photograph is a likeness; it is not an image in the sense used here. But a son is the image of his father (but not vice versa). By 'God' here, of whom Christ is the image, the Apostle means God the Father (as in 2 Cor 4:4). To him St Paul gives the title 'invisible'. Prat (I, 288): 'Invisibility belongs especially to him, considered either as God (and then it is common to him and to the Son, his perfect image) or considered as the Father, as St Paul seems to hint, and as a great number of the ancient ecclesiastical writers have thought; in this case it would designate the personal and incommunicable attribute, by virtue of which the Father, source and principle of the Godhead, sends the other Persons, but is not sent by them'. Christ, then, is the image of the Father, because he manifests him to mankind. *Lightfoot: 'the underlying idea of the εἰκών, and indeed of the λόγος generally, is the manifestation of the hidden'. Hence, there is no need to follow St Thomas here (and other writers, e.g. St Chrysostom) saying 'he is the image not only of the invisible God, but is himself as invisible as the Father'.

In itself 'image' does not demand equality with the archetype; but in fact we know that Christ, the image, is 'identical with the Father in every particular, differing from him only by the fact of being begotten' (St John Damascene, quoted Prat ibid.). Cf. v 19.

15b-17 Christ and the Universe—He has absolute supremacy over all natural creation, because he is 'the firstborn of every creature'. 'Firstborn' here (as Rom 8:29; Col 1:18) is used in the metaphorical sense of pre-existence before creation. *Radford (p 174): 'It implies more than priority; it implies a relationship to God which cannot be predicated even of angels or men, much less of other creatures'. (Cf. Prat I, 289 f.; C. F. Burney, JTS 27 [1926] 160 f.) Christ, then, being eternal, is supreme; yet he is the final revelation of God (16). 'For' indicates the reasons. 'In him were all things created.' In particular, he is the Creator of celestial beings, some of whom the Apostle here names (cf. Eph 1:21)—perhaps those to whom the false teachers paid most respect. The three prepositions, in him, by him, unto him, indicate how the act of creation occurred, and at the same time provide a summary of the relations of the Son to the universe. 'In him': he was the centre of unity, of harmony and cohesion, when the act of creation took place. All creatures, past, present and future, are suspended ontologically from the Christ, and cannot be fully understood if their relation with him is broken. St Thomas (op. cit.): 'A worker constructs an object by making it take on his mental ideal ("forma"). He clothes, as it were, his ideal with external matter, as a man builds a house according to the plan which he has worked out in his mind. And thus God is said to do everything by his wisdom, because the wisdom of God is to create things what the art of the builder is to the house. The mental ideal ("forma") and wisdom is the Word, and hence all things are created in him, as in a certain exemplar'. 'By him': he is the efficient cause of all things. 'Unto him': all things are pointed towards him as their final goal and meaning (cf. Apoc 22:13). It is noteworthy that the verb here (ἐκτίσται) is perfect, indicating that there is a continuous, ever present, relation between all created things and Christ, who is their efficient cause and goal. The Apostle makes this thought even clearer in the next verse. 17. All things were not only created by the Son; they 'consist' in him. St Thomas (op. cit.): 'If God were to withdraw his power from us, all things would fall apart.' As Lightfoot observes, 'the action of gravitation which keeps in their place things fixed, and regulates the motion of things moving is an expression of his mind'.

The implied conclusion of this section is clear enough: Christ has absolute sovereignty over the whole created universe. Between him and celestial beings no comparison is possible; they are creatures, he the divine Creator; they are finite, he is infinite.

18-19 Christ and the Church—Christ is also absolute sovereign in the Church. 18a. 'And he' is emphatic: the same Person who is Creator, Conservator and Final Cause of all things—and not some angelic deputy—is also 'Head of the body' (cf. Eph 1:22b). The head is distinct from the body (cf. 1:24; Eph 1:23; 5:23); yet it is united to the body, as the next words show: he is 'the beginning', i.e. the origin, the cause of all the supernatural growth of the members. Thus the figure of Christ as head of the body serves Paul's purpose of insisting both on Christ's sovereignty over the members and on his nearness to them. Radford: 'He is supreme over creation, but supreme in the Church, distinct from creation, but identified with the Church'. 18b. 'The firstborn from the dead', i.e. the first to rise from the dead to a new life, and the cause of the resurrection of those associated with him in his triumph (cf. 1 Cor 15:20; Apoc 1:5). The expression 'has nothing in common with "firstborn of every creature"' (Prat, I, 290). 18c. 'that in all things he may hold the primacy'. All these prerogatives place him (and not some creature) supreme in the natural and religious realms. 19. 'For in him it hath pleased the Father that all the fulness should dwell' (WV). The usual sense of fulness is totality. Here it may denote all existence (P. Benoit, O.P., RB 54 [1947] 625), or—and this is the commoner view 911a —it may denote 'the combined sum of the perfections which constitute the divine essence: in other words, divinity itself'. (Prat I, 295). Cf. 2:9. Moreover, Christ possesses this fullness in permanent fashion (κατοικεῖν, DV 'dwell'). This verse provides the ultimate reason for Christ's sovereignty over all things.

b 20-29 Christ's Work: Reconciliation—St Paul has described the Person of Christ: he is the image of the invisible God (1:15), Creator (1:16-17); sovereign over the universe and supreme in the work of Redemption (1:18-20). He now draws the consequence of this, that through Christ alone must reconciliation be effected. 20. The reconciliation affects 'all things . . . both as to the things that are on earth and the things that are in heaven'. There is no difficulty in understanding that all things on earth (i.e. primarily the human race) are reconciled to God through Christ (cf. Rom 8:20-22); but how explain the reconciliation of the things in heaven? Knabenbauer (pp 303-5) refers to a variety of suggestions made, and since his time other opinions have been added (e.g. Huby, 47). The most probable interpretation is that Paul is referring to angels. The false teachers regarded the angels as intermediate beings, guardians of the Law of Moses, and holding in their hands the list of punishments due to transgressors (cf. 2:14). Now Christ has brought peace and reconciliation to all through the Cross. Cf. B. N. Wambacq RB 55 (1948) 35-42. The participle 'making peace' having the same subject as the main verb emphasizes that the first step comes from the Father. The peace is effected 'through the blood of his cross'. The sacrifice on Calvary is the effective mediation; it bears peace between heaven and earth (cf. Eph 4:1-6). Chrysostom: 'Earth became heaven, since heaven was about to receive what came of earth.' 22a. For his sacrifice of reconciliation Christ, the Mediator, chose a body that could feel the sting of pain and death. 22b. What is the effect for the Colossians? From being sinful they have become 'holy, unspotted, blameless', a three-fold description of the state of Grace based on a metaphor drawn from the qualities required for an OT sacrificial victim (cf. Eph 1:21; 1 Thess 2:10). 23. It is a firm state, not to be upset by false teaching. What the Apostle says is no mere fancy of his own devising—he is an ambassador of Christ.

d 24 The Work of Christ and the sufferings of the Apostle—(1) 'now rejoice in my sufferings for you'. The 'now' is noteworthy: Paul is 'an ambassador in chains' (Eph 6:20). 'And fill up': Vg 'adimpleo', DV 'fill up' disregards the two prepositions which appear before the simple verb in the Greek. With the first preposition (ἀντί) the verb indicates a want being met by two complementary operations (cf. Lk 14:12). The second preposition (ἀνά) means 'up to the top' (like filling a cup to the brim). The whole word shows the Apostle by reason of his sufferings on behalf of the Colossians supplying something not supplied by Christ, and the result of the combined operation between Christ and the Apostle is to satisfy the want fully. 'Those things that are wanting of the sufferings of Christ': he does not say that the suffering of Christ is not completed, but that certain aspects of those sufferings (cf. plural) need to be made perfect. 'In my flesh' denotes the whole man, body and soul.

e What are the sufferings, or afflictions, of Christ to which Paul brings (along with the operation of Christ) completeness? Are they those endured by Christ; or are they those suffered by the members of Christ's Mystical Body, other than St Paul? There are two opinions, each of which has Catholic supporters. First, the afflictions are those endured by Christ. The Passion is complete, infinite in its atoning or satisfactory power. To this power neither St Paul nor anyone else could add anything. But the application of the merits of Christ's Passion to individual souls involves a toll of suffering, especially on the part of those chosen by Christ as his ministers (cf. 1 Cor 3:9). The Apostle looks down at his prison bonds. His sufferings are in union with those of Christ. They are the vehicle for conveying the Passion to the hearts and souls of men, and in this way they bring completeness to the Passion in an external way. That he should call his own sufferings in the service of Christ the afflictions of Christ in his flesh is in accordance with similar expressions, 2 Cor 1:5; 4:10; Phil 3:10. 911e

The other opinion regards the sufferings of Christ as those of the mystical body (cf. Ac 9:14). St Augustine (Enarr. in Ps 62, 4): 'Thou [member of Christ's Body] sufferest so much as was to be contributed out of thy sufferings to the whole sufferings of Christ, that hath suffered in our Head, and doth suffer in his members, that is, in our own selves'. The Passion of Christ, then, is continued in the members of his Body, the Church. This fits in with the truth that the Church is in a real though mystical sense Christ himself. (Cf. R. H. Benson, Christ in the Church, esp. Parts I and IV.)

Though the exegete here 'can advance only with caution' (Prat), the first opinion seems preferable; it gives the ordinary sense of the phrase 'the sufferings of Christ'. In either opinion we are presented with an important lesson: suffering can be, not a terrifying enigma in our eyes, but something very precious, since it is the instrument God chose to redeem us, and we can make our sufferings serve in the cause of Christ's Passion. Cf. Rom 8:18, 28; cf. §900b. J. Rickaby, S.J. ('An Old Man's Jottings', 231): 'Suffering, merely as such, does not sanctify. It did not sanctify the Bad Thief. The wicked in hell suffer, but are not made holy. The only suffering that sanctifies is suffering patiently borne for God, suffering accepted in obedience to God's will, suffering hallowed by the obedience of Him who was "made obedient even to the death of the Cross" (Phil 2:8). . . . The obedience of comfort is good, but the obedience of suffering is heroic. And God requires it, sooner or later, of everyone. You may be gold, but you must be stamped with the cross to pass as current coin for heaven.'

25-29 The Work of Christ continued in St Paul's g Apostolate—25. The purpose of his ministry is 'to utter the full word of God' (WV). 26. This he further defines as 'the mystery'. Here, as at Eph 3:1-3 (cf. Rom 16:25 f.), the Apostle has in mind the comprehensive truth, once hidden, now revealed by Christ, which embraces all others. It is the whole plan of man's redemption, timeless, yet revealed and enacted by the Incarnation and Death of Our Saviour. One phase of the mystery is that it is world-wide in its benefit. St Paul often insists on this phase. 27b. The one-time pagans of Colossae now have 'Christ in you' (the punctuation of the DV is better omitted here).

II 1-7 St Paul's care for all, especially for the Colossians—3. It is in Christ, then, and not in some coterie of false teachers, that all the 'treasures of wisdom and knowledge' are hidden. 5b. 'Beholding your order'—a metaphor based on the ranks (τάξις) and strong united force of soldiers (στρεβύματα). He is not dismayed. He has the report from Ephaphras, and he sees them as a disciplined body presenting a bold front to adversaries. 6-7. He ends the doctrinal part with an appeal for loyalty to Christ: the root of their religious life, the principle of their cohesion and progress in Christ.

8-III 4 Polemical. False Wisdom and the True—8. 912a Erroneous Teaching. The time has come to confront the false teaching. Though it goes by the name of philosophy (the only mention of the word in the Bible), it is really a kind of bait for error—'an empty deceit'—based on 'the traditions of men' (contrast 6a), closely allied to the 'elements of the world'. This last expression seems to denote observance of days, months and years (16b). In other words, the elements are connected with the sun and moon, or with cosmic forces generally. Chrysostom, 'By elements of the world he means the sun and moon'. The Greek word στοιχείων meant the first step in anything; hence the cosmic forces of nature, or the A B C of knowledge (cf. KNT Gal 4:3: 'the schoolroom tasks').

912b 9-10 True Wisdom Life in Christ—9. 'For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead corporeally.' On 'fulness', see on 1:19. 'Godhead' translates a Greek word (θεότης) which is a hapax legomenon in the Bible. It denotes the Divine Nature itself (cf. Prat II, 152). And the significance of 'all' before 'the fulness' is to denote each and all of the divine perfections in their highest degree (infinity). The complete Divine Nature, then, abides permanently (κατοικεῖ) in Christ; it also abides 'corporeally'. This last expression means 'in a body, in the form of a body'. The text teaches that the Divinity and Humanity are united in the one person of Christ—as the soul by dwelling in the body constitutes with it one single principle. Prat: 'Your pretended philosophy, said St Paul, is only a vain deceit; you will linger in elementary, childish doctrines; you ask for the protectors and mediators of a chimerical world of the imagination, and you neglect him in whom, in a visible and tangible form, free from error and illusion, dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. As he possesses this absolute plenitude permanently, he will cause it to flow out upon you in spiritual graces, and you can therefore dispense with all other intercessors.'

10a. 'And you are filled in him'; by reason of their incorporation in Christ they are filled with all his fulness (cf. Eph 1:23). Cf. § 646c

c 11-15 Baptism and its Effects—11. With Circumcision he contrasts the spiritual circumcision instituted by Christ—Baptism. 12. In describing the effects of Baptism the Apostle uses again the symbolism of Rom 6:3 ff. 13. He dwells on the note of forgiveness. 14. He uses a metaphor drawn from 'the handwriting with its decree that was against us'. The 'handwriting', lit. something written out by hand; hence usually an indenture of debt. See 1:20. On the Cross God swept away the Mosaic Law and all its demands. 15. It follows that God despoiled the 'principalities and powers'. At this point the Apostle uses a metaphor taken from a Roman triumph. Having stripped the angels God exposes them 'in public' (DV 'confidently') in the triumphal procession.

d 16-23 Erroneous Practices—16. Between the bodily asceticism (concerning meat and drink) and the observance of Jewish festival days the bond of connexion seems to have been observance of the Jewish Law. 17. But all this was useful and good only in so far as it was a 'shadow' of the future salvation; salvation through Christ is 'the reality' (DV 'body'), cf. Heb. 10:1. 18. 'Let no one cheat you of your prize, delighting in self-abasement and worship of angels and "taking his stand" on what he hath seen, foolishly swollen with his fleshy conceit' (WV). This reading omits with the most important Greek MSS the negative before 'seen'. 19. No need for an external Jewish practice, or even for an angel to come between a Christian and Christ. From the Head the whole Body receives its life, cohesion and growth. The description is almost the same as Eph 4:16, with the difference that there the Apostle emphasizes the union of the members between themselves, while here his thought is of their dependence on the Head.

913a III 1-4 True Perfection, Life in Christ—1. At Baptism they died a mystical death when they went down into the cleansing water, but they died only to be raised to a new life in Christ (cf. Rom 6:4; Eph 2:4 ff. etc.). 2. But to live means to think, to love, to act. Their life should be one long sursum corda, until the members of his Body will be joined with their Head in manifest glory. Cf. Prayer for Ascension Day. 5-9 Vices to be kept Dead—St Paul here begins the moral part of the epistle—the application of the doctrine to their daily lives. 5. Though a Christian is dead to the lower passions, they can rebel (cf. 1:28; Eph 4:13). They must be 'kept dead' (DV 'mortify') by refusing to let them guide conduct. The sins mentioned are those to which the readers are especially tempted. But they can all be grouped under three heads, impurity, avarice and pride (cf. 1 Jn 2:16). On 'covetousness which is the service of idols' many 913a commentators observe that the phrase can be best understood in the light of Mt 6:24, and is then seen to refer to men who make wealth their god. It is possible however, that Paul here condemns love of gain acquired by associating with some pagan practice; cf. VD 12 (1932) 370.

10-17 Virtues to be practised—9b-10. 'The stripping of the old man with his deeds' and the 'putting on of the new', first accomplished at Baptism, are tasks that have to be constantly renewed. A good gardener constantly weeds; the permanent way needs constant supervision. In 1 Cor 2:6 Paul regards some Christians as already perfect in the sense that they have a proved capacity and desire for truth (cf. Phil 3:15). But here (as also 1:28; Eph 4:13) he sees perfection as a continual renewal. 11b. 'Christ is all and in all': he is the complete gift; in him all distinction is obliterated—the Christian, whatever his social standing (11a) possesses Christ. 14b. 'Charity . . . the bond of perfection.' Chrysostom: 'The Apostle says not "charity is the crown", but something greater, "the bond", the latter being more necessary than the former; for a crown is a heightening of perfection, but a bond is a holding together of the component parts of perfection'. 15. 'The peace of Christ' should 'stand as umpire' (DV 'rejoice') in Christian hearts (cf. Eph 4:3). Chrysostom: 'He sets up an arena in our hearts, and games, and a wrestling match, and an umpire'. 16. 'The word of Christ' is his teaching; it must be theirs 'abundantly', i.e. to the point of overflowing into (i) 'teaching and admonishing' one another and (ii) praise of God rising up from their hearts 'in thanksgiving' (DV 'in grace') to God. The 'psalms' here are generally regarded as Christian hymns after the model of the Psalms of David. It is difficult to distinguish precisely between psalms, hymns and canticles (cf. Eph 5:19).

III 18-IV 1 Duties in the Home—As in Eph 5:21-6:9 c Paul shows that the Christian spirit must permeate everyday duties. The same logical order is observed here (wife, husband, children, parents, slaves and masters). But here the counsels are briefer. There are only two additions. 25. First, with regard to slaves—to the sanction of reward for good is added that of punishment for injustice on the part of the slave. 1. Second, with regard to masters—to the duty of justice is added that of 'fairness' (DV 'equal').

IV 2-6 General Counsels—2. 'Instant in prayer' means perseverance. Prayer here (cf. Eph 6:18) refers to continued awareness of the presence of God. It implies 'vigilance' (DV 'watching'). 5b. 'Redeeming the time.' The expression occurs (Eph 5:16) where the context concerns general progress. Here the context is the apostolate. We must make the most of every opportunity to propagate the faith. 6. Their 'speech' must be 'always in grace', i.e. courteous, and 'seasoned with salt', i.e. marked with supernatural flavour (cf. Mk 9:49).

7-18 Epilogue: Personal Salutations—8. The d Apostle in prison (18) is sending Tychicus, the bearer of the epistle and of that to the Ephesians (Eph 6:21), 'that ye may know our condition' (WV). 9. With Tychicus goes Onesimus. There is no word here about his being a slave—we learn that from Phm—and Paul singles him out for praise. Then come salutations from six companions in captivity. 10. It is only here that we learn that Mark, the writer of the Second Gospel, was cousin to Barnabas, and we do not know whether he reached the Colossians (10b). 12. Again Paul praises Epaphras who is 'wrestling by his prayer' on behalf of his fellow-Colossians. 14. Luke, 'the most dear physician', was the companion of St Paul and writer of the Third Gospel and Acts. Demas later abandoned the Apostle (2 Tim 4:9). 18. The final verse was written by St Paul himself (he had dictated up to this point). Cf. 2 Thess 3:17; 1 Cor 16:21; Gal 6:11. He is a prisoner for Christ's sake, for the Gospel, for them. 'Grace be with you.'

1 and 2 THESSALONIANS

By DOM B. ORCHARD

914a Bibliography—St John Chrysostom, PG 62; St John Damascene PG 95; Knabenbauer, In Epistolas ad Thessalonicenses, CSS, Paris, 1913; Vosté, Commentarius in Epistolas ad Thessalonicenses, Rome, 1917; Lattey, I & II Thessalonians, WV, 1927^a; Steinmann, Die Briefe an die Thessalonicher, BB, Bonn, 1935; Eaton, Epistles of St Paul to the Thessalonians, London, 1939; Costello, I & II Thessalonians, CNT, 1942; Amiot, Épîtres aux Thessaloniens, Verbum Salutis XIV, Paris, 1946; *Lightfoot, I & II Thessalonians in Notes on the Epistles of St Paul, London, 1895; *Findlay, I & II Thessalonians, CBSC, 1891; *Milligan, St Paul's Epistles to the Thessalonians, London, 1908; *Frame, Thessalonians, ICC, Edinburgh, 1912; *Plummer, A Commentary on St Paul's First Epistle to the Thessalonians, London, 1918; *Plummer, A Commentary on St Paul's Second Epistle to the Thessalonians, London, 1918; *Bicknell, I & II Thessalonians, London, 1932; S. Obiols, Epistoles de Saint Paul aux Thessaloniens (La Biblia, Monestir de Montserrat) 1930; D. Buzy, Épîtres aux Thessaloniens (La Sainte Bible [Pirot] tom. XII) 1936, pp 129-90; art. Thessaloniens (Épîtres aux) and Eschatologie (D. Buzy and A. Brundt) DTC. The present commentary is especially indebted to Vosté, Amiot, Frame, Milligan and Plummer.

b Thessalonica—Thessalonica, the modern Salonika, was founded by Cassander in 315 B.C. and was named after his wife, the step-sister of Alexander the Great. The city became the chief naval station of the Macedonian kings, and the advantages of its situation for commerce and naval warfare secured it a rapid and increasing prosperity. It was perhaps the most important city of the Roman Province of Macedonia and became the place of residence of the proconsul and virtually its capital. Its situation on the Via Egnatia, the highway connecting Rome with her eastern provinces, added enormously to its importance. In the Second Roman Civil War the city took the side of Octavius and Antony, and in reward was made a free city, ruled by its own assembly and magistrates, who were called politarchs (Ac 17:5-6). In the time of St Paul, therefore, the city was important, populous, and a strategic centre for the spread of the Faith in Macedonia. Its population was chiefly Greek, but on account of its commercial advantages many other nations were represented, especially the Jews, who formed a large and powerful community possessing a synagogue. Save for the Jews, its inhabitants were idolaters, and as licentious as any other seaport population of those days.

c The Church in Thessalonica at the time of the Epistles consisted of a few Jewish converts and a large number of convert pagan Greeks (Ac 17:4; 1 Thess 1:9). Though the account of Paul's visit in Ac would lead us to assume that he only spent three weeks there on his second missionary journey, most commentators agree that the flourishing state of the Thessalonian Church at the time of the Epistles presupposes a total length of residence of some three to six months, during which he converted a great number of Gentiles and set up a system of Church government (1 Thess 5:12-14). It was in fact his great success with the Gentiles that roused the envy of the Jews (Ac 17:5) and led to a riot. Though they failed to find Paul, the situation was sufficiently menacing to cause the brethren to send him and Silas away by night to Beroea. From there the relentless persecution of the Jews of Thessalonica drove him down to Athens (Ac 17:15), where Timothy rejoined him. Being most anxious to know how his recent Thessalonian converts were facing up to the bitter persecution of the Jews, he despatched Timothy to find out and report back to him (1 Thess 3:2).

Occasion—The First Epistle to the Thessalonians is the result of the favourable report brought back by Timothy to Paul who in the interval had moved on to Corinth (Ac 18:5). Along with the good news of their spiritual progress and of their patient endurance of persecution, Timothy also, it seems, informed Paul that the Jews were trying to discredit the authority of the three missionaries. He also brought two questions, possibly in writing, that required immediate answer as they were disturbing the minds of some in the Thessalonian Church, one concerning the date of the Parousia or Second Coming, and the other the fate of those of their brethren who, by their premature death, could not possibly be witnesses of the Parousia. The Apostle's answer to the latter question satisfied them, but his clear statement of his own and every one else's ignorance of the date of the Second Coming of Christ did not convince some of the Thessalonians and necessitated the Second Epistle in which he reaffirmed the total ignorance of all mankind of the date of the Parousia and calmed their apprehensions of the possibility of its immediate approach by enumerating certain things that must happen beforehand.

Date, place and genuineness—It seems certain that both Epistles were composed at Corinth in the early part of his stay during the second missionary journey at a time when Silas and Timothy were with him (1 Thess 2:17). As Gallio seems to have been resident in Corinth as proconsul during the latter part of St Paul's stay (Ac 18:11, 18) in the spring of A.D. 51 or 52, the date of the First Epistle may be fixed as between the autumn of 50 and the spring of 52. The Second Epistle seems from internal evidence to have been written from two to six months after the First.

That both Epistles are genuine writings of St Paul is beyond all doubt, and there is no need to rehearse the arguments here. It may be noted, however, as a point of interest, that both Epistles are written throughout in the first person plural (except for the final salutation) on account of the part played by both Silas and Timothy in the conversion of Thessalonica.

Doctrinal Content—These epistles are especially remarkable for the glimpse they give us of the personality of Paul and of his love of the brethren and friendship for his converts. Many times does he thank God for their good progress in the Christian way of life and praise them for having become a pattern to all in the province of Macedonia (1 Thess 1:3-8). The Thessalonians are his 'brothers' for whom his love is so intense that he would gladly communicate to them not only the Gospel but his very soul, thoughts and feelings, indeed, his life, 'because you are become most dear to us' (1 Thess 2:8). Though they are only friends and brethren of a few months' standing he cannot continue without news of their progress even for a short time, and he 'lives again'

914f when he learns not only that they are doing well but that they are as desirous to see him again as he to see them (1 Thess 3:6-8).

The fundamental Pauline teaching on our Union with God in Christ, the Son of God, and his full divinity and equality with God the Father is made clear in the first salutation of both epistles. All the main Doctrines found in the other epistles, e.g. the redemptive work of Christ, sanctification through the Holy Spirit, grace, the laws of Christian morality, are taken for granted in many passing allusions. The chief subject is, however, the Second Coming, or Parousia, of Christ, to which the next section is devoted. There is also an interesting reference to a group of rulers of the Church in 1 Thess 5:12-14, and though they are given no name we may assume that they are similar to the clergy ordained previously in South Galatia (Ac 14:22). It is also interesting to note that the controversy over the value of circumcision and the Mosaic Law, which was still barely a couple of years past and which had produced the Epistle to the Galatians (cf. in loc.), finds no echo in Thessalonica.

g The most important teaching in the Epistles is, however, usually held to be his teaching on The Second Coming, or Parousia, and this section will therefore attempt to summarize their Eschatology. The Apostle teaches that the whole spiritual life of every man must be directed towards preparing for the Parousia 'that your whole spirit and soul and body may be preserved blameless in the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ' (1 Thess 5:23, cf. Ac 17:31). It was, however, their misapprehension of the bearing of this doctrine on their everyday life that led him to reiterate the necessity of continuing steadily with the humdrum business of earning their daily bread by hard work instead of standing about gossiping waiting for the Parousia, as some were doing. The scope of the following remarks is limited to showing that his teaching on the Parousia is consistent with itself, consistent with the teaching of Christ in the Gospels, and identical with the teaching of the Church today.

h His doctrine may be schematized under the following heads: (1) There is at present a withholding power (ὁ κατέχων, τὸ κατέχον) that prevents the Lawless One (the Antichrist), the emissary of Satan, from manifesting himself fully (2 Thess 2:6); (2) When, however, this force is removed the Antichrist will deceive and destroy many (2 Thess 2:8-11, cf. Mt 24:21-24); (3) The Second Coming, or appearance, of Christ, properly so called (1 Thess 4:16; 2 Thess 1:7-8; cf. 1 Cor 15:52; Mt 24:29-31); (4) His victory over Antichrist (2 Thess 2:8); (5) The gathering together of the dead raised to life again and of the living newly transformed to be judged by Christ (1 Thess 4:15-17, cf. 1 Cor 15:51-53; 2 Thess 1:8-10; Rom 2:5-16, 14:10; 1 Cor 3:13; 2 Cor 5:10; 1 Tim 5:24; 2 Tim 4:1; Heb 6:2, 9:27, 10:27, cf. also Mt 25:31 f., Ac 17:31); (6) The reunion with Jesus and the consummation of the reign of Christ (1 Thess 4:17; 1 Cor 15:24, 28).

i The first point to grasp is that St Paul's teaching on this subject is firmly based on the words of our Lord in the Gospels and especially Mt 24—indeed, the writer believes that our present Greek Matthew was the principal source of the eschatological teaching of these epistles—(cf. Orchard, Thessalonians and the Synoptic Gospels, Bi 19 [1938], 19 ff.). In no respect is St Paul's teaching an innovation, save in the particular point of the lot of those who die before the Parousia (1 Thess 4:13 f.), where he expressly claims a personal divine revelation. The same is true of his doctrine of the Antichrist (2 Thess 2:1-11), all of which he has drawn, according to the instruction of our Lord in Mt 24:15, from Daniel 9-12 (cf. Orchard, St. Paul and the Book of Daniel, Bi 20 [1939], 172-9). There is, therefore, no need to look for its sources in the Apocryphal writings.

j In the second place we have the Apostle's repeated declaration of his own complete ignorance of the time and date of the Second Coming (1 Thess 5:1, 10). 914f Now ignorance of the date meant that so far as he, Paul, knew, it was just as likely to come the next day as a thousand years later, provided that the signs that were to precede its coming had already been verified. The first sign was the destruction of Jerusalem (which in fact took place in A.D. 70, some years after the Apostle's death); for according to Mt 24 the end cannot come before the fulfilment of the prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem, which was promised before 'this generation shall pass away' (Mt 24:34). (How much time was then to elapse between this event and the Second Coming Mt does not make clear.) St Paul, therefore, knew that as his generation would witness the destruction of Jerusalem he might quite possibly live to see it himself, and even live on into the years beyond it when the Parousia might come at any moment, provided that in the meantime the other signs preceding it had also been fulfilled. Being in this state of uncertainty he could quite justifiably identify himself either with those who would be alive at the Parousia (1 Thess 4:13; 1 Cor 15:51-53) or with those dead in Christ who would then rise first (1 Thess 4:14; 1 Cor 6:14). Nor must we forget that Thessalonians was written at a time when only twenty years of the forty that constitutes a biblical 'generation' had already passed away and that the Apostle himself was still in the prime of life. But naturally as old age approached, he must have realized that his own chance of being alive at the Parousia became correspondingly more and more remote. And thus when he wrote 2 Tim in his old age he knew he would not live to see the Parousia and was ready and eager for death (2 Tim 4:6). A careful study of these and the other epistles confirms the tradition of the Church that while the Apostle's views on the Parousia were consistent from first to last, the passage of time gradually led him to modify their personal application to himself.

Nor is there any real difficulty in such passages as 1 Thess 3:12-13, 5:23, which may be taken as typical of most Pauline warnings to be prepared for the Second Coming; for they remind his readers and hearers that they will all be judged in that day whether they are then alive or whether they are dead and then raised up. Again, a passage such as 1 Thess 1:10 shows that he encouraged his converts to look forward as eagerly as he himself to the Parousia, without worrying whether they died before it or not. For as he taught in 1 Thess 4:13 f. 'the dead in Christ', of whom there were already not a few, would be at no disadvantage with the living at the Parousia. It was the privilege and joy as well as the duty of all Christians to look forward to that glorious coming in order 'that whether we watch or sleep we may live together with him' (1 Thess 5:10). The Biblical Commission was therefore fully justified when in June 1915 it laid down that St Paul never said or taught, in public or in private, anything that was not perfectly compatible with his own ignorance of the time of the Parousia; cf. § 52e.

1 THESSALONIANS

I 1 Greeting—Although the Epistle was entirely his own composition St Paul associates Sylvanus (the 915a Silas of Ac) and Timothy, his two chief assistants on his second missionary journey, with his greetings and message throughout. This verse shows that he had taught the Thessalonians the equality of Jesus Christ, the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity, with God the Father. Omit the second 'in'.

2-10 Thanksgiving for their Conversion—3. Render 'labour of charity'. Basing all their hope on Christ, they had fruitfully exercised the three Theological Virtues. 4. In this behaviour he sees their active response to God's gratuitous gift of Faith by which they were chosen (elected) members of Christ's 915b Kingdom. Omit stop after v 3. 5. God's favour to them was shown by the efficacy and fullness of St Paul's preaching amongst them on the one hand, and by the sincerity and depth of their conversion on the other.—'our gospel': the 'glad-tidings' of salvation through Christ as proclaimed by St Paul.—'in power': either 'by miracles' or 'efficaciously'.—'followers': cf. 1 Cor 4:16; Phil 3:17. 7-8. These verses favour a residence of some months in Thessalonica, during which, and afterwards, the praise of their life sounded forth in all directions. 9. 'they themselves': the inhabitants of Macedonia and Achaia.—'from idols': implying that the majority had formerly been pagans, not Jews. 10. St Paul urges them to order their life towards the Second Coming and to look forward to it; he does not imply that they will live to see it—cf. §914j.—'the wrath to come': the judgement of condemnation on the wicked at the Parousia, cf. 5:9; 2 Thess 1:8.

c II 1-12 A Defence of his Conduct amongst them—

The apologetic character of this description of his preaching is apparent in the praise of his own work and life among them. 1. 'not in vain': neither hollow nor lacking in sincerity. 2. Cf. Ac 16:19 f. which relates their scourging and imprisonment.—'in much carefulness': in much striving. 3. His motives for preaching were entirely pure and disinterested. He taught neither error nor indulgence of sexual passion nor did he use guile or deceit to attract converts.—'exhortation': practically equals instruction. 5. 'occasion': pretext, i.e. a pretended disinterestedness regarding money. 7. 'been burdensome': they might have claimed either 'special honour' or 'the expenses' of their board and lodging, cf. the proverb 'honor propter onus'.—'little ones': the balance of textual evidence is slightly in favour of the Vg 'little ones' (νήπιοι) as against 'gentle' (ἡμεῖς). Because of the sudden change of metaphor, by which St Paul first describes himself as a babe and then in the next line as a nursing-mother, many would prefer 'gentle'. But the change of metaphor is Pauline and our present text should stand.—'a nurse': he loves them like a mother and teaches them like a father (v 11). The true punctuation of 7-8 is uncertain.—9: cf. Ac 18:3; Phil 4:15 f. 12. cf. Gal 5:21; 1 Cor 6:9; 15:24, 50; 2 Thess 1:5.—'kingdom': the Kingdom of the Messias whose 'glory' will be revealed at the end of the world. This Kingdom consists in an invisible sharing of the divine nature on earth, a sharing that will become visible and glorious in the definitive and eternal phase of God's Kingdom.

d 13-16 Praise of their Behaviour: Condemnation of the Jews—13. 'which worketh', viz. the Word of God.

14. 'imitators' of the Christian Churches in Judaea; by suffering persecution from their fellow-citizens and countrymen in Thessalonica; it was indeed an honour for them to suffer in such good company. The Judaeae persecutions in question are probably those referred to in Ac 8:1 f.; 9:1-2; 12:1. 15-16. This outburst of St Paul's against the Jews is not paralleled elsewhere and seems to have been evoked by their opposition to his work at Corinth as formerly at Thessalonica and Beroea.—'the prophets': cf. Mt 5:12; 23:34.—'adversaries to all men': precisely because they do all in their power to prevent St Paul preaching to the pagan world. Nothing was so repugnant to them as the proclamation that they no longer had a monopoly of the Messianic Kingdom. 'to fill up': cf. Mt 23:32. When the pre-ordained measure of their sins has been filled to capacity (the process has been long drawn out) then retribution will fall suddenly. Whilst the time God allows to all men is a time for acquiring their measure of grace to those who repent, for the stiff-necked it is by their own fault a time for filling up the measure of their sins.—'the wrath of God' is either the Day of Judgement, or the destruction of Jerusalem and the public rejection of the Jewish race, as foretold by Christ (Mt 24). The latter is more likely.—'is come upon them to the end':

the verb is proleptic, i.e. St Paul is so sure of the terrible penalty awaiting the Jews that he speaks as if it has already come upon them 'to the uttermost'.

17-III 10 St Paul's anxiety about them until relieved by Timothy's return. 17. 'have been anxious beyond measure to see your face'. 18. 'us': here, Paul himself. 19. 'Coming': the Parousia, the technical word used to signify the glorious coming of Christ at the end of the world; cf. Mt 24:3 f.

III 2. 'deacon of God': another reading, 'fellow-worker of God', is also well attested; cf. 1 Cor 3:9. 3-4. cf. Ac 14:21. 5. 'The Tempter' is Satan; cf. Mt 4:3. 6-10. Timothy's favourable report filled him with joy and gave him fresh life. 10. 'accomplish those things that are wanting': to complete their catechetical instruction so abruptly broken off, cf. Ac 17:5.

11-13 A Prayer for the Thessalonians—He prays God not only to bring him to them but to enlarge their charity and keep them in readiness for the coming (Parousia) of Christ. 11. 'direct': this verb is singular in the Greek, thus showing that the two Persons, Father and Son, share the same divine nature. 13. Christians are to direct all their attention to preparation for the Last Judgement, of which the Particular Judgement at the hour of death is in a sense merely the anticipation.—'the saints': probably the angels, cf. Zach 14:5; Mt 25:31; the souls of the just do not seem to be included under the term here. The 'Amen' is possibly a liturgical addition.

IV 1-11 Exhortations to Purity (1-8), Love of the Brethren (9-10) and Honest Work (11)—St Paul here reaffirms certain precepts of the Christian moral code that he had already explained at Thessalonica. 3. The first principle of this code is that God expects all Christians to be holy, i.e. 'separated from sin', and in the first place to preserve their holiness or sanctity (ἀγιασμός) by abstention from every form of sexual vice (πορνεία). But among the ancient heathen, as with the modern pagan, the commonest and greatest obstacle to a holy way of life was extramarital sexual indulgence, which was regarded as practically inevitable and was treated almost as a matter of course like eating and drinking. Hence the necessity of giving stringent charges against it to Gentile converts. 4. Commentators, both ancient and modern, are about equally divided between taking σκεῦος κτῆσθαι to mean either (1) to acquire or gain possession (control) of his own body, or (2) to acquire (i.e. marry) his own wife. The former explanation would lay emphasis on personal chastity, and the latter on chastity in marriage. 6a. 'And that no one should sin against or take advantage of his brother in this matter.' 6b-8. The reasons for these prohibitions. The appeal to the indwelling of the Holy Spirit is his supreme argument in his exhortations to purity; cf. 1 Cor 6:19. 11. Apparently certain weaker-minded brethren, obsessed by a belief in a speedy return of Christ gave up earning their living, thus drawing the ridicule of non-Christians ('them that are without') to whom they had not been 'behaving fittingly', and becoming a charge upon the community ('and that you need nothing of any man's'), cf. 2 Thess 3:10 f.

IV 12-V 11 The Second Coming—This passage is remarkable for the large number of reminiscences of the First Gospel, which indicate that St Paul was familiar with the Greek text of Mt 24. He here answers two questions conveyed to him through Timothy concerning—

(A) 12-18 The Lot of those who die before the Parousia—12. cf. Mt 27:52; Jn 11:11. The Thessalonians knew their dead would rise again but apparently feared that they would not find them in Christ's retinue at the time of his glorious return. 13. St Paul assures them that their dead will indeed be there; 'slept through Jesus', a unique phrase, equivalent to 'the dead who are in Christ' of 15, cf. Rom 14:7-8. 14. 'In (the) word of the Lord' must either mean 'on the direct authority of a personal revelation of Christ

1 THESSALONIANS IV

916a to St Paul himself', or it must refer to some saying or teaching of our Lord's not recorded in the Bible, since nowhere in the Gospels did He touch on this precise point. 'we who are alive . . .': this much discussed phrase is either (1) a quotation from the words of the question put by the Thessalonians, or (2) a literary device, common in St Paul, by which he puts himself into the place and state of mind of his correspondents, and ranks himself among those, whether now living or yet unborn, whom the Lord will find alive at his return. As it is clear from his answer to their second question (5:1-12) that neither he nor anyone else knows the time of the Second Coming, there can be no question here of his either teaching or hinting at the imminence of the Parousia, as many moderns have thought. His utilization of Mt 24 is conclusive of his conformity with Christ's own teaching on the Parousia, cf. §914i.

b 15. 'with a shout of command, [viz.] with an archangel's voice and with God's trumpet', cf. Mt 24:31; 1 Cor 15:52. This act will re-establish the holy dead in full equality with those living at the last day. 16. Then will take place both for those newly raised from the dead and for those who are alive the mysterious transformation that will make their bodies incorruptible and immortal and enable them to enjoy the beatific vision and union. There is no indication here or elsewhere of an interval for a millenary terrestrial reign of Christ before his heavenly reign begins, as Schweitzer thought.

17. Since those who have already died in Christ will therefore be at no disadvantage in the Resurrection of the Just, there is no ground for anxiety, but only for consolation.

c (B) V 1-11 The Uncertainty of the Time of the Parousia—Having explained the identity of the lot of the living and of the dead at the moment of the Parousia, St Paul now deals with the second question: Is the Parousia close at hand? 1-2. Neither the time in general nor the particular date can be known; cf. Mt 24:43. The Parousia is the supreme 'day of the Lord'. 3. It is abundantly clear that St Paul had the thought of Mt 24:36-51 before his mind when he wrote this answer. The Parousia will be as catastrophic as the Deluge and as unheralded and as sudden as the visit of the thief in the night. 4-8. No one can escape the visitation, but it is possible to be ready for it whenever it comes, and to live in a state of watchfulness. As Christians belong to the light and to the day and not to the darkness of sin they will confidently await 'the day of the Lord', provided they have been ever watchful and sober and have put on the armour of the three theological virtues. 9. 'but unto the acquisition of salvation', to which God predestines all believers. 10. In any case whether alive or dead when he comes matters nothing in comparison with living with Jesus (in heaven) afterwards.

d 12-14 Exhortations to Laity and Clergy—12-13. The laity are invited to respect and love the hierarchy set by St Paul to work among, rule over, and advise them. 14. 'rebuken the disorderly': cf. 2 Thess 3:6. The Greek ἀτακτος literally refers to a soldier who breaks ranks. The hierarchy in Thessalonica, probably as yet only priests and deacons, are to be conscientious, patient and universally charitable.

15-18. Four general directions, summarizing the Christian life, for the practice of charity, joy, prayer and thanksgiving.

19-21. Brief advice on the treatment of charismata at liturgical assemblies, cf. 1 Cor 12 and 14, where he treats of 'prophesying' and the 'speaking with tongues', etc., at much greater length. 'Extinguish not the Spirit': 'do not suppress' such manifestations of the Holy Spirit.

e 22-28 Final Prayers and Requests—23. 'that your entire spirit and soul and body may be preserved free from all defect . . .'. This passage does not prove that St Paul believed in a trichotomy or threefold division of the human being, as opposed to the dichotomy or twofold division he follows elsewhere, cf. 916a Prat, La Théologie de Saint Paul, 1925¹¹, II, 61, 173-4 490-2. For him σῶμα is the material body, ψυχή the soul, the principle of the sensible life and seat of the passions. πνεῦμα on the other hand, is the most elevated part of the soul by which it resembles God, i.e. the reason informed by grace. 26: cf. Rom 16:16, 1 Cor 16:20, doubtless, the origin of the liturgical kiss of peace. 27. He demands that the epistle be publicly read so that it may reach the ears of all in the Thessalonian church.

2 THESSALONIANS

I 1-2 Greeting—Cf. 1 Thess 1:1.

3-12 Thanksgiving and Encouragement—This thanksgiving and warm appreciation of their spiritual progress is intended to prepare them for the rebuke in the next chapter. 4. They have well understood and faithfully carried out the principal teachings of St Paul, especially in their endurance of external and internal trials. 5. 'For a pledge': lit. proof; their present suffering is a sure sign of their future reward. 6-10. A digression on the rewards and punishments to be meted out respectively to the just and to sinners at the Parousia, by a complete reversal of the fortunes of persecutors and persecuted. 8. Two classes of wicked: (1) those who have failed to keep the natural law of God, (2) those who have heard the Gospel and rejected it. 9. 'who shall suffer just judgement, eternal destruction [separation] from the face of the Lord' i.e. the pain of loss of God; whereas for the just there will be the beatitude of eternal union. 10. 'in that day': the day of the Parousia. This phrase is to be taken with 'when he shall come'. 11b. i.e. make fully efficacious every delight [of yours] in goodness and activity inspired by faith. 12. The 'name' of Christ is put for the Person according to the usual biblical manner of expression.

II 1-12 The Parousia and the Antichrist—This b pericope contains much matter the interpretation of which still remains obscure. Paul not only borrows words and phrases from the apocalyptic passages of the OT and NT but speaks elliptically as well. He develops further the teaching of 1 Thess 4:13 ff. The basis of his teaching is, however, to be found in Mt 24 and Daniel 11; cf. §914i.

1. 'And as regards the coming of our Lord . . . we beseech you'; cf. Mt 24:31, Mk 13:27. The Apostle proceeds to answer two questions that have been put to him on the coming of the Lord and on the gathering together of the faithful to Christ. 2. ' . . . nor be troubled, neither by spirit nor by discourse nor by epistle, as though from us, as if the day of the Lord was here'. It appears that some had not only ignored the Apostle's previous letter (1 Thess) but had actually falsely invoked his authority for spreading a rumour that the Day of the Parousia was actually 'dawning'. 3. They are not to be deceived; the Parousia is not imminent. 'For [the Day of the Lord will not come] unless there come the revolt first' against Christ (which itself presupposes the conversion of a large part of the world) and there be revealed 'the man of lawlessness, the son of perdition', i.e. the man who is not only destined to perdition but brings perdition (as Christ brings salvation). 4. The phraseology is apocalyptic and need not be taken literally: the meaning is that the opposer (whom we may justly equate with the Antichrist of Jn 17:12, 1 Jn 2:18, etc.) will endeavour to substitute himself for the true God and to obtain full divine honours from men. 5. It is clear that when St Paul was personally instructing them he had expounded carefully and at length (cf. 1 Thess 5:2) the apocalyptic teaching of Mt 24 and Dan 7:25 ff., 11:36 ff., cf. §914i. 6. The meaning seems to be: And now you have yourselves had experience of the working of the withholding or restraining power which keeps the Man of Lawlessness in check until his

- 917e appointed time. The revelation of the Man of Lawlessness is dependent on the removal of a mysterious obstacle that is described in 6 as τὸ κατέχον (what withholdeth) and in 7 as ὁ κατέχων (he who withholdeth). Among the many suggestions as to the nature of this obstacle, the following seem to be the most plausible; (a) Tertullian's view that it is the Roman Empire seen as 'a restraining power of law and order'; (b) the view (proposed by Buzy and followed by Amiot) that it is the collectivity constituted by the sum total of the preachers of the Gospel; and (c) the view of Prat that it is the Archangel St Michael who appears as the champion against the forces of evil in Dan 12:1 and Apoc 12:7-9; 20:1-3, 7, where the angel binds and looses Satan. There is no tradition of the Church on this point to assist us to decide. 7. 'Mystery' here means 'a secret to be revealed'.—'the mystery of lawlessness' probably denotes the present secret and partially ineffective activity of the Man of Lawlessness; cf. Buzy, RSR (1934) 404 f. This verse confirms the statement of 6. The lawlessness is at present working secretly on account of the check imposed, but 'only until he who now withholdeth be taken out of the way'. 8. 'Then shall the Lawless One be revealed', only to find himself destroyed by the mere breath of the Lord's mouth, imagery borrowed from Is 11:4. 9-11. A description of the Parousia of the Antichrist, the Man of Lawlessness. The removal of the withholding or restraining power will permit the Parousia of the Antichrist, a lying counterpart of the true Parousia of Christ that will follow it and immediately destroy the Lawless One. 9. 'in all lying power and signs and wonders'. 10. 'The love of the truth' may be taken objectively as the love the truth has for men, or subjectively as the love of men for the truth. 'To believe the Lie.' 11. 'have consented to unrighteousness'. For further discussion of the nature of this apostasy, see art. Eschatologie, op. cit.
- The Character of the Antichrist—Is the Antichrist to be an individual or a collectivity? Most modern commentators consider him to be a mere personification of the evil forces that will, it seems, get the upper hand at the end of the world. According to St Paul the activity of the Man of Lawlessness is already taking place, although he is not yet revealed. He certainly cannot be Satan himself as he receives his powers from him. As this activity has been going on for nineteen centuries, the Antichrist would seem to be an apocalyptic personification of the powers of evil let loose. Moreover in the Gospels (esp. Mt 24) our Lord nowhere speaks of one Antichrist but of many false Christs and false prophets. With this agrees St John's teaching in his Epistles, whilst in the Apocalypse he symbolizes the sum total of persecuting political powers and false prophets by the two beasts who are the emissaries of Satan. On the other hand, the teaching of St Paul on the Antichrist is quite compatible with his being a single person, and the manner in which all the Sacred Books from Daniel to Apocalypse speak of him, as a man incarnating all the forces of evil and as the false counterpart of Christ himself in the last days of the world, does not permit us to lay aside as improbable the view that the Antichrist is indeed an individual; cf. Rigaux, L'Antéchrist, Paris, 1932.

12-III 5 Further Encouragement and Exhortation—1

12. 'firstfruits': another reading in the Greek which gives the meaning 'from the beginning' has slightly more MS support. 'of the spirit', i.e. the Holy Spirit. 13. 'unto the acquisition of' the glory of the Lord when he returns at the Parousia. 14. Revealed truth is transmitted both by oral and written tradition, as the Church has always taught. 15. 'in [his] grace'. The traditional character of St Paul's own teaching in the matter of the Parousia is discussed in §914g-1. III:2. 'for not to all does the faith belong'. 8. 'from the evil one'; there seems to be a reminiscence of the Our Father in this and the preceding verse.

III 6-15 A Special Exhortation to work—Cf.

1 Thess 5:14. All are bidden to act in accord with the Apostle's teaching and to get on quietly with their daily work, and to avoid vain idling in view of the supposed imminence of the Parousia. 11b. The play of words in the Greek is preserved in the well-known rendering 'doing no business but being busybodies'. 13-15. A special word to the main body of loyal followers of the Apostle. The offender is to be subject to a minor excommunication to bring him to a more reasonable frame of mind. 13. '... do not fail in well doing'.

16-18 Conclusion—16. 'peace at all times and in every way'. 17. As a sign of authenticity (in view of 2 Thess 2:2) St Paul here pointedly directs the attention of his correspondents to his custom of autographing the final salutation in every epistle of his.

THE PASTORAL EPISTLES

1 and 2 TIMOTHY, TITUS

By R. J. FOSTER

918a Bibliography—*H. Alford, The Greek Testament, III, Cambridge, 1894; R. G. Bandas, The Master Idea of St Paul's Epistles or the Redemption, Bruges, 1925; G. Bardy, Épîtres Pastorales, Paris, 1938 (La Sainte Bible, Pirot, XII); P. Delatte, O.S.B., Les Épîtres de Saint Paul, Louvain, 1928; *P. N. Harrison, The Problem of the Pastoral Epistles, Oxford, 1921; *A. E. Humphreys, The Epistles to Timothy and Titus, Cambridge, 1925; J. Knabenbauer, CSS, 1923; *W. Lock, The Pastoral Epistles, Edinburgh, 1924 (ICC); J. McEvilly, An Exposition of the Epistles of St Paul, Dublin, 1875; *R. St J. Parry, The Pastoral Epistles, Cambridge, 1920; F. Prat, The Theology of St Paul, Enn. Trans., London, 1926; C. Spicq, O.P., Les Épîtres Pastorales, Paris, 1947; CNT; WV; SCSS; E. Valton, Evêques, DTC; A. Michiels, Evêques, DAFC; L. Marchal, Evêques, DBVS; H. Dieckmann, De Ecclesia, Freiburg, 1924.

b The Name—These three epistles are usually grouped together under the title Pastoral Epistles, a name which fittingly describes their character, since they are not addressed to any church or individual in his private capacity, but to Timothy and Titus as pastors for their guidance in ruling the communities committed to their care. The use of the word pastoral in connexion with them goes back at least to the time of Thomas Aquinas (cf. Prol. to 2 Tim), but the modern practice of referring to them as the Pastorals may be traced to the course of lectures given at Halle University by Paul Anton in 1726–7, cf. Harrison, 13; Spicq, xxi.

c The Occasion and Date of the Epistles—In the course of a general tour of the East, probably in the year A.D. 66, as St Paul was making his way up the coast of Asia Minor towards Macedonia he left Timothy at Ephesus to deal with a dangerous situation brought about by the activities of false teachers. 1 Tim was written during this journey, maybe in Macedonia itself. No doubt St Paul was anxious because of the grave responsibilities resting on Timothy's youthful shoulders, and so wished to renew his counsels and warning in writing. At this time too he wrote the epistle to Titus who was confronted in Crete with a situation very similar to that at Ephesus. 2 Tim was written shortly after the Apostle had been re-arrested, and taken back to Rome, while he was awaiting his final trial. Knowing that death was imminent he summoned Timothy to Rome by letter and at the same time renewed his warnings and counsels, urging him to courage in the faithful fulfilment of his pastoral charge. The Pastoral Epistles, therefore, help us to fill in the gap between the end of Acts and Paul's death.

d Timothy—Timothy, who belonged to Lystra in Lycaonia, was the son of a Jewish mother and a Gentile father. He was probably converted to the Christian faith along with Eunice, his mother, and Lois, his grandmother, during St Paul's first missionary journey. When the latter revisited Lystra he resolved to make Timothy his companion in future missionary work. On account of the Jews Paul was careful to have his disciple circumcised in order to facilitate his work amongst the members of the Chosen Race with whom they were so frequently to make contact. From that time onwards he became the Apostle's constant companion. As is shown by the frequent references to him in the epistles and by the important missions he accomplished (cf. 1 Thess 3:2; 1 Cor 4:17; 16:10), he enjoyed St Paul's complete confidence: 'For I have no man so of the same mind, who with sincere affection is solicitous for you', Phil 2:20. During the first Roman imprisonment he was with his master and afterwards accompanied him as far as Ephesus on the last missionary journey. There he was left to take charge of the local church, cf. 1 Tim 1:3. In 2 Tim he is bidden to go to Rome before the winter, 4:21. Little is known of his later life as bishop of Ephesus.

Titus—Titus who was a Gentile was probably converted to the faith by St Paul who addresses him as his 'beloved son', 1:4. He accompanied Paul and Barnabas on their journey to Jerusalem and, although the Judaizers demanded that he be circumcised, Paul resisted them; cf. Gal 2:1 ff. During the third missionary journey Titus was twice sent on urgent missions to Corinth and succeeded in restoring harmony between that Church and its Apostle, 2 Cor 7:13–15; 8:16–24. We lose sight of him after this until the time of the epistle addressed to him. This found him in Crete, where he had been entrusted with the organization of the Church, Tit 1:5. Later he was summoned to meet Paul at Nicopolis in Epirus and eventually during the final imprisonment he was sent to Dalmatia, 2 Tim 4:10.

The Authenticity of the Pastoral Epistles—Their authenticity is not universally admitted today, *cf. for example, A. M. Farrer, The Ministry in the NT, in The Apostolic Ministry, ed. K. E. Kirk, Oxford, 1946, p 160: 'Of course the Pastorals affect antiquity and apostolic authorship, and it is conceivable that in Titus the writer becomes suddenly conscious of the pose and puts in an equation between elders and bishops which he believes to have once obtained'. The arguments brought against their authenticity have been ably summarized by Harrison, whose thesis is that the 'epistles received their present shape at the hands, not of Paul, but of a Paulinist living in the early years of the second century', p v. Briefly the difficulties may be grouped together under three headings: (i) The views attacked in the Pastorals are Gnostic in character and belong to a period later than St Paul. (ii) The Church organization implied is too advanced. (iii) The style and more especially the vocabulary are not the Apostle's. On these points one may suggest the following considerations. (i) The historical background of the Pastorals does not require the developed Gnostic environment of the 2nd century. As indicated § 919d, the teachers mentioned in the epistles were for the most part Jews, and errors similar to theirs may be found described in Col, the authenticity of which is generally accepted, cf. Col 2:4, 8, 16, 23. Points of similarity between their teaching and that of the later Gnostics may be admitted. (ii) Church organization found in the Pastorals, far from being too advanced, is exactly what would be expected at the period when they purport to have been written, i.e. at the end of Paul's life. His authority is as clear and decisive as ever, he gives commands and guidance to his representatives. What we should expect and what we actually find is the new position in which these representatives now find themselves. Since Paul is near the end of his life they are made to feel that for the future the responsi-

918d

918g bility which he had borne so long is to be theirs. They are to succeed him and carry his burden. Such is the setting into which the Pastorals fit. Also the absence of a clearly defined hierarchy in the Pastorals, such as certainly existed in the 2nd cent, is another indication that they were written in the 1st century. (iii) The Style of the Pastorals—The Apostle's style varies, the earlier epistles differing in style from the Captivity epistles, and it has been remarked that it would not be easy to prove that 1 Thess, Col and 1 Cor all come from the same pen. The Pastorals, although possessing traits common to Phil have a style of their own, simpler, clearer, more rhythmic and balanced than the other Paulines and they lack those long difficult periods. The language is more technical and shows a wider Hellenistic vocabulary.

However, if we take account of the time when they were written, of their purpose and of their recipients, we should expect a change from Paul's other writings and precisely that change in style actually found in the Pastorals. Here, for instance, we have a man advanced in years, who recalls the past, as older men like to do (1 Tim 1:12-17; 2 Tim 1:3, 6; 2:2; 3:10-12; Tit 1:5) and, mellowed by age, thinks of the future, by love, advice, and counsel urging his younger disciples to continue his work. He is no longer writing under the stress of everyday events and publicly solving the problems of harassed churches, but is advising trusted disciples about safeguarding the Church of the future. He is not now concerned to argue and to prove with his earlier impetuosity, but rather to exhort and to guide. His style is therefore more measured and calm, without declamation or rhetorical argument and in consequence the syntax, too, shows a change, e.g. the absence of particles, ἀπα, οὖν, (absent also from Col and Phil but present in Gal) also ἰδε, ἰδοὺ, ποῦ, cf. Spicq cxv. It would be a matter for surprise if a man of dynamic character like Paul, capable of the differing style of Phil and Gal, and of adapting himself to such contrasted situations as those found at Athens and Ephesus (Ac 17:22-31; 20:18-35) a man, moreover of long and varied ministry and one who had spent the previous four or five years in the new environment of Rome, did not show some changes in his later writings, the Pastorals. Plato whose literary evolution in old age is even greater than that of Paul, shows a similar tendency to a more uniform style and a newer and wider vocabulary. In some respects the same has been shown to be the case with Schiller, Goethe, and Shakespeare. St Paul in thus adapting himself to his new milieu and using his wider acquaintance with the Hellenistic world in presenting the Gospel message—as for instance using the pagan Hellenistic words γυναικία and εὐσεβεία in 1 Tim 4:8—sets us an example of turning current language and usage to good account in conveying Christian truth; cf. further Spicq, loc. cit. But though there is this natural change, the usual Pauline characteristics are there: the anacolutha and parentheses (1 Tim 1:3-5; 10-12; Tit 1:1), the same love of compound words (cf. Spicq cviii, n. 3), the same lists and maxims (1 Tim 2:1-2; 3:2-4; 4:1-3; 5:12 f.; 6:4 f.; 2 Tim 3:1-5; 4:7; Tit 1:8-10), the same antitheses (2 Tim 1:7, 12), the Hebraisms and metaphors from military life and sport and the same formulae of salutation.

919a The argument based on difference of vocabulary is more forceful. Harrison points out that the 'Pastorals consist of some 902 words of which 54 are proper names. Of the remaining 848, 306 or 36 per cent are not found in any of the ten Paulines', 20. Further the vocabulary bears a striking resemblance to that of the Apostolic Fathers and Latin writers of the early 2nd cent., and hence, it is argued, would point to a 2nd cent. date. The list of Pauline hapax legomena is impressive, but it must not be used too forcefully, otherwise it might prove three separate authors for the three epistles! The list includes words which occur in LXX and would therefore have been known to Paul; there are cognates to words used elsewhere by him and words which must have been current at that time but which he had no occasion to use previously, e.g. terms dealing with Church organization and erroneous doctrines. That new subject-matter does give occasion for new vocabulary is clear, for example, from 1 Cor where 200 of the 310 hapax legomena occur in sections treating of new subjects. Parry gives the number of hapax legomena in the Pastorals connected with new subjects as 286. In fact, of the 306 Pastoral hapax legomena 131 occur elsewhere in the NT (125 of these also occur in writings before A.D. 50) and of the remaining 175 at least 153 can be quoted before A.D. 50. The probability is then that the few remaining words are previous to and not later than that date since words may be long current in daily use before they appear in literary works, cf. F. R. Montgomery Hitchcock, 'Tests for the Pastorals', JTS 30 (1929) 279. Spicq notes that only 18 words have not been found in writers before A.D. 100 (p cx). Difference in expression and width of vocabulary are also to be expected from the Apostle's contact with Latin idiom and Roman Greek, thus εὐχαριστῶ gives place to χαρίν ἔχω (gratiam habeo), διό το δι' ἡν αἰτίαν (quam ob causam) and the frequent πιστός ὁ λόγος corresponds to the Latin proverb, 'verum illud verbum', cf. Spicq, cxiv. This Latin influence would also account for the similarity to the pagan Latin writers and the Apostolic Fathers, since Clement, Hermas, and Justin were Christians of Rome and therefore subject to the same influences as Paul. Nor should one neglect the similarities between the vocabularies of the Pastorals and earlier Epistles for, of the 612 words they all have in common, 38 are proper to Paul and are not found elsewhere in the NT. In addition many favourite expressions of St Paul are to be found throughout the Pastorals, e.g. οἰδαμεν δὲ ὅτι, εἰ δε τις and see the full list in Spicq cxvii. There remains, lastly, the possibility that Paul used a secretary; Luke has been suggested since he was in close contact with him at this time and so may have been responsible for the more ordered and Hellenistic style.

Finally it is impossible to explain how these epistles came to be assigned to St Paul if they did not actually belong to him. The external evidence for their Pauline character is overwhelming: there are the explicit statements of Irenaeus, Adv. Haer., I, 1, Prol.; III, 3; 4; 14, PG 7, 438; 755; 854; 914; the Muratorian Fragment, lines 60 ff.; Clement of Alexandria, Strom., 1:1; 14; II, 11, PG 8, 690; 758; 990; Tertullian, C. Marc., V, 21; De Praescr., 25; De Pudic., 13, PL 2, 20; 43; 44; 556; 1057; Eusebius, Hist. Eccl., III; 3:5, PG 20, 218; 270. Implicit testimony comes from earlier times. In fact Spicq argues that there is a reference in 2 Pet 3:15 to 1 Tim 1:16. 2 Pet alludes to a passage of Paul's regarding Christ's long-suffering with sinners. Although a number of texts from various epistles have been suggested as apposite, none is more suitable than 1 Tim 1:16 where the Apostle sets forth his own case as the classic example of our Lord's long-suffering, cf. Spicq xcv. But much will depend upon the date assigned to 2 Pet, cf. J. Chaine, Les Epîtres Catholiques (Paris, 1939) 28 ff. In Clement of Rome's Epistle to the Corinthians there are more than 25 passages which show close correspondence with the Pastorals; Ignatius of Antioch, obviously with 1 Tim 1:4 in mind, writes: 'Be not deceived with strange doctrines nor with old fables which are unprofitable', Magn., 8:1, cf. also Smyrn., 10, 2 and 2 Tim 1:16; Polycarp not only shows his acquaintance with the Pastorals, but also presupposes that his readers are familiar with them, cf. Phil., 4:1 and 1 Tim 6:7, 10. The force of tradition regarding the Pauline authorship of the Epistles is so strong that in view of it the Biblical Commission has laid it down that they are to be held as Pauline. It also states that this opinion is not weakened by the difficulties commonly advanced from differences of style and language, cf. § 511-0; SCSS 3, 352 f.

The Doctrine of the Pastorals.

The Preservation of True Doctrine—At Ephesus and

- 919d Crete, where Timothy and Titus exercised their episcopal ministry, false teachers, for the most part of Jewish origin, were spreading error of a pernicious character. Their teaching was not markedly heretical, but in the nature of misleading conjecture or vain quibbling in the Jewish rabbinical style: 'From which things some going astray, are turned aside unto vain babbling, desiring to be teachers of the law', 1 Tim 1:6-7. The consequences, however, were grave; strife and contention were engendered and threatened the unity and harmony of the communities, cf. 2 Tim 2:23; faith became enfeebled so that some of the faithful began to fall away, and already there appear traces of the erroneous practices characteristic of the later Gnostics and Manicheans; cf. 1 Tim 4:3. The position was aggravated by the motive actuating the false teachers, which was 'filthy lucre', Tit 1:10 f. To counteract this evil the Apostle relied upon a zealous, carefully chosen ministry jealously guarding the 'deposit of faith' and handing on 'sound doctrine' to communities of well-ordered life. The sound doctrine of which St Paul stresses the need is that received from the Apostles: 'Hold the form of sound words which thou hast heard of me', 2 Tim 1:13 f. It is 'sound', i.e. health-giving (ὑγιαίνουσα) in contrast to the 'canker' of error, 2 Tim 2:17. Such is its importance for the well-being of the community that Timothy was urged to grasp it firmly and retain it, to preach it carefully and publicly without fear or favour, to select diligently fellow workers who in their turn would transmit it faithfully, cf. 1 Tim 4:11, 13, 16; 5:22; 6:3; 2 Tim 2:2; 4:2; Tit 2:1 f. St Paul was anxious to secure this faithful transmission of the Truth because of the dangers which he knew to lie ahead and against which he uttered repeated warnings, cf. 2 Tim 3:1 ff.; 4:3. In a striking passage illustrative of his inspiring faith he described the Church herself as the 'pillar and ground of truth', 1 Tim 3:15. She is a witness, she safeguards the truth, explains its hidden mysteries and preserves the moral life which is necessarily based upon it. Nevertheless, although the Church is a fortress against error, much depends upon the life and character of her ministers, and so he stresses the need for them to maintain high ideals, preserve good morals, and preach sound doctrine, 1 Tim 3:1 ff.; Tit 1:5 ff. With impressive urgency he concludes, 1 Tim: 'O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding the profane novelties of words and oppositions of knowledge falsely so called, which some professing have erred concerning the faith'. In our modern way of speech St Paul is teaching that Christ's doctrine must be handed on and will be guaranteed by an infallible Church guided by the Spirit of God, which now as ever has need of apostolic and worthy priests.
- f Bishop and Presbyter—While dealing with the organization of the communities St Paul makes mention of the presbyters and of the office and qualities of a bishop, episcopos. What light do the Pastorals throw upon the difficult Episcopos-Presbyter question and what distinction do they make in their use of these terms? Whatever view is taken of the identity of presbyters and episcopoi in the NT, the existence of bishops in the modern sense in Apostolic times is in no way in doubt. For example, there is no doubt that Timothy and Titus themselves were bishops since they ordain, 1 Tim 5:19-22; Tit 1:5-7; 1 Tim 3:8-10; they are responsible for sound doctrine and judge the presbyters, 1 Tim 1:3; 3:1-15; 4:11; 5:19; 6:2; 2 Tim 4:2-5. It is likely that in the beginning the Apostles kept in their own hands the control of the churches they founded, sending their fellow missionaries who possessed episcopal authority, legati a latere as it were, to represent them, and the presbyter-episcopoi would assist in their work under their direction in the localities to which they were appointed.
- g First of all it can be admitted that from the beginning of the 2nd cent., in Asia Minor at least, the title episcopos was reserved to the ecclesiastical superior now known as bishop, cf. Ignatius of Antioch, Phil 1:1; Eph 2; Magn 2, and that presbyter corresponded with the modern use of priest. But it cannot be shown that this usage held in the 1st cent., and different interpretations are given of the passages in the NT where these terms occur. Catholic opinions may be reduced to five classes: (i) The two words correspond to the modern use of bishop and priest. (ii) The two words were used indiscriminately to include bishops and priests. (iii) That all, whether episcopoi or presbyters, were bishops. (iv) That the words were synonymous and indicated simple priests only. In favour of this view it has been pointed out that nowhere in the NT do we find the expression 'bishops and priests' (or its equivalent) as representing two distinct orders or classes. On the contrary the names are closely connected and refer to the same ministers. This would explain the omission of presbyters in Phil 1:1; 1 Tim 3. In Ac 20:17 ff. Paul addresses the presbyters of Ephesus as episcopoi, though they were not bishops, since he later left Timothy there to exercise episcopal duties. The reason for the title on this occasion would be that these presbyters exercised an 'episcopacy', i.e. the function or duty of 'supervising' or 'shepherding' the local community. Similarly in 1 Pet 5:1 f. the presbyters are urged to fulfil their office of episcopoi. The Apostle orders Titus (1:5) to set up presbyters in each city, and in speaking of their necessary virtues and character lays down what is demanded of an episcopos, a way of reasoning which shows that the episcopos is a presbyter. The parallelism of Tit 1:6 and 1 Tim 3:1 ff. and the lists of qualities there given show the close connexion between the episcopos of Timothy and the presbyter of Titus. (Both passages are referred to in the ordination of a priest and the consecration of a bishop, and both are used in the first nocturn of a Confessor Bishop.) (v) The latest view, that of Spicq, 84 ff., is a modification of iv. In his opinion the words were at one time used one for the other, but there had been a gradual adaptation of names corresponding with the progressive evolution of the hierarchy. The word ἐπισκοπῶμαι, for instance, at first denoted one aspect of an Apostle's ministry, namely the periodic visitation and vigilant supervision of the various communities; cf. Ac 15:36. Then the name episcopos was employed gradually for priests who exercised the pastoral ministry in the local churches; cf. Ac 20:28 and Phil 1:1. By the time of the Pastorals the name episcopos had become a technical term for a special kind of presbyter, namely a presiding one, who fulfilled a special function, the episcopacy, whose duty it was to preside and in whom special qualities were sought. Thus the way was prepared for the still later use of the word episcopos to denote the rulers of the Church, the successors of the Apostles, i.e. bishops in the modern sense of the word. For an interesting contribution to the discussion by an Anglican theologian, see G. Dix, The Apostolic Ministry, 1946.

Evidence for this view is found by Spicq in the Pastorals. Thus in 1 Tim 3:4-5; Tit 1:7, the principal function of the episcopos is to preside or exercise rule (προιστάμενος), like the father of a family or the administrator of a household, and so a candidate for this office must show signs of an aptitude for exercising authority. It is moreover the first time that the case of an episcopos is dealt with explicitly and not merely by way of passing allusion. He is now the holder of an office sufficiently well defined to be the object of a definite desire, an office expressed by the abstract term ἐπισκοπή, 1 Tim 3:1. This use of the word has no parallel in the NT, except in Ac 1:20 where, however, it means the apostolic office. It is also the first time that episcopos, immediately related to the office, is used in the singular and that the person receives his appointment by one of Paul's representatives after due examination of his suitability. In other words episcopos has become a technical term indicating one who holds a specific office and exercises a particular function. But it is not used with the precise meaning

- 920b which it had in the 2nd cent., i.e. to denote the monarchical episcopate, since there is no indication of any subordination of presbyters to the episcopos. 'In fact it would appear', says Spicq, 'that the episcopos is a presbyter, although every presbyter is no longer an episcopos in the new meaning of the term. In other words the presbyter-episcopos has no quality essentially different from that of all other presbyters, nor even, in all likelihood, a privileged dignity—and that is why the desire (δρεξίς) must be stimulated. But he does exercise a special function'. 93. Thus the office of ἐπισκοπή, common to all presbyters earlier at Ephesus and Philippi, is now reserved to one person specially qualified and, although all priests retain the authority previously exercised, there is but one who presides. His dignity is no greater than that of his fellow priests, but the duty he undertakes is more important, more extensive and charged with greater responsibility than that of the priests as a whole. This function of presiding is as yet vague, but from the analogy with profane literature, the LXX and the context of 1 Tim 3, we might conjecture that the holder of this office would preside at assemblies, direct prayers and take the chief part in worship. In a word, by the time of the Pastorals the word episcopos would indicate a priest who was 'primus inter pares'.
- d Christ's Mediatorship—Although it is true that the Apostle is concerned in these epistles with foiling the attempts made to undo his work, he does, as indeed he must, touch upon those essentials of the Christian faith which occur so frequently in his other epistles. In 1 Tim 2:5 ff. he speaks of Christ's mediatorship showing how he exercises an efficacious mission because, on the one hand he was sent by God and, on the other, is man's representative; in the hypostatic union two natures are united in one person through whom God and man are brought together in reconciliation; 'For there is one God and one mediator of God and men, the man Jesus Christ, who gave himself a redemption for all'. The word 'gave' emphasizes Christ's love and obedience, the voluntariness of the act by which he gave his life a ransom to secure our freedom from Satan's thralldom. This idea is developed in Tit 2:14, where the concept of ransom is carried further still to its ultimate effects in us: 'that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and might cleanse to himself a people acceptable, a pursuer of good works'; cf. 1 Tim 1:15. Another important aspect of the Redemption stressed in the Pastorals is God's will to save all men. Since man after the Fall could not of himself regain his lost status, God had to come to his aid. This he did and extended succour to all who responded to his call, cf. 1 Tim 4:10; 1:15; 2:4; 3:16.
- e Other important points of doctrine may be briefly mentioned, we must offer prayers for all (2:1); for the living and the dead (2 Tim 1:18); the qualities necessary in candidates for orders (Tit 1:5 ff.; 1 Tim 3:1 ff.); the apostolate of good example (1 Tim 4:12); the dangers of the active life if divorced from the interior life and without due regard for spiritual perfection: 'Our Lord demands in explicit fashion from all those whom he associates with his apostolate, that not only do they maintain their virtue, but that they make progress in it. The proof exists in every page of the Epistles of St Paul to Timothy and Titus, and in the appeals of the Apocalypse to the Bishops of Asia', Dom Chautard, O.C.R., The Soul of the Apostolate (Dublin, 1937) 63.

THE FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY

921a I 1-2 Greeting.

3-20 The Safeguarding of True Doctrine—Immediately the Apostle presses forward to express the thoughts uppermost in his mind which concern, first and foremost, the urgent need of restraining false teachers and so preventing the spread of false doctrine and practice. 3. Characteristically he begins with an unfinished sentence; in his anxiety to deal with the repression of errors he leaves aside the directions to be given to Timothy to which he returns in ch 2; cf. 2:1 'I desire therefore. . .'. 4. Fables and Endless Genealogies—Cf. 4:7; 6:20; 2 Tim 2:16, 23; Tit 3:9. Some think that these were part of some teaching similar to that of the later Gnostics, a sort of pre-Gnosticism, referring to successive generations of aeons or angelic beings from the creator of the material universe. More probably Paul has in mind Jewish speculations which added legends and spurious pedigrees to the OT narrative. The apocryphal Book of Jubilees is an excellent example of the futile speculation he is attacking. He is obviously not concerned here with formal heresies which would have been denounced in sterner tones, but rather with vain and idle questions, quibbling about the Law, all of which was either misleading or to no purpose. 5. 'The Commandment'—This is either the charge given to Timothy or the Divine Law, the Christian Dispensation itself. 'Unfeigned Faith'—a sincere faith free from any surreptitious compromising with Jewish doctrines and practices. 6. It appears that these false teachers at Ephesus concerned themselves with the Mosaic Law and the part it should play in Christian life. Their knowledge of the law and their attempts to apply it were at fault. 9. 'The law is not made for the just man'—St Paul turns aside to discuss the true role of the law, which is to restrain sinners by making them conscious of and giving them a true knowledge of their sins. 10. 'Who defile themselves with mankind'—who sin against nature. 'Men stealers'—slave-dealers or kidnappers. 'Sound doctrine'—Note St Paul's insistence on a body of truths to be accepted and guarded, cf. 1 Thess 4:1; 2 Thess 2:14; 1 Cor 15:1 ff.

12-17 Personal Digression—The mention of the Gospel leads him to consider what he owes to God who has made him a minister of the New Covenant. He recalls how he, a sinner and persecutor, has been considered trustworthy and appointed to Christ's ministry. Thoughts such as these were intended to encourage Timothy and all his followers, to spur them on to greater efforts so as not to disappoint him who had placed such trust in them. Paul's vocation was the supreme example of God's long-suffering and loving-kindness. Who but the Apostle himself could have been responsible for this extremely personal message? It is in itself a guarantee of the authenticity of the passage. 14. The change wrought in him was complete; his life was flooded with divine grace, along with faith and love abundantly bestowed. 15. 'A faithful saying'—This phrase, which occurs several times in the Pastorals, serves to confirm the truth or reliability of a statement: 'It is a true saying'. The saying in this instance is some familiar aphorism which stresses our Lord's work of salvation while at the same time indicating his pre-existence and Incarnation. 16. 'For the information of them that believe'—The lesson or moral to be drawn is that after the mercy shown to the Apostle none should despair. Paul should serve as a typical instance or pattern of the way Christ would deal with others. 18. 'This precept'—the charge given to Timothy. 'The prophecies going before on thee'—probably revelations made either to the Apostle himself or through Christian prophets (cf. Ac 13:1 ff.) regarding Timothy's zeal and fitness for the ministry. St Paul recalls the prophecies to inspire him with confidence. 20. 'Hymenaeus', whose name occurs again in 2 Tim 2:17, was responsible for the spread of false doctrine, particularly concerning the resurrection. 'Alexander' may be the coppersmith of 2 Tim 4:14 who grievously wronged the Apostle. 'Delivered up to Satan'—some form of excommunication, cf. 1 Cor 5:4 f. 'That they may learn not to blaspheme'—That they may be taught (by correction) not to blaspheme.

II 1-15 Public Worship—1. 'For all men'—for all without exception, not for fellow Christians only.

- 921d 2. 'For kings and for all that are in high station'—These are given special mention because their attitude is fraught with grave consequences for the well-being of the Church and the individual. The command gains force when we bear in mind that the ruler then in power was Nero. The injunction to pray for those responsible for the guidance of the state is more urgent today than ever, since society is now so highly organized and controlled that the individual is liable to be at the mercy of some form of totalitarian control. 2. 'Chastity'—gravity, referring to the serious thought of our duty towards God and our neighbour. The idea of the Apostle is this: freedom from anxiety and uncertainty regarding the intentions of those in charge of the destiny of the state would enable individuals to pursue their duty towards God and society and at the same time enable the Church to continue her apostolate.
4. 'Who will have all men to be saved'—The clearest anti-Calvinistic text in the NT, A New Commentary. Here we have a doctrine of the highest importance and consolation for each one of us, since there is no indication in the text of anyone at all being excluded. On the contrary the discourse is emphatic and the universality of God's will to save is reinforced by the fourfold repetition of the word all in the first few verses; cf. Prat, II, 78, 'It is vain to object that the divine wish to save is necessarily limited by the addition "that all may come to the knowledge of the truth"; for, we are assured, since this second proposition cannot be absolutely and universally true, the first one cannot be true either. The reply is easy: all human beings have not the use of reason, but all, without a single exception, are capable of eternal salvation; thus, while the phrase referring to the knowledge of the truth limits itself naturally to men who are capable of knowing it, the other is limited by nothing and should, according to the rules of sound exegesis, retain its full significance.' 5. 'One Mediator'—a confirmation of the universality of salvation. As man, Jesus represented the whole human race. Since in him the two natures of God and of man were united he was able to atone for the sin of mankind and secure a return of its lost inheritance. Through him alone we have regained access to the Father. This passage is not contrary to the Catholic practice of invoking the aid of the saints, for the Apostle in speaking of Christ as Mediator of our redemption, says nothing against our invoking the saints as intercessors. In fact St Paul himself in asking the prayers of others, as he frequently does, stresses the need for intercessors that we may more surely make use of the redemption gained for us by the mediation of Christ. 6. 'Redemption'—cf. Mt 20:28. 'A testimony in due times'—At the time appointed by his heavenly Father, Jesus bore witness to God's will that all should be saved, and in his turn St Paul, fully conscious of his special mission to proclaim the universality of the Gospel, recalls his commission as the Apostle of the Gentiles. 8. 'Lifting up pure hands'—The customary attitude for prayer was standing erect with arms outstretched. 'Without anger and contention'—fitly disposed for prayer. 9. 'In like manner'—Women are urged, in the same way as men, to pray and join in the apostolate of prayer. 'In decent apparel'—Worship is not the time for display of fashion; on the contrary, women are to dress with becoming modesty, making virtuous acts and good works their glory. On St Paul's teaching regarding women see an interesting explanation of this passage in Enjoying the NT by Margaret T. Monro (London, 1945) 153 f. 11. It is the duty of men, not women, to rule and give instruction in the public assembly; the reasons for this St Paul adduces from Genesis where it is shown that man was first created and that woman was the occasion of his fall. 15. For their part women are to manifest their own womanly virtues, and St Paul stresses in particular the sanctifying effect of motherhood, which is one of the means (not the only one, cf. 1 Cor 7:25 ff.), by which they will be saved.

III 1-13 The Character and Qualifications of Ministers—Following the directions about public worship the Apostle outlines the character and qualifications which should be found in priests and deacons, the Church's ministers. It is Timothy's duty to safeguard the well-being of Church organization at Ephesus. 1. 'The office of a bishop'—cf. § 919 f. 'Desireth a good work'—noble, distinguished work. The phrase draws attention to the labour and service involved in ecclesiastical administration and apostolate. Those who desire to participate desire something which is noble and praiseworthy. Spicq suggests another interpretation. He thinks that at Ephesus there may have been those who set too great store by extraordinary charismata to the consequent detriment of those men daily administering church affairs. Such a mentality is illustrated in Didache 15, 1: 'Now appoint for yourselves bishops and deacons worthy of the Lord, men meek and not avaricious, upright and proved; for they, too, render you the service of the prophets and teachers. Despise them not, therefore, for they are the ones who are honoured of you together with the prophets and teachers'. St Paul may, then, have been recalling here that the episcopacy was a noble function in itself quite apart from its dignity in relation to other gifts. Men were needed to undertake it and those who offered themselves as candidates—this is the meaning of ὁρέω rather than 'desire'—were to be encouraged and congratulated; Spicq 77. 2. Blameless—irreproachable in conduct because of his dignity as God's representative. 'Husband of one wife'—Those are not to be accepted who have married again after the death of their first wife lest this should prove an occasion for criticism; cf. 1 Tim 3:12; 5:9. Celibacy as a law for the clergy is of later ecclesiastical institution, although as a counsel it was urged by St Paul himself, 1 Cor 7:8 ff. 3. 'No striker'—Not given to violence or brawling, not contentious or aggressive. 4. 'In subjection with all chastity'—with all respect. Must keep his children in order by gaining their respect. 6. 'Not a neophyte'—not a person newly converted to the faith for fear lest, becoming proud and conceited, he may share the fate of Lucifer. 7. 'Snare of the devil'—the meaning is either that a Christian whose past life was open to suspicion might bring discredit upon the Church through the scandal which the devil might attach to his name, or that a person, whose former conduct was not beyond reproach, might, when reminded of those earlier failings, lapse into despair and so become ensnared by Satan and lose the faith. 9. 'Mystery of faith'—The truths revealed by Christ, the Christian Gospel. 11. 'The women'—It is suggested that deaconesses are intended, namely those who helped in ministering to women and relieving the needs of the poor. 13. 'A good degree'—position, standing. Some maintain that it refers to the promotion of a deacon to the office of priest; others apply it to a deacon's reward in the next life.

III 14-IV 16. Opposing False Teaching—16. 922a 'Mystery of Godliness'—Our Lord himself. 'Which was manifested in the flesh, was justified in the spirit'—probably part of an early Christian hymn. The relative 'which' is masculine in the Greek and therefore refers to our Lord. 'Manifested in the flesh'—appeared in the flesh, i.e. the Incarnation. 'Justified in the spirit'—vindicated during his life by his miracles wrought by the power of the Holy Spirit or after his death by his Resurrection; cf. Rom 1:4. IV: 1. 'The Spirit saith'—What follows (1-3) was made known by the Holy Spirit through one of the early Christian prophets. 'In the last times'—in later times, i.e. in the future, in this Messianic era. 2. 'Having their conscience seared'—grown callous in conscience like flesh seared with a hot iron. Though fully conscious of bearing guilty marks they persist in misleading others. 3. 'Forbidding others to marry'—behind these prohibitions there may lie the dualistic principles which were already apparent in Asia Minor when this epistle was written and which were part of the Gnostic 922a heresy. St Paul objects to these prohibitions when they are the outcome of false principles which would regard marriage and certain foods as impure, but he has no objection to abstaining from marriage or to fasting when properly understood and based on sound principles; cf. 1 Cor 7:8 ff.; 2 Cor 6:5; 11:27; 1 Cor 9:27. When the Church bids us fast and abstain she does so, not because she regards certain foods as evil, but to help us to mortify our appetites, to conquer self and so to make spiritual progress. 4. Cf. Gen 1:31.

b 5. 'Sanctified by the word of God'—blessed by a blessing scriptural in form, a scriptural grace. 7. Cf. 1:4. 8. 'Bodily exercise'—Mere training of the body profits but little. 'Profitable to all things'—Holiness is all availing, i.e. for this life and the next. 9. 'A faithful saying'—This assertion regarding the good effects of true piety is worthy of full and unqualified acceptance. 12. 'Let no man despise thy youth'—At the time Timothy was between thirty and forty, and so comparatively young for his position, especially in comparison with Paul and the presbyters. Personal virtue and edifying conduct had to supply lack of years. 'In conversation'—behaviour. 13. 'Attend unto reading'—public reading and instruction. 14. 'Grace'—charisma; here it refers to the sacramental grace of the priesthood bestowed on Timothy. 'Given thee by prophecy'—the phrase διὰ προφητείας is ambiguous. It may be an accusative plural, on account of prophecies made by those faithful present at the ordination of Timothy who were endowed with the gift of prophecy, cf. 1 Tim 1:18. Alternatively it is genitive singular, in which case the prophetic utterance is regarded as the cause of the promotion of Timothy. A further suggestion is that the phrase may refer to some form of prophetic prayer uttered by the Apostle over Timothy; a sort of form of ordination. 'With the imposition of the hands of the priesthood'—cf. 2 Tim 1:6, whence it appears that both Paul and the local presbyters imposed hands upon Timothy, the former bestowing the sacrament, the latter accompanying or co-operating thus making the ceremony a common liturgical act. 'The use of the preposition μερὰ (used here) instead of διὰ (2 Tim 1:6) leads us not to attribute to the imposition of hands on the part of the presbyterate the same value as to the laying on of Paul's hands; the latter is active and produces the effect (διὰ), while the former is only concomitant (μερὰ); one is essential to the rite, the other enhances its brilliancy', Prat II, 270.

c V 1-VI 2 Precepts for Various Classes—Older people are to be treated with reverence, and the younger as equals in the family of Christ. 3. 'Honour'—Here the word means the granting of material help, cf. 17; Mt 15:4-6. 'Widows indeed'—Those who have no relatives to support them; the question therefore concerns those widows who need relief from the public funds of the Church; cf. Ac 6:1. 4. 'Let these learn first'—let the children and grandchildren learn first . . . i.e. these relatives are to learn that their first duty according to their religion is towards their own household so that they should make every effort to support their parents. 6. 'Is dead while she is living'—a true widow is faithful to her religious duties, avoiding that dissipation which is spiritual death. 8. A further confirmation of what has been said in 4. It is a general affirmation that anyone who neglects the care of his dependents, has 'denied the faith and is worse than the infidel', because pagans normally respond to their natural feelings and instincts. 9. In order to qualify for support from the Church the widow must be sixty, married not more than once and known to be of good character, exercising such good works as those listed in 10. 10. 'Received to harbour'—'been hospitable'. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion from the whole of this passage that 'the widows' are some sort of primitive inchoate but recognized religious order or institution within the Church, living a life of devotion under some kind of rule and vow, cf. Polycarp Phil. 4, Ignatius Smyrn. 13; cf. also Spicq, xlviii-l. 11. Younger widows are not to be placed 922d upon the list of those to receive support because they might prove unstable and then, yielding to their desires to remarry, might break their pledges to Christ. 'When they have grown wanton against Christ they want to marry'. They yield to their 'desires' and reject their subjection to Christ. 12. 'Their first faith'—the pledges made to Christ. 13. 'Withal being idle'—Their living on public funds would expose them through consequent idleness to the evils mentioned here. 17. 'Double honour'—Cf. 3. Those fulfilling their duties, especially that of preaching the word, are worthy of more liberal support. 18. Cf. 1 Cor 9:9 where he explains the application of Deut 25:4. The saying of our Lord here quoted is found in Lk 10:7. Is not this an example of the quoting of OT and NT together as Scripture? 19. Timothy is urged to use the judicial power which he possesses as a bishop, without prejudging a case and without partiality or bias. 22. A warning against ordaining priests without due inquiry into their character and fitness for the office. By ordaining the unworthy he would make himself responsible for the sins which they committed as ministers of Christ and for the harm which would befall the Church in consequence. Some writers, however, apply the verse to the sacrament of penance, seeing here a warning against precipitately bestowing absolution from sin or censure on those not rightly disposed. 23. 'Keep thyself chaste'—holy, undefiled, free from fault. 'Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake'—For some reason, perhaps as a means of preserving chastity, Timothy completely abstained from wine. St Paul cautions him against excessive austerity which might impair his health. The Apostle realized the demands of the active ministry and so urged his disciple to take the means necessary to enable himself to fulfil his arduous duties. 24 refers either to the question of not ordaining the unworthy or, as some suggest, to the judgement of priests.

VI 1-2—Speaking of the conduct of slaves, St Paul lays down that they are to fulfil their duties towards their masters, whether Christian or not, in such a way that they bring credit, and not ill repute, to the Christian name. Greater loyalty and service should be given to a Christian master on account of the common bond of the faith. There is no direct legislation against slavery, but Christ's doctrine stressing the equality of all in God's sight eventually created an atmosphere in which slavery could not survive; cf. Eph 6:5 ff.

VI 3-10 Final Warnings—St Paul returns to his warnings against those proud-minded, ignorant teachers who bring about their own ruin by idle controversies and speculations from which the evils mentioned in 4 spring. Religion is thought of by them merely in terms of monetary profit. To counteract this the Apostle wishes to foster a spirit of disinterestedness in preachers of the Gospel, pointing out the dangers attendant on avarice and the futility of amassing wealth which must be left behind at death. 10. 'The desire of money is the root of all evils'—avarice stifles love of higher things and so leaves the road open to all forms of sin. 13. 'Who gave testimony under Pontius Pilate'—The word used is μαρτυροῦσαυτος whence our word 'martyr'. Here however the reference is not to our Lord's passion and death but to his bearing witness before Pilate that he was the Messiah, Jn 18:36 f. It was only later that the word μαρτυρέω came to have the technical meaning of bearing witness by shedding one's blood. Cf. J. Donovan, S.J., The Authorship of St John's Gospel (London, 1936) 75 f.

17-19. 'Warning to the Rich'—This remarkable passage stresses our absolute need of the life of grace, that 'new creation' which uplifts and ennobles us and so enables us to see God who lives in light inaccessible. Note the paradox that we are to see God whom no man can see (cf. 1 Jn 3:1-2) which brings out the need for the life of grace. 20. 'that which is committed'—The deposit of faith. Timothy is warned to guard the treasure of sound doctrine which, as a sacred trust, has 922h been committed to his keeping. He must shun those travesties of true teaching which led others to fall away from the faith. 'Faith's doctrines which God has revealed are not put before us as some philosophical discovery to be developed by human ingenuity but as a divine trust (depositum) handed over to the Spouse of Christ for her faithful safeguarding and infallible exposition', The Vatican Council, Dz 1800.

THE SECOND EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY

923a I 1-2 Greeting—1. 'According to the promise of life'—The purpose of his apostleship was to announce the promise of eternal life.

2-5 Declaration of Love and Anxiety to see Timothy —3. 'From my forefathers'—His own service of God, learnt from his forefathers, had at all times been conscientious and single-minded, even in those days when, following the way he thought to be right, he had persecuted the Church of Christ. 'That without ceasing'—as without ceasing. The meaning is: I give thanks to God whenever I make mention of you, as I do continually, in my prayers night and day. 4. 'Mindful of thy tears'—probably those shed at their parting, a sign that their love was reciprocal. 5. 'Eunice'—a Christian Jewess; cf. Ac 16:1.

b 6-III 18. He appeals to Timothy to show Courage—This appeal to Timothy to be courageous in the exercise of his ministry is based upon the nature of the grace given to him (6); Christ's love as shown by the Redemption (9 f.); the example of Paul himself (12); the defection of false friends (15); the zeal of Onesiphorus (16). 6. 'Grace' (χάρισμα) is here a permanent gift which one can draw upon and revive. It is not a gift which is withdrawn by the Holy Spirit nor is it the character or power of order which has no need of being revived and is incapable of diminution or decline. It is the supernatural fitness received for the worthy exercise of the sacred ministry. 'Something like what we call the grace of a calling—that is to say, the totality of spiritual gifts and the right to the actual graces which the duties of the episcopate require. Although associated with the character and power of Holy Order, it is nevertheless distinct from them. While the character is indelible and the power inalienable, this charisma may become enfeebled through a want of effort or of vigilance; if it does not reach the point of extinction, it needs at least to be rekindled. St Paul indicates very plainly the nature of this charisma, when he adds "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of sobriety"', Prat II, 271. To carry out his mission successfully Timothy had only to draw upon the treasures of ordination graces always at his disposal—a reminder for us not to neglect those we have received. St Thomas suggests that Timothy had been remiss in the discharge of some of his duties, particularly that of preaching. 'Imposition of my hands'—The external rite by which Timothy was raised to the episcopate. Prat shows how this passage together with 1 Tim 4:14 illustrates the three principal elements of a sacrament; the external rite; a permanent grace, which can be revived for all spiritual needs of the ministry; and as shewn, a special sanctifying grace symbolized and given in the actual sacramental rite. 7. The spirit bestowed by God at ordination is not one of timidity, but of fortitude, love, self-discipline. Timothy should therefore press forward in his ministry without fear or misgiving. 9. St Paul gives a brief but telling summary of his doctrine of divine election, showing how we have been delivered by Christ's blood, freely chosen out by God from all eternity to be members of the mystical body of Christ, and that, not because of any merits of ours but solely on account of God's goodness; cf. Eph 1:3-14. God's love as made known by the Redemption is a further motive for d zealous service. 12. St Paul sets before Timothy his own example of suffering. 'These things'—his chains. 922d 'Whom I have believed'—to whose safe-keeping I have entrusted myself. 'That which I have committed'—The pronoun 'μου' may indicate either the deposit which I have entrusted to God or that which God has entrusted to me. In the former case the 'deposit' will refer to the merits won in particular by his sufferings which Paul had deposited with God until the great day of final recompense; in the latter it may refer either to the apostolic office committed by God to Paul and regarded by Paul as a stewardship, or to the Gospel itself, the sound doctrine of the following verse. 'That day'—the day of judgement. 14. 'The good deposit'—again the same word as in 12. Here it is either the doctrine committed to his care or his episcopal ministry. 15. The Apostle emphasizes his appeal by recounting his disappointments in the past. In Asia certain Christians had lacked the courage to appear as his friends. Of Phigellus and Hermogenes we know nothing further. However the loyalty of Onesiphorus' household stood out in sharp contrast as a noble exception. 16-18. These verses seem to imply Onesiphorus' death, and, since he prays God to have mercy upon his soul, show that prayers are profitable not only to the living, but also to the dead. They are an early illustration of Christian prayer for the dead.

II. The exhortation to courage in adversity is continued, reinforced by illustrations from the lives of the soldier, the athlete and the farmer. 2. 'By many witnesses'—The meaning of the phrase is not clear. Some suggest 'in the presence of many witnesses', but this hardly represents διά. A more likely suggestion is that Paul is referring to what Timothy had learnt from him directly and from witnesses who attested facts of which the Apostle himself had no personal experience. 'The same commend'—St Paul, now a prisoner, still strives his utmost to ensure the faithful transmission of the Gospel. In a passage such as this we see the important part which oral teaching and tradition played and still must play in instructing the faithful and accurately handing down the teaching of Christ. 3. 'Labour'—Take thy share of suffering. The cross of suffering precedes the crown of glory. 4. 'With secular business'—Like a true soldier Timothy must give himself over fully to his duty. Taken in conjunction with 6 this verse seems to suggest that Timothy was imitating St Paul by earning his own livelihood, but was thus distracted by secular business. But, as the Apostle points out, the first share of the harvest belongs to the husbandman, and in the same way Timothy has a right to his maintenance. The material support so received from the faithful will be amply repaid by the zealous energy of an apostle untrammelled by secular worries; cf. 1 Tim 5:17 f.; 1 Cor 9:1-12. Timothy's true duty lies in the work of his ministry. 8. The example of our Lord. He became man, passed through the same trials as we do, and then entered into his glory. But the emphasis is upon risen from the dead; it is this thought that he sets before Timothy to inspire him to follow the example of Christ and also of Paul himself in undergoing suffering so as to reach glory. 9. 'Not bound'—despite the imprisonment of the Apostle as though an evildoer the Gospel would continue to spread. God's power is not limited to one instrument. 11-18. Possibly an extract from an early hymn. 'If we be dead with him'—With Christ we must be crucified, i.e. our flesh must be crucified with its passions; with Christ we must be buried, and with Christ we arise from beneath the waters of baptism as from the grave, in the glory of a new and risen life. 12. Cf. Mt 10:33; Lk 12:9.

14-18 Timothy's Conduct in facing his Task — g Timothy finds himself confronted by a difficult situation, aggravated by the activities of false teachers. Careful but effective handling of the situation is necessary. By his conduct Timothy must strive to win God's approval and the respect of the faithful; wordy disputes, detrimental to those concerned and 923g to the spread of the Gospel, are to be avoided. 14. Charging them to avoid controversy. 17-18. Hymenaeus and Philetus, cf. 1 Tim 1:20, probably understood the Resurrection in a purely spiritual fashion, perhaps misunderstanding and misrepresenting the Apostle's doctrine of our spiritual resurrection with Christ in baptism; cf. Rom 6:3 ff.

h 19-26 The Endurance of the Church—Notwithstanding the propagation of false doctrine, the body of the faithful will remain firm, its faith indestructible; cf. 1 Tim 3:15; Heb 12:28; Mt 7:24-27. 'No matter what heresies arise the faith of the Church can never be destroyed. But firmness in the faith on the part of the individual members of the Church depends on two factors: predestination and free will; 'God knoweth who are his', yet his elect will be saved through their free will, 'let everyone depart'. We have always to bear in mind St Augustine's words, 'Why he draws this man and not that man seek not to discover unless you would fall into error', Tract. in Joann., 26, 2. 20. The metaphor changes. Christians are compared to the various vessels used in a house; cf. Rom 9:19-24.

924a III 1-9 Future Dangers—1. 'In the last days'—In this Messianic era in which we live. He is speaking of false doctrines already spread about, since Timothy is cautioned against those who propagate them. As the Apostle looks still further into the future he sees dangers increasing since the flood of false teaching will inevitably bring with it a corresponding corruption of morals. 8. Jannes and Mambres (Jambres) are the names given by Jewish tradition to the magicians who opposed Moses before Pharaoh; cf. Ex 7:11.

b 10-17 Further Encouragement—Once more St Paul sets before Timothy his own example and reminds him of the time when he undertook his ministry and of the persecutions suffered by Paul at that time in Timothy's own country. Timothy is urged not to forget all this now, but rather to draw present comfort from the way in which God came to Paul's assistance and rescued him; cf. Ac 13-14. 14. 'Of whom'—plural, therefore including besides Paul Timothy's mother and grandmother; cf. 1:5. 15. 'Scriptures'—means at least the OT. This verse and 16 demonstrate the value of the Scriptures, both for one's own perfection and for the instruction of others. 16. A most important passage regarding the inspiration of Scripture, cf. A. Bea, De Inspiratione (Rome, 1933), 33-5. The verse may be translated either Every Scripture is inspired of God and is profitable for teaching or Every Scripture inspired of God is profitable for teaching, but in either case the inspiration of Scripture is assumed, the writer being content to indicate its various uses. 17. 'Man of God'—minister of Christ; cf. 1 Tim 6:11. 'Furnished to every good work'—made proficient for his duties by study of the Scriptures. These rightly used give life and unction to preaching. Study of the Scriptures is an obligation upon pastors if they are to carry out their duties effectively and fruitfully.

c IV Final Exhortation to Timothy—1. 'Living and the dead'—cf. 1 Thess 4:16. The phrase in the creeds that Christ will come to judge the living and the dead is taken from this passage. The 'living' are those who will be alive when Christ comes on the last day; cf. 1 Cor 15:51 f. 'At once a difficulty arises about the just who are alive at the last day. St Paul meets it by telling of a 'mystery'; these just it is true will not die, but none the less their bodies will have to be glorified—all the just, the living and the dead will be changed. When the dead rise incorruptible we, the living shall be changed; our corruptible bodies will put on incorruption. After that supreme moment death will have lost all power over us', WV, 3, 222. 2. 'In season—out of season'—Timothy must be persistent, ready to instruct or reprove at all times, whether acceptable to the hearers or not. The errors spread by false teachers are to be defeated by Timothy's own persevering patience, sound preaching, and faithful fulfilment of duty in face of hardship. Paul's pleading is the more urgent since he is aware that his own death is not far distant. 924c

6-8 The Apostle's Reward—As he reflects upon his approaching death he takes occasion to look back over his long strenuous career with all its trials and sufferings and then goes on to tell how he awaits from the just judge the crown, the reward he has earned by faithful service. 8. The 'crown' is at once the sign and reward of a good life; it is the vision of God; cf. 1 Cor 13:9-12; 1 Jn 3:1-2. There is, however, in addition, the aureola due to particular merit, for instance to the martyr, virgin, doctor. 'Of justice'—hence justly merited; eternal life is at once the reward of merit and a 'grace' or 'free gift' of God, because without God's grace there can be no merit. St Augustine expresses it: 'In crowning our merits, God only crowns his own gifts'. 'Just judge . . . render'—These words are a further important witness to the doctrine of merit. 'In that day'—the day of judgement. There may be here a reference to the particular judgement, since the supposition is that the judgement and reward are to follow closely upon death.

9-18 Paul's Lonely Imprisonment—Paul's associates, with the exception of Luke, have left him on various missions so that the Apostle summons Timothy to visit him. 9. Demas is mentioned only in Col 4:14; Phm 24. Crescens is otherwise unknown; his departure is not defection, nor is it censured. Mark was obviously reconciled to St Paul after the events of Ac 13:13; 15:38. 'Cloak'—Some think that this may refer to some book-wrap for the book-rolls mentioned here. It is, however, probably a winter cloak which he needed during his imprisonment. Alexander may be the person mentioned in 1 Tim 1:20. He is obviously known to Timothy. He may have followed the Apostle to Rome and become an accuser or he may possibly have taken part in the events leading to the Apostle's final arrest. However he must have returned to Ephesus since Timothy is warned against him.

16-18 Paul's Trial—At my first answer—This refers to the preliminaries of the trial, the first hearing of the case. No one came forward to witness on his behalf. For his part, Paul was able to seize the occasion of self-defence to preach the Gospel. 'I was delivered'—probably means, secured a remand. While he cannot feel assured of the final acquittal, he does feel assured of his eternal salvation. 'Mouth of the lion'—danger. 18. Note how the doxology is applied to Christ. It is from him that grace, deliverance and salvation come, and to him thanks and honour are paid; cf. Prat II, 122.

19-21 Final Greetings—Erastus, mentioned in Rom 16:23, was the city treasurer of Corinth. Trophimus was an Ephesian of pagan origin. Linus—according to Irenaeus the successor of Peter as Bishop of Rome.

THE EPISTLE TO TITUS

I 1-4 Greeting—The rather formal nature of the greeting may be explained by the official character of the letter, and by its purpose, which was to emphasize the authority of Paul's emissary and to impress the false teachers in Crete. 1. 'According to the faith of the elect'—The purpose of Paul's apostolate is to make still more secure in Crete that faith and knowledge which promotes right living and true worship of God. 2. 'Who lieth not'—A unique phrase intended as a contrast to the absence of truth to be found amongst the Cretan teachers, cf. 12. 3. 'In due times'—God's promise of eternal life, though hidden away from eternity, had been made known at the appointed time and spread abroad by the preaching of the Apostles including Paul himself. 4. 'Common faith'—Titus himself was an uncircumcised Gentile (Gal 2:3) and there may be here a hint of his gentile origin since the 'common' faith would be that belong- 925a

925a ing to both Jew and Gentile. Otherwise the phrase means simply 'in communion of faith'.

b 5-16 The Mission of Titus—Titus had been left at Crete to stem the progress of error and evil practice by appointing faithful and trustworthy ministers to preserve the true Christian tradition and way of life. 5. 'Priests'—The word used here is 'presbyters'; note however that the word 'episcopos' is substituted in 7 for 'presbyter'. Regarding the question of 'priest' and 'bishop' in the Pastorals, cf. §§919f-920c. 5 ff. Cf. 1 Tim 3:1-7. The qualities which are demanded of Christ's ministers are particularly necessary in this instance on account of the many false teachers, mainly Jewish, who for the sake of gain were trying to undermine Christian doctrine and practice. These false teachers are spoken of in much the same terms as those at Ephesus, cf. §921i. 7. 'Bishop'—Episcopos, cf. §§919-20. This name, which means overseer, inspector, superintendent, describes the 'function' better than presbyter. 12. 'The Cretans are always liars'—quotation from the Minos of Epimenides, a Cretan poet (c 600 B.C.). Callimachus (c 300-240 B.C.) quotes the first half of it in his Hymn to Zeus, applying it to the Cretan legend that the tomb of Zeus was on the island. The phrase was no doubt familiar and cannot be used to prove that the Apostle possessed a wide knowledge of the classics. 14. Titus is urged to act firmly against them in order to preserve the faith. 15. 'All things are clean'—In addition to their doctrinal errors these false teachers retained the distinction between clean and unclean foods. This distinction, St Paul points out, no longer obtains; what matters is the internal disposition with which we regard things, all things are clean to those who are clean of heart, while the unclean contaminate everything with which they come into contact, cf. 1 Cor 6:12; 10:23; Mt 15:11; Lk 11:41. 16. Their conduct belies their profession that they possess the true knowledge of God; cf. Mt 7:16 ff.

c II 1-10 The Christian Ideal for the Various Classes—Titus is called upon to remedy the disorder brought about by the fraudulent missionaries and that he may be successful in this the Apostle sets before him the duties of various classes of people with the ideals at which they are to aim. He is especially insistent on good family life, which had been disrupted by those pseudo-guides; cf. 1:11. 4. A tradition of wholesome family life is to be established and handed on from women of maturer years to those younger. 6. 'Sober'—self-controlled—Youth must practise self-control in all things; there must be no yielding to youthful impulsiveness. 7. Titus himself is to set the example. 8. 'That he who is on the contrary part'—so that our adversaries may be put to shame, having no opportunity for speaking ill of us. 9-10. Slaves are again (cf. 1 Tim 6:1) urged to be submissive to their masters and indeed to give such good service that they bring credit upon the Christian religion.

d 11-15 form the Epistle read at the first Mass on Christmas Day. St Paul sets before his readers the reasons why they should respond to the call to reach the Christian ideal, namely because of God's graciousness—this is the meaning of 'grace' here, rather than sanctifying grace—towards all men, revealed in the Incarnation and the preaching of the Gospel. 'To all men'—On this account the Apostle makes his appeal to all classes of people in 1-10 above. All are, in fact, affected by Christ's advent, the benefits of the Incarnation are not limited to any particular privileged body, but are meant to be shared by all. The effect of our Lord's coming is now made known. 12. 'Instructing us'—Training us, guiding us continuously to regulate our lives by practising piety, justice, self-restraint, i.e. by performing our duties to God (godly), to our neighbour (justly) and to ourselves (soberly). This passage is aptly chosen for Christmastide, recalling as it does, the practical bearing of the Incarnation on our conduct. 'The blessed hope'—i.e. the object of hope; the hope to which correspondence with the blessings of the Incarnation will lead us, the glory of the second coming of Christ. 13. 'The great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ'—The liturgy in using these words at Christmas focuses our attention upon the divine Nature of the Child who is born for us. He is our Great God and Saviour. Both nouns refer to Jesus Christ: 'It is consoling to see the exegeses of our day coming back more and more to the traditional interpretation. If it were a question of the Father, the Apostle would not add to God the epithet of 'great' which naturally is the principle of divinity. Moreover the Parousia is always the glorious manifestation of the Son coming to judge the world, never that of the Father. Finally—and this argument is decisive—the two titles 'great God' and 'Saviour' being included in Greek under the same article, must refer to the same person; to be able to isolate them and to connect the second only to Jesus Christ, this latter name would have to be placed between the two', Prat, II, 127; cf. also WV and Bandas op. cit. 187. 14. 'Who gave himself for us'—Christ's love, as manifested in his passion and death is a further reason for diligence in the pursuance of Christian ideals. Christ loved us and gave himself for us; in return, then, the Christian redeemed by Christ's blood must spend himself in Christ's service; cf. Gal 2:20. 14. 'A people acceptable'—a reference to God's choice of Israel in the OT, cf. Deut 7:6; 14:2; 26:18; Ex 19:5; 1 Pet 2:9. 'Good works'—those already pointed out above, 2:1-10. 15. Titus is urged to exercise the authority which he possesses as the Apostle's delegate and as a minister of Christ. He has the right to command and guide.

III 1-3 Christian Citizenship—The Apostle calls upon them to fulfil their duties as members of society, civic and municipal. Far from weakening loyalty to the State, faith in Christ is rather a guarantee of its strength, because the nation as such is derived from God, cf. Eph 3:15, and in consequence must be loyally served by the Christian as a matter of duty; cf. CR 22 (Aug. 1942) 337 ff., art. Patriotism, by Rev. L. L. McReavy. 2. In relation to his fellow citizens the Christian must show himself to be understanding, tolerant, forbearing, careful to avoid injuring his neighbour's character by evil talk. 3. 'For we ourselves'—As an added incentive to considerate treatment of those not enlightened by the Christian faith, St Paul reminds them of their own past, cf. Eph 4:17 ff.; Rom 1:18 ff. The lesson he wishes them to draw is patience with the failings of others. He then reminds them that their own calling was not due to themselves, but solely to God's goodness.

4-7 Baptism and Justification—The Epistle of the Second Mass on Christmas day. 'Not by the works of justice'—not because of any works of ours done before justification whether according to the natural or Mosaic Law: those works did not constitute the motive for God's bestowing the grace of justification—the motive was solely God's mercy. 'By the laver of regeneration'—This laver or bath of regeneration is Baptism, by which we are delivered from that slavery of sin into which we were born (our first birth) and become sons of God (our regeneration or second birth), cf. Jn 3:3 ff. 'Renovation of the Holy Ghost'—expresses another aspect of our regeneration; it is a renewal effected by the Holy Spirit, the production of a new 'being' by which we are restored to divine sonship, it is the 'new creation' spoken of in 2 Cor 5:17; Gal 6:15; Eph 4:24. Sin, actual and original, is remitted by the infusion of a new life which takes the place of spiritual death. Bandas, 181, notes here the reference to the Holy Trinity: 'Again, the Apostle says that our baptismal regeneration is due to the Father who, without any regard to merits which we neither possessed nor were capable of acquiring, had mercy on us; it is due also to Jesus Christ who is our Saviour and Mediator; and finally it is due to the Holy Spirit, the Common Envoy of the Father and the

TITUS III

925g Son, our Sanctifier, who is liberally poured out upon us'. 7. The life of grace 'justifies' or renders a man 'just' in the sight of God; hence springs up hope of eternal life seeing that he is now a son of God and co-heir with Christ. In a word, baptism is the beginning of a life which is eternal. 4-7 gives us a summary of the process of justification (cf. Prat I, 331*n*-332; II, 259-60) and point to the effects of Christ's coming as we celebrate his nativity. 9. 'Foolish questions and genealogies'—cf. 1 Tim 1:4. 10. 'Heretic'—ἀιρετικόν whence our word heretic. Here it rather refers to a person who is a centre of dissension and strife, a 'factious person'. Such an individual is to be admonished and if still obdurate is to be regarded as excluded from the Church. 11. 'Condemned by his own judgement'—self condemned; by his stubborn refusal to submit to the Church's authority he puts himself outside the Church, i.e. is excommunicated; cf. 1 Cor 5:5. 12-15 Final Instructions—Artemas—not otherwise known in NT, but acc. to tradition one of the Seventy and Bp of Lystra. Tychicus—cf. 2 Tim 4:12. Nicopolis—in Epirus. It has been suggested that Paul intended to make it a centre for the evangelization of Epirus and may have been arrested there. Zenas the Lawyer—not mentioned elsewhere in NT, but by tradition Bp of Diospolis and author of apocryphal Acts of Titus. He was probably a 'lawyer' in the Jewish sense. 'Necessary uses'—such as the needs of Zenas and Apollos. Christians should earn an honest living and so be able to meet all the expenses demanded of the congregation, such as those mentioned in the preceding verse. 925h

THE EPISTLE OF ST PAUL TO PHILEMON

By S. SHEARER, C.P

926a Bibliography—F. Prat, The Theology of St Paul, London, 1933, I, pp 275-9; C. Toussaint, art. 'Philemon', DBV; E. Robin, art. 'Philemon', DTC; *A. T. Robertson, 'Philemon and Onesimus, master and slave', Exp. VIII 19 (1920), 29-48; M. Roberti, La lettera di S Paolo a Filemone e la condizione giuridica dello schiavo fuggitivo, Milan, 1933; J. Dutilleul, art. 'Esclavage', DTC; P. Allard, art 'Esclavage', DAFC.

b Introduction—This short Epistle must surely rank as a perfect example of the letter-writer's art. Its object is simple enough—to seek forgiveness for the bearer, a runaway slave; yet in it the Holy Ghost has used all the skill, grace and warmth of style that St Paul's cultured mind and generous heart could command.

It was written at the same time and in the same circumstances of captivity as the Epistle to the Colossians. While still a prisoner Paul had met and converted Onesimus, a slave who had run away from his master, Philemon, after having perhaps first robbed him (v 18). He has now persuaded Onesimus to return, overcoming his well-founded fears of punishment by writing these few conciliatory lines for him to take back with him to his master.

c The authenticity and canonicity of the Epistle are beyond question. Its preservation is probably due to the veneration of Philemon's family for anything connected with one to whom they owed their Christian faith (v 19). Philemon is not mentioned elsewhere in the New Testament, but we may gather from the Epistle that he was the wealthy, eminent and charitable owner of a house-church in one of the early Christian communities. That this community was at Colossae seems clear enough from a comparison with the Epistle to the Colossians. Onesimus himself was from Colossae (Col 4:9). Epaphras, who was a native of Colossae and had evangelized it, and Luke, Mark, Aristarchus and Demas send special greetings through Paul to Philemon, as they had done to the Colossians in general (Col 4:10-14). Archippus, who is generally regarded as Philemon's son (as Appia is generally taken to be his wife) is also spoken of in Col 4:17 as exercising an important office at Colossae.

d Doctrinal Content—Noteworthy is the prudent restraint without compromise of principle that marks St Paul's attitude towards slavery. He respects the legal rights of Philemon and abstains from open condemnation of the system (to proclaim its immediate abolition in the world of his time would have been to precipitate civil war and worse social evils). But he is careful to inculcate the principle that will soften the harshness of slavery and cause the gradual disappearance of the system in the future—the principle of the brotherhood of all men in Christ.

e 1-7 Introduction—In the opening salutations to Philemon and his household, Paul is joined by Timothy, the companion of his captivity (1-2).

There follows a graceful eulogy of Philemon's charity and practical faith. The thought of the help that these have afforded his fellow Christians has been the source of great happiness and comfort to Paul (7) and has called forth from him particular thanks to God, with a special remembrance of Philemon in his prayers

(4-5). V 6 in the Vg seems to mean that Paul prays there may be due recognition of Philemon's generosity and the good works among the Christian community to which it has given rise; the Greek reads: 'May (their ?) participation in thy faith become effective in the clear knowledge of all the good that is in us, unto Christ.'

8-21 Body of the Epistle—The way has now been delicately prepared for the main portion of the Epistle—the plea for mercy for Onesimus; this too is treated with consummate skill.

Paul is so anxious to save Onesimus from the terrible punishments (including even crucifixion) to which he is legally liable that he gives Philemon a gentle reminder that he has the undoubted right as an Apostle to issue a definite command in the matter; though, as he tactfully adds, his knowledge of Philemon's character leads him rather to appeal to his charity. In the name of charity, therefore, and further, in the name of his grey hairs and now of the chains of imprisonment that Christ's service has brought him, Paul makes his request on behalf of the child whom he has brought forth into the light of the Christian faith during his captivity (8-10): let Philemon receive him back as though Paul had sent him his own heart (12). True, in the past Onesimus has belied the name he bears, but now he can show both Philemon and Paul how well it suits him (11) (the Greek name Onesimus means 'profitable'). Indeed, if he were to stay on to minister to Paul's needs he could at the same time be acting as the representative of Philemon: but dearly as Paul would like this, he leaves it to Philemon's free choice (13-14).

Perhaps, as an added motive for forgiveness, there is for Philemon in this matter a divine plan of 'loss and gain'—perhaps his temporary loss of Onesimus as slave was purposely designed to bring him everlasting gain of Onesimus as brother; if he is a beloved brother especially to Paul, how much more must he be so to Philemon, both naturally, as a result of his forgiveness, and supernaturally, because of his new relationship with him through their common faith in Christ (15-16). Again, does not Philemon regard Paul as friend and fellow? Let him therefore welcome Paul's 'other self'. And let him not be deterred by the remembrance of any wrongs or losses he has suffered from Onesimus—let him charge these to Paul; though 'if they were to settle their accounts, it would be Philemon who would remain the debtor' (Prat)—to the extent of his whole spiritual being (18-19). Paul wittily suggests that Philemon should discharge this debt by, as it were, becoming an Onesimus to him (the play on words in the Greek is difficult to reproduce in English)—that is, granting his request, and so bringing him Christian comfort. In v 21 Paul may be hinting that Philemon's forgiveness should even extend as far as granting Onesimus his complete freedom.

22-25 Conclusion—The Epistle ends with the incidental information that Paul expects to be released (through Philemon's prayers, he adds typically) and would like to have accommodation ready for him at Philemon's house. The final salutations are from companions of Paul who would be especially well known to Philemon.

THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS

By W. LEONARD, D.S.S.

927a Bibliography—(a) Introductory: The recent General Manuals of Merk, Renié, Lusseau-Collomb, Höpfl-Gut, Gächter, Gutjahr, Meinertz, Steinmueller, and the following special studies: B. Heigl, Verfasser u. Adresse des Briefes an die Hebräer (1905); J. Quental, Destinataires de l'Épître aux Hébreux, RB (1912); J. Nikel, Der Hebräerbrief, BZ (1914); L. Méchineau, L'Epistola agli Ebrei secondo le risposte della Commissione Biblica (1917); *K. Bornhäuser, Empfänger u. Verfasser des Briefes an die Hebräer (1932); A. Vitti, Introductio in S. Paulum (1934); id. L'Ambiente vero della Lettera agli Ebrei in Miscellanea Biblica (1935); id. Le Bellezze stilistiche della Lettera agli Ebrei, Biblica (1936); L. Pirot, Hébreux (l'Épître aux) DBV(S) (1938); W. Leonard, Authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews (1939); A. Dubarle, Rédacteur et destinataires de l'Épître aux Hébreux RB (1939).

(b) Commentaries: Chrysostom, Theodoretus, Primasius (Haymo), Aquinas, à Lapide, L. Zill (1879); A. Schäfer (1893); A. Padovani (1896); C. Huyghe (1901); J. Graf (1918); P. Boylan WV (1924); Rohr, BB (1932); A. Médebielle, Sainte Bible (1938); J. Bonsirven, VS, Paris 1943^a; *F. Bleek (1840); *B. F. Westcott (1928)^a; *J. Moffatt ICC (1924); *A. Nairne CBSC (1917).

(c) Theological: F. Prat, *Théologie de Saint Paul I*st (1934) IInd (1933); C. Perrella, De iustificazione secundum Epistolam ad Hebraeos, Bi (1933); L. G. da Fonseca, Foedus an Testamentum?, Bi (1927-8); E. Dimmler, Melchisedech-Gedanken über das Hohepriestertum Christi nach dem Hebräerbrief (1921); V. Padolskis, L'idée du sacrifice de la Croix dans l'Épître aux Hébreux (1935); M. A. Mathis, The Pauline Pistis-Hypostasis according to Heb 11:1 (1920); J. Bonsirven, Le Sacrifice et le Sacerdoce de J.-C. d'après l'Épître aux Hébreux NRT (1939); *E. Richm, Lehrbegriff des Hebräerbriefes (1867); *H. L. MacNeill, The Christology of the Epistle to the Hebrews (1914); *Büchsel, F. Die Christologie des Hebräerbriefes (1922); *A. Nairne, The Epistle of Priesthood^a (1915).

INTRODUCTION

b Contents and Characteristics—The writing placed in our Bibles between the thirteen Pauline Epistles and the seven Catholic Epistles is itself a letter. The author calls it so, 13:22, but he also calls it in the same sentence a 'word of exhortation'. Written to a community which was in serious difficulties and dangers, it comes very close to the form of a homily. While the author really writes a great treatise in the brief form of a letter, he never forgets that he is warning and exhorting.

A 'headless' letter, without salutation or exordium or preliminary communications, it belongs to what Roller (Das Formular der Paulinischen Briefe, 1933) has described as a 'fore-asiatic' or Levantine type. It opens abruptly with a magnificent Prologue. It closes, however, with an Epilogue which is quite personal and epistolary.

The author's concern is a great contrast. He wishes to set the revelation or religion, which has been recently brought by the Son of God, against the revelation or religion formerly taught by God to the Hebrew Fathers through the Prophets. The superiority of the New over the Old is really the one lesson of our Epistle, and it is taught by insisting on the super-excellence of Christ 927b from every point of view. This includes simultaneous insistence on the inferiority of the Old Dispensation in all respects. Its imperfection and insufficiency to remit sin and give confident access to God are amply shown in such terms as make the letter a great impeachment, cf. 8:7, 8.

The Prologue, 1:1-4, is practically a synthesis of everything, for it sets the Person of the Son and his work and his victory in most splendid prominence, making special mention of the 'cleansing of sin', which he alone wrought (ποιησάμενος), before he passed to his throne on the right hand of Majesty on high.

Christ's superiority over the Angel Ministers of the Old Covenant, 1:5-14, is just allowed to stand out in an Old Testament anthology—mostly Psalm texts. A warning, 2:1-4, flows from that superiority and from the mention of Christian salvation of which the Angels are helpers. Then it is shown that the salvation was won by the self-abasement of the Son below the angelic state of immortality. His sovereignty—a universal sovereignty of glory and honour—is actually the reward of a death endured on behalf of men who were held in slavery by sin and death. As his death was a sacrificial death, Christ thereby wrought our atonement through the trials of mortality and suffering, entering simultaneously into such full experience of human weakness as fitted him to be a compassionate or sympathetic High Priest, 2:6-18. The sacerdotal thesis of the Epistle, already insinuated in the Prologue, 1:3, here comes into clear view and is to dominate the rest of the letter. Heb is above all the Epistle of the Priesthood of Christ.

Christ 'Apostle and Pontiff' is meanwhile shown to be superior to Moses, the legislative mediator of the Old Alliance, 3:1-6a; and a long warning is also based on this vindication of Christ's higher position in the House of God, 3:6b-4:13. Very aptly the warning and exhortation are made to gravitate towards the divine rest which was lost (in type) by the unbelieving generation that Moses led.

Our author now returns to the Pontiff—the thoroughly sympathetic Pontiff—of our religion and in an atmosphere of confidence we stand prepared to contemplate his High Priesthood, 4:14-16.

Human weakness and divine vocation are two conditions of High Priesthood, for the Priest must have the sympathy with men which belongs to a fellow-sufferer and the confidence of access to God which comes from a heavenly authorization. Jesus here figures both as Son and as Melchisedechian Pontiff. When he has been set before us in the robes of priestly sympathy—praying as a sufferer, and then glorified, and the Cause of our salvation—we salute him as High Priest according to the order of Melchisedech and await developments, 5:1-10.

Those developments do not come until a warning of great severity, but mercifully tempered with words of confidence and encouragement, has prepared dull ears for hearing, 5:11-6:20. Thereupon, Melchisedech is dialectically made to assert his superiority over Aaron. Christ, typified by him, is seen receiving homage from Abraham and blessing him—annulling Mosaism together with its priesthood—holding his own priesthood 927d on a title of everlasting life—being confirmed by divine oath as the guarantor of a better covenant—and remaining as an all-sufficient Priest for ever, 7:1-25. A sort of intermedial epilogue is inserted here, 7:26-28.

The long section 8:1-10:18 which ends and crowns the dogmatic part of the letter is concerned with Christ as the Minister of a better sanctuary, 8:1-5, as the Mediator of a better Covenant, 8:6-13, as the, Offerer of a better Sacrifice than that of Expiation day and in fact as the Abolisher by his one all-sufficient sacrifice of the whole weak and insufficient multiplicity of Mosaic sacrifices, 9:1-10:18.

The moral part or last exhortation of this 'word of exhortation', 10:19-13:17, can be summed up in the one word: 'Perseverance'. It is a fine combination of heart-shaking severity, well-motivated comfort, inspired encouragement, and strong exhortation to persevere to the end. The epilogue has been mentioned already, 13, 18-25.

6 Taking up Heb after a careful reading of the thirteen epistles of St Paul, we shall be struck with the differences. The author seems a calm, placid man compared with that divine volcano whom we venerate as the Apostle of the Gentiles. His expository and argumentative order is so remarkable that St Thomas Aquinas said with admirable felicity: 'No other Scripture moves with such fine order of words and sentences.' A very careful study of the letter will reveal a most perfect system of joinings—a very noteworthy thing in a writing which so constantly combines dogmatic exposition with exhortation. One might easily guess that this writing was not dictated to an amanuensis, as St Paul's letters were. In fact it has been said that the great Apostle 'speaks' in his letters, while this man 'writes'. Although the author constructs periods of the classical type quite as rarely as St Paul, yet he balances his thoughts very skillfully, and frequently uses paronomasia, alliteration and other stylistic elegances. He appears to pay much attention to rhythm. At times his vocabulary sounds learned, for he uses words like αἰσθητήριον, μετριοπαθεῖν, δημιουργός. These are only a few of the obvious things which a reader of the Greek text will notice. Critical readers will say, like Origen, that this is a more 'Greek thing' and more a work of art than Paul's letters are.

928a Canonicity and Authenticity—It is of Catholic faith that Hebrews is an inspired Scripture belonging to the canon of divine books which the Church received from the Apostles. The final verdict in the matter was given by the Council of Trent (Session IV, Apr. 8, 1546). By placing Heb in its list as one of fourteen Paulines the Council favoured the Pauline authenticity of our letter but did not directly define it.

Outside of Catholic circles denial of Pauline authorship became almost universal during the 19th cent. The early obscurity in which the Epistle was involved throughout western Christendom was used to discount eastern unanimity, and the first clear assertion of Pauline paternity at Alexandria was regarded as a guess or an exegetical conclusion. Against this current of denial the Biblical Commission raised a bank on June 24, 1914. The first of three queries set before the Commission reads as follows: 'Doubts concerning the divine inspiration and Pauline origin of the Epistle to the Hebrews, doubts which were chiefly caused by abuse on the part of heretics, were current in the early centuries and held the minds of some Christians in the west. It is, therefore, asked whether in spite of the perpetual, unanimous, constant, assertion of the Oriental Fathers, with which the whole Western Church entered into complete agreement after the 4th cent.—whether in spite of this and in spite of the action of Supreme Pontiffs and sacred Councils, especially that of Trent—in spite also of the perpetual use of the universal Church, such force is to be attributed to the said doubts as to justify hesitation in receiving this letter not only amongst the canonical writings—which is defined as of faith—but also as a letter to be certainly placed amongst the genuine writings of St Paul? The answer was negative, that is: No such force is to be attributed to those early doubts (EB 429).

The human authorship of a writing is primarily an historical matter and must be settled by consulting historical testimonies. Now historical testimony is available here, and in spite of some obscurities is cogent. History says that Paul is the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews. These are briefly the facts. The letter was certainly used and held sacred by Pope Clement of Rome about A.D. 95. St Polycarp of Smyrna probably alludes to it. Fifteen or twenty years later, St Justin representing Palestine, Asia Minor and Rome, is also a probable witness for the first half of the 2nd cent. Later, in the West some unexplainable obscurity covered it, beginning apparently in the second half of that century. St Irenaeus of Lyons writing in the last quarter of the century used it as sacred, but only seldom, and not under the name of Paul. The Muratorian Canon in its mutilated state excludes it. About A.D. 200 the Roman presbyter Caius rejected it. Hippolytus of Rome, who lived into the thirties of the 3rd cent., used it as sacred, but (if we trust two notes in the Bibliotheca of Photius) denied that it was Paul's. In Africa Tertullian cites it about 220 not as Scripture but as a writing of Barnabas having some authority. St Cyprian neither uses it nor includes it in his collection of Pauline Letters to Seven Churches. If the so-called Tractatus Origenis edited by Battifol and Wilmart in 1900 are really a western work of A.D. 300 or later, the name of Barnabas was associated with our letter at the beginning of the 4th cent. The African canon of 359 called after Mommsen mentions only thirteen letters of St Paul. That is as far as documents allow us to follow western opinion, for no argument can be drawn from the omission by oversight of Phil, Thess, Heb from the 4th cent (?) canon of the Codex Claromontanus. The Ambrosiaster who wrote under Pope Damasus (366-384) is also a doubtful witness.

In the East things are quite otherwise. The facts must be given very compendiously. At Alexandria, shortly after 150 we find the presbyters (amongst whom Pantaenus must have taken his place well before 180), handing down our letter as a Pauline writing. Clement, a disciple of Pantaenus since 180 and his successor as head of the Didaskaleion about 200, noticed the great difference of style, but did not think of receding from the Alexandrian tradition of Pauline authorship. He supposed—or perhaps the suggestion had been made earlier—that the letter was written in Aramaic and translated into Greek by Luke. The great critic Origen also held fast to the assertion of the Ancients regarding Paulinity, but explained the un-Pauline elegance of the letter by assuming that a scholiographos (a writer working on notes), Luke or Clement of Rome or rather God-knows-who would be responsible for the phrasing and composition of the letter.

Origen's critical opinion did not obtain a following in his own Greek-speaking East. Although there is not a single dissenting voice heard either in Alexandria or any other Oriental Church on the question of the Pauline origin of our letter, such writers as consider the literary question adopt the hypothesis of an Aramaic original, ably written and skillfully translated. Clement's and not Origen's view also dominated in the West, when doubts about the letter had vanished.

The Arian controversy increased interchange of relations between East and West. From the time that St Athanasius was in Rome and Trier, from the time of St Hilary's return from exile in Asia Minor, the epistle to the Hebrews had come into its own in the West also. St Augustine declared that the authority of the Oriental Churches was decisive with him, and the Councils of Hippo and Carthage (EB 11-15) renewed the sacred and Pauline credit of Heb in Africa, just as the action of Pope Innocent (405) did in Rome and throughout the other Western lands.

Dissenting voices were not heard again until the days of Humanism. Catholics, with one or two exceptions, then as before held to Pauline authorship, but Origen's hypothesis mostly displaced that of Clement as an explanation of the stylistic excellence of the letter. Protestants, with a few notable exceptions attributed Heb to some other writer besides St Paul, and in the 19th cent. the negation of Pauline authorship became altogether prevalent amongst non-Catholic scholars. Apollos was regarded as the author by Luther and by many after him; Silas was the choice of others; Philip the Deacon of Sir W. Ramsay; Barnabas has had the suffrages of Renan, Zahn, Salmon and recently Bornhäuser; Aquila and Priscilla (joint authors) were favoured by Harnack. Others, like Westcott, content themselves with the assumption of an Alexandrian Jew, while for others, like Moffatt, he is a great unknown, 'a voice and nothing more'.

Many of the literary difficulties against Pauline origin have already been mentioned as characteristics of the letter—the absence of name, exordium, opening salutation—the purity of its Greek together with the elegance and perfection of diction and style. To these add the peculiar mode of citing the Old Testament and arguing from it—furthermore the difference of doctrinal viewpoint between this letter and the Paulines. The Biblical Commission was asked in 1914 whether the arguments drawn from these differences were such as to weaken belief in Pauline authorship; or whether on the contrary the perfect harmony of doctrine and doctrinal assertions, the similarity of the admonitions and exhortations, the frequent coincidences of phrase and vocabulary rather favour and confirm Pauline origin. The Commission answered No to the first; Yes to the second. The Pauline authorship stands (EB 430).

We have to confine ourselves here to brief statements that might seem too dictatorial, but they have been well weighed and considered. The thought of the letter is indubitably Pauline, and there is no real difference of viewpoint beyond that required for the treatment of a new subject not entirely absent from the Paulines but never treated ex professo—namely the Priesthood and sacrifice of Christ. The mode of citing Scriptures as God's utterances or under a formula of indefinite anonymity is peculiar, but not entirely foreign to St Paul, and perhaps adopted as more suited to a Hebrew circle of addressees. The literary argument remains. Even the most painstaking comparison leaves a considerable residue of stylistic features that seem un-Pauline. There are, however, very notable 'concords' and the 'discords' are found to be reducible in a measure that would surprise some of the bolder impressionist critics.

This brings us to the third query set before the Biblical Commission: 'Whether Paul the Apostle is to be regarded as the author of this epistle in such a sense that it must necessarily be asserted that he not only conceived and expressed the whole of it under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, but that he also gave it that form in which it has come to us?' The answer was No, with due reservation regarding any further judgement of the Church (EB 431).

Therefore, on the question of the Epistle's form, which includes everything that belongs to arrangement, composition and adornment, the Commission allows wide freedom. Actually modern scholarship has made the hypothesis of a translation from an Aramaic original untenable, but Origen's view of 'Pauline thoughts composed and phrased by a redactor' is widely held by Catholic writers. Personally we can only state the conviction produced by a long and minute study of the matter. St Paul does not seem to have dictated the letter. Either he wrote it with his own hand or he used a collaborator. In the latter case, however, the collaborator's part must be reduced to rather small proportions, if the indubitable Pauline origin of the letter is to stand. The development of ideas and the internal cohesion of thought go so much with the language, that Paul must be regarded as the dominant cause of everything, except perhaps the smoothing of transitions, the filling of phrases or the final polishing of the whole. A genius—such as St Paul most certainly was—is always capable of doing surprising things, and experience has shown that comparatively little retouching (especially at the joints) can sometimes work in a writing a great literary transfiguration. The identity of the secondary hand will probably have to be left in the future as in the past to the divine omniscience.

Purpose and Addressees.—The purpose of this 'word of exhortation' is clear. The fibre of the community to which it was directed had been weakened, and defections were to be feared. The author wishes to give them a magnificent tonic, so as to strengthen them against the danger of falling away. He wishes to bring them back to the fervour of their first days and to a worthy emulation of the faith of leaders whose lives had been crowned with a glorious end.

This purpose is closely bound up with the identity of the Addressees. The title 'To the Hebrews' is itself a highly authoritative indication, for it stands in all the MSS and is mentioned early in the 3rd cent. by Clement of Alexandria and by Tertullian. The letter was certainly sent to a circle well versed in the Old Testament and acquainted with the rites and terminology of Jewish worship. They had heard the Gospel from the disciples of Jesus; had gone through persecution early, but had not seen a great number of martyrdoms. All these things point to a Jewish community, and furthermore, the community was of such a kind as is difficult to find outside of Jerusalem. This is the traditional view. The Addressees were the whole Hebraeo-Christian community of the Holy City. Recently Bornhäuser has added a plausible but not fully established precision. The author would have had chiefly in mind converts from the ranks of the Levitical Priesthood such as those mentioned in Ac 6:7.

Time and Place.—There is only one exact chronological indication in the letter itself, namely, the fact of Timothy's release, but unfortunately we know nothing about the time or circumstances of such an occurrence.

On the assumption that the letter was addressed to the Judaeo-Christian community of Jerusalem, we can gather from the text other indications which serve to fix an approximate date. The temple and its worship had evidently not ceased. Therefore Heb must be placed before the fateful year A.D. 70. Moreover, there is no indication that the Jewish war had broken out. Seeing that St Paul hoped to see the Hebrews soon, 13:23, he could not have written the letter after the autumn of 66, when the attempt of the Legate Cestius Gallus on Jerusalem had ended hopes of peace. In fact it is difficult to suppose that Heb could have been written after the news of the provocative doings of Gessius Florus had reached Italy in midsummer 66.

Therefore, most probably St Paul wrote before the summer of that year. This is the late extreme. As an earlier extreme—an annus ante quem non—we may place 62. In that year or the following James, the brother of the Lord and Bishop of Jerusalem, was martyred, and some others, also probably Christians, were stoned to death. Trouble developed after the death of James through the ambition of a certain Thebutis, and during the years which followed till the revolt of 66, Jewish nationalism under the patronage of Herod Agrippa II was exceedingly vigorous. Such national enthusiasm would naturally emphasize the cult of the magnificent temple.

The beginning of 63 seems unlikely, for Paul was apparently not a prisoner when he wrote our Epistle. As his eyes were turned to the East, we may suppose that he had finished his intended journey to Spain. Hence he did not write before the year 64, and if the imprisonment of Timothy resulted from the Neronian persecution, the beginning of 65 seems to possess a maximum of probability.

With regard to place, we are in a better position to decide. The 'brethren from Italy' who send greetings, 13:24, are most naturally understood to be Italians and in Italy. Therefore, the letter was written from Italy, perhaps from Rome.

929c Theological Doctrine—The Epistle to the Hebrews is of very great theological importance. So much was this felt in some Egyptian circles that it was placed immediately after Rom. This is the place it holds in the Chester Beatty Papyrus Codex (P⁴⁴) of the early 3rd cent. Its Christological doctrine, in particular, crowns the Christology of St Paul and advances to the very threshold of Johannine heights. In the following brief summary the teaching of our Epistle will be treated under the headings: (a) God and His Salvific Providence; (b) Christology; (c) Soteriology; (d) Human Justification, Sanctification and Salvation; (e) the Holy Spirit; (f) the Church; (g) Eschatology.

(a) God, in the Epistle to the Hebrews, is in the first place 'the living God' of Hebrew religion, the God who was not ashamed to call himself the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob. It is chiefly as the Revealer speaking formerly through the Prophets and last of all through his Son that he pervades the Epistle. When God is mentioned, the first Person of the Blessed Trinity is undoubtedly meant, but he is nowhere called the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ as in other Paulines. In fact, it is only through the citation of two prophetic texts, 1 Kg 7:14 and Ps 2:7, that he directly and indirectly receives his Trinitarian name of Father, which, however, is implied in the name of Son given nine times to Christ. The teaching of the Epistle is undoubtedly Trinitarian, and all the three Persons are actually mentioned in one brief context, where it is said that God bore witness to the doctrine first spoken through the Lord, vouchsafing distributions of the Holy Spirit according to his will, 2:3, 4.

d God is the Creator and End of all things, 2:10. The Creator is specially called 'the Father of spirits' which in the context means 'human souls', 12:9. The paternity of God as the adopting Father of a human family is mentioned not only in the text in which the divine scheme of salvation is outlined, 2:10, but also in the passage where God appears disciplining his children to holiness, 12:5-10.

Of the attributes of God his severe justice is perhaps most prominent, for his punitive wrath appears in the just retribution of disobedience, 2:2, in his punishment of the rebellious generation of the Exodus, 3:16-19, in his severity towards apostates, 6:8, 10:31. His terrific majesty appeared on Sinai, 12:18-21, and he is described as a 'consuming fire', 12:29. But while the note of God's severity is kept up throughout the letter, he also appears as the God 'who does not forget good deeds', 6:10, and as 'the God of peace', 13:20. His goodness is the reason of his severity, for his gifts are so great that contempt of them is an outrage of incalculable magnitude. He wishes 'to bring many children to glory', 2:10, destining them to participate in the happiness of his own Sabbath rest, 4:3-10. In fact, his condescension towards man is astounding. The angels are the ministering helpers of human salvation, 1:14; man through the Incarnation is destined for a glory and honour not granted to those superior spirits, 2:5-16; for man, if he wills, God's throne is a throne of grace, 4:16.

e Man appears in the Epistle as a weak creature needing God's help very much. Sin and death are his sad heritage. But God's scheme of salvation was precisely a scheme to bring strength out of weakness and life out of death. Christ's mortal humanity fitted him to be a Propitiator and a sympathetic High Priest. Next after Rom there is no Epistle which so effectively teaches us, as Heb does, to say that we are sinners and do need the cleansing grace of God. But it insists magnificently on the sinlessness of Jesus. In approaching God, sinners, as our Epistle teaches, can feel that they stand behind a sympathetic Pontiff who attracts them by the cords of fellowship in suffering, and inspires their confidence by his sinlessness and all-sufficient atonement. Besides the 'weakness of flesh and blood' (which is man), there is very little 'anthropology' in Heb—nothing, for instance, like the psychology of Rom 7.

Although there is mention of the holiness of the primitive Patriarchs, Abel and Enoch and Noe, God's plan of salvation is regarded as the realization of the promise made to Abraham. No doubt the Hebrew destination of the letter had some part in determining the prominence given to the great Patriarch, but the salvific Providence of God as conceived by our author is so much centred in the 'seed of Abraham' that the proposition: 'In no wise is it to the help of angels that (Christ) comes, but he comes to the help of Abraham's seed' contains nothing that does not belong to the whole web of this letter.

(b) Christ is the centre of our Epistle, as he is the centre of all Pauline theology. He is the Saviour, spoken of under his saving name of 'Jesus' ten times; he is the Christ or Christ six and three times respectively; the double name Jesus Christ occurs in three very solemn places, 10:10, 13:8, 21. Above all, Jesus is the Son of God. It is Jesus the Son of God who has passed as our great High Priest into heaven, 4:14; to him Melchisedech has been typically assimilated, 7:3; him apostates crucify again, 6:6, and trample under foot, 10:29. The most characteristic usage of the Epistle is that of the anarthrous uios used to qualify the Son as Supreme Revealer, 1:2, as Supreme Ruler of the House of God, 3:6, as exhibiting the contrast of that divine dignity and an obedience learned in the school of suffering, 5:8, as the High Priest established by oath and perfected for ever, 7:28. His Lordship is recognised in the title 'Our Lord' prefixed once to the name Jesus, 13:20; and the titles 'the Lord', 2:3, and 'our Lord', 7:14, also occur unattached. Special titles of the Saviour such as are found in the same precise form nowhere else in the New Testament are: 'Author of salvation, 2:10, Apostle and High Priest of our religion, 3:1, great Priest, 10:21, Author and Finisher of faith, 12:2, and the Great Shepherd of the Sheep', 13:20.

In fixing the plenary divine sense of the appellation 'Son of God' and in presenting Christ as true God and true man our Epistle stands excelled only by the Johannine writings. The Son is a distinct divine Person through whom the Almighty created the world. 'Light of Light, and Imprint of the Divine Substance', he is a distinct but consubstantial Person proceeding by generation from the Father, 1:3, 5. He is the omnipotent sustainer of the universe, 1:3. His supereminence over the angels belongs essentially to his Godhead, though its manifestation in the sacred humanity belongs to the exaltation of that humanity. Similarly his universal heirship is derived from his Sonship, though actualized in his glorification.

The Incarnation is set forth in an extraordinarily rich and specifically sacerdotal manner. If the Son were not Man, he would not be a priest. Just as in Ps 109, which in a true sense is the greatest OT fountain of our Epistle, priesthood is inseparably bound up with the Messianic kingship. However, it is a Psalm of man's destined grandeur as Sovereign of creation and of the infra-angelic littleness of his mortality that is used to show the Priest-Victim in whom Manhood attains its unlimited kingship over the universe. Man who had lost immortality by disobedience had to attain the predestined glory of his adoptive sonship by treading the way of painful obedience. Hence 'the grace of God' was that the Man who recapitulates humanity 'should taste death for all', 2:9. As the Author of human salvation the Son, according to a plan of solidarity with our condition, was to attain his own glory, the perfection of his Saviourship and the sympathy of his priestly quality by undergoing sufferings and death. He could not, of course, give up his natural Sonship and become an adopted Son, but he could and did become the brother of those called by God into participation in his Sonship. In the Incarnation he finds fellowship of flesh and blood with men, makes his own their attitude of filial creature-confidence towards God, and submits to all the physical debt of human guilt, even to death. Thus the devil's empire of death was broken and the black slavery of mortality undone. Man was weak, and the Saviour became weak; man was subject to pain, and the Saviour submitted to pain; man was liable to mental anguish, and the Saviour experienced anguish. By the Incarnation therefore he bound himself to us in a full programme of sympathy. The knowledge that he sinlessly experienced all the painful trials of sinful flesh gives sinners every confidence in this faithful High Priest.

One who has meditated Heb 2:5-18 will be in possession of the main points of its teaching on the humanity of Christ. We learn elsewhere of his prayer, 5:7, that he endured the cross and its shame and suffered contradictions from sinners, 12:2, 3. Opprobrium was his lot, 13:13; cf. 11:26. He shed his blood, 9:12, was numbered amongst the dead, and was raised from death, 13:20. He passed through the heavens, 4:14 f., and sat down at God's right hand, 1:3. He shall come again to gather his own to final salvation, 9:28. Furthermore, such circumstantial details are mentioned as his descent from Abraham, 2:16, and from the tribe of Juda, 7:14. He preached just over a generation before the Epistle was written, 2:3. His crucifixion was a public spectacle, 6:6, which took place outside the gate of Jerusalem, 13:12. There is no mention either of his manifestation of himself after the resurrection or of his visible ascension into heaven.

(c) The Soteriology of Heb is the very core of its sacerdotal theology. Actually, apart from the use of the name Jesus, Christ is nowhere called Saviour, but he is represented as having brought salvation and proclaimed it, 2:3; he is the appointed Author of human salvation, 2:10, the Cause of eternal salvation for all who obey him, 5:9, and the final Giver of salvation at his second coming, 9:28. His work, conceived in its sacerdotal aspect, is essentially that of saving the people from their sins. He made a cleansing of sins, 1:3, and established a covenant whose special fruit is the remission of sin in the interior domain of conscience, 8:12; 9:14; 10:18. The remission accorded is a positive renewal of the human soul, for Christ is the sanctifier, 2:11. Sin is destroyed even in its most terrible consequence, for Christ's work ends the empire of death by which the devil held men in the servitude of hopeless fear, 2:14, 15. There is no such fullness regarding the causal mode of the salvific work as we find in Rom and other Paulines. However, the meritoriousness of Christ's death is implied in his obedience, 5:8; 10:9, and its value as redemption or ransom is explicitly mentioned twice, 9:12, 15. Our Epistle concentrates on the sacrificial character of Christ's death, and his blood is regarded as sprinkled to cleanse, rather than shed to purchase. This ritual point of view, however, does not exclude the juridical concept, for Christ's sacrifice effects an expiatory propitiation, 2:17, and releases men from a servitude, 2:15. At the same time it is true that the sacerdotal conception of salvation, precisely because it is worked out liturgically in relation to the high-priestly ministry of Expiation Day, is notably, though not fundamentally, different from the soteriological elements found in other Paulines. In all the Pauline writings, the death and glorification of Christ puts salvation within the reach of mankind, but whereas the author of the Epistles to the Gentile Churches emphasizes the resurrection of Christ, the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews emphasizes the Saviour's Teleleusis as an entry into the heavenly sanctuary. In other words, St Paul in the other epistles fixes his gaze more particularly on the first moment of the Saviour's 'perfection' or glorification, while in Heb he fixes it on the last. Nevertheless he has shown explicitly in one place, 13:20, that the resurrection is no more extraneous to his soteriology here than the session at the right hand of the Father is to the soteriology of Rom and the Captivity Letters. In Eph and Col the 'Christ above' does become exceedingly important because of his headship of the mystical body. This is an approach to the thought of Heb, though not to be identified with its characteristically sacerdotal outlook. Such a professedly sacerdotal soteriology is certainly a signal addition to the Pauline theology. It can only be outlined very briefly here.

It is, of course, theologically certain that the hypostatic union was a sacerdotal anointing, but it may be doubted whether our author regarded the words: Thou art my Son, as a specific call to priesthood. That call or vocation is, however, certainly conveyed by the great sacerdotal Psalm-oracle: 'Thou art a Priest for ever according to the order of Melchisedech', Ps 109:4; Heb 5:6. The justice and peace that belong to Melchisedech's name and title, his unlimited life and freedom from fleshly limitations, the superiority he exercises over Abraham by tithing and blessing him, are all supremely fulfilled in Christ. The qualities of Christ the Priest were such that he needed nothing but to do his priestly work and have it crowned with perfection, so that the beneficiaries of his Priesthood might recognize that they have as High Priest 'a Son perfected for ever', 7:28.

The priestly work of Christ is in terms of the liturgy of Expiation Day. He offered sacrifice for the sins of the people, 7:27; by the sprinkling of his sacrificial blood he cleanses our conscience from dead works, to serve the living God, 9:14; his one sacrifice was so efficacious that nothing remains except to gather finally those who expect salvation from him, 9:28; it is as limitless as the human generations for whom it is intended, for 'by one oblation he has perfected for ever those who are undergoing sanctification', 10:12-14.

His sacrifice was a work of obedience to the will of God decreeing that we should be sanctified by the offering of the body of Christ once for all, 10:10. The main points in this regime of sanctification are that it belongs to a sphere which is not merely terrestrial; it realizes a Covenant which is primarily one of interior enlightenment together with real remission of sin within the human conscience; it supplants the inefficacious sacrificial system of the Old Covenant. The fact that Christ the testator died to establish the New Covenant gives the Covenant itself a testamentary character, 9:15-17. In reading the highly liturgical presentation of all these truths, it is necessary to remember that everything is dependent on the mystery of the Cross. It is in his blood that Christ attains his 'perfection', entering the Holy of Holies; it is in his blood that we have remission of sins; it is in his blood that we have confidence regarding the efficacy of the entrance-way provided for us into the heavenly sanctuary; in approaching him we approach the Mediator of the New Covenant and a blood of sprinkling that speaks better than Abel; it is by his blood that he sanctifies the people. But Christ shed his blood once for all; we must beware of taking the Epistle to mean that he performs a sacrificial liturgy in heaven. Other details will be found in the commentary.

(d) Subjective salvation which is individual justification and sanctification occupies a minor place in Heb. As St Thomas Aquinas noted, 'the excellence of Christ is the theme of this Epistle', and consequently his Person and his work in their objective greatness is what chiefly matters. The scattered elements of the Epistle's psychological soteriology can, however, be gathered and systematized.

Christ's sacrifice established a 'better' Covenant between God and mankind. Its Mediator was solemnly appointed by a sworn oracle, 7:22. To that superior solemnity belongs a superior efficacy. It was not in the power of the Old Covenant to bring about a spiritual approach of the soul to God; but in the better hope now introduced we really do draw near to him, 7:19. The effects of the Mosaic Dispensation were external and its promises temporal; the effects of the New Dispensation are internal and its promises eternal. The New Covenant is, however, not an ordinance of divine unilateral graciousness. In purifying the conscience, it obliges or binds the conscience. In other words, the grace of God requires co-operation. Christ is the cause of salvation for those who obey him, 5:9.

981a His gift is interior light, and interior remission, and devotion to God's law—all characteristics of the New Covenant in the Jeremian oracle. Those who obey him enter the ranks of the many sons whom God will bring to glory, 2:10. They are called partakers of a heavenly vocation, 3:1, partakers of Christ, 3:14, partakers of the Holy Ghost, 6:4. This life of participation with Christ and with the Holy Spirit gives a very strong confidence which is called the 'boast of hope', 3:6. But hope supposes faith, and must not be separated from charity, and actually the great triad of virtues is mentioned twice, 6:9-12; 10:19-25. Divine life must be strengthened by grace not Jewish meats, 13:10, and all must 'pursue holiness without which no one can see the Lord', 12:14. We thus come to the truth that the life in question is really the effect of grace—obviously what theologians call habitual grace. Those who totally fall away from Christian life 'outrage the Spirit of grace', 10:29, and those who neglect their salvation 'fall short of the grace of God', 12:15. In the sentence: 'Let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably (well-pleasingly) with reverence and godly fear', 12:28, grace must be an interior endowment of the soul. Actual grace is also mentioned, for what else can grace for seasonable aid be? 4:16.

b How does this life originate? Supernaturally of course, for nothing is greater than its own cause. When we observe that the state of friendship with God is expressed in Heb by the two verbs προσέρχεται (to approach) and εὐαρεστήσαι (to please), we can see that the beginning of Christian life must be the act of faith, because 'without faith it is impossible to please, for he who approaches God must believe that he exists, and that for those who seek him, he is a remunerator', 11:6.

The Council of Trent (VI, 8) uses this text in defining the Catholic doctrine that 'faith is the beginning of human salvation, the foundation and root of all justification'. Faith in our Epistle occupies a place not at all below that of Rom, but the special character of Heb is the reason why faith appears so much dyed in the colours of hope. The promises are chiefly its object. Charity in Heb retains its Pauline queenship. It is something that God does not forget, 6:10, and on which he particularly smiles, 13:16. The moral virtues recommended must be noted in the text and commentary. Final salvation is attained after death in the vision of God. The heroes of the Great Martyrology, 11, have had to wait for it, but now possess it together with those Christians who have trodden the way of faith. With these they form the company of 'spirits of the just made perfect', 12:23. The final resurrection is an article of the elementary Catechesis of 6:1-2, and some of the heroes of faith are declared not to have accepted deliverance from death 'that they might obtain a better resurrection', 11:35, but in the thesis proper of our Epistle it is only the gathering of the elect with Christ that is mentioned as the final act of human salvation, 9:28.

c (e) The Epistle's teaching on the Holy Ghost can be dealt with very briefly. He is called 'the Spirit of grace' as being the Giver of grace, and is a Person whom apostasy outrages, 10:29. That he is the third Person of the Blessed Trinity may be lawfully inferred from 2:3-4. He is called the Holy Spirit and the eternal Spirit, 2:4, etc.; 9:14. There is no clear assertion of the appropriation of the Incarnation to the operation of the Holy Ghost, and the same is true of the other Paulines. In the seven relevant texts of our Epistle four functions are attributed to the Spirit: (1) the inspiration of Scriptures, (2) the sanctification of Christ's soul, (3) the distribution of charismata, and (4) the sanctification of the faithful.

Twice words of David, Ps 94, and once words of Jeremias, 31:33, are set down as words of the Holy Ghost. Similarly, he is the designer of the typological arrangements of Israelite worship, 9:8; Christ offered his sacrifice through the eternal Spirit, 9:14; God has confirmed the Gospel delivered by his Son through the distributions made by the Holy Ghost, 2:4; and the faithful are not only partakers of Christ, but partakers of the Holy Spirit, 6:4. Those who dishonour the blood of the Covenant in which they were sanctified also insult the Holy Spirit, 10:29. Compare St Paul's: 'Do not sadden the Holy Spirit of God in whom you were sealed for the day of redemption', Eph 4:30. Briefly, then, the Holy Ghost inspired the written word which proclaims Christ, sanctified the soul of Christ and co-operated in his work, confirm Christ's spoken word, and sanctifies Christ's faithful.

(f) When closely examined Heb reveals an important ecclesiology. In the first place there is every indication that the New Regime—'the world to come' of which Christ is the sovereign administrator, 2:5—is no less organic than the Old. In fact the House in which Moses ministered is replaced by the House over which the Son has been placed, and 'his house we are', 3:6. We have a common heavenly calling, 3:1, recognize the same Lord, Apostle and Pontiff, and hold the same Confession of faith, 3:2. It is, however, not a matter of individual adhesion to Christ. The bond of brotherhood and the unity of aspiration towards the heavenly rest must be socially maintained. The faithful must consider each other in order to stir up charity and good works, 10:24, and aloofness from the community is to be avoided, 10:25. Obedience to superiors is a sacred duty, 13:17. In the last chapter hegoumenoi (superiors or prelates) are mentioned no less than three times.

It is true that the House of God also figures as a city and a kingdom and that in this two-fold imagery emphasis is on the future. We seek the city which is to come, 13:14, and we receive an unshakable kingdom, 12:28. But from the Epistle's point of view on the mountains of Israel, the future city and the unshakable kingdom is also the Church of the present time. Our fellowship with heaven is a fellowship realized in good measure here on earth. This is shown especially in the contrast between the Hebrew Sinai and the Christian Sion, 12:22-24. The Christian Sion is 'both here and beyond'. If the myriads of angels—a festive assembly—and God the Judge of all, and the spirits of just men made perfect belong especially to the heavenly consummation, on the other hand, Mount Sion and the City of the Living God and the Celestial Jerusalem can designate the whole Church; while the approach to an assembly of firstborn enrolled in heaven and to the Mediator of a New Covenant and to a blood of sprinkling which speaks better than Abel's refers without ambiguity to those who are still on the way to the final attainment of the promises.

(g) Of the Pauline Epistles Heb could claim to be the one—not even excepting the specially eschatological letters to the Thessalonians—which sets our face most steadily and continually towards the heavenly city. The expectation of the Old Testament is perfected in the aspiration of the New, for Christ at the right hand of God is the goal of our religiosis, and our confident hope is that we shall enter the Sanctuary in the blood of Jesus, 10:19. The presentation of eternal happiness as a sabbatic rest, 4:9, is only very slightly paralleled in the Paulines (2 Thess 1:7—ἀνεως, Vg requies), but figures in the second (or third) beatitude and, with still closer approximation to the language of Heb, is proclaimed by a voice from heaven in Apoc 14:13. There is great coherence in the way the pilgrim conception of life pervades our Epistle. The Gospel remains an εὐαγγέλιον or 'promise' and the writer goes back to the old tabernacle of Israel's wanderings for the prefigurative material of his exposition of Christ's work. The movement out of the camp of Judaism towards the lasting city, 13:13, does not end in the Church Militant, and the unshakable kingdom which we receive, 12:28, is not so much the Messianic era of time as the Messianic stability of unchanging eternity.

The 'last things' in our Epistle may be summed up as follows: The pilgrimage of human life ends with 932d death, 9:27. Death is followed by judgement—whether particular or general being left undetermined, although the context favours the latter, 9:27. Judgement here and hereafter is made by the searching light of God's word, 4:12, 13, and the final sentence is eternal, 6:2. In order of time this final discernment is preceded by the coming of Christ, who however does not appear as a Judge but a Saviour, 9:28. Judgement is attributed to God, 10:30; 12:23. The wrath of fire, 10:27, or eternal rest, 4:11, stand at the end of the way. The prophetic and Pauline conception of the great final 'day' is not absent, 10:25, and perhaps the end of Jerusalem is here included in this expression as in our Lord's eschatological discourse.

It seems that the accompaniments of Christ's coming are touched upon in the citation, 1:6, that invites all the angels to adore him. A word from the Prophet Aggeus (2:6) tells of 'a movement of heaven and earth' which is to usher in an unchanging kingdom, 12:28. The final consummation shall, according to our author, set all things in subjection to Christ, 2:8, and make his enemies the footstool of his feet, 10:13.

COMMENTARY

933a Prologue I 1-4—The absence of the writer's name, of personal greeting to the addressees, of any specific epistolary exordium are things which have attracted attention from early times. Reasons suggested for the omission of Paul's name are: reverence for Christ the Apostle of the Hebrews, Paul's consciousness that he himself was the special Apostle of the Gentiles, unwillingness to antagonize Hebrews by setting the name of an 'anti-legalist' at the head of the letter, consideration of the position of the Mother Church at Jerusalem. The omission of the writer's name almost necessarily entailed absence of greeting and of such compliments or good wishes as were usual in Pauline epistles. Moreover, although a letter, this writing—subsequently to be described as 'a word of exhortation', 13:22—comes close to the form of a homily. A NT parallel is found in the abrupt beginning of 1 Jn, and many similar examples occur in the papyrus letters of the 1st and 2nd cent., and still more abundantly in the 4th.

Since the central theme of Heb is the superiority of the New Dispensation over the Old, the whole matter is majestically summarized in a preface full of stately grandeur. We should note the weighty dignity of its thoughts, its very remarkable stylistic balance, and the special graces of paronomasia and rhythm. It is, as it were, a nutshell presentation of what is to follow, set in terms of the greatness of Christ. A seven-point portrait of the Incarnate Son very skilfully glides, 4, into the special statement of his superiority over the Angel administrators of the Sinaitic Covenant.

b 1-2a The Two Revelations—'God speaking' is the central idea, the past being contrasted with the present under three aspects. A progressive series of (1) piecemeal and modally diversified revelations, (2) spoken to the Hebrew fathers, (3) through the prophets, has given place (1) in this definitive age, to a revelation (2) spoken to us, (3) through ONE who is SON. The Vg actually gives fuller balance than is usually ascribed to the Greek words by making 'last of all' the counterpart of 'at sundry times and in divers manners', while the phrase: 'in these days' balances 'in times past'. The 'divers manners' probably refers to different modes of communication: oracles spoken to the ear, mental illuminations, visions received through the internal or external senses, and not so much to the formal distinctions of prophecy, instruction, commination, legislation, etc. Note, however, that one and the same God speaks in the Old and the New Age.

c 2b-3 The Characteristics of the Son—This Epistle uses the word SON without the article almost as a proper name of Christ, cf. 3:6; 5:8; 7:28. In the septenary list of his descriptives (numbering them by the letters a-g) the distribution of these descriptives between the divine pre-existent Person and him incarnate is as singularly skilful as the arrangement is remarkable. The first two descriptives (a, b) form a pair referring respectively to Christ's Manhood and his Godhead; the third and fourth (c, d) form another pair describing, in metaphors of light and image, his divine personality, and to this double description the Greek 'adjunctive' particle τε closely annexes the prerogative of universal and omnipotent Conservatorship (e). This last of a 'divine four' (b-e) corresponds to the first, namely, to the Creatorship which has figured as the first predicate of his divinity (b). The basic heirship of the hypostatic union (a) is then supplemented by reference to the work of redemption (f)—here called 'a cleansing' in forecast of future sacerdotal developments—and lastly by the crowning glorification of enthronement in heaven (g). Thus the Incarnation, announced with fourfold emphasis on the Godhead of the Son, is completed by the Passion and Glorification of the Man Christ, cf. Phil 2:5-11.

(a) To be 'appointed heir of all things' connotes d sonship and denotes that the one appointed is man. Heirship includes no notion of succession, but only the assured possession promised in Ps 2:8. It belongs to sonship, Gal 4:7; Mt 21:38, and therefore follows from the hypostatic union. In the divine economy of redemption, however, the actual exercise of 'all power in heaven and earth' belongs to the 'Christ enthroned'.

(b) 'By whom he made the world': since the act of creation is incommunicably divine, there can be no question of instrumental agency. As in Jn 1:3, 'by' or 'through' only signifies that the one divine power is exercised by the Father, who has it unoriginate, and by the Son who receives it with the divine nature from the Father. The world (in Greek αἰῶνες) is either the successive ages of time and the things that exist in them, or more probably (cf. 11:3) the whole universe of created things.

(c) The Son is 'the brightness of' the Father's 'glory'. The Gk present participle is significant after the two aorists: 'whom he "appointed" . . . through whom he "made" . . . who being the Radiance'. The term ἀπαύρασμα is, no doubt, borrowed from the one OT passage in which it occurs, Wis 7:26. There Divine Wisdom figures as 'the radiance of light, the mirror of activity, the image of goodness'. This association of radiance with mirror and image, joined to the fact that the ending -μα denotes a result rather than an action, goes to show that the ἀπαύρασμα is not merely brightness-adherent but brightness issuing and having issued, in other words, radiance or effulgence reflected as an image of the luminous fountain. Since 'glory' means the divine nature in the perfection that manifests itself, 'radiance of his glory' is equivalent to the lumen de lumine of our Nicene Creed.

(d) The radiation metaphor might seem to fall short e in signifying distinction of person; therefore it is supplemented by the description: 'figure of his substance'. Again the Gk χαρακτήρ is more expressive than 'figure'. It means an imprinted, ingraven image expressly reproducing the traits of that from which it is made. A statue which was the likeness of its prototype is described in a Gk inscription of Antiochus I of Commagene as χαρακτήρ μορφῆς ἐμῆς, but the stamp of a seal or signet is the most obvious source of the metaphor—the express reproduction of an impress. An image (cf. 2 Cor 4:4; Col 1:15) which thus originates from and expresses the divine substance, nature, or essence, must be consubstantial, so that the homoousios emerges very distinctly from the combined descriptions of 'radiance' and 'express image'. That there is question of the pre-existent Christ is evident from the close connexion with the following present participial phrase:

(e) 'Upholding (carrying) all things by the word of his power': the universe is at the order of his imperial will. The Son is, therefore, the Conservator of creation ('all things', 2:8, 10) the universal, all-provident, all-sustaining Governor. Col. 1:15-17 should be read.

933e The passage combines with this to form a splendid Christological diptych.

(f) The expiatory work of Christ is briefly summed up as a 'cleansing of sins', in anticipation of the 'liturgical' section of the Epistle, 8:1-10:18.

(g) The triumphantly enthroned Christ crowns the septenary. The elevation of the Priest to the place of honour beside the throne of God's 'Majesty on high', that is, in heaven, is a keynote of this sacerdotal epistle, cf. 6:1; 10:18; 12:8. The thought is simply that of Ps 109, as solemnly interpreted by Christ himself, Mt 22:44; 26:64.

1 4 Statement of Christ's Superiority over Angels—It is to the elevation of Christ 'in the glory which was his before the world was' that his superiority above the Angel ministers of Mosaic revelation is attached. Hence the participle γεγόμενος: 'having been made'. The distance of his superiority is seen in 'the better name' which he 'has inherited', for he is now established in possession of the glory of his Sonship, cf. Phil 2:11, where 'the name' is not Son but Kyrios, that is, Yahweh—with no real difference of sense, however.

934a 5-14 Scriptural Proofs—It is important to remember that the Apostle does not intend to prove that Christ is the Son of God and very God. That is supposed as a basic dogma. He simply wishes to give to the dignity of divine Sonship the weight of biblical texts, so as to show its immense superiority over the dignity of angelic ministers. The application is not equally compelling in the case of every citation, but the whole series is an imposing array. The Apostle chooses seven passages, beginning with an oracle from the Psalm of Christ's sovereign heirship or kingship and ending with the Psalm of his exaltation in glory. Therefore, as in the series of descriptives above, the two poles are Incarnation and Glorification. Only the middle text, that is, the fourth, is concerned exclusively with angels. The following remarks will sufficiently illustrate the series. 5. The first citation (never addressed to any angel) is from Ps 2:7—a directly Messianic prophecy of Christ's kingship founded on his divine filiation. 'My Son', as determined by the words 'I have begotten Thee', is an address never used by God in the singular number to any single individual except Christ. That reservation is important, for angels are called 'sons of God' in the plural, Job 1:7; 2:1; Pss 28:1; 88:7; the collective Israel is called God's first-born, Ex 4:22; and Israelites as a body are called sons in the plural number, Deut 32:19. The metaphorical sense is thus kept distinct from the proper sense of divine filiation and generation. 'To-day' is understood of the day of the Incarnation or any undetermined subsequent particular day. The 'begetting' is real not adoptive, and the Gk perfect of LXX well expresses its perfect and permanent reality.

The second text literally refers to Solomon, but typically to Christ, for whom 'the throne of David his father' is ultimately destined, and who is also God's Son in the plenary sense of the term. 6. Whether the second 'again' merely serves to introduce a third citation or should be attached to the verb is doubtful. The adversative particle δέ at the head of the sentence seems to favour the latter view. The provenance of the text is also doubtful. In verbal form it is nearest to Deut 32:43 (LXX)—a known source of Pauline citation, Rom 15:10—but the claims of Ps 96:7 are strong, although the LXX rendering 'angels' covers 'Elohim', considered by some to mean pagan divinities. Whichever may be its source, the text literally refers to a judgement Theophany and may apply typically to the Son to whom 'the Father has given all judgement'. The second coming of Christ seems to be what is in the Apostle's mind, cf. 9:28. The Son is called πρωτότοκος rather in the human sense of Rom 8:29 and Col 1:18 than in the divine pre-existent sense of Col 1:15. He receives the adoration of Angels (Elohim in Ps 96:7, Heb). 7. The fourth—the sole text referring exclusively to the Angels—is from Ps 103:4. There seems no doubt that St Paul and the LXX read 'spirits' or

'winds' as a predicate of the verbal object 'Angels'. 934 So did the Targum of the Psalms. Syntactic probability would seem to require this translation, but the context of the Psalm strophe is naturally taken to demand the rendering 'Who makes the winds his angels', a sense which nearly all modern scholars support. In this case, the Apostle's argument could stand, but is less natural. However, in spite of the apparent Psalm context, the possibility of a sudden transition from elemental forces to angels is really not unnatural in a Hebrew poet, and there is a fair parallel in Ps 17:10. We have to reckon very often with rapid changes in the psychological context of oriental poetry. 8. The Apostle then contrasts the Son with those ministering spirits. The contrasting text is supplied by the nuptial Psalm of a royal Prince who is certainly the Messias and most probably the Messias directly and exclusively. It seems that an historical royal wedding cannot have been more than the occasion of the Psalm. The royalty of the Prince is in the forefront, but he is also actually addressed as God: 'Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever', Ps 44:7. 10-12. To this divine Person is also applied a Psalm text which addresses Yahweh Himself, the Almighty Restorer of Sion. Cited from LXX, Ps 101:26-28, with two unimportant variations, the text strongly pictures the eternal unchangeableness of God. 13. Lastly, in a quotation introduced interrogatively, like the first, and with the perfect tense of the verb 'to say' the Son is shown enthroned 'at the right hand of majesty on high', and the final word is said on the inferiority of Angels: 'Are they not all ministering spirits sent to minister on behalf of them who shall receive the inheritance of salvation?' The angels are essentially servants, at the order of God, 'public ministers' deputed to particular 'service' on behalf of those on the way of salvation, and thus, in a sense, 'servants of servants'. The doctrine of Guardian Angels in general is implied in this text, but not necessarily the doctrine of a single Guardian Angel for each single Christian. That is a precision derived from other sources.

2:1-4 Exhortation to Steadfastness—Being 'a word of exhortation', Heb mixes admonition very continuously with dogmatic considerations. These warning are all directed against the danger of apostasy, 2:1-4; 3:7-4:13; 5:11-6:20; also the long final exhortation, 10:19-12:29. Here, with the usual joining skill of the writer, the exhortation is attached to the word 'salvation', 1:14, and rests on the incomparable superiority of Christ over the Angels.

1. The first sentence is somewhat weakened in Vg. Render: 'Therefore it is necessary that we pay a greater surplus of attention to the things heard (the truths once delivered), lest perhaps we should miss the port (of salvation)'. A final catastrophe is what is to be feared.

2-3. The sanctions of the Old Law, which was promulgated by angels (cf. Ac 7:53; Gal 3:19) showed how strongly God willed it ratified against transgression and disobedience; a fortiori 'how shall we' escape, if we neglect so great a salvation?, cf. 1 Cor 10:1-11. Its imperative firmness is the very greatest, having been first spoken (by God, as in the whole Epistle) through the Lord, having been delivered with irrefutable authority by witnesses who had heard Christ, having been authenticated (4) by signs (wrought expressly for proof), by prodigies astounding, by various showings of power, and by charismatic distributions of the Holy Spirit according to God's will. St Paul says: 'confirmed unto us by them that heard', either by enallage (the first person plural so often used by a preacher identifying himself with his audience), or because he refers to the earthly ministry of Christ. This sentence does not exclude Pauline authorship, and in fact it occurs in a short paragraph which, in spite of five unique expressions, is overwhelmingly Pauline in thought and language. It splendidly illustrates the fallaciousness of verbal statistics.

5-18 Christ Head of the Messianic Regime—This section asserts the Messianic sovereignty of Christ, 5-9, and show how the Incarnation and Passion belong to its divinely ordered fitness, 10-18. 5-9. The Messianic kingdom, as being the kingdom of heaven, having its final phase beyond this world, is called 'the world to come'—the rabbinical 'ôlām habbā'. God did not subject it to Angels but to man, or more exactly to 'a Man'. This is shown from a Scripture text introduced in a special way. In the seven texts of ch 1 God spoke; here the formula is: 'Someone, as you know, in a certain place gave solemn testimony, saying: What is man, etc.'. Only once in this whole Epistle, 4:7, is a biblical quotation given under the name of its human author. This peculiarity has been represented as un-Pauline, but it would be natural enough in a letter to Hebrews, whose rabbis often used this method of indefinite quoting, the same being also followed by the Hellenistic Jew, Philo of Alexandria.

6-8. Ps 8 is a canticle of the greatness of God and of the littleness and greatness of man. In the three verses cited (5-7 with the omission, in the critical Greek text, of the stichos 7a) three ideas are marked for emphasis: (1) man's diminution, so as to be something short of angels, (2) his exaltation to glory and honour, (3) the subjection of all things to him. The key to St Paul's use of the Psalm here, as in 1 Cor 15:27, and Eph 1:22, is its Messianic character. Applied to mankind in general the Psalm has a certain universality of meaning founded on the universal sovereignty indicated in Gen 1:27, but the absoluteness of the sovereignty it describes belongs to the Messiah. The Psalmist sees man's inferiority to Angels (Heb. Elôhim 'divine dignitaries' rather than 'God') in his mortality. 8. But that same mortality in the Messiah is the cause of man's exaltation to glory and honour—a glory and honour only partially realized in man's present lordship over creation, but entirely realized in the glorified Christ, although the sovereignty to which it belongs has not yet actually extended itself to 'everything'. The temporal sense of 'a little' (i.e. 'a little while') is tempting, but is foreign to the psalm and not really postulated by the connexion of St Paul's thought. 9. The glory of Christ, which is the reward for 'the suffering of death', manifests the gracious intention of God that he should die for each and every one. It is insinuated here but not asserted, as in 1 Cor 15:26, 27, that the destruction of death will complete the full sovereignty of Christ.

10-18 Congruity of the Passion—Man's mortality—here marked as his infra-angelic condition—is in actual historical fact a penal appendage of the guilt of sin. Hence the fitness of an expiation by way of suffering and death. 10. Not necessity nor moral obligation but the beauty of an harmonious fitness drew God, the final and efficient Cause of all things, to choose this means to an end fixed by his goodness. The end was that of 'bringing many sons to glory'. The Gk participle ἀγαγόντα translated 'who had brought' does not mark priority of time over the principal verb, and therefore the interpretation 'qui adduxerat = qui adducendos praeordinaverat' is not necessary. The whole verse should be translated: 'It befitted him, for whom are all things and by whom are all things, because he set himself to bring many sons to glory—it befitted him to perfect the Author of their salvation through sufferings'. The prepositional description of God (for whom—by whom) is very Pauline, cf. Rom 11:26; 1 Cor 8:6; Col 1:16, 20. In 'bringing many'—an indefinitely great number—as sons to the glory of his bliss, he fittingly chose to bring the Author of their salvation to the goal (τελειῶσαι) by the way of sufferings. 'Leader of their salvation' would harmonize with the idea of God 'leading or bringing', but 'Author' is favoured by Heb 5:9; 12:2. The concept in the verb τελειῶν, namely, 'to perfect, consummate, bring to final attainment' is very characteristic of this Epistle; cf. for verb, 5:9; 7:19, 28; 9:9; 10:1, 14, 11:40; 12:23—for abstract noun τελειότης 6:1—for verbal noun τελειῶν 7:11—for nomen agentis τελειωτής 12:2. Really the notion of 'consummation' sums up the whole theology of the better revelation and the better priesthood and the better covenant and the better sacrifice, and these sum up Hebrews. 11. The reason of this brotherhood in pain is found in the principle of family solidarity. SON and sons—Sanctifier and sanctified—claim, at least analogically, one heavenly father, 'the One from whom they are' being God and not Adam (following Chrysostom, Theodoret, Aquinas, Westcott, Vitti against Estius, à Lapide, Bisping, Médebielle). This divine family association is fittingly joined to human association. 12-13. That Christ calls men his brethren is emphasized by citing three texts, Ps 21:23; Is 8:17b, 18a. The first places the Messias amongst his brethren, the second in the human fellowship of confidence towards God, the third sets him at the head of a family group of which Isaiahs and his two sons are types. In the last text for 'children' read 'brethren'. 14-15. Such solidarity was the reason that the Son shared human weakness ('blood and flesh' being the Gk order of words here), through which (a) he broke the empire of death, (b) delivered men from sin, (c) fitted himself with sacerdotal sympathy.

14-15. (a) He became mortal, in order that by dying he might destroy the power of the Prince of death, namely, the devil, who caused man's spiritual death and corporal death, Gen 3:15; Wis 2:24, and wished to bring him to eternal death. Hence the freedom from the slavery of fear gained by those who now say: 'For me to live is Christ and to die is gain', Phil. 1:21.

16-17. (b) Christ did not come to help immortal angels but mortal men—and firstly the race of Abraham to which he belonged and to which the divine promises were made. Note this probable indication that the letter is addressed to Hebrews. The verb rendered 'take hold' and sometimes unduly pressed to mean 'taking the nature of men and not of angels', simply signifies 'to help'. As helper of mortals, he had to resemble his brethren in every possible way (in all things) so as to become merciful by partnership in misery, and so as to be a faithful High Priest towards God—joined at once to the miserable and to the Merciful—so as to expiate the sins of the people. The title of 'Priest' is first given to Christ here, 2:17. All the changes of a rich sacerdotal theology shall be rung on it in the subsequent chapters (except 11 and 12).

18. (c) Experience of suffering and of trial is the best school of compassion. Knowing pain and trial, Christ is a competent Helper for those who are being tried. Compare the words of Virgil's Sidonian Dido: 'Non ignara mali miseris succurrere disco', Aen I, 630.

III 1-IV 13 Christ's Superiority over Moses—Again, a transition is effected with admirable naturalness and skill, the comparison with Moses being grafted on the word 'faithful', 2:17, and subsequent comparison with Aaron being distantly prepared by setting the two titles: 'Apostle' (like Moses) and 'High Priest' (like Aaron) side by side as belonging to Jesus. The superiority of Christ over Moses was a tremendous truth for a Hebrew circle and is here made the basis of a very long exhortation, 3:7-4:13.

III 1-6 Christ and Moses—1. 'Holy brethren' is singularly honorific and only very doubtfully paralleled in 1 Thess 5:27. 'Brethren' is really a title derived from the efficacious call given from the Father in heaven and leading to heaven. The Hebrews are asked to consider the 'Legate' who called, and the 'High Priest' who sanctified, namely, Jesus. 2. His fidelity likens him to Moses as eulogised by God in Num 12:7; but the circumstances of that fidelity set him immeasurably above Moses. 3-5. As Man, Jesus was faithful to his Maker 'in the whole house' or people of God. The points of Christ's superiority are: (1) He himself 'made' the house of Israel, since he is God; (2) Moses was faithful in that house as an honourable servant (θεράπων) to speak things as they were to be said in God's name (τῶν λαληθησομένων), but Christ stands as SON (without the article) 'over' (not 'in') his own house. 6. This statement leads to the long exhortation; for Christ's house we are, provided we keep to the end our 'bold confidence and the boast of our hope'—very 935d Pauline expressions (the second exclusively Pauline) for the assurance of the theological virtue of hope.

e III 7-IV 13 Exhortation to Fidelity—Under Moses an unfaithful generation was fearfully punished by exclusion from the temporal rest of Chanaan; much more must Christians fear the apostasy which would exclude them from eternal rest. 7-9. This is the substance of the solemn commination extracted from the two warning strophes of the invitatory Psalm, Ps 94. Its words are referred to the Holy Spirit, the Author of Scripture. It is cited, 94:8-11, from LXX, with its etymological renderings of the local names Meribah (quarrel) and Massah (temptation). The constantly recurring waywardness of Hebrew hearts in the desert consisted in doubting that the all-provident God was with them. They sulked when God seemed to leave them in the lurch, and they demanded tests of his fidelity and power. 10. Almost every day they forgot the miracles of yesterday. St Paul heightens the picture of Hebrew rebellion by making the forty years a constant repetition of Meribah and Massah, 'where your fathers tempted me, proved and saw my works forty years'. Here he inserts a 'for which cause' to show that God was just in his anger and in his decree to exclude the rebellious generation from Chanaan. There is no falsification of the text and no departure from historical truth. 11. 'If they shall enter' means: 'They shall not enter'—an elliptic form of oath: '(May I cease to be God) if they shall enter'. The rest or repose of Chanaan is typical (cf. 3rd, otherwise 2nd, beatitude)—a figure of eternal rest. The application here presents close affinities with 1 Cor 10:1-13, but we must not commit the exaggeration of asserting that every one of the generation of the Exodus was eternally lost!

f 12-15. The admonition of the Psalmist applies to later generations of Israelites and to Christians as well. It is a warning against badness of heart consisting in unbelief and reaching the point of departure from the living God. 12. The 'living God' is powerful to fulfil both his promises and his threats, cf. 10:31. 13. Corporate self-encouragement or mutual social exhortation is needed as long as the 'To-day' of each day of life lasts. 'Hardening by the deceit of sin' is a striking expression on which Estius remarks: 'The heart softened by the pleasure of sin little by little grows hard towards the precepts of God'. Sin is seductive, cf. Rom 7:8-11. 14. The participation in Christ which we have, though very intimate (like his participation in our humanity, 2:14), will not last, unless we keep 'the beginning of his substance'—that is, faith which is the beginning, root, and foundation of Christian life (Chrys., Theodoret)—firm to the end. 'Beginning of his substance', however, may simply mean 'our first hope in him', cf. 10:32.

16-19. No one is exempted from fear, as the rhetorical questions based on the Psalm show. The punishment of their provocation of God fell on all the privileged ones of the Exodus, on all whom sin condemned to leave their corpses in the desert, on all the unbelieving Hebrews excluded from the rest of the Promised Land. Note well that 16 should read: 'Who were they who heard and rebelled? Was it not all those who came out of Egypt under Moses?' Rebellion against God, death in the desert, exclusion from Palestine, all attach themselves to the sin of unbelief (ἀπιστία) against which the warning is being given.

936a IV 1-10 Rest of Heaven promised to the Faithful—The antitypal rest promised to the Hebrews remains. Warning changes to exhortation. 1. Note the use of the first person plural: 'Let us fear'. If we are unfaithful we have everything to fear; if we are faithful, the rest or repose which Chanaan prefigured lies open before us. The generation of the Exodus missed the promised repose through their own fault and if we miss, it will also be through our own fault.

2. The word which they heard did not profit the Israelites either because it did not mix by faith with the persons who heard it (συγκεκρασμένους), or because they did not mix by faith with those who like Josue and

Caleb (rightly) heard it (συγκεκρασμένους). The two readings are almost equally attested. The DV follows a Vg reading (later adopted in the Clementine edition) which gives a confused sense. Read therefore: 'But the word of hearing did not profit them since it was not united with faith in those who heard'. Lack of faith frustrated the word of hearing. 3-5. These verses say in effect that God's rest on the seventh day, Gen 2:2, is the image not only of the weekly Sabbath, but of the temporal rest of Chanaan, and especially of the eternal rest to which men are invited after the labours of life. Unbelief excludes from it. 6-8. Therefore, since God's rest is open to men, and the generation of the Exodus missed it through unbelief, God fixes (limiteth) a day, which in David he calls 'To-day', so long after the conquest of Chanaan. Whether St Paul wishes to quote David himself in citing Ps 94 or merely designates the Davidic collection by the name 'David' may be doubtful, but certainly he dates the Psalm as Davidic or post-Davidic, for his purpose is to show that the rest of Chanaan is not the rest which God promised in an inspired poem composed such a long time after the conquest of Chanaan by Josue (Grecized Jesús, 8). 9. Therefore, he concludes 'a sabbatismos remains for the people of God'. The Gk sabbatismos is found nowhere else in the whole Greek Bible. It means not merely rest but the observance or enjoyment of rest. 10. It is ceasing from work like the Creator, and the Apostle at least implies that it is the reward of works (cf. Apoc 14:13, so familiar from the Daily Requiem epistle), and that it is participation in God's happiness. 11-13 Conclusion—This little finale really deserves to be called a peroration. It eloquently insists that every effort must be made to enter into that rest, which is equivalent to saying that every means must be taken to avoid the fate of the incredulous Israelites. They fell by resisting the word of God. We may fall in the same way. The qualities of the word of God, 12, 13, are such that there is no escape from its imperious authority, no hope of shirking our responsibility towards it. The word or logos is so boldly personified that some commentators have even identified it with the personal Logos. The context is against this view, but the word of God's revelation is so authoritative as to be ultimately interchangeable with God who speaks it. 'Living' stands at the head of the list of its attributes, that is, the word of God is full of power to act with living force; it is effectual in attaining its purpose; more trenchant than any two-edged sword—as the short double-edged machaera is a cutting rather than a stabbing instrument, our equivalent phrase would be 'as keen as a razor cutting fine and deep'. The subtle thoroughness of its dissection is expressed by saying that it reaches as far as dividing sensitive soul from thinking spirit (μερισμός, active verbal), and no closely knit joint, no hidden marrow of the bones is left untouched by it. This elaborate metaphor reveals in God's word an all-searching power which becomes even more 'personal' when the word is presented as a 'discerner' (κριτικός) of thoughts and intentions of the heart, a veritable judge of how one thinks and how one is minded, how one stands in regard to thought and feeling. The 'heart' is sometimes regarded as the seat of thought, but more often of man's moral life, cf. Mt 15:17-20. 13. Here the word finally identifies itself with God's all-seeing knowledge, or rather he takes the place of his word: Nothing created is invisible to him, cf. Ps 138; all things discover themselves and stand bare (τετραχλυσμένα) before his eyes. It seems that the second metaphor is taken from the bending back and baring of the necks of animals for the sacrificial stroke of the knife. The literal meaning of τραχλίζειν is to act with or on the neck—hence various usages of the term in the language of horse-riding, wrestling and sacrifice. All the ancient versions, like the Vg, make the participle a reinforcing synonym of the preceding adjective γυμνά, 'naked'. Hence, 'all things are naked and open to his eyes' is quite good. The final phrase 'To whom our speech (λόγος) is' may be rendered 'about whom we are speaking', but clearly it means: 'To whom our account is', i.e. to whom we must render an account of ourselves'.

IV 14-VII 28 The Superiority of Christ's Priesthood—Up to this the comparison between Christ and the angels and also between Christ and Moses has been personal. From this forward the comparison will be one of priesthood and priestly ministries, as between the Aaronic and Christian priesthood. Here, therefore, the sacerdotal theology of Heb begins.

IV 14-V 10 Christ's High Priesthood—14-16. A characteristic introduction (cf. 10:19; also 2 Cor 3:12) leads us to the thesis. It is a brief and gripping exhortation to confidence. The three basic ideas of the exhortation are: We have a Pontiff who has gone through to the place of repose, thoroughly sympathetic with our weaknesses, permanently established as a Mediator beside the throne of grace. Note the following: 'Great high-priest' (cf. 'great priest', 10:21)—this is a title of double grandeur once given to Simon Machabeus, 1 Mac 13:42. 'Passed into the heavens' links on to the sabbatismos and suggests future developments regarding the Holy of Holies. Jesus, whose divine sonship has already appeared five times unequivocally, is here called straight out and emphatically 'the Son of God'. The religion which has such a priest, in such a sanctuary—the very Son of God—is a religion to which we must hold on. The difficulties must not discourage us. 15. He is greatly capable of compassionating our infirmities, for, remaining sinless, he has nevertheless gone through every generic experience of human suffering. We should note that the sinlessness which sets him apart from us does not diminish his fellow-feeling for us, but makes it greater and purer, because absolutely free from all egoism. 16. Again we meet a key-word 'Let us go' (approach). This movement of access to God in worship pervades our Epistle, cf. 7:25; 10:1, 22; 11:6; 12:18, 22. In a very elegant phrase we are assured that at the throne of God's grace we shall find mercy and obtain grace (an elegant chiasmus in Greek) in the form of help suited to each time and circumstance.

17a V 1-4 Description of a High Priest—Description rather than definition, although the mediatorial function of priesthood between God and mankind, which is of the essence of priesthood, is very clearly in the forefront. 1. A man 'from amongst men and on behalf of men accredited to (approach) God'—that is a priest. 2-3. As a representative of mankind he must be compassionate with the ignorant and erring, being endowed with a compassion flowing from his own sense or experience of human weakness. Hence he offers—so it was with the OT priesthood—for his own sins as well as for the people's. Note that the verb which is used for 'compassionate' (μερποναιβειν) is remarkable (found only here in the Greek Bible). It means measured or, as we should say, intelligent sympathy. 'Compassed with infirmity' is also a striking phrase partially paralleled by the 'besetting, ever-ready, pressing sin' of 12:1. 4. Being accredited to God, a priest is not self-constituted. He does not take the honour 'of his own proper motion', but is called by God immediately, or mediately like Aaron.

b V 5-10 Application of the Description to Christ—The description is applied in inverse order: Christ's vocation first, 5, 6, and fellowship in human suffering second, 7-10.

5-6 Vocation—It was not Christ who glorified or honoured himself with the dignity of priesthood. It was the One who spoke to him the oracle of Ps 2. This whole phrase, including the citation, is probably only a periphrasis for 'His Father'. There is no specific sacerdotal appointment in the words: 'Thou art My Son' (although in reality divine Sonship confers every dignity on the humanity of Jesus), but in the wonderful interlacing of thought discernible in this Epistle the oracle of the super-angelic Son, 1:5, is here, 5:5, joined to the great sacerdotal oracle of Ps 109. Besides, the royal Ps 2 and the royal Sacerdotal Ps 109 are twin poems of David's highest inspiration. The divine declaration: 'Thou art a priest' is only cited here to show Christ's divine appointment, but in ch 7 all the riches of its theology will be set forth.

7-10 The Suffering Priest—Gethsemani rather than Calvary is the scene here, some words of which, 7, appropriately figure on the façade of the Church of the Agony on Mount Olivet. Christ is presented in his weakness, and St Paul realized, better than John Maldonatus (who makes the remark) could ever realize, that nowhere was Jesus more evidently one of our weak human selves than in Gethsemani. Being innocent, he could not offer sacrifice for his own sins, like the Aaronic High Priest, but he could pray (for himself and for us) out of the anguish of the mortal weakness which he deemed to take for our salvation.

7. Note that 'the days of his flesh' are the days of his mortality, and that 'prayers and supplications'—petitions and entreaties—aptly describe the words uttered under the olive trees. The Gospels do not mention tears and loud prayer, but these go together with the 'sadness unto death' and with the audibility of Christ's words 'a stone-throw' away. St Paul does not say that Christ prayed to be saved from death, but that he prayed to 'him who was able to save him from death'. The interpretation 'he was heard (by being released) from his fear', though adopted by many commentators, is scarcely probable; the Vg rendering 'heard for his reverence' being more in keeping with the usual NT meaning of εὐλάβεια, 12:28, εὐλαβέομαι, 11:7, and εὐλαβής, Lk 25; Ac 2:5; 8:2; 22:12. 8. Although 'Son' (without addition or article in Gk), 'he learned obedience by the things which he suffered'. Christ acquired experimental knowledge in the school of experience. The hardness of obedience he learned by obeying through most difficult sufferings even to the acceptance of a death involving the utmost pain and shame. The thought of Heb here joins the great Pauline text of Phil 2:8. The paronomasia ἐμαθεν ἀφ' ὧν ἔπαθεν was a familiar Gk commonplace (παθεὶ μάθος [Aeschylus], παθήματα μαθήματα [Herodotus]). 9. This verse carries us back to the declaration of 2:10. Christ eternally glorified with the merit of his suffering—'consummated'—became (at that moment) for all who obey him a cause of eternal salvation. Thus the eternally efficient Saviour of all men, who call themselves and are his disciples by obedience, is the One called by God 'the high priest according to the order of Melchisedech'.

V 11-VI 20 Admonition of Reproach and Encouragement—The admonition is a trumpet-call to attention before the exposition of a great theme. It begins with reproach addressed to backward pupils, 5:11-14; warns them with terrifying severity of the danger of apostasy, 6:1-8; raises their spirits by reminding them of the promise attaching to their good deeds in the past and the present, 9-12; and inspires confidence by holding up the example of Abraham, 13-20. V 11-14 Hebrew Backwardness—11. On the Melchisedechian priesthood of Christ the Apostle has much to say that is difficult of exposition especially to a circle of dull hearers like the Hebrews. Their dullness is described as being 'hard of ears or hearing', but the Apostle clearly refers to their slow, sluggish, heavy dullness of spirit. It is a moral fault due to their lack of zeal for progress. 12. Scholars brought to the school of Christ so many years ago should now be masters, but alas! they still need to get lessons in the very elements or A B C of Christian doctrine. The 'elements (στοιχεῖα) of the beginning of the words of God' are the rudimentary truths contained in the catechesis or catechism of first instruction. The Apostle calls these rudiments 'milk' or 'baby food' in contrast to the solid instruction imparted to those spiritually grown up, cf. 1 Cor 3:1 ff.; but note that in 1 Pet 2:2 milk stands rather for a pure wholesome food. 13. He who belongs to the milk category is 'unskilful in the word of justice', not proficient in the practice of Christian life. Actually he is a babe in the matter of moral progress. 14. Solid 987d food is for the perfect who have reached the development of their age as Christians, this development being the result of habitual exercise of their faculties of moral perception (αἰσθητικὰ) for the discernment of good and evil. Both εἶς, which is permanent facility acquired by exercise, and αἰσθητικὰ with the generic meaning of 'senses' are hapax legomena in NT, but St Paul uses αἰσθησις, Phil 1:10, to denote ripe judgement in moral things.

• VI 1-8 Forward! and beware of falling backward into Apostasy—This section forms a unity which produces a powerful impression. It is like a general saying to his troops 'Forward! . . . but there must be no cowards'. It says in effect: 'Let us go on, if God permits . . . but one can do nothing with renegades'.

1-2. Note the usual enallage of exhortation: 'Let us' (since progress is a duty) 'go on to perfection' (in the exposition of higher doctrine, as the context shows). 'Leaving the rudiments' means leaving the simple basic truths of the catechetical outlines. Six catechetical articles forming closely connected pairs are mentioned: (1) 'Repentance from dead works': twice in this epistle (cf. 9:14) the expression 'dead works' is used for the state of sin which, being spiritual death, can only produce dead deeds, deprived of divine life. 'Do penance' is the first word of an apostle, cf. Mk 1:15; Ac 2:38; 3:19; 17; 30; 20:21; 26:20; (2) 'faith towards God', the positive side of the movement of conversion; (3) 'the doctrine of baptisms' include the necessary distinction of Christian baptism from the baptism of John and Jewish ritual washings; (4) 'imposition of hands' is closely connected with the foregoing and primarily to be understood of confirmation, cf. Ac 19:6; (5) 'resurrection of the dead', as we know from St Paul, 1 Cor 15, was included together with the resurrection of Christ in the oral catechesis of all the Apostles; (6) 'eternal judgement' is the general judgement after the resurrection of the body, which fixes the destiny of each one for ever and is therefore called 'eternal'.

988a 8. To the little phrase 'if God permit' is attached the tremendous warning against apostasy which is the chief passage amongst a half-dozen marking Heb as a severe epistle. 4. The Apostle virtually says: We can go on to higher teaching, but it would be wasted on apostates (or apostatizers), for it is impossible to convert an apostate. The adjective 'impossible' is made as emphatic as it can be, standing like a fearful red-letter sign at the head of the sentence, but we must note that the impossibility is placed not in God who can work any miracle of grace, but primarily in the apostolic minister of reconciliation who has no fulcrum for the work of renewing a renegade. The latter in fact has incapacitated himself for the reception of ministrations by the paralyzing ingratitude of his rejection of Christian riches and by his complete break away from all contact with the source of salvation. 4-5. Let us first see what apostates have deliberately thrown away: They were once brought from darkness to light through the illumination of faith and of baptism, and 'they fell away'—they also tasted the heavenly gift by intimate participation in the distributions made by the Holy Spirit (ordinarily after imposition of hands; cf. Ac 8:17; 19:6), an experience which is described by St Paul as 'being given to drink', 1 Cor 12:13, of the waters of life (cf. Is 12:3; Jer 2:13; Jn 4:14; 7:37), 'and they fell away'—they also became partakers of the charismata by which the presence of the Holy Ghost was palpably felt in the community, 'and they fell away'—moreover, they recognized by taste or delightful experience how good the word of God is and the manifestation of God's power in the miracles of the Messianic era, 'and they fell away'—these four or five: the light of truth, the joy of grace (including perhaps the Holy Eucharist?), the charismata of the Holy Spirit, the experience of God's sweet word and of his miraculous evidences they rejected. More precise identification than this we cannot attempt. The illumination seems to include the sacrament of baptism which in later times came to be called phôtismos; the heavenly gift seems to have been tasted in confirmation and in the liturgical assemblies where the Eucharist was celebrated; the participation of the Holy Spirit may refer more particularly to the varieties of gratiae gratis datae; the participle γευσάμενοι construed with the accusative in the fourth member would seem to indicate recognition of God's work as good and of his miracles as being the signs of the final age. From all these things 'they fell away', a thought expressed in the text by the single aorist participle παρὰπεσόντας, but repeated four times in the above explanation to bring out its impressive power. It is impossible 'to renew' (ἀνακαινίζειν)—inaccurately rendered 'renovari', i.e. 'to be renewed'—such as these to penance for they are re-crucifying by their own personal doing (lit. for themselves) the Son of God and holding him up to mockery. These are fearful words. Every apostate stages in his own life a deliberate repetition of the apostasy and decide committed by the Jews on Good Friday. While they act thus, wilfully rejecting the only Saviour, it is impossible to renew them to penance and conversion.

What is the nature of the impossibility? The Novatian heretics and the Montanist Tertullian (citing these words, under the name of Barnabas) used the text to prove that some sins are irremissible and that the Church has no power to absolve from them. But the text regards not pardon but repentance.

Briefly, some have taken it to mean simply that there can be no second baptism, no second baptismal concrucifixion with the Saviour ('re-crucifying' and 'holding up to mockery' being taken in a good sense). True as this is in itself, it is clearly not the meaning of the text. Others insist most emphatically on the active infinitive 'to renew' and take the words to mean that it is impossible for men, but it always remains possible for God. However, the severity of the passage makes this distinction more than unlikely. The text as expounded above shows that the impossibility is connected with the moral dispositions of persons who have committed such a hardening sin and who are continuing their break-away from the Saviour. The subjoined parable, 7, 8, ending in plain allegory, 8b, shows this. 7-8. They are not the ground that drinks the rain with any thirst for justice, so as to be productive and give evidence of God's blessing. They are like the ground cursed in Gen 3:17, for they only produce thorns and thistles; they are under reprobation, near to the final curse; their end is for burning, cf. Lk 8:4-8.

9-12 Encouragement—The tone changes; the Christian ministry is not a ministry of discouragement but of encouragement. Note the tender title: 'Dearly beloved'. 9. The Apostle has better hopes for the Hebrews; he has confidence of things more favourable to their salvation. 10. Past services done in the name of God, past and present ministrations of charity to fellow-Christians are things of which the justice of God will take account. It is the Catholic doctrine of the meritoriousness of good works done in the state of grace. They deserve a continuance of God's favour. 11. The Apostle's ardent desire is that there should be no relaxation, but zeal for the full realization of hope to the very end. 12. Thus they shall escape that dull sluggishness and imitate those who through faith and patience inherit (present participle) the promise. Note the mention of all three theological virtues and the special mention of patience, which is the moral strength of hope.

13-20 Confidence in the Certitude of Hope—Mention of the inheritors of the promise brings up the example of Abraham, cf. Rom 4:13-21. 13. The promise of Messianic blessing which God made to Abraham is of capital importance, as St Paul shows so fully in Rom and Gal, and as the Church proclaims so beautifully when she speaks of the lux sancta quam olim Abraham promissisti et semini eius. It was a sworn promise and thus rested on two sovereign guarantees, the unbreakable word of God and his inviolable oath. Thus did he assure us of the immutability of his promise. 13-15. To Abraham God swore by himself, for he had no one greater to swear by, and Abraham who received the promise of blessing and posterity attained the promise by patience. 16. The oath was a guarantee suited to human habits, for a sworn declaration or promise is commonly regarded as incontrovertible, because of the sanctity of a higher Guarantor. 17-18. In those circumstances or on this account (ἐν ᾧ D.V. 'Wherein') God gave us the double security of his word and his oath, in order that we who took refuge in God from the perils of salvation (οἱ καταφυγόντες, not to be construed with κρατῆσαι) may have a strong exhortation (motive, we should say) to hold on to the hope set before us. 19. That hope is like an anchor for the soul, reliable and strong enough to keep us safely moored in the severest storms. Recall the anchor as a symbol of hope in the paintings of the Roman catacombs. It would seem that it is hope itself and not the metaphorical anchor that is regarded as going behind the veil. This extension of the metaphor seems too extraordinary. It would be like an anchor biting the shore and mooring the ship to it rather than biting the bottom of the sea and immobilizing the vessel. Immovable constancy is given by hope, and hope has its object behind the veil of the antitypal sanctuary, which is heaven itself, symbolized by the sacred cube of the Holy of holies. 20. Thither, as a Precursor, Jesus has entered on our behalf, that is, not for himself only but also for us, and always in the quality of what he has become, namely, a 'high priest for ever according to the order of Melchisedech'.

• VII 1-28 Superiority of Melchisedechian Priesthood—The excellence of the Priest according to the order of Melchisedech is shown from the details of the typical Melchisedech's biblical record, 1-3; his superiority over the Levitical or Aaronic priesthood is shown from the relation of Melchisedech to Abraham, 4-10; the perfection of the new priesthood is shown to be an abrogation of the old priesthood and of the regime to which it belonged, 11-28.

1-3. Extra-biblical speculation on the mysterious figure of Melchisedech need not detain us. Was he a Semite, a Japhetite, or, being a Chanaanite king, did he belong to the cursed seed of Cham? Various fancies clustered around his name and different brands of pseudo-Christian Melchisedechian heretics venerated him as a manifestation of the Logos, of the Holy Ghost, or even as a divine priestly power superior to Christ himself. St Paul argues entirely from the positive and negative details of the biblical notice, which he summarizes from Gen 14, with close adherence to LXX. Every single point of the summary is utilized. The personal name means 'King of justice'; the place of his royalty Salem (Jerusalem) designates him as 'King of peace'; but the royal titles are only incidental to the Apostle's theme; it is as a 'Priest of God Most High' that Melchisedech is here envisaged. No mention is made of the kind of sacrifice he offered, for the Eucharistic significance of Melchisedech does not belong to our Epistle. He met the victorious but still childless Abraham (cf. 10), blessed him, and received from him the honour of a tithe of the booty. 2. The Priest Melchisedech thus blessing and receiving tithe from the Patriarch of the promise, Gen. 14, and the future great grandfather of the twelve tribes, supplies the two essential positive points. But the divinely intended omissions of the sacred text are also significant.

3. On Melchisedech's origin there is complete silence—no mention of father or mother or ancestral line—and he is without certificate of birth or of death. The inspired page presents him in this negative manner as a living Priest, and so, being assimilated to the Son of God in the quality of a type, he remains a priest in perpetuity. Note that the three adjectives: 'without father, without mother, without recorded descent' should be taken together. St Paul did not think of Christ having no temporal father, having no eternal mother, and having no priestly genealogy, though he had a royal one. It is simply as possessing a divinely given negative certificate of life that Melchisedech is a type of the Eternal Priest. Whether St Paul knew certain facts now revealed by the Tell el Amarna tablets about the kings of Jerusalem claiming kingship not by succession but by divine appointment must remain doubtful and, in any case, contributes nothing to the exegesis of this passage.

4-10 Superiority of Melchisedech over Abraham and Levi—The argument here is easily grasped. 4. That Abraham the Patriarch was great was simply a Hebrew axiom. Yet he gave tithes to Melchisedech from the choicest of the spoils (lit. 'the top things of the heap') and received blessing from him. 5-6. Levitical priests had the right to receive tithes from their brethren, though these also had the dignity of children of Abraham, but in the person of Melchisedech one who was no Levite laid Abraham himself under tithe. Melchisedech also blessed the very Patriarch in whom the promise of future blessing was vested. 7. And undoubtedly the bestowal of authoritative priestly blessing is the act of a superior. 8. Moreover, the Levitical priests, being priests in a line of succession, had death written on them even while they gathered tithes, but Melchisedech lives on without a successor, having that negative diploma of life mentioned above. 9-10. To put the matter almost paradoxically (ὡς ἐνός εἰσέν), Levi the tither was tithed by Melchisedech, for Levi was then included in the still potential fatherhood of the childless Abraham. The word 'loins,' 5, 10, is a Hebraism for virility or generative power. Aquinas raises the objection: 'But Christ also was in the loins of Abraham when Melchisedech tithed and blessed him!' He answers: 'Seminally, no; as to the bodily substance taken from the Blessed Virgin, yes. The virginal conception of Christ makes the difference.'

11-28 Imperfect and Perfect Priesthood—The appointment of a Priest according to the order of Melchisedech marks the Aaronic priesthood as transitory, 11-14; (a) 9-12. Perfection is the end of every divine arrangement, and if perfection was to come through the Levitical priesthood—this priesthood being the basis of the whole cultural system of the Mosaic Law—why should another—a different (ἕτερος)—Priest arise according to the order of Melchisedech and not be called according to the order of Aaron? 12. A theocratic law lapses totally when its priesthood lapses. Now the Aaronic priesthood does lapse with the introduction of the Melchisedechian priesthood, and with it lapses the law which has no provision for any other but a Levitical priesthood. 13. It is historically evident that 'Our Lord'—note the title—of whom the oracle of priesthood according to the order of Melchisedech was spoken, has come from the tribe of Juda, no member of which tribe ever had access to the altar to perform priestly functions, and moreover, the Law of Moses has no inkling of any connexion between priesthood and that same tribe of Juda.

(b) 15-17. This is still more evident from the mode of duration of the priesthoods. The Priesthood which arises according to the order of Melchisedech is a lasting personal priesthood, not a priesthood transmitted from father to son according to a law of carnal succession. 16. The Melchisedechian Priest holds his priesthood 'according to the power of an indissoluble (or unending) life', for the oracle says: 'Thou art a Priest for ever according to the order of Melchisedech'.

(c) 18-19. Thus, to come back to the idea of τελείωσις or perfection, the former regime is set aside because of its weakness and unprofitableness. Really the law brought nothing to perfection, for of itself it conferred no interior sanctity and it gave no power to do the good which it commanded. With the setting aside of the law we hail the introduction of a better hope—note the word 'better' three times in this ch and ten times elsewhere in Heb—and through this better hope we draw near to God in the confidence which arises from pardon and the spirit of adoption and the assurance of glory. The τελείωσις realized by the priesthood of Christ is all these things: forgiveness and grace and glory.

(d) 20-22. Another circumstance which marks the 939c superiority of the priesthood of Christ is the solemnity of the oath which ratifies it and confirms its irrevocable finality. The priests of the House of Aaron were inaugurated without any divine oath, but Christ with an oath never to be repented of. In this respect Jesus stands as the sponsor (or surety, or mediatorial guarantor) of a better covenant. Covenant or covenant-testament appears here for the first time and will appear sixteen times in the sequel in eleven changes of context. This sentence, 20a, 22, with its parenthesis, 20b, 21, has an indescribable majesty in our author's Greek.

(e) 23-25. As unending life was contrasted with fleshly succession in 15-17, the oneness and permanence of Christ's priesthood is finally set against the multiplicity of priests whom death prevented from remaining. 23. They were many, for no one of them, all being mortal, could remain, but he, because he remains for ever, has a priesthood which does not pass away (ἀπαράβατον). 24. The DV here does not represent the full force of the Gk which means: 'He, because he remains for ever, holds his priesthood as a priesthood untransmissible, everlasting'. 25. Hence he is also a perpetual Saviour, a perpetual Mediator, an everliving Advocate, 'able to save perfectly—or perpetually (Vg, Coptic, Syriac)—those who come to God through him, always living to make intercession for them' (cf. Rom 8:34, the tones of which are here echoed). At the end of the sentence Vg substitutes 'us' for 'them'. The presence of Christ's sacred humanity in heaven is itself a perpetual pleading, our names are better written in his sacred wounds than the names of the twelve tribes on the gems of Aaron's pectoral, and his heart's desire for our salvation is before God always.

d 26-28 Conclusion—26. Such indeed was the High Priest whom in all fitness we should have—utterly holy and exalted and effective. He is all piety towards God (δοσιος), without any tinge of harmful malice (δκακος) which would diminish our confidence in him, without any defilement to dim the lustre of his holiness—hence separated from sinners with a transcendence which has raised him above the heavens. 27. His work is absolutely efficacious, for he has no need day by day, like the high priests—that is, toties quoties on Expiation Day—to offer sacrifices for his own sins, then for those of the people. For the people alone he came to offer, and this he did once for all, offering himself. 28. In fine—and the sentence sounds like a triumphal chant—the law sets up men as high priests—men having weakness, that is, sin and mortality, but the word of the oath announced through the mouth of David, long after the law, sets up One who is Son (again without the article) and whose perfection is consummated for ever in priestly achievement and in glory.

N.B.—27a creates a difficulty. It was only on Expiation Day (Lev 16) and not 'daily' that the high priest was bound to offer sacrifice first for himself and then for the people. Some commentators answer that St Paul is referring to the actual practice of the high priest, who offered the double sacrifice every day; but such practice is not otherwise attested. The most satisfactory answer is that St Paul's gaze here is entirely on the high priest and Expiation day. He mentions the daily sacrifices of 'every priest' for the first time specifically in 10:11, and in a new context. In the present context, which is entirely high-priestly, καθ' ἡμέραν, meaning 'day by day', refers to each Expiation day as it came round once a year.

e VIII 1-X 18 Superiority of Christ's Sacrifice—The kernel of Heb being the priesthood of Christ, it remains to show in detail the superior efficacy of his priestly work. St Paul shows this superiority in relation to the old sanctuary, the old covenant, the annual and daily sacrifices of the old dispensation.

VIII 1-5 Superiority of Christ's Sanctuary—At first sight this section seems to be simply a matter of contrasting heaven with the Mosaic tabernacle, but it will be found that a purely local interpretation of it is difficult to maintain. The contrast is certainly between celestial and terrestrial, and place considerations are 939d included, but it cannot simply be worked out in terms of 'above the sky and on this earth below'. The celestial has to be conceived socially as the Church, which is the kingdom of heaven. The interpretation here followed is that of St Cyril of Alexandria (De adoratione in spiritu et veritate, Bk 9, PG 68, 590-631).

1. 'A principal or main point in the subject under discussion is (the following): Such is the High Priest that we have (cf. 7:26)—a High Priest who has taken his seat at the right hand of the throne of majesty (cf. 1:4) in heaven (cf. 4:14; 6:20)'. 2. The enthroned Christ does not offer sacrifice in heaven, for sitting is not the posture of a ministering Priest; yet 'having made a cleansing of sins', 1:4, he is a minister of the sanctuary. What is this 'Sancta' or Sanctuary? It is generally taken to mean the place of God's special manifestation which we call Heaven; but Christ reigns in heaven, he does not minister. It seems, therefore, that the Sanctuary must be the whole Church Militant and Triumphant, which is the extension of that Tabernacle of God which is Christ himself, Jn 2:19, 21, which St Paul calls by the local name of 'the Jerusalem above', Gal 4:26, and which St John heard described to him as 'the tabernacle of God with men', Apoc 21:3. This is the perfect (ἀληθινῇ) tabernacle or tent which the Lord (ὁ κύριος here meaning God) pitched, not man. 3. Christ must have offered a sacrifice belonging to and bringing him into that celestial sphere. Sacrifice is the correlative of priesthood, for every high priest is appointed to offer gifts and sacrifices (i.e. oblations of all kinds as in 5:1). Christ could not be a priest without having a victim to offer. 4. 'Yea rather, if he were on earth, he would not be a priest, because the legal victims were being offered by priests of a tribe to which he did not belong'. His sacrifice had therefore to be offered and consummated outside of the terrestrial sphere of Mosaism. 5. The Levitical priests do not belong to the heavenly sphere, for they serve a sanctuary which is only an image and shadow of the heavenly realities. This is intimated in the history of the institution of the tabernacle itself, Ex 40, for the oracle addressed to Moses said: 'See that thou make all things according to the pattern shown to thee on the mount'. The rabbis imagined a design in fire or light shown to Moses in vision and visually representing the tabernacle as it was to be set up. The Epistle, however, indicates that Moses received some revelation of the Messianic and heavenly realities which his Hebrew tabernacle was to foreshadow. 6. A verse of conclusion and transition states that Christ has obtained a more excellent ministry (λειτουργία) inasmuch as he is the mediator of a better covenant established on better promises. The word 'Mediator' occurs here in Heb for the first of three times, also 9:15; 12:24. It is always a title of Jesus and related to 'covenant'. It occurs also thrice in the other Paulines, in two different contexts, Gal 3:19, 20; 1 Tim 2:5, once of Moses in relation to the old Covenant and once of Christ in relation to redemption. As the redemptive character of Christ's sacrifice is here implied (cf. 9:12), the Mediator combines in a higher way the sacerdotal and ambassadorial offices of Aaron and Moses. The 'better' covenant is the alliance based on the redemption-transaction to which our author will later attribute the special character of testament, 9:16, 17. The 'better promises' are chiefly pardon, grace and glory.

7-13 Superiority of the New Covenant—7. On the principle that God does not lay aside a perfect ordinance for a less perfect one (beginning high and ending low—cf. Gal 3:3), his introduction of a second covenant must imply censure of the former one. 8. Actually that censure is spoken by God himself through the prophet Jeremiah, 31:31-34 (Heb). The censure indeed falls first on the Israelites, but it also embraces the regime which could not change the nation's 'heart of stone into a heart of flesh', Ez 11:19. The text is taken from an impressive group of Restoration oracles Jer 30-33) in which the Messianic future looms large. Christ our Lord had alluded to the same text 940a in the institution of the Eucharist, Lk 22:20; 1 Cor 11:25, and it is also the background of 2 Cor 3. Cited from the LXX 38:31-34 with interesting but merely accidental variations, it announces a new covenant different from that of the Exodus which the people did not keep. 9. Note that whereas DV has 'And I regarded them not', Jer 31:32c has: 'I gave up caring for them', which is probably the true sense (cf. Gesenius-Buhl sub voce II; also Peshitta). God's rejection of the old Israel was very clearly forecast at the Babylonian captivity. 10. This verse describes the new covenant as an interior law under which knowledge and obedience will be a matter of inner light and love rather than external teaching and the discipline of a code. 12. It states that the remission of sins is a special characteristic of the New Covenant, cf. 10:15-18. It is, however, on the word 'new' that the Apostle's present argument rests. 13. To describe the second covenant as 'new' is to declare the former one old, senescent, and near its demise—ἀφανισμός is very frequent in Jer (LXX) in the sense of 'destruction'. Jer 30-33 should be read as a whole; they are the finest pages of a great prophet.

c IX 1-28 Superiority of Christ's Sacrifice—Christ was a sacrificing Priest, Minister of a sanctuary and Mediator of a new Covenant, but what is of supreme importance in this Covenant is the sacrifice on which it is based, for there is no religious regime without sacrifice. Hence the logical development of the Apostle's argument leads him to consider the sacrificial ritual of the old alliance and that of the new. He proceeds to do so in terms of the Israelite sanctuary and with supreme emphasis on the greatest sacrificial ceremony of the Jewish year, that of Yôm hakkippûrîm—Expiation Day or Day of Atonement (10 Tišri).

IX 1-10 The Tabernacle and Day of Atonement—1. 'Of course (this is often the best English equivalent of μὲν οὖν) the former (Covenant) also had ordinances of worship and a sanctuary of this world', i.e. a terrestrial sanctuary, and not in the sense of an ecumenical or universal one. 2. The Apostle describes not the Zorobabelian-Herodian temple but the tabernacle as set up by Moses. There is great argumentative prudence and subtle suggestiveness in thus taking a Pentateuchal basis and in going back to the days when the Ark was still in the midst of Israel. 2-5. The description of the tabernacle and its appurtenances is summary but not wanting in splendour. The first oblong tent which was set up by Moses is mentioned, in which is noted the seven-branched 'lampstand' (DV 'candlesticks') placed to the south or left, and the table (covered with gold) on which stand the twelve loaves of shew-bread, this being on the north or right side. This oblong, called the Holy, is seen to terminate west in a second veil or curtain, thus distinguished from the first or entrance veil. 3. Behind this second veil stands the tent or sacred cube called the Holy of Holies or Most Holy, having as its appurtenances a golden 'altar of incense' (DV 'censer') placed outside the veil, and then, within the veil, the Ark of the Covenant covered completely with gold. In the Ark mention is made of an urn having or containing manna, of the rod of Aaron that blossomed, of the tables of the Covenant. 5. Over the Ark stand Cherubim of glory—that is, throne-bearers of God's glorious Majesty—covering with their wings the 'propitiatory' or golden cover of the Ark which is called in Heb. Kappôret, to which Luther gave the happy name of Gnadenstuhl, a reminiscence of Heb 4:16—the 'mercy-seat' of AV. The Gk ἱλαστήριον and Lat. propitiatorium designate it as an instrument of expiation or atonement.

d In the above exposition care has been taken to bring out a literary quality of the text which is generally lost sight of. Apart from saying that the first tent 'was set up', there is no past tense in the paragraph, only verbless phrases and present participles. The Apostle evidently wishes the tabernacle to stand before the Hebrews in the 'legal present', for the Messianic age is 'the world to come'. Cf. 'the Jerusalem which now is', Gal 4:25.

Two objections must be briefly dealt with. (1) The 'altar of incense' (thymiaterion) is placed within the Holy of Holies, instead of outside it. The answer is that the verb used, namely, 'having' not 'containing', expresses the close relation of the altar of incense with the inner sanctuary. In 3 Kg 6:22 this altar is called 'the altar belonging to the d'bir or inner sanctuary' while Ex 40:5 calls it 'the altar of incense before the Ark'. Moreover, according to the letter reproduced in 2 Mac 2:5 Jeremiah hid the altar of incense together with the Ark and Tabernacle, for they went together. (2) The assertion that in the Ark were manna, and Aaron's rod, and the tables of the Covenant seems to contradict 3 Kg 8:9 which says that the Ark contained only the tables. A possible answer would be that the author of 3 Kg and the author of Heb speak of different times, but we have no positive information on the point. A satisfactory reply is that the urn of manna and the sacerdotal rod which were beside the Ark are comprehended or lumped together with the stone tables which were within the Ark.

6-7 Day of Atonement—The Apostle does not intend to go into details about liturgical symbolism, but he wishes to note one important thing. 6-7. Officiating priests enter the Holy at all times—twice a day for the offering of incense, and at other times to perform blood-ritual, to see to the lamps, to change the shew-bread on the Sabbath; but into the second tent or Holy of Holies entrance is allowed only once a year (actually four times in the performance of one liturgy), the only privileged person being the high priest, who enters not without blood but for the purpose of sprinkling the propitiatory and sanctuary with the blood of the bull which he has offered for his own sinful ignorances and also with the blood of the goat which he has offered for the sins or ignorances of the people. 8. The intention of the Holy Spirit in arranging Israelite worship in such wise that the outer sanctuary should retain its position (στέδος) as the usual place of priestly access to God, and that the inner sanctuary should be an annual high-priestly reserve is to show that the way to the antitypical Holy of Holies of heaven has not yet been opened. 9. The outer sanctuary is really a parable-image of the present pre-Messianic (not Messianic) time—a parable according to which such oblations and sacrifices of every kind are offered as are powerless to purify the conscience and interiorly perfect the worshipper. 9-10. These oblations and victims are really nothing more than part and parcel of the system which included food distinctions and drink prohibitions and various ritual washings, and, just like these, are really only fleshly regulations (DV 'Justices of the flesh': read δικαιώματα in apposition to 'gifts and sacrifices', omitting 'and' before 'justices'). These fleshly regulations are merely temporary, imposed until the time of Messianic reform or betterment, διόρθωσις.

11-28 The Day of Eternal Atonement—Firstly, the work of Christ the High Priest is described in a magnificent synthesis, 11-14; secondly, in relation to the Covenant which his blood sealed, 15-22; thirdly, in its absolute efficacy and finality, 23-28.

11-14 Synthesis—This passage which, with the addition of two verses from the next paragraph, is the Epistle for Passion Sunday and the Feast of the Precious Blood, continues in the symbolic language of the Tabernacle and Day of Atonement. Its chief difficulty—a very considerable difficulty—is to determine what is the tabernacle through which Christ passed. 11. The Apostle says in a tone of majestic contrast: 'Christ having come into the world in the quality of High Priest of the spiritual and eternal good things of the Messianic future, passed through the greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands, and entered . . . the sanctuary'. The sanctuary is everlasting glory, or, in the simpler language of place, heaven; but what is the tabernacle 'through which' he entered? As the entrance was made through the Passion, the only satisfactory answer seems to be: his own mortal Body, cf. 'the veil, which is his flesh', 10:20. This would 940g explain why the Apostle not only says 'not made with hands' but adds the words: 'that is, not of this creation', for the Body of Christ was formed as a temple of God by the Holy Ghost. It is, of course, impossible to deny that the writer is thinking of the two localized poles, earth and heaven; but he evidently does not regard the blue curtain of the sky as the veil of a sanctuary. Christ passed from the condition of mortality to glory. Thus the glorified Christ, finding of course his proper habitation in heaven, constitutes the interior sanctuary. 'The flesh is a veil', says Chrysostom, 'as concealing the Godhead; and likewise a tabernacle as holding the Godhead'. There is no express reference in the Epistle to the Ascension of Christ. He, as it were, enters heaven from the Cross in the sprinkling of his blood, and at the end of the Epistle it is in the Blood of the New Testament that God brings him forth from the dead, 13:20. Not that our author was unaware of the three days (some thirty-five hours) of entombment and the forty days of glory on earth, but he is thinking in the juridical terms of Atonement Day. Christ expiating sin on the Cross and sacerdotally sprinkled with his own blood de jure enters eternal glory at the moment that the veil of his mortality is broken; and at the same moment the veil of the temple—surely the inner veil—is rent, with a synchronism which seems to find its tremendous explanation in Christ's sixth word: 'It is consummated' (τετέλεσται). With all the prophecies about the Messianic redemption now fulfilled, the Old Covenant and the Ritual of Lev 16 have come to an end. 12. 'Not by the blood of goats nor of calves but by his own blood (Christ) entered once into the holies, having obtained eternal redemption'. The heavenly sanctuary is opened once for all and for ever, for the blood of expiation is an eternal ransom, that is, the infinite price of eternal freedom. 13. The cleansing efficacy of blood belongs to two different spheres, that of outer purification and that of interior purification. The sprinkled blood of sacrificial goats and calves and the lustral water made from the ashes of a red heifer offered in sacrifice, Num 20, cleanse those who have contracted legal defilement of one kind or another, that is, cleanse them externally in view of externally unimpeded communion with God's people. These sprinklings have limited but real legal efficacy in the sphere to which they belong. 14. But how much more shall not the blood of Christ be efficacious in the interior sphere of conscience? 'By the Holy Ghost (Gk, 'eternal spirit', probably meaning the Holy Ghost; otherwise 'his own eternal Godhead') he offered himself unspotted unto God'. He was Priest and Victim—a Victim utterly without blemish (cf. 1 Pet 1:19). 'Cleansing' (cf. 1:3; Eph 5:20; Tit 2:14) is wrought within the conscience so that the beneficiary receives new life to serve the living God. The impressive phrase 'Living God' occurs four times in our Epistle, and five times in the other Paulines. It reminds us that the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, the God of the Hebrew Fathers and of the Apostles was no idol and no mere philosophical abstraction.

941a 15-22 Covenant Significance—The Redeemer is a Mediator, and what he mediates is the new covenant of friendship between God and mankind. 15. With language partly similar to that of the great redemption passage of Rom 3:21-26 the Apostle insists that the New Covenant is enacted by a death that redeemed the transgressions which were without atonement under the former Covenant, so that those who have been called may receive the promise of eternal inheritance made to the Patriarchs. Christ, the Mediator, dying to establish a Covenant, is evidently a testator and the Covenant is a Testament receiving its validity through death. There seems to be no doubt that in 16 and 17 διαθήκη is not simply the equivalent of the Hebrew brît meaning pact or alliance, but that it has its most usual Greek signification of 'last will or testament'. 16. 'Where there is a testament, the death of the testator must receive public attestation' (φέρεσθαι). 17. For a testament is effective only after death (ἐν νεκροῖς)—it has no legal force while the testator lives. 18-20. It was in view of this testamentary character of the Messianic Covenant that the inauguration of the Sinaitic Covenant and the dedication of its sanctuary and its holy things were accompanied by the death of victims of sacrifice and the sprinkling of blood. The actions of Moses are described and the words of Ex 24:8 (alluded to in the consecration of the chalice at the Last Supper) are textually cited. Many ceremonial details mentioned are not found in Exodus, but are gathered from analogous ceremonies elsewhere described in the Pentateuch, Lev 14; 4, 5; 16:15; Num 19:9. 21. An anointing of the tabernacle and its utensils is all that is mentioned in the sacred page, Ex 40:9; Lev 8:10, but on the analogy of the consecration of Aaron and his sons, aspersion of blood is presumed for all great consecrations. 22. Very few purifications and those minor ones were carried out without blood, and even such a permission as that of a sin-offering of meal for the poor, Lev 5:11, did not alter the general principle enunciated here and also current as a rabbinical Mashal: 'Without shedding of blood there is no remission'.

23-28 Finality of Christ's Sacrifice—Four chief ideas ^b are conveyed in these lines: (a) 23. The purifications of the Old Law were shadows and affected shadow-types of heavenly things only, and yet animal blood was required; but the heavenly things themselves (τὰ ἐπουράνια) must be purified by better sacrifices (plural of category really meaning only one sacrifice applied in many ways). As purifications fall only on the Church militant that must be the primary meaning of ἐπουράνια (Chrys. Theodoret.). These things of the Church combatant are 'heavenly things', for they are of heavenly origin, belong to the sphere of eternal life and end in heaven. 14. It really was no hand-made sanctuary that Christ entered but heaven itself, to appear now before God on our behalf. Entering he has opened the road for ever. (b) 25-26a. He does not offer himself again and again to effect a periodical expiation like the annual expiation made by the Israelite high priest. If that were so, he should have suffered many times over, since the beginning of the world. (c) 26b. But now once and once only, in the last age of the world, he has appeared for the abolition of sin through his sacrifice. (d) 27-28. As far as Christ's work is concerned nothing remains but the consummation. Just as death comes to men once and is not repeated—only judgement next—so also Christ offered himself once 'to take away the sins of many' (any number Is 53:12), and at his second coming shall make his appearance in order to gather in those who expect him as Saviour, Phil 3:20, 21.

X 1-18 Superior Efficacy of Christ's One Sacrifice ^c Abolishes Legal Sacrifices—Here the Apostle's gaze is still more on the Church militant, as it undergoes sanctification for heaven. Christ's sacrifice is compared once again with the yearly liturgy of atonement and subsequently with the perpetual daily round of Israelite sacrifices. Here also four points seem to sum up the text: (1) Sacrifices incessantly repeated show their powerlessness by their very repetition, 1-4; (2) Christ's one obedience, as the Scriptures show, replaced them all, 5-10; (3) the daily liturgy of simple Levitical priests is as powerless as that of Atonement Day and even more palpably powerless, 11; (4) the sacrifice of Christ is the consummation of everything, for it really remits sins, 12-18.

1-4 Legal Sacrifices Powerless—The best way of conceiving the Apostle's terminology (shadow, image, things) seems to be this. 1. The Law had only mere shadow signs, the new economy of the Church militant has the image (the object itself, the reality) in the institutional means of grace, while the good things to come embrace both grace and glory. The impotence of the yearly expiation, shown by its constant repetition, was its inability to give interior perfection (τελειώσαι) or effect pardon of sin. 2. The sacrificial ritual was really only a yearly amnesty, not a purification of consciences once for all. 3. In fact the amnesty included a yearly 941a anamnesis or commemoration of sins. 4. It was, of course, impossible that the blood of calves and goats should take away guilt.

4 5-10 Christ's Obedience—Christ himself in a programmatic Psalm-text, 39:7-9a, announces the abolition of legal sacrifices of every sort and their replacement by his own obedience—which obedience actually was sacrificial obedience unto death. 5. Coming into the world he speaks the words of this Psalm which may well be directly Messianic as most of the ancients and also post-Tridentine commentators of note, like Agellius and Bellarmine, held. It is at the very least typally Messianic. In this latter case, David must have been in such a situation that God wanted no sort of material sacrifice from him. The language used is, it seems, the most absolute rejection of legal sacrifice in any OT passage, cf. Ps 49:8; 50:18; 68:32. The verses are cited according to LXX, which differs from the Heb. mainly which reads 'Ears thou hast opened for me', instead of Paul's 'a body thou hast fitted to me'. In spite of the high editorial authority of Rahlfs, this seems to be the original Alexandrian Gk reading. The sense of the verse is not substantially changed, for the obedience of Christ (open-eared promptness) was exercised by offering his body. Hence St Paul can lawfully emphasize the word 'body' from the LXX. 5-10. The Psalm text, as expounded here is a five-point oracle: (1) 'Thou wouldst not', 5, removes legal sacrifices; (2) 'Behold, I come', 7, marks a new era, but, of course, not an era without sacrifice; (3) the sacrifice of the Messiah, though instinct with obedience, is not metaphorical but real, 8-9; (4) it is the sacrifice of his body, 10; (5) it is the will of God, 10, that this obedience unto death be our sanctifying sacrifice offered once for all (ἐφάραξ used since 7:27 for the third and last time with a thud of emphasis).

6 11-18 The Daily Liturgy and the One Eternal Sacrifice—11. Repetition, repetition, repetition—that is the law of the daily sacrifices of Mosaicism, for they can never take away sin. Christ's sacrifice for sins is, on the contrary, one and unrepeatable. 12-18. Having offered it, he sits for ever at the right hand of God, awaiting the full actualization of his sovereignty in the subjection of all his enemies. 14. For by one offering he has perfected (τετελειωκεν) for ever those who are undergoing sanctification. 15. Once again, under the name of the Holy Ghost the Inspirer, part of the oracle of Jeremiah is quoted in inverted order, to show that the New Covenant brings the remission of sins. 18. Then the Apostle concludes: 'Where there is remission of these, an oblation for sin finds no place any longer'. What then of all our Masses? one may ask. The answer is that they are only the one Sacrifice of Christ perpetually commemorated, re-presented, applied to our daily needs, individual and social. The unity of Christ's sacrifice is a tremendous truth, and nowhere is it so tremendously driven home as in the Epistle to the Hebrews.

PARAENETIC PART, X 19-XIII 17

942a This moral part is an exhortation to perseverance in the faith. Its first section, 10:19-39, opens with an encouraging 'we-exhortation' to faith, hope and charity, 19-25, continues with a severe warning against apostasy, 26-31, and terminates in a direct and comforting appeal based on past good deeds, 32-39. Each of the three subdivisions ends in the thought of judgement. The second section (ch 11) opening with a practical definition of faith, 1-3, is a Martyrology of heroic examples of faith from the primitive age, 4-7, the patriarchal age, 8-22, the days of the Exodus, and Conquest, 23-31, followed by more miscellaneous examples out of the long period from Judges to Machabees, 32-38. The Martyrology is crowned by the remark that all those heroes of faith attained the perfection of glory (τελειοῦσθαι) only in our Christian age, 39. The third section (ch 12) resumes exhortation especially to patience, firstly, with a 'we-appeal'

centring in the example of Christ, 1, 2—this continues 942a in the second person plural with consolatory remarks on God's paternal discipline, 3-13; then, in a special admonition to peace, holiness and fidelity which ends in a grandiose characterization of the Mosaic Sinai and the Christian Sion, 14-24. There follows a final warning, 25-29, in which, as it were, the sound of the last trumpet itself accompanies the proclamation that there can be no refusal of this final revelation of God now spoken in the Messianic end of time. The Epistle, in a sense, ends here; 13:1-17 is of the nature of an appendix and contains a set of precepts loosely strung together but skilfully attached to the main theme of the Epistle.

X 19-26 Steadfastness—'Unwavering confidence b rooted in faith and working in charity' is the watchword. 20. Christ is the inaugurator of the newly opened way to the Sanctuary through the veil of his flesh, and since he is also High Priest over the House of God, he inspires the boldness of our confidence. 22-24. Sincerity, fullness of faith, the sprinkling and washing that come from repentance and baptism give the conscience freedom of access. 'Let us approach . . . let us hold fast . . . let us consider each other' are the three exhortatives which urge the practice of the three divine virtues. Hope particularly is founded on the fidelity of God to his promises, and charity must be social. 25. The necessity of 'provoking' charity, of frequenting liturgical gatherings, of mutual exhortation is all the greater 'as you see the day approaching'. The Parousia is meant, but the judgement on Jerusalem (five years hence) is probably included.

26-31 Apostasy—26-29. The sin contemplated is 6 deliberate and persistent rejection of the truth once sufficiently received. For such sinners, on account of their moral condition, no sacrifice is operative and there is no prospect but the wrath of God. Much worse than the capital crime of blasphemy, mercilessly punished with death under the old legislation, is the sin of him who has trampled on the Son of God, treated the sanctifying blood of the Covenant as a common thing-of-nothing, and outraged the Spirit of grace. 30. The vengeance text from Deut 32:35 verbally differs from both Heb. and LXX but agrees with St Paul's citation in Rom 12:19. The judgement text as uttered by Moses, Deut 32:36, really refers to judgement in favour of God's people, but every such judgement entails punishment of enemies. 31. The Apostle ends with one of the three terrible dicta of Heb, cf. 6:8; 12:29.

32-39 Old Memories—Remembrance of days of fervour d is a most powerful antidote against relaxation. The Hebrews had 'endured a great contest of sufferings' and proved themselves good spiritual athletes. Pain, shame, active sympathy with persecuted fellow-Christians, and spoliation fell to their lot—in the days of Stephen, for example. 35. This courage of confidence must not be thrown away, and patience is necessary in order to keep doing God's will and thus secure salvation. 39-39. Prefaced by the words: 'a little while, a very little while', Is 26:20, the well-known text of Hab 2:3c, 4a, 4b is cited in the order 3c, 4b, 4a. Thus an eschatological warning is made to end in the chiasmus: faith gives life, withdrawal displeasure to God—'but we are not persons of withdrawal to our perdition, rather of faith to the saving of our souls'. The homiletic 'we' concludes this direct appeal.

XI 1-3 Nature of Faith—1. Faith is not theologically 943a defined but rather described in reference to things not yet possessed and not yet seen. Hence its voluntative and intellectual sides are considered. For the human will faith is a basic support (ὑπόστασις) as it holds to a revealed but absent end; for the intellect it is the argument or proof (ἐλεγχος) giving conviction of what is not evident to senses or intellect. This is one of many explanations of this difficult sentence. 2. It is by faith the ancient saints (οἱ προεβύτηροι) earned their testimony of praise. 3. By faith we know that the world was created by God's word of command, so that the visible came out of invisible nothingness. Literally the text 943a says : ' so that it was not from things that appear that the visible (universe) came to be '.

b 4-7 Primitive Age—4. Abel's faith is attested by his better sacrifice (choice firstlings), by its acceptance through some heavenly sign, by the cry of his innocent blood when dead. 5-6. Enoch was exempted from death, because he pleased God, which is impossible without faith in God as Beginning and End—Creator and Remunerator. 7. Faith in a future chastisement—one hundred years distant—showed the heroism of Noe who thereby condemned the world (with a condemnation of comparison) and became the heir of the justice which is by faith.

c 8-22 The Patriarchs—8-10. Abraham when called at Ur obeyed blindly and left for Charran (Haran), where he first learned that his destination was Canaan. He lived in the land of promise as a stranger with no fixed abode—a tent-dweller—continuing to do so even with his co-heirs Isaac and Jacob. His hope was in a still unseen but firmly founded city whose architect and builder is God. 11. Abraham's faith brought a blessing also on Sara for the founding of a posterity, because he believed the promise of God, in spite of his wife's barrenness and old age and his own centenarian years. 12. Therefore from a man as good as dead sprang a race (both carnal and spiritual) as numerous as the stars and innumerable as the sand at the lip of the sea. 13-15. The faith of these men was fundamentally a longing for the heavenly fatherland. For its sake they left home, professed themselves pilgrims, and continued their exile when they could have returned to their original fatherland—and all that stands to their credit, while they could only give a distant salute to the glorious things of the promises which they died without attaining. 16. They certainly looked for a better country than Ur, namely, a heavenly one. The desire was, it seems, implicit, for there was as yet no explicit revelation about heaven. Therefore, God is not ashamed to be called ' the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob ', cf. Christ's use of this appellative, Ex 3:6; Mt 22:32. 17-19. In the offering of Isaac Abraham's faith did not spare an only son who was actually the sole heir of the promises, for he believed that God could find a way of realizing his promise even by raising Isaac from the dead. 19b. Hence he received him as a type of Christ sacrificed and brought back from death. 20. Faith kept Isaac from revoking the spiritual blessing given to Jacob and the merely temporal blessing given to Esau. 21. By faith Jacob blessed Ephraim and Manasses, consciously crossing his hands irrespective of their ages, Gen 48:15; and earlier, Gen 47:31, he honoured Joseph's posterity by bowing to the top of Joseph's rod (not apparently ' to the top of his bed ', or ' resting on the top of his staff '). 22. Faith in the future Exodus and destiny of Israel made Joseph give orders for the burial of his bones in Canaan.

d 23-31 Exodus and Conquest—23-26. Moses' parents who saw in the beauty of their infant son a sign of divine destiny, 23, and Moses himself, refusing the life of an Egyptian Prince, in order to suffer with Israel and thus share the reproach of Christ, showed faith in a divine reward. 27. When leaving Egypt in the face of Pharaoh's wrath, Ex 12:37, Moses attended to the Unseen as if he saw It. 28-31. The Paschal blood, the passage of the Red Sea, the fall of the walls of Jericho, the preservation of Rahab are so many further eulogies of faith.

e 32-38 Miscellaneous Examples—32. Impossible in a letter to continue the enumeration. Hence six names and a category (the Prophets) are mentioned only, and the eulogies reduced to the compendious form of a series of events in which faith shone forth. The peculiar order of the six names is to be noted—three pairs in the chronological order of their succession, but the second name of each pair is historically his companion's predecessor. 33-35a. Conquest of kingdoms and doing of justice belong to many judges and kings, and very many persons obtained promises. Escape from lions

(Daniel), from fire (three young men), from the sword (David, etc.) are prodigies of preservation rewarding faith. Recovery from sickness (Ezechias), strength in war (Judges), destruction of alien camps (Judges), resurrections from death (sons of the widow of Sarepta and of the Sunamite) are all attributable to faith. 35b-37a. Heroic endurance likewise : on the rack (Machabean Martyrs); by refusal of life in view of a better resurrection (Eleazar); through scoffings (Eliseus), scourgings and imprisonment (Jeremias); under stoning (Zacharias), under trials (or burning?) under the saw (Isaias?), under the sword (many prophets). 37b-38. At mention of those in sheepskins and goatskins one thinks of men like Elias—men going about in want, distress, affliction, ' of whom the world that maltreated them ' was not worthy—a really lyrical phrase in this context. 38b. We know of fifty prophets who lived in caverns to escape the fury of Jezabel. 39-40. Yet all these men and women had to await our age—the fullness of time—before they could receive the promises and come to the perfection of glory which by faith they merited. Such is the greatness of Messianic privilege which apostates would throw away. XII 1, 2 All Eyes on Christ—The foregoing Roll of Honour summons a dense cloud of witnesses who tell of the victories of faith. Therefore—and the ' therefore ' is most unusually emphatic—let us do our part. Our part is conceived athletically, cf. 1 Cor 9:24 f.; Gal 5:7; Phil 3:14; 2 Tim 4:7. Let us, free from every weight and every sin that begets us and stands only too ready to lay hold of us (εὐμεπίστοτος)—let us with patience run the race (ἀγών 'contest') lying before us, looking away (from ephemeral things) and fixing our eyes on Jesus the Author (rather than Leader) and the Finisher of our faith—who first brought it to us and will give it the final perfection of vision. He is a perfect Model, for in view of (rather than instead of) the joy set before him, he endured the cross, thinking nothing of the shame and ignominy of it, and he has taken his seat (for ever, as the perfect tense denotes) at the right hand of the throne of God.

3-13. That ' Sign of contradiction ', which is Jesus, b well considered is a remedy for all faint-heartedness, 3. There had been few martyrdoms amongst this Hebrew-Christian community, and the ordinary discipline of hard-knocks is only what children must expect. Prov 3:11 is cited as showing that chastisement is a sign of God's love. 4-8. To be under discipline therefore is a cause of joy, for it makes those who partake of it feel that they belong to the family. 9. Submission to the chastising hand of an earthly father of our flesh has been a matter of filial reverence. Are we then to demur when the heavenly Father of spirits uses a chastening hand to lead us to eternal life? 10. Human discipline fits us for a fleeting life, and it may at times be arbitrary or wrong, but God's educational regime is always profitable and sanctifying. 11. Not the present but the future is the proper test. Chastisement here and now is painful, but later it produces the peaceful fruit of justice. 12-13. Therefore, no slackness! The limping limb must not be allowed to get dislocated but rather set on the way of recovery.

14-24 Peace, Holiness, Fidelity : Sinal and Slon—14. c Peace belongs to the children of God; and striving after the purity of holiness is the necessary road to the vision of God. 15. Charity has an 'episcopal' eye; its overseership must ensure that no one defaults from the grace of God, and that no bitter root of poisonous influence causes disturbance resulting in the defilement of the many. 16-17. The spirit of fornication and profane low-mindedness—the latter (and perhaps both) exemplified in Esau—is not to be tolerated. The dangers of a mentality steeped in earth are very real. Esau sold his rights of primogeniture for one mess of pottage, and later when he sought, even with tears, a return of the paternal blessing—which in the Providence of God his profanity had sold to Jacob—he was rejected by his father Isaac who refused to repent of his decision. Opportunities can be irreparably lost by the low-

944e minded, cf. §§ 938a, b, 942c. 18. Sion demands greater fidelity and sweeter obedience than Sinai. This is powerfully shown in a two-panelled picture. 19-21. Sinai was a material mountain, blazing with terrible fire, surrounded by such darkness as precedes a storm, and the murkiness of heaped-up clouds, disturbed even by the fury of tempestuous wind. The long-drawn sound of a trumpet and the angelic voice representing God so dreadful that the people asked that they should be spared those terrors of God's Majesty. Even a beast that touched the Mountain, while God legislated from it, had to be stoned. Moses himself showed the awe which he felt for he said 'I am utterly terrified and trembling'—words substantially spoken by him on account of the apostasy of the Golden Calf, Deut 9:19, but psychologically representing his terror at the whole scene of God's majesty manifested on the Mountain. 22-24. On the other hand, Christians have come to a Mountain which is Sion, to a City which is the city of the Living God, to a Jerusalem which is heavenly—to myriads of angels, a truly festive assembly (πανηγύρις)—to a Church of first-born enrolled in heaven (all enjoying the privileges of primogeniture: blessing and double portion—and enrolled in God's book of heavenly citizens), to God the Judge of all, and to those favourably judged by him, namely, the spirits of the just who have come to perfection in the beatific vision already attained—to the Mediator of the New Covenant Jesus (of whom much has been said)—and to a blood of sprinkling crying for pardon more loudly than the blood of Abel cried for vengeance. The Rest and Peace of Sion are in this diptych set in strong contrast to the terrors of Sinai.

d 25-29 Last Warning—When God speaks, the earth shakes. He spoke from Sinai and the people made an act of refusal. He speaks now from heaven and this time his voice produces a shaking of earth and heaven, that is, of all creation—a shaking predicted by Aggeus, 2:6-8, and ending in an unchangeable kingdom. Therefore, we who have received that kingdom must have grace and serve God with a great desire to please him—always with pious reverence and deep fear, for our God is a consuming fire, Deut 4:24; 9:3.

e XIII 1-17 Appendix—1-6. Various admonitions. Charity, purity, detachment are the first triad. Charity must be constantly fraternal, given to hospitality (in the exercise of which Abraham and Lot received Angels, Gen 18:3), and compassionate (nourished by the remembrance of our fellowship in misery). Marriage must be surrounded with great respect in all that belongs to it. God, the great Defender of undefiled nuptial unions, will not fail to punish fornicators and adulterers. Detachment from money goes with trust in Providence, which trust is inspired by the freely adapted words of God to the Israelites in general, Deut 31:6, and to Josue in particular, Deut 31:6; Jos 1:5. The Psalm text, 117:6, is an act of confidence from the Hymn of the Cornerstone.

Loyalty, 7, 8, religious fidelity, 9-16, obedience to superiors, 17, sum up the rest. Devoted remembrance of dead leaders (like Stephen, James the son of Zebedee, James the son of Alphaeus) is a reminder that the 'Faith of our Fathers' is the faith of today and of tomorrow—'Jesus Christ yesterday and today and the same (he remains) for ever', 8. 9. An unchangeable faith is necessary. Therefore every doctrinal drift has to be guarded against, and the heart fed with grace rather than the superstition of unprofitable food regulations. 10-14. It is very controverted whether the Eucharistic Altar is the altar from which the servants of the tabernacle cannot eat. The trend of this very difficult passage seems to be: Jesus Crucified is our altar. He was an Expiatory Victim for sin. Now the flesh of Jewish victims on the day of Annual Expiation was not eaten, the bodies being burned outside the camp. Jesus realized this prophetic detail of expiation ritual, for he suffered outside the gate of Jerusalem. Those, therefore, who belong to Jesus must go outside the camp of Judaism to him, even at the cost of carrying his reproach. This is really the programme of all those who decide to leave the Jewish world (and, extensively, every merely terrestrial camp) behind them, in their resolution to journey to the lasting City of Heaven. The author does not say that the body of Jesus is not eaten, and, of course, it was not burned. He says that we have an altar and implies that we eat from it. Knowing the Eucharistic history of the Jerusalem community as we do, Ac 2:42, it seems solidly probable that the Eucharist was in the mind of St Paul as he wrote these words. 15-16. To the great real victim, he adds metaphorical victims of praise ('fruit of lips'), and also the well-pleasing victims of beneficence and generously helpful communication in the needs of others. 17. Submission to superiors is urged from the beautiful motive of sympathy with their watchful solicitude. They have to give an account. That it should be a sad one is our loss rather than theirs. XIII 18-25 Epilogue—18-19. The Apostle asks the prayers of the Hebrews, in the consciousness of his own devotedness, and in the hope of returning to them sooner. 20-21. In turn, he prays for them in the remembrance of Christ's resurrection through the blood of an eternal testament, asking that God, who thus brought back from the dead the Great Shepherd of the sheep, might, through him their Mediator, fit the Hebrews for the doing of every good in the well-pleasing accomplishment of the will of God. The doxology goes to our Lord Jesus Christ. 22-25. Concluding, he begs that the word of consolation written with epistolary brevity be well received, 22, and announces that Timothy has been released (from a captivity otherwise unknown). The final salutations are to the 'Superiors and all the Saints'. Those 'from Italy' are presumably in Italy, from where (probably Rome) the letter was written: 'Grace be with you all. Amen'.

THE CATHOLIC EPISTLE OF ST JAMES THE APOSTLE

By H. WILLMERING, S.J.

945a Bibliography—G. Estius, In Omnes D. Pauli Epistolas et Catholicas Commentarii, ed. L. Vivès, t. 3, Paris, 1891; A. Camerlynck, Commentarius in Epistolas Catholicas, Bruges, 1909^a; *J. H. Ropes, Epistle of St James, ICC, Edinburgh, 1916; J. Chainé, L'Épître de Saint Jacques, Paris, 1927; J. Charue, Les Épîtres Catholiques, La Sainte Bible, ed. Pirot, Tome XII, Paris, 1938; J. Bonsirven, art. Épître de Saint Jacques, DBVS, Paris, 1948, 783–95; M. Meinertz, Der Jakobusbrief, BB, Bonn, 1932^a.

b The Author—‘James the servant of God and of our Lord Jesus Christ’, this is all the direct information which the author of this Epistle gives about himself. Is it to be considered an authentic work of apostolic times, or ‘as probably the pseudonymous production of a Christian of Jewish origin, living in Palestine in the last quarter of the 1st cent. or in the first quarter of the second’ as Ropes conjectures (p 1)? Catholic tradition solidly favours authenticity, and many non-Catholic authors concur with this tradition. Those who hold that the Epistle is pseudonymous point out: its pure Greek style, its silence on many questions which were agitating the Church of the first generation, and its uncertain position in the NT canon. Yet the following facts strongly favour authenticity. A forger would have identified himself with James the Apostle, or the Lord’s brother, by inserting the title in the inscription. Likewise the authoritative tone adopted by the author seems to indicate that he held an official position which would be recognized by Jewish converts. Lastly, the Epistle has many points of contact with the First Gospel, and ‘there is every appearance that the writer had been a personal follower of the Lord’, *G. Salmon, Introduction to the NT, London, 1904^a, 454.

c Assuming, therefore, that the author belonged to NT times, can we identify him with one of the Apostles of Christ, or with the Lord’s brother, the Bishop of Jerusalem? The majority of the Fathers of the Western Church identify the writer with James the Apostle, the son of Alphaeus, whereas in the Eastern Church the opinion of Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. 2, 23, 4, led some to distinguish between the son of Alphaeus and the Lord’s brother, who was Bishop of Jerusalem. For a discussion of the question ‘The Brethren of the Lord’ cf. §§ 672–3. There are, however, solid arguments for the view that James the Apostle is identical with James the Lord’s brother. In Gal 1:19 St Paul writes: ‘But other of the Apostles I saw none, save James the brother of the Lord’; and 2:9 he says: ‘James and Cephas and John, who seemed to be pillars, gave to me and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship’, where James is put on a par with Peter and John, two Apostles. Ac 1:13 names all the Apostles, and among them the name of ‘James’ appears twice. Later, 12:2 we read: ‘And he (Herod Agrippa) killed James the brother of John with the sword’. In the same chapter, 12:17, Peter, who had just been miraculously delivered from prison, says: ‘Tell these things to James and the brethren’. Here ‘James’ is used without any distinguishing epithet, and we logically think of the only other James mentioned earlier in Acts, namely, James the son of Alphaeus. Ac 15:13, James again appears at the side of Peter, and speaks with apostolic authority to Paul and Barnabas and the whole Christian church. Ac 21:18 tells how this same James receives an account from Paul of his missionary labours, an evident indication that he held an official position in the Jerusalem community.

Canonlicity—Until the middle of the 3rd cent. the inspired character of Jas was questioned by some churches and accepted by others; and a century later Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. 3:25, lists Jas among the ‘antilegomena’ or disputed books of the NT. St Jerome, De Vir. Illust. 2, writes: ‘Some hold it was actually written by another under his name, though in the course of time it gradually was accepted as authentic’. It is omitted from the canonical list contained in the Muratorian Fragment, but finds a place on other canonical lists of NT books, e.g. of Athanasius, PG 26, 1176; Origen, PG 12, 857; Cyril of Jerusalem, PG 33, 500; Third Council of Carthage, Dz 92; Pope Damasus, Dz 84; Innocent I, Dz 96. Commentaries on Jas were written by Clement of Alexandria and SS Cyril of Jerusalem and John Chrysostom, PG 64, 1039 ff. Finally, Jas is quoted as Scripture by SS Ephraem, Hilary, Jerome, Ambrose, Augustine and others. Hence we can claim that this Epistle found almost universal acceptance in the Church from the 4th to the 16th cent., when Erasmus, Cajetan and Luther revived the doubt about its authenticity and canonicity. Both were settled for Catholics at the fourth session of the Council of Trent, Dz 784.

Destination and Purpose—The Epistle was addressed • to Christians, 1:18; 2:1; converts from Judaism, 1:1; exposed to trials of many kinds, 1:2, 12; 5:7, 10; poor in material goods, 2:5; and oppressed by the rich, 2:6. Amid such hardships they sometimes manifested a lack of ‘the wisdom from above’; e.g. they sought too eagerly for material riches, 4:1 f, catered for the rich and snubbed the poor in their community, 2:1–3; neglected the corporal works of mercy, 2:14–17; failed to control the tongue, 3:14; and quarrelled among themselves, 4:1 f. Such faults were common to all Jewish communities, and cannot be used to identify any particular community to which this Epistle was sent. The purpose of the author was to correct these faults and to encourage the faithful to be patient, constant in faith, cheerful, charitable, sincere, and to seek the peace and wisdom that descends from above, 3:17 f.

Date and Place of Composition—There is considerable f uncertainty about the time when this Epistle was written. Scholars who admit the authenticity are nearly equally divided in claiming an early or a late date. The former group call attention to the primitive character of the teaching embodied in this Epistle, to the absence of any trace of the decision adopted by the Council of Jerusalem, Ac 15:28 f., or of the controversy which occasioned it. The allusions to hunger, poverty and persecution are said to indicate the date of composition as A.D. 45, when the famine foretold by Agabus, Ac 11:28–30, and the persecution inflicted on the Church by Herod Agrippa, Ac 12:1 ff., were raging, cf. CE 8, 276. The other group consider these arguments less cogent than the following, which postulate a later date: the teaching of St Paul regarding justification by faith seems to have called forth some of the statements made in Jas 2:14–26. Likewise the conditions mentioned in the Epistle, namely, a certain laxity in the performance of Christian obligations, 945f 2:14 ff.; lack of charity, 1:27 ff., mercy, 2:13 ff., moderation, 3:1 ff., temperance, 4:1-5, humility, 4:6-10 and justice 5:1-6, seem very much out of place in the earliest Christian period. Since the date assigned to St James' death is about A.D. 62, the probable date of composition might be A.D. 61, and the probable place Jerusalem, where James was bishop, cf. Chaine, LXXXVII ff.

g Theme and Analysis of the Epistle—Many different topics are treated, and often the transition is abrupt. What St James chiefly wished to correct was the tendency among converts from Judaism to follow the ways of worldly instead of heavenly wisdom. After a brief salutation, he alludes to various trials and bids his readers to bear them with joy and patience, 1:2-4, for which wisdom is needed that must be secured by confident prayer, 5-8; help may also be found in a correct estimate of the existing conditions of life, 9-11. Happy are they who remain steadfast under trial, for their reward will be an eternal crown, 12. Not all will be constant, but if any are overcome let them not blame God for their sin, who tempts no man to evil, 13-18. It avails naught to be a mere hearer of the law, 19; so let them curb a tendency to anger and malice, practise charity and purity, 20-27. Directly opposed to Christian justice and charity is the practice of catering for the rich and despising the poor; for God chose many of the latter to the faith, and the rich as a class are enemies of Christ and his followers. Christians must observe the whole law, and so speak and act as the Gospel requires, for according to its precepts they will be judged, 2:1-13.

Faith without works is a contradiction, and charity that limits itself to kind words, without manifesting itself in works of mercy, is an anomaly. A mere theoretical faith in God differs little from the belief of the devils. Abraham's and Rahab's faith revealed itself in works, which shows that faith without works is dead, 14-25.

b No one should be over-anxious to assume the responsibility of a teacher, and all should exercise great care in restraining the tongue, a powerful instrument for good or evil. He who controls his tongue has perfect self-command. How inconsistent and unnatural to use the same instrument to praise God and curse the neighbour, 3:1-12. Gentleness and moderation are products of true wisdom, whereas envy, contention and falsehood spring from earthly wisdom, 13-18. Wars and contentions grow out of unrestrained desires. By becoming too attached to this world, men are alienated from God. Only humble submission, purity of heart, and true repentance can draw down God's favour and grace, 4:1-10. Detraction and rash judgment should be carefully avoided, 11-13a. Man is ever dependent on God for life and everything else; hence when he acts and speaks as if he were his own master, he violates God's rights, 13b-17. Terrible will be the judgement of God on the rich, who glory in riches accumulated through injustice and used for purposes of self-indulgence and oppression of the just, 5:1-6. Then follow words of comfort for the oppressed, who are exhorted to be patient and trust in God, as did Job. Let them avoid swearing, and have frequent recourse to prayer, particularly in times of sadness, joy, sickness of body or soul; for God willingly hears the prayers of the just, as is proved by the example of Elias, 7-18. Finally, they are told to work for the conversion of their erring brethren, 19-20.

946a Doctrinal Content—Being pre-eminently a practical message, the Epistle does not expound the distinctive teachings of Christianity, but rather supposes them; e.g. we shall find no reference to the redemption through the passion and death of Christ, to his resurrection or the coming of the Holy Spirit. Yet the exhortations are Christian in tone, and there are many allusions to Christ's teachings, particularly as found in the Sermon on the Mount. Like his Divine Master, St James stresses the blessedness of poverty and purity of heart; he would have us bear our trials with joy and pray with confidence; he warns against yielding to anger, forming rash judgements, indulging in oaths, courting the friendship of the world; he shows the uselessness of faith without works. But all these are practical, not doctrinal matters.

It has sometimes been rashly asserted that St James b contradicts the teaching of St Paul on justification by faith. In Rom 3:20 and Gal 2:16, the latter states that man is justified not by the works of the law, but by faith; St James, on the contrary, insists that faith without works is dead and of no avail for salvation, 2:14-26. The explanation of this apparent discrepancy is to be found in the different approach of each writer to the subject. St James is explaining the nature of faith which justifies, namely, that it cannot remain purely theoretical, but must issue in good works. St Paul, however, is arguing against certain Judaizers, who wish to make salvation dependent on the observance of the Mosaic Law. His point is that Christians are freed from the yoke of the Mosaic Law and not bound by its precepts. The Christian law has superseded the old law, hence the works of the old law are worthless for salvation, whereas faith in Christ is absolutely necessary for it. But St Paul does require good works to accompany faith and to spring from its teachings. In Gal 5:6 he speaks of 'faith that worketh by charity'; Rom 2:6, 'God will render to every man according to his works'; Eph 2:10 says that we are created to perform good works; and every Epistle has its exhortations to practise Christian virtues, e.g. Rom 12-14; Eph 4-6.

It is the teaching of the Council of Trent, session 14, De Extrema Unctione, canons 1-4, Dz 926-9, that Jas 5:14 refers to the Sacrament of Extreme Unction. There is question in this passage of a Christian who is seriously ill. He is to summon the priests of the church, who should do two things for the sufferer: 'pray over him', i.e. apply certain prayers with perhaps an imposition of hands, and 'anoint him with oil in the name of the Lord', i.e. by commission and with the authority of Christ. This latter phrase applies to both the prayer and the action. Accordingly the anointing is to be regarded as a religious rite and not as a medicinal remedy, which seems to follow also from the effects described in verse 15: God will save the sick man, raise him up, and forgive him his sins. The first two phrases, independently of the context, might refer to a restoration of bodily health; but the third phrase expresses an undoubted spiritual effect, which includes a bestowal of sanctifying grace. 'To save' is used five times in this Epistle, 1:21; 2:14; 4:12; 5:20 and in this context 5:15. In the first four instances it refers to saving the soul; hence it is very probable that it has the same meaning here. Without excluding a restoration of bodily health, we claim that 'saving the soul of the sick man' is a legitimate interpretation of the phrase in its context. The purpose, therefore, of the prayer of faith and the anointing with oil is to heal the soul and wipe out the remains of sins of the sick man. Restoration to health through the Sacrament of Extreme Unction is a secondary effect which does not always happen. Cf. C. Pickar, O.S.A. art. Is Anyone Sick among You? CBQ 7 (1945) 165-74.

Text and Style—Variant readings in the Greek text d of this Epistle are few and of little importance. Vg differs from the Greek text about eight times, as indicated in the commentary. The style of Jas is individual and striking, unlike that of any other book of the NT. It somewhat resembles that of Prov and Wis, and occasionally rivals the oratory of the prophets. The Greek is fluent and accurate, the vocabulary extensive, the expression vivid and colourful. It abounds in apt and impressive illustrations frequently drawn from nature. Some of the warnings and rebukes are severe and cutting, being prompted by true zeal and sincerity of purpose.

I-1 The Greeting—The short and simple form of this e greeting corresponds to the ordinary type of address of a Greek letter, Ac 23:26. James, like Moses, is a servant of God; and like Peter, a slave of Jesus Christ, 946a 2 Pet 1:1. His words of spiritual counsel and encouragement are addressed to the Christian Israel in all parts of the world. On 'the dispersion' cf. 1 Pet 1:1.

2-4 Value of Trials—This opening paragraph shows the anxiety of the writer for the faithful under trial. 2. Aware that their faith is being put to the test by manifold afflictions, he bids them to look upon themselves as blessed when they suffer persecution for justice's sake. 3. For the time of trial is a training school in which lessons of endurance, constancy, and solid virtue are effectively taught. Men of strong faith will stand firm in times of affliction when weaker brethren falter and give way. 4. Patient endurance tends to purify the soul, to sanctify and perfect it. A soul is perfected by the removal of everything contrary to the love of God, cf. Aquin. ST II, 2, Q. cxxxiv, Art. 2.

f 5-8 Plea for Heavenly Wisdom—Usually men see only the pain and difficulty connected with afflictions, and far from bearing them with joyful resignation they complain bitterly and even rebel against them. 5. Human nature, left to its own resources and guided only by natural reason, is incapable of regarding the hardships of life as sources of joy. Only God-given wisdom can cause men to look upon tribulations as messengers of Divine Providence. 6. This wisdom is bestowed upon those who ask for it with confidence. God is always ready to grant it with fatherly affection, setting no limits to his generosity and administering no reproaches. But the prayer must be made with faith, i.e. with entire confidence, never doubting God's goodness and bounty. 8. He who hesitates will not be heard because he is 'double-minded', i.e. when he prays, his mind fluctuates between hope and fear, doubt and desire; and his whole conduct is fickle and inconsistent. Is it surprising that such a petitioner should receive nothing from God?

g 9-11 Practical Application—9. The poor man, through the patient endurance of poverty, will resemble his Divine Lord, who promised eternal life to the poor in spirit, Mt 5:3. Thus is he exalted through his low condition. 10. The rich man, under the influence of divine wisdom, should humble himself before God, and recognize the worthlessness and transient nature of his wealth. Two other possible interpretations of this verse are: the rich man is to rejoice when he is brought low by adversity; and, taking the phrase ironically, the rich man rejoices in what is worthless in God's sight, hence by glorying in perishable wealth he is actually degrading himself, because he does not live up to Christian standards. The first meaning seems best in the context. 12. The climax to this section on the value of trials is reached in the reward promised to the man who remains steadfast. With character matured, virtue perfected, and the love of God fully tested by trials patiently endured, the victor's crown of eternal glory will be his according to God's promise.

h 13-18 The Source of Temptation to Evil—Unfortunately not all Christians remain steadfast and many are overcome by temptation. They are warned not to throw the blame for their failure on God. Temptations may be considered as external trials or internal solicitations to sin. Previously St James was speaking about tests of character or of virtue; now he refers to influences that allure to sin. In themselves temptations are not sins, and when resisted they are the occasions for exercising virtue. When not resisted, the voluntary yielding to the temptation is what constitutes the sin. 13. Weak men are so apt to try to shift the blame for their inconstancy on God, who put them in such circumstances, gave them so yielding a disposition, and allowed them to meet with such evil companions. But God himself 'is untempted by evil', and everything sinful is utterly foreign to his nature. He cannot desire evil, nor solicit man to commit evil. 14. Temptation to evil has its source in the individual. The bait that draws and allures him is concupiscence, the unruly passions and disorderly appetites. Sensuality or pride is aroused by some inducement to self-indulgence:

anger or jealousy is stirred up by someone crossing his path, or standing in the way of his ambitions. When passion is aroused, it acts like a lustful woman on the will of man; it seeks to induce the will to enter into an unlawful alliance. 15. If the will consents, the first sin is committed through the evil desires that fill the heart, whereby concupiscence is said to conceive. The desires may lead to acts, and graver sin results. Finally, the sinful state may persist and grow to a sinful habit. Thus completed, sin begets death, eternal death, which stands in contrast to the 'crown of life' held out to him who resists temptation.

17. Good gifts come from God, because he is Goodness itself. Unlike the luminous bodies which he created by an act which entitles him to be called 'the Father of lights', he is unchangeable in his eternal purpose, which is never obscured or altered. No need to find here 'echoes of Zoroastrian cult' or 'astrological speculation'. The beauty of the oriental heaven by day and night deeply impressed the Psalmist, Ps 18:1 ff., and might readily suggest to a naive observer that the Creator of such bright, spotless, heavenly bodies could not will anything evil; also, to the fact that the mutations and revolutions of the heavenly bodies indicate dependence on a Creator, cf. Meinertz, 24. 18. God's most perfect and absolutely free gift to us is our regeneration through the word of truth, the Gospel, whereby he willed to make us 'a kind of first-fruits of his creatures'. Under the old dispensation, the first-fruits of the harvest were offered to the Lord as an acknowledgement that the entire harvest came from him and belonged to him. Under the new dispensation, those regenerated through faith and baptism are the first-fruits of the human race. They belong to God, and are a reminder that all men belong to their Creator, and have duties towards him.

19-21 Curbing Anger and Malice—Dedication to the service of God puts the regenerated under special obligations, expressed in a proverb similar to sayings in the OT; Prov 13:3; 17:27; Eccles 5:13 ff.; 20 passim. 19. A certain eagerness in hearing, and reticence in speech, and slowness to take offence is recommended. Men are often sorry for having said too much, or having spoken out of anger; but they seldom regret that they listened first and held their angry feelings under control. 20. Outbursts of anger are not conducive to holiness, and God's cause may suffer much through untimely and intemperate zeal. 21. Another hindrance to holiness is uncleanness, i.e. every kind of sinful defilement, and 'excess of malice', which is opposed to meekness. These hindrances are like weeds that encumber the ground and prevent the growth of the seed, the implanted word, Mt 13:22; but when the word of God is free and unencumbered, it is able to save men's soul.

22-27 Doors and Hearers of the Word—22. The Gospel requires the co-operation of man's will to make it effective for salvation. It is not enough to listen to it and approve it; it must be taken to heart and reduced to action. Apparently some of the readers had not been making sufficient efforts to live in strict conformity with Gospel principles; yet these must regulate their lives, not merely in general but in every phase of it. Whoever is satisfied with knowing what is required, without making the necessary effort to act according to this knowledge, is deceiving himself by thinking that he is on the road to salvation. 24. The comparison to a man, who idly gazes into a mirror without having any definite purpose in mind while doing so, illustrates the fallacy by which the 'hearer' is deceiving himself. The reflexion of the mirror will not remove the stains and blemishes it discloses. 25. Now the Gospel is a mirror of the soul, which shows one's conformity or lack of it to the requirements of Christian conduct. Looking into it calls for a spiritual change; and if this does not follow, no benefit has been received. Compared to the old law, the Gospel is 'the perfect law of liberty', being founded on love and not on fear, Rom 8:15. One who continually lives according to its principles leads a 947b blessed life. He is at peace with God and his neighbour. 26. As illustrations of what must be done and what should be avoided, St James cites three urgent duties: restraint of the tongue, a practical interest in the needs of orphans and widows, and an avoidance of the vices of the pagan world.

• II:1-13 No Snobbery—If the true Christian spirit demands an active benevolence towards the poor and afflicted, then a display of partiality towards the rich in Christian assemblies is entirely out of place and in direct contradiction to the principles of the Gospel. Hence the opening admonition: 'My brethren, have not the faith', i.e. do not try to reconcile the faith, 'of our glorious Lord Jesus Christ with respect of persons'.

2. The church is for the poor as well as for the rich, and to make a show of servility towards a well-dressed and obviously wealthy person by offering him a place of honour, while ushering a poorly clad man into a corner, is to be snobbish and unjust in judgement.

4. Such conduct is based solely on external appearances, which often enough belie the interior character. 5. It also contradicts the judgement of God, who shows more favour to the poor. The majority of the first converts belonged to that class, which is indicative of God's favour, because he thus makes them heirs of eternal life instead of bestowing upon them material riches.

d 6. The rich, as a class, are enemies of Christ and of his followers. They oppress Christians and drag them before the law courts, and worst of all they blaspheme the holy name of Christ. 8. The 'royal law' of fraternal charity forbids snobbery. It is called the 'royal law' because it is a fundamental principle of the kingdom of Christ, which together with 'the first and greatest commandment' forms the ground-work on which 'dependeth the whole law and the prophets', Mt 22:40. 10. On account of the unity and internal cohesion of the law, a man who violates one precept, is guilty of transgressing the law as a whole. 11. Not all sins are equal; but every serious sin (and there is question here of grave matter) indicates contempt of the authority of the Lawgiver. 12. The words and deeds of Christians should always conform to the law of Christ, which is 'the law of liberty' because, through the spirit of adoption, the baptized are set free from the spirit of bondage attached to the old law, Rom 8:15; and by this law of liberty all Christians will be judged. 13. There is a law of divine retribution; but at times mercy triumphs over severity.

• 14-26 Faith and Works—Faith is lifeless if nothing issues from it. Faith without works will not obtain mercy for us at the judgement. 14. A believer, who contents himself with kind words and wishes but does not practise works of mercy towards a fellow Christian reduced to extreme necessity, boasts of a faith that lacks an essential quality to make it effective for eternal salvation. Hence, faith without works is worthless and unprofitable to the possessor. 18. If faith really exists, it is interior, and cannot be shown to others; whereas, if it issues in good works, these may be offered as proofs of one's faith. 19. To demonstrate the worthlessness of a mere theoretical faith, an example is furnished by the belief in the unity of God. Even the devil assents to this doctrine; furthermore, it causes them to tremble; but this shows that such assent is valueless for eternal life. 20. The kind of faith that is necessary for salvation is like Abraham's, who was justified by works, because his faith issued in unhesitating obedience to God's order to sacrifice his son Isaac. By this his faith was perfected. 25. Rahab gave shelter to the spies of Josue, and saved their lives, because she firmly believed in the God of Israel, Jos 2:11; thus furnishing another example of faith productive of works.

f III 1-12 Control of the Tongue—1. The next admonition is: 'Be ye not many teachers', since not everyone is qualified to teach, and he who poses as an instructor without the requisite qualifications is liable to a severe judgement. 2. The office of teaching then suggests the manner of controlling the tongue. In many ways faults may be committed, but in none more readily than in too great freedom of speech. The man who has perfect control of his tongue may have his faults, but compared with him who continually offends by speech he is a perfect man. The self-control implied in properly guarding the tongue will manifest itself in one's whole conduct.

3-5. Two similes are used to illustrate the possibility of control and the smallness of the instrument involved. g

6. The destructive power of the tongue is likened to that of fire. Sometimes a tiny spark may kindle an entire forest. There is such possibility of evil in uncontrolled speech, that the tongue is called 'a world of iniquity'. By it defiling passions may be kindled, fostered and gratified. Thus it may set on fire and destroy the whole course of life, because the source from which the tongue derives its destructive power is the devil. The great difficulty of curbing the tongue requires prayer for grace and constant watchfulness. 'Inflameth the wheel of our nativity', i.e. life is likened to a wheel which is in continuous motion from birth till death, and throughout this period the tongue may give trouble. 9. How inconsistent some men are, when they first use the tongue to praise God, and then turn upon their fellowmen with curses and slanders. This inconsistency is also pointed out by two illustrations from nature. Some of the similes used by St James are likewise found in classical authors; e.g. man's control of natural forces and brute animals is contrasted with his lack of self-control in Sophocles, Antigone, 332-50; 475 f. A tiny spark kindling a great forest is used by Homer, Iliad, II, 455, and Virgil, Georg., II, 303; but it is more likely that St James adopted this figure from Prov 16:27 or Eccles 12:12.

13-18 True and False Wisdom—Sins of the tongue are often prompted by an affectation of being endued with more knowledge than others, and perfect control of it indicates a truly wise man. Wisdom may always be recognized by its works: purity, tranquillity, modesty, docility, equity, mercy and piety.

IV:1-10 Sources of Discord—A serious lack of control of the tongue, and an absence of true wisdom, are manifested by party strifes and individual quarrels, that originate from innate concupiscence and selfish desires. Concupiscence has its seat in our bodily members, and uses them as instruments to self-gratification which, far from leading to true happiness, engenders hatred and envy of others. Necessary favours should be sought from God through prayer. But when one asks for worldly things for the purpose of self-gratification, how can God grant the request? 4. The attachment to worldly riches or pleasures is a species of spiritual adultery. God and the world stand opposed to each other as rivals, and we cannot serve two opposing masters, Mt 6:24. 5. In many places the inspired writings state that the Spirit who dwells in man is a jealous God, Ex 20:5; Deut 5:9; Os 1-3; Zach 8:2. 6. If God craves the undivided love of man, it is because he bestows blessings incomparably greater than the world can offer. 7. In order to obtain this more abundant grace, we must first be humble and submissive to his will, resist the devil and put him to flight, and then draw near to God and live in his presence. The hands, typical of exterior actions, and the heart, seat of our affections, must be cleansed from sin by sincere contrition and purpose of amendment, and from attachment to worldly honours and pleasures; otherwise we remain 'double-minded', i.e. divided in our allegiance, wishing to follow God and the world simultaneously. 9. When St James urges his readers to 'be afflicted, and mourn, and weep', he does not ask them to suppress all moderate laughter, and forego all innocent joy; but he is pointing out to the worldly-minded what they must do to regain God's favour and grace.

11-13 Detraction—Further cautions are given against sinful judging and censuring one's neighbour, which have their origin in resentment and envy. To depreciate the character of a fellow-man, is to depreciate the law. A detractor steps out of his province and invades 948e that of Almighty God, who alone is the supreme and universal Lawgiver and Judge.

13-17 Presumption—Who will dare boast his independence of God and display an arrogant self-reliance in temporal matters? Our Lord's parable of the Rich Fool, Lk 12:19 f., should be a sound warning against drawing up far-reaching plans for the future. 17. Whoever is aware of his duty of dependence on God and deliberately ignores it, cannot be free from sin.

d V:1-6 Woe to the Rich—We have here a prophetic denunciation of the rich as a class, beginning with a call to attention: 'See here now, ye rich'. The warning is given, probably not to wealthy Christians, but to such men as make the quest of riches their chief aim in life. They may seem prosperous and happy to the casual observer, but in reality their lot is such as will make them weep and howl. 2. The riches they accumulated with so much toil and care, and from which they promised themselves so much, will soon perish through the most insignificant agencies of nature. 3. They will lose what they treasured so highly, and a pain as severe as fire will be the remorse brought on by the guilt incurred in accumulating their wealth. On the day of judgement they will perish with their wealth. 4-6. Three reasons are indicated for this severe judgement: first, injustice was practised in acquiring riches, e.g. wages were withheld from labourers; secondly, wealth was abused in the pursuit of pleasures and luxury. With a threat of judgement hanging over their heads, they lived like senseless cattle, that continue to graze peacefully till the hour of slaughter. Thirdly, they condemned and put to death inoffensive men, who offered no resistance. Not our Lord, but his persecuted followers, are the objects of this injustice.

e 7-11 Comfort for the Oppressed—The victims of the rich, and all who suffer the trials of life, are now exhorted to wait with trustful patience and submission the arrival of the day of deliverance, termed 'the day of the coming of the Lord'. The reference seems to be to the coming of the Son of Man about which the disciples asked Christ on Mount Olivet, Mt 24:1-42. The prophecy uttered on that occasion was partly fulfilled when the Romans captured Jerusalem and destroyed the Jewish temple. This happened so short a time after this letter was written, that the Apostle could say: 'the coming of the Lord is at hand'. The complete fulfilment must await the day of final judgement, when all wrong will be righted, all patient endurance rewarded, cf. §§ 670-1. 9. 'Murmur not, brethren, one against another': that would be yielding to impatience and irritability, and might lead to recriminations and rash judgements, to merit a severe sentence from the righteous Judge, who is so near that he seems to be standing at the door. 10-11. Seek encouragement from the example of the OT prophets and Job, who endured so much in the proper spirit, and were liberally rewarded for their conduct.

f 12 Avoid Swearing—Oaths are not forbidden in court, or on other solemn occasions; but swearing in common conversation, or for trifling matters, is sinful, and must be avoided by Christians, whose simple word should be enough to vouch for the truth of what is said.

g 13-18 Occasions for Prayer—Many are the vicissitudes of life. Prayer is the first and best remedy for any 948g person suffering from sadness and desolation. It is not easy to pray at such times, but to do so furnishes speedy relief. If, on the contrary, one is in a happy mood, let him praise God in song. Just as prayer saves a man from despair in time of desolation, so prayer will rescue him from pride in time of consolation. 14. When a serious bodily ailment confines one to bed, 'let him call the priests of the church', says the Apostle. 'They are to pray over the sick man, and anoint him with oil in the name of the Lord'. That there is question here of the religious rite of Extreme Unction, and not a corporal remedy only, may be gathered from the fact that 'the priests of the church', and not a physician, are called; that the anointing is carried out 'in the name of the Lord', i.e. with the power and the authority conferred by the Lord; that it is intimately related to 'the prayer of faith', i.e. the prayer said by the priests in the name of the Church, not the prayer of the sick man. 15. As a result of the prayer and the anointing, God 'shall save the sick man, and raise him up; and if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him'. What is the meaning of these three phrases? 'Save' occurs 1:21; 2:14; 4:12 and 5:20 in the sense of acquiring eternal salvation; hence, we may rightly infer that it has that meaning here. 'To raise up' means that, in addition to spiritual succour, God will restore the sick man to health, if he sees fit. Forgiveness of sins, the third effect mentioned, seems to indicate that the spiritual result to be obtained is the main purpose for administering the rite. For a further explanation cf. § 946c.

There is considerable difference of opinion about the meaning of 16. 'Therefore' which is found in the oldest MSS seems to join this admonition to the preceding one; yet it is hard to see what connexion a mutual confession of sins has with the anointing of the sick. Perhaps 'therefore' has reference to the next clause, 'pray for one another' as Camerlynck, 72, suggests. Then the sense would be: If the prayer of faith over the sick, together with the anointing, is able to save the sick man; and 'if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him', then it is expedient to 'pray one for another that you may be saved', i.e. eternally. For the purpose of convincing one another of the need of mutual prayer, a mutual confession of sin is recommended. Older interpreters, like St Thomas, S. T. Suppl. q. 6, a. 6, and St Robert Bellarmine, De Poenit. lib. 3, c. 4; regard this passage as an exhortation to sacramental confession, thereby assigning a very restricted meaning to the phrase, 'confess your sins one to another', namely, confession of sins to a delegated priest. Interpreters, who defend this restricted meaning, cite as examples, Rom 15:7; 1 Thes 5:11; Eph 5:21. In these passages, they claim, the restricted meaning of 'one another' is borne out by the context. But only the last instance allows such a meaning, and it is doubtful whether it may be applied in the present context.

17. In order to encourage the practice of mutual prayer, St James calls attention to the efficacy of a just man's prayer, and cites as an outstanding example the results obtained by the prophet Elias, 3 Kg 17 and 18. 19-20 Conclusion—The Epistle ends with a final recommendation to work for the conversion of the erring brethren, promising as a reward for such zeal a full remission of sins and final salvation.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF ST PETER

By H. WILLMERING, S.J.

949a Bibliography—G. Estius, cf. 945a; A. Camerlynck, cf. 945a; *C. Bigg, Epistles of SS Peter and Jude, ICC, Edinburgh, 1922; W. Vrede, Der erste Petrusbrief, BB 9, Bonn, 1932⁴; U. Holzmeister, S.J., Epistula Prima S. Petri, CSS, Paris, 1937; *E. G. Selwyn, The First Epistle of St Peter, London, 1947; *F. W. Beare, The First Epistle of St Peter, Oxford, 1947; G. Thils, L'Enseignement de Saint Pierre, Paris, 1943; J. Daniélou, Déluge, Baptême, Jugement, Dieu vivant, 8 (1947), 97-112. A. Charuc, cf. § 945a.

b Authorship—The authorship of St Peter, the Apostle, was universally accepted until recently. In the early Church 1 Pet was known and utilized by SS Clement of Rome, Ignatius, Papias, Polycarp, and by the authors of the Epistle of Barnabas and the Shepherd of Hermas. It is quoted as St Peter's by St Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Origen, Tertullian, St Cyprian, etc., and Eusebius lists it among the uncontroverted sacred writings, Hist. Eccl. 3, 2, 52. It is found in all canonical lists of NT books, except in the Muratorian Fragment, which omission in this case is insignificant. It likewise had its place in the Old Latin and Syriac versions.

c Modern non-Catholic scholarship commonly objects to the Petrine authorship for three reasons. (1) The epistle implies that Christianity is proscribed, and its adherents are being persecuted by Roman officials; but such a general persecution did not occur until the time of Trajan (A.D. 98-117). (2) There is a dependence on the Pauline Epistles, especially Rom and Eph, and it is very unlikely that St Peter would borrow from his rival, St Paul. (3) The style is far removed from the colloquial Greek which a Galilean fisherman would use. We answer: (1) The persecution implied in 2:12; 3:9-16; 4:4-16 came from the pagan crowds (Gentiles), not from the Roman officials. It consisted of slanders, outrages, false accusations of crime, reproaches for the name of Christ. Such forms of persecution Christians were exposed to from the beginning, cf. Suetonius, Nero 16; Tacitus, Annales 1, 44. (2) We admit that the author was acquainted with Rom and Eph, but deny that SS Peter and Paul were rivals, who differed in their teaching of Christianity. (3) It is very probable that St Peter made use of Silvanus, 5:12, as his secretary, and that, as St Jerome remarks, Ep. ad Hedib. 120, 11, PL 22, 1002, we may attribute the correct style to him.

d Destination and Purpose—The epistle was sent to the churches of Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia, 1:1, five provinces which comprised nearly the whole of Asia Minor. Because it is addressed 'to the elect, who are sojourners in the dispersion', some think that converts from Judaism are primarily addressed; but such expressions as 'former desires of ignorance', 1:14, 'called out of darkness', 2:9, 'who in time past were not a people, but are now a people of God', 2:10, and the vices mentioned in 4:2-4, seem to indicate that the Apostle had Gentile converts chiefly in mind. It is best to consider the churches addressed as composed of converts from both classes, and there is nothing in the epistle which supposes that St Peter was personally known to his readers.

The Christians in these provinces were suffering trials of various kinds, 1:6, 'for justice's sake', 3:14. They were reproached for the name of Christ, and slandered as criminals, 4:14 f. Slaves suffered at the hands of their masters, 2:19, and wives from husbands, 3:1. The persecution was severe and widespread, but unofficial and spasmodic. It cannot be identified with the Neronian or later persecutions. To these sufferers the Apostle offers words of consolation and encouragement. Since they were in danger of yielding under the strain of calumny and violence, the example of the suffering Christ is set before them, 2:21, by whose precious blood they were ransomed, 1:19, by whose resurrection God regenerated them, and destined them for eternal glory, 1:3 f. Accordingly they are urged to bear their sufferings patiently, 2:18; 3:14; 4:13; to practise every Christian virtue: submission to authority, charity, watchfulness, humility, 4:7 f.; 5:5 f. Date and Place of Composition—For St Peter's residence and death in Rome there is solid evidence that goes back to the end of the 1st cent. This is admitted by A. Harnack, Chronologie der altchristl. Literatur, I, 240-3, 703-10; H. Lietzmann, Petrus und Paulus in Rom, Berlin, 1927, 226-38; F. J. Jackson, Evidence for the Martyrdom of Peter and Paul in Rome, JBL 46 (1927) 74-8; cf. Holzmeister, 37-71. Hence, when the Apostle concludes with: 'The church that is in Babylon . . . saluteth you', 5:13, we may reasonably presume that 'Babylon' here, as in Apoc 14:8; 16:19; 17:5; 18:2, 10, 21, refers to Rome as the place of composition. This was held by Papias and Clement of Alexandria, according to Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. 2, 15; cf. also St Jerome, De Vir. Illust. 8, PL 23, 622.

The Apostle seems to have known Eph, because he outlines the same duties for slaves, for wives, for husbands, as in Eph 5:22-33; 6:5-8; cf. also 1 Pet 3:22 and Eph 1:21. Since Eph was written during St Paul's first Roman captivity, which terminated A.D. 62, and in the absence of any clear evidence in 1 Pet of an official Roman persecution of Christians, such as was inaugurated by Nero in August 64, we may date 1 Pet somewhere between A.D. 62 and 64.

Theme and Analysis—The unifying thought in 1 Pet f is that God calls Christians to a new and higher life, which leads to an eternal inheritance. This fact should stimulate the faith and hope of the readers, and cause them to bear all trials patiently, live a holy life, and remain steadfast in faith and charity.

The salutation is similar to that used by St Paul. The Apostle addresses the scattered members of the Christian churches of Asia Minor, 1:1f., and blesses God for his great mercy in calling them to a new life of hope, based on the resurrection of Christ, 3. The prospect of an eternal inheritance and the joy of salvation should outweigh all present trials and sufferings, 4-9. Ages ago the prophets sought to share these Messianic blessings, and even the angels longed to behold them, 10-12. Let them lead a holy life, as befits the children of a holy Father, 13-17, ransomed with the precious blood of Jesus Christ, 18-21, and in particular, let them practice charity, 22-25.

Progress in holiness must be based on Christ as the foundation-stone, 2:1-9. As members of a royal priesthood and of God's people, they must edify their pagan neighbours by refraining from sins of the flesh, and by obedience to authority, 11-17. Slaves should submit to masters with Christ-like patience, 18-25; wives should obey their husbands, and influence them for 940g good by proper conduct ; husbands should treat their wives as co-heirs of eternal life, 3:1-7. All Christians should be compassionate, humble, forgiving, and patient, so as to merit God's protection, 8-12. They should courageously confess their faith before men, be blameless in conduct, full of Christ-like zeal, that they may win a share in Christ's glory, 13-22. His sufferings should cause them to abhor sin and check unruly passions, 4:1-6. The thought of death and judgement should prompt them to pray, practise charity, and work for God's glory, 7-11. He is glorified by suffering resulting from an adherence to Christian principles, but not by such as are caused by evil conduct, 17-19.

The presbyters are to watch over their flocks with tender care, 5:1-4. Obedience, humility, and vigilance are recommended to the laity, whom the devil seeks to destroy, but who are under God's protection, 5-11.

Conclusion : greetings from Rome, and final blessing, 12-14.

h Doctrinal Content—The epistle is chiefly hortatory, yet it contains a rich stratum of doctrinal matter. In keeping with his purpose, the author frequently stresses the Christian's relationship with God the Father and the Son. The Father called him to the faith, 1:15 ; regenerated him, 1:3 ; has care of him, 5:7 ; will perfect him through suffering, and strengthen him in it, and then reward him with eternal glory, 5:10. The Christian's duties to the Father include : fidelity, faith and trust, 1:21 ; praise, 5:11 ; service, 2:16 ; fear, 2:17. God the Son is the Model of innocence and virtue, 2:21-23 ; he is the chief shepherd, 5:4 ; the shepherd and bishop of his flock, 2:25 ; who died for man, 3:18 ; thus ransoming him with his blood, 1:2, 19 ; who will come again, 1:7, 13 ; to judge mankind, 4:5 ; he is now at the right hand of the Father, 3:22. The Christian's duties to Christ are : to love him, and believe in him whom they have not seen, 1:8 ; to imitate his patience, 1:23 ; share his sufferings, 3:18 ; 4:13 f. The Holy Spirit is mentioned as the source of the means of sanctification, 1:2 ; as the inspirer of those who instruct the faithful, 1:12 ; and as the helper of those who are reproached unjustly, 4:14.

i Text and Style—Comparatively few MSS contain the Catholic Epistles ; hence, in 1 Pet, as in the others, there are few variant readings in the Greek text. Vg follows the Greek text closely and seldom differs from it.

The style is clear, simple, individual and grammatically correct. The vocabulary is large, and contains many words not used elsewhere in the NT. There is a striking arrangement of words in the sentences. Although the author is indebted to many passages of both OT and NT, he does not quote or borrow them as such, but weaves them into his own thought, using them to prove a point or strengthen an exhortation.

950a I 1-3 Salutation—St Peter is the only author of the Catholic Epistles to make use of his apostolic title. Writing to a community outside of Palestine, he uses the Greek form of the name which Christ bestowed upon him, Jo 1:42 ; Mt 16:18 ; and because the readers probably did not know him personally, he mentions his position as 'an Apostle of Jesus Christ' to indicate his official claim to their regard and obedience. The letter is addressed 'to the elect who are sojourners in the dispersion' of Pontus, etc., i.e. to Christians, who are exiled from their real fatherland and are scattered among the inhabitants of the districts of Asia Minor. For further details, cf. § 949d. 2. They are called to the faith 'according to the foreknowledge of God the Father', cf. Rom 8:28 ff., who decreed to give them all the means of salvation and sanctification through the Holy Spirit, which goal is achieved by obedience to Jesus Christ. Ex 24:3-8 tells how God made a covenant with the Israelites, when Moses sprinkled the people with the blood of calves as 'the blood of the covenant', and pledged their obedience to God's law. At the Last Supper, Christ inaugurated a new covenant in his own blood with his followers, whereby they contracted to obey and follow him. Thus they became the new people of God by the 'sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ'.

3-5 Thanksgiving for God's Mercy—Such a prayer, as the Apostle formulates here, the Jews often used, and St Paul opens 2 Cor and Eph in a similar way. God is blessed for bestowing upon Christians a new life of hope, the basis of which is the resurrection of Jesus Christ ; its goal is an inheritance, imperishable and secure, which is still in the future, but is already prepared, and only waits for the proper time to be revealed. That time is the day of the second coming of Christ.

6-12 Joy in Time of Trial—6. In the assurance which faith gives them of securing eternal salvation, they should be able to bear with joy the various trials to which Divine Providence subjects them. 8. Unlike human love, which depends upon personal contact for its existence, their love is for one whom they have not seen, or rather for one whom they have only seen with the eyes of faith. By believing in him, they have a foretaste of the unspeakable joy of the glorified. 10-12. Due to their interest in the Messianic salvation, the OT prophets tried to fathom the meaning of future events made known to them. They were particularly anxious to know the time when the sufferings and glorifications of the Messias were to take place, but were informed that their prophecies would not be fulfilled during their life time. How fortunate, therefore, are those for whom the prophets predicted such mysteries of grace, which were explained to them by men, who spoke by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven. And not only the prophets, but even the angels longed for a chance to witness and understand the mystery of salvation.

13-16 Exhortation to Holiness—Holiness is a demand put upon them by their new faith. 13. As the Israelites at the time of the Exodus, girded their loins to be ready for a hasty departure, so must Christians be ready for the long journey to eternity. Accordingly, they must not let their thoughts be preoccupied with the interests and pleasures of this life, but 'be sober', i.e. vigilant, so as to attain that blessed grace, which will have its fulfilment on the day of the revelation of Christ. 16. If in the OT the chosen people were to imitate the All-holy God by cultivating purity of heart and blameless conduct, nothing less than this is demanded of Christians, cf. Lev 11:44 ; 19:2 ; 20:7.

17-21 Exhortation to Reverence—17. While invoking God as a Father, let them 'converse in fear', i.e. stand in awe of him, and conduct themselves as dutiful children, since he is an impartial judge. 18. A second reason for reverence is the redemption from 'your vain conversation', i.e. the useless manner of life of their forefathers. 20. The plan of redemption was 'foreknown', i.e. decreed from eternity ; but the fulfilment was reserved for 'the last times', i.e. the Messianic age. 21. 'For your sakes, who through him believe in God'. Gratitude, therefore, should prompt them to reverence God, who glorified Jesus to sustain their hope.

22-25 Exhortation to Charity—St Peter supposes that the Gospel has already had such good effect on his readers as to purify their souls from selfish and sordid motives in their obedience, and that it has produced in them a sincere love for the brethren. This affection is grounded on the supernatural regeneration which they have in common ; hence, it proceeds not from corruptible seed, as happens in man's natural birth, but is had 'by the word of God', i.e. the Gospel.

II 1-10 Exhortation to Progress—Christians are called to a new and higher life, free from malice, deceit, hypocrisy, envy and detraction. Lately born anew, they must develop an appetite for the milk of God's word, and by continually feeding on it grow to maturity in the faith. 2. 'the rational milk without guile', i.e. unadulterated, without any admixture of falsehood. 3. A further inducement to progress are the sweet consolations, which the Lord brings when he takes possession of a soul, cf. Ps 33:9. 4-5. They are to become 'a spiritual house', built up on Christ as the corner-stone. Christ is 'a living stone', i.e. one capable of growth and expansion, capable also of imparting life to others. They are to share in and reproduce this quality by becoming 'as living stones built up' into a temple of God by progress in holiness. But they not only compose the temple, they also minister in it. They constitute a new priesthood that is holy, i.e. they are consecrated to God's service, to offer up spiritual sacrifices of prayer and good works, which are acceptable to God because they are offered through Christ as Mediator. 6. God Himself laid this corner-stone, and he promised salvation to those who believe in Christ, Is 28:16. 7. The Jewish nation, through their leaders, rejected Christ, as was foretold by the Psalmist, 117:22. 8. For those who will not believe in him, Christ is a stone over which they stumble to their eternal ruin, 'whereunto also they are set', i.e. as God has decreed for their punishment, cf. § 698d, e. 9. The Apostle now applies to his readers all the attractive titles of the Israelites, which belong to Christians in a fuller and truer sense. 10. Then wishing to make them realize what their conversion meant, he bids them compare their former with their present state, which he does by paraphrasing Os 2:23 f. 11-12 Exhortation to edify Others—They dwell as strangers in a pagan world; hence, their moral conduct must be faultless, lest they scandalize the Gentiles. Even though many 'speak against you as evil-doers', i.e. slander your conduct, yet if it be faultless, it will bring the Gentiles to praise God 'in the day of visitation', i.e. when God makes the truth known to them. 13-16 Obedience to Civil Authorities—Christians are to accept the established forms of government and to submit to those in authority 'for the sake of the Lord', i.e. Christ, in order not to bring discredit upon his teaching and Church. 'The king as excelling', i.e. as supreme ruler. 13. 'The governors' or administrators of the provinces, the deputies of the supreme ruler. 15. Submission to their authority is indirectly obedience to God, the source of all authority. It has a very practical side, since it silences those who through ignorance or malice slander the Christian way of life. 16. By obeying the laws, Christians do not 'make liberty a cloak of malice', as calumniators said they did; but they make the will of God the standard of their conduct. 17. This is a brief and clear statement of Christian duties towards God and man. 18-25 Obedience of Slaves to their Masters—In a society where slaves outnumbered the free, and the treatment of slaves was not always humane and just, it called for great discretion on the part of the Apostles to handle this delicate question. They did not try to overthrow the existing order and make freemen out of slaves, but without in the least approving slavery as an institution, they did try to make good slaves out of bad ones. Here St Peter insists that slaves give respectful obedience to their masters, whatever their disposition might be. Should they be treated with cruelty and injustice, they should not complain, but bear their harsh treatment with patience, thus gaining the approval of God, and imitating the example of their Lord and Master Jesus Christ, who did not complain when he was treated unjustly, as was predicted by Is 53:4-9. There are no less than seven quotations from Isaia in this chapter: vv 6, 8, 9, 12, 22, 24, 25. III 1-7 Duties of Husbands and Wives—Among all the nations of the 1st cent., after marriage a wife passed under the dominion of her husband and was subject to him. Here again the apostolic teaching did not interfere with the existing social order. 1. St Peter admonishes Christian wives to render due obedience to their husbands in everything that the law of God permits. Thus unbelieving husbands, who could not be won over to Christianity by argument, might be influenced by the 'conversation', i.e. good example of their wives, when they reflected on their modest and respectful conduct towards themselves. 3. The Apostle stresses the need of modesty in dress and ornamentation, and points out that such outward adornment is insignificant, whereas inner beauty of character, such as is manifested by an unassuming and quiet disposition, is an enduring attraction to both God and man. 5. To prove how greatly God values such a disposition, he cites the example of the holy women of the OT. 6. Sara calls Abraham 'my lord', Gen 18:12. Let Christian wives do what is right, and with a calm spirit, and they will resemble Sara. 7. But the duties are not one-sided. Husbands are to dwell with their wives, and their association with them in the home is to be 'according to knowledge', i.e. with a just recognition of the relative positions of husband and wife. They should make allowance for the natural physical weakness of women, and give them the regard which is due to them as 'co-heirs of the grace of life', i.e. equally destined to share eternal life. Such an attitude will help a man at prayer; when wives are unjustly treated, husbands may expect their prayers to go unheeded. 8-12 Mutual Duties of Christians—8. 'In fine' indicates that the instructions which follow are applicable to all Christians. They are to be 'all of one mind', i.e. adopt a similar viewpoint, and 'have compassion', i.e. share one another's sorrows and joys, and love one another with more than ordinary natural affection. Fraternal charity is the bond for both unity and sympathy, and will make them 'merciful', i.e. tender-hearted and 'humble', i.e. humble-minded in their dealings with one another. 9. Towards their pagan neighbours, who view them with suspicion and hostility, they must adopt an attitude of non-resistance, bear evil patiently without retaliating, even returning good for evil, and blessings for curses. 10-12. The quotation, Ps 33:13-17, means that God will not overlook the man who controls his speech and does what is right, but will grant him a peaceful and happy life, and will answer all his prayers. 13-23 Suffering with Christ—Those who do good may look to God for protection, and whatever he allows them to suffer for the faith will be richly rewarded, Mt 5:10-12. No reason, therefore, to be alarmed. Nothing can so well serve as an answer to the enemies of the Christian name as the holy lives of those who bear it. 16. When a vindication of their faith and hope is demanded, it is to be made with gentleness and respect, not in an overbearing manner, but fully conscious of speaking the truth. Thus will the accusers be ashamed when they recognize their upright conduct. 18. Christ's passion and death offers encouragement, who, though innocent, died for the sins of mankind, that he might lead men to God. Physically he died, but his soul lived on. 19. 'In which', i.e. state, while the soul was separated from the body, 'he preached', i.e. announced salvation—κηρύσσειν without a qualifier in the NT refers to good news; and there is no instance in the NT where it implies bad news, Holzmeister, 300. 'To the spirits', who cannot be the angels who sinned, 2 Pet 2:4; nor the souls of the lost, who are beyond the reach of salvation; but the souls of the just. 'In prison', i.e. the place where the just souls were detained till heaven was open to them. 20. These souls 'had been sometime incredulous, when the patience of God waited', i.e. for their conversion. This happened 'in the days of Noe, when the ark was a building'. During this period they persisted in their sinful state, but we must suppose that when the deluge came they repented. These persons perished in the waters of the deluge, but Noe and his family, totalling eight persons, were saved by entering the ark, not only 'from the water', but 'by water', i.e. the water carried the ark aloft. 21. Thus the water of the deluge is the type of the water of baptism, which saves you. Baptism, however, is not a washing of dirt from the body, but is 'the requirement of a good conscience towards God', i.e. a conscience ready to do God's will. This effect it has 'through the resurrection of Jesus Christ', with whom Christians were buried in baptism and have risen to a new life, Rom 6:4. Another interpretation, which supposes that the author had in mind passages from the Book of Enoch, identifies the 'spirits' with the progeny of the angels whose sin is supposed to be described in Gen 6:1-4. Christ proclaimed to these evil spirits their defeat by his 981b resurrection from, and victory over death. The rest of the passage contains a symbolism that found great favour among the early Christian writers. The figure eight is the type of the new creation, ushering in a new world. Noe, as the type of Christ, is the father of a new race. The flood was a type of baptism, because this sacrament accomplishes a judgement—judging, destroying the ‘body of sin’, as the deluge destroyed the old sinful world (cf. Daniélou, 97–112). 22. The words ‘swallowing . . . life everlasting’ are wanting in all Greek MSS and in many of Vg. The angels in heaven are subject to Christ, cf. Heb 1:4, 6, 13 f.

c IV 1–6 Risen with Christ to a New Life—1. Christ accepted suffering; so must the good Christian. If he suffers for, and with Christ, he is armed against sin. This demands a continual practice of virtue, which strengthens the will, and makes it able to resist temptation and avoid sin. 2. Such a sufferer will not live ‘after the desires of men’; being united with Christ in his sufferings, he lives ‘according to the will of God’. 3. St Peter’s readers had in time past ‘fulfilled the will of the Gentiles’ by taking part in their licentiousness and idolatry. 4. But now that they have kept away from such sinful habits, they are subjected to scornful criticism. 5. Why should they mind this, since they know that these critics are subject to the judgement of him, ‘who is ready to judge the living and the dead’, cf. Ac 10:42; 2 Tim 4:1. 6. Because all men are to undergo judgement, ‘the gospel was preached also to the dead’. This may refer back to 3:19 f., where sinners who paid for their unbelief by suffering temporal death in the deluge were ‘judged according to men in the flesh’, but the purpose of that judgement was to save them from eternal condemnation, that they ‘may live according to God, in the spirit’. To these souls Christ appeared, and announced to them the good news of their salvation. St Augustine has a different explanation: ‘Nothing forces us to understand that the Gospel was preached in the other world; but in this life the Gospel was preached to the dead, that is, to infidels and sinners, that when they believe ‘they might be judged indeed according to men in the flesh’, that is, might be subjected to various trials in the flesh, and even to death, ‘but may live according to God, in the spirit’, Ep. 164, 7, 21; PL 33, 717 f.

d 7–11 The Duty of Charity—The thought of judgement should never be far from a Christian’s mind. For the NT teaching on the second coming cf. §§ 670–1, 914g–e. Its wholesome influence should help them to be circumspect and sober so as to be disposed for prayer. 8. Fraternal charity should never be wanting, and such ‘charity covereth a multitude of sins’, i.e. if they have true love for their neighbour, they will be willing to cover their sins in silence, not speak about them, forget them, cf. Prov 10:12; Jas 5:20. Moreover, a strong and active love will blot out their own sins as well. 9. ‘Using hospitality’ which would be exercised chiefly towards fellow Christians, and missionaries coming from abroad. It might also have reference to ‘house-churches’ as Selwyn suggests, i.e. ‘to the ordinary social life of Christian communities’, 218. Let them dispense this hospitality cheerfully, ‘without murmuring’. 10. Whatever ‘grace’, χάρισμα, any Christian has should be used for the good of others. 11. Two kinds of charisms are mentioned, speaking and ministering. A fuller list occurs in Rom 12:6–8; 1 Cor 12–14. The doxology here refers to God, not to Christ.

e 12–19 The Duty of Suffering for Christ—The severe trial, which threatened to affect them, should not cause surprise, but joy, since it will associate them more closely with Christ. 12. ‘The burning heat’ is the symbol of the afflictions and persecutions that await them. This may perhaps refer to the calumnies, annoyances and petty persecutions which the first Christians had to put up with everywhere; or it may refer to something more definite. Persecutions are not something new for Christians to experience. 13. They are to rejoice in proportion as they share in the sufferings of Christ, for this shall redound to their joy ‘when his glory shall be revealed’. 14. Reproaches endured for the name of Christ brings the Holy Spirit upon them. 15. Whereas it would be most shameful to suffer just punishment for crimes committed, 16. to suffer as a Christian is no disgrace; by bearing the name they glorify God. The name ‘Christian’ was first given to the followers of Christ at Antioch, Ac 11:26, and was later used by King Agrippa, Ac 26:28, with a touch of irony. 17. These sufferings are the beginning of God’s judgement in his own household. They will sift the virtuous from the lax Christian. And if this is thought severe, what will happen to those who disregard the Gospel? 18. Owing to the severity of the trials and sufferings, even a just man may be saved with difficulty. What then of the godless sinners? 19. But God will faithfully support those who ‘suffer according to his will’.

V 1–4 Pastoral Duties—‘The ancients’, πρεσβύτεροι, officials of the local church, who govern the flock of Christ, Ac 20:28; 1 Tim 5:17; Tit 1:5; instruct the faithful, 1 Tim 5:17; Tit 1:9; and administer the sacraments, Jas 5:14. In Ac 20:28 those previously addressed as πρεσβύτεροι, are here called ἐπίσκοποι, ‘bishops’; and in the Pastoral Epistles the qualifications outlined for one class are equally those for the other, cf. 1 Tim 3; Tit 1:5–7; accordingly the two terms may be regarded as convertible in the NT. St Peter says: ‘I beseech, who am myself also an ancient’, συμπρεσβύτερος, i.e. one belonging to your rank, ‘and a witness of the sufferings of Christ’; this is probably stressed, because of the admonitions to the faithful that preceded, to suffer for, and with Christ; ‘as also a partaker of that glory which is to be revealed’; this statement may recall the fact that St Peter witnessed Christ’s transfiguration, Mt 17:1–9; 2 Pet 1:16–18.

2. ‘Feed the flock of God which is among you’; he is inviting them to share locally the office entrusted to himself by the risen Christ over the entire flock of God, Jn 21:15–17. He demands three conditions for doing this: (1) it must not be shared reluctantly; (2) nor used avariciously; (3) nor exercised domineeringly. Such traits would disedify, whereas they must be patterns of virtue, and that sincerely, ‘from the heart’.

4. Their model, ‘the prince of pastors’, a title used only here, and most likely suggested by ‘I am the good shepherd’, Jn 10:14. By feeding their flock they ‘shall receive a never failing crown of glory’. The crown here symbolizes their eternal reward for merit.

5–11 General Christian Duties—‘Ye young men’: some understand here the junior officials of the church, others the general class of young men. ‘And be ye all closely associated with one another in humility’, i.e. practise it as fostering union. The quotation is from Prov 3:34.

6. Humble yourself and God will exalt you, Jas 4:10.

7. A quotation from Ps 54:23. 8. Vigilance is necessary in order to escape the snares of the devil, 9, whose attacks are to be combated with the principles of faith. But there is another adversary to Christians, an ally of the devil, namely, the world, ready to afflict the brethren. 10. God’s grace should give them assurance, and the reward of eternal glory should spur them on to suffer a little in order to be made perfect.

12–14 Conclusion—Silvanus, who in all probability is the same as Silas, St Paul’s companion on his second missionary journey, Ac 15:22, 32, 40; and the Silvanus of 1 Thess 1:1; 2 Cor 1:19; may have been both the bearer and the secretary of this letter, cf. § 949c. ‘That this’, i.e. the Christian faith, ‘is the true grace of God’. 13. ‘In Babylon’, i.e. Rome, so-called in Apoc 14:8; 16:19; 17:5; 18:2, 10; also in Orac. Sybil. 5, 159 f.; 4 Esdr. 3:1; Apoc. Baruch. vis. ii, 1. ‘My son, Mark’: he is the son of Mary, to whose house St Peter went after his release from prison, Ac 12:12; who was with St Paul in Rome during his captivity, Col 4:10; who had been his companion with Barnabas, when they preached the Gospel in Cyprus, Ac 13:5; who wrote the second Gospel, Eusebius, HE 3, 29, 15; ‘my son’ is a term of affection for his disciple. Perhaps St Peter baptized him. 14 ‘Salute one another with the kiss of charity’, a sign of Christian brotherhood.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF ST PETER

By H. WILLMERING, S.J.

962a Bibliography—G. Estius, cf. § 945a; A. Camerlynck, cf. § 945a; *C. Bigg, cf. § 949a; W. Vrede, Der zweite Petrusbrief, BB, Bonn, 1932⁴; J. Chaine, Les Épîtres Catholiques, Paris, 1939; A. Charue, cf. § 945a; J. Daniélou, cf. § 945a.

b Authenticity and Canonlicity—The authenticity of 2 Pet is more disputed today than any other book of the NT. Most non-Catholic scholars class it as pseudonymous, chiefly for two reasons: (a) lack of external evidence in the early centuries; (b) difference of style from 1 Pet (cf. § 952j). Catholic exegetes, and some prominent non-Catholics, defend its authenticity. It may be admitted that the evidence of early recognition of 2 Pet is weaker than for any other NT writing. There are no undisputed quotations from it before the time of Origen (A.D. 230), but as Bigg says: 'The shortness of the Epistle, its subject-matter of limited interest, and containing few quotable phrases, may account for the fact that it was not quoted then, as it is probably very seldom quoted even in the present day; yet its attestation is strong', 210 f. There is good evidence for its canonicity, even if its Petrine authorship is not so well attested. It is of course included in the Tridentine Canon.

c Let us list the external evidence for both authenticity and canonicity that is undisputed. Origen records the controversy (cf. Eusebius, HE 6, 2, 58), but places the Epistle in his canon of Holy Scripture, PG 12, 857, and quotes from it six different times in his writings, sometimes naming St Peter as the author. Bishop Firmilian, a contemporary of Origen, mentions in a letter to St Cyprian, that St Peter wrote an epistle against the heretics, which can only refer to 2 Pet, Ep. 75, 6. St Athanasius quotes it twice, De Trin. dial. 1; Contra Arian. or. 3; Bishop Methodius of Olympus, Frag. de Resur.; Theophilus of Antioch, Ad Autol. 2:9, 13; St Basil, Adv. Eun. 5. Clement of Alexandria, according to Eusebius, HE 6, 14, 1, wrote a commentary on all seven Catholic Epistles, a work which has not come down to us. 2 Pet is listed as one of the inspired books of the NT in the canons of SS Athanasius, PG 26, 1176; and Cyril of Jerusalem, PG 33, 500; of Codex Claromontanus, and Codex Mommmsen; of the Councils of Laodicea, and of Carthage, Dz 92; of Popes SS Damasus, Dz 84, and Innocent I, Dz 96. Although Eusebius places it on his list of disputed books, HE 3, 25, 3, and expresses doubt about its authenticity, HE 3, 3, 1, yet St Jerome acknowledges all seven Catholic Epistles as Scripture, Ep. ad Paulin. 53, 9; but mentions the controversy about authenticity, De Vir. Illustr. 3, 1. Didymus of Alexandria wrote a commentary on 2 Pet, which has survived in a Latin translation. The statement in a postscript, that the Epistle is not authentic, is probably by the translator.

d The internal evidence favours authenticity (in the writer's opinion) despite the difficulties raised by (a) its more original vocabulary and style, (b) its quotation of, and dependence on, 'lesser' authorities, such as Jude and the Pauline Epistles. Neither difficulty is insuperable. As regards the latter, it is clear that the author of 2 Pet regarded the writings of St Paul as inspired scripture, and there is no reason to think that he regarded Jude in any other light. As regards the former, St Jerome (Ep. 120 ad Hedibiam, 11)

considered that the difference was due to the employment of different secretaries, and this may be the true explanation. Nevertheless, these differences are often exaggerated, and it has been said (by B. Weiss, quoted in Jacquier, Histoire des Livres du N.T., III, 300-1) that no book of the New Testament is so like 1 Pet as 2 Pet! There is undoubtedly a deep underlying parallelism and connexion of thought between the two epistles, which does not seem to be the result of slavish imitation by some pseudepigrapher, but which is rather the result of references to, or drawings upon the same stock of ideas, as might be expected from two products of the same brain; e.g. in both epistles we find the same approach to such topics as Noah and the Flood, the Last Days, the New Creation, the Transfiguration of Christ, the Galilean appearance to Peter, the influence of the Pauline Epistles, the Parousia and the virtues of patience, vigilance and sobriety. Moreover, the writer claims to be 'Simon Peter, servant and Apostle of Jesus Christ', 1:1; and mentions that he was present at Christ's transfiguration, 1:16-18. He calls St Paul 'our most dear brother Paul', 3:15; says that he had a prediction from Christ regarding his sudden death, 1:14; and identifies himself with the author of 1 Pet, 3:1. This last circumstance indicates that he knew this Epistle. But would a forger have been so careless about imitating the manner of address, style and vocabulary of 1 Pet? If a studied and conscious imitation of 1 Pet are lacking, are there perhaps subtle similarities of thought and expression in both epistles? Yes, the ardent temperament, which is so noticeable a characteristic of St Peter in the Gospels, betrays itself in 2 Pet every now and then, e.g. in the way that he comes quickly to the point, 1:3-5; 2:1; in the use of vigorous language against the false teachers, 2:3, 9-13; in the tender and affectionate manner of addressing his readers, 3:1, 11-14.

Destination and Purpose—In 3:1 the author says: 'Behold this second epistle I write to you', thus indicating that it is addressed to the same group of readers to whom 1 Pet was sent. This was inscribed 'to the elect, who are sojourners in the dispersion of Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia', 1 Pet 1:1, five provinces of Asia Minor, where the Christian congregations consisted of both Jewish and pagan converts.

The occasion and purpose must be gathered from the epistle itself. Certain false teachers, of low morals and covetous disposition, were threatening to corrupt the faith and conduct of these Christian communities, 2:1-3. They denied that Jesus Christ was the Redeemer, 2:1, spoke disparagingly of holy things, particularly about the angels, 2:10, taught licentiousness by word and deed, 2:2, 10, 13 f., ridiculed the second coming of Christ and the judgement, 3:3 ff. Accordingly the Apostle exhorts his readers to have a high regard for their Christian calling, to grow in knowledge of the truth and in holiness, and avoid sin most carefully, that they may be found worthy of admission into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus Christ, 3:4-11. He also warns them against those who are trying to seduce them by immoral practices and ruin their faith, 2:1-3, 12-19; 3:11-18.

Time and Place of Composition—This letter was f

952f probably written a short time before the Apostle's death, 1:12-15. According to an ancient tradition, St Peter died in Rome during the persecution of Nero, A.D. 66 or 67. So we may tentatively date the epistle, A.D. 65 or 66, and give as its probable place of origin the city of Rome.

g Theme and Analysis—Because of the certainty of Christ's return and the judgement which follows it, it is important for all followers of Jesus Christ to grow in the knowledge of the truth, and in the practice of Christian virtues. Let the readers beware of certain false teachers, who are seeking to deceive and destroy them.

After the introductory address and greeting, the Apostle exhorts his readers to progress in knowledge and every Christian virtue, in order to show themselves grateful to God, who called them to be partakers of the divine nature here and hereafter, 1:3-11. Communicating to them that Christ had predicted his sudden death, St Peter states his purpose in writing this letter, 12-15. As a solid basis for his exhortation and warning, he adduces the transfiguration of Christ as a proof of the credibility of the Apostles, who preached to them the return of Christ, which event had been foretold long ago by the prophets, 16-21. There follows a stern denunciation of certain false teachers, whom God will punish severely for their impiety, 2:1-11. He describes their immorality, avarice and duplicity, 12-19, and warns the Christians of the grave danger of relapsing into pagan vice, 2-22. Then he takes issue with the claims and assertions of the heretics, and answers all their difficulties against the fact of Christ's return, 3:1-6. He describes the destruction of the present world by fire, 7-10, and concludes with an exhortation to watchfulness, 11-18a. He ends with a doxology to Christ, 18b.

h Doctrinal Content—2 Pet is a strong appeal for a good Christian life, and in order to persuade his readers to embrace it more earnestly, St Peter exhibits 'our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ' in the most fascinating light. Jesus Christ is God, 1:1, and God is the Father of Jesus Christ, 1:17. If as man he is subordinate to the Father, yet he has received from God the Father honour and glory, 1:17. The occasion was the transfiguration of Christ on the holy mount, which the writer himself witnessed, 1:18. Divine power and majesty are his, 1:16, and 'as all things of his divine power, which appertain to life and godliness are given to us', 1:3, and 'as he has called us by his own proper glory and virtue', 1:3, he has a claim on our gratitude and loyalty, 1:4; 3:14. Christ is the giver of grace and of knowledge, 3:18. Five times the title of 'Saviour' is applied to him, usually in combination with some other divine title, such as 'God', or 'Lord'; and his kingdom, which we are called to enter, is everlasting, 1:11. His precepts we must obey, 3:2. The OT prophets foretold, and the Apostles preached his second coming, 3:2, which every Christian should look for, and even hasten by leading a holy life, 3:12, 14.

i Thus the chief attention is centred on Christ, and the Father and Holy Spirit are mentioned in relation to Christ. Yet the patience and long-suffering of the Father, who desires the repentance of sinners, 3:9, is contrasted with his treatment of the rebel angels, whom he punished according to strict justice, 2:4. The Holy Spirit inspired the holy men, i.e. the prophets of the OT.

The nature of sanctifying grace is described by mentioning its most startling effect, namely, that by it we are made partakers of the divine nature. The true notion of biblical inspiration is given in 1:21, where St Peter says that the OT prophets did not speak their prophecies on their own initiative, but were God-inspired, i.e. the source of their utterances was the Holy Spirit. He illumined their minds, and moved their wills to speak or write only what God willed, and he guided them in the process of speech or composition in such a way that they uttered nothing contrary to the truth.

j Text and Style—Variant readings of the Greek text

are of minor importance. The Vg text has several minor additions in 1:2, 7, 8, 10; 2:4 and 3:4. Sometimes the same Greek word is translated by several Latin words, and 2:10 seems to be a mistranslation, cf. commentary in loc.

To explain the difference of style of the two Epistles of St Peter, St Jerome suggested that two different secretaries were used by the Apostle, Ep. ad Hedib. 120. Bigg lists the vocabulary peculiar to both Epistles of St Peter, and draws the following conclusion: 'The vocabulary of 1 Pet is dignified; that of 2 Pet inclines to the grandiose', 225. He notes the fondness of the writer of both epistles for the plural of abstract nouns, the similarities in the use of the article, the habit of repeating words. 'A curious feature of 2 Pet', he says, 'is the tendency to fall into iambic rhythm'; yet he attaches little value to this feature. His conclusion is: (1) the style of the two epistles is different, but not openly incompatible in expression, and in the formal use of Scripture; (2) the favourite phrases of one epistle are not those of the other', 238.

I:1-2 Salutation—The writer makes use of his double name, 'Simon Peter', and of a twofold title, 'servant and Apostle of Jesus Christ'. The readers, probably the same to whom 1 Pet was sent, 3:1, are designated here in general terms, 'to them that have obtained equal faith with us'. We might conclude from this that many readers were converts from paganism. That God called them to the same faith with the Apostles was a purely gratuitous favour, bestowed 'in the justice of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ', i.e. impartially on all who desired it, whether Jew or Gentile. To them the Apostle wishes an abundance of grace and peace, and states the condition on which an increase of these blessings may be obtained, namely, a fuller knowledge of God and of Jesus Christ, our Lord.

3-11 Exhortation to Spiritual Progress—Calling attention to the very great blessings which they received through faith, he points out that earnest co-operation is required to correspond with such a gift. 3. Christ, by his divine power, gives his followers all the graces that are necessary for a supernatural life of holiness. He it was who brought them the knowledge of God through which they are to achieve salvation, and by manifesting in his own person divine attributes of glory and virtue, he drew them to the faith. 4. Through these same attributes he gave 'most great and precious promises', namely, that those who abide in him, like a branch on a fruitful vine, will bear much fruit for eternal life, Jn 15:1-8. By abiding in Christ, they 'may be made partakers of the divine nature', because like the sap that flows from the vine through the branches, enabling them to bear fruit, so from Christ there issues a new, supernatural force, which is shared by all who are united with him by faith and love. This intimate union of Christ with his followers, also unites them with God the Father, Jn 14:20-23; 17:21-23, and with the Holy Ghost, Jn 14:16 f. By enjoying such intimate fellowship with the Blessed Trinity, 1 Jn 1:3, a Christian is in an analogous sense a partaker of the divine nature in the measure that is possible to a creature.

To share this extraordinary favour, it is necessary to avoid 'the corruption of that concupiscence which is in the world, cf. 1 Jn 2:16, because it leads men to live alienated from God. So the first step towards union with God is freedom from sin. Christians should be 'dead to sin', Rom 6:2, 'but alive unto God, in Christ Jesus our Lord', Rom 6:11. 5. hence 'employing all care, minister in your faith, virtue', i.e. let your faith lead you to a life of virtue. The principles of faith point out what is right, and supply the motives for virtuous action. 'In virtue, knowledge', i.e. he who practises virtue has a knowledge of God's will and follows it. 6. This calls for 'abstinence', i.e. self-control, and 'patience', i.e. endurance of trials and sufferings with resignation, and one who has reached this stage of perfection is endowed with 'godliness', i.e. perfect conformity to God's will. 7. His will is, that we love our brethren, 1 Jn 4:7, and practise charity towards all men.

d 8. Where these virtues flourish, the knowledge of Christ is practical and productive of good works; 9, where they are lacking, blindness and short-sightedness have brought on a forgetfulness of having been cleansed from former sins. The sins referred to are those of the pagan past, which were washed away by the waters of baptism. This sacrament should have produced a marked change in their lives. When, however, no such change occurs, and no growth in holiness results, it is a sign that they have lost sight of their higher goal, the cause for which is culpable forgetfulness. 10-11. Therefore, let them strive earnestly to acquire solid virtue, in order to be worthy of their calling. The effort required for this will help to keep them from committing sin, and will entitle them 'to enter into the joys of their Lord', Mt 25:23.

e 12-15 Purpose of the Epistle—The Apostle thinks it necessary to remind them of these truths, because he knows that his departure from this earthly tabernacle is at hand. This the Lord Jesus made known to him; but we cannot be certain whether it was by a special revelation not recorded, or whether he is referring to the prophecy made by the risen Lord on the shores of the Sea of Galilee, Jn 21:18 f. 15. He promises to leave behind him a memorial of his teachings. Is the present Epistle such a memorial, as many think; or are we to look upon the Second Gospel, sometimes called 'the Memoirs of St Peter', as the record 'whereby you may keep a memory of these things'?

f 16-21 Certainty of Christ's Return—16. Changing now from the first person singular to the plural, perhaps to indicate that the return of Christ with power and majesty was considered a topic of prime importance by all the Apostles, he insists that this truth differs greatly from the artificial fables of the false teachers, who contradict the apostolic teachings. 17. The transfiguration of Christ, Mt 17:1-9, is cited as a proof of the singular glory, which belongs to him; and St Peter vouches for its reality, because he was an eye-witness of the scene, and heard the Father proclaim Christ, 'My well-beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased'. 19. After witnessing his glory, the prophecies regarding Christ's return take on a fuller and clearer meaning for the author, and he urges the readers to attend well to them, because they are 'as a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn', i.e. these prophecies should serve the faithful as a guide during the present dark times, until the time of fulfilment comes, when the 'day-star', i.e. Christ himself, will illumine them. A less probable interpretation of this passage is: Whereas the Apostle's testimony about the transfiguration is a definite proof of Christ's return, yet prophecy affords a more conclusive one to refute the false teachers, or to convince his readers, because the OT prophecies concerning Christ are a light to illumine the path of faith until the day of their fulfilment. Some had already been fulfilled; hence the certainty they may hold regarding those still awaiting fulfilment. 20. It is of prime importance to know that prophecy of Scripture is not subject to private interpretation by every individual, as the false teachers assume it is, because prophecy is from God, and is not like mere human conjectures of future possibilities. Scriptural prophecy is divine revelation, and concerns future events known to God alone. Christ, and those appointed by him to teach in his name, have the authority to interpret God's revelations. Another interpretation of this passage is: No prophecy of Scripture is made by private interpretation, i.e. prophets do not make up their own prophecies, but receive them from God, cf. §§ 35a, 952i.

g II:1-3 Warning against False Teachers—The severe denunciation contained in this chapter is similar to the one in Jude 4-16 not only in thought and imagery, but is presented in almost the same order and often in identical language. Since Jude is more spontaneous and less reflective, it is usually considered to be the original (cf. § 960d). The Apostle puts his Christian readers on guard against certain deceitful teachers, who by their evil lives and their spirit of avarice are luring some to destruction. 1. 'False prophets among the people', i.e. of the OT, cf. Jer 5:31; 14:14; 27:9 f.; Ez 13:3, 6-9; Zach 13:1-5. 'Among you lying teachers', cf. 1 Tim 4:1-3; 2 Tim 3:1-8. 'Sects of perdition', i.e. factions leading to the ruin of the Christian way of life. 2. 'Their riotousnesses', i.e. lustful excesses. 'The way of truth shall be spoken evil of', i.e. they bring Christian truth into bad repute. 3. Through covetousness they exploit the faithful for gain, but their punishment will not be long delayed.

4-9 Examples of Divine Vengeance—Three instances of God's punishment are given: (1) the rebel angels; (2) the wicked antediluvians; (3) the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah. From the fate of these three classes one may conjecture what God will do to the false teachers. 4. 'The angels that sinned' are the same that are mentioned in Jude 6. 'Thrusting them down into hell, he delivered them to pits of darkness'; this is the reading of the best MSS. 'To be reserved unto judgement', i.e. although they were punished immediately after committing sin, their solemn condemnation before the whole world awaits the day of general judgement. 5. 'And spared not the ancient world', i.e. the antediluvian race mentioned in Gen 6:5 ff. 'Noe, the eighth person', i.e. Noe's wife, his three sons and their wives were with him in the ark. On the prominence of Noe as a type of Christ in early Christian literature, cf. Daniélou, 98-103. Noe is called a 'preacher of justice'; Gen makes no mention of this, but Jewish tradition does, cf. SB 3, 769. 6. The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, Gen 19:24 ff. 9. 'The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly from trial', i.e. as is shown by the rescue of Noe and Lot from their wicked surroundings.

10-22 The Wickedness of the False Teachers—10. Such summary punishment in the past should be a warning to those who disregard the moral law and legitimate authority. But the false teachers are 'audacious, self-willed, and fear not to revile majesty'; in all probability the divine Majesty is meant, and sacred things directly connected with God, but cf. § 961c. 11. 'A railing judgement' most likely refers to the example given by Jude 9. 12. 'But these men . . . reviling what they do not understand', i.e. being carnal minded, they cannot understand or appreciate spiritual things. 13. They live for the pleasures of the day, and such is their conduct, that they are 'stains and spots, indulging in their deceits while they feast with you', i.e. using their power of deception to further their own plans even on those whose guests they were. Another reading is: 'Using their love-feasts as an opportunity for indulgence even while they feast with you'. The former reading is supported by the best MSS; cf. § 961d. 14. 'Having eyes full of adultery and of sin that ceaseth not', i.e. whatever they see stirs up their passions and leads them to commit more and graver sins, particularly by enticing weaker souls to sin. Nor is this their only habitual vice; they are equally skilled in the ways of gaining wealth. For these reasons they are a curse to themselves and others. 15. Because of their avarice they have 'followed the way of Balaam of Bosor'. According to Num 22:6 Balaam was the son of Beor, who was misled by avarice to disregard the command of God, and who narrowly escaped destruction when he was reprimanded by 'the dumb beast used to the yoke', cf. Num 22:21-33.

17. The shallow-mindedness and deceit of the false teachers furnish the Apostle with a number of withering metaphors. 18. Their levity appears in the boastful and exaggerated claims they make to higher wisdom; their trickery lures with the bait of sensuality those who are least fit to resist, namely, those who were recently converted from paganism, and who had not yet fully conquered their former errors and bad habits. 19. 'Promising them liberty'; not the freedom from sin that a Christian should strive to preserve, but the 954b worst type of slavery to human passions, from which baptism had set them free; but what else could be expected from 'slaves of corruption'. 20. Through Christian teachings they had been liberated from 'the pollution of the world'; yet should they become 'again entangled in them and overcome', they are worse off than before. 21. They have not the excuse of ignorance, 22, and their conduct is no better than the disgusting habits of senseless beasts.

c III:1-10 A Refutation of the False Teachers—The Apostle warns the readers against the sceptics, who deny the second coming of Christ; he exhorts them to constant expectation of that coming. 1. 'This second epistle'; the first is probably our 1 Pet; 'sincere mind', i.e. not contaminated by false teachings. 3. 'In the last days', i.e. the time subsequent to the coming of the Messias. 4. 'Where is his promise or his coming?' i.e. where is the fulfilment of the promised return of Christ? An entire generation of believers passed away without witnessing it, and all things continue, etc., i.e. the continuity of nature has not been interrupted by such a catastrophe as Christ predicted would happen before his return, Mk 13:19. The inference is: nothing has happened yet; hence nothing is likely to happen in the future.

d 5. St Peter replies: Heaven and earth were created by God, and after a long period of apparent sameness in the course of nature, his word effected a sudden change in the condition of the world and its inhabitants by the waters of the deluge. God can, and will, effect another change in the heavens and the earth as they now exist, and that will be effected by fire. It will immediately precede the second coming of Christ; 'that the heavens were of old, and the earth was formed by God's word out of water and by means of water', i.e. as is narrated in Gen 1:9, when God spoke the waters were gathered into one place, and dry land appeared. 6. 'perished', i.e. through the waters of the deluge, Gen 7:21-23. 7. The parallel between the deluge and the end of the present world is drawn by our Lord himself, Mt 24:37-39; Lk 17:26 f. That fire will accompany the judgement of God is stated in Pss 49:3; 96:3; Is 66:15; Soph 1:18; 3:8; 1 Cor 3:13; 2 Thess 1:8; that the present inhabited world will perish by fire was a late Jewish tradition, SB 3, 775.

e 8-9. The reason for the delay of Christ's return. With God there is no time element; everything is present to his mind, and such distinctions of time as we make have no meaning in the divine plans. Whatever delay there may be, is a proof of God's patience. He wills that no one shall perish, but that all be brought to repentance, cf. 1 Tim 2:4. 10. Yet we must guard against presumption, and not put off repentance till it is too late. 'The day of the Lord shall come as a thief', i.e. suddenly and unexpectedly, cf. Mt 24:43 f.; 954c 1 Thess 5:2. 'The heavens shall pass away with a crackling sound', like that of a conflagration, 'and the elements', probably the sun, moon and stars, as in Mt 24:29, 'shall be melted with heat', i.e. dissolved, 'and the earth and the works that are in it', i.e. all human constructions, 'shall be burnt up'.

11-18 Exhortation to Watchfulness—In view of this great catastrophe, let them live 'in holy conversation and godliness', i.e. in unworldliness and piety, and look forward to the day of the Lord's coming. 12. Another interpretation of this verse is: By distinguishing themselves as true followers of Christ, they will fill up the number of the elect, and thus hasten the time of the Lord's coming. 13. 'New heavens and a new earth according to his promises', cf. Is 65:17; 66:22. It is not likely that the Apostle means that the earth, after its destruction, will be restored as the dwelling-place of the just. The new heavens and earth are more probably a figurative representation of the abode of the blessed in eternal bliss. 14. Earnestly strive to live without sin, without blame, without contention. 15. The patience of the Lord gives you time to make sure your salvation. About this St Paul wrote in Rom 2:4, and about the preparation to be made for the second coming in both 1 and 2 Thess and 1 Cor 3:13; 4:5; 15:51-54; cf. §919c. 16. 'As also in all his epistles' may simply mean all the epistles with which St Peter was acquainted, and not that a collection of all St Paul's Epistles was in existence when 2 Pet was written. 'In which are certain things hard to be understood, which the unlearned and the unstable wrest . . . to their destruction'—may refer to 2 Thess 2:3 f.; 1 Cor 15:44; 3 Cor 5:1-4, etc., or to his teachings about Christian liberty, justification by faith independent of the Mosaic Law, equality of all before Christ, etc.; such doctrines those who were poorly instructed in the faith, or not firmly grounded in Christian morality would distort so as to pervert the Apostle's meaning, thereby harming themselves and others spiritually. 'The other scriptures'—here St Peter classes St Paul's Epistles with the other inspired writings of the OT, showing how greatly he esteemed St Paul's writings. Perhaps it also indicates that at this early date the Pauline Epistles were read at the Christian gatherings together with the OT. It is the earliest reference we have to the canon of the NT. It might also have a bearing on the date of 2 Pet. 17. Being forewarned, let the readers guard against being misled by false and unwise interpretations of apostolic teachings. Rather may they adhere firmly to what they believed in the past, 18, and increase in grace, and in the knowledge of Christ, to whom the Apostle pays devout homage in a concluding doxology.

THE EPISTLES OF ST JOHN

By H. WILLMERING, S.J.

955a Bibliography—G. Estius, cf. § 945a; *B. F. Westcott, The Epistles of St John, London, 1892³; A. Camerlynck, cf. § 945a; *A. E. Brooke, The Johannine Epistles, ICC, Edinburgh, 1928; W. Vrede, Der erste, zweite und dritte Johannesbrief, BB, Bonn, 1932⁴; J. Bonsirven, S.J., Épîtres de Saint Jean, Paris, 1935⁵; J. Chaîne, Les Épîtres Catholiques, Paris, 1939⁶; R. Leconte, art. Épîtres de Saint Jean, DBV(S) 797–815.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF ST JOHN

b Author—This Epistle, like the Fourth Gospel is anonymous; but an early and constant tradition assigns both works to the Apostle St John. The testimony, according to Eusebius, HE 3, 39, 17, begins with Papias, a disciple of St John. Explicit reference to 1 Jn is found in the writings of St Irenaeus, PG 7:925; 927; Clement of Alexandria, PG 8, 661; 1004; Tertullian, PL 2, 147; 173; Origen, cf. Eusebius, HE 6, 25, 8; and St Cyprian, PL 3, 1138; 4, 289; 628; who name St John the Apostle as the author. The evidence of quotation may be drawn from the Didache, Epistle of Barnabas, Polycarp, Shepherd of Hermas, Epistle of Diognetus.

The internal evidence, that this Epistle has the same author as the Fourth Gospel, is equally abundant and convincing. Style, structure of sentences, repetition of certain words and phrases, lack of particles, vocabulary—all are very similar to what we find in the Fourth Gospel. Compare 1:1, 5 f. with the Prologue, particularly Jn 1:1, 4 f.; or 2:3–5 with Jn 14:21, 23 f.; 2:7 f. with Jn 13:34 f.; 15:12 f., etc. Chaîne lists thirty passages that are common to both, 106 f.; Westcott has a similar list, xli ff. The proof that the Fourth Gospel was written by St John the Apostle is given in §§ 776d–778f.

c Canonically—This Epistle is listed in the Muratorian Fragment and in all subsequent canonical lists of NT books. Eusebius, HE 3, 25, classes it among the sacred writings which were universally accepted as inspired. St Jerome, De Vir Illust. 9, 18, explicitly mentions that it was universally accepted in the church; St Augustine, Tract. 7:5 in 1 Jn, mentions it by name as canonical.

d Destination and Purpose—The prevailing opinion of scholars is that the First Epistle is closely associated with the Fourth Gospel both in time and purpose. Some call it a 'preface', the majority prefer to consider it a 'postscript' to the Gospel. Both writings have the same double purpose: to prove that Christ is God and eternal life, and that in Christ we have eternal life and are united with God.

Since 1 Jn lacks the customary form of a letter, e.g. salutation and conclusion, special greetings and message to a definite church, it is commonly considered to be an encyclical letter, addressed to a number of churches. The writer is aware of the condition of his readers, whom he affectionately calls: 'children, little children, and beloved', and repeatedly addresses in the second person. Three times he says: 'I write to you', and thrice 'I wrote to you'. Since the Epistle presupposes the facts of Christ's life and teaching, and draws practical lessons from them, it is preferable to consider 1 Jn to have been written shortly after the Gospel, probably in one of the last years of the 1st cent. A very reliable tradition states that the beloved disciple spent his last years at Ephesus, where he is said to have composed the Gospel, St Irenaeus, Adv. Haer. 3, 1, 1. It is very probable, therefore, that this Epistle was likewise sent from Ephesus to the churches of Asia Minor, to which St John sent the seven letters included in the Apocalypse, 1:4–3:22.

Theme and Analysis—St John is disturbed by the appearance of false teachers, who made a distinction between the human Jesus and Christ the Son of God, and also by the worldly spirit, which was undermining the moral character of the Asiatic Christians. To assure eternal life to his readers, the Apostle stresses the need of union with the Father and the Son, which is realized practically by obedience to the commandments, particularly to the precept of brotherly love.

The Apostle begins by claiming to be an eye-witness of the activity of the Word. He says that he has a message from Christ for his readers, which will assure them life everlasting and fellowship with the Father and his Son, 1:1–4. God is light and perfection; union with him is impossible for those who walk in darkness, 5–7. To walk in the light means to keep free from sin and observe the commandments, 1:8–2:6; particularly the precept of brother love, 7–11. After commending them for their sincerity, 12–14, he urges them not to be misled by an inordinate love of the world, 15–17, and carefully to avoid false teachers, who separate Jesus from the Christ and, therefore, deny both Father and Son, 18–26.

Let them hold fast to what they were taught from the beginning, 27–29, and prove that they are children of God by avoiding sin, 3:1–10. What distinguishes the children of God from those of the devil is the practice of fraternal charity after the manner of Christ, 11–18, whom they must firmly acknowledge as God's Son, 19–24.

There follows another warning about distinguishing between truth and error, 4:1–6. A proof of the connexion between the precept of fraternal charity and faith in Jesus as the Son of God is indicated by God's love for mankind. He so loved the world that he sent his only-begotten Son into the world, 7–11. This should prompt Christians to practise true charity towards one another, because charity is the bond between man and the invisible God, 12–21. Love of the neighbour is rooted in faith in the divinity of Christ. In that belief is victory over the world and fellowship with Christ, 5:1–5. We have a threefold witness to this important truth, 6–12. Faith in Christ's divinity begets the greatest confidence, which manifests itself in prayer, 13–17. Then the Apostle concludes with a summary: children of God do not sin, Christians are children of God, and they know God through his Son, 18–21.

Doctrinal Content—The First Epistle may be called a summary of St John's theology. This must not be understood in the sense that it is a development of one or more theses, nor is it an exposition of various doctrinal truths. The Apostle contents himself with the simple statement of a number of fundamental truths, which serve him as a basis for moral instruction. God is light, 1:5; we must walk in the light if we would have fellowship with him, 1:6. God is holiness, 2:29; to be children of God we must avoid sin and be holy, 955g 3:2 f. God is love, 4:7; to share God's love we must love the brethren, 4:7.

Of Christ we learn: that he is the Word, 1:1; hence, we must learn to know him, who manifested himself to us, 1:2 f. He is the Son of God, 2:22 f.; the only-begotten Son, 4:9. To deny this is to have the spirit of Antichrist, not that of God, 4:9. He was sent into the world by the Father, that he might show his love for mankind, 4:9. This should teach us to love one another, 4:7. Christ laid down his life for us, 3:16; cleansed us from sin with his blood, 1:7, and became our propitiation for sin, 2:2, to bring us into closer fellowship with one another. Christ is also our advocate with the Father, so that if we sin we may obtain forgiveness, 2:1. In him is eternal life, and if we have the Son, i.e. are united to him by grace, we too shall have eternal life, 5:11.

h A few words must be said here about the heresy against which St John warns his readers. It is probably the false teaching of Cerinthus and his followers which is here condemned. According to St Irenaeus, Adv. Haer. 1, 26, 1, Cerinthus claimed that Jesus was nothing more than a man, born of Mary and Joseph. At the time of his baptism by St John, the aeon, Christ, descended upon him in the form of a dove, and remained united with him till the passion, when he again left him. Hence, Cerinthus 'denieth that Jesus is the Christ', 2:22; he 'dissolveth Jesus', 4:3, by separating the man Jesus from the aeon Christ; he 'believeth not that Jesus is the Son of God', 5:5. Since by these false statements he deceived men, and set himself against Christ, he is called 'the liar', 2:22, and 'the Antichrist', 4:3. The same authority, who was a pupil of St Polycarp, who in turn sat at the feet of the beloved disciple, mentions that the Fourth Gospel was written to offset the errors of Cerinthus, Adv. Haer. 3, 2, 1; but M. Bardy, Cerinthe, RB (1921) 349, questions the correctness of this assertion.

i In 1 Jn another series of instructions centres around the new life of a Christian. He is born of God, 2:29; 4:7; 5:1, and this creates a new relationship with God. Christians are children of God, 3:1 f., who at present enjoy a close union with God, so that he is said to be in them and to abide in them, 2:5 f.; and after this life they 'shall be like to him, because they shall see him as he is', 3:2. There are, however, very definite obligations incurred by Christians, who must not commit sin, 3:6, but keep the commandments, 2:29, particularly the precept of fraternal charity, 3:23. This precept is called a new commandment, 2:7, without which we walk in darkness, 2:9 ff., and are not children of God, 3:10. It must fill the soul and not be restricted to words, but should manifest itself in deeds, 3:17 f. We cannot truly claim to love God unless we also love our brethren, 4:20. We forfeit union with God if we love the world, 2:15; or deny that Christ is the Son of God, 2:23.

j Style and Text—In one way the style is extremely simple, in another it is very complicated. The sentence structure is simplicity itself, and individually each sentence is easy to understand; but the connexion of one sentence with the next is often difficult to grasp. There is usually no logical sequence of thought; yet there is development. A certain solemnity and unction are apparent, which make the Apostle's admonitions very impressive.

The Greek text offers few textual problems, but the Latin text, from which the DV is made, has a passage, 5:7b, c-8a, which is lacking in all Greek MSS, except very late ones; in all ancient versions, except the Latin; in about fifty Vg MSS, including the best; likewise in the majority of Greek and Latin Fathers. According to some authorities, the passage was first quoted by Priscillian, who died in 380, and was first introduced into the Spanish Vg MSS, cf. A. Merk, S.J., Compendium Introductionis in SS, 1929, 779. Others hold that Tertullian, St Cyprian, and the whole African Church showed an acquaintance with this text, cf. CSAB 4, 326-31. It is now generally held that this

955j passage, called the Comma Johanneum, is a gloss that crept into the text of the Old Latin and Vg at an early date, but found its way into the Greek text only in the 15th and 16th cent.

956a 1:1-4 Introduction—Beginning without address or salutation, and even omitting his name and title, the author asserts his character as witness to the actual manifestation of the Word of life, Jesus Christ. The Word, who was with the Father from all eternity, Jn 1:1, assumed human nature in order to procure eternal life for the human race. He became man that he might be the life of men. This great mystery the Apostle now reveals to his readers. But he reports nothing on insufficient proof; he records what he himself has seen, pondered, and touched. 3-4. The revelation is made for two reasons: first, that the readers may share 'fellowship' with the Apostles, i.e. may partake of the union that joins all in Christ, and through Christ with God. Secondly, by realizing more fully this fellowship with the Father and the Son they will continually increase in joy. On John's use of the first person singular and plural, cf. Jn 21:24, 25. 5-7 God is Light—5. The Apostle has a message from Christ which relates to the nature of God. He is the absolutely pure, spiritual, perfect being, who can best be represented to men by light. In him there is neither defect nor imperfection, nothing inconsistent with absolute excellence. Our Lord said repeatedly during his public ministry: 'I am the light of the world', Jn 8:12; 9:5; 12:35 f.; i.e. the source of all truth and moral goodness. Since Father and Son are one, and have the same nature, what is true of the Son is true of the Father. 'Darkness', in St John's terminology, means the absence of truth and moral goodness, the prevalence of error and sin, cf. 2:8, 9, 11; Jn 1:5; 8:12. 6. Since God is so perfect a being, no one who leads a sinful life can claim fellowship with him, because union with God and a life of sin are incompatible states. 7. We 'walk in the light' if we lead good and holy lives. Holiness binds all Christians with God and with one another, and makes one a partaker of the graces merited by the blood of Jesus Christ.

9 1:8-11:2 Sin and Its Remedy—Certain members of the Church, misled by pride and self-deception, maintained that they committed no sins. To this group the Apostle declares that whosoever dares to make such a claim is not guided by the truth, but is a victim of self-deception. 9. Moreover, it is not sufficient to acknowledge ourselves to be sinners interiorly, we must 'confess our sins', i.e. make an exterior acknowledgement of them. It is not stated here to whom they must be confessed in order that they may be forgiven. Christ commissioned the Apostles to absolve contrite sinners upon their confession of sins, Jn 20:23, and God who 'is faithful and just' will 'forgive us our sins' as he promised, e.g. Ps 102:3; Mic 7:18 f. 10. St John points out that even sincere Christians fall into sin. Should anyone dare to say the contrary, he makes God a liar, because he said explicitly that all men are sinners, Ps 13:3; Prov 20:9; Eccl. 7:21. 2:1. The Apostle urges his readers to be very careful to avoid sin; yet he knows the weakness of human nature, and holds out the hope of pardon to the sinner, because 'we have an advocate with the Father', i.e. one who intercedes for us and for the whole world. 2. Christ exercises this office of advocate for sinners by continually offering the merits of his passion and death on their behalf; thus 'he is the propitiation for our sins', cf. Heb 9:24, 26.

4 3-6 Fidelity to the Old Commandments—True and solid knowledge of God is not just theoretical, but practical. True knowledge of God leads to love of God, which manifests itself in a constant effort to carry out the divine will expressed in the commandments. Christ must serve him as Model in this respect.

7-11 And to the New—Because of its practical character, the precept of fraternal charity calls for special consideration. At first the Apostle calls it 'an old 956d commandment', because God implanted it in the human heart from the beginning, and he expressly enjoined it on the Chosen People, Lev 19:18. For Christians it received its full significance in the teachings of Christ, Mt 6:2 ff.; Lk 10:29 ff.; Jn 15:12 f. In so far as this commandment was fully carried out, first by Christ and then by his followers, it may be called a new commandment. As Christians, their situation was quite different from what it had been in the time of darkness, when they lived like the Gentiles around them. They were now united by a new bond of faith, and their charity to one another, though virtually comprised in the old commandment, was new in regard to its practice, motives and obligations. 9. To fail in charity is to fail in the principal obligation imposed by Christian faith. He who hates his brother shows that he is not swayed by motives of faith, but by selfishness, like those who still live in pagan darkness. 10. Christianity emphasizes the reasonableness of universal charity, and by following its teachings we give no occasion of scandal to others. 11. Hatred is a sign of spiritual blindness, and he who allows himself to be swayed by this blind passion knows not where it may lead him.

● 12-14 An Appeal—In this section the readers are twice addressed as 'little children', which probably includes the whole community; then as 'fathers', specifying the more mature; finally as 'young men' or the immature. Corresponding to the twofold series of addresses is a change of tense of the verb, from the present 'I write' to the aorist 'I wrote'. Many think that the present form refers to what is contained in the Epistle, and the past form indicates what had been written in the Gospel. Others, with greater probability, maintain that the present tense indicates the author's viewpoint, the past that of the readers. A third difficulty arises from the Greek particle ὅτι, to which most scholars assign a causal significance; others prefer a declarative sense, i.e. 'that', which in my opinion is preferable here.

† 12. Accordingly, to the community as a whole the Apostle declares: 'Your sins have been forgiven you for his name's sake'. Jesus Christ, your Redeemer, obtained for you this great grace, removing the obstacle that would hinder your union with God. 13. Then addressing the 'fathers', he commends them for their mature knowledge of the faith. The 'young men' are praised for gaining a victory over the devil, probably by curbing their passions and forming good habits. 14. In the second series he says: 'I wrote to you, little children, that you have known the Father', and have given proof of this by keeping the commandments. The next clause is missing in Vg, but is found in the Greek text. It is a repetition of 13a, except for the change of tense: 'I wrote to you, fathers, that you have known him, who is from the beginning'. The second appeal to the 'young men' is based on their spiritual strength, on their perseverance in faith, and their victory over Satan.

g 15-17 A Warning—Directly opposed to God's will are the inordinate desires or concupiscences that centre around self. The 'world' in St John's terminology stands for men who are hostile to God and opposed to Christ's teachings. A worldling is a typically selfish creature, who craves for the gratification of his animal nature. A man, who becomes inordinately attached to what worldlings seek, alienates himself from the love of God. 16. Three things in particular draw the heart away from God. They are: 'the concupiscence of the flesh', i.e. an inordinate love for pleasure, a craving to gratify the lower animal passions, a yielding to the vices of gluttony, drunkenness, impurity, luxury; 'the concupiscence of the eyes', i.e. a passionate attachment to riches and material possessions, a yielding to the vice of avarice; 'and the pride of life', i.e. an uncontrolled desire for honours, esteem, rank, pomp and show, a yielding to the vices of pride, ambition, vanity and self-exaltation. It is evident that such passions do not have their origin in God, and do not belong to the life which is from God. 17. They spring from a corrupt world, and, like the world, they are even now in the process of passing away. Being of short duration, they cannot satisfy the human heart. God alone can satisfy it, and only obedience to his will can bring man full satisfaction and unending joy.

18-27 Warning against Antichrist—Three evil forces are leagued against the Father, and against the Son there are also many opponents, called 'antichrists'. St John is the only NT writer to use the name 'Antichrist'. Every opposing teacher, who strives to rob the faithful of their belief and love of Christ, is deserving of the name, although the Apostle admits St Paul's prophecy of one chief opponent, 'the man of sin', 2 Thess 2:3. In harmony with our Lord's prediction, Mt 24:24, St John declares that many antichrists have arisen even now. From this fact we are to conclude 'that it is the last hour'. This phrase is not to be taken literally as the time immediately before the judgement, but can refer to the entire period of the Christian dispensation. Thus rabbinic tradition calls the whole period following the advent of the Messias 'the future world'—'Olam habba', cf. SB 4, 816-44; and St Peter refers to the apostolic age as 'the last time', 1 Pet 1:5, 20. During this period truth and error concerning the person of Jesus Christ will be disseminated, the former by authorized apostles, the latter by false teachers.

19. It is a cause of great distress to the beloved disciple that these teachers of error were once members of the Church. 20. In contrast to these apostates are those 'who have the unction from the Holy One', i.e. from Christ, whose name signifies 'the Anointed One', and who in baptism anointed them with sanctifying grace and the gifts of the Holy Spirit, and enlightened them. The oldest MSS, e.g. B, S, P, read 'even as you all know'; Vg agrees with the majority of MSS, 'and you know all things'. 22. 'Who is the liar'. The falsehood of Antichrist is the denial that Jesus is the Messias, i.e. the Anointed One, and that he is the Son of God. 23. Anyone who denies the eternal generation of the Son from the Father, 'hath not the Father', i.e. has no fellowship with him. 26-29. There is reason for warning them against false seducers. Not that they need explicit instruction in the matter. They have received the unction of the Holy Spirit who will enlighten them concerning what they must know. His teachings are the truth, without any admixture of falsehood. Let them hold fast, therefore, to the faith which he imparted to them. Thus they will be able to meet their Judge with confidence; for he judges justly and approves those who lead good lives.

III:1-10 Conduct of the Children of God—1. Because God has adopted the faithful into his family, the world, which is inimical to God, hates them. 2. But adoption entitles them to a future state of glory, like that of God himself. The true nature of that glorification is not yet clear; but after this life faith will give way to the intuitive vision of God, in which they will reflect his glory and nature. 3. Whosoever wishes to see God, the very Source of purity and holiness, must strive to be holy and keep himself free from all taint of sin. 4. 'Whosoever committeth sin, committeth transgression of the law; and sin is lawlessness'; hence, of its very nature it separates the soul from God. 5. Sin also renders futile the merits of Christ. 6. Therefore, every Christian is obliged to avoid sin that he may remain united with Christ. Wilfully and knowingly to transgress the law of God indicates a lack of proper knowledge of Christ. He who has seen Christ with the eyes of faith, and has recognized 'that he appeared to take away our sins and in him there is no sin' strives to become like him, free from all deliberate sin. 7-8. A just man observes the law of God, and he who sets it at naught imitates the devil. Satan is the author of sin; Christ is his mighty opponent. 9. Sin is also at variance with the divine adoption. When St John says that one who is born of God cannot sin, he does not mean that every baptized person is confirmed in d 11-24 Fraternal Charity the Characteristic Mark of God's Children—To ascertain the spiritual state of any Christian, and to determine his relationship with God, we need but observe how he reacts to the essential precept of fraternal charity. Children of God manifest an active and disinterested love for the neighbour; the children of the devil are characterized by sullen and envious hatred. 14. We follow the way of life when we love the brethren. 15. To cherish hatred for anyone is to develop the disposition of a murderer and forfeit eternal life. 16. Christ, who laid down his life for us, is the perfect example of charity. We should be ready to make a similar sacrifice if called upon to do so. 17. This being the ideal, how radically wanting in charity is he, who sees his brother in dire need, yet does nothing to help him. The reason for such heartless conduct is the absence of love of God. Love of God and of the neighbour are inseparable. 18. In practising either, we must not rest satisfied with expressions of devotion and good will. 19. Only when charity is active does conscience assure us that we are leading sincere Christian lives. 20. And should it accuse us of faults, God, who knows us better than we know ourselves, will understand the sincerity of our love. 21-22. If a good conscience finds nothing reprehensible, we may confidently expect that God will grant a favourable answer to our petitions. 23. Two things sum up what is most pleasing to him; faith in the divine personality of Jesus Christ, and brotherly love according to Christ's instructions. 24. Observance of the commandments is indispensable for union with God. The presence of the Holy Spirit gives us moral assurance of this union, who manifests his presence by the spirit of charity.

957e grace and cannot fall from that state, but that sin is entirely incompatible with a true child of God, cf. Rom 6:6, 11 f., 14. 10. Hence, only they who avoid sin deserve to be called 'the children of God'; they who do not, are 'the children of the devil'.

958a IV:1-6 The Discernment of Spirits—1. Besides those impulses which have their origin in ourselves, there are two other kinds of spiritual activity, which come from without. God can enlighten the mind and move the will of man, either immediately or through the agency of others. On the other hand, the evil spirit tries to perplex and disquiet the faithful with false teachings, and he can imitate the appearance of good in order to deceive men. Hence, the Apostle warns his readers not to trust every spirit, but to put the revelation they receive, or the teaching they hear to a test, to see whether it is from God or from the devil. 2-3. Teachers, who are animated by the divine Spirit, defend the incarnation of the Son of God. Those who make a distinction between Jesus, a mere man, and Christ, the Son of God, are not of God, but of Antichrist. 4. The Apostle is grateful that his 'little children' have not been deceived by such false teachers, because God, who dwells in them, has helped them to persevere in the truth.

b 7-21 God and Charity—After showing this distinction between the children of God and those of the world, St John next proves that love of God and of the neighbour are so closely related that the one cannot exist without the other. 7. Those who love their Christian brethren are united to God and know him, i.e. are able to distinguish his revelation from the false teachings of men. 9-10. When God in his infinite mercy determined to restore fallen mankind to its original supernatural state, his love knew no bounds. He sent his only-begotten Son into the world to be a sacrifice of propitiation for our sins. 11. This was an act of purest love. For we were his enemies, deserving punishment. Yet he chose this method to teach us to love our brethren. 12-14. When we love one another, the invisible God dwells in us, because by this act we resemble God, whose love in sending his Son to be the Saviour of the world we freely admit and confess. 15-17. By faith and love we are united to God and to one another, and if we perfect ourselves in love, we need not fear the day of judgement. 18. Just as love unites two persons, so fear separates them. There is a servile fear of God that is incompatible with perfect charity. This looks only to the punishment, and he who is influenced solely by it fears to approach a just God. He fears the punishment more than the fact of offending God. Such 'fear is not in charity'. There is also a filial fear of God, which considers only that sin is an offence against God. Such fear springs from love and is wholesome. 20-21. Because it is easier for us to love what we see rather than what we do not see, therefore, he who hates his brother cannot truthfully claim that he loves God, particularly since God himself has commanded us to love our brother.

V:1-5 Love rooted in Faith—1. Further proof that faith and love unite us to God and to one another is this: belief in Jesus as the promised Messiah must precede baptism. Through this sacrament we are 'born of God' and become children of God. It also gives us the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of love, and thus begets in us a love of God 'who begot' together with a love of others who are 'born of him'. 2. Three inseparable dispositions are: to love the children of God, to love God, and to keep his commandments. 4. What is it that gives the Christian the power of overcoming the world hostile to God? The Apostle says it is faith, which not only furnishes the motives, but the help of divine grace.

6-12 Threefold Witness to Christ's Divinity—6. Jesus Christ 'came by water and blood'. Water and blood are symbols and refer, the one to the baptism of Christ, the other to his death. At his baptism, the Father proclaimed him his beloved Son, Mt 3:17. At his death, 'the centurion and they that were with him watching Jesus . . . said: "This was indeed the Son of God"', Mt. 27:54. 'Not by water alone' may have been added to refute the error of Cerinthus, who taught that he who died on the cross was not the Son of God, but the man Jesus; for the teaching of Cerinthus, cf. § 955h. Here St John insists that, even amid the humiliations and sufferings of the passion, Jesus Christ was the Son of God. A third witness is added, namely, the Holy Spirit, who speaks through the Apostles and proclaims the divinity of Christ to the whole world.

7. According to the Clementine Vg, the three Persons of the Blessed Trinity are the heavenly witnesses to Christ's divinity, corresponding to the threefold witness on earth. The Father gave testimony at the baptism, and the transfiguration, Mt 17:5 and in the temple court, Jn 12:28; the Word repeatedly gave testimony to his divinity by his words and works during his public ministry; the Holy Spirit likewise testified at the baptism, on the day of Pentecost, and later through the Apostles. 'And these three are one', have one identical nature. Concerning the authenticity of this text, cf. § 955j. 8. The Jewish law required the agreement of two or three witnesses for satisfactory evidence, Deut 19:15. That is why St John produces the threefold witness, and adds: 'and these three are one', i.e. they all proclaim the divinity of Jesus Christ. 9. If a threefold human witness is accepted to confirm the truth of a matter, how can any one dare to set aside a threefold divine testimony, and practically make God a liar?

13-21 Conclusion—13. The purpose of the Epistle, like that of the Gospel, is to awaken in its readers a realization that a firm hope of attaining eternal life is theirs, because they believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ. 14. A second result of their sincere faith is the assurance that any petition, that conforms to God's will, will be granted. 16. This confidence in prayer extends to all the members of the church, and should encourage the faithful to pray for those who have fallen into sin. The Apostle distinguishes a 'sin unto death', which from the context seems to mean deliberate apostasy from the faith, a denial that Jesus is the Son of God. Since such sinners cut themselves off from their brethren, St John does not ask his readers to pray for them, 958f though he does not expressly forbid such prayers, nor does he say that the fate of the apostate is sealed.

- g 18-21. The main purpose of the Epistle is then summarized by a threefold repetition of 'we know': God's children do not commit sin, i.e. they receive abundant grace to avoid deliberate sin, and their love for their heavenly Father prompts them to use this grace. Secondly, we are born of God and are out of reach of the wicked world. Thirdly, we know God through faith in his Son, who became man that we might be incorporated in his Mystical Body. This Son is true God, and is our hope for eternal life. Let them be on their guard against any form of idol worship.

THE SECOND AND THIRD EPISTLES OF ST JOHN

959a Bibliography—cf. § 955a.

Author—The writer of both epistles calls himself 'the ancient' or 'the presbyter', the name whereby he was well known to his readers. A tradition, but not nearly as strong as for the First Epistle, assigns these two short letters to St John the Apostle. Since he wrote them in his old age, and since St Peter calls himself a 'presbyter', 1 Pet 5:1, St John, also, could appropriately use such a title.

- b As regards external evidence, St Irenaeus twice quotes 2 Jn as the work of the Lord's disciple, PG 7, 633, 927. By calling 1 Jn 'the longer epistle', Clement of Alexandria seems to know of other epistles which St John wrote, PG 8, 1004. Origen concedes that St John wrote a second and a third epistle, according to Eusebius, HE 6, 25, who also quotes St Dionysius of Alexandria as evidence for the authenticity of these two short letters. Eusebius himself thinks they are genuine, Demonstr. Evang. 3, 5, PG 22, 216; yet admits that 'not all consider these epistles to be genuine, HE 6, 25. St Jerome remarks that some attributed these letters to the Presbyter John, a different person from St John the Apostle, De Vir. Illustr. 9, 18; his own opinion, however, was that St John the Apostle wrote them, Ad Theod. 75, 3; Ad Paulin. Ep. 53, 8; Ad Ageruch. 123, 12. St Cyril of Jerusalem, Catech. 4, 36; and St Augustine, De Doctr. Christ. 2, 8; admit them as genuine.

- c The internal evidence is strongly in favour of authenticity. Both writings have the same characteristics of style and language that mark the First Epistle and the Fourth Gospel. We find repeated in these letters such expressions as 'knowing the truth', 2 Jn 1; 'the truth which abides in us', 2; 'walking in the truth', 4; 'walk according to the commandments', 6; 'the commandment of charity', 6; 'to abide in the doctrine of Christ', 9; 'follow not what is evil', 3 Jn 11; 'to bear witness', 12: all of which are genuine Johannine phrases.

Canonlicity—Reference to one, and perhaps to both epistles is made in the Muratorian Fragment. They are definitely accepted as inspired writings by the Councils of Hippo (A.D. 393) and Carthage (A.D. 397), and subsequently were recognized universally as part of the canon of the NT.

- d Destination and Purpose—The Second Epistle is inscribed: 'To the lady Elect and her children', 1:1. This inscription has puzzled exegetes from the earliest times. Is it addressed to a mother and her family or to a particular church, symbolically called 'a lady Elect'? The reasons for preferring the latter interpretation are chiefly, the salutation of 13, 'of thy sister Elect', and the assurance in 1 that her children are loved by 'all that have known the truth'. While not apodictic arguments, these two phrases do seem more applicable to a local church than to a private family.

2 Jn is an earnest exhortation to practical charity, and a warning against false teachers. After a rather lengthy salutation, St John expresses his joy that the persons addressed live according to the true faith, and he beseeches them earnestly to love one another. By so doing they will keep the commandments. Let them be on guard against seducers, who deny the incarnation of Jesus Christ, and have the spirit of Antichrist. Let them continue to hold the doctrine of Christ, and refuse to communicate with heretics. Further instructions will be imparted by word of mouth when he comes to them.

3 Jn is addressed to a definite individual, 'to the dearly beloved Gaius', and differs from 2 Jn by its personal tone. In this letter the Apostle mentions that for unworthy reasons certain missionaries have been refused hospitality by Diotrophes, who is presumably the bishop of the local church. For this the Apostle rebukes him, while praising Gaius for his faith and charity. May he continue to show hospitality to visiting brethren. Demetrius also comes in for a word of praise. Finally, St John expresses the hope of seeing Gaius shortly.

The Second Epistle

1-3 Salutation—The writer does not mention his name; f merely assumes the title 'the ancient' or 'the presbyter'. For the meaning of 'presbyter' as a church official, cf. 1 Pet 5:1. In view of his great age and singular authority, St John the Apostle could justly call himself 'the ancient', by which title he probably was known to his contemporaries. The recipients of the letter are 'a lady Elect and her children', cf. § 959d. The Apostle expresses high regard and love for the persons addressed, which sentiments, he remarks, are shared by all the faithful. He wishes them 'grace . . . mercy and peace'.

4-6 Exhortation to Fraternal Charity—The writer opens on a note of joy, the cause of which is the faith and charity 'of some of thy children'. He praises what he can, before pointing out what needs correction. The 'commandment from the Father' is to walk in truth, i.e. live according to Christian principles. 5. There must have been some dissension in this community, or there would be no reason for insisting on the precept of charity. 6. Seven of the ten precepts directly concern the neighbour; hence, 'if we walk according to his commandments', we practise charity; and the motive for keeping them all must be divine love.

7-11 Warning against False Teachers—A firm faith in the divinity and in the incarnation of Jesus Christ is needed to preserve true Christian charity. Many seducers are seeking to undermine this faith. These men should be avoided, because they have the spirit of the Antichrist, and may cause them to lose the full reward for their past good deeds. 9. They profess to advance beyond the teachings of Christ, as if our Lord had not taught the full truth. Now, whosoever follows their teaching, cuts himself off from God. 10. In order to prevent this threatening danger to the faith, the Apostle enjoins that the customary hospitality is not to be extended to teachers of false doctrines. 11. These men ought not even to receive the usual greeting, lest this be interpreted as a sign of recognition and approval. 12-13 Conclusion—St John hopes soon to visit this community, and to impart further instruction by word of mouth. He concludes with a greeting from 'thy sister Elect', i.e. from the church where he is staying.

The Third Epistle

1-2 Salutation—As in the preceding letter, so here, b St John calls himself 'the ancient' in addressing a short message to Gaius, a person about whom nothing definite is known. Whether Gaius was a layman or a presbyter, is not clear from the context of the letter. The Apostle's salutation consists of a prayer that Gaius may prosper both materially and spiritually.

959h 3-8 Praise of Gaius—The writer expresses great satisfaction with the reports he has heard about the character and activity of Gaius. 4. He says: 'I have no greater joy than this, to hear that my children walk in truth'. Besides commending the solid faith of Gaius, he lauds his sincere charity towards the brethren, who are strangers. These men were the itinerant missionaries, who praised the hospitality extended to them before the whole church. 6. St John asks him to lend them further assistance, because they depended entirely on finding support in the different churches they visited, 'taking nothing of the Gentiles'. He intimates that by rendering them this help, he himself was spreading the truth.

9-10 Censure of Diotrephes—Explaining, perhaps, why such assistance was not rendered by the bishop or pastor of the church, the Apostle remarks: 'I wrote indeed to the church', presumably the one to which Gaius belonged, and of which Diotrephes perhaps was bishop. There is nothing definitely known about Diotrephes; only what is stated here. It seems that this man refused to entertain such itinerant missionaries, even those sent out by St John himself; nay, more, he even dared to forbid anyone to show them hospitality, and excommunicated those, who like Gaius, disregarded his prohibition. So we have here an ambitious and selfish pastor, who set himself in opposition to the aged Apostle, who threatens to give him a public reprimand, should he come to this place.

11-12 Approval of Demetrius—The spirit and conduct of Diotrephes is not 'of God', and his example is not to be imitated. Highly commendable, however, has been the conduct of Demetrius, as everyone testifies, and as his truly Christian behaviour indicates. Again we are in ignorance about this individual, merely knowing that he was a true and loyal servant of God, as St John testifies.

13-14 Conclusion—A fuller explanation is not necessary because the Apostle hopes to see Gaius in the near future, when they can discuss details at greater length. He sends greetings from those who are with him, and wishes to be remembered individually to all his friends.

THE EPISTLE OF ST JUDE

By H. WILLMERING, S.J.

960a Bibliography—G. Estius, cf. § 945a; A. Camerlynck, cf. § 945a; *C. Bigg, cf. § 949a; W. Vrede, Der Judasbrief, BB, Bonn, 1932; J. Chaine, cf. § 952a.

b The Author—In the inscription of this short epistle we read: 'Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ and brother of James'. There is no further indication in the letter to identify the writer. In the list of the Apostles two are named Judas, cf. Mt 10:3; Mk 3:18; Lk 6:16; Ac 1:13; one is Judas the Iscariot, who betrayed the Lord, the other is called 'Thaddaeus' or 'Lebbaeus' or 'of James', which according to Catholic interpreters means 'the brother of James'. Non-Catholic writers are loath to identify the Apostle with the author of the epistle; hence they claim that 'son' is to be supplied. The fact that the author mentions James indicates that the latter was well known and highly respected by the recipients of the letter. Catholics justify their interpretation of 'brother' by citing Mk 6:3, where James and Jude are mentioned together as 'brothers of Christ'. The position of James the brother of the Lord in the church of Jerusalem is indicated in Ac 15:13 where with St Peter he settles the dispute about the circumcision of Gentile converts; and in Ac 21:18–25, where he acts as head of the church in Jerusalem, and welcomes St Paul after his third missionary journey. He is called an 'Apostle' by St Paul in Gal 1:19. An early tradition says that Bishop James was a life-long Nazarite and celibate (Hegesippus, quoted by Eusebius, HE 2, 23, 4). But if Jude is an Apostle and a brother of the Lord, why does he not make use of these titles in the letter? The reason is probably the same that prompted James to omit both titles, namely, humility. On the 'Brethren of the Lord', cf. §§ 672–3.

c Canonlicity—This epistle is placed on his list of disputed books by Eusebius, HE 3, 25, 3. St Jerome gives the reason why not all accepted it as an inspired writing: 'Jude has left us a short epistle, which is one of the seven Catholic Epistles; but since he quotes the apocryphal Book of Enoch it is rejected by many. Yet it deserves a place in Holy Scripture because of its antiquity and the use that is made of it' (De Vir. Illust. 4). Early Christian writers of the 3rd cent. who defend its authenticity and quote it as Scripture, are: Clement of Alexandria, Paedag. 3, 8; Strom. 3, 2; Origen, Com. in Mt 10, 17 and 17, 30; In Ep. ad Rom 3, 6; 5, 1; Tertullian, De Cultu Feminae 1, 3. It is found in the canons of the Muratorian Fragment (A.D. 160) of SS Athanasius, PG 26, 1176; Cyril of Jerusalem, PG 33, 500; Damasus, Dz 84; Innocent I, Dz 96; of the Councils of Hippo, Laodicea and Carthage III, Dz 92.

d The Relation between Jude and 2 Pet—Both letters were written to warn certain Christian communities of a grave danger to faith and morals propagated by false teachers. There is, however, a closer connexion between the two epistles than arises from a common purpose. There is great similarity of thought and language, as may be seen by comparing Jude 3–18 with 2 Pet 1:5; 2:1–18. Which letter was written first? There is no agreement on the answer, but the priority of Jude has a slightly better claim. The style of Jude is more fluent, and certain obscure expressions that occur in Jude 9, 11, 12 are clarified in 2 Pet 2:10; 2:15 and 2:13 respectively. Others, however, hold that 2 Pet 2 shows direct dependence on Jude. 960d

The Relation between Jude and the Book of Enoch

—There is great probability, as St Jerome asserts above, § 960c, that Jude made use of the apocryphal Book of Enoch. This does not prove that Jude considered the contents of Enoch as inspired; nor does it indicate that he approved of every statement contained therein. Enoch was held in high esteem in the early Church, and it may have contained some genuine Jewish traditions.

Destination and Purpose—The letter is addressed 'to them that are beloved in God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called', 1, which address might apply to any Christian community. From the tone of the letter it seems to be directed to a definite church or group of churches in a definite locality. The arguments drawn from the OT and Jewish tradition would have greater weight with converts from Judaism, and the fact that the writer calls himself 'the brother of James' implies that he is writing to Christians who had a high regard for James. Such communities must be sought in Palestine, Syria and Mesopotamia, where the majority of the converts were from Judaism; and tradition assigns these very countries to St Jude as the field of his apostolic labours. We may legitimately suppose, therefore, that this epistle was addressed to the churches in these regions.

The epistle was occasioned by the spread of a dangerous heresy, which threatened to undermine Christian life and belief. A band of godless men, who denied God's sovereignty and led immoral lives, were deceiving many and leading them astray. St Jude earnestly warns his readers against such deceivers, and urges them to hold fast to the true faith and persevere in the love of God.

Time and Place of Composition—Nothing definite is known about either. The date usually given by those who admit the authenticity is somewhere between 62 and 67, the dates assigned to the deaths of SS James and Peter.

Analysis—After the greeting the Apostle begs his readers to contend earnestly for the faith, preached to them by the Apostles, against the ungodly men who are advocating lawlessness and immorality, 3 f. He calls their attention to the punishments which God had inflicted on unbelievers, rebels and profligates in the past, 5–7. Despite such warning examples, these seducers defile the flesh, despise authority and speak evil of those who exercise it, 8–10. Their sin is like that of Cain, of Balaam and of Core, 11–13. Enoch foretold their condemnation, 14–15. May the readers be forewarned, and use the safeguards provided by faith, namely, prayer, love of God and hope in Christ, 17–21. Let them encourage the wavering, bring back the fallen, but avoid the profligates, 22 f. God can preserve them from sin. May they give him glory and honour now and forever, 24 f.

Text and Style—The Greek text varies only in two or three places, and the variants are of little importance. Vg follows the Greek closely. The style is impassioned, somewhat vague, picturesque and vigorous.

1–2 Salutation—Although the writer was a relative of our Lord, he does not mention the fact, but humbly 961a refers to himself as a 'bond-servant' of Jesus Christ, and gives his relationship with James, Bishop of Jerusalem, who was everywhere well known to converts from Judaism. He addressed those whom God in his love called to the faith and whom he preserved in it by uniting them to his Son Jesus Christ. 2. The Apostle wishes them a threefold divine blessing in fullest measure: mercy from God, peace with him, and charity towards their fellowmen.

3-4 Purpose of the Letter—It seems probable that the Apostle planned to write a general letter about what is most necessary for salvation; but a sudden danger immediately caused him to send in writing a warning plea, urging the faithful to preserve unchanged the deposit of the faith which had been transmitted to them by the Apostles. 4. Ravenous wolves have entered the Christian flock to destroy it. Long ago did Christ indicate such deceivers as constituting a real menace to the church, Jn 10:1. Two charges are brought against these particular seducers: they abused the grace of God by indulging in licentiousness, and by their immoral conduct they denied in practice the authority of God and of Jesus Christ.

b 5-7 Warning Examples—5. The Apostle calls attention to several instances, already well known to them, in which God inflicted severe punishment for sin. The first is taken from Num 14:1-36. The lesson inculcated by the destruction of the unbelieving Israelites is that no Christian may presume on his privileges, since those who were brought out of Egypt by a series of astounding miracles nevertheless died in the wilderness because of their unbelief. There are three variant readings for 5b: the oldest Greek MSS and Vg have 'Jesus'; others have 'the Lord'; and a few have 'God'. Here, as in 1 Cor 10:4, 9, Christ is said to have accompanied the Israelites in their wanderings through the wilderness. 6. The second example is the fall of the angels. 'Kept not their principality', i.e. the state in which God created them; 'forsook their own habitation', i.e. they forgot their proper rank by aspiring to equality with God their Creator; 'unto the judgement of the great day', i.e. the day of general judgement, referred to in Ac 2:20; Apoc 6:17, when the rebel angels will receive their final sentence. 7. The third instance is recorded in Gen 19:25; 'suffering the punishment of eternal fire', i.e. the effects of the fire which destroyed these sinners are depicted as permanent, cf. Wis 10:7.

c 8-13 The Nefarious Conduct of the Seducers—8. Now follows the application of the preceding examples to the false teachers. 'In like manner these in their dreams', i.e. dreaming in the sleep of sin, 'defiled the flesh', by giving themselves over to immorality, like the Sodomites; 'and despise dominion', i.e. scorn authority, like the disgruntled Israelites; 'and revile majesty', speak ill of those who exercise authority. Some interpret 'δοξαι' as angels, i.e. beings in whom the divine Majesty is reflected. 9. In contrast to their outrageous conduct is the restraint used by St Michael in his dispute with Satan over the body of Moses. This incident is not mentioned in Scripture, but may have been a Jewish oral tradition, which is well known to the readers of this epistle. According to Clement of Alexandria, Adumbrat. in Ep. Jud. and Origen, De Princ. 3, 2, 1, St Jude is quoting an apocryphal work, The Assumption of Moses. In the fragment of the work that has come down to us, this story is not found. The passage claims that the Archangel Michael passed no hasty judgement on the arch-enemy, but left his condemnation in God's hands. 10. 'Blaspheme', i.e. revile, speak abusively of; 'things they know not' are spiritual things; 'things they naturally know, like dumb beasts', sensual passions, natural cravings.

d 11. Next the Apostle likens the false teachers to three notorious sinners mentioned in OT: Cain, Balaam 961d and Core. Throughout the epistle the author has a liking for triads; e.g. 1, 2, 4, 5-7, 11. By not curbing their passions, in contempt of God's warning, Gen 4:7, they resemble Cain. Balaam allowed selfish avarice to stifle conscience, and disregarded the threats of divine punishment, Num 31:8. Core rebelled against the authority of Moses, Num 16:1-36. 12. Using a series of metaphors to describe their shameless conduct, St Jude says: 'These are spots in your love-feasts, when they feast with you without fear', i.e. at the liturgical banquets, 'ἀγαναί', when Christians gathered to share with one another the food they brought as a sign of union and mutual love, and which was followed by 'the Lord's supper' (cf. 1 Cor 11:20 f.); these deceivers were blots, misfits, or as some texts read, 'rocks' or hidden reefs to wreck the faith of those assembled. 'Fear' refers to the fear of God. Their boastfulness, which produced nothing, is likened to clouds that promise rain but are driven before the wind. Their lack of virtuous deeds causes them to resemble trees in autumn, that should be loaded down with fruit but are barren. This proves that they are utterly dead, and deserve nothing better than to be uprooted. 13. Their boisterous and obscene conduct is illustrated by the turbulent waves of the sea that wash ashore filth and slime. Their departure from sound doctrine and morality is similar to the course of a wandering star that disappears in the darkness forever.

14-16 Henoch's Prophecy of Judgement—14. The prophecy of Henoch is not contained in Scripture, but is found almost verbatim in the apocryphal Book of Henoch, 1, 9. By quoting this passage, St Jude does not approve of everything contained in this strange work. He merely vouches for the fact that the prophecy is recorded that the Lord will execute judgement upon all ungodly sinners, such as the men in question. 15. Enlarging further on the character of the false teachers, he calls them 'murmurers full of complaints', i.e. men who are discontented with their lot, who do as they please, whose speech is boastful and vain for the most part, but who will stoop to flattery when this is advantageous to them.

17-19 Warning of the Apostles—That false teachers 1 and seducers will appear 'in the last days', and will resemble in character the men here characterized as 'mockers walking according to their own desires in ungodliness', is stated by St Paul, 1 Tim 4:1; 2 Tim 3:1, and less clearly by our Lord, Mt 24:11. Similar prophecies, no doubt, were uttered by all the Apostles of Christ in their instructions to the people, but their words have not been recorded.

20-23 Final Exhortation—20. Whereas the heretics g are pulling down the church of Christ stone by stone, St Jude desires his readers to build up their character firmly 'upon your most holy faith', i.e. according to its holy teachings and after the example of its holy Founder. This can only be accomplished with the help of the Holy Ghost, whose assistance must be sought through prayer. 21. Love of God, and the mercy of Jesus Christ will bring them 'unto life everlasting'. 22-23. The Greek text is rather uncertain. In some MSS there are two clauses, in others three. Most textual critics prefer the reading in which three classes of offenders are mentioned. The first class seem to be wavering; they are to be taught the truth by instruction and argument. The second class seem to have yielded, but can still be rescued. The third class are utterly depraved and their condition is hopeless. They should judge them mercifully, but hold them in fear and keep them at a safe distance, as they would a contaminated garment.

24-25. The epistle concludes with a solemn doxology.

THE APOCALYPSE

By C. C. MARTINDALE, S.J.

962a Bibliography—Fr E. B. Allo, O.P., Apocalypse, Paris, 1921; *H. B. Swete, The Apocalypse of St John, London, 1906; F. Ribera, S.J., In sacr. Apocalypsim Commentarii, Lyons, 1592; B. Viegas, S.J., Commentarii Exegetici in Apoc., Paris, 1606; W. H. Simcox, The Revelation of St John the Divine (CBSC), Cambridge, 1902; J. J. L. Rattou, The Apocalypse of St John, London, 1915; *R. H. Charles, The Revelation of St John, 2 vols (ICC), Edinburgh, 1920; R. Eaton, The Apocalypse of St John, London, 1930; O. Karrer, Die Geheime Offenbarung, Einsiedeln-Köln, 1940; E. Burrows, S.J., The Pearl in the Apocalypse (JTS), 43, 1942; R. J. Loenertz, O.P., The Apocalypse of St John (tr. by Hilary Carpenter, O.P.), London, 1947.

b The Apocalypse and its Author—The last book of the NT is entitled: Apocalypse of (i.e. written by) John. Who was this John? But for certain doctrinal objections, ancient tradition would have been unanimous—he was John the Apostle, the son of Zebedee. In the 2nd cent. the 'Apocalypse' was known throughout the Church, regarded as inspired by God, and written by a John whom St Justin (c 140: Dial., 81, 4) calls 'one of the apostles of Christ': Justin knew Ephesus well. Polycarp, John's disciple (martyred at Smyrna, 155–6), quotes the Apocalypse complete with grammatical abnormalities: the Muratorian Fragment (Rome: 155–200) mentions the Apocalypse as John's, manifestly meaning the Apostle: Irenaeus (177–8; familiar with Gaul, Rome and the East; cf. the Letter from Lyons, doubtless drawn up by him; and Adv. Haer., ii, 22, 5; iv, 21, 11; v, 26, 1) is certain that it is by John, disciple of the Lord. Tertullian (c 205–10: Adv. Marc., iii, 14, 24; iv, 5; and De resurr. carnis, 27) is no less clear. The list were easily amplified. But a certain Roman priest Caius (c 205) startlingly assigned the book to John's great adversary Cerinthus who, under the pseudonym 'a great apostle', declared that it taught a terrestrial 'kingdom of Christ' lasting 1,000 years of nuptial festivity. The Montanists, passionately believing in personal mystical inspiration, fostered a reaction against the Johannine writings and objected to symbolism as such: 'What use to me is John's Apocalypse when it talks of Seven Angels or Seven Trumpets?' But they acknowledge that the ruck of Christians ascribe the book to the Apostle: thus they witness to the tradition while deriding it.

c But about 250 Dionysius bishop of Alexandria, disliking the book's symbolism and 'millenarianism', 'guessed' that its author was different from that of the Gospel: 'Many men are called John, and they say that there are two tombs in Ephesus, each called John's!' His reasoning, then, is purely personal not traditional: no one so far had heard of this 'other John'. Eusebius however (HE iv, 13, 8) says that either the book must be ranked as among the undisputed NT books or rejected as apocryphal, and suggests that its author 'might be' John the Presbyter mentioned by Papias: this 'other John' might account for the story of the 'two tombs'. So for slightly over a century there was a partial eclipse of the Apocalypse: it was accepted in the West, doubted or rejected in the East: but soon the entire Church accepted it—there was no rival tradition, and the doubts had been raised on impressionist or doctrinal grounds. Towards the end of the 19th cent., it was argued that neither Gospel nor Apocalypse was written by the Apostle, or that only the latter was: but a reaction set in, and it is very generally admitted that both documents are by one author: since we hold that the Fourth Gospel was written by John the son of Zebedee (see §§ 776d–778f), we regard the Apocalypse too as having been written by him.

Impossible, here, to do more than indicate lines of argument for or against identity of authors. Verbally, the Apocalypse is more akin to the Johannine Gospel and Epistles than to the rest of the NT. Grammatically and syntactically the differences are startling, but the coincidences far more subtle, so that those who believe in different authors sometimes postulate a sort of 'Asia Minor' dialect due, maybe, to 'John of Ephesus', which influenced all the Johannine writings. Doctrinally, Jn is said to present a 'human' Christ: the Apocalypse, a tremendous heavenly Judge and King—as to this, see the Commentary: enough to note here that only in the Gospel and the Apocalypse is our Lord called the 'Logos'; nowhere could His divinity be more strongly stressed than in the former; throughout the Gospels κρίσις, judgement, is a keyword; Christ's role as Judge at the End is, if anything, less emphasized in the Apocalypse. In short, the latter seems to be more closely allied with Jn than with the Synoptists. Then we are told that the spirit and method controlling the two documents differ profoundly. But, first, each is built up out of contrasts—Light, Dark; Truth, Lie; Life, Death—and Lamb, Wild Beast; Bride, World-Wanton; Jerusalem, Babylon; Michael, Dragon (see Commentary). Again, the historical events in Jn are chosen for their spiritual significance—John uses the material fact as symbol for a spiritual truth: in the Apocalypse he chooses a spiritual truth and devises a symbol for it. Again, the Apocalypse is put into carefully articulated groups of 'seven': in the Gospel, John selects seven significant miracles (many other 'septuples' are to be found there; see Abbott, Johannine Grammar, 2624–7): this is the more remarkable since certain expressions (e.g. 'these things have I spoken to you') could hardly have been observed as used seven times save by a student looking for such a system: they do not construct a pattern as 'sevens' do in the Apocalypse—though it too contains various 'latent sevens'. Another habit of John's, specially noticeable in the Apocalypse, is that having all that he proposes to say already in his mind he will provide a self-contained picture into which, none the less, some element of what he will say next enters: his sections are separate, yet 'dove-tailed'. His mounting tide rolls forward and the wave crashes: it retreats, carrying back some shingle: forward it sweeps again, covering a new reach of shore, and so on, till it reaches its appointed limit.

The Pattern of the Apocalypse—The book consists of a Prologue; the 'book' itself, and an Epilogue. The Prologue is (a) general and (b) particular. (a) 1:1–8 Title; author; sanction; salutation of recipients; ascription of praise to Christ. (b) 1:9–3:22. Christ commands John to write to the Asiatic 902a communities, telling them 'things present and to come'. John obeys, writing a sevenfold 'covering letter', insisting chiefly on 'things present'. The Epilogue (22:6-21) corresponds closely with Prologue (a), amplifying it by many expressions used in the bulk of the book.

This falls into two substantial parts : A (4:1-11:18) and B (11:19-22:5) :

A (I) A DOUBLE PREPARATORY VISION (remaining as an unchanged background to all that follows)

- (a) The everlasting worship of God by all Creation (ch 4).
- (b) The universal role of God incarnate, suffering and triumphant (ch 5).

THE BREAKING OF SEVEN SEALS

- (a) A group of 4 Seals : Four Horsemen (6:1-6).
- (b) A group of 2 Seals : the cry of the Martyrs and the answer to it (7-17).
- (c) A double vision interposed (ch 7).
- (d) The Seventh Seal (8:1).

A (II) A DOUBLE PREPARATORY VISION

- (a) The Prayer of the Martyrs in Heaven (8:2-4).
- (b) Its effects on earth, seen generally (8:5).

THE SOUNDING OF SEVEN TRUMPETS

- (a) A group of 4 Trumpets : the woes of inanimate Nature (8:6-13).
- (b) A group of 2 Trumpets : a double war of spirits and of men (ch 9).
- (c) A double vision interposed (10-11:14).
- (d) The Seventh Trumpet (11:15-18).

(Prefatory Vision to Part B : The Apparition of the Ark of God ; 11:19.)

B (I) A DOUBLE PREPARATORY VISION

- (a) The Woman, Mother of Christ (12:1-6).
- (b) The Dragon, would-be conqueror of Christ (7-12).

SEVEN GREAT 'MYSTERIES'

- (a) A group of 4 Mysteries—the Dragon ; the Wild Beast from the Sea ; the Wild Beast from the Land ; the Lamb (12:13-14:5).
- (b) A group of 2 Mysteries (14:6-13).
- (c) A double vision interposed (14:14-20).
- (d) The Seventh Mystery (15:1-4).

B (II) A DOUBLE PREPARATORY VISION (15:5-8)

THE OUTPOURING OF SEVEN PLAGUES

- (a) A group of 4 Plagues (16:1-9).
- (b) A group of 2 Plagues (10-12).
- (c) A double vision interposed (13-16).
- (d) The Seventh Plague (17-21).

f There follows what could be called Part C, or Part B (III). The structure here may be less distinct, perhaps owing to a new kind of symbolism used ; possibly because of the ever-increasing emotion under which John writes.

(A Prefatory Vision : 17:1-2.)

A DOUBLE PREPARATORY VISION

- (a) The World Wanton (17:3-6).
- (b) Explanation of this 'Mystery' (7-18).

SEVEN VISIONS

- (a) A group of 4 Visions—The Doom pronounced on Rome (18:1-8) : Dirge over Rome (9-20) : the Destruction of Rome (21-24) : the Triumph of the New Jerusalem (19:1-10).
- (b) A group of two Visions—Christ's Advent as Conqueror (19:11-16) : the Destruction of the Beast (17-21).

(c) A double vision interposed—The Binding of the Dragon and the Reign of the Saints for 1,000 years (20:1-6) : The Destruction of the Dragon (7-10).

(d) The Seventh Vision : Judgement and Consummation (11-15).

A Double Vision of God proclaiming the New Jerusalem (21:1-8) and of the New Jerusalem itself (21:9-22:5) corresponds to the Double Vision of God and of the Lamb prefixed to the central part of the book. (Epilogue : 22:6-21.)

Prophecy : Prediction : 'Apocalypse'—The book therefore belongs to a certain class of prophetic writing, i.e. 'Apocalypse', and is traditional. But it is also original. The word 'apocalypse', 'un-veiling', is frequent in both Testaments. St Paul speaks of the unveiling of God's Judgements, of Christ, of the 'sons of God', and says that he has had personal unveilings (cf. Rom 2:5 ; 8:19 ; 16:25 ; 1 Cor 1:7 ; 2 Cor 12:7 ; Gal 1:12). Prophecy can include 'prediction', and Apocalypse can include actual comment and practical advice ; yet we might say that the former begins from earth and rises to heaven, while the latter begins from heaven and descends to interpret human life in the light of eternity. Now if St Paul heard 'words that transcend all words'—'words that no man may utter' (2 Cor 12:4), should he have wished to relate that experience he must perforce have done so in symbols. So too would any other ecstatic. Hence an 'apocalyptic dialect' grew up, especially when the Ending of the World was being dealt with. Nor was this disdained by our Lord himself. The message might be new ; but the diction, inherited. John's message was new—it concerned a Messiah not only promised, but arrived. So he could not but use and adapt the ancestral symbolism. He would have adapted it in any case, being a true artist : thus he simplifies Ezechiel's vision of God and quite 'de-humanises' it : he accepts many a suggestion from his own environment : he will use various symbols for one thing, or allow one symbol to float from one meaning to another. Some of his symbolism may remain inexplicable for us, not only because we cannot fully share the knowledge of his Asiatic readers, but because he wrote at times 'in cipher' what he had already explained or would explain later and could not risk writing openly, e.g. about the Emperors ; cf. St Paul : 2 Thess 2. We may, then, say that a Prophet can have five planes of consciousness within himself, all interpenetrating—he might see something concrete, actual or imminent ; a city, or an invasion, and, he might allude to this directly, or under some symbol—a strong king attacks a weak one ; a lion devours a gazelle. Or, he might see a persecution as 'typical', a summing-up of the world-enduring conflict between Right and Wrong—thus the End of the World could be seen in the sack of Jerusalem, when a 'world' undoubtedly did end, as another did when Christendom broke up, or, may be, in 1945. Again, he could see all this as having its counterpart in man's soul : or, yet again shifting his perspective, he could contemplate a world of spiritual prototypes, more 'real' than transitory events. Finally, he might 'see God', so far as that is granted to man. Delicate indeed the task of judging upon which plane the Apocalypticist's eye is focused, for, while seeing more than one, he will focus especially upon one. Our suggestions therefore are but tentative, nor do we forget that John was inspired to write as he did, so that his words have God for Author.

It is clear that one man must have arranged the component elements of the book into their strange mosaic—'7', i.e. '4 ; 2 ; (2) ; 1'. So we need not suppose that John 'saw' all these visions 'on end' : they may have been 'lights in prayer' granted at different times in his life, remembered by him (as 962h Mary 'kept all these things', reflecting on them, inter-connecting them: Lk 2:19, 51) and finally arranged by him as we have them. If this be so, the question of 'when' the visions were granted, lapses, though we still can ask when the book was composed. But more. It becomes evident that the episodes (starting with the Seals) cannot represent a sequence in time—century by century, era by era. Commentators used to struggle to show that they do: probably no one attempts this now. John's eye is fixed throughout on one subject—Christ's Triumph in a hostile world. True, we shall see that he focuses more and more on contemporary events; but in reality the consummation is reached at the end of each group of seven, though, foreseeing (as we said) what he will write down next, he causes the theme of, or some item in, the following group of visions to be anticipated in the previous one.

963a I hold, then, that the book is a complex whole constructed by one man, who does not, for example, incorporate earlier (hypothetical) apocalypses; who modifies the traditional dialect to suit his genius and environment; that its doctrine is identical with that of the Fourth Gospel and that its diction and style are nearer to that than to the Synoptists. Is this paradoxical in view of the differences on grammar, vocabulary and style which have been a main reason for the denial of identity of authorship, or at least for assigning the purer Greek of the Gospel to 'disciple-secretaries' used by the aged John? (See on the Pentateuch, § 48b, and on Hebrews, § 52c.) But (a) the style of the Fourth Gospel hardly suggests to me an adapting hand, let alone mind; and (b) it is absurd to say that a man cannot write in very different styles, especially when both his material and his mood are different. John, receiving shock after shock of ecstasy and struggling to write down symbolically and traditionally what could not really be written down at all, cannot but have written in a quite special way. Had we Aquinas's Summa only, we would not have expected his hymns: having the hymns we are not surprised by the Summa. Had we only St John of the Cross's lyrics, would we have expected his prose works (or vice versa)? Having both, we see—once he explains his symbolism—how truly, yet surprisingly, they harmonize. John was steeped in the apocalyptic passages of the Prophets, especially Daniel, Ezechiel and Zacharias: he may have read earlier or contemporary apocalypses—Enoch (166–164 B.C.); The Secrets of Enoch (A.D. 1–50); especially Baruch (contemporary?): but he does not quote, and the non-canonical documents are altogether beneath him artistically and spiritually: we need not mention anything that followed him. One cannot precisely prove that the book was written by the son of Zebedee or at any definite date: the only reason for asserting that parts of it could not have been written before a late date (94–6: see § 970k, l) would be the assumption that prediction is impossible.

b The Recipients of the Apocalypse: Emperor-Worship: Gnosticism—John sent his Apocalypse into a world where two main dangers were manifest. One was Emperor-worship, due at its lowest to the immemorial oriental wish to flatter its princes, flattery welcomed at any rate by unbalanced emperors like Nero, Caligula or Domitian. It was due, too, to a far-sighted policy, especially when linked with the Goddess Rome. Emperor-worship alone held together the heterogeneous cultures that formed the Empire, and this worship insinuated itself into every part of life—military, social, bureaucratic, commercial: every reunion involved some Emperor-worship; to avoid it, a man must practically ostracize and ruin himself. But even the hard-headed Roman felt that 'Rome' existed 'not without the gods' and was herself 'divine': so in proportion as the Emperor incarnated 'Rome', he too became divine. Finally, the prevalent Stoic philosophy regarded the Logos—the departmental 'expression' of 'God'—as socially made visible in the system of Empire. Thus he who dissociated himself from this was not only disloyal, but an enemy of civilization, animated by a 'hatred for the (civilized) human race' and must be got rid of.

Secondly, a vaguely religious philosophy was everywhere taking many fluid forms later to be known, collectively, as 'Gnosticism'. It tended to regard all 'matter' as bad, so that God could never come into contact with it: contact was made through an enormous series of existences each less spiritual than the preceding one. Somewhere in this series was the 'Logos'. Those then who did not wish to exclude Christianity held that our Lord's body was unreal, an 'appearance' only: or, that a divine Power laid hold of a human body and used it like a marionette between, e.g. the Temptation and the Agony (or the Death). You could either get rid of this evil matter by extreme asceticism—no marriage! no eating of flesh-meat!; or, you could regard your body as so definitely not your Self that it did not matter what it did: the divine spark, ultimately to be reunited with God, remained inviolate though in prison. Thus all religions were relatively 'true', being but expressions of the Inexpressible Super-Reality and useful for the common herd who did not know the 'depths' of this doctrine as true Gnostics (Know-ers) did (see § 965a).

This was but on its way to systematization when the Apocalypse was written; but St Paul's letters to the Ephesians and Colossians and indeed St John's first Epistle often refer to its embryo. Both Christian 'intellectuals' and the average Christian were hard pressed. The latter could so easily be persuaded that Emperor-worship was a mere social formality: the former, that Gnosticism was just 'broad-mindedness'. The intransigence of St John will be seen hurling itself against both these misconceptions and implementing its decisions about actual problems by its vision of eternal Truth.

The Title: 'The Revelation of (i.e. given by, through) John' I 1–3 The Scope of the Book—'The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave to him to show to his servants—what must soon take place—which he showed—sending it by his Angel—to his servant John—who witnessed to the Word of God and the witness of Jesus Christ—all that he saw.'

1. The Revelation of Jesus Christ. Is he the Revealer or the Revealed? Both. He revealed himself to St Paul (2 Thess 1:7; Gal 1:16, etc.). God entrusts what he reveals, to his Son that he in his turn may reveal it to the world by means of his prophets—in this case, John (cf. Jn 17:8; 14:10). 2. Christ receives, transmits, and is God's Word and John witnesses to that to which Christ witnesses (cf. Jn 5:32, 32, 37). The whole of Jn is concerned with the Utterance of God and the witnesses to it—miracles; the Baptist; the Evangelist; the Holy Spirit. But this revelation is also a prediction of what must 'soon' happen: 'the moment is near'. 3. Blessings on those who 'read the prophecy aloud' and on those who listen and who 'keep' what is written, remembering, reflecting (like Mary, Lk 2:19, 51). Since Christ evidently is speaking himself, who is the 'Angel'? Our Lord himself alludes to his Angel (22:6) and as a rule it is an angel who addresses or summons John. Probably John, under the spell of the OT, felt that he must not suggest that he saw God with his eyes or heard him with his ears, and gravitated towards the OT expression 'The Angel of Yahweh', i.e. God precisely as revealing his invisible Self.

4–6. Salutation to the Readers, i.e. the 'seven churches' in 'Asia', and ascription of glory and power to the Eternal, to Christ, slain, risen, Redeemer and Universal King. 4. The 'seven Churches'; see § 964f. 'From him that is, and was, and is to come': literally, 'from the Existing, the Was, and the Coming' (moreover, the preposition ἀπὸ, 'from', which governs the genitive, is here followed by the nominative:

964b but the words are an immutable title, outside grammatical construction. So too (5) 'from Jesus Christ' (genitive) is followed by 'the Witness' (etc.) in the nominative. But these titles too are exclamatory and detached. 'Who is' occurs five times in the Apoc, though twice without 'the Coming': God's essential Being is an eternal Now. The future participle δοξόμενος would be less meaningful for John than a word implying not only futurity but Arrival (the Last Day). Humanity can express eternity only by such words as 'He who was, is, and will be'. The 'Seven Spirits that are before the Throne of God'. Who are these? Either John omits the Holy Spirit, or these are He—but if so, why so strangely spoken of? Or, if not he, who are these Spirits? John's word πνεύματα seldom means 'angels', else we might think of the (apocryphal) 'Angels of the Face', supremely mighty spirits who may represent an endeavour to express the totality of God's action 'outwards'. Here I think they represent the Holy Spirit thus—they are the totality of God's activity especially in regard of his Son (cf. Is 11:2, where the Spirit reposing on the Messiah is, it is true, six-fold in Hebrew but made sevenfold in the LXX: cf. too the Seven Eyes of Yahweh and those of the Lamb which rove throughout the world: Zach 4:10; Apoc 5:6). Since the Apoc knows the Holy Spirit (e.g. 22:17) and that the Son is co-equal with his Father, it seems impossible that John should join seven created spirits with Father and Son as givers of grace and peace, especially as he places them between the Father and the Son. Therefore the Seven Spirits are the Holy Spirit whose 'totality' is seen as seven-fold (disconcertingly, maybe, to us but not to one under the spell of the OT) and acting on the Son of God as made flesh—the Witness wholly to be trusted ('faithful'), first-born from the dead (cf. Col 1:18; infra, 19:16, etc.), the Ruler over the kings of the earth (a warning note: the Apoc will have much to say of Christ triumphant over Caesar-anti-God).

c 5. 'To him who loves us (present, not past participle) and loosed us (λύσαντι, not λούσαντι, 'washed') from our sins (i.e. by means of) his blood.' 6. He has made us 'a kingdom (i.e. a royal race) and priests' (cf. Ex 19:6; 'a priestly kingdom'; 1 Pet 2:5, 9; 'a holy kingly priesthood'). Our redemption is not only negative—we are no more 'unclean': it is not only from, but to; to incorporation into the Living Christ, and so, to a sharing in his prerogatives. 7. A characteristic cry of exultant vision. 'Bewail themselves' should be 'shall beat (their breasts)' (cf. Zach 12:10; Jn 19:37). 'With the clouds', cf. Dan 7:13; Mat 24:30. Might not 'Yes! Amen!' be joined to 8, as part of the solemn seal set by God on the Prophet's words? The combination of Greek with Hebrew was significantly emphatic: cf. 'Abba! Father!', Mk 14:36; Rom 8:15; Gal 4:6. 'Alpha and Omega', first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, i.e. that Alphabet from which all words are made (cf. Is 41:4; 44:6, etc.). This title, proper to God, Eternal, All-Ruler, is given to Christ in 22:13. These eight verses, then, include the whole doctrine of the Trinity, Incarnation, Redemption, the Church, the Judgement of the World (in every age) by Christ. What Un-Veiling can show more than that?

d 9-20 The Mandatory Vision—John, exiled in the quarry-island Patmos and rapt in ecstasy, is told to write to the Churches of Asia: he turns, and sees the Living Christ moving about among those Communities and receives his Mandate so to write. 9. John in exile is sharing in the perseverance during that persecution which does not prevent Christians from being a Kingdom. He 'found himself' there 'because of the Word of God and the Witness of Jesus' (i.e. the witness given by, or to, Jesus, or both). 10. He was 'in the spirit', seized by the spirit of 'prophecy' (cf. 1 Cor 14:1, 32; Apoc 22:6, etc.). 'The Lord's Day': Sunday.—Why 'behind me'? In Homer, the future comes up from behind a man—he does not 964d foresee it. Or, nothing that John had been seeing or hearing 'led up to' his 'revelation' (cf. Ez 3:12). 11. The Voice tells him to write to the Seven Churches in Asia. 12. He turns to 'look at the Voice'. The Vision, the Hearing, are expressed in terms recalling Daniel (esp. ch 7) and later apocalyptic writings, e.g. Enoch 46:14 ff., where the Seer beholds: 'One who had a head of days (i.e. was aged; i.e. here, eternal) and his head was white like wool. With him was one whose face was like a man. This is the Son of Man who reveals all the treasures of that which is hidden, because the Lord has chosen him and he will arouse the Kings and the Mighty from their couches and the strong from their thrones. Before the sun and the constellations were created . . . his Name was named before the Lord of Spirits' (48:3 ff.). John uses OT symbols proper to God alone, transferring them to Christ, pre-existing and everlasting. The Figure is definitely human (Dan 7:17; and our Lord's use of the expression 'Son of Man': see § 621h): in long priestly robe (Ex 28:4; cf. Zach 3:4) and royal golden girdle (Dan 10:5): for the flaming eyes his piercing gaze, reading the heart's secrets, cf. of an angel (Dan 10:6, 14). 15. The feet of purified bronze (?), firm and indomitable, unlike the clay-and-iron feet of Nabuchodonosor's image (Dan 2:23, 34): the 'voice of many waters' (cf. Ps 92:4, 5), sonorous, even thunderous, yet not harsh. 16. The Word of God, 'more piercing than any two-edged sword, reaching to the division of the soul and the spirit, of the very joints and marrow, disentangling the inmost thought and intentions of the heart' (Heb 4:12). On the Seven Stars, held by Christ, and the Seven Lampstands among which he moves, see on 20. 17. John falls prostrate (cf. 19:10; 21:8; Is 6:5; Dan often). The Vision uses our Lord's remembered words, 'Fear not!' 'I am the First and the Last' (human history, from end to end, is unintelligible apart from the Incarnation: see § 966d): 'the Living One (essentially a divine title in OT), and dead did I become; and see! I am living for ever and ever!' St John's Gospel and his Apocalypse are built up around the idea of Life (cf. Ac 3:15; 'Chieftain of Life'). 'The Keys of Death and of Hades': Christ is Lord also of the Dead (Death and Hell are here 'places', the world of the bodily-dead: cf. 6:8 for personification). He who holds the keys of city, house, treasury, controls what is in them (cf. Is 22:22. In Mt 16:19, the Messiah inherits the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven and hands them over to Peter). 20. Defines the nature of this book—it is to contain 'things that are', and 'what shall be after these'. Present, and Future. But as a 'mystery', as having an inner meaning, symbolized. A hint is at once given of how to approach the apocalyptic symbols—Christ moves among seven lampstands: these are the Communities to which John must write: and the 'stars' that Christ holds are the 'angels' of those communities.

II 1-III 22 The 'Covering Letter to the Seven Church of Asia'—1. Asia is the proconsular province. True, it contained many Christian centres besides those here named, e.g. Hierapolis, Colossae, Magnesia. But 'seven', as always, means 'totality'. But why choose these seven towns? Ramsay (Letters, ch 14) thinks they were situated on a 'circular road' by which Rome linked up the most important parts of the province. John would naturally send his letter first to Ephesus; his courier would then go north to Smyrna and Pergamum; then, south-east, and then back by the central part of the road to Ephesus. But, why choose unimportant towns like Philadelphia rather than e.g. Cyzicus? Ramsay conjectures that 'Asia' was divided into seven 'postal' areas within which letters might be distributed from a centre commercially or otherwise important. But other towns might be Christian-wise more important. What are the 'Angels' of the Churches? Elsewhere in Apoc 'angel' means, as usual, a personal spirit acting as messenger. Does it here mean simply the messenger who carried the letters? No: why write to messengers? Nor do the symbolic stars suit them. Are they the bishops of the various communities? The Latin Fathers incline to this view. But it were too severe to make a bishop responsible for the faults of an entire community! The Greek Fathers tend to think of Guardian Angels. Still, such angels can hardly be blamed, though Daniel (10:13 and 12:1) equips nations and rivers with 'princes' who are angels and actually opposed to one another. The extremes are clear—Christ, the Sun (16); and the Churches—the Lamps. In between are the Stars, the angels. Three 'planes of reality', with appropriate symbols. Not that John was borrowing from Plato that intermediate world of 'ideas', realities higher than their poor concrete version, the 'things' that surround us. The Jews already had a floating belief in a more 'real' because a 'heavenly' Ark, Book of the Law, Temple furniture and so forth. In this document, we see John's mind hovering, so to say, between heaven and earth. He is sending a heavenly message in a heavenly way to groups of men who should themselves be heavenly. He sees, as with Christ's eyes, the perfect Community; conscious that the earthly fact by no means corresponds with that, he calls the 'ideal' an 'angel': what other word could he dispose of? With his eye, first, on the ideal, he writes to it, and sends it with a message to the 'real', soon enough forgetting the 'ideal' and its symbol and focusing on the real, but always reverting to Christ, that Sun from which alone comes the fire that sets the lamps alight.

1-7 The Letter to Ephesus—Ephesus, by far the most important city of 'Asia' as governmental centre, 'gate between Rome and Orient', rich international market, home of general and philosophical education and magic arts (Ephesia grammata; cf. Ac 19:19); famed above all for the immemorial cult and temple of the Asiatic goddess whom the Greeks called Artemis and the Romans Diana (columns from a temple 500 years older than what John saw are in the British Museum). Its vast precinct was an asylum for criminals, a home of prostitutes, and contained a shrine of Augustus and, later, three associate Caesar-temples. 1. Christ moves around among the Lamp-stands: in this central city he is seen as it were in all the churches of 'Asia'. 2. Unsanctioned itinerant preachers come there (cf. 2 Tim 3:5-6): but the Ephesian Christians would not tolerate heterodoxy (and cf. 6), though (4) they had grown slack in good works. 5. Let them repent, else, 'I am coming at thee!' Christ would remove the lamp of Ephesus! 7. But the persevering and victorious should eat of the Tree of Life in the eternal Paradise (contrast the veto in Gen 3:22). Are there allusions here to the frequent shifting of the Ephesian population owing to the constant silting up of the harbour? And to the sacred Artemisian tree on early Ephesian coins? This will not seem far-fetched when we see, below, how John nearly always gives a side-glance to something local and familiar. On the Nicolaitans; see below, 15.

8-11 Smyrna—The 'beauty-spot', the 'idol' (ἰδωλὸν) of Asia. Its palaces on the eastward hills were known as its 'wreath' or coronet. Almost from 200 B.C. it was devoted to the imperial cult and even under Antiochus Epiphanes opened a temple to the Goddess Rome. Its loyalty earned it the title 'Faithful'. Its Jewish community was savagely hostile to Christians: it would be Jews who egged on the populace to demand the death of its bishop St Polycarp (A.D. 156) during the imperial games. 8. Christ, First, but also Last, slain, but now alive, (9) knows their poverty—'but thou art rich!'—and the blasphemies of the Jews—'Jews'? A misnomer! A 'synagogue'? Yes! but of Satan! Cf. 24. 10. The Smyrniots shall suffer persecution—sharp, including martyrdoms, but short ('10 days': on John's use of numbers, see § 969g). Let them be 'faithful'—to death! Christ would give them a wreath of Life, nor (11) would they be hurt by the 'second death', that of the soul.

12-17 Pergamum—Whence 'parchment', there fabricated. A colossal altar of Zeus dominated both city and plain. Caesar-worship developed as from 29 B.C. A centre for the cult of the healer-hero Asklepios: sick pilgrims slept in his temple: Aelius Aristides (2nd cent.) having done so received a new name, Theodorus, and was given a sacred emblem that he carried about as pious consolation. If this practice was normal, 17 may allude to it. 13. This concentration of paganism may explain 'the Throne of Satan': where Satan dwells'. The local Christians had held firm, even in the days of Antipas (a proto-martyr? otherwise unknown). 14-16. Still, they contain men who 'hold the teaching of Balaam who taught Balak (Num 31:16) to ensnare the Israelites—to eat idols' food and commit fornication. So thou too hast, even thou, men who similarly hold the teachings of the Nicolaitans'. (No reason for connecting this name with the deacon of Ac 6:5.) St Paul, writing to the Ephesians and Colossians shows that fore-runners of the Gnostics (see § 963c and below, 20 and 24) existed who encouraged 'laxism' sharing in feasts where food coming from temple-sacrifices was eaten (not illegitimate in itself, but suggesting that the banqueters joined too in the actual worship; see 1 Cor 8), and where immorality often resulted from such orgies. The 'laxists' said: 'These meals are merely social, not religious: no risk of sin!' John rejects this: Christ will 'come at' the guilty with his sword sharper than any such casuistry, or than the persecutor's. 17. The Victor would be given, not that food, but the 'hidden manna', and a white token, medallion, engraved with a 'new name' known to none but the recipient. The Manna, 'bread from heaven', had been hidden in the Ark (Ex 16:23; cf. Heb 9:4): tradition said that it should be restored at the time of the Messiah (cf. Jn 6): in the catacombs the Eucharist was symbolized by a manna-jar. Again, it was widely believed that each thing had an 'inner self', to which a secret name corresponded. He who knew that name had power over the essence of the thing. This 'secret' name was sometimes engraved in magic characters on a token of ivory or stone, to be worn round the neck or as a ring. Christ by his union with the soul gives it a new 'self' known only to him and to his Christian. The Promises increasingly concern this supernatural, indeed Eucharistic, union.

18-20 Thyatira—Commercially very active, with guilds of bakers, dyers, tanners, potters, wool-workers, linen, leather, bronze, etc. Life was practically impossible save in a trade-guild which meant joining in its feasts. 19 ff. John praises the Thyatirans: but, they tolerate a 'modern Jezebel' (see 3 Kg 16-21; 4 Kg 9), who like the 'modern Balaam' (14), seduces them into laxity—infidelity to the One God who had espoused Israel was immemorably called adultery (22). He whose flaming eyes penetrate all specious excuses and read men's hearts bids them break off this adulterous alliance—she shall indeed be placed in a bed, but one of torment: The Victorious shall share in Christ's own victory (27 ff.), and he will give them that Morning Star which is himself (cf. 22:16; 2 Pet 1:19)—the Prophets were lamps; Christ, the Dawn-Star rising in men's hearts. (Why not the Sun? full daylight? Because while we live by faith, we exist at best but in a twilight.) Thyatira had a female Sibyl who 'prophesied' there: later, the Montanists had heretic 'prophetesses' there: so this 'Jezebel' may have been no mere collectivity, but an actual woman, claiming to reveal 'deep things'—the 'Depth' was afterwards a technical Gnostic word. 'Deep things?' cries John. 'May be! But the "deep things" of Satan!' (cf. 9). 'I lay on you no other burden', i.e. no fresh obligations: John remembers the decree in Ac 15:28: '(We) . . . lay on you no further burden, save to abstain from things sacrificed to idols . . .' John had joined in making that decree: the recurrence of the subject-matter revives the formula.

965e III 1-6 Sardis—Built on a hill that looked impregnable but was fissured mud, not rock, it had twice been surprised and taken, by the Persian Cyrus and by Antiochus the Great. Its special cult was the Nature-Goddess of Asia, Cybele (Artemis, etc.) but also that of the Emperor. Had the local Christians succumbed to these? 1-3. 'I know thy works'—hitherto a formula of praise: here, stern rebuke. If the Sardians do not repent, Christ will come 'like a thief', just when unexpected (cf. 16:15, certainly an echo of Mt 24:42 ff.; Lk 12:36 ff.). 4f. 'Names', i.e. persons. 'White' robes. In the Graeco-Roman world white symbolized not only purity but also joy and especially triumph.

d 7-18 Philadelphia—A small earthquake-racked town: for long, its people had hardly dared to live within its walls. The Christians here were few, but faithful. 7. Christ, the Holy One (in the Apoc, always a divine title), the True One (i.e. authentic: no false Messias: used ten times in the Apoc, nine in John's Gospel, once in the First Epistle: otherwise, only four times in Heb and once in 1 Thess—a thoroughly Johannine word), opens with his divinely authoritative Keys (cf. Is 22:22) (8) a door for the Philadelphians' influence. 9. Persecution was to reach them from Jews rather than from pagans—'men from the synagogue of Satan—who say they are Jews but are not—they lie!'—yet even they shall recognize that 'I have loved thee'. 10. But a persecution is about to break out 'everywhere'. If the Philadelphians hold good 'and shall have preserved the doctrine of Christ's endurance' (i.e. the teaching that the Christian must persevere as Christ did, and for him) they shall be kept safe here and for ever. 12. Christ will make the Conqueror a column in God's Temple and never shall he leave it: Christ will engrave on it the Name of God, that of the New Jerusalem, and, 'my own new Name'. Our incorporation into Christ. The columns are not the temple, yet without them it cannot stand (cf. St Paul: without the head, the body dies: but without the body, the head is meaningless: see Col 1:18). On columns and tiles of temples was often engraved the name of the god to whom they were sacred: here, the Christian has on him the consecrating name of God, but also that of the supernatural Jerusalem, the Church (cf. Gal 4:26; Heb 12:22): and also, Christ's own 'New Name' (above, 2:17): he gives a new name, a new self, to the Christian: here, he receives a New Name owing to the Christian's incorporation into him: the Mystical Christ-Jesus and his Christians co-corporate is always growing. See Col 1:24; 2:19.

e 14-21 Laodikia—A proud self-sufficient city famed for banks and gold-traffic; for its glossy black wool; its eye-salve (collyrium) exported throughout the Empire, and opposite the hot springs of Hierapolis, nausea-provoking when tepid. 14. Christ, proclaiming his absolute paramouncy, says (15 f.) that the tepidity of the Laodikeans will make him vomit them out of his mouth. 17. They say: 'I am rich! I have made my money! I am in need of nothing!'—'and dost not know that thou art the pitiable one—poor, blind and naked'. 19. Terrible rebuke, but due precisely to Christ's loving them, and followed by words of tenderest intimacy. 20. 'See, I am standing at the door and am knocking. If a man opens to me, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with me.' The Communion of 'one with One', even in this life, but looking forward to the final call when the victorious soul shall share Christ's throne even as Christ shares God's. (3:14 is almost verbally what St Paul wrote in Col 1:15. He meant that letter to be read by neighbouring Laodikia too.)

These letters vividly portray the life of Asiatic Christians—mostly humble folks; poor, and the poorer because of the demands of their Faith, and tempted to compromise with prosperous paganism—to yield to the suggestion that a pagan-Christian mysticism was conceivable; to be beaten down, if not by the insane worship of the Nature-Goddess, then by the overwhelming dominance of imperial 966e Rome. And vivid is the personality of John—inflexible, still the 'son of the thunderbolt', yet intimately aware of each detail of his readers' environment—his symbolism is never haphazard: his heart is as tender as Paul's. Complete and authoritative is his theology of Christ, eternal Son of God, all-wise, all-powerful, yet 'moving around' among his Christians, knocking till they open, building them into himself, giving them that Manna, that Dawn-Star which are himself; giving, and receiving, the New Name proper to the New Self—Christ and Christian co-corporate.

PART A

The Apocalypse of the Future: (IV:1-XI:17).

A (1) A Double Preparatory Vision (remaining as an unchanged background to all that follows).

(a) Ch 4. The everlasting worship of God by all Creation—1-11. John sees the Throne of God, and the Universe from heaven's point of view. 1. 'I saw' (aorist) 'a door lying wide open' (perfect). The fact is always there; but only those whose eyes are 'enlightened' see it. John hears the first voice and sees the door (already a spiritual communication), but forthwith 'became in the Spirit' (a yet deeper ecstasy). 2. 'A Throne was set'—built; decked. The Enthroned is not, as in Ezechiel, human-wise described or even named. 3. He is 'like the jasper and sardius to look upon' and surrounded by 'a rainbow 'like an emerald'. (John emphasizes 'like', 'as it were': he can find no better translation of what he sees.) The stones are probably green and red: but why a rainbow? and why 'emerald'? A symbol, since the flood, of enduring covenanted mercy: 'upon us is established his mercy: The loyalty of the Lord endureth for ever' (Ps 116:2). Andrew of Caesarea (6th-7th cent.?) says: 'The divine Nature is ever green and flowering'—συναργαδίζουσα—participle: a tremulous play of green. 4. The Throne is surrounded by 24 Elders, also enthroned: a spiritual court or senate (cf. Is 24:23; Dan 7:10). Why 24? Not a normal symbolical number. But surely, no reference to the 24 courses of priests (1 Par 24:7 ff.); still less, to the 24 Babylonian gods north and south of the Zodiac! Surely, the 'Church', the Elect, from 'beginning to end'—the 12 Patriarchs and the 12 Apostles—the ideal Church, as in God's mind. It were over-logical to ask how John can bow down to Apostles of whom he is one; or how he sees the Church before the Book is opened which relates its history (ch 5). These 24 are triumphant (white robes, royal and priestly crowns, cf. 4:10; 5:11).

5. 'Thunders, voices and lightnings': traditional in Theophanies. The Seven Lamps, the Seven Spirits of God (see above 1:4): the Holy Spirit, symbolized, as often, by the multiplicity-totality of his gifts or energizing: septiformis munere. 6a. The crystal Sea 'in front of', i.e. all round the Throne. The Hebrew visualized the earth as flat, with waters 'under' it; and above it, the solid vault of the 'firmament' supporting the 'upper waters' on which rested the Throne of God (cf. Gen 1; Ex 24:10). But since John never uses any detail as merely decorative but always as symbolic, this Sea may well figure the absolute inaccessibility, the 'otherness', of the Enthroned. 6b. 'In the midst of the Throne and around the Throne, 4 Beings'—how translate ζῶα? Not 'animals' merely. 'Creatures'? Inadequate; half contemptuous to our ears. 'Living Beings'? Accurate, but clumsy. We resign ourselves to 'Beings'. They are either at the four corners of the Throne if it is square; or at the ends of its diameters if it is visualized as circular. I think one 'Being' fronted John; one was seen from behind; the other two, in profile. But did John visualize details? How, for example, could he see (8) that these Beings were interiorly 'full of eyes'? 7b. Tradition (Ez 1-15 ff. and many apocryphal books) placed four mysterious Beings usually under God's chariot or throne. Ezechiel 966b derived his plastic imagery from the composite Babylonian figures (originally astronomical figures), and equipped each Being with all four faces, human, lion, bull, eagle. John simplifies Ezechiel's Cherubs but joins to them the six-winged Seraphs of Isaiah (ch 6) and also their triple Sanctus : and possibly the 'Watchers' (the eyes) of apocryphal tradition. But what are these Beings? Irenaeus (Adv. Haer., iii, 11, 8) is the first we know to have applied them to the 4 Evangelists—simply because they are 4 : there are 4 regions of the earth ; 4 main winds ; and the Maker of the World gives us his Gospel accordingly as fourfold. But their innumerable 'eyes' signify consciousness—unsleeping, universal. It is in accord with traditional symbolism to see in them the whole of Nature which, even if inanimate, is, 'after its kind', giving glory to God. Thus the whole of Creation—pure spirits ; supernaturalized mankind ; Nature as God knows it—joins in giving him that praise which is the true end of its existence. 9. 'When' should be 'whensoever', and the following verbs in the future. John, aware of what his document will contain, foresees a whole series of such acclamations.

e (b) 5:1-14—A scroll is seen in God's hand, covered with writing but so closely sealed that no one can read it. John laments this, but hears that the Lion of the Tribe of Judah has conquered and can open it. Forthwith he sees between the Throne and those who surround it a Lamb that had been slain and yet is standing upright. The Lamb advances and takes the scroll and all Creation acclaims him as worthy to open it since his Blood has ransomed men throughout the world, and made them kings and priests before God. The whole spiritual world and then all Creation repeat and amplify this acclaim. 1-5. The Sealed Scroll (cf. Is 29:11 and especially Ez 2:9) is an ἀποκάλυψις, i.e. written on both sides, but so tightly sealed (seven seals) that it cannot be unrolled and read by any created thing. But the Lion of Judah, of the stock of David (i.e. the Messianic King) has conquered, and so, can do so. This scroll is the world's history, an enigma apart from the Incarnation, Saving Death and d Resurrection of the Son of God. 6-9. The Lamb, slain yet alive (cf. 1:18), stands 'between' the Throne and Creation—a Mediator. His '7 horns' are the plenitude of Power ; the '7 eyes', the plenitude of Wisdom (see 1:4 ; 4:5 ; Zach 3:9-10 ; 4:10—the Seven Eyes of Yahweh). This plenitude is in God, and in the Lamb, and is sent by him throughout the world. The symbols are not disconnected, but indicate the Trinity. 7. When the Lamb 'takes' the scroll, (9) Nature sings a 'new' song. 'Newness' is a key-word in the Apoc : 'behold, I make all things new' (21:5 and often). A 'new song' often in OT, as fit for solemn occasions (Ps 32:3, etc.). Nature is not to be abolished, but made new (cf. 2:17 ; 3:12 ; 21:1). Nature, then, offers praise and prayer (incense, already symbolical in OT) : the Lamb prophesied in Is 53:7 as future, has now been sacrificed and effected a universal ransom : he is worthy to explain the Book—in fact, is its Explanation. (The Martyrs, by union with him, share in this worthiness : cf. 6:9.) 9-12. After this song of sub-angelic Nature, innumerable spirits (cf. Dan 7:10) utter their seven-fold shout of praise. 13. Then the whole of Creation unites in worship before the One Throne belonging alike to God and to the Lamb. 'Heaven, earth, and under-earth' is merely part of Hebrew literary tradition : 'all that is'. Upon this praise, Nature and Church alike set their 'Amen', seal of absolute agreement. (In 12, Greek MSS have 'riches' ; the Latin 'Godhead' is wrong, for Godhead is not one among several attributes belonging to the Lamb on the same plane as the others.)

e VI 1-VIII 1 The Breaking of Seven Seals—John cannot use his imagery quite consistently, for so long as the scroll remains fastened by even one seal it cannot be unrolled. But he is offering a gradual exhibition of great principles, or energies at work, discernible in life by the keen-sighted. One of the 'Beings' calls 966c 'Come !'—not to John, but to the ensuing Apparition, which does not emerge from the scroll, but passes across the Seer's field of vision. There follows (a) the breaking of a group of 4 seals—1. The First Seal. A Horseman appears (cf. Zach 1:8-11 ; 6:1-7). He rides a white horse and receives a bow and a crown and goes forth to conquer and again to conquer. Nothing will persuade me that this horseman is the same as the 'Word of God' in ch 19 simply because each rides on a conqueror's white horse and is crowned. The remaining 3 horsemen are all disasters ; each is summoned in the same way ; they are all on one plane of thought and imagery. John introduces at once a main theme of his book—what we should call 'aggressive imperialism' in the widest sense : later, it will be seen as Roman imperialism in particular. Why a 'bow' ? Possibly because of the haunting contemporary threat to Rome, the archer Parthians (ch 9). 3-4. The Second Seal. A Red Horse. Its rider creates War. No imperialism possible without it. 5-6. The Third Seal. A Black Horse. Its rider holds scales : 'A measure of wheat for a denarius (a day's wage) : three measures of barley (coarser grain) for the same—but do not injure oil or wine (olives and vines)'. The inevitable result of even victorious war : it reduces the very victors to penury—a whole day's wage is demanded for the minimum needed for existence. 7-8. The Fourth Seal. A 'Wan' Horse—the colour of decay is meant. His rider is Death ; his escort Hell—the same thing. War is followed by famine and pestilence : this trio often occurs in OT and in our experience. (LXX often translates Hebrew 'death' by pestilence which suits this context. Idle to say that Death is allowed to kill by means of death.) The 'wild beasts' may be meant literally. Civilization collapses and men are too weak to restrain them. Or, men revert to 'jungle law'.—In Zach 1:8 ; 6:1-8 the 4 Horses are the 4 Winds (often symbolizing God's messengers or instruments of judgement.—Ps 103:4 ; Jer 49:36 ; Dan 7:24, and below, ch 8). All the more reason for seeing here 4 objects of the same sort under cavalry symbols. This, then, is the series : Extension of Godless Power : this involves war : this creates terrible decline in 'standard of life' which unless arrested brings about famine and epidemic. John, however, intending to write more, says (8) that only a quarter of the earth was destroyed. (b) 9-17 A group of Two Seals—The Prayers of the Martyrs in heaven (9-11) and their effect on earth (12-17). 9f. 'Under the altar.' 'The', not 'an' : John has pictured all the heavenly 'furniture' though he has not yet thought of mentioning it. 'Under' : 'at the foot of' the altar of Holocaust, where the sacrificial blood was shed. The 'life' is in the blood. The immediate perspective is formed by the Martyrs under Nero (A.D. 64) asking when justice shall triumph and being told to wait for the martyrdoms under Domitian (A.D. 96) : but beyond these are all the martyrdoms of history. 11. The 'white robe' shows that these Martyrs have already triumphed. 'How long ?', a dramatic enquiry : cf. 18, 20 ; 19:2 ; and especially Esdras 4:35-37 where the souls of the righteous dead ask when their reward shall come. An archangel says : 'When the number of your compeers shall be complete.'

h VI 12-VII 17 The Sixth Seal—A vision displaying preliminaries to the ending of the world and the salvation of the elect. 12-17. Earthquake : sun blackened : moon like blood ; the sky itself like a scroll torn in the middle and rolling up to its two ends. 'Apocalyptic and eschatological dialect'. See Agg 2:6 ; Nah 1:6 ; Mal 3:2 and Lk 21:36 ; Jl 2:30-31, quoted by St Peter, Ac 2:39 ; Is 34:4 ; used by our Lord in Mt 24:29 ; Mk 13:24 ; Lk 21:35. The 'dialect' persisted for centuries, e.g. to describe the death of some important Jew. The cosmic catastrophes represent (as often in OT, especially earthquakes) social upheavals : these always precede, on a grand scale, the break-up, or 967a end, of a 'world' or social order.—(e) VII 1-17 A double vision interposed—The vision of the actual consummation is 'held up' while (a) the Elect from the Twelve Tribes are sealed with God's sign; and (b) those from all the rest of the world. Why did John construct the Apoc on this curious plan? His Gospel certainly looks back to Genesis—'In the beginning': the 'water and the Spirit': cf. too his use of the 'tree of life'. Does he so look back here too, in his account of the creation of a new heaven and earth? I think it possible that John, building his whole book on a system of 7's, like the 7 days of the First Creation, saw a distinction in kind between the 'work' of the first four days, that of the fifth and sixth, and the unique consummatory 'rest' of the 7th. But why does he throughout insert a double vision between the 6th and 7th of each 'group'? Perhaps simply because here, in ch 7, he wished to allude to the salvation of the elect under the two dispensations, and then, having done this once, liked to preserve the same numerical construction throughout. John sees, therefore, a 'check' imposed upon the destroying winds till the 'servants of God' in Israel, and then throughout the world, be signed for exemption upon their foreheads (1:8; 9:17). In Apoc and later Jewish literature angels are held to control the elements. The 4 winds, if let loose, would destroy the earth. 2-8. Therefore an Angel from the sunrise—source of light and rescue—forbids this till the Elect be 'sealed' on their foreheads. See Ez 9: an angel marks those exempt from the destruction carried out by 4 others. Cf. the marking of the Israelites' doorposts in Ex before the passing of the Destroying Angel. Soldiers too and slaves were branded thus as belonging to a legion or a master. 'Seal' was a very early Christian name for baptism (and confirmation): cf. too 2 Cor 1:22; Eph 1:13, and the caricature, the Mark of the Beast, below. This seal, then, has nothing to do with the Seven Seals: those sealed up the scroll; these stamp a mark on the forehead identifying the person as 'exempt'. 4-8. '144,000': this vast figure—100 times 12 times 12—means an enormous multitude: John, like Paul, foresees a great conversion of Israel to Christ. Why is Dan omitted from the list of tribes? Because John distinguishes 'Joseph', i.e. his own Ephraim, from Manasses, so that one tribe had to be left out to preserve the number 12? Still, why Dan? Because tradition said that 'Antichrist should come from Dan', so that that tribe was treated as reprobate? 9-12. Then John sees the innumerable host of the Saved from throughout the world: heaven joins in their 7-fold cry of Glory. 15-17 display the present and future beatitude of the Saved, in exquisite form and rhythm. Note the paradoxes—the Blood that washes white (14): the Lamb who is a Shepherd (17). The fountains of living water: cf. Jn 4:10, etc.; 7:38 ff.; Apoc 21:6, etc. Compare Ps 22:15, 'shall spread his tent over them': the word is found only here and John 1:14. 'Day and night', i.e. always, with unconscious memory of the continuous Temple-worship. But in 21:22, 25; 22:5, no more Temple exists, nor night. The 'great' tribulation may indeed be the final persecution; or that which endures throughout the Church's history; or Domitian's, or all three, according to John's 'focus': but with it endures her triumph. VIII 1 (d). The Seventh Seal—Silence in Heaven 'as though for half an hour'. Not merely because this series of visions ends, and with a 'sabbath-rest', but because the Consummation is ineffable. The vision outstrips words, symbols, and thought itself. One of the most overwhelming 'revelations' of this Book.

d A. (II) VIII 2-XI 18.

A Double Preparatory Vision (a) 8:2-4—The prayer of the Martyrs in heaven. 2. The 'Seven Angels'. Tradition placed 7, 6, 4 or 3 specially 'great' Angels before God's Face (cf. Tob 12:15). To each is here given a trumpet. Throughout the OT and cf. Mt 24:31 and 1 Cor 15:52, trumpets symbolize the summons of God, especially to Judgement, but also, the promulgation of feasts and disasters. Another angel takes his stand on (the steps of?) the altar of burnt-sacrifice whence he brings burning coal to put it in a censer full of incense (the prayers of the Saints: cf. 3:4; 6:9-11). (b) 5. Then the burning coal with clouds of incense rising from it is thrown down to the earth, cf. Lk 12:42. These Prayers have a double effect—they obtain mercy save when it is refused; but even when mercy is rejected and they provoke chastisement, it is chastisement that can be curative. This prepares for the actual sounding of the Trumpets. This new series of visions stands in no time-relation to what has preceded them, though their symbolism begins to look forward to what John will use in the second Part of the Book. The literary background is on the whole the Plaguing of Egypt.

The Sounding of Seven Trumpets (a) 7-12 A group of 6

4 Trumpets—A third of the earth and its vegetation is destroyed: then, a third of the sea and what is on or in it: then, a third of the fresh waters: then, a third of the heavenly bodies. These occurrences are not consecutive nor to be taken literally. (How visualize the destruction of a 'third' of seas and rivers? or the darkening of a third of the night? And the Sixth Seal showed us the stars as already fallen.) This new set of visions shows us the same thing under different (more concrete) symbols. Conceivably John has seen an Aegean thunderstorm, and rain reddened by Sahara-dust, or a volcanic eruption, or a meteor; but, more probably, his imagination is stimulated by the plagues of Egypt. 11. 'Wormwood' traditionally signified perversion of justice, or the fruits of idolatry, or divine chastisements (Am 5:7; 6:13; Deut 29:12; Jer 9:14, 15). The waters are not embittered because the star is made of wormwood; but because they are corrupted, the star is so named. Possibly the Eagle announcing further disasters is introduced because of the different character of those woes—they concern men and spirits, not inanimate nature, and even of that, only part, not even half, was destroyed.

(b) IX 1-21 A group of Two Trumpets—The literary 1

and psychological inspiration of the strange imagery of the following passage is clear; but lack of space may make the attempted explanation seem over-dogmatic. Briefly, John sees a host of evil spirits, and a host of invading Parthians. He symbolizes the spirits by 'locusts'. But, having all that he proposes to say already in his mind, the imagery proper to each part infuses itself into the other: he equips the locusts with features suited to the Parthian cavalry, and the Parthian horsemen, with features proper to the diabolic locusts. 1. The Star that has already fallen from heaven (perfect tense: cf. Lk 18:18) is the Angel of the Abyss: in Hebrew, Abaddon; in Greek, Apolluon. Abaddon, 'Destruction', meant Sheol (Hades), the pit into which souls sank, but it could be personified, as here (cf. Job 26:6; 28:22). The Pit is pictured as having a shaft up to the earth, with a padlocked lid. The Destroying Spirit receives its key (cf. 1:18; the Keys of Death and Hades; and 20:1). 2ff. He unlocks it: a column of smoke arises whence issue evil spirits dense as a plague of locusts. But they are scorpion-locusts, able to sting with their tails (3, 10), and are like battle-horses (7), making a noise like a cavalry charge (9); they wear gold crowns, have human faces and hair like women's, and wear iron breastplates. They are not allowed to injure vegetation (as locusts do) but to hurt men (as scorpions do) yet not to kill them. This plague lasts five months. For plagues of locusts, see Ex 10:12-15, but especially Jl 1:4, and ch 2 where a real plague of locusts is idealized as an invading army—in Apoc the invading army is symbolized as diabolic locusts. Locusts have often (apart from the whirr, indeed roar, of their onset) suggested a horse-like resemblance (German: 'Heupferd'. Italian: 'cavaletta'. An

967g Arab saying is that they are, as to their head, like horses; their chest, like lions; their feet, like camels; their body, like snakes; their antennae, like virgins: but John's locusts have tails 'like scorpions'. Why? (a) Nearer-East art was full of composite figures—men-scorpions, men-horses, men-ants often having one or more scorpion-tails. A similar sort of figure represented the zodiac sign 'Sagittarius', 'the Archer': the Greek Apollo was an archer whose arrows inflicted pestilence: the kind of image was, therefore, familiar in John's environment. (b) But why does he here select, precisely, scorpions? We shall see this when we reach the 6th Trumpet—enough to say, now, that the Parthians were eminently horsemen, and archers, and able to shoot back over their shoulders, as scorpions strike with their tails back over their body. So the devil-locusts are seen also as devil-scorpions. 13 ff. A voice from one of the 'horns' (i.e. at one of the corners) of the Altar bids the 4 angels who are 'bound' by the Euphrates to be loosed so that the winds may destroy one third of mankind (i.e. of the civilized world). These are not 'bad' angels, but simply in charge of winds and hitherto forbidden to let them blow. The Book of the Ethiopic Enoch (56:5) speaks of the Parthians as sent against the Holy Land and the Syriac version of 4 Esdras says: 'Let these 4 kings (cf. Daniel's 'princes'?) be loosed, that are bound by the great river Euphrates, who shall destroy one third of mankind'. This alludes to the Parthians, invasion by whom was anxiously feared by the Roman Empire. 16. The Parthians are essentially horsemen—John hears that their forces are 200 millions. Here the material fact begins to take on features proper to the spiritual symbol, the locusts, just as they had taken on features proper to the Parthians. 17. These horsemen have breastplates the colour of fire, hyacinth and brimstone, the horses have heads like lions snorting flame, smoke and sulphur; their tails were like serpents with heads—with these they do their harm. Thus the picture of the scorpions' colours' that of the cavalry just as the long-haired backward-shooting Parthian provided the scorpion-element in the description of locusts with antennae like floating female hair. The two visions shoot details back and forth into one another: the devils are 'Parthianized', the Parthians become half Satanic. But both the details, and the method, so strange to us, would have seemed almost common-place to John's contemporaries. Of course the Parthians stand but as symbol of all world-enduring onslaughts upon God's elect: Satan keeps stirring up wicked men who become the very instruments of hell: indeed, the Parthians as such remain hardly a moment in the forefront of John's consciousness. 20-21. Despite these woes, men do not repent of their idolatries—their sinful worship of whatsoever they prefer to God.

968a (c) X:1-XI:14 A Double Vision Interposed. An Angel with the 'Little Book': the Two Witnesses—Ch 10 describes a strong radiant Angel, holding a small book. Seven thunder-claps resound, but John is told not to write down what they say. He is then ordered to 'eat' this bitter-sweet book and to prophesy to many races, nations and kings. Ch 11:1-14 describes how he is then bidden to measure the Temple, excluding the Outer Court which like the City itself is abandoned to pagan desecration for 42 months. Two Witnesses prophesy for 1,260 days—they are the two olive-trees, the two lamps burning before the Lord; during their prophetic period they can take vengeance on men and on inanimate nature alike. Then 'the Beast from the Abyss' shall conquer and slay them: they lie exposed for 3½ days and are then assumed into heaven. An earthquake: many perish, but the rest give glory to God. 10:1. The Angel (cf. the announcing Angel of 5:2): he is a resplendent blaze of light—no need to visualize details as e.g. Dürer did. He holds a 'small' book, open—the visions will be narrower and will concern the Roman and the Asiatic world as such, displayed to all eyes. Since the unrolling of the first great scroll there are no more secrets (yet see 3 and 4). He strikes from sea to land—I think, from Rome (overseas, for John) to Asia. The vision is an 'intermediate' ecstasy: John is not now in that heaven to which he was told to 'come up' (4:11). 8-4. 'The Seven Thunders': there is still something that John must not tell: is it some closer definition of the Consummation? 5b. But the Angel swears solemnly that 'there shall be no more delay' (not 'time': 6): not indeed that the Parousia is imminent—it awaits the Seventh Trumpet: but the world-age in which John was living was rapidly reaching its end: 'No more delay!' cf. 6:11; 2 Pet 3:3 ff. 7 ff. The 7th Trumpet will denote the 'consummation of the Mystery of God', 'the joyous news that he has given to his servants the Prophets to proclaim', that is, the accomplishments of the whole of the divine plan. 11. But before that, John 'must' prophesy what more exactly concerns Imperial Rome as such.—The 'eating' of the book (assimilation of its contents)—from Ez 3:1-3. It contains God's words—therefore, sweetness: but, his terrible judgements—therefore, John adds bitterness.

XI:1 ff. The 'measuring' of the Temple, its Altar c and Worshippers—1. Modelled on Ez 40; 43:13-17, and Zach 2 where the 'new' all-holy Jerusalem is measured for preservation and purification. 2a. The 'outer court' and the City at large are to be given up to pagan desecration. (The essential Church shall not perish even during world-persecution.) 2b. This desecration lasts, in apocalyptic language, 'a time, times and half a time' (see Dan 7:25, etc.), i.e. 3½ years, 42 months, or 1,260 days—'persecution-time', stereotyped since the original 3½ years (June 168–Dec. 165 B.C.) during which the Jews were subjugated by the would-be imperialist paganizer Antiochus Epiphanes. 3. But God keeps two penitentially garbed Witnesses there. Why two? First, because two witnesses were the necessary minimum in Jewish law for witness to be valid. Then, John's recollection of Zacharias's 'measuring' makes him think also of that prophet's figure of the People as the 'lamp' fed by the oil from two olive-trees, doubtless Josue and Zorobabel, heads of the priesthood and of the royal house. 4. Here the remaining witnesses are both lamp and oil; 5, 6; finally, because of the firm expectation of at least one pre-Messianic witness—always Elias (cf. Mal 3:1-3; 4:5; and Mt 11:10); or indeed two witnesses, Elias and e.g. Enoch, Moses or Esdras who should arrive before the End. Elias could 'shut up the heavens' (3 Kg 17:1; in Lk 4:25 that drought lasts 3½ years), and Moses brought plagues on Egypt. 7. What is 'the' Wild Beast from the Abyss who fights and slays them? He was not mentioned in ch 9! John's mind is already haunted by his next section where the Beast is a protagonist: there is a dawning of that vision within this one. 8-10. Their corpses lie exposed 3½ days—brief triumph-hour for their enemies who had been tortured (10) by their preaching for 3½ years. This occurs in the 'great city', 'symbolically called 'Sodom' and 'Egypt', where their Lord, too, was crucified' (8). But if Rome, actual or mystical, is the focus of persecution, as the forthcoming sections make clear, why not use here 'Babylon', the recognized cipher-name for Rome? Because the 'measurement' visions had inevitably 'set the scene', so far, in Jerusalem: because Jerusalem was, for John, the Great Apostate: and because the sack of the city (A.D. 70) was vivid in his memory. 11-13. But the Witnesses are resuscitated, assumed into heaven, and their enemies are either converted, or perish. This is the end of the 'interlude vision' but not of John's prophecy. So far, he has seen the world, which should have been all Holy-City, Holy-Land, turned into the wickedest of cities, Sodom, and of lands, Egypt—nay, into one vast Calvary; and the Church shrinking till she seems to have no more even a minimum witness-voice (but she preserves her Altar): yet her witnesses revive, as 968d they always will, are glorified, and—await the recurrence of even fiercer persecution. But first, John closes this scheme of visions by the (d) 15-18 Sounding of the Seventh Trumpet—All Nature and Super-Nature acclaim—whom? 'The Art, the Wast': but 'who is to come' is omitted, for he is come: the consummation is complete: John sees no new vision (cf. the Seventh Seal), but does, this time, hear the final Triumph-cry.

f Summary of Part A—So far the Apoc has taught us nothing new. But it has reinforced in dramatic imagery the lesson inculcated ever since Genesis—that God exists, is the paramount Lord, Eternal and All-Perfect, of all the world—that world in which are men. And that men, by sin, have tried to make chaos of that cosmos—and what is sin, and what has it always been? The desire of man to 'be as God', self-sufficient; to create man's own kingdom here on earth. 'I will not serve.' Hence wars; hence every evil peace. But always there have been 'servants of God', and always God has spoken to them through his prophets, and supremely and definitely through his Son. Those who believe and obey shall be everlastingly saved: those who are obdurate in rebellion shall be for ever lost. These general truths have been several times repeated, yet not merely repeated: the waves retreat, only to crash farther forward; and now they will fall full on to the times of John himself, and the world in which those to whom he is immediately writing have to live.

PART B

g B (I) XI:19-XV:4.

XI:19 A Prefatory Vision to Part B—As Heaven was opened to John before the first part of his visions, so it is here too, but with a specially 'incarnational' colouring: the Ark of God is no longer hidden, but displayed and actually opened: 'the Word spread his tent amongst us': the Shekinah (true to its significance) dwells amongst us. Only here and in his Gospel (1:14) does John use the word ἐσκήνωσεν, though see Apoc 2:13; 13:6; God's 'tent', 'tabernacle'. Cf. 'The Doctrine of the Shekinah and the Theology of the Incarnation' in The Gospel of the Infancy and other Essays, by E. Burrows, S.J.

h XII 1-16 A Double Prefatory Vision (a) 1-16 A great 'symbol' in the sky—1, 2. A Woman, radiant with sun, moon and stars, crying aloud in her birth-pangs. 3, 4. Another symbol in the sky: a fiery-red Dragon, with 7 heads royally crowned and 10 horns: his tail sweeps to earth one third of the stars. 4. He watches for the Birth that he may devour the Child. 5. But the Man-Child, when born, is carried up to God's throne to shepherd the nations with the Messianic rod. 6. The Woman flees to an 'appointed place', in the desert, 'that they may nourish her there' 1,260 days (persecution-time). (b) 7-16 War in the sky—7. Michael and his angels against the Dragon and his own. 8, 9. Michael conquers and the Dragon is cast down to earth. 10-12. A paean over this real yet unfinished victory: the Martyrs have conquered, but the Devil has come down to the Earth, furious, aware that his time is short. 13, 14. The Dragon in fact pursues the Woman who flies with eagle's wings to the desert for her 'time, times and half a time' (see above, 1,260 days). 16. The Serpent tries to engulf her with a flood cast from his mouth: but the Earth opens her mouth and swallows the water up. 17. So the Dragon, in anger against the Woman, goes to make war upon 'the rest of her offspring'—those faithful to the commandments of God, who hold fast to the witness to Jesus.—This verse really belongs to the next section but may be usefully mentioned here as helpful for the explanation of the Woman.

i Explanation of 1-17 supra. Begin with what is clearest. The Child (5) is the Messiah: Ps 2:9 is certainly alluded to (see 9, 14, 15; Gn 3:1). The Dragon is the primeval Serpent; he who is called

'Devil' and 'Satan' (9)—the Adversary, the Slanderer, 'who sets all the nations astray' (ib.; cf. Zach 3:1 ff.; esp. Job 1:6 ff.; 2:2 ff.: 'to wander' as opposed to 'walk' is a thoroughly Johannine contrast: often in his Gospel: the Accuser (10; see esp. Job 1:9 ff.). It is at least appropriate that the Serpent should cast forth the water-flood (15), because of the vague but traditional association of the sea-monster Tiamat (Tehom: the watery abyss) with water and chaos: cf. Ez 29:3; 32:2; Ps 74:14; and, I think, Job 7:12. But this was a very faded imagery, important only if we saw Babylonian astronomical imagery consciously used throughout this section (which we do not). Michael was Protector (opposed here to Adversary, Accuser) of Israel (Dan 10:1, 13, 21, etc.): here, of the New Israel. The Fall of Satan: Lk 10:18. The war between Michael and good angels with evil angels is highly elaborated in apocryphal literature.—For the crowned heads and the horns, see § 970f, sqq.—The Woman. Her celestial array: cf. Ps 103:2; Can 6:10. In the Testaments of the XII Patriarchs Levi is like the sun, and Judah was 'brilliant as the moon and beneath his feet were 12 stars', which suffices, I think, to show that the adornment is not significant in detail, but traditional, and doubtless in origin astronomical. Who is this Woman? Clearly, the Mother of the Messiah (2, 5), but also of a vast posterity (17) which endures to the end of time. She is, then, as symbolic as the Dragon, and indeed John says so (1, 3), and is comparable with the 'Jerusalem on high, the Mother of us all' (Gal 4:26): Jerusalem, whether terrestrial or ideal, especially as representing the whole people of God, the Bride of God (see also below, 19:7; 21:10), was constantly figured as a woman, mother of the Holy People from whom, in OT times, the Messiah was to come. The mass of tradition sees in the Woman both the Synagogue and the Church: there is no break, in God's eyes, between them. Hippolytus († after 235): 'Never shall the Church cease from producing from her heart the Word that in the world is persecuted by the unbelieving'. Victorinus († c 303), the first Latin commentator on Apoc: 'She is the ancient Church of the Patriarchs and Prophets and the Saints and the Apostles. The groanings and the torments of her yearnings were upon her until she should see that Christ, the fruit of her people according to the flesh, had from that very race taken up a body.' Augustine (on Ps 42): 'This Woman is the ancient City of God.' Bede († 735): 'Ever the Church, though the Dragon fight against her, is bearing Christ.' Beatus († 776): 'Ever was this Woman, before the Lord's advent, in travail.' This does not exclude John's having seen our Lady k in this Woman—how could he not? Having spent so long in her company, he could not have written of the Mother of the Messiah without being conscious of her, any more than he could have written about 'eating the flesh and drinking the blood' of Christ without thinking of the Eucharist. And the moment he thinks of the 'primeval serpent' he must have remembered Eve; so the Woman becomes the Second Eve, and we have the series—the 'Mother of the Messiah': the Universal Eve: Jerusalem and the People: the Church and Mary. The immediate appearance of Mary as the Second Eve in patristic literature must surely be due in part to this passage. Notice that the Enthroned remains immobile. It is Michael—'Who is like to God?'—who wages war on the Dragon—'I will not serve' (and below: 'Who is like to the Beast?'). John has by now introduced almost every symbol he will use later.

XII:13-XV:4 Seven Great Mysteries.

XII:13-XIV:5 (a) A group of 4 Mysteries—13-17. The Dragon. He, prevented from injuring the Church as such (the Woman), for she is enabled to escape him and is nourished in the 'wilderness' for 'persecution-time', turns to make war on 'the rest of her offspring', i.e. Christians throughout their history. 14. The 969a 'eagle's wings' indicate directly only that the Woman's flight is swift enough to save her from the Dragon, though cf. Ex 19:4; Deut 32:11; Esdr 17:3—the 'great' eagle, 'the great-winged, the wide in his out-stretching'. In one sense, the Church is always in flight, in exile, in the desert, nourished on desert-food, the Manna, or the bread that gave Elias strength for 40 days, in short, the Eucharist. 16f. The Earth swallows the Dragon-flood; a pictorial detail possibly suggested by the Asiatic streams that vanish into the fissured soil. Still, the very earth is on the side of heaven, not of hell! The 'ideal' allegoric vision is now closed, though the transition to actual history (related, of course, symbolically) has been gradual—a melting-into, rather than a dove-tailing.

- b XII:18-XIII 10 The Wild Beast from the Sea—The Dragon stands on the seashore 18: 'he stood' is a better reading than 'I stood'), and from overseas appears a Wild Beast with 7 heads and 10 crowned horns engraved with blasphemous names. It is like a leopard, a bear and a lion. To this Wild Beast from overseas the Dragon delegates his throne and authority and great power. One head had been wounded to death but had been cured. The world went gaping after the Beast and adored the Dragon, saying: 'Who is like to the Beast?' And the Beast made war on the Saints for 42 months, and all save the Elect adored it. 13:1f. For the heads, horns and crowns, see below, §§ 970f, sqd. For the head 'slain but restored to life', see § 970k. The whole is modelled on Daniel ch 7, though for once, John combines symbols—his Beast is swift as leopard, trampling as bear, fierce as lion (2). In Daniel, 4 beasts were 4 empires. We have here the Roman Empire seen collectively (for the heads, or horns, are emperors who will reign successively). 2b. Satan hands this Empire to his delegate—irony of the Dragon 'cast down' yet giving his throne to the Beast: but recall his offer to our Lord: 'To thee will I give all this power and the glory thereof, for to me they are handed over, and to whom I will, I give them' (Lk 4:6). One would say that this Fallen Angel had indeed been originally entrusted with the 'princedom' of this our world, and that his perverted intelligence makes him imagine that it still is his—and indeed, he exercises great power within it. 5f. 'Blasphemous titles': certain emperors (e.g. Domitian) called themselves 'Lord God'; all were treated as divine: Rome was a goddess (Dea Roma: cf. 2 Thess 2:4 ff.). The parody of Michael, 'who is like to God?' by the cry: 'Who is like to the Beast?', is obvious: the parody of the Lamb, slain yet alive again (5:6; see 8, and 13:14; 17:11) will become more precise later on. The Beast was 'allowed to act' for the stereotyped 42 months: its victory would appear complete (cf. the Two Witnesses above) save (8) for the Elect whose names are written, from the beginning of the world, in the Book of Life belonging to the Slain Lamb. 10. A parenthetic verse: 'Shall we not resist?' 'No! If prison be your destiny, go to prison. If you take the sword, by the sword you shall perish. Herein, O Saints, is the sphere of your faithful endurance.'
- d 11-18 The Wild Beast from the Land—A second Beast, coming from the land. Its two horns are lamb's horns, but its voice is the Dragon's. It acts as representative of the first Beast, authoritatively. 13. It works miracles and brings down fire from heaven. 15. It causes an image of the Beast to be made and to speak: and all who refuse to worship it shall be killed. 17. And all without exception must be marked with the mark of the Beast, nor can they even buy or sell unless they bear that mark. 'If you have the wits—work it out! It is the number of a (definite) man. It is 666!' Explanation of Second Beast—This Beast, then, is the delegate of the first Beast, even as he was of the Dragon. It came from the mainland, i.e. for John, the province of Asia. In Asia, an 'Asiarch' was high-priest of emperor-worship in each city, but also president of the league or 'commune' of that cult in the whole of 'Asia'. But delinquent Christians would be brought for actual trial and punishment to the proconsul and his subordinate magistrates. This second Beast may well then be a collectivity like the first—the civil and religious authority in the province, speaking (so far) mildly, though to the same effect as the Dragon—its horns were lamb's horns, and since he will be named (19:20) the False Prophet we can recall our Lord's warning about 'false prophets who come to you in sheep's clothing but inwardly are ravening wolves' (Mt 7:15). (For a quite different but plausible interpretation, see below, § 971c.) The whole Emperor-cult revolved around the image of the Emperor, homage paid to which was the ultimate test of loyalty. Pliny (A.D. 112) in the north of the province, a mild and meticulous man, would produce the imperial statue with those of the gods: if Christians would sacrifice to it with wine and incense they were freed. 13-15. 'Miracles'? Fire? Speaking statues? Were actual conjuring-tricks used? Quite possibly. Mithraic statues exist having tubes making possible the emission of flames such as are sculptured on bas-reliefs of the same figure: ventriloquism was doubtless used in some cults: the 'legend' of Alexander Abonoteichos (an Asiatic contemporary of St John) tells of his huge snake which wore a mask that he made to talk 'ventriloquially'. Christians, though not yet being martyred on any general scale, were boycotted (17), and 'marked men'. 16. Were they literally 'branded'? Ptolemy I (217 B.C.) branded Jews who submitted to registration with the 'stamp' of the god Dionysos. Soldiers, slaves, certain devotees, were appropriately marked. Probably the 'mark of the Beast' is another travesty—that of the 'seal' of Baptism (e.g. 7:3). 18. Cf. the challenge in 9: 'Here is a riddle, but a place for acuteness of wit! Let him who can, reckon up the Number of the Beast. For it is the number of a (real) man. It is 666.' All interpretations are conjectural, but I think that all may be discarded save the following. The letters of the Greek and Hebrew alphabets stood for numbers—alpha and aleph—for 1; beta, beth for 2, and so on. Therefore a name could be stated as the sum of its letters—scrawled on a wall at Pompeii is read: 'I love her whose number is 545'. (Awkward, because names of different letters could add up into the same sum!) The Sibylline Oracles (1:324-331) say: 'Then shall come the Son of the Great God . . . having four vowels; the consonant in him is doubled. But I will tell you the full number: eight units; as many tens, and 8 hundreds—that is what the name shall reveal to the friends of unbelief; but do thou think upon the immortal and most high Son of God, the Christ.' The name of IESOUS, therefore, in Greek, amounted to 888. I return to this below. What then was '666'? Irenaeus has a variant reading, 616. Idle to look elsewhere than to imperial Rome for the bearer of this name. And the name and title of 'Neron Caesar' written in Hebrew characters add up to 666, or, if the final n of Neron be dropped (as in Latin) to 616. There are objections to this which seem to me slight in view of further considerations. A variety of this 'game' of number-names was this: Certain numbers had an esoteric value attached to them; so if a name added up into a number which for other reasons had such a value, the person bearing it was felt himself to have that value. But 777 was a perfect number: 888, transcending it throughout by one, was the Messianic number; 666, injured throughout by one, was easily seen to be 'Antichrist's number'; if then Neron Caesar added up to 666, and 666 independently meant Antichrist, Nero was Antichrist. Finally, if (as we shall see) Domitian, reigning presumably when John composed his Apocalypse, and an eminent persecutor, was known as 'Nero come to life again', 666 will naturally have stood for him too, or the collectivity of persecutors, imperial, or any Antichrist who will endure so long as this world does. But we cannot

968d they always will, are glorified, and—await the recurrence of even fiercer persecution. But first, John closes this scheme of visions by the (d) 15-18 Sounding of the Seventh Trumpet—All Nature and Super-Nature acclaim—whom? 'The Art, the Wast': but 'who is to come' is omitted, for he is come: the consummation is complete: John sees no new vision (cf. the Seventh Seal), but does, this time, hear the final Triumph-cry.

f Summary of Part A—So far the Apoc has taught us nothing new. But it has reinforced in dramatic imagery the lesson inculcated ever since Genesis—that God exists, is the paramount Lord, Eternal and All-Perfect, of all the world—that world in which are men. And that men, by sin, have tried to make chaos of that cosmos—and what is sin, and what has it always been? The desire of man to 'be as God', self-sufficient; to create man's own kingdom here on earth. 'I will not serve.' Hence wars; hence every evil peace. But always there have been 'servants of God', and always God has spoken to them through his prophets, and supremely and definitely through his Son. Those who believe and obey shall be everlastingly saved: those who are obdurate in rebellion shall be for ever lost. These general truths have been several times repeated, yet not merely repeated: the waves retreat, only to crash farther forward; and now they will fall full on to the times of John himself, and the world in which those to whom he is immediately writing have to live.

PART B

g B (I) XI:19-XV:4.

XI:19 A Prefatory Vision to Part B—As Heaven was opened to John before the first part of his visions, so it is here too, but with a specially 'incarnational' colouring: the Ark of God is no longer hidden, but displayed and actually opened: 'the Word spread his tent amongst us': the Shekinah (true to its significance) dwells amongst us. Only here and in his Gospel (1:14) does John use the word ἐσκήνωσεν, though see Apoc 21:3; 13:6; God's 'tent', 'tabernacle'. Cf. 'The Doctrine of the Shekinah and the Theology of the Incarnation' in The Gospel of the Infancy and other Essays, by E. Burrows, S.J.

h XII 1-16 A Double Prefatory Vision (a) 1-16 A great 'symbol' in the sky—1, 2. A Woman, radiant with sun, moon and stars, crying aloud in her birthpangs. 3, 4. Another symbol in the sky: a fiery-red Dragon, with 7 heads royally crowned and 10 horns: his tail sweeps to earth one third of the stars. 4. He watches for the Birth that he may devour the Child. 5. But the Man-Child, when born, is carried up to God's throne to shepherd the nations with the Messianic rod. 6. The Woman flees to an 'appointed place', in the desert, 'that they may nourish her there' 1,260 days (persecution-time). (b) 7-16 War in the sky—7. Michael and his angels against the Dragon and his own. 8, 9. Michael conquers and the Dragon is cast down to earth. 10-12. A paean over this real yet unfinished victory: the Martyrs have conquered, but the Devil has come down to the Earth, furious, aware that his time is short. 13, 14. The Dragon in fact pursues the Woman who flies with eagle's wings to the desert for her 'time, times and half a time' (see above, 1,260 days). 16. The Serpent tries to engulf her with a flood cast from his mouth: but the Earth opens her mouth and swallows the water up. 17. So the Dragon, in anger against the Woman, goes to make war upon 'the rest of her offspring'—those faithful to the commandments of God, who hold fast to the witness to Jesus.—This verse really belongs to the next section but may be usefully mentioned here as helpful for the explanation of the Woman.

i Explanation of 1-17 supra. Begin with what is clearest. The Child (5) is the Messiah: Ps 2:6; certainly alluded to (see 9, 14, 15; Gn 3:1). The Dragon is the primeval Serpent; he who is called

'Devil' and 'Satan' (9)—the Adversary, the Slanderer, 'who sets all the nations astray' (ib.; cf. Zach 3:1 ff.; esp. Job 1:6 ff.; 2:2 ff.: 'to wander' as opposed to 'walk' is a thoroughly Johannine contrast: often in his Gospel): the Accuser (10; see esp. Job 1:9 ff.). It is at least appropriate that the Serpent should cast forth the water-flood (15), because of the vague but traditional association of the sea-monster Tiamat (Tehom: the watery abyss) with water and chaos: cf. Ez 29:3; 32:2; Ps 74:14; and, I think, Job 7:12. But this was a very faded imagery, important only if we saw Babylonian astronomical imagery consciously used throughout this section (which we do not). Michael was Protector (opposed here to Adversary, Accuser) of Israel (Dan 10:1, 13, 21, etc.): here, of the New Israel. The Fall of Satan: Lk 10:18. The war between Michael and good angels with evil angels is highly elaborated in apocryphal literature.—For the crowned heads and the horns, see § 970f, sqq.—The Woman. Her celestial array: cf. Ps 103:2; Can 6:10. In the Testaments of the XII Patriarchs Levi is like the sun, and Judah was 'brilliant as the moon and beneath his feet were 12 stars', which suffices, I think, to show that the adornment is not significant in detail, but traditional, and doubtless in origin astronomical. Who is this Woman? Clearly, the Mother of the Messiah (2, 5), but also of a vast posterity (17) which endures to the end of time. She is, then, as symbolic as the Dragon, and indeed John says so (1, 3), and is comparable with the 'Jerusalem on high, the Mother of us all' (Gal 4:26): Jerusalem, whether terrestrial or ideal, especially as representing the whole people of God, the Bride of God (see also below, 19:7; 21:10), was constantly figured as a woman, mother of the Holy People from whom, in OT times, the Messiah was to come. The mass of tradition sees in the Woman both the Synagogue and the Church: there is no break, in God's eyes, between them. Hippolytus († after 235): 'Never shall the Church cease from producing from her heart the Word that in the world is persecuted by the unbelieving'. Victorinus († c 303), the first Latin commentator on Apoc: 'She is the ancient Church of the Patriarchs and Prophets and the Saints and the Apostles. The groanings and the torments of her yearnings were upon her until she should see that Christ, the fruit of her people according to the flesh, had from that very race taken up a body.' Augustine (on Ps 42): 'The Woman is the ancient City of God.' Bede († 735): 'Ever the Church, though the Dragon fight against her, is bearing Christ.' Beatus († 776): 'Ever was this Woman, before the Lord's advent, in travail. This does not exclude John's having seen our Lady in this Woman—how could he not? Having spent so long in her company, he could not have written of the Mother of the Messiah without being conscious of her, any more than he could have written about "eating the flesh and drinking the blood" of Christ without thinking of the Eucharist. And the moment he thinks of the "primeval serpent" he must have remembered Eve; so the Woman becomes the Second Eve, and we have the series—the "Mother of the Messiah": the Universal Eve: Jerusalem and People: the Church and Mary. The immediate appearance of Mary as the Second Eve in patristic literature must surely be due in part to this passage, at the Enthroned remains immobile. "Who is like to God?"—who wages war with the dragon—"I will not serve" (and below: "I will not serve the Beast?"). John... every symbol he will... 13-XV:4 Seven Gr... 13-XIV:5 (a) *... Dragon. H... such (the V... and is nou... me', ur... e. Chr 969g even summarize the other arguments surrounding this topic.

h XIV:1-5 The Lamb upon Mount Sion with his Retinue—After the Dragon and his two Wild Beasts, the Lamb, and a throng of followers having his Name, and God's, upon their foreheads; they stand upon Mount Sion and sing a hymn that none can learn but they: they are virgins, first-fruits for God and for the Lamb. 1. Mount Sion, where the Lamb is standing, contrasted with the shifting sands where the Dragon stands (12:18), indicates security. 144,000 is a 'perfect number'. The Seal of God on their forehead is contrasted with the Mark of the Beast, above. 2, 3. The song, and the music like thunderous waters, seems to be sung first by the inhabitants of heaven, but is learnt and repeated by the multitude. 4, 5. Tradition takes their virginity in the strict sense: else, the fact that they have never been faithless but follow the Lamb everywhere might suggest that they have never been false to their spiritual wedlock with the True God (immemorial metaphor) by idolatry, which indeed fits the context better.

i (b) 6-18 A group of Two Mysteries—Three angels proclaim the approach of God's judgement upon the world; (8) the fall of the great City, 'Babylon'; and 9-11, the punishment of those who have accepted the Mark of the Beast. 6f. 'Another Angel': perhaps in contrast with the Eagle of 8:13, but probably just 'yet another angel'. He has an 'eternal gospel', or message, to proclaim. Medieval mystics, and, later, reformation heretics, saw, in this, some new enduring revelation opposed to, or supplementing, what had hitherto been transitorily or inadequately revealed. It simply means the ultimate and everlasting triumph of the One God Creator of all that is: let all therefore worship him and him alone. 8. The second Angel proclaims in prophetic anticipation the fall of the pagan city 'Babylon', the Wanton, source of world-corruption—titles to be worked out later. This is modelled closely on, e.g. Is 21:9; Jer 50:2, etc. Persecuting forces like Niniveh, Babylon, Tyre and now Rome have given the maddening cup of spiritual as well as bodily harlotry to their subjects. 9-11. But the third Angel declares that God will give them his Cup—his Cup of Wrath; see the same fierce contrast in Os 7:5. This wine is 'mixed', yet 'unmixed'—not diluted as normally with water, but mingled with worse intoxicating drugs. Twice John insists that they who worship the Beast and receive his Mark are those to whom he refers (11): they have no rest 'day or night' in their torment; contrast those who worship God, day and night, in their gladness of salvation (7:15; and 4:8). Does 12—'Here is the endurance of the Saints!'—belong to what precedes or to what follows? If to the former—the Faithful must show that endurance in the imperial persecution: if to the latter, they will find the reward of their endurance in what John is about to say. 13. A Voice from Heaven declares that those who die in the Lord are forthwith blessed—their good works follow them into heaven. What Voice? God's own? or rather the Holy Spirit's (13b) speaking through the Prophet?—To die, or rest, in the Lord: cf. 1 Cor. 15:18; 1 Thess 4:16. Vg punctuates wrongly and substitutes iam for the emphatic val: 'Blessed are the dead . . . from now on! Forthwith!' 'Yes', says the Spirit, 'they shall rest from their troubles, for their good works follow along with them.'

970a (c) 14-20 A Double Vision Interposed—14-16. The Son of Man, crowned, throned on a white cloud, holds a sickle which an Angel bids him reap with, for the harvest is ripe. He does so. 17-10. An Angel is then bidden to perform earth's vintage, for the grapes too are ripe. They are cast into the winepress outside the city, and trodden. Blood foams up 'to the bridles of the horses' and deluges the land. What is this double 'Judgement'? He who is seated upon the cloud is, like the Enthroned, not named, but, being 'like a Son of Man' is certainly the Messiah (cf.

Dan 7:13-14; Mt 24:20) coming for judgement: an Angel can well call to him, as we ourselves do at Advent and Pentecost. But why a Harvester and a Vintage? Is Christ's harvesting incomplete? does he gather only the Elect? (so P. Allo.) I incline to think that John, for his systematic arrangement, had to introduce two Visions and used the very ancient symbols of harvest and vintage for these, and then possibly assigned the harvesting to Christ (though in Mt 13:39 the reapers are the angels), and the vintaging, seen in terms of blood and therefore of punishment, to subordinates. Certainly the 'white' cloud—unlike a thunder-cloud—suggests benevolence, not wrath: and the Angel having power 'over the fire' (18. He b came from the altar—of holocaust?) may allude to hell-fire: but that Christ should save with his own hand and entrust damnation to others seems to be unusual, inaccurate and displeasing. 19. 'Cast' does not mean 'hurl', but 'set it to work'. Mt 10:34 has the same word for 'sending' peace upon earth. The winepress was 'outside the city', presumably Jerusalem (Jl 3:12; Zach 14:4. Very likely [ib. 10] the royal winepress was actually on the Mount of Olives). 20. '1,600 furlongs' can but mean a vast extent: nothing material or (here) mystical corresponds to it, though it may mean the whole world other than the Holy City. (ib.) Blood 'up to the bridles' unfortunately must mean a flood, not a splashing spray, if the image is traditional (it is elaborated in Enoch 1:8 ff.): if it is, one must suppose that John took two symbols of the final judgement and re-used them as his double vision.—What are these 'horses' abruptly introduced? Perhaps since the Last Day was traditionally expressed as a treading of a winepress, and as a battle, the mention of the winepress inevitably suggested battle-imagery, just as battle-imagery in ch 19 evokes the mention of a winepress. (The Hebrews had, so to say, various 'dialects': an idolatry-dialect—'that have eyes and see not, ears and hear not, etc.': a 'Last Day' dialect—'stars falling from heaven', etc.; a battle-dialect, which used certain phrases almost automatically though they were not meant to be taken literally—e.g. washing one's hands in an enemy's blood.)

(d) XV 1-4 The Seventh Mystery—John sees, as the closing vision of this series, the lake of crystal 'mingled with fire' on which stand the conquerors in the battle with the Beast. They hold the 'harps of God' and sing the 'Song of Moses and of the Lamb'. St John does indeed put on their lips the 'song of Moses' (cf. Ex 15:1-21, and several Psalms). But as for the Song of the Lamb, he neither does nor can tell it, any more than he could say, e.g. what the Seventh Seal revealed. B (II) XV:5-XVI:21 The Seven Bowls containing d Plagues.

XV 5-8 A Double Preparatory Vision. (a) 15:5-7 The 'Temple of the Tent of the Witness' in heaven is opened—The Seven Angels, to whom are given the Bowls containing the Plagues—the 'last plagues', for 'in them is consummated the wrath of God'—come forth. They are dressed as priests (Ez 9:2) about to carry out a 'liturgy' to God's honour.

(b) 7-16:1 One of the Four Living Beings gives the Bowls to the Angels—The Temple was filled with smoke and no one could enter it till the outpouring was completed. A great Voice from the Temple bids the Angels fulfil their mission.—The 7 Bowls are equivalent to the Cup of God's Wrath (14:10). Why is it one of those Four who gives the Bowls? If they indeed are 'Nature', it is intelligible that human nature supplies to God, by its own actions, the material for his judgements: God cannot but act 'appropriately' to the behaviour of mankind (see the mysterious verses in Ps 17:25, 26). 8. The Sanctuary becomes inaccessible even to intercession. The wicked have sealed their doom. Do the above, and what follows, indicate a hasty composition due to John's strong emotion and desire to reach the end? In 15:1

970d John sees the Angels who 'have' the Plagues: in 16:5 the temple is opened and the Angels appear; in 7, the Living Being gives the Plagues to the Angels. Moreover, we expect these 'consummatory' events to be worked out in some detail: but they are hardly more than alluded to, and the 'scheme' of composition, though adhered to, is but sketched.

(a) 16:1-9 A group of 4 Plagues—Plagues of the mystical Egypt. A murrain strikes men who have the mark of the Beast: it gangrenes their flesh; the very soil is corrupted. Then the sea: it becomes blood. Then the fountains of fresh water; they too become blood, and the 'Angel of the Waters' cries that the judgement is just—the Adversary had poured out Christian blood like water—blood shall he drink! The Altar acknowledges the same. Then the sun is made to scorch mankind, but they blaspheme and are not converted. See Ex 7-9. 5. 'Who is to come' is omitted, cf. 11:17. Cf. 7:1; 14:18 for the Angels in charge of the waters. 8. The heat of the sun is intensified: contrast 8:12 where it is darkened.

(b) 10-12 A group of 2 Plagues—The fifth Bowl is poured out on the Throne of the Beast: men chew their tongues in anguish—to prevent themselves from crying out? or perverted rage against self? They remain unconverted.—The sixth Bowl dries up the Euphrates—to allow free passage for the Parthians to attack Rome? or are the Easterns going to side with the Beast against the Lamb?

(c) 13-16 A Double Vision Interposed—Foul spirits like frogs emerge from the mouths of Dragon, Beast and False Prophet—miracle-working demons going to summon the kings of the earth to the final battle. (Christ is coming suddenly!)—They do in fact assemble at 'Harmagedon'. 13. The False Prophet is the Second Beast: cf. 13:14; 19:20. Why 'frogs'? The Egyptian plague of frogs, not utilized so far, suffices to suggest them. Perhaps the frogs suggest the pettiness, the futile croaking of God's enemies, in contrast with the songs of his friends. 15. Christ intervenes for a moment to re-assure the Faithful; they will not be disgraced.

16. 'Harmagedon' (RV, AV, Armageddon): the 'mountain of Megiddo' (Megiddo was in the plain of Esdraelon, but partly overlooked by hills where troops would gather to descend for cavalry action below. Sion is the citadel of the Lamb. This plain was the 'cockpit' of Syria—a fatally central position on the N.-S. road between Egypt and Mesopotamia: of all the battles fought there no Jew would ever forget that in which the Egyptians overthrew Josias (4 Kg 23:29; cf. Zach 2:1); Ez who places the final conflict with God on the mountains of Israel (38:8, 21) may already be in John's mind: cf. 20:7 ff. below.

(d) 17-21 The Seventh Plague—A Voice says: 'It is consummated'. Catastrophes of all nature follow—never so great an earthquake! Babylon falls into three parts—every island fled—no more mountains! Smashing hail falls upon men but they blaspheme the more because of it. 17. Yet men survive? Either, this series of plagues, as such, is completed; or, John when first composing it meant to stop there: but, in his final scheme of the Apoc, much remained to be written. 19. The 'Great City' is broken in three: its power is reduced to very little: the capitals of the provinces or allied kingdoms fall: the 'islands' (ancient image for realms overseas) disappear: the earthquake lays the mountains low.

B (III) XVII:1-XXII:5.

XVII 1-2 The Prefatory Vision—An Angel tells John to come and he will show him the judgement of the great Harlot, seated over many waters, with whom the kings of the world committed wantonness, for she has made the world drunk with the wine of her lustfulness. 1. 'Seated on': as we say that a town is 'on' the Thames, etc. 2. This 'fornication' means that the world's Powers, whatever their regime, have joined in the worship of the Goddess Rome and allied themselves to her essential paganism. 3a. A deeper ecstasy.

8-18 The Double Preparatory Vision.

(a) 3b-6. A Woman, seated on a scarlet Beast covered with blasphemous names and having 7 heads and 10 horns. She is dressed in purple and scarlet, gilded, bedizened with precious stones and pearls. In her hand is a gold cup filled with her abominable harlotry. On her forehead, a significant name: 'Babylon the Great, Mother of Harlots and of the filth of the earth'. John stood appalled, seeing her drunk with the blood of the martyrs. The Angel proceeds to explain this. (b) 7-18. The Beast he had seen was, and is not, but is about to ascend from the abyss and go to destruction. All, who were not from the origin in the Book of Life, shall go marvelling after the Beast when they see that it Was, and Is not, and Shall be. ('Here is the meaning, thou that understandest!') The Seven Heads are Seven Hills, where she is enthroned. But they are also seven Kings: 5 are fallen; the 6th is now; the 7th is not yet come; but once come, he can remain but for a brief while. As for the Beast that was and is not—why! it is an 8th, and yet is one of the 7, and goes to perdition. The 10 Horns are 10 kings—well, they are not yet kings, but they take their authority along with the Beast, for an hour. They have but one mind; and as for their authority, they hand it over to the Beast. These shall war with the Lamb and he shall conquer them... (He adds): The Waters that the Woman sits above are races and nations and languages. These Horns and the Beast shall hate the Wanton and strip and burn and devour her. This Wanton is the City, the Great City, that has royal rule over the kings of the earth.

Further explanation of XVII 1 ff.—The Harlot is the City Rome (18): the Beast is the Empire on which the City is seated (3b ff.): the 'waters' (15) the medley of nations composing it. The 7 Heads are the 7 Hills of Rome (9); the domini colles ('Hence', i.e. from the Janiculum, 'may you see the seven lordly hills—Hence may you reckon up the whole of Rome': Martial): purple and scarlet' (4), its flamboyant ostentation, contrasted with the 'white' of the Bride of the Lamb, below and passim: 'gilded'; bedizened with gold, or possibly alluding to prostitutes who actually gilded themselves. 'Pearls': contemporary Roman women were quite mad about them: 'The name on her forehead (5)': perhaps not merely symbolical; prostitutes used to write their names over their doors. 10 ff. But the 7 heads are also 7 kings: John explicitly states that a symbol may have more than one meaning. Of these, one as it were incarnated the Beast itself. 'It was, and is not, and is to have its advent' (11). Supreme parody of the Lamb! Can we be more explicit? Not with absolute certainty. The Beast undoubtedly represents the total Roman Empire and indeed the world-enduring succession of such Powers as would be self-sufficient. The temporal expression of the enduring Power seems stricken to death, but only to revive. The chaotic year following the enforced suicide of Nero must have looked like the end of the Empire. But with the Flavian dynasty it came to life again. Thus Assyria, Egypt, Babylonia, Persia had come to an end: Rome would do so too, but something would replace it. We, nearly 2,000 years later, have seen similar phenomena: the Beast may even now be re-emerging from its abyss, ravaging for world-domination and the extermination of Christ and of his Church. But John, picking up afresh the symbolism of the 7 Heads, is clearly pointing to individuals. The system I prefer is this—Starting with the first Emperor, Augustus, you then have Tiberius, Gaius, Claudius and Nero. These five, says John, are dead. The chaotic year of Galba, Otho and Vitellius followed who can hardly have seemed real emperors to anyone, certainly not to one living, like John, in Asia, and under the Flavian dynasty of which Vespasian was the Emperor, the 6th, therefore, in the list. Then is to come one who reigns only for a very brief space—Titus, in fact, who ruled for scarcely a year—a brief 970k flash of extreme popularity destined not to survive (10). Such are the 7. Domitian followed (11), 'an eighth, who is yet one of the seven'. How so? The people had had a morbid affection for the mad genius Nero. Impossible to believe that he was dead! (Compare the belief about Barbarossa, and even Lord Kitchener, and many others.) He was alive—he was in Parthia—at least he would come to life again. Men spoke of 'Nero redux': 'Nero redivivus'. The myth reached Jewish and even Christian circles: the Sibylline Books keep speaking of a Nero who should return as devil incarnate, rival of God, from across the Euphrates. And even pagan Rome had nicknamed the horrible Domitian 'Nero': this prevailed as late as Tertullian. The Beast, therefore, was a man (see §969d): he seemed identifiable with Nero: but Domitian was Nero-restored-to-life—he was, then, the 8th, yet one of the 7, and, incarnated the Beast. But he too was 'on his way to perdition'. The 10 Horns (12). In Dan 7:7 there are 10 horns on the head of his 4th Beast, kings who coalesce into an empire. In Apoc too the 'horns' are kingdoms, incorporated into the Roman Empire and unanimously working its will against the Church but ultimately turning against the Empire and destroying it, the Beast itself helping them. These kingdoms are to receive a very brief authority along with the Beast (12); but after the fall of Rome they will turn also against the Beast, and the Empire itself was indeed to break up into mutually warring parts: then, it is authoritatively declared, they too shall be defeated by the Lamb (14). And indeed, how swiftly vanishing, how uncreative, were the Huns, the Vandals, the Visigoths and Ostrogoths and the rest! Still, to the end, there will be the attempt to create some anti-God omnipotent State: the battle lasts till the end of time, ever-renewed.

971a (a) 18-1 19:10 A Group of Four Visions—1-8 An Angel proclaims the Doom of Rome. This and the following passages are very simple but superb rhetoric, based firmly on prophetic models, e.g. Is 13:19 ff.; Jer 15:51, etc., but to my mind far surpassing them in grandeur and passion. 5. 'Her sins are welded together' (into a solid mass). 9-20. The Dirge over Rome. Cf. Ez 26:16-18, etc. John cannot but feel a horrid admiration for the flamboyant magnificence over which he chants his dirge. 21-24. The Destruction of Rome. 19:1-10. The exultation of the Saints. Heaven and earth exult over this Judgement. The hour for the Marriage of the Lamb is come, and his Bride is ready in 'linen white and shining'—the righteous actions of the Saints—contrasted with the purple and scarlet silks of the Harlot. 10. 'The spirit of prophecy is the witness given by—and to—Jesus.'

b (b) 19:11-21 A Group of Two Visions—11-16. The Destruction of the Beast and of the False Prophet is accomplished by One who rides on a white horse, 'Faithful and True', the Judge. His sword is his Word: he wears many crowns of victory; he holds the Messianic iron-shod club; on cloak and thigh is engraved his Name—the Word of God—and yet, no one knows it but himself—and further: 'King of kings and Lord of lords'. A throng of white-robed fellow-conquerors escorts him. 11. The Lord is 'faithful', keeping his promises to his followers. 12. The 'many crowns' correspond to the conquered kingdoms: but the crowns of the Dragon (12:3) and of the Beast (13:1) are upon many heads. He to whom they now belong is One. 16. The name that all can read—'King of kings', etc., is on his cloak and thigh; scil., where the folds of the cloak lie smooth: equestrian statues were sometimes thus engraved. The 'real name', the 'Word of God', is himself (cf. Jn 1:1): no one—not even we Christians here ourselves—can exhaust its meaning.

c 17-21. An Angel calls from the sun to 'all birds that fly' to come and devour the flesh of all God's enemies. The Beast assembles his armies: they and the False Prophet are seized and thrown into the lake burning with brimstone, and the Divine Word destroys the rest. Cf. Ez 39:4, 17-20: and Mt 24:28. The birds and their feast are as symbolical as the 'Sword' which is the Word (Eph 6:17). Here (20) the Beast and Prophet are as symbolical as (20:14) Death and Hades which also are cast into the burning lake. (All 'brimstone' allusions look back, presumably, to the destruction of the Cities of the Plain which left an indelible impression on the Hebrew mind.) But if the Beast, indeed, symbolizes the recurring attempt of the civil power to set itself up against God, to what can the False Prophet correspond in the successive centuries? After his first appearance the Second Beast, or False Prophet, plays no personal role. He has become a stock figure. But Fr Allo has suggested that he represented, rather than the Asiarch, that vague solvent 'toleration' which was then going to become Gnosticism (§965a) and which ended by mating with the Emperor cult seeing that all religions were in reality forms of the ultimate inexpressible One, itself best symbolized, in the sky, by the Sun, on earth, by the Emperor. The lazy flattering notion that all creeds are finally much of a muchness (except the Catholic Faith, consciously and admittedly unique and exclusive) is indeed as modern as it was prevalent in ancient but decadent days. There could then be two 'foci' of anti-Christianity—the openly persecuting State, and the vague subversive 'religion' which the State could patronize without damage to itself. Its role is as disastrous and more subtle. (I myself incline to think that the Second Beast was, at first, the Asiarch, but by now has become 'generalized' and stands for all who wield authority delegated from imperial Rome—all official representatives of the Beast—and has in fact lost all separate personality.)

(c) XX 1-10 A Double Vision Interposed—(1-6) The Binding of the Dragon and the Reign of the Saints. (7-10) The Destruction of the Dragon.

1-3. An Angel chains and imprisons the Dragon for 1,000 years: the Saints and Martyrs are enthroned and reign with Christ for the same time: this is the First Resurrection. 4-6. Over these the Second Death has no power.—John had shown, first, the Dragon; then, the Beasts: then, the City Rome. He now shows their destruction in the inverse order—Rome; the Beasts; the Dragon. But first, the Dragon is 'chained' only for a while, the direct consequence of his defeat by Michael. These visions do not show events following one another in time: the 'events' are simultaneous spiritually: it is the Seer whose eye is looking ever deeper.—The Abyss, Satan, the Serpent: see 9:11, etc. 4. 'Thrones of Judgement.' Cf. Mt 19:28; Lk 22:30; 1 Cor 6:3. The Faithful and especially the Martyrs are associated with Christ in passing verdict on the world. 2, 4, 5. The 'thousand years' and the 'first resurrection' have been a crux for commentators, but almost wholly because these have struggled to make the events of the visions successive. Yet the destruction of the Beast (the sum-total of human anti-Christian forces) cannot but take place at the end of the world and so must synchronize with that of the Dragon. Therefore the 'millennium' coincides with the preceding period, persecutions included. The Apparition of Christ, his 'Parousia', is the End, already related under varying images several times, and nothing new can follow it. In the OT (cf. esp. Is 54 and 60; Ez 40-47) we see the disasters of the People followed by a triumphant rebuilding of Jerusalem and a Messianic, but earthly, period of well-being indefinite in duration. Towards the Christian era this notion was more spiritualized, but (on the whole) involved the reign of the Messiah on earth for a considerable time (the number of years varies), followed (sometimes accompanied) by the bodily resuscitation of good Jews and the beginning of eternity. John was certainly aware of these floating ideas (see below on Gog and Magog), but all critics would agree that he adapts his symbols to his own purpose: we disregard, then, the theory of a 'Jewish millennium'. Some Christian f The number ‘1,000’ may be suggested by the Jewish notion that the world existed 7,000 years, corresponding to the 7 ‘days’ of creation, of which the last (year or day) was one of ‘rest’ : after this, an 8th ‘millennium’ was to be created—eternity. But in Apoc it means the grace-age in which the Faithful are living, whether on this earth or forthwith after bodily death in heaven (Apoc 14:13). There is, then, a First Death (Sin) and a Second (Damnation), and parallel to this, a First Resurrection, by grace : cf. Eph 5:14 ; Col 3:1, and all St Paul’s treatment of the effects of baptism, and Jn 5:25 where not only those who shall hear Christ’s word shall live, but (24) ‘he that heareth hath “eternal life”’.

971a writers (Papias—not a prudent authority : Irenaeus, far more serious : Tertullian, heretic : a few others, but second-rate) were influenced by the Jewish notions prevalent especially after the sack of Jerusalem (A.D. 70), but do not speak with one voice and seldom with conviction. St Augustine (Civ. Dei, 20, 7–13, etc.) retracts his earlier inclination to believe in a millennium after the final Judgement, and the break with any earlier interpretations was definite : the Council of Ephesus already spoke of ‘aberrations’ and ‘fabulous doctrines’. Augustine and Jerome are to be followed : they regard the chaining of Satan and the reign of the Saints as the whole period subsequent to the Incarnation. The power of Evil is in fact broken : Christians in whom Grace is are in fact ‘kings and priests’ however they be harassed. These, then, are not only the martyrs or ‘confessors’ already in heaven, but all who do not ‘worship the Beast’, even though yet unborn : cf. ch 7 ; 15:2–4 ; esp. 14:1–5.

Yet St John himself makes it clear that Satan has been no more than crippled, for he still has power over the souls numerous as the ‘sands of the sea’ who compose the hostile troops of the next little section.—After the 1,000 years, Satan is unbound and comes forth to deceive the nations of all the world. ‘Gog and Magog.’ They besiege the ‘camp of the Saints’ and the ‘beloved city’. But fire descends and devours them, and the Devil is cast into the fiery lake to rejoin the Beast and his Prophet. ‘Gog and Magog’ : see Ez 38:39. They summed up, and afterwards symbolized, the ‘enemies of God’ especially at the Last Day. Useless to dwell on their original signification, i.e. northern peoples, the Scythians in particular. For John, they come from everywhere and invest the Church but are decisively defeated. The spiritual Tempter himself, after a final explosion of iniquity, is destroyed, as the 7th Vision will show.

g (d) XX 11–15 The Seventh Vision.—‘A great white Throne’ : from before him who was enthroned there, ‘heaven and earth fled away’. All the Dead stood before it ; books were opened, and ‘another book’, that of Life. The Sea and the Grave gave up their dead and all were judged according to their works written in the books. And Death and the Grave and all not written in the Book of Life were thrown into the fiery lake—this is the Second Death. 11. The ‘white’ throne? because of the purity of this Judgement? of the divine triumph? Here too the Judge is not named ; cf. 4:2. Heaven and earth ‘fled’—as it were, cowered back, conscious that nothing is ‘pure in thy sight’ (Job 25:5) : but the whole universe, in fact, remains present or becomes so. 12. The books are the history of each, and, the Register of the Saved. 13. Death and the Grave (identical) are personified. All, whether they had died on land or sea, are judged : after that, there is no more death, temporal or spiritual.

b A Double Vision (XXI–XXII:5) corresponding to the double vision of God and of the Lamb prefixed to the central part of the book which is now being concluded. 21:1–8 The Proclamation of the New Jerusalem. A new heaven and a new earth. No more sea. The New Jerusalem descends from God dressed like a bride. A Voice cries that God’s dwelling is with men : he shall be called ‘God-with-them’. There shall be no more sorrow—the ‘first things’ have passed away. 971b Then he who is enthroned tells John to write, for all is accomplished—all is made new. He himself is the Origin and End : to the thirsty he will give the Water of Life : the Conqueror shall be his son. But evil-doers shall be cast out into the Second Death. 1. A ‘new’ heaven and earth : see below. No more sea—the Jews disliked the sea, symbol of agitation and chaos, as, to the Greeks, of barrenness. 2. Heaven descends and penetrates the earth—nature is supernaturalized. Cf. Heb 3:2 ; 9:11. Ez 37:27 ; Jer 31:33. 3. The Shekinah (cf. §968g) becomes permanent. ‘God-with-us’, Emmanuel : Is 7:14, 8:8, 10. The notion of the Holy Land or the Holy City, as a bride wedded to Yahweh was immemorial : cf. the Messianic role, Mt 22:1 ; 25:1 ; Jn 3:29 and the doctrine of St Paul about the union of the Church and of each soul with Christ, e.g. 2 Cor 11:2 ; Eph 5:25. 6f. Alpha and Omega : of the Father, 1:8 ; of the Son, 22:13. The symbolism returns to that of the beginning of the book. 8. The Cowards, contrasted with the Victorious. The ‘defiled’ probably refers to perverted vices. ‘Sorcerers’, i.e. poisoners : poisoning was then a prevalent crime and connected with witchcraft.

9–XXII 5 Vision of the New Jerusalem—John is summoned to see the Bride herself, Spouse of the Lamb. A walled city with 12 gates, 3 on each side of her quadrilateral : her height, breadth and depth are equal : her gates are engraved with the names of the 12 tribes of Israel ; her foundation-stones with those of the Apostles. All these glowed with precious stones ; the gates were each ‘one pearl’ ; the city itself and her streets, ‘transparent gold’. No temple there, nor light of sun nor moon : God and the Lamb themselves are light and temple. That light will attract all nations—the doors will never be shut day or night—but there will be no night ! Yet nothing impure can enter into her. A river of life flows from the Throne—the Grove of Life around it constantly providing fruit and leafage for the healing of the nations.—The City, then (16) is four square, of vast size (see Ez 48:30–35) : its height is identical with its sides. If we visualize this, we must see a pyramid, not a cube ! And what use would be a wall 144 cubits high round a cube of 12,000 furlongs ? Anyhow the numbers merely symbolize vastness and perfection. The Church is universal, and ‘invests’ the ‘mountain’ of the whole earth. John is probably adapting the shape of a Babylonian ziggurat, composed of vast superimposed ‘platforms’ each smaller than the lower one and having no doubt a shrine on the topmost. 14. The foundations will then be the supporting walls of 12 towering ‘storeys’, and not juxtaposed ; and the precious stones, an incrustation lending a colour-scheme to the whole uprising mountain-city. (The ‘storeys’ of ziggurats were apparently of different colours, like the concentric Persian city-walls.) The gates (12) are named after the tribes of the spiritual Israel ; for the sentinel angels, cf. Is 62:6. The foundations are the Apostles (cf. Eph 2:20 : ‘built up on the foundations of the Apostles and Prophets’). ‘Jasper crystal-clear’ (κρυσταλλίζοντι ; cf. above, αμαρ γδίζουσα) transparent, with light rippling through it ? In 4:6, the sea is ‘crystalline’, and the river in 22:1 ; and the gold of the streets (21:21) is as clear as glass. Does John want to avoid too hard and metallic a vision ? One may compare French colour-verbs ending in -oyer. What is rougeoyant, verdoyant is softer, more mobile, more subtle than what is merely red or green : and John’s ‘transparent gold’ must have been like a mist illuminated by the sunrise from within. The City is ‘like jasper’ (11) but ‘having the glory of God’ himself ‘like jasper’ in 4:3. The colours of the precious stones appear to be a deep soft green : a very deep blue-green : green like a peacock’s tail or the shifting tints of a pigeon’s throat : then, pure emerald : in the sardonyx white mingles with transparent rose : then comes deep crimson : the next 3

972b stones re-introduce the softest yellows and gold-green : finally you have the glorious sapphire melting into
 c violet amethyst. The City therefore ascends, terrace by terrace, with translucent golden paths mounting through the Grove of Life, leafy because of the River of Life which comes cascading down from the Throne of God and of the Lamb : it is the Grace-giving Spirit, vivificans. For the jewels, cf. not so much the high-priest's breastplate (Ex 27:17-20) as Is 54:11.—'God and the Lamb (on an equality as in 7:9 ff. ; 14:4, etc.) are the Temple (perhaps cf. Jn 2:21) and the Light (21:23). The previous mise en scène of the heavenly temple and its 'furniture' can now lapse. This Throne is at the summit of the pyramidal mountain-city. Strictly speaking, the 'kings and peoples' (24-27) need not 'come' as though there were a world outside the City. The point is that they are there and in that Light (cf. esp. Ps 86 (Vg) : 'I will make mention of Rahab (Egypt) and Babylon as among those that know me : See the Philistines, the Tyrians, the Ethiopic folk—all these were "born there" !' (That is, find their true selves, lives and citizenship in the ultimate Sion.) 25. Nothing hinders their entry, and whatever good there was among them, they bring with them as to its proper place and source. De tuis donis ac datis. God-created Nature is now fully supernaturalized and better than re-united with him.

d XXII 6-21 Epilogue—An Angel assures John that what he has said is trustworthy (and Christ interpolates that he is coming quickly). John, overwhelmed, falls prostrate before the Angel but is checked by him. Our Lord bids John 'publish' his book : let the sinner sin even worse—the righteous become still holier—nothing can alter the accomplishment of the divine plan. Jesus, Origin and End, Root and Race of David, the bright morning Star, has sent his Angel to bring this testimony. Nothing must be added to this book or subtracted from it.—John attempts to end the book ; but the divine and angelic voices, and the voice of the Spirit and of the Bride herself, keep breaking through. Still shaken by his ecstasy, John pronounces the last invocation and the last blessing.—The Epilogue corresponds duly with the opening of the book.

6. The Speaker is presumably the Angel of 21:9. The 'Lord of the spirits of the prophets' is He who controls their inspiration. 7. 'I come quickly' is the voice of Christ breaking through. 8. 'Yes ! It is I, John, who heard, etc.' : all this concluding part of Apoc has always impressed the present writer as though John were with difficulty coming back to normal consciousness as his ecstasy leaves him. Fragmentary voices, so to say, divine, angelic and human, beat upon one another. 9. The Angel is a fellow-servant : the prophets are John's brothers. Different e in nature, they all serve each in his way. 10. The Book is for the public at large—therefore, not unintelligible. 11 ff. Let men proceed as they will—farther from God or nearer to him—God's response cannot be impeded. 13. Christ applies God's name to himself : cf. 1:8, 17 ; 21:6. 14 contains the seventh blessing thus uttered in Apoc.—The Tree of Life, forbidden in 'Genesis' is here offered to all who choose to enter by the divine doors into a better-than-Paradise. A full circle. 16. So too the divine history (David-Christ) reaches its consummation.—The Morning Star shines during this life : the full Sun, hereafter. 17. The cry of the Spirit (cf. Rom 26, 27) is uttered from the heart of the Church even on earth (for she 972a prays : 'Come !') : but this Bride is the New Jerusalem ; therefore that City is the whole Church, as in heaven, so on earth. Already she drinks the Living Water. 18-19 show John's sense of the plenitude of his authority and sanction. 20. Christ approves this—'Yes ! I come quickly !'—the 7th time these words are used. Which of us would notice these 'latent' uses of the number 7, were we not expecting John to pursue his scheme into its last recesses ? The sentence certainly alludes to the Coming of Christ, and not to an imminent return of and visit from the Apostle. 21. Serenity and dignity of this conclusion ! John goes back to the work and suffering of each day, but is not separated from the reality and glory of which he had received so transcendent an intimation.

The 'theology' of the book is complete and clear— f
 God, transcendent yet omnipresent, remains immutable and invisible throughout : the Enthroned is Paramount yet never named. But there are, too, the Word of God, and His Spirit. There is the Incarnation ; there are the saving Death and Resurrection ; there are the Church and the incorporation of Christian into Christ and that union of which sacramental marriage is St Paul's chosen symbol : there are Baptism (the 'seal') and the Eucharist : there is Mary, the mystical Second Eve. But though the Incarnation, the Church, Mary, the Sacraments as it were plunge God into human history (after all, St John says 'as if', 'like', and so forth so often that we may be forgiven our 'as it were'), St John, starting (as Apocalypists do) from God, tapers down through great enduring principles into the events of his own day, and thereafter rises up once more into what is everlasting—the only true 'society', the New, the Real Jerusalem. For, into the divine plan Sin has inserted itself : first, the angelic sin—pride in some mysterious form. 'I will not serve !' This has seeped down into our poor human race, so that men have ever since wished to be self-sufficient and the Son of God incarnate had to say : 'I am among you as one who serves'. Hence John is more g occupied, if I may say so, with the condition of Christians in any period of their existence than with abstract principles. Without the principles, life becomes mere chaos, at the mercy of any tyrant who is strong enough and unscrupulous enough to impose himself upon it. No call, on the one hand, to force any one sentence of the Apocalypse into a materially exact prediction of what is happening in our own day ; but every reason for seeing the great truths that John proclaims as operative now. Looking back, I am not sorry that he is so steeped in OT imagery, because not only we have the right to see the OT looking forward to Christ—Christus cogitabatur—but John enables us to hear Christ's voice singing itself back into all that ancient God-guided history. We live in what is neither merely past, nor present, nor future. Life has become, for us, Christo-centric. We live by no mere abstract philosophy of God and of human nature : nor yet, by any mere system of Ethics detached from doctrine. Christ is our radiating centre : in Him we must live ; with him die ; with him rise into our immortality. 'Per ipsum, et cum ipso, et in ipso' : by means of him ; in company with him ; incorporated into him—thus alone do we become what God calls us to be. No need to visualize that, or to try to state it in adequate human terms : when the Seventh Seal was broken, there was silence in heaven.

INDEX

All references are to the section numbers in the margin

The index records not only those passages where the principal treatment of a subject is to be found (indicated in heavy type), but all others in which it is dealt with or which have an important bearing on it.
Proper names, on the whole, are listed in their Douay form. The familiar English spelling is, however, generally booked in addition as a cross-reference.

Achis

A-ANNI-PADDA 117c
AARON 112e, 164i, 166f, 187n, 206b, 395c, 397c, 406c, 941ace (see also Calv-worship) as a prophet 164i, 409e genealogy of 166f rod of 203n, 204n, 940ce sons of Aaron (Aaronides), 172e, 179a, 187a-m, 236h, 283qr, 406c ABADDON 328h, 356a, 370d, 374a, 967f
ABANA, River 274h ABANDONMENT TO PROVIDENCE 687a-d ABARIM 207h, 491g
ABAR-NAHARA 58de
ABBA (the title), Abba Father 855d, 964c
ABD-ASHIRTU 119i
ABDEMELECH, Ebed-melech 463e ABDENAGO, Azarias, 496e, 499c-q ABDIAS, Obadiah, the Chamberlain 271j the prophet 411e, 413d, 414g, 530 the prophet and Jeremias 530 eghio ABEDNEGO, Azarias 496e, 499c-q ABEL 102q, 146ad, 282j, 392b, 714i, 929e, 932b, 943b, 944c (see also Cain)
ABEL-BETH-MAACHA 271c, 277k
ABEL-MEHOLA 57g, 272d, 276o
ABEL-MISRAIM 161c
ABERCUS INSCRIPTION 799d
ABETTING, Applauding Evil 847i
ABGAR, Apocryphal letters to 94g, 801e ABIA, Abijah, Course of 285e ABIA, son of Jeroboam 270lm ABIA, Abiam, Abijah 64e, 124g, 266e, 271a-c, 282 ff., 286twxy ABIATHAR 179a, 249k, 255e, 261e, 267ae, 284lw, 285pt, 453a, 492n, 728f, 752c ABIB, The Month 113f, 169e (see also Nisan) ABIEZER, clan 242dj, 243a
ABIGAIL 255 lm
ABIGAIL, David's step-sister 283b ABIJAH, see Abia
ABILENE 73d, 750d
ABIMELECH OF GERAR 105c, 140c, 152ghk, 153 lo ABIMELECH, the Tyrant 63d, 238efkm, 243a-e cited by Joab 260f ABINADAB 386c
ABIRON, Abiram, see Dathan
ABISAG, Abishag 267a ABISAI, Abishai 256b, 283b, 284de, 284v ABISHALOM, Abessalom, see Absalom ABIU, Abihu 179a, 188ab, 191e ABLUTIONS 650b, 682f, 784e, 786c, 788i, 937e (see also Washing) after disease 183l, 190j-l before meals 732a before worship 155f, 172e, 180ak, 186b, 187d, 191j, 308d, 309m, 344c, 586a ABNER 63g, 253c, 257d-jk, 267de, 283bb, 285m, 313b ABOMINATION 457f of desolation 505f, 507qr, 511f, 560b, 562e, 564c, 568c, 576c, 670ln, 671c, 716a, 737h, 740h, 767f ABRAHAM 1f, 57de, 136e, 139ac, 149q-

153g, 163a, 232d, 237f, 309f, 392b, 894a, 950h (see also Melchizedech, Patriarchs, Ur) (ABRAHAM) age (life span) 134c, 140bf and Abimelech 152ghk and Lot 150d and Melchizedech 927d, 930f and the four kings 59e, 117g, 125g, 150e, 548a as a prophet 152h, 153b, 410a, 414d blessing of 792g, 896e-g burial and tomb of 55d, 153dg, 285b, 829b conversion of 59ce, 105bc, 150a covenant with 106e, 149a, 151deh, 282s, 406b, 748i, 894b date of 59de, 125g early idolatry of 59d, 105b, 150a election of 59c, 137f entertains angels 944e faith of 150b, 151i, 153a, 642f, 648hino, 849n-p, 896c, 943c, 945g, 947e foresaw day of Christ 797n friend of God 761f in Egypt 139a, 140c, 150c in Heaven 761f intercession of 152bh laughter of 151i migrations of 59de, 125d, 150ab, 829b, 943c names of 59dh, 151i, 283a original home of 76d, 79j, 149q, 150a, 173g posterity by Keturah 140a promises to 59c, 62c, 63e, 84f, 102j, 105cd, 137f, 150b, 151cd, 152b, 162d, 397a, 432f, 533h, 645hn, 678d, 680a, 748gi, 749gi, 764c, 825f, 829b, 849n-p, 894ab, 896e-g, 929e, 938d sacrifice of Isaac 106ab, 153ab, 271h, 286f seed of 84f, 106e, 759b, 764c, 849n-p, 857hi, 894cf, 96eg, 929e, 935c, 943c semi-nomadic in Palestine 59g, 943c Semitic origins of 59d the Hebrew 59d vision of God 783f wives 897a (see also Sarah, Agar) ABRAHAM, Apocalypse of 92n ABSALOM 257h, 261a-262f, 267a, 271a, 286w rebellion of 63i, 261e-262c, 336, 340c-e, 347a, 349e, 350c, 807b seizes his father's harem 218j, 274b slain by Joab 262c ABSINTH, see Wormwood ABSOLUTION, general 191d (see also Forgiveness, Penance) power of 624d ABSTINENCE 496f, 862bc, 922a from wine 862c, 922e (see also Nazari-tes, Rechabites) from women 172e from work 113bek, 191k, 193s-w ABYSS, see Deep ABYSSINIA, see Ethiopia ACACIA WOOD, see Shittim
ACCAD, see Akkad

ACCARON, Ekron, Ebron 57e, 121i, 234e, 236f, 272e, 279b, 550e, 569e, 693b the God of 273e, 411ad, 729c ACCESS TO GOD, The Christian's, 930g, 931ab, 936c, 939c, 942c ACCOMMODATION OF SCRIPTURE 40ijk, 85c-f, 102p, 383f, 384a, 385ei, 386i, 403c, 423c, 551j, 553b, 681g, 682b, 858c, 895c (see also Mary) by extension or by allusion 40j in the liturgy 40j, 85f, 403c ACCOMPLICE AFTER THE FACT 185e ACCOUNTANCY, Spiritual 908b
ACELDAMA 551f, 721c, 822d ACHAB, Ahab, 64g, 223f, 266de, 271f-273c, 286ii, 287b, 410e, 411d (see also Mesha stele, Qarqar) foreign relations, policy 271j, 272fg good qualities of 265j, 271f, 272ehi, 273c ivory house, palace of 64g, 80de, 273c, 527b line extirpated 275h-j, 276a-df Naboth's vineyard 272hi, 275h persecution under 112d, 271j, 272fg, 273a Tyrian Baal and 271f Tyrian wife, Jezebel 64f, 271e wars with Syria 272ef, 273a-c Yahwist 271f
Yahwist prophets and 271f, 272g, 273ab (see also Elias, Micaiah) ACHAB, son of Colias 416c ACHAEA, Roman Province of 598j, 744e, 864f ACHAEANS, The 120f
ACHAEMENIDS, The 289c
ACHAICUS 659e, 882h
ACHAN 228e, 231abf, 237b
ACHAZ, Ahaz 65bd, 124ck, 266fij, 267d, 277jl, 278a-c, 287lm, 421cd, 437ae, 483g, 486o (see also Syro-Ephraimite War) Assyrian altar of 278c, 483g, 492 l calls in Tiglath-pileser III 65b, 121f, 124d, 278bc, 287 l, 421c clash with Isaiahs 65b, 419f, 420ab, 425pr co-reign with Azarias 64c, 266ij full theophoric name 278b improves Jerusalem water supply 279dm, 425s, 433i incense altars of 80h pays tribute to Assyria 278c, 281h sacrifices his son to Moloch 65d, 278a, 287 l, 438f syncretism 65d, 278c, 279b, 287 lm, 438f, 483g, 492 l ACHIKAR, Achiacharus, see Legends ACHIMAAS, Ahimaaz 283nq
ACHIMELECH, Ahimelech, Achis, high-priest at Nob 178i, 179a, 255ae, 728f ACHIOR (in Tobias), Achikar, see Legends ACHIOR THE AMMONITE 105b, 308ch, 309g
ACHIS, see Achimelech
ACHIS, King of Gath 63g, 256cdg, 284f, 336, 345e

ACHITOPHEL, Ahithophel, 261f, 262a, 285p, 347b, 349e, 802f
 ACHMIMIC BIBLE 4b
 ACHOR, Vale of 231b, 516c ACHSAH, wife of Othniel 283d ACHSAPH 233c
 ACHZIB, Akzib 57i, 156j
 ACRA, the Jerusalem 68e-g, 560b, 562c, 566a, 568bd, 569a, 570c, 571c, 572c, 580a (see also Ophel) ACRABATANE, district of 564e, 607m ACRABATTA, capital of Acrabatane 58eg ACRE (NT Ptolemais) 57i, 58ce, 236d, 560b, 569ab, 570c, 684b, 840h ACRE, bay of 54dj ACRE, the Hebrew metric 425d ACROSTICS 313k, 335ef, 341c, 344b, 345e, 360ef, 361c, 363c, 364h, 375k, 396i, 408a, 469c, 537d, 563a ACTIUM, Battle of 71g
 ACTS OF KING DAVID 224d
 ACTS OF KINGS OF ISRAEL 282v ACTS OF THE APOSTLES 814-43 (see also Luke, Pauline Epistles) attitude of Roman authorities in 633g, 744f, 815a, 833a, 837f, 843abg authorship 744b, 746f, 814b-d Biblical Commission on 50n, 51f-k, 744f chronology 675d-f, 676f-h, 815d, 821b, 829f, 831fg, 832a, 833bfg, 839c, 842a climax of 832c, 841j, 843a date of 606c, 630d, 725d, 744f, 815ab, 840d doctrine of 817a-820g early chapters of 815bc, 816b, 817a-833 emphasizes prayer 820f gospel of the Holy Spirit in 816d, 817a, 818abd, 820g historical value of, truth of 814bcd, 815 cd, 816a-c, 824c, 829b, 831a, 843b, 905c life of Christ, Gospel, reflected in 817c-e, 824, 825b, 826bc, 827abc, 828b, 829ef, 832hi, 834fg, 835e, 837f, 840h plan, purpose, theme of 633g, 773a, 775a, 815d, 816d, 822a, 841a, 843a prologue 814b, 822a seeming abrupt ending 815b, 841j, 843a sources 814c, 815cd, 825b, 828a, 830b, 831g, 833g, 841i speeches in 665g, 666dh, 667h, 816b, 819a, 820d, 824a-f, 825d-f, 826b, 834e-i, 835c, 838d-g, 840c-f, 841fgi, 842bh-j, 843i, 895j style of 744d, 814bc text 821a, 836fg
 'we' sections, travel journal 814cd, 816c, 833c, 837c, 840a, 841b, 843, 905d
 ADA (Dura) 571b
 ADADIDRI, see Benadad
 ADAD-NIRARI III 65a, 271b, 276mp, 524b
 ADADREMION 552d
 ADAM 143-5, 330d, 355a, 406g, 487r, 553b, 645j (see also Eve, Fall, Original Righteousness, Sin, Probation) alleged seal representation 145c as a common noun, 'man' 144d, 146h as a proper name 146fh immortality offered to 143fj integrity of 143ij, 145b intimacy with God 402a knowledge of creatures 143hj knowledge of good and evil 143f life-span 138b marriage 110h, 142d original felicity 143j redemption promised to 84fg (the) second Adam 40b, 84f-h, 86g, 145e, 641jk, 642a, 647a, 811b, 850bei-l, 881g, 882b, 899d seminal identity with 881g, 939a (the) sin of 84d, 143f, 145ab, 189m, 397g, 403e skull of 810a
 special punishment of 145b

(ADAM) temptation of 143f, 144ab, 320i ADAM, city of 229g
 ADAM AND EVE, Apocryphal Life of 93d ADAR, the month 311e, 566e, 567d, 578d, 580h ADAR II, We-Adar 83g
 ADARSA 566e
 ADDAI (Iddo), priestly group 545b
 ADDO, Iddo, the priest 545bj ADDO, Iddo, the seer, 224f, 282tw, 286py, 411e ADEODATUS, Elhanan, 263d, 284z
 ADIADA, Adida 570c, 571b
 ADLER PAPYRI 77e
 ADONAI 165b, 194d, 591c ADONIAS, Adonijah, 63i, 218j, 267a-f ADONI-BEZEK 239b
 ADONIAH, see Adonias
 ADONIRAM, Adoram, Aduram 262i, 170g, 262i, 286q ADONIS, Tammuz 483be, 511i
 ADONI-ZEDEC, Adoni-Sedek 62b, 232d ADOPTIANISM 617b, 682b, 727c, 845f, 955h, 963c ADOPTION, Divine, of Christians 625f, 640f, 735f, 736i, 783bc, 806h, 823b, 850a, 855ab, 894c, 896h, 897e, 929d, 930c, 935a (see also Baptism) in final glory 856ac of Israel 110c, 114b, 182c, 302c, 309i, 358f, 383k, 404d, 423c, 471b, 857d ADORAM, see Adoniram ADRAAMELECH, son of Sennacherib 121j, 279j ADRAAMELECH, The god 278i ADRAMYTTIUM 843b
 ADRIATIC, The 843d
 ADULLAM, Odollam 57e, 156j, 232d, 255ch, 258i, 363bc, 534d ADULTERY 106d, 172h, 192q, 193e, 218j, 365i, 367ioqr, 368, 371j, 402f, 596d, 686a, 789f, 797a, 944e and divorce 686b, 708b-e between espousal and marriage 218j David's 260e-h, 342e denunciation for 680i spiritual 181i, 193b, 242i, 343kl, 423f, 448g, 456cfhi, 459i, 484m, 486f, 514m ff., 635d, 965 f, 969h, 970h (see also idolatry) woman taken in 680i, 781hi, 797ab ADUMMU 122c
 ADURAM, see Adoniram ADVENT, see Incarnation, Parousia
 ADVENTISM, False 670e-i, 671w, 762de, 914g, 915f, 917f ADVERSITY, no proof of God's anger 317b ff., 318ek, 326j, 334f, 380c, 917a ADVOCATE, Christ our 956c ADVOCATUS DIABOLI 318q
 AELFRIC 4c
 AELIUS ARISTIDES 965a
 AENEID, The 935c
 AENON 777e, 788i
 AEON, The 715b, 955h
 AESCHYLUS 937c
 AETOLIAN WAR 567b AFFLICTION, see Fasting AFRICA, Latin Bible in 27ab AGABUS 676f, 833e, 840h, 945f AGADE, see Akkad AGAD, King 38e, 206n, 253a
 AGAGITE, see Aman
 AGAPE 637c, 652f, 660r, 878cdh, 880e, 961d
 AGAR, Hagar, 40i, 79k, 136f, 151g, 152j, 153f, 894f
 Arabs called Hagaranu 283i AGE, Jewish coming of 750abh of reason, discretion 426cd respect for 322g, 330f youth and 331a (see also Wisdom, Youth) AGELLIUS, on the Psalms 5e AGGEUS, Haggai, 67d, 282i, 289egl, 291ac, 292ah, 543-4, 545bcj, 547e, 549a, 932d, 944d

(AGGEUS) Messianic visitation of the temple 67d, 404d, 406g, 543i AGONY, The 720d, 801g, 807d, 937c (see also Gethsemane) the blood-sweat 769ab the Church of 937c the sleep of the Apostles 720d AGRAPHIA, The 94b
 AGRICULTURE 138c, 584fkl, 696a, 698b, 699b, 729f, 731g AGRIPPA I, Herod 58fj, 73ac-d, 75b, 675d-f, 833ae-h, 842d eaten of worms 833h persecutes the (q.v.) Church 692d, 777fg, 833ae-h, 945f possible contact with Christ 73c AGRIPPA II, Marcus Julius 58f, 73de, 74de, 666h, 842g-j, 890d, 929b, 951e AGRIPPINA 841i
 AGRITES, Agarens, Hagarenes 283ik
 AGUR 364g, 375a
 AHAB, see Achab AHASUERUS, see Xerxes
 AHAZ, see Achaz
 AHAZIAH, see Ochozias AHAS, Ahijah, the Prophet 270ejl, 271d, 276fo, 282fy, 411ade, 414c writings of 224f, 282w AHICAM, Ahikam 281j, 459c, 463g AHIMAAZ, see Achimaas AHIMELECH, see Achimelech
 AHION, Ijon 271c
 AHIRAM OF BYBLOS 151, 19i, 21g, 80i
 AHITHOPHEL, see Achtophel AHLAI, see Oholai, Oholi AHMOSE I, expels Hyksos 118i, 119e AHOLIAB, see Ooliab
 AHURA-MAZDA 67a, 122fh, 293d, 307c, 555k (see also Zarathushtra) Ai, see Hai
 AIATH, Ayyath 428j
 AIDES-DE-CAMP, Royal 267bh
 AIGLON 267k
 AILA, see Elath
 AILATH, Eloth 269g, 287i
 AIN, Ashan 283r
 AIN KARIM 748bf
 AIN SITT MARIAM 287s
 AJALON, Aialon 57f, 232e, 239d
 AJAX 160b
 AKAHAB, Aqabah, Gulf of 54dej, 56c, 153f, 172a, 200c, 201d, 269g, 270c, 272a, 277d
 AKHENATON, see Amenophis IV AKIBA, Rabbi 382d, 388b, 605g
 AKKAD, Agade, city 59e, 149il AKKAD, Akkadian 79j, 117a-c, 149i, 319b AKKO, see Acre
 ALABASTER BOX 719b
 A LAPIDE, Cornelius 3j, 130a
 ALBARA RIVER 431k
 ALBIGENSIANS 10c
 ALBINUS 69c, 74c
 ALBRIGHT, W. F. 44c, 45i, 135i, 231e, 270h, 351c ALCIUMS THE HIGH-PRIEST 68e, 560b, 566c, 568bc, 569a, 580d ALCUIN 3g, 8c, 27hi
 ALDEBARAN 333d
 ALEPPO 20e
 ALEXANDER, son of Simon 725c, 742b
 ALEXANDER ABONOTEICHOS 969f
 ALEXANDER BALAS 68f, 122k, 560b, 569a-f
 ALEXANDER JANNAEUS 70cd
 ALEXANDER OF EPHEBUS 839j ALEXANDER OF LYCOPOLIS 35f
 ALEXANDER THE COPPERSMITH 921c, 924e
 ALEXANDER THE GREAT 68a, 122h, 143g, 199g, 297d, 390b, 434e, 472f, 504a, 505d, 506d, 510b, 545ip, 548c, 550dj, 559c, 560b, 562a, 589d, 597b adopts Egyptian Ruler-worship 388e, 393e, 598q division of kingdom 559c, 562a, 597b Hellenizing policy of 21a, 122m, 279e ALEXANDRA, Herod's mother-in-law 71d ALEXANDRA SALOME 70d

- ALEXANDRETTA 54g
ALEXANDRIA 93c, 122i, 538m, 559c, 598i, 602dg, 829a (see also Dispersion, Philo, Septuagint, Wisdom)
 Church of 631f, 725b didaskaleion, catechetical school 3e, 5a, 39i Jewish community at 5a, 8ab, 12b, 13ac, 68a, 75a, 92o, 122m, 388bc, 389g, 574a, 588eg, 589g, 767d
ALEXANDRIAN TEXT of NT 582ef, 583a, 821a ALEXANDRINUS, Codex A 22j, 581g, 863m ALFRED THE GREAT 3d ALIENS, Strangers 448b ALLEGORY, Allegorical Interpretation 5a-c, 32k, 39i, 40, 46j, 102p-r, 313n, 383acfg, 531f, 551e, 574a, 897a historical allegories 383h parables and 383gh, 625h, 698ab, 699bcf, 703b, 709g, 711ghi, 717e, 718a ALLELUIA, Hallelu-jah 336, 358g
ALLEN, Cardinal William 29gh
ALLENBY'S BRIDGE 784f ALLIANCES, politically dangerous to Israel 265f, 272g, 275g, 280o promote religious syncretism 64f, 270a, 271e, 275f, 278c, 280a, 421c, 423j ALMOND TREE, symbolism of 177e
ALMS-BOX in TEMPLE 276k, 280f, 287f, 736n, 767a ALMSGIVING 301bij, 305c, 307b, 345f, 400f, 500f, 584k, 595f, 637a, 660mq, 686f, 736n, 758d, 761a-cef, 767a, 889ij, 944f and atonement 595f ALMUG TREES 269i, 286d ALOES 811d
ALOGI, The 776d
ALOYSIUS, LUDOVICUS, Louis 673c
ALPHA AND OMEGA 964c, 971h, 972e (see also Totality)
ALPHABET, Armenian 26a Canaanite (Phoenician) 19hkl, 80i
 Canaanite (Sinaitic) 80i Canaanite (Ugaritic) 76c, 79i, 80i Hebrew 13c, 19g, 80il, 469cf, 685h invention of 119k Slavonic 26f
ALPHEUS 673c, 945c
ALPHEUS, Calphi 569h ALTAR, at Sichem 267f (see also Centralization) called Table 492g, 877g Christian 877g, 944f composition of 107, 268en, 278c, 483g, 492g erected by Samuel, David, Elias, etc., 112d, 174b, 265k, 271i horns of 111a, 178d, 180i, 191h, 267c, 309i, 361b, 527b, 550k incense altars 111a, 180i, 191h, 268ekn, 482a, 483d, 492gi, 562c, 940c-f in heaven 966g, 967d Josephus' commentary 178d location regulated 174ab Mesopotamian ziggurat-shaped 278c, 492i naming of altars 155d of testimony 227f, 237ab roof-altars 280k sanctuary at the 267c steps 106ab, 153ab, 271g, 286h ALTAR OF HOLOCAUSTS, Burnt-offerings 111c, 174b, 175j, 176g, 177af, 178d, 268j, 278c, 281h, 286ah, 288c, 470c, 472f, 483g, 564c Achaz's ziggurat altar 278c, 281h, 492i antiquity of its materials 174b, 175j, 176g, 177af, 178d Judas Maccabaeus and 564c AMALECH, Amalecites, Amalek, 63f, 156c, 171i, 201ik, 219d, 239bh, 242c, 253ab, 256i-k, 257a, 283h, 309e, 311b barbarity of 219d, 253b, 256k AMAN, Haman 310bc, 311bf, 312a-h, 493hi AMANUESES 77f, 581c, 661h, 870a, 949c, 951h, 952j (see also Dictation)
AMARIAS 283n
AMARNA LETTERS, Tell el- 44c, 57c, 60b, 62b, 78b, 119il, 163e, 165b, 217d, 232d, 233cd, 278g, 287aa, 351c, 938f
 Canaanite glosses 19i Jerusalem, Urusalim, in 119i, 232d, 258f
AMASA 262gh, 283bg
AMASIAS, Amaziah, of Judah 64c, 65c, 124i, 266h-j, 277a-d, 282p, 287h, 421c, 524c AMASIAS THE PRIEST 415a, 416c, 524e, 528d AMASIS, Pharaoh 420e, 464e
AMATH, see Hamath AMBITION 400b, 659e, 683e, 706b, 710b, 732h, 733b, 776e, 946h, 956g
AMBROSE, St 3ef, 391f
AMEN 280i, 335ef, 686i, 880e, 915e
 Amen, amen, verily, verily 785e, 802e 803g AMEN, the god, see Amon AMENDMENT 238m, 397i, 402e, 423e
AMENEMHET 118g
AMEN-EM-OPE, Amenophis 314a, 316ef, 365g, 370c, 372a, 432d AMENOPHIS II, Amenhotep, alleged Pharaoh of Exodus 78a, 119hi, 163a
AMENOPHIS III, Amenhotep 119hi, 270a and the Habiri 78b, 119i AMENOPHIS IV, Akhenaton 78b, 119h-l, 125b (see also Amarna) and Psalm 103(104) 358g Nefertiti, wife of 119i religious reform 119h-l, 358q AMERICAN BIBLES 30fil-q, 31ac
 Baltimore Bible (1899) 30o
 Benziger's Red Letter Bible (1943) 30p
 Cardinal Farley's Bible (1911) 30p Cardinal Hayes' Bibles (1919, 1929) 30p
 Confraternity Edition (1941, 1948) 31bc
 Dr Kenrick's Bible (1849-61) 31c
 Douay Bible House NT (1941) 30p
 Fr Aloysius Spencer's NT (1898-1937) 30c
 Fr Carey's edition (1935) 31a
 Philadelphia Bible (1790) 30f
 Vaughan-Corrigan (1898) 30n AMERICANS, Aboriginal 149g, 151h AMESTRIS 311c
AMETHUS 70cf
AMIANUS, Codex 8c, 27h AMITAL, Hamutal 281a, 485i
AMMAN, city of, see Rabba AMMIEL, inversion of Eliam 283e AMMON, Ammonites 56b, 57k, 58d, 120l, 136f, 152f, 234c, 238deh, 239h, 243i-k, 253f, 259g, 260a-cfh, 277e, 278b, 279c, 281j, 284xy, 286il, 287k, 289b, 309h, 460f, 464ab, 466fg, 477f, 478d, 486ilm, 487ab, 522i, 526ch, 564e (see also Rabbath)
 excluded from covenant 67f, 114h, 448b religion of 243j, 270a, 284y, 466g, 526h, 541b (see also Milcom) AMNESTIES 721g, 741c AMNON 63i 261ab
AMON AND AMON-RA 118g, 465d
AMON OF JUDAH 66b, 266f, 280dg, 287vw AMORRHITES, Amorites, Amorrrhaeans 57d, 59g, 76d, 117efj, 118h, 120a, 151f, 205ef, 231d, 232e, 233a, 239d, 245c, 251b, 272i, 484i, 526n, 563a occupation of Palestine 59fg unnatural vices of 106d AMOS, the Prophet 41c, 44f, 65a, 277eg, 404c, 410e, 411e, 412df, 414a, 430c, 524-9, 530gh cited elsewhere in the Bible 304a, 525h, 829c compared with Osee 525f familiarity with Israel's past 525g AMUZ, father of Isaias 421c AMPHILOCHIUS 17k
AMPHITHEATRES 601k, 843b, 872b
AMPLIATUS 863gh
AMRAPHEL 59e, 117g, 125g, 150e, 548a AMRI, Omri, 57cg, 64f, 80de, 265i, 266e, 271de, 272f, 276b builds Samaria as capital 64f, 80de, 271e, 274j conquers Moab 271d, 273i
 'the land of Omri' 271e, 277k AMULETS 106h, 155f, 484g, 550k, 579d, 593a, 714b AMURRU 57c, 62a, 119jklm, 120dg, 121k, 151f, 232e wall 117e, 122b
AMUWANDA I, the Hittite 119k
AMYTIS, wife of Nabuchodonosor 121i ANABAPTISTS 671w
ANACHRONISMS in SCRIPTURE, alleged 139h, 150b, 158d, 239c, 244j, 270k, 282cce ANASTHETICS 681f, 722ch, 742b, 770d, 771a ANAGOGE, anagogical sense 5c, 40efg (see also Typology)
ANAGRAMS, 459n, 467e
ANAK, Anakim, see Enac ANALOGY, from Creature to Creator 393c ANAMELECH 278i
ANAMNESIS, Sacrificial Remembrance 163h, 336, 340f, 360c, 941c
ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA 636e, 654b, 664dg, 820b, 826df
ANANIAS OF DAMASCUS 831dce, 841f, 842i
ANANIAS, Raphael's alias 305e ANANIAS, Shadrach, see Sidrach ANANIAS, the high-priest 841i ANATH, Anat 239j, 240a, 278i
ANATH-BETHEL 555k
ANATHEMA 857f, 882i, 894b (see also Ban) ANATHOTH 267e, 290i, 428j, 453a, 462j, 463d ANAXAGORAS 781b
ANCHOR OF HOPE 938d
ANCIENT OF DAYS 503g
ANCIENTS 681e, 706bd, 736e, 906a (see also Elders, Ministry, Priests)
ANDREW, St 55h, 589e, 670e, 684c, 689f, 692de, 694d, 701c, 724f, 727e, 776ef, 784b, 785c, 786e, 793d, 801e ANDRONICUS 863g
ANEMONES 55b
ANGE (Argaeus) 309c
ANGELIC SALUTATION 85hi, 86h ANGEL OF YAHWEH, The 151g, 158g, 164g, 239d, 242d, 244de, 476b, 535g, 544d, 592e, 829c of Christ 964a ANGELS 152a, 154p, 272b, 321d, 331e, 587d, 592de, 593c, 683d, 785e, 820g, 829c, 856j, 909e, 934b, 944ce, 961c (see also Archangels, Cherubim, Covenant, Destroyer, Devils, Law, Seraphim) alleged progeny of 951b appearance to Zachary 747ef bear divine communications 321d, 331e, 592de, 747ef, 749e, 785e, 909e, 911b (at) Bethesda (Bezatha) 791c Bethlehem 749e bread of 394c choirs of 592d (at) Christian worship 878c creation of 910e curious about the Redemption 949f, 950b dangerous to see 307d deliver Apostles 827a, 833g duties, activities of 302f, 307d, 331e, 353c fiery spirits 273g, 275i, 934b guardian angels 357b, 706e, 820g, 934b

(ANGELS) help man's salvation 927c, 929d, 934b heretical worship of 909d-f, 910e holy ones 318qr, 320e, 325d horsemen 546b hosts, sabaoth 344a, 363i imperfect before God 325d in human form 230d, 305e, 492c, 592d intercessors 307c, 318q interpreters 331e, 503j, 506c-g, 545g, 546b, 547e, 592e invocation of 321eg kinds, degrees of 909f, 910e, 912c made in image of God 142e marking, inking men's foreheads 483gi ministering spirits 339e, 500c, 934b nature of 302f, 592d obedience of 686h of the Agony 769b of the elements 92j, 592e, 967ag, 970e of the Churches 964f of the Face, Presence 93a, 535g, 964b, 967d of the nations 509d-f, 592de, 964f of the stars, spheres 92j, 592e Pauline teaching 909df, 910e, 927c, 929d, 930b, 933f, 934b Persian angelology 307c personal names of 506e, 592d promulgate Sinaitic Law 593c, 829c, 909e, 911b, 933a, 934b, 944c rejoice at sinner's conversion 760df (at) Resurrection 723ab, 773b sentinels 972b sexless 713b, 737h, 766e
St Joseph and 680j
(at) Second Advent 554c, 671st, 915e, 932d, 934p song at Creation 333b, 749e sons of God 320e, 333b, 356b, 749e speaking within 545g, 546bc spiritual, immaterial 592d subject to Christ 720e, 927c, 930b, 933f, 934b, 951b subsistence of 394c (at) the Temptation 683e, 750j, 769b the holy ones 318qr, 320e, 325d vision of God 405e war of the 86f watchers, wakeful 500c, 966b wisdom glorified among 403a with measuring line, rod 492c ANGER, 214b, 371b, 374f, 685jk, 860g, 902f, 946h, 947a ANGLICANS, and Biblical inspiration 34b, 36d (see also Authorized Version) canon according to 13b, 15b-jk, 92b division of decalogue 172g prayer-book psalter 29o, 338b, 339d services to Biblical scholarship 44j, 45h, 604b, 606g, 607h, 661d use of term 'Apocrypha' 13b, 92b Thirty-nine Articles 15k, 92b
ANGLO-SAXON VERSIONS OF BIBLE 4c ANIMALS (see also Beasts, Fauna, Slaughter, Victims, Zoomorphism) cannot pray 332b clean, unclean 110d, 147a, 189c-h, 215f, 309k, 730i creation of 141ac, 142c, 317h domestication of 138c, 141c God's loving care for 333e, 531d, 532c, 693c in the Messianic Age 428n join in Nineveh's fast 532g kindness to 110g, 193p, 211f, 218i, 369g, 875j man's eating of 141c, 144d, 149b man's relations with 141cd, 149b, 211f, 305g, 306i naming of 143h primeval harmony and peace of 141d, 144a, (428n) punishment of 149b, 174h purpose of 174h soul, spirit of 115e, 378a subject to man 141c, 397k

(ANIMALS) symbolic 144a, 145d, 215f, 351c, 357c, 456e, 485i, 546b, 548c, 966cd, 968d, 969b-h
(the) Temptation and 750j worship of 109c, 115j, 142c, 392dh, 393h, 465c, 598m ANIMISM 44bce, 45f, 104h, 135b ANNA, mother of Samuel 249a-h her canticle 249f-h, 313b ANNA, the Prophetess 617d, 745i, 749j ANNA, wife of Raguel, see Edna ANNA, wife of Tobias (Tobit) 302c, 304c ANNALS of King David 282z of kings of Judah, Israel 224d, 265fk, 282vy, 283cc of Solomon, 224d, 265fk, 270f ANNAS 585c, 740e, 750d, 807ef, 826a
ANNE, St 86j, 94dm
ANNIHILATION 693c
Anno Domini 674b
ANNUNCIATION, The 102j, 159h, 748a-e, 778g ANOINTED, Anointing, see Messias, Unction ANSELM, St 3g
ANSHAN, see Anzan
ANTEDILUVIANS, The 32i, 138b-d, 140be, 146g, 951a-c ANTHROPOLOGY 32m, 44bc, 45f, 104h, 147e, 189a ANTHROPOMORPHISM, in Scripture 33b, 109cd, 137a, 141d, 144d, 146k, 212f, 214e, 222hi, 338i, 340b, 464d, 480af, 481g, 591ag
Greek 598pq, 600g
ANTI-ASSYRIAN LEAGUE, The 121h ANTICHRIST 417g, 495n, 504abg, 506d, 512b, 545f, 551h-j, 671p, 778g, 914h-j, 917b-e, 955h, 957ab, 958a, 959dg, 962g, 967b, 969g, 970i number of 671p, 969dg power restraining, letting 914h, 917cd ANTI-GOD STATES 671p, 861b, 970kl, 971c ANTIGONUS 70h, 71bc, 675a ANTI-LEBANON MOUNTAINS 54d, 385e ANTILEGOMENA 15bc, 960c
ANTIMONY EYE-PAINT 275j
ANTINOMIANISM 851b, 863i, 960f, 961acd, 963c (see also Laxism) ANTIOCHENE TEXT of NT 22kl, 23ab, 23ab, 24b, 25ehn, 26cf, 582bf ANTIOCH in PISIDIA 3c, 598h, 816a, 834d-k, 895bh the Caristian records 81e ANTIOCH ON THE ORONTES 24i, 70e, 75a, 122i, 566c, 569bdf, 575f, 576b, 598i, 602f, 664h, 666a, 744c, 833b, 864h, 951e
Church of 22i, 23c, 24b, 818d, 819e, 820de, 828a, 833a-e, 834b, 835e, 836bh, 837a, 839c, 893c, 895h-896c Jewish community at 588eg, 833b School of 3e, 5bc
ANTIOCHUS I, of Commagene 933e
ANTIOCHUS I, SOTER 122j, 872f ANTIOCHUS II, THEOS 122j, 510d
ANTIOCHUS III, MAGNUS 58e, 68a, 122j, 404c, 406h, 510f-c, 559cgf, 574b, 575a, 576e, 577b, 909b, 965c ANTIOCHUS IV, EPIPHANES 68bc, 82h, 93c, 122k, 267m, 494f, 495h, 504a, 505e, 506af, 511a-k, 559c, 560b, 561c, 562c, 563b, 578a, 716a, 737h (see also Hellenism, Maccabees, Martyrs, Worship) and Rome 68c, 964h death of 123c, 565e, 574b, 577gh Hellenist policy 68bc, 559cg, 560b, 562bd, 576c, 589f plunders Jerusalem and temple 68c, 560b, 562c, 576b remorse of 577h Rome and 68c, 964h surname 559c, 562bd type of Antichrist 417g, 495n, 504b usurps throne 565e worshipped as Zeus 562d

ANTIOCHUS V, EUPATOR 68e, 123c, 561c, 566bc, 577h, 578d, 580a ANTIOCHUS VI, DIONYSOS 68f, 122i, 560b, 569f, 570c ANTIOCHUS VII, SIDETES 68g, 70b, 122i, 560b, 572cd ANTIPAS, see Herod
ANTIPAS of SMYRNA 965a ANTIPATER 70egh
ANTIPATRIS 54j, 58g, 841m
ANTIPHONAL SINGING 291c, 298d, 361b, 362g ANTIPHONS 547f
ANTI-SEMITISM, Ancient 74e, 75b, 561b, 584ce, 588g, 590b, 635e, 832c, 837f, 864g ANTONIA, The Fortress 81h, 575e, 721af, 722a, 741e, 808a, 810b, 833g, 841eh ANTONY, Mark, 70g, 71bdg, 275j, 905c ANTS, and manna 171de thrift and industry of 367n ANU 278i
ANXIETY 379e, 660i, 683c, 687bcd, 758d ANZAN, Anshan 122d, 420e AOD, Ehud 238ei, 239h, 283aa AORIST, Epistolary 904f
APAMEA 309d, 577b
APERU, The 60b, 120a
APHARSITES, The 291i
APHEK, Afek, Afeq 118h, 178c, 233g, 234b, 272f, 273a, 276n APHRAATES 24h
APHRODISIACS 154i, 386h, 476g
APION 75b
APIS, the Bull God of Egypt, 181a, 465c APOCALYPSE, THE JOHANNINE 17d, 33i, 40h, 347d, 348a, 363j, 417f, 671opu-x, 776g, 961-72 (see also Parousia, Seven Churches, Son of Man) authorship 17ijk, 778de, 962b-d, 963a canonicity of 17ijk, 962bc date 781j, 963a Fourth Gospel and 962cd, 963a, 968g grammatical abnormalities 962b, 963a, 964b hastily finished ? 970dg Holy Ghost in 964b, 966a, 972ce Holy Trinity in 964c, 966d ideal and reality in 964f Incarnation in 968g-i inspiration of 35a Logos in 781a, 962d, 971b main themes 962h, 964a, 966de pattern and structure 962defh, 967a, 972e previous apocalyptic prophecy 963a, 966ab Psalms and 340b purpose of 633g revelation, unveiling 33h, 962g, 964c septuples in 962d-fh, 967a, 972e style 962b, 963a, 964b symbolism 962bdg, 964e, 965e, 966b, 970j teaching summarized 968f, 972fg topical allusion in 964g, 965 two beasts 671p, 917e, 969b-g two witnesses 146h, 390c, 968acd woman clothed with the sun 86e-g, 968h-k, 969a APOCALYPSE, THE LITTLE, Dominical, 670cj, 715-17d, 725d, 737-8, 767b-i, 932d analysed and variously interpreted 670k-671f, 715a, 737a-d Feuillet's interpretation 715b-17, 737deg, 738acde the occasion of 715a, 737ace APOCALYPSE OF ISAIAH 419f, 435-6
APOCALYPSE OF PETER 17g APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE 33bg-i, 92gh-o, 494g-j, 584c, 590cf, 689e, 690c, 963a angels in 592c
Christian apocrypha 93e

(APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE) dialect, conventional language of 33hi, 716bde, 738b, 962g, 964e, 966bh, 968c eternal punishment in 733d exuberant speculations of 590f harsh attitude to the Gentiles 590f, 592b, 593ef Jewish nationalism and 92f Kingdom of God in 625d, 590ef, 593e-f Messianic hope in 590f, 593be-f, 594ab meaning of 'vision, see' 409f, 720g occasion and purpose of 33h, 590e prophecy and 33hi, 419f, 435-6, 522d, 545dg, 550ab, 554ab, 590e 962g Resurrection in 594d, 595ab, 970e superstitions, credulity of 592a symbolism and imagery 450f, 522d, 545df-e, 546b-d, 547cg, 548ab, 552ab, 917c, 962g, 964e, 966bh APOCRYPHA 14g, 15b, 16b, 17ceg-j, 92-4 ambiguous Protestant sense 13b, 14f, 92abd Anglican 13b, 92b
 Augustine on 92d, 94j Catholic sense of 13b, 92bd Church and 94k-m heretical (Gnostic) sense of 92c in Christian liturgy 92 l, 94cgm Law and the 92ek name for deuterocanonical books 13b, 15k, 92bd original classical sense 92c quoted as Scripture 15b true traditions 86j, 93c, 94c value of 94m APOCRYPHAL BOOKS (NT) 92d, 94, 881b acts 94bi apocalypses 33h, 94b epistles 94abb, 661c gospels 33n, 86j, 94be, 681g, 721g, 749d origins, purpose 94c APOCRYPHAL BOOKS (OT) 38b, 92d-93, 288ij, 767c apocalypses 92gh-o (see also Apocalyptic Literature) Christian additions to 92 lo, 93g didactic 92g, 93g-k fatherhood of God in 855d historical 92g, 93a-f purpose and method 92ef APOLLINARIANISM 840e
 APOLLO 81d, 837e, 967g Syrian Apollo 51li
 APOLLONIA 277i
 APOLONIUS 68c, 560b, 562c, 563a, 569c, 575ac, 576b, 577b
 APOLLOS 839ef, 864i, 867ceh, 869e, 870f, 871j, 882g, 928d
 APOLLYON 967f
 APOLOGETICS 33f, 616g, 627c, 633c, 648f, 817abc, 824c, 825c, 835c, 852ab, 857bg, 887f, 918i, 951a
 APOLOGISTS, The 3e
 APOSTACY 215e, 217b, 218c, 220b, 227f, 237ab, 276f, 277d, 654c, 683f, 715d, 728c, 837b, 929d, 930a, 931c, 934b, 935e, 937de, 938ab, 942c, 957b, 958f (see also Calf, Hellenizers, Jezebel, Melkart, Syncretism) Conversion and 848g, 852af of Israel (after the flesh) 857-9 participation in pagan rites 875ace, 877g, 888e temptation in the Exile 289a when unforgivable 758c APOSTLES, The 1c, 14a, 18, 35e, 631b 638b, 657a-h, 658bc, 692d, 727e, 728i, 730b, 752f, 764a, 808g, 816c, 819c, 820b, 822bd, 836e, 844b, 864i, 865c, 869a, 960b (see also Kerugma, Maintenance, Miracles, Mission, Peter, etc.) authority of 656, 735i, 768d, 819c, 858fh baptised ? 822a bilingual 584g, 692d, 823c, 832h

(APOSTLES) call, choice of 619a, 624e, 684c, 692d, 728i, 746e, 751ad-f, 752f, 806d, 822d, 831a Christians share work, reward of 651c, 693e Christ prays for 806d-g communion, fellowship of 636f, 637bc compared with Moses 887ce consecration 649e, 653g, 806g dispersed from Jerusalem 833aefg earthen vessels 887g (the) Eleven 720e, 743e, 774c eucharistic communion 657h false, mistaken Messianism among 33f, 670fghi, 671bij, 727g, 733a first meetings of 744h, 752f, 819d, 820f, 822a-d, 823 fishermen 55h, 584k, 631b flight of 739i, 740d, 767b, 769ac flock, sheep among wolves 657m, 692h, 758d foundation, basis of the Church 625f, 752f, 898j gift of keys to 706f handle serpents unharmed 743f, 843f infallibility of 35c, 657p, 893g, 894h inner circle of 691f, 705a, 715a, 720d, 730k, 733d, 740ab, 769ab, 776e, 777f, 895e-g inspired 823a-c, 824a, 950b (see also Pentecost) keys given to 706f lack faith 703g, 705d, 733f, 743d, 755c, 762a (keep) Law, worship in temple and synagogue 820e, 823c, 825ab, 828b, 841cg, 905d leave all to follow Christ 684c, 735f life and work 624e, 657de, 825b, 828a 839g, 871h-872b, 887b-l, 888a-d light of the world 730b lists of 692de, 724f, 728i, 752f, 776f, 785c married apostles 689f, 875i miraculous deliverance by angels 827a, 833g, 837g (the) name 'apostle' 657d oral instruction by 937e (see also Catechesis) pillars 776g poverty of 660 lo power to bind and loose 624d, 654ab, 656e, 704d, 706f power to cast out devils 631b, 639a, 731cd, 733f, 743f, 905d power to inflict sickness 872g, 892cde power to remit, retain sins 644a, 654abc, 657e, 812g praised by Christ 768d precedence, dispute over 607k, 644e, 670i, 678f, 706b, 734b, 735h, 755d, 764bd, 768d, 776e promised inspiration in persecution 660u, 693a, 767e, 824a, 826b, 828b qualifications of 656d-f, 657a, 724f, 728i, 729g, 731c rebuked by Christ 619f, 709a, 732h, 733f, 734b, 735d, 740b, 743d, 754f, 755c, 763e, 769b reward 709ef, 790d Satan sifting 768e sent to preach, baptize universally 633a, 650ek, 657d, 684d, 723f, 743e servants, slaves of God 825e servi servorum 656b, 710c, 714c, 735i, 802e signs, marks of 891h slow to learn, understand 33f, 631b, 670-1, 702e, 703g, 731h, 732cfh, 734a, 705h social origins of 588d spheres of influence 94c, 636f, 890ef, 895g
 the two swords 768f
 training of 624e, 631b, 657b, 660 l, 692b-693e, 701a-709, 731cdi, 732ch, 733d, 734a, 735a, 736b, 751f, 754c-755d, 766a (see also Mission)

(APOSTLES) twelve, to rule twelve tribes 657cd, 709f, 768d unofficial exorcist and 734c, 755d unpaid 660o, 962fg (see also Maintenance) use of written Gospels 614c witness 652i, 657abc, 660u, 731h, 733d, 805b, 819cd, 822d, 824e, 826d, 831e workmen apostles 656e, 660op, 663d, 665g, 826e (see also Barnabas, Paul) APOSTLES' CREED 86k, 855g APOSTOLATE, The 651c, 706b-e, 730b, 751f, 754e, 756c, 768f, 790acd, 819d, 823b, 858f, 904d, 913c, 920e Christian sowing and reaping 790c of Christ 930a, 935d of good example 632f, 633d, 636a, 660jti, 685i, 734e, 825b, 858e, 907g, 920e, 924b of prayer 921d-g APOSTOLIC DECREE, LETTER, The 821a, 836efg (see also Councils) APOSTOLIC DELEGATES 906a
 APOSTOLIC FATHERS 3e, 14ad-f, 94a, 605c, 606b, 919ab (see also Fathers) APOSTOLIC PREACHING 631c, 632df, 633c, 645a, 650ch, 656h, 657ab, 670, 671, 684d, 729g, 730b, 743ef 817-20, 825c, 826b (see also Acts, Gospel)
 APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION 656h, 658bcd
 APOTHECARIES 404f
 APOTHEOSIS, see Deification
 APPIA 926c
 APPIAN WAY 843g
 APPII FORUM 843g
 APPLE OF EYE 546d
 APPROXIMATIONS IN SCRIPTURE 225ce, 401c
 APRIES, Hophra, Pharaoh 281c, 122b, 281c APSU 268i
 AQUARIUS 159e
 AQUEDUCT OF EZECHIAS 89g, 267d, 279m
 AQUILA, translation of Bible 23kmo AQUILA AND PRISCILLA 839ag, 863g, 869e, 882i, 928d AR 430ef
 ARABAH 54e, 56c, 61b, 214e, 233fg, 235e, 277e, 554d (see also Dead Sea)
 ARABELLA 567d
 ARABIA 269gh
 Nabataean Arabia 681c
 ARABIC 19hi
 Arabisms 318h, 319b, 323i, 325k, 330b bible 26d
 Diatessaron 24e, 26d ARABS 23ac, 44e, 45gh, 59d, 121j, 122b, 136f, 149k, 151e, 160g, 239g, 240e, 242c, 276g, 277fk, 278g, 283ik, 287b, 290l, 330a, 456h, 530gi, 757f, 771a (see also Agrites, Edom, Ituraea, Nabataeans) collective responsibility among 110f interest in genealogies 112e, 149q rites for new-born children 426d, 484l ARACH, see Uruk
 ARAD 205c
 ARAD-MALIK 121j
 ARAM, Land of 120j, 149k, 460e (see also Syria) ARAM, RAM, son of Hesron 283b
 ARAMA 256k
 ARAMAEANS 59d, 64ef, 121bc, 219e, 229a, 278b, 279gl, 433g, 4431 (see also Syrians) in local sense 120k subject to David 120m ARAMAIC 19f-h, 20d-g (see also Targum) and Hebrew 241a as a lingua franca 20d, 67a, 120k, 279d, 291f, 292d called 'the Hebrew Tongue' 677f displaces Hebrew 20bc, 291f, 432g, 677f documents, passages, in Bible 20eg, 67a, 78c, 288e-h, 457d

- (ARAMAIC) LXX Aramaisms 21d NT Aramaic, -isms 21d, 614d, 641f, 699a, 730k, 732e, 777d, 816b, 858d, 882i (see also Hebrew Idioms, Matthew) OT Aramaisms 20bc, 241a, 246e, 247bc, 288fgh, 319b, 331gi, 531c (see also Hebrew Idioms) spoken by our Lord 621h, 730k, 732e, 739g ARAM NAHARAIM (once Mitanni) 59d, 120ejk, 121bi, 239g, 309d ARAPHA 263e
ARARAT, Mount 147b (see also Urartu)
ARATUS 838e
ARAUNAH, Ornan, Threshing Floor of 81g, 153a, 264e, 268j, 345a ARBATIS 565c
ARBITRATOR 323a
ARCHAEOLOGY 5ef, 6a, 32m, 44c, 45a, 46h, 76-81, 478j American lead in 45i and Genesis 59gh, 60bce, 79k, 138, 139cd, 145c, 148d, 152e and the Exodus 60b-61, 125b and the Holy Places 81gh, 721f, 791c, 807bg, 808b new biblical MS found 80lm vindicates Bible 36j, 45g, 59h, 61b, 62d, 66d, 67a, 77eh, 79ej, 80hi, 81bef, 139ceg, 268m, 279cjj, 283gi, 285js, 287aa, 485n, 745g, 749a, 750d, 791c, 863h ARCHANGELS, The Seven 302b, 307c, 592d, 967d (see also Gabriel, Michael, Raphael, Uriel)
ARCHELAUS 58f, 72ab, 92k, 676a, 682c, 710d, 721f, 736g, 764e
ARCHIMEDES 785b
ARCHIPPUS 926c
ARCHITECTURE 32b
ARCHITES 261g
ARCHIVES in Esdras, State 288e, 290f, 296f, 298a-d ARCTURUS 333d
AREOPAGUS 41f, 81e, 838c
ARETAS III, the Nabataean 70c
ARETAS IV, the Nabataean 73a, 576a, 676dfg, 731f, 831fg ARGENTEUS, The 83a
ARGOB 56b, 277j
ARGUMENT FROM SILENCE 113lm, 135f, 289l, 410de, 412ab, 607i ARIANS, The 85f, 738c, 792a, 928d ARIARATHES V 572b
ARIE 277j
ARIEL 430i, 437gh
ARIMATHEA, Ramathaim 58eg, 569ae, 722h, 811d ARIOCH, Erioch, king of Elymeans 309a ARIOCH OF ELLASAR, variously identified 117f, 150e, 309a ARISTARCHUS 839j, 840g, 843b ARISTEAS, to Philocrates 23h ARISTOBULUS 70c, 574a
ARISTOBULUS II 70deh, 833f, 863h
ARISTOBULUS, the high-priest 71d ARISTOBULUS, The household of 863gh ARISTOCRACY, Jewish, Pharisaic 584m, 587f Sadducean 584j
ARISTOTLE 590c, 592e, 599g, 601a, 782a, 838d, 907a ARIUS, Aereus of Sparta 570a ARK, Noah's 147a, 951ab, 953i the animals in 147c, 148b the window of 147ab type of Church 147f ARK, basket of Moses, The 164c ARK OF THE COVENANT 57e, 99f, 112b, 132l, 177a-c, 178a-c, 212b, 214c, 218l, 229e-g, 230a, 237f, 248k, 249c, 250c-g, 252l, 269c, 270h, 284ijlm, 351c, 362c, 940c (see also Mercy-seat) at Bethel 154d, 245ij at Cariathiarim, Kiriathjearim 284i at house of Obbedom 284j at Silo, Shiloh 112b, 211c (ARK OF THE COVENANT) bearers, curators of 114j, 214c, 284jlm, 285d captured by Philistines 178c, 245d, 250c-f, 353c (the) Cherubim 176g, 177b, 268e, 285q (see also Mercy-seat) contents of 11f, 12b, 130d, 171eg, 177e, 214c, 940ce (see also Manna) danger of irreverence to 250g, 259b, 284jm David enshrines it in Jerusalem 63h, 114j, 178c, 259ab, 261e, 284ijlmopq, 286a, 342f, 344a, 357g, 359b, 362c David's song of 313b derelict, neglected under Saul 112i, 114j hidden by Jeremiah 574de, 940e in heaven 968g in Solomon's Temple 269a, 286j, 287z in tent on Mt Sion 178c, 284l, 286a lost, superseded during exile 113l, 135f, 282gg, 456i, 462r marching song of 200e, 351c nature, functions of 177a-c, 269c, 270h, 349g, 350c, 358b, 470e parted from Tabernacle 112i, 178c, 284l, 286a staves of 177b, 269a superstitious trust in 250g type of our Lady 163h ARMAGEDDON 970f (see also Megiddo)
ARMENIA 20d, 117a, 118i, 120j, 122l, 147b, 487m (see also Urartu)
ARMENIAN VERSIONS 23d, 25ef, 26ab, 726ab, 781h, 788a ARMOUR, The Christian 449k, 861fg, 898h, 904c-e, 916c
ARNOLD, Matthew 606f
ARNON, River 56ab, 212e, 233f, 234c, 236i, 243j, 430d, 431a, 466c AROER OF AMMON 243k
AROER 57k, 212e, 256k, 264d, 466c ARPAD, Arphad 279e 121g, 279e, 466l ARPHAXAD 149p, 308chi
ARRIAN 143g
ARRIWUK OF MARI 150e, 309a
ARTABE, The 82d
ARTAGATIS 278i
ARTASUMARA 119j
ARTATAMA I 119h
ARTATAMA II 119ij, 121b ARTAXERXES I 67e, 122h, 507j, 543c, 555c and Esdras 289if, 293ac and Nehemias 67e, 122h, 288c, 289fh-jp, 295a-e, 299a correspondence with Reum, etc. 288e-k 293a ARTAXERXES II 67h, 289ip, 310l ARTAXERXES III OCHUS 67, 112h, 308h ARTAXERXES (Xerxes) in Esther 310m ARTEMIS, see Diana, Cybele
ARTHRITIS 689d
ARTICLES, The Thirty-nine 15k, 92b
ARTI-KHEPA OF JERUSALEM 62b, 119lm, 232e ARUNDEL, Archbishop Thomas 10c, 29e ARWAD 487i
ARYANS 57d, 116f, 117j, 118i, 119ae, 122d languages 19f-h religion 598o, 599i ARZAWA 78b
AS, Roman coin 83a
ASA, king of Judah 64ef, 124g, 171b-d, 266e, 271b-d, 286g-gg, 404f, 406g, 464c religious reforms 64e, 271b, 273d, 286zdd ASAEL, Asahel 257d-j, 285l
ASAN 256k
ASAPH, sons of 11f, 283q, 284o, 285gh, 353a, 357g, 410c, 699e ASARAMEL 571g
ASASANTHARUM 150f
ASCALON, Ashkelon 57e, 58g, 62a, 118h, 121i, 244g, 278b, 279b, 309c, 550e, 569g (see also Pentapolis) ASCENSION, The 483p, 620h, 671l, 743gh, 756b, 775ac, 795g, 812e, 822ab, 907cd, 913a (see also Olives [Olivet], Perfection, Priesthood, Session) benefits of 902c, 937e, 939c, 941b Christian Life and 913a, 939c entering the heavenly sanctuary 930e, 938d, 940g, 941b triumph and exaltation of Christ 898i, 899fg, 902c ASCENSION OF ISAIAH, Apocryphal 93e ASCETICISM 862bc, 876d, 922ab Essene 588c, 862bc false 909e, 912d, 922a, 963c in Paganism 862bc ASCLEPIUS 965a
ASENAPHAR, Asnapper, see Ashurbanipal ASENATH, wife of Joseph 93f, 157d Book of 93f
ASER, city of, see Hazor ASER, Asher, Tribe of 57l, 160e, 222h, 236d, 283z ASHDOD, Azotus, modern Esdud 57e, 58cd, 71g, 121h, 279b, 296b, 309c, 431b, 432h, 459m, 477d, 484m, 550e, 565d, 569c, 572c, 830e (see also Pentapolis)
ASHER, see Aser
ASHERAH, consort of Baal 175k, 181l, 239f, 270m, 271b, 280j, 286zdd, 287qu, 458f, 483c sacred pole 213d, 214a, 215a, 217b, 242c, 270m, 271bf, 276em, 309d, 456f, 535l ASHES, imposition of 144d, 320j ASHIMA, Asima 278i
ASHIM-BETHEL 278i, 555k
ASHKELON, see Ascalon
ASHTORETH, see Astarte
ASHTAROTH, Astaroth Karnaim 57j, 150f
ASHUR, Asshur, Assur, City of 63h, 121lm, 277k, 278i, 477d, 537c ASHUR, Asshur, Assur, The God 211g, 279ej ASHURBANIPAL 66b, 79e, 121fk, 274m, 275h, 278g, 280c, 281k, 287u, 291el, 308i, 538m
ASHUR-DAN III 121d
ASHUR-ETIL-ILANI 121l
ASHUR-NASIR-PAL II 121c
ASHUR-UBALLIT I 65c, 119j, 121b
ASHUR-UBALLIT II 122a ASIA, Roman Province of 598i, 882i Churches of 949df, 950a, 952e, 964f ASIA MINOR 62a, 598ikn, 599b, 600d, 834d, 837c, 839f ASIARCHS, the 81f, 816a, 839j, 969e, 971c ASMODEUS, see Devils ASPALATHUS 403c
ASPHALT, see Bitumen ASS, The 241f, 244j, 423c, 545d, 550g highly esteemed in East 160b ridden by Christ on Palm Sunday 545d, 550g, 621g, 622a, 720g talking ass of Balaam 206gh ASSARHADDON, see Esarhaddon ASSASSINS, Murderers, Sicarii, 841ei ASSAULT, the law on 174f indecent 219c
ASSHUR, Assur, see Ashur
ASSIDEANS, see Hasidim ASSUAN 444g, 487c (see also Elephantine)
ASSUERUS, see Xerxes ASSUMPTION, of Blessed Virgin Mary 85i, 86efj, 94f, 386c of Christ 756b (see also Ascension) of Elias 272d, 273gh, 348d, 406g, 756b of Enoch, Henoch 273g, 348d, 406g, 756b of Moses 94k, 273g, 961c ASSUMPTION OF MARY, Apocryphal 94f ASSUMPTION OF MOSES, Apocryphal 92k, 961c ASSURANCE, see Certainty
ASSYRIA, Assyrians 63h, 65ab, 66ab, 78b, 117hkl, 119elj, 120de, 121a-m, 149i, 238j, 272f, 279j, 431j, 488p, 532fg, 538gp, 545ik, 550n (see also Sargon, Shalmaneser, Tiglath-pileser, etc.) (ASSYRIA) chronology 64b, 79d, 123ef, 124el, 279a decline of 280lo, 287aa, 477d deportation policy of 65b, 66a, 121ef, 277k, 278eg, 279e, 291i, 303b, 420c, 426n destroy Northern Kingdom 121f, 278de, 303bd, 420bc, 425p, 456e, 462d, 519cd, 684b dies nefasti of 172k Egypt and 277k, 279cdf-h eponym lists 79d, 123f, 124de geography of 121a inhumanity of 110e, 121m, 164b, 211g, 276a, 281e instrument of Yahweh 425h, 428gh, 528b language 19i

 law code (AL) 38e, 45m, 61d, 79g, 139g, 173g ff., 212f, 219c measures 82d Medes conquer 66d, 280o, 287aa, 429e officers of 279d
 Palestinian provinces of 58c, 121f, 277ikl, 278bde, 279bi, 287x, 427g, 477d Palestinian revolts against 79e, 121hk, 277ijk, 278d, 279bc, 308i, 332d, 420d, 421e, 431i pride of 428gh religion of 212g, 273n, 278ci, 279e, 280aj, 492i, 527i (see also Assur, Ishtar) sack Damascus 121c-g, 277i, 278b, 420b, 427b ASTARTE, Ashtart 114i, 213d, 215a, 239f, 270an, 271b, 278i, 284a, 309d, 448g, 457a, 464f (see also Asherah, Ishtar) Astarte-Chemosh 211g figurines 80h green tree emblems of 270n identified with Asherah 213d ASTROLOGY 443p
ASTRONOMY, the Bible and 83g, 232g, 891e apocryphal 92ij
ASTYAGES 501n, 513k
ASTYPALAEA 567c ASYLUM, see Sanctuary ASYNCRITUS 863g
ASYUTIC BIBLE 4b
ATACH 256k
ATAD, Threshing-floor of 161c
ATAROTH 57i, 273i, 430e
ATASH CYPHERS 459n
ATHALIA, Athaliah 64fh, 65c, 68c, 124i, 266j, 271f, 272a, 275ef, 276g-i, 282e, 286u, 287cef, 425r ATHANASIUS, St 5a, 7d, 11c, 15c, 17kl, 928d ATHEISM, Greek 599e, 602f inconceivable to Hebrews 591b ATHENAGORAS 35i
ATHENODORUS 838c
ATHENS 597a, 598j, 602d, 665g, 838b-g, 914c (see also Areopagus)
ATHERSATHA, Tirshatha, see Persians ATHLETICS 575de, 589f, 600h, 602d, 603b, 874b, 876d
 the Christian Athlete 858a, 876d, 913b, 944a ATOMIC THEORY, Greek 601b ATONEMENT, The 645c, 649f, 689e, 735i, 849e-i, 851h, 888a, 893g, 894c, 896f, 900f, 920d, 927c (see also Crucifixion, Priesthood, Redemption) affects all creation 911b all-sufficing 929e, 930f exemplary 958b
 God's love in 958b Incarnation and 921f juridical, legal theories 645eh, 930e Justification and 849ce objective and subjective 645h predicted 343d, 547i

(ATONEMENT) ritual theory 647e, 930e, (see also Sacrifice, Priesthood) typified by Abraham and Isaac 153a vicarious punishment 846e, 849g-i ATONEMENT, THE DAY OF 111a, 113k-m, 114f, 134g, 135f, 180i, 182d, 185f, 186g, 191d-k, 194i, 586b, 642e, 728d, 752a, 843b, 930ef, 939d, 940cf-h, 941c, 944f (see also Azazel, Hebrews, Scapegoat, Yom Kippur) alleged post-exilic invention 113lm, 135f attendance not obligatory 113k Ben Sirach describes 406h Ezechiel ignores 493c high-priests' ritual 111a, 177b, 179f, 191d-j, 406h, 642e, 647e, 930e, 940f only one OT instance of 113i ATROCITIES 208f-h, 470g, 471fj, 526dhi explained 110f, 163b, 230g, 256d, 260h, 362h, 526dh of Jehu 275h-j, 276a-e ATTACHMENT 735de, 870c
ATTALIA 835e
ATTALUS II 572b
ATTIC GREEK, and the Koine 21ab ATTIC MINA, Mine 82h ATTIS 278i
ATTRIBUTES, The Divine 591f-592c (see also God, Personification)
AUGUSTAN BAND, Cohors I Augusta 843b AUGUSTINE, St, and Pelagius 853j on Apocalypse 17k on Bible, Bible study 3f, 7d, 8b, 10d, 37f, 42a on Decalogue 172g on inerrancy and exegesis 691eg, 721e on Jonas 531f on justification by faith 844b on NT Canon 17k, 18a on Old Latin Versions 27b on original sin 900e on OT Canon 15g on predestination and sin 847g on Psalms 339b on relations of OT and NT 101e, 102hg, 163h on rivers of Eden 143g on simultaneous creation 142b, 402c on the apocryphal books 92d, 94j on the Gospel of John 650d, 651c, 781bhi, 782c, 785a, 786b, 787d, 788bfjg, 789d, 790d, 791d, 792abc, 793c, 794bcg, 795h, 796cf, 799gij, 800b, 801cd, 802ch, 803bc, 804h, 805efh, 806i, 811b, 813c on the Mystical Body 911f on the Synoptics 697c on tree of knowledge 145b Penitential Psalms at his death 339c AUGUSTUS CAESAR 71g, 390b, 675c, 704a, 834d, 837d, 841h, 905c, 970k (see also Octavian) and Herod 71h census system of 77h, 749abc, 750d AURAN, see Hauran
AURANITIS 58j, 71g
AUREUS, The Roman 83a
AUSITIS 318a, 320b
AUSTRALIA 151h
AUTHORITY IN RELIGION 656, 858fh AUTHORIZED VERSION, Anglican 23c, 29n, 338b its archaic, liturgical style 29o relation, debt to Rheims-Douay 29fo AUTOLYCUS 35i
AUTUMN 371d
AVA, Avah 278g
AVARICE 370f, 400g, 761d, 922g, 956g Ave Maria 85hi, 86h (see also Annunciation) Aven 526d
AXE HEAD, The Floating 274k AZARIAS, Abdenago 496e, 499c-q AZARIAS, St Raphael 305e
AZARIAS, Ozias, of Judah 65d, 124f, 266hij, 277def, 287ij, 356a, 413b, 524c

(AZARIAS) a leper 64c, 277f, 287j, 421c commerce of 423ik co-regent with Ahaz ? 64c, 266ij co-regent with Amasias ? 64c, 266ij co-reigns with Joatham 65d, 266ij, 277f defeats the Philistines 423j earthquake in reign of 545i, 554b popularly called Uzziah 277d sin of 287i, 425j AZARIAS, Solomon's high-priest 267h, 283n AZARIAS, son of Oded 282i, 286cc AZARIAS, Ozias's high-priest 283o AZAZEL 191fij (see also Scapegoat) AZECA, Azeqa 57e, 80ck, 232e, 463b AZIONGABER, Ezion-geber 286np AZIRU, prince of Amurru 119jm AZMAVETH, Azmoth 284ef
AZOTUS, see Ashdod
AZOTUS MOUNT 567d
AZYMES, see Feasts
BAAL, Baalim 181a, 212g, 213d, 215a, 239f, 242a, 251ab, 270n, 278c, 280a, 431h, 448g, 456dij, 457f, 460g, 514i, 516cg, 519f, 520n (see also Asherah, Beelzebub, Hadad, Jezebel, Melkart, Ramman) as an appellative 257e, 258b, 456di, 516c Baal-berith 63d, 243b Baal-Gad 233e, 234b Baal Hermon 271f, 283i
 Baal Lebanon 271i, 272f
 Baal-zebul, Baalzebul 273e (see also Beel) bosheth 175i, 282aa, 283bb (see also Ishbosheth, Mephibosheth, scribal substitutions) prophets of 64g, 271kl, 416a, 418g, 553b (see also Melkart) Yahweh identified with 112c, 456i (see also Ishbaal, Jerubbaal) BAALA 224c, 284i (see also Cariathiarim)
BAALIADA, Eliada 283e
BAAL-PEOR, see Beelphegor
BAAL-PERASIM (Perizim) 234e, 437e BAALSHALISHA (salisa) 274f
BAASHA, Baasa 64e, 112d, 266e, 270m, 271cd, 286zdegg, 464c Baba Bathra, see Talmud
BABEL, Tower of 32i, 136h, 149i-o, 349c, 392b, 823c BABYLON 117j, 119cg, 121bh, 122c, 149ilo, 150e, 268i, 274m, 278g, 279i, 280o, 287u, 289c, 290ab, 292c, 420d, 429f, 433a, 467a-j, 472f, 475e (see also Isaias, Jeremias, Nebuchadnezzar) anagram, cypher for 459 ln, 467e fall of 33f, 79d, 122e, 289c, 290ab, 292c, 429, 433ab, 443j-o, 459b, 461c, 501cmn lamentation over 443k-p Rome as 949e, 951h, 968d, 969i, 970g symbolic of evil 548bc temple of Marduk in 492m BABYLONIA, Babylonians 78b, 117, 121ch-l, 122a-dj, 238j, 477ef, 550e (see also Exile, Nebuchadnezzar, Shinar) antediluvian king lists 138e, 146g, 148c astronomy, astrology 443p, 968ij buildings 149o calendar 478f Chaldeans and 281d, 455e chronology 19d, 117kl, 123e, 477e (see also Regal Years, post-dating) creation epic of 142g demonology 593a deportation policy 280s, 281g, 477ef division of month 172k influence of civilization, laws, etc. 76d, 173g influence on Jews, Yahwism 45fm, 117i, 268e, 589h, 593a irrigation system 473b, 478f, 480b
 language 19i
 law codes 45m, 59h, 61d, 139g, 212f magic 443np, 484g, 593a

(BABYLONIA) measures 82d milder than Assyria 464a months 83f, 113f, 169e, 546b mythology 79b, 144a, 145c, 480d neo-Babylonian empire, 66d, 121 ff., 287aacc, 308e, 469dg, 486v, 488e (see also Chaldees)
numerical base of sixty 146i Palestinian provinces of 58c proverbial, wisdom literature 316e, 319a psalms, poetry of 79h, 148c, 313 l religion of 59d, 79hi, 117h, 142c, 148c, 149km, 268e, 273n, 278i, 280k, 281k, 289ag, 290b, 330c, 443h, 457a, 467b, 476e-g, 480d, 483b, 485g, 549b, 966a the Babylonian Daric 285s weights 82f

BACCHANTS 392f
BACCHIDES 68e, 560b, 566c, 568a-d, 577e, 580d

BACHELORDOM 404e (see also Celibacy)

BACTRIA 122m

BADACER, see Bidkar

BAGOAS, Vagao 67h, 308h

BAGSTER, Publisher, S. 29p

BAITIL 549b

BALAAM, son of Beor 196c, 206b-q, 207b 270k, 313b, 414e, 547e, 954a, 960g, 961d, 965a

his attendants 135c

his talking ass 206gh, 954a

BALAC, king of Moab 206d-m, 965a

BALATU 124e

BALDAD, Bildad the Shuhite (Suhite) 33d, 153f, 317c, 318a, 322e-i, 323n, 326a-c, 328g-i, 328kl

BALDENSBERGER 670b

BALM 403c

BALTASSAR, Belshazzar 122c, 495c, 501a-fi

his feast 414g, 501a-i relation to Nebuchadnezzar 122c, 472f, 473c, 495e, 501a-f

BALTASSAR, Belteshazzar, see Daniel

BALTASSAR IN BARUCH 473d

BALTHASAR, see Baltassar

BAN, Herem, Anathema 62d, 205c, 211g, 213d, 217f, 218d, 228bce, 230efg, 231a-f, 245jk, 253, 272g, 294f, 309o at Last Judgement 230e

BANAIAS, see Banaiah

BANDITS, Palestinian 584n

BANKERS, Banking, bills of exchange
602e

Jewish, Jerusalem 67gh, 299c, 584f,
718d

Murashi, Sons, Nippur (Jews) 66f, 79f, 289a

Roman 602e

Tobias, Sons, The Temple 67h, 299c

BANQUET, see Messianic

BANYAS 55, 58j, 68a, 122j

BAPTISM 101b, 624d, 634d, 640j, 648 l, 649e, 650, 653g, 682f, 723f, 731d, 779e, 784eh, 824f, 841f, 850f, 851de, 852af, 893g, 898l, 903e, 909g, 910a, 912c, 913b, 937e, 938a, 942b, 951b, 953d (see also Adoption, Forgiveness, Heritage) and confirmation 651e, 820b and the Eucharist 650h, 811b and justification 648 lqs anointing at 886g baptismal hymn 903b baptismal names 855b, 965ade baptismal vows 851d blessing of font 788b

by immersion 750e, 850e, 851dgh by the disciples 650d, 788hi, 789b confession of faith at 650gh, 830e, 841f dispositions requisite for 628s, 650h, 958c

efficacy of 650kl enlightenment, phôtismos 732i, 782d, 938a

eschatological 650jn formula 640k, 650e-gk, 723f, 820a, 824f, 851g, 870a, 903e

(BAPTISM) for the dead 881i for the remission of sins 40f, 650hn, 654b, 841f, 912c, 925g, 951b, 953d giving divine sonship 650cdj (see also Adoption) instituted by Christ 650fh in the name of Jesus 651ef, 824y into the kingdom 650hm Jewish ritual washings 650b, 682f, 784e, 788i, 937e matter 42b, 750c, 788b, 903e ministers of 828a, 832j, 870a mystical death and resurrection 650ij, 851d-h, 852ef, 863c, 887 l, 894ce, 896b, 897c, 912c, 913a, 951b, 971f necessity of 743e not magical 645d, 650bfh of desire 648s of infants, children 650o, 795e, 840g, 905d

of John 650cdg, 654a, 711e, 727bc, 736e, 750c, 753f, 784e, 822a, 824f, 839f, 937e

of our Lord 340b, 441j, 618b, 640k, 650c, 651e, 676be, 683ab, 696d, 705b, 727c, 733d, 748a, 750dfi, 751c, 820f, 822b, 826c, 832h, 955h, 958de of Proselytes 650b, 824f of the Passion 644b, 650i, 735h, 758f of the spirit and of fire 650ci, 651b, 682h, 727b, 758f, 822a, 823a of water and the spirit 784eh

one, not repeatable 938b post-baptismal sin 654bc, 851c, 854d, 953c, 957c

rebirth, regeneration, new life 490c, 648a, 650bhn, 683b, 750e, 788ab, 851g, 852h, 875d, 899a, 900e, 925g, 946i release from the Law 852fg spiritual anointing in 957b spiritual circumcision 912c the Holy Ghost and 650fhn, 750f, 818d, 819c, 820a, 822a, 855a, 957b, 958c

the seal of 650 l, 897e, 967b, 969f, 972f typified in OT 40h, 650n, 877a, 912c, 951b

union with, incorporation into Christ 641j, 650imn, 851cd, 852cf, 854e, 861h, 886b, 894b, 896bg, 897e, 965d union with one another by 650m

BARABBAS 72c, 77g, 584n, 720gh, 721gh, 741c, 770bc, 771b, 808d fully named Jesus Barabbas 721g

BARAC 238em, 240, 241cf

BARACHIAS 545b

BARACHIAS, Jeberechias (Is 8:2) 545b

BARASA, Bosora, Bostra 565a-c

BARBARIANS, Greeks and 880d

BARBAROSSA 970k

BARCA 240d

BAR-JESUS 834c

BAR KOCHBA 587e, 605g

BARLEY HARVEST 83g

BARLEY LOAVES 701c, 777e, 793d

BARNABAS, St 632e, 660o, 664dgh, 665a, 668a, 725ab, 818d, 826de, 828b, 831g, 833abce, 834b-835, 836b, 837a, 869a, 875j, 893g, 895h, 928bd, 938b (see also Mark)

named Joseph 728c

worker-apostle, self-supporting 826e

BARNABAS, The Epistle of 14d, 17chj, 18e, 35c, 94a

BAROQUE ART 32b

BARREL, The Flying 548bc

BARTH, Karl 616d, 670c

BARTHOLOMEW, St (Nathanael) 692e,
785c

BARTIMAEUS, Blind 710e, 735j, 764bc

BARUCH 34e, 281j, 409c, 454e, 455a, 460a-c, 462 l, 472b, 473ab

BARUCH, Book of 11d, 13c, 14dg, 15c, 472-476

accommodates scripture 858c eulogy of Wisdom 314bh, 315e, 316c, 460a, 472h, 474

Messianic doctrine in 472h

(BARUCH) predicts duration of exile 472f,
476b

BARUCH, The Apocalypse of 92m, 590f,
670e

BARZILLAI, see Berzellai

BASAN, Bashan 56b, 57j, 58j, 283j, 351c, 423k, 467c, 487 l, 524b, 527c

BASES, see Water waggons

BASILISK, The 372 l, 457b

BASKETS, Twelve 701d, 793e

BASTINADO 219b

BATANEA 71g

BATH (Measure) 82d, 268 l, 425d, 493a

BATHS, Public 589f, 602f

BATHSHEBA, Bethsabee 260e-h, 267be, 284y, 342e, 345c, 349a, 680e

BATHUEL, the 'Aramaean' 120k

BATTERING RAM 538h

BAUR, Bruno 621b

BAUR, F. C. 605f, 606a-c, 621b

BEAR, The Great 322k, 333d

BEARS 273j

BEASTS, see also Animals, Fauna, Living Creatures)

of burden 56h, 290o

the four beasts, living creatures 92j, 480adef, 483h-k, 966b, 968d, 969b-g, 970di-l

the two beasts of the Apocalypse 671p, 917e, 969b-g

wild 273j, 278h, 321h, 727d

BEATIFIC VISION 143j, 341d, 397i, 401a, 595b, 850d, 879h, 922h, 924d, 944c holiness required for 685f, 944c, 957c

our Lord's 627d, 722d, 788c

BEATITUDES, The 346b, 623c, 625d, 660 l, 685d-f, 752hi, 757c, 758d, 763d, 768d, 932c, 944c

the last, post-resurrection 812i

BEDAWIN 240e (see also Arabs)

BEDE, St, on the B.V.M. 86c version of the Bible 3g, 4c, 29e

BEEL-PHEGOR, Baal-peor 207a, 359b,
519f

BEELZEBUB 273e, 304e, 729cd (see also Baal, Jesus Christ)

Beelzebub 693b, 729cd

God of Ekron 273e, 411ad, 693b, 729c

Satan 620b, 627a, 729cd, 757ef

BEER, and Spirits 602h

BEER, Bera 243d

BEERI 514b

BEERSHEBA, Bersabee 54h, 57e, 106a, 139e, 152k, 153bjo, 158 l, 202k, 245i, 250a, 525b, 528g

BEERSHEBA DEPRESSION, The 54d

BEES, thrift and industry of 367n

Samson's 244f

symbolize Babylon 426m symbolize Lower Egypt 176b

BEGGARS, Palestinian 584n, 761ef, 825c

BEHEMOTH, see Hippopotamus

BEGINNING, The 368n, 782ab (see also Creation)

BEHISTUN INSCRIPTION, The 122f, 543d

BEING (Spiritual) 78c

BEL 443b, 461c, 467b, 513 l component of names 496eg, 500e, 501g temple of 510i

BELIAL, Belias 93e, 215e, 245h, 249d, 346f, 538dg, 593a, 888e daughter of 249d man, son of 245h, 249i, 272h, 367o, 593a

name of a devil 272h, 593a

BELLS, harness 554f

BELLS, The high-priest's 179f

BEL-MARDUK 476g

BELOVED, Only Son 683bc, 727c, 733d, 736f (see also Son of God)

BEL-SHAR-USUR, see Baltassar

BELSHAZZAR, see Baltassar

BELTESHAZZAR, Baltassar, see Daniel

BENADAD, see Benhadad

BENAIHA, Banaiah, son of Joiada 63h, 267b, 284de, 285i

BEN ASHER and Ben Nephtali 22d

BENEDICT, St 335a, 895b

BENEDICT XIV on Vernacular Versions 10g BENEDICT XV 37fh, 38a, 53h Spiritus Paracletus 4h, 5a, 32j BENEDICTIONS, The Eighteen 596f, 748i, 763c Benedictus 745g, 747d, 748ij, 758g
 Song of Anna and 249h Benedictus qui venit 710h, 714j, 759c, 765b BENGEL, A 582de, 583f
BENHADAD, Benadad I 64ef
BENHADAD II 64g, 121c, 272ce, 274g BENHADAD III 65a, 272c, 274m, 276p, 411a, 524b, 526d BENJAMIN, The Patriarch 155g, 156h, 157g-ikl, 222h, 776f, 778c BENJAMIN, Tribe of 57e, 159b, 161i, 228d, 234e, 235de, 238ek, 239ch, 240d, 245e-j, 283taabb, 284f, 354d absorbed by Judah 270be decimation of 245fjk famous bowmen 254j, 257c, 284f, 286hh (see also Jonathan) left-handed, ambidextrous 239h, 245i, 284f rape of Siloites 245k war-cry of 241g BEN SIRACH (Ecclesiasticus) 314bh, 315e, 396bh, 403f, 404bc, 406i, 407 ethical teaching of 397ade grandson of 12a, 396dh his school 396h, 406a on divisions of Canon 12a BENTLEY, Richard 583f
BEOR, see Balaam
BERENICE 73c, 833e
BERNICE 842g
BERODACH-BALADAN, see Merodach
BEROEA 567d, 580a, 838b, 914c
BEROSSUS, Priest of Bel 280q, 461c BEROTH 258b
BERSABEE, see Beersheba
BERYTUS 73e
BERZELLAI, Barzillai 262ef, 290m
BESELEEL, Bezaleel 109k, 180m, 283c BESTIALITY 175f
BETHABARA 784f
BETHANY 58g, 620f, 710f, 720e, 736a, 739b, 757a, 775c, 784f, 800a, 801bch, 822b
BETHANY BEYOND JORDON 777e, 784f BETH ARBEL 519p
BETHAVEN, for Bethel 231b, 235e, 517f
BETHESSEN, Bethbasi 560b, 568d BETHEL, Luz 57fg, 58d, 62d, 64e, 139e, 150b, 154d, 155f, 228b, 231cf, 235a, 239c, 245ij, 270ij, 271ac, 273g, 283z, 289b, 568b, 785ce (see also Bethaven) bull cult abolished 278h, 280i chapel royal at, 64a, 112d, 211c, 270i, 410e, 466c, 517f, 518f, 520j, 524e, 525b, 527b Elias, Elisha, and the prophetic college at 273ghj Jacob at 105e, 106a, 154d, 155f, 158g, 245i prophecy against altar at 270k BETHEL OF S. JUDAH 256k
BETH EQED OF THE SHEPHERDS 276c
BETHESDA, Bezatha 619e, 622e, 626e, 777c, 791c, 796bfg BETHGADER 283d
BETH-HAGAN 275i
BETH-HAMATH 57i
BETHLEHEM, Judah 58d, 243m, 245gh, 253e, 255c, 283f, 462ef, 617c (see also David) birth of Christ at 681cf, 682a, 749c-f Ephrata 57e, 247a, 362c, 535f name 247a, 535f predestined birthplace of Christ 85a, 102k, 246d, 533d, 535fg, 670de, 681e, 749c shepherds of 617d, 749e well by the gate of 264b, 284d BETH-MAACHA 57j, 120j
BETH-REHOB 120j

BETHORON, Beth-horon 232e, 235a, 560b, 563a, 566e, 568b BETHPHAGE 58g, 710fh, 736a
BETHSABEE, see Bathsheba BETHSAIDA 58i, 73b, 480j, 620a, 689f, 692e, 695a, 701cd, 703e, 704ab, 731gh, 732fi, 754e, 785c, 793bdg, 801e BETHSHAN, Scythopolis 56h, 57g, 58h-j, 70b, 80g, 121i, 309d, 275b, 284a, 309d, 565c, 570c, 579c, 762b, 788i BETHSHEMESH, Bethsames 57f, 65c, 80i, 178c, 234e, 236f, 239d, 250g, 267i, 277c BETHSUR, Bethzur, Bethsura, Bessur 57e, 58d-eg, 68ef, 283d, 289b, 560b, 564d, 565e, 566ag, 568b, 571c, 578d, 580b
BETHUEL, Bathuel 153e
BETHULIA 308c, 309gh
BETHZECHA, Berzetho, Bezetha 566d BETHZACHARIAS, Bethzacharam 539b, 566ab BETOMESTHAIM 309g
BETRAYAL OF CHRIST 719acf, 720e, 739b-df, 740c, 768b, 807c (see also Judas, Thirty Pieces of Silver) BETROTHAL 156i, 218j, 484i, 680h by covering with skirt 484i death for unchastity after 218j, 596d BEZA, Theodore 29f, 581g, 583e
BEZAE, Codex D 22j, 581g, 748a, 750f, 828a, 833b BEZALEEL, Beseleel 109k, 180m, 283c BEZATHA, Bethesda, Pool of 619e, 622e, 626e, 791c, 796bfg BEZEK 239b
BIBELANSTALT 10f
BIBLE, The Hebrew: ancient versions 23g-25c (see also Septuagint) Canon of 11d, 13c-f, 382de, 388b, 396c, 409c ceases to be vernacular 20bc, 24f earliest MSS of 22e Kittel's edition 10f language modernized by Jews 20af languages of 15f-21e literary merit of 99a MT substantially authentic 22f original Canaanite script of 21g, 80jm preservation of text 8a, 21k-22f, 80k (see also Scribes, Massoretes) threefold division of 11f, 12ac, 223a, 382e, 398a, 404h, 409cd, 585e unification of text 22a BIBLE, The Holy 1-10, 32-3, 630bc (see also Canon, Exegesis, Forms, Historicity, Inerrancy, Inspiration, Interpretation, Septuagint, Versions, Vulgate) and science 5f, 6a, 32lm, 37dg, 39b, 42h, 142a (see also Criticism, Interpretation, Miracles) as containing all revealed truth 1f, 40c belongs to the Church 1d, 7, 42b Catholic differs from Protestant 11bd, 13a ff., 15d chapter division 22d, 27i, 581e circulation controlled 10 conservation of text 8 (see also Massoretes) council of Trent on 1df, 7d, 15kl, 17i, 28abd, 29r, 36a, 37d, 42bcd, 53e, 223a Council of Vatican on 6a, 7d, 9f, 42bc curbs undue theological speculation 85i, 617a, 627f, 628a Daniel and 11f didactic aim of 223g documentary sources of 137g-i, 162f, 224c-f, 337 fable, fiction, legend and 32h, 33i, 88a, 89d, 90a, 226i, 288ij, 310k, 314c, 382k, 383d, 388f, 394a God the author of 1d, 2c, 6b, 9a, 14d, 15i, 32b, 34b, 35gh, 36, 37, 39bcg, 41a, 42aef, 85i 952i (see also Inspiration) in family life 660e influence of exile 12b

(Bible) inspired development of text 396g Judaism and 585f-586g monobiblicism, sufficiency of 10d names and order of books 223ab, 382e no systematic philosophy, theology in 104d, 115b, 137e, 454c obscurity in 41e, 42a, 670c our Lord and 3b, 12a, 100ab, 335n, 339bh, 343d, 344a, 345b, 346f, 355a, 360dg, 361b, 551bfj, 618d, 766f, 770d pregnant words of 39km, 84c printing of 3i, 4cg, 8d, 10 reflects ancient ideas, terms, modes, etc. 5c, 6g, 9a, 32bcd, 39k, 132a, 142a, 143k 144a, 232g reverence and love for 3-6, 47b, 585f teaches theology, not natural science 137b, 142a, 143kg, 699c, (but cf. 37d) the 'Bibles of the poor' 3i the Church and 1-10, 39b, 42bcd the first printed book 8d, 27j the open Bible 3a, 4ab, 10cd the theme of 59c
 the word of life 792f tradition and scripture 1c-f, 2c, 42de, 84bc, 85dk-m unique 39gk value of 1, 2, 7d, 40c, 84f, 397t, 398a verse division 22b, 581e, 736i verse numeration 27j BIBLE SOCIETIES, Catholic 4h, 6g Protestant 10ce-h
BIBLE STUDY 1gh, 2-4, 43de, 85i, 396i, 404g, 586dg, 588c, 617a, 627f, 628a, 630b, 924a and art 3i, 14g and scientific scholarship 1gh, 3e, 5abd, 6a-d, 225c conditions for profitable 2c, 6g danger of misdirected 10cd debt to non-Catholic scholarship 6ah, 37g, 604b, 606g, 607h, 661d early Christian 3a-g, 4a-c, 15g, 660e, 924a indulgence for Bible Reading 4h in modern times 3j, 5f-h, 43-6 (see also Criticism and Exegesis) in the dark ages 3fig in the Middle Ages 3hi, 4a-g, 5d in the post-Tridentine period 3j, 5e Pius XII and 9h, 41df private bible reading 4 promoted by Council of Trent 3h the necessity of 1g, 2a, 10bcd Biblica 6e
BIBLICAL COMMISSION, Pontifical 9cd, 42c, 47-53, 206h, 211b, 301f, 308a and Modernism 9c and non-vulgate versions 28d, 29r and synoptic problem 9d on Acts 744f on authorship of Isaiah 49k-m, 421b on citations in Scripture 37h, 52i, 225e on early chapters of Genesis 37i, 46i, 48e-l, 53i-l, 138d on Epistle to Hebrews 52a-c, 928ad-f on Midrashic interpretation 394a on Psalm xv 342c on St Paul and the Parousia 52e, 914i on the Pastoral Epistles 919c replies to individuals 32i, 37gi, 46i, 53i-m, 135k, 211b (see also Suhard) the Historical Books, strictly historical 32i, 226i the Pentateuch substantially Mosaic 48d, 135ij, 211b BIBLICAL CRITICISM, see Criticism BIBLICAL INSTITUTE, The Pontifical 6e, 8e, 47b, 338b BIBLICAL PUBLICATIONS, Catholic 6e, 46ac BIBLICAL SCHOOL at Jerusalem, Dominican 6e BIBLICAL THEOLOGY 43d, 46j, 671y BIDKAR, Badacer 275h
BILDAD, see Baldad

BILINGUALISM, of church of Jerusalem 679b of Jesus Christ 584g of the Apostles 584g, 823c, 832h BILLOT, L. 32i
BILLS OF EXCHANGE, Roman 602e
BINDING AND LOOSING 624d, 654e, 657k, 704d, 706f BIRDS 189e, 218i, 548b, 333de, 687b, 689h, 697c, 762f BIR EL MURQA 271k, 274d
BIRS-NIMRUD 149m
BIRTH PREVENTION 304g
BIRTH-RATE, A high 361k BIRTH-RIGHT 110h, 153k, 158i, 165d, 218g, 273g, 283i, 944c (see also Double Portion) BIRZAITH, Barsaith 283z BISHOPS, see Ministry BIT-ADINI 279g
BITHYNIA 949d
BITTER LAKES, The 60e, 170ab BITUMEN, Asphalt 149o, 150g, 152e, 164c BIT-YAKIN 121h, 279i
BLACK BUT COMELY 384e BLASPHEMY 146d, 175g, 194cd, 272h, 279efg, 317bj, 425f, 704b, 720gh, 740fh, 751h, 769e, 833fh, 879a, 942c, 954a (see also Rending Clothes) against the Holy Ghost 654c, 697ac, 729d, 757e (see also Sin) BLESSED SACRAMENT, see Eucharist BLESSING 55c, 185e, 214e, 219fg, 232a, 306fj, 404a (see also Benedictions, Cursing) apostolic, episcopal 269d, 692h by laymen, kings, etc. 284m, 285ds chalice of 720a, 739d eucharistic, with thanksgiving 269d, 652g, 720a, 731g, 768c, 793e, 794e high-priestly 187o, 198n, 351b, 362e, 406h in greetings 269c liturgical, priestly 285d, 287q of bread, food 701d, 731g of Isaac 153r of Jacob 79i, 102j, 134c, 159-60, 218g, 943c of Moses 222f ff. set on Mount Gerizim 214e, 219f symbols of divine 523 i BLINDNESS, blind guides 702e, 714e cured by Christ 148b, 226g, 621g, 692a, 696e, 710de, 732i, 735j, 757f, 764f, 777e, 779d, 796a, 798, 799a cured gradually 732i man born blind 777e, 779d, 796a, 798, 799a spiritual blindness 799ch, 858cd Tobias 302bc, 305i, 306j BLOOD, and sacrificial substitution 192de and water 649e, 653gh, 779e, 811bc basons 550k blood-guilt 174h, 218e, 878f cleansing, expiatory virtue of 106f, 111e, 176d, 191g, 192bd, 940h consecratory 187kl, 941a Covenant of, see Covenant crying for vengeance 146a, 156i, 217b, 267df, 325j, 486y, 932b, 943b, 944c feud, vengeance 38e, 149b, 174d, 209i-l, 213a, 218a, 236g, 245k, 246g, 257j, 261d, 271d, 276b, 339d, 341c, 400c forbidden food 101a, 102e, 111e, 132g, 149b, 169e, 186i, 192der, 215d, 309 i, 642e, 644i, 795e, 836f in Eucharistic sacrifice 176cd, 644gh, 652h, 657g, 795e, 877f, 878f, 941a is the Life 106f, 111e, 149b, 176d, 184g, 186a, 192ab, 215d, 642e, 657g issue of 691f, 730j money, compensation 174dgh, 218ae, 348d, 721c ritual of Atonement 177b, 191egh, 642e, 940fh, 941a ritual, sacrificial 111agi, 112f, 176cd,

178d, 180c-e, 184c, 185a, 186gi, 187hkl, 191egh, 192d-f, 204h, 309j, 493c, 527b, 550k, 644g, 657g, 878f, 930ef, 940fh, 941a (BLOOD) smearing the doorposts 169d, 943d sweat of blood 769ab symbol of brotherhood, union 644h the price of 156i, 174dh, 719c water turned to 167e, 970e BLOODLESS, Unbloody Offerings 184d BLOODSHED 218ae, 285c, 435c, 970b (see also Homicide) BLYTH, Fr F. 30ab
BOANERGES 261g, 724e, 728i, 776e
BOAST, Boasting 656e, 849j, 875g, 876a, 883e, 890g-891, 906c in arming and disarming 272e BOAZ, see Booz
BOCHIM, Bokim 239d
BODY, and soul 137e, 391gj, 599e, 645k, 838f, 866f, 887i flesh and blood 882b in service of God 686c, 860bc reverence for, sanctity of 218h, 526c, 686c, 847h, 878de temple of the Holy Ghost 854h BODY, RESURRECTION- 743d, 774b, 812f, 873d, 881j, 882a-c, 916b, 924c glorious 671q, 907g heavenly tabernacle (clothing of) 887j identity of 881k immortal 737i redeemed 856a sex of 713b, 737h, 766e spiritual 882a
BOEOTIA 744e
BOHAIRIC BIBLE 4b, 781h, 783f BOHEMIAN BIBLE 4g
BONIFACE, Pope 15b
BONIFACE, St 3g BOOKS (see also Codex, Scrolls) anciently untitled 282v eating a scroll 480i BOOK OF GOD, of Life 129i, 362j, 398c, 439k, 512b, 594e, 646e, 756d, 944c, 971g BOOZ, Boaz 246 ff., 247d Jachin and 268k, 276i
BORROWING 430f (see also Interest, Lending) BORSIPPA 149m, 443h
BOSHETH 175i, 257d, 258b (see also Baal)
BOSOR, Beor, see Balaam BOSOR, in Trachonitis 565a BOSORA, Barasa, Bostra 565a-c BOTANY 698b, 699c
BOUNDARY STONES, Landmarks 218b, 307f, 372cg, 517i, 729f BOURNE, Cardinal 30o
BOUSSET, W. 622a, 670b
BOW, Bowman 286hh of Jonathan 254j, 257c (see also Benjamin) symbolism of 329j, 330a BOWELS OF CHRIST, The 906b (see also Sacred Heart)
BOXING 876d, 902f
BOYHOOD, Jewish 750ab (see also Jesus)
BOZRA, Bosra 350b, 439j, 526g
BRAMBLE 243d
BRANDING, of captives 969f of slaves 146a, 442j, 967b, 969f of soldiers 967b, 969f BRASS 268n, 285c, 286i mountain of 548c BREAD 652i (see also Multiplication) baking 481ae
 barley loaves 701c, 777e, 793d blessing of 701d, 731g breaking of 637b, 652fgh, 701d, 774c, 820ce, 825a, 833d, 843d, 877f eucharistic 720a of angels, from heaven 394c, 653h, 794e, 795b (see also Manna) of life 793a, 794def, 795a-f our daily, supersubstantial 686h

BREASTPLATE OF JUDGEMENT, see Pouch BREATH, of God 115c, 331g (see also Holy Spirit) of life 115c, 143d, 323b, 331g, 378a of man and beast 115c, 143d of Messias 428m
'BRETHREN OF THE LORD', The 81b, 86 i, 672-3, 697g, 700e, 731b, 749d, 750h, 754c, 786c, 796d, 804b, 875i, 895b, 929b, 945c brother meaning kinsman 77e, 150d, 672a-c, 697g, 700e four named in Gospels 672e, 673b-f, 960b with Mary, seek Jesus 729abe, 754c, 757g BRETSCHNEIDER, C. G. 604f
BREVIARY OFFICE 3g, 335a, 336, 338f, 340 ff BRIBERY, Corruption 175h, 370fklo, 723d BRICKS, drawing, writing on 481b (see also Cuneiform) making of 166b, 538n BRIDE, Bridegroom 382-7, 718a (see also Marriage, Jesus) BRIMSTONE 152c, 491d, 971c BRISTOW, Richard 29h
BRITAIN 833h
BRITANNICUS (Montfortianus) CODEX 583e
BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY 10f BROADMINDEDNESS 874a false 963c, 965a, 971c BRONZE 268n, 284v, 285c, 286h
BRONZE AGE 59f, 62d, 80b, 125c, 139de, 146d, 176g, 177f, 228ab, 230h, 231e, 239c, 240b, 243b
BROOM, Broom-root 272a, 330a BROTHERHOOD 601c, 624c, 650m, 735f 926d, 935b (see also Adoption, Charity, Fatherhood) BRUNNER, E. 616d
BRUTUS 70h, 584n, 837d, 905c
BUBASTES 488f
BUBONIC PLAGUE 168b, 279i
BUCKTHORN 243d
BUGITE, Aman the 311bg BUILDING PERMITS, for Temples 292b BUL 268h
BULL 270h (see also Calf) BULTMANN, R. 609a-c BUREAUCRACY, Roman Imperial 597i
BURGLARY 328f
BURIAL 153d, 302bk, 400b, 487q, 488j, 690a, 730g, 826f (see also Embalming, Uncion) among strangers 270k cemetery for strangers, pilgrims 721c cemetery of the common people 280jk cemetery of the kings 267d, 275e, 278c, 492k, 287bgtv funeral feasts 305c Jewish rites of 681f, 691f, 694g, 742i of Christ 218h, 682f, 697d, 719b, 722h, 739b, 742ghi, 743a, 772c, 811d (see also Sepulchre) of the hanged, crucified 218h, 742h spices for 811d
BURKITT, F. C. 607a
BURNABURIASH II of BABYLON 119j
BURNING BUSH, The 104g, 129d, 164g, 222h, 414g, 736i, 797 i, 829c BURNT OFFERINGS, see Holocausts BURRUS, Afranius 843g
BUR-SAGALE 123f
BUSHEL, The 82d, 699d
BUSINESS MORALITY, Jewish 595e, 596e
BUSYBODIES 373h
BUTTER AND HONEY 41g, 426cdghk
 Arab 'tahnik' custom 426d BUTTMANN, Philipp 583f
BUZ, Buzite 153c, 330e
BYBLOS 234a, 267n, 550d (see also Ahiram)
BYZANTINE (Constantinopolitan) TEXT OF NT 582ceg, 583d

CAATHITES, Kohathites 236h, 283npr, 284 l, 285fgi, 286 ll CABUL, Qabul 57hi, 58i, 236d, 269fg CADES, see Kadesh
CAEDMON'S PARAPHRASE 4c
CAESAR, God and 704g, 736f (see also Church and State) Household of 905e, 908c
CAESAR, Julius 70gh, 905c CAESAREA 8b, 56h, 58h, 72c, 74e, 588g, 602f, 631d, 666e, 721a, 744e, 815c, 830be, 832e, 833fh, 840h, 842, 843b, 898b CAESAREA PHILIPPI 55f, 56h, 73b, 619f, 624d, 657kq, 703e, 704a, 733a, 754f CAESAREAN TEXT of NT 22k, 23d, 25k, 26bf, 582b, 583acd CAIAPHAS 704b, 719a, 720f, 740eg, 750d, 807e-h, 826a house of 81h, 720f, 807eg the prophecy of 153b, 649d, 799a, 800g CAIN 136e, 138c, 146a-d, 392b, 553b, 960g, 961d the city of 138c, 146d the mark of 146a CAINITES, The 136f, 146c-eh inventions of 146de, 147e survive the Flood 146c, 147e CAIRO GENIZA 396c
CAIUS THE PRESBYTER 962b
CAJETAN, Cardinal 15k, 945d
CALAH 63h, 149i
CALAMUS 180 l
CALE, Kalhu 121a
CALEB, son of Jephunneh 202e-j, 228c, 234d-f, 239b, 283bcdg, 406d, 936a CALEB, Chelubai, Calubi 283bcd alias Charmi, Carmi 283f CALENDAR (see also Feasts, New Year) the Egyptian 118e, 123e, 140b the Galilean 768b the Hebrew 83d-h, 113a-114a, 118e, 140b, 182e, 193q-y, 208ab, 404a, 405f, 896h the Primitive Christian 862d the Seleucid 123cd, 750d CALF-WORSHIP 410e, 514i, 517f, 519ab, 520n bulls of Jeroboam I 64a, 112d, 265ce, 270hz, 286f Golden Calf 129fi, 181a-d, 197i, 214b, 270h, 351ce, 877c, 944c silence of Amos 525b CALIGULA, Gaius Caesar 388e, 588g, 675df, 832a, 833f, 842g
CALIPH MERWAN II 160b
CALLIMACHUS 925b
CALLING, see Election, Vocation CALMET 3j
CALNEH 527j
CALPHI, see Alphaeus
CALNO, Calano 428h
CALUMNY, see Slander to 'eat the flesh of . . . ' 653h CALVARY, Golgotha 81h, 244j, 657h, 722c, 742bc, 771a, 810a, 944f the Arab 'Ras' 771a, 810a CALVIN, Calvinism 10d, 172g, 646h, 921e CAMBYES I, of Anzan 122d, 289c CAMBYES II, of Persia 67a, 501n, 503c, 510a, 543c conquers Egypt 122e, 289c, 442c CAMEL, The 150c, 168a, 242gh, 660k and eye of needle 709d, 735e, 763h CAMELOPARDALUS 215f
CAMP followers 290o in the wilderness 197e sanitation 218 l
CANA 58i, 86a, 118h, 652i, 653g, 703b, 776e, 777e, 779e, 783f, 785c, 786a, 790fg (see also Jesus Christ, Miracles, Wine)
CANAAN, see Palestine CANAAN, The Patriarch 149ci CANAANITE LANGUAGE 19h-k alphabet 19h
 Hebrew a dialect of 19j

(CANAANITE LANGUAGE) inscriptions in 19kl Phoenician 19i
CAANANITES 57d, 59fg, 134b, 149c, 228a, 234f, 240ade, 285c, 400d, 401c, 703a (see also Phoenicians, Räs-Shamra) and Amorites, Amorrrhaeans 59f civilization 62b, 76d enslaved by Solomon 63j, 267n, 269g, 286em, 290m (see also Nethinim) excluded from Israel 448b God's forbearance towards 392fg, 393b marriage with 270a meaning 'merchants' 551c, 554f relations with Israel 45m, 211g, 217f, 228cd, 229 ff., 238em, 267n, 269g religion 144a, 150b, 153a, 192s, 213d, 215adf, 217bf, 218n, 239f, 270ano, 409i, 486ef, 492g, 526k (see also Ashera, Astarte, Baal, Melkart, Moloch, Pillars, Sexual Worship) CANAANITISH, Syro-Phoenician Woman 86b, 619e, 622a, 657m, 703ab, 732d, 745c, 746f, 754d CANALS 473b, 478f, 480b the Suez Canal 122g, 170a CANANAEAN, St Simon, the 692e, 728i
CANATH, Kenath 283c
CANDACE, Queen of Ethiopia 5a, 39b, 830e CANDLESTICKS, Lampstands, Seven-branched 177e, 194a, 403e
 The Temple 286h
CANNIBALISM 274m, 473e, 481g
CANON, The 11-18, 28qt, 318ij, 335f, 661d, 662d, 954g (see also Bible, Deuterocanonical, Protocanonical) Catholic criterion of Canonicity 18a ff. contents of 11d, 13e closing of OT Canon 12e, 13ef defined at Trent 7d, 15kl, 17l, 726a, 781i dogmatic revelation of 1f, 13e, 14ag Jewish criterion of Canonicity 11e, 13cd liturgical influence on 12de meanings of word 11c New Testament 16a ff., 922e, 954g of apostolic and sub-apostolic fathers 14ad ff. of Athanasius 14d, 15c of Melito of Sardis 14e of Origen 14de Old Testament (Alexandrian) 13acf, 585e (see also Septuagint) — (Christian) 13f, 14a ff.
 — (Palestinian) 11defg, 12e, 13c-f, 14e, 282jk, 365i, 388b, 409c, 472g, 585e, 721d — (Samaritan) 12b (see also Penta-teuch) Reformers and 15km, 945d CANONICAL HOURS, The Seven 361c CANONIZATION 318q
CANON LAW and THE BIBLE 10a CANTICLE (see also Benedictus, Magnificat, Nunc Dimittis) of Anna, Hannah 249d-h, 313b, 360g, 748g of Deborah 20a, 54i, 61e, 63d, 222d, 224c, 238k, 240a, 241 of deliverance from Egypt 134b of Habacuc 539de, 540p-y of Ezechias, Hezekiah 440 of Judith 309o of Moses 34e, 130bdg, 134c, 170e-g, 221d, 222a-e, 241a, 313b, 354a, 970c of Tobias 307e-g CANTICLES, Song of Songs 313d, 314b, 382-7 ascetico-mystical interpretation of 383m, 385o Christian sense of 383ghj Judaic sense of 383hjk Mariological interpretation of 85e, 383m

(CANTICLES) numbering of verses 384a title 382c, 384a unity of 382n
CAPACITY, Measures of 82de CAPHARNAUM, Capernaum 57h, 58i, 86b, 236e, 480j, 620a, 684a, 689f, 690e, 695a, 727e, 751ad, 786e, 790fg, 793bg, 795f synagogue at 689d, 691, 696c, 795f CAPHARSALAMA 566e
CAPHETATHA, Caphenatha 570c
CAPHOT, Keftiu 149j, 465e, 525d (see also Crete) CAPITALISM 296e, 718d (see also Property, Riches) CAPITAL PUNISHMENT 272h, 348d, 416a, 587b, 740ef, 742a, 841ke (see also Commutation, Crucifixion, Stoning) by fire 269d for blasphemy 942c for disobedience to parents 218g for Sabbath-breaking 752c reserved to Roman Governor 720f, 721a, 740ef, 769e, 808b, 809b, 829f stoning for adultery 218j, 596d, 797a CAPPADOCIA 117cdj, 119a, 269j, 572b, 598i, 949d Cappodian Tablets 118j, 119b CAPTIVITY, see Exile, Pauline Epistles CARAFIANUS, Codex 28c CARCHEMISH 119i, 121b, 275a, 278e, 287aacc, 428g, 459b, 477e battle of 83h, 459b, 461cf, 465ab, 496a, 539e CARDINAL VIRTUES, The 391f
CAREY, Fr James A. 31a CARIANS, Carites, The 276h (see also Cherethites)
CARIATH-ARBE, Qiryath-Arba, see Hebron CARIATHARIM, Qiryath-Yearim 57e, 178c, 232b, 234e, 250g, 259b, 283d, 284i, 362c CARIATH-SEPPER, see Debir CARIOTH 466e, 526i, 795i (see also Iscariot) CARITH, see Cherith CARMEL, Mount 54g, 55bc, 58h, 112d, 226gh, 236bc, 271k, 410e, 439 l (see also Elias) CARNAIM 565c
CAROB PODS 274m
Carpe Diem 376j, 377e, 400g
CARPENTER, Carpentry 731b CARTHAGE 271 l, 273n, 338a (see also Councils) sacrificial tariff 186f CARTWRIGHT 36d
CASIPHIA 289a, 293g
CASLEU, the month 564c, 574a, 797g
CASLUHIM, Chasluim 149j
CASPHOR, Caspihu 57c
CASPIAN SEA 278e
CASSIA 180 l (see also Kesiah)
CASSIUS 70h, 837d, 905c CASTOR and POLLUX 843g
CASTOR-OIL PLANT 532i
CASUISTRY, Rabbinic, Scribal 526m, 584n, 585gh, 586, 660e, 685b, 686c, 696a-c, 702bc, 714be, 728efg, 729e, 732b, 752d
CATACOMBS 3i, 14g, 650n, 722a, 799d, 863h, 938d
CATECHESIS, CATECHISTS, Primitive 64h, 610h, 633c, 645a, 650n, 657a, 667e, 679de, 724dde, 725c, 744hi, 747ac, 750ci, 751d, 915e, 931b, 937de
CATECHETICAL SCHOOL, Alexandria 3e
CATECHISM 861d, 862h, 907e CATECHUMENS 396b, 787d
CATFISH 700c
CATHERINE II, The Empress 10g
CATHOLIC ACTION 651c CATHOLIC EPISTLES, The 661b, 662f, 949i, 950a canonical order 662f chronological order 662f CATTLE RAIDING 283x

CAULKING, Pitch 147a
 CAUCASUS, The 146d
 CAUSES, CAUSATION 835c, 859 I, 931b efficient and final (of Creation) 510f, 935a instrumental causes 36f-h, 37a Judaism and 592ce natural and preter-natural 561a primary and secondary 59c, 87d, 137b, 139a, 143c, 144d, 149o, 151g, 152c, 165d, 225a, 272b, 285b, 416b, 470c, 729h, 842i CAVALRY 218d (see also Chariots, Horses) CAVES, Bethlehem 681f Palestinian 242c used as tombs 690c, 730g CEDAR TREES, Wood 63j, 190jk, 267m, 268bd, 403b, 488h-j, 551a CEDAR TRIBE, see Kedar CEDES, see Kadesh, Kadesh
 CEDRON, see Kidron CELIBACY 654gh, 660g, 671n, 708f, 776g, 871n, 874d (see also Virginity) and bachelordom 874f and marriage 784c-f of the Clergy 921i grace of 873g of the Essenes 588c rare in Israel 309n, 413g, 748d
 St James 960b
 CELLON, Cholle 309c
 CELSUS 746f, 749b
 CELTIC GUARD, Cleopatra's 71e CEMETERY, 320m (see also Burial) CENACLE 807b (see also Upper Room)
 CENCHREAE 839c, 863f
 CENDEBEUS 560b, 572bc
 CENNEROTH, see Chinneroth
 CENSERS 180i, 191g, 285q CENSORSHIP, Ecclesiastical 10ad
 CENSUS, The 197a-d, 207cd, 264c, 298a, 584 I Hebrew and Roman scruples regarding 180i, 285a legitimized by poll-tax 181k military census of Azarias 287j of Augustus 72b, 77h, 676a, 749ab of David 57k, 225e, 226d, 264c, 283s, 285abn of Gad 283j plague follows 180i, 225e, 264c taken in A.D. 6-7, 827c CENTRALIZATION OF CULT 112bc, 174a, 211cd, 215a-dg, 216c, 217e, 227f, 237ab, 265hjk, 267e, 270ei, 271b, 442i, 483o, 519c, 585a delayed, late enforcement 63d, 112abd, 174b, 178c, 211c, 215b, 237b, 238g, 245fi, 249c, 265k, 271b fate of the country priests 217e, 280j Ezechias' reforms 211c, 279b, 285s in the Tabernacle in the Desert 63d, 192c, 211c Josias' reforms 114k, 211cd, 280ej-n, 287x-z Law for, reflected in Messianic Age, Church 418c, 462s, 546d opposition to 64a reversed in Christianity 829d CENTURION, of great faith 689de, 753ab, 795f at Calvary 622b CEREMONIAL, Uplifting effect of 406h CERETHI AND PHELETHI, see Cherethites CERINTHUS 671v, 776g, 778h, 909h, 955h, 958d, 962b CERTAINTY, Assurance of Salvation 640m, 645g, 758d, 794f, 799i, 850bef, 854c, 855eh, 856d-f, 905f, 907e, 931a (see also Hope)
 CESTIUS GALLUS 929b
 CETEANS, Citims (Greeks) 567b
 CETURA, Keturah 136f, 140a, 153f, 283a CHALCIS 73d
 CHALCOL, Calcol, son of Mahol 267 I, 283b
 CHALCOLITHIC CULTURE 212c

CHALDAEA, Chaldaean 59d, 121 I, 122a-c, 309f, 320f, 443 I, 539e Babylonians and 281d, 455e ethnic designation 496cd first encounter with Assyria 121d language 496cd synonym of magicians 496d, 497c, 499c CHALICE, The Eucharistic 176cd, 644g, 657g, 720d CHALLONER, Dr Richard 29bcp, 30abd, 782abg (see also Douay) CHAM, see Ham
 CHAMBERLAINS, Royal 267hi, 271j, 275j CHAMOS, see Chemos
 CHANANIAH, The Rabbi 622b
 CHANGING THE GUARD 276gh, 287e
 CHAOS, Primeval 141bf, 392d, 403a CHAPLAINS TO FORCES, OT 218d
 CHAPMAN, Abbot 9d, 606b
 CHARADRIAN, The 215f
 CHARAN, see Haran
 CHARIOTS 55a, 60a, 118 I, 160c, 217d, 226c, 235c, 240bd, 241d, 269j, 284v of God 285q, 478b, 480ae, 483ahip
 'of Israel and the horsemen thereof' 273g, 276n of the sun 280k CHARISMATA, Spiritual Gifts 36bg, 629c, 638b, 639, 818d, 820bd, 830cd, 832j, 833c, 834k, 835a, 878h, 879ab, 902cd, 916d, 938a, 951d charity supreme among 879gh for common, not individual good 866e, 879c-e Ministerial 860de, 879de ordinary and extraordinary 639cgh prophecy and tongues 639ef, 839f, 880bf rules for public use 880g-881a temporary 879h-881a CHARITY 163g, 173e, 536c, 752i, 781g, 819a, 860efg, 862g, 875c-g, 879f-880a, 890bc, 901b, 902d, 938c, 942b, 944ce, 950ci, 951dh, 958b (see also Charismata, Love, Theological Virtues) bond of perfection 913b Christian and OT law contrasted 114e, 192m, 273f, 584e, 686e, 736k covering sin 753h, 951d faith and 956d, 958c, 959g fear and 958b fire of 758f fraternal charity 110g, 114e, 192m, 211f, 216a, 218i, 366m, 370gk, 372o, 398bd, 637a, 668ef, 685b, 687h, 713c, 736k, 756fg, 803b, 804fi, 907a, 950f indispensable for salvation 879fg in prayer 736d knowledge and 875d, 879h must be practical 945g, 947ce, 957d new commandment 624b, 636a, 640f, 660mq, 695d, 803b, 804i, 955i, 956d obstacles to 946e, 956g persecution and 752h self-interest and 910b supreme duty, virtue 685k, 686d, 728fg, 759d, 879ab, 931b CHARLEMAGNE 4d, 8c, 27h CHARMI, Carmi, see Caleb CHARMS, see Amulets
 CHASIDIM, see Hasidim
 CHASTISEMENT 214d, 660e (see also Corporal Punishment, Suffering) CHASTITY 708f, 828a, 868b, 872e, 873de foundations of 873de, 915f in marriage 873fg, 915f the Jewish ideal of 596d CHEBAR, Chobar, Nar-kabara 478f, 480b
 CHEDORLAOMER, Chodorlahomor 150e
 CHEEK, Turning the Other 686d, 807g CHELAEB, Chileab (Daniel) 283e CHELEUD, Sons of 309a
 CHELION 247a
 CHEMOSH, Kemosh, Chamos 205g, 207a, 211g, 243j, 247b, 273n, 359b, 430d, 466a, 527i

CHENANIAH, Chonenias the Choir-master 284 Im CHENNEROTH 271c (see also Genesareth)
 CHEOPS, or Khufu 118c
 CHERETHITES, Cerethi 63h, 259i, 261f, 264a, 267bck, 269i, 276hi, 542g CHERITH (Carith), The Brook 55g
 CHEROGRIL, The 215f
 CHERUBIM 144d, 172i, 268e, 342e, 349g, 350c, 358b Babylonian 79c, 480d, 966b Egyptian, and Babylonian, contrasted 176g, 177b, 268e Ezechiel's 176g, 480adef, 483h-k, 487r, 492g God enthroned upon 177c, 285q of the Ark, Mercy Seat 176g, 177bc, 268e, 286g, 288q, 480d CHESTER BEATTY PAPYRI 16b, 17h, 23g, 25n, 38a, 77ad, 429e, 581d, 582c, 661c, CHEZIB 156j CHIASMUS 936c, 942d
 CHILDBEARING, Desire for 152f CHILDBIRTH, original sin and 324e pains of 145b, 805e uncleanness, purification after 189k-n, 324e, 749g CHILDLESSNESS, Misfortune of 309n, 747e CHILDREN 660e (see also Education, Parents, Solidarity) a blessing 285h, 309r, 659f, 660d care, love of 549g, 706c, 733b, 734b, 735c cry Hosanna in temple 711b enslavement of 274a, 321o, 328e, 445g not to suffer for parents' sins 219b, 277a, 462g, 485f (see also Solidarity) of such is the Kingdom 643gl, 706b, 731c, 763e our Lord and 694g, 706c, 709a, 711b, 733b, 734b, 735c, 753f, 763e singing game of 694g, 753f training and discipline of 660e CHIMERAS, Composite Figures 967g
 CHISLEU, The Month 460b
 CHITON, The 603a
 CHIUN, see Kewan
 CHIVALRY, Christian 878a
 CHLOE, The House of 866i, 869d
 CHOBAR, Chebar, Nar-kabara 478f, 480b CHOINIX, The 82e
 CHOIR, The Temple 355d
 CHORAZIN, Corozain 58i, 620a, 695a
 CHORSIA 690c
 CHOSEN PEOPLE, see Israel CHRIST (see also Jesus, False Christ, Messiah, Union) as a proper name 680a, 906a CHRISTIANITY 629-60 (see also Christian Life, Christians, Gospel) and Judaism, the Old Law, etc., 104c, 765d, 767h, 775c, 815a, 816d, 819bce, 820e, 826b, 828, 829, 832c, 833c, 836, 841cd, 844bi, 852-3, 927b, 931a and Society 660, 925f, 950f-h and the Mystery Religions 633h, 639e, 641 I, 645d, 846c, 858d, 862bc and the State 633g, 660a-v, 736f, 861, 925f Christ is the Gospel 623a, 633c, 641a, 852b demands a final choice 632b, 697g, 697b dogma in 634a, 648ej, 851j ends Jewish proselytism 590d essentially historical 633i, 817a exclusiveness of 633h Hegelian interpretation of 605f, 606ab moral demands of 624c, 625f, 645en, 650j, 660fg new, autonomous, distinct, independent 630a, 691d, 728d, 739h, 828a, 832c, 833a, 843a new life, power 630a, 635a, 648, 649a, 650dej, 660b, 685ab, 739h, 818d, 819b, 825e, 827a, 831a, 832k, 833cd, 851adeh 8871, 894b, 897e, 905d, 949f, 950b, 955i (CHRISTIANITY) not esoteric 626a, 639h, 645d, 729g (see also Economy) opposition to 632ab, 633fg (see also Persecution) revolutionary but conservative 660bg,

874a social, corporate, institutional 624d, 634a, 635-7, 650m, 794f, 819bc (see also Church) supernatural 868b, 870de the Way 803f, 818d, 831a, 839eg, 842b transcends barriers of class, race, etc.
635c, 636f, 745i, 832h, 846b, 849j, 893g, 894c, 895eg, 896d-f, 900f, 901a, 913b, 925d
CHRISTIAN LIFE 93e, 623ce, 629-60, 685-8, 752g-i, 783e, 819a, 825ab, 850a, 851a, 854af, 861f, 862i, 902, 907g, 910c, 911h, 931a, 932a-d, 935f, 942b, 947b, 949f-h, 950b-di, 951cdg, 952gh, 956b (see also Charity, Christianity, Christians, Church, Citizenship, Confidence, Cross, Discipleship, Faith, Family, Grace, Hope, Imitation of Christ, Justification, Prayer, Sacraments, Sanctification, Spiritual Life, Union with Christ, etc.) attests Divinity of Christ 817d attitude to non-believers 925f basis of 640m, 650j, 852b centred on Christ 641ae, 693a, 733b, 735df, 817d, 852b, 930a, 944a, 972g certainty and security of 758d, 799i, 850bef, 854c, 855eh, 856d-f contrasted with pagan life 631d 956d costly and difficult 688a, 694f, 704f, 706d, 733b, 734de, 759b, 801f (see also Cross) earning one's living 660p, 917f, 925h expectant 658a, 670-1, 874d, 882i, 914gl, 915be, 916c (see also Vigilance) following Christ 641ae, 693a, 733b, 735df, 817d, 852b, 930a, 944a, 972g, keeping the commandments 645n, 648 l, 894a, 947d, 956d, 957d, 958c,
959e loyalty to Christ 911h obligations of 645n, 650j, 945f, 947a, 955i, 956d patience and perseverance 657a, 946eg, 965d persecution in 861d redeeming the time 903c, 913c seeking God's glory 862k total consecration to God 745f, 751f, 840ch warfare, struggle 650j worship 614cd, 860b CHRISTIANS 650g, 651e, 817d alteri Christi 895c a royal priesthood 656a, 949g, 950de, 964c at first still practise Judaism 820e, 823c, 825ab, 828b, 831a, 832cdk, 841cdg (see also Judaizers) backward Christians 937d brethren, kin of Christ 86dfg, 386i, 628b, 650m, 697g, 735f, 810e, 930c, 935b called 'saints' 656a, 831d, 842h, 845i, 869a, 906a, 910a calling on the name of the Lord 650g charged with 'hatred of mankind'
963b flee at fall of Jerusalem 716a, 737h liberalizing 864i, 865ef, 866ad, 872b, 875c (see also Liberalism) light of the world 685g like little children 643gl, 706b, 709a, 731c, 735c, 763e living stones 685c, 950d loving one another 636ae, 825b, 826d (see also Charity) members of another 635a-c, 650m origin of name 744c, 833ac, 869a, 951e partake of Divine Nature 636bd, 640h-m, 650k, 931bc, 935f, 952i,

953b (CHRISTIANS) political calumnies against 633fg salt of the earth 685g, 734e sheep (flock) of Christ 657m, 692h, 758d, 799a-fhi, 813d sons of God 650cdj (see also Adoption) temples of the Holy Ghost 635c, 640c, 648d, 873de, 915f CHRISTOLOGY (see also Divinity, Manhood of Christ) acts of Christ—human, divine and mixed 36j and Christian Morality 623af and soteriology 921f and Synoptic Gospels 751a Chalcedon 616i, 628d
Christ and the Cosmos 899d, 910ef, 911ab
Christ comprehensor et viator 627d Christ equal to the Father 695cd, 779d, 781d, 792ab, 906a, 907b Christ's acquired, experimental knowledge 617f, 618d, 622b, 627d-628a, 689e, 730k, 731b, 746c, 750b, 767i, 789b, 937c
Christ's contemplative knowledge 627d Christ's Divine knowledge 695c, 699f, 738ef, 739d
Christ's infused knowledge 627d communicatio idiomatum 788c consubstantiality 781d, 792a-c, 799jk, 801j, 933e eternal generation, pre-existence 360d, 368mn, 535g, 622f, 691b, 748e, 781c, 796f, 799i, 803f, 854f, 909g, 910e, 933cef, 934abq human and divine wills 37a, 628d, 683h, 720d, 792d, hypostatic union 920df, 930f, 933cd Johannine 622c-g, 778g, 779bd, 781a-e, 782a-d, 792, 929c, 930b, 955dg, 957b, 958de, 959d, 964cd, 965de, 966d, 972ce Lucan 746cd mystery of Christ 628a-d of Mark 726cd, 727a, 751a of Matthew 680j, 681af, 682b, 688c, 690g, 693h, 694c, 695bcd, 696b, 697a, 699fg, 701f, 704ab, 705de, 717bc, 718f, 751a
Pauline 316d, 641e-l, 781c, 817c, 831f, 834gh, 840eh, 845deh, 857e, 858de, 893g, 894g, 905ef, 906a, 907a-d, 909g, 910d-f, 911ab, 912b, 914f, 915a, 920d, 925e, 929c, 930a-d, 933b-934b personality of Christ 616di, 622cg, 623a, 628d, 633e, 653c, 907cd Peter Lombard's 617a subordination 746d, 804d, 858e, 952h two natures in Christ 845h, 912b, 930bc, 933c unity of Christ's human knowledge
628a CHRONICLES, Chronicler, see Para-lipomenon
CHRONICLES OF KING DAVID, The 224d CHRONOLOGY 37f, 42b, 64bc, 77h, 79dj, 80ab, 81c, 123-5, 148d, 266c-j, 430b, 674-6, 725d, 739ac, 749a, 750d, 823a, 834f, 844g, 891e, 914c, 929b (see also Regnal Years)
absolute chronology 64b, 123c-f Assyrian 64b, 79d, 123ef, 124e Babylonian 79d, 117kl, 477e Egyptian 79d, 118e, 123e, 140b Greek 123c inadequacy of biblical data 63c, 123b, 163a, 226e, 238hi Ptolemy's Canon of Kings 11c, 123c-f vagueness of ancient dating 676c CHRYSTOSTOM, St John 3e, 5c, 725d on Job 326j on St Paul 668b, 868d on the Church 899g, 900g on the Scriptures 1e, 4a, 7d on the suffering servant 445h uses Lucian's LXX 24a

CHURCH, The 15fh, 40eg, 41e, 85e, 342c, 343d, 384cgi, 386i, 546d, 624d-f, 640c, 649e, 671q, 752f, 756g, 781e, 817a, 819d, 832a, 857 l, 898i-m, 899g, 900a-g, 901a-c, 902a-d, 914cf, 916d, 929c, 966a (see also Communion of Saints, Holy Spirit, Israel, Kingdom of God, Ministry, Mystical Body, Peter) apostolic 81a, 625f, 629-60, 679b, 814-43, 868c, 893g, 898j, 918g, 919f-920c, 972ab autonomy of 535k, 819b, 828a, 832c beauty of 385i, 386i born at Pentecost 86d, 823ab, 844j bride of Christ 85e, 347d, 383afi, 384i, 385hio, 386i, 387ch, 635d, 646d, 854e, 898i, 903d-g, 968j, 971h, 972a Catholic, for all men 448b, 535b, 543j, 549h, 550g, 554f, 636f, 746f, 748g, 754g, 759ab, 767h, 814d, 817e, 819bde, 822ab, 823abc, 832c-k, 833ab, 893eg, 898j, 900e-g, 901a-c, 972ac Christ her foundation and founder 655ab, 854e
Christ her head 749j, 831b, 854h City of God 932b, 939ef, 944c (see also New Jerusalem)
(the) completion, fullness, of Christ 898k, 900acd continuity of development 658b, 826g early 'pneumatic anarchy' (alleged)
639f
(the) Elect Lady 959dfg entered by baptism 650m eschatological problem 655b Eucharistic Body and 653j faith and faithfulness of 385io, 387c, 616cd family of Christ 650m, 754c, 900g (see also Adoption)
Fig-tree and 859h flock of Christ 551h, 657m, 692h, 758d, 799a-fhi, 813d, 820d, 840de founded on rock 657k (see also Peter) grieves over the Passion 469g, 552d (her) heavenly things, realities 941b holy 294b, 385io, 898j household of God 900g, 932a, 935d human element in 635a, 826f, 828a infallible 1ef, 42b, 893g, 919e, 922h invincible and indefectible 348ac, 545r, 657k, 923h, 968cd is Christ 831b, 898m, 900a-d, 906b (see also Fullness, Mystical Body)
(the) Israel of God 5b, 7a, 85e, 86f, 163h, 383j, 404h, 490a, 625e, 657fg, 678e, 692d, 704c, 709f, 728i, 738c, 752f, 819b, 844b, 857i, 859bk, 877a, 897e, 910a, 925c, 950e, 968ij Kingdom of God and 650m 655ab loved by God 383dfi, 384i, 385hio, 386i, 387ch name of 826f necessity of 898m
(the) olive tree of 636f, 859fgh one flock 657m, 799e (a) priestly people 108a, 110b, 114d, 172j, 397c, 403c, 656a purchased, redeemed, by Christ 387h, 817d, 840e, 898i rejoicing in Christ 384i Remnant and 859b
(the) second Eve 811b social, common life of 636, 637, 650m, 932a spread of 485d, 631-4, 639b, 658b, 699cd, 730d, 737g, 743h, 744c, 759b, 767h, 816d, 822a, 823a, 826g, 827b, 830ab, 832ac, 837c, 864h, 870d, 910b, 947c (see also St Paul) teaching authority, magisterium of 1c-f, 2c, 9a-g temple of God 635c, 854e, 875d, 898ij, 900g, 950d, 965d, 972 transcends social, racial barriers 635e, 636f, 893g, 894c, 895eg, 896d-f, 900f, 901a, 913b, 925d
triumphant in heaven 40e, 387h, 545f,

- 546b, 547e, 552a (see also New Jerusalem) (CHURCH) typified in the ark, ship 147f, 650n, 730f (see also Salvation) typified in the Tabernacle and Temple 543j, 548d, 939e unity of 650m, 657m, 806aeh, 810c, 813c, 819ab, 820f, 822ac, 823ac, 825ab, 826d, 833c, 841b, 868b, 870a, 881a, 893g, 895g, 898ijl, 902a-d (see also Mystical Body) (the) vine 635e, 653g, 804gh, 854e, 859h, 879c virginal fecundity of 386j (her) visible centre and Jerusalem 418e, 449m, 450a-g, 462s, 546d, 670 l
 (a) visible organized society 535b, 638b, 655a, 656ab, 706f, 746e, 762c, 819bc, 898j word 'Church' in NT 878e, 880e, 881a CHURCH AND STATE 207l, 289s, 535k, 543h, 545d, 548f, 562d, 571f, 633fg, 660s-v, 704g, 750d, 766d, 861a-d, 921d, 925f, 950f, 970k, 971c (see also Kings, Spiritual and Temporal, Theocracy)
 CHURCHES, House Oratories 81a, 637c, 652g, 820e, 825ab, 837e, 839a, 863g, 951d CHURCHING OF WOMEN 146a, 189k-n, 749g CHUS, see Cush
 CHUSA, husband of Joanna 790f
 CHUSAI, see Hushai
 CICERO, deifies his daughter 393e
 CILICIA 121ce, 269j, 598i, 837a, 895b CILICIAN GATES, The 835ae, 837b, 839c CIMMERIANS 121k, 149h, 491b CINCINNATUS 252g
 CINITES, see Kenites
 CINNAMON 180 l
 CIRCUMCISION 66g, 106e-g, 107, 151h, 155e, 585h, 748g, 749g, 796g, 832c-k, 837b, 841c Arabs and 151h, 165e Christianity and 101a, 633a, 893c, 895e Christ's 617d, 749g, 862km concealment of 562b, 585h, 874b concision 874b, 907f converts to Yahwism and 114h, 115g, 590 Diaspora and 590b divine adoption by means of 110c, 114b, 182c, 302e, 309i, 359f, 471f Egyptian 106f, 230b, 457c flint knives used in 165e, 230b, 236i, 237g grace given in 106g Herodotus on 106f history of the practice 165e, 213a, 230b-d in Africa, Australia, America 106f, 151h, 457c Israel (incorporates into) 106g Moses and 129c, 132d, 213a Moses' son and 165e not practised by Philistines 120i, 244g — in Babylonia 106f
 — in wilderness 106f, 114j original sin and 106g outrage at Shechem 155e, 159f patriarchal covenant and 151hi, 406b privileges conferred by 106f salvation and 847f, 849i, 893eh, 897b spiritual, of the heart 166d, 214d, 456 l, 457b, 829e, 907f, 909e spiritual significance of 106fg, 151hi suppression of 562de surgical concealment of 562b, 585h, 874b, 907f CIS, see Kish
 CISPINE GAUL 567b
 CISON, see Kishon
 CISTERNS 56e, 80h, 175a
 CITATIONS 37h, 52i, 156b, 225e, 960e Jewish method of reference 737i CITIES 80c, 146de, 224c
 CITIUM 487 l
 CITIZEN LISTS, Roll 756d, 944c CITIZENSHIP, Christian, earthly 633g, 660s-v, 736f, 861a-d, 925f (see also Church and State) heavenly 907g, 944c (see also New Jerusalem) CITIZENSHIP, Roman 588f, 598ab, 663b, 665f, 666e, 834c, 837dfh, 841h, 842cf, 844e, 845c, 891a, 905cd
 CITRON WOOD 269i
 CIVILIZATION, history of 45g CLAIRVOYANCE 681c, 720h (see also Seer) CLANS, Jewish 283h, 290gh, 293f
 CLAREMONTANUS, Codex D 22j, 581g, 928b, 952c CLASSES, THE LOWER, competition of slave labour 596e in Palestine 276i, 584k-o, 588d, 596e early converts mostly from 77f, 584o, 588d, 864h, 870d insecurity of 584m, 596e in Roman Empire 77g oppression by rich 421e, 423h, 428e (see also Koine, People of the Land, Poor) CLASSES, THE MIDDLE 584k CLASSES, THE UPPER, see Aristocracy, Capitalism, Rich CLAUDIA PROCULA 721g
 CLAUDIUS CAESAR 73d, 81c, 675de, 833efh, 837h, 839a, 841h, 843h, 863h, 970k CLEANLINESS, next to Godliness 109g, 183 l CLEANNES, Uncleaness 114d, 182d, 183hj, 185ae, 189a, 586a, 728c (see also Defilement, Food) Christianity and 732a, 925b
 CLEANTHES 838e
 CLEMENT I OF ROME, St 14d, 17ah, 18e, 35c, 94a, 633g, 659e, 884e, 908a, 919c, 928be
 CLEMENT VI 35a
 CLEMENT VII, Edition of Vulgate 8e, 28c, 29kp, 30b CLEMENT XI, Unigenitus 10d
 CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA 14d, 17e, 606b, 673a, 724e, 725cd CLEOPAS, Cleophas, Clopas 673b-f, 774bc
 CLEOPATRA 71deg, 275j CLEOPATRAS, the 310g, 312j
 CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE 464e CLERGY, The, pastoral duties 699f respect for 916d virtues required of 656b-f, 660c, 916d, 919e, 920e, 921hi, 922e, 925b, 951f (see also Maintenance, Ministry, Priests)
 CLIMATE OF PALESTINE 56de CLOTHING 144bd (see also Dress, Garments, Marriage) as pledge on loans 219b ceremonial rending of 720g, 740h in the wilderness 214a CLOUDS, God's presence, pavilion, throne 332f, 403a, 755b, 829b (see also Theophany) mysterious to ancients 332f CNIDUS 572b, 843b
 COA 269j
 COALS OF FIRE 373e, 860g
 COCHINEAL AND MANNA 171c
 COCK, Wisdom of the 333d
 COCKCROW 720ci, 739i, 803c
 COCKLE 699bfg
 COCYTES 327j
 CODEX, Codices 21i, 22gi-k, 581c-582c, 662b division and classification 581df families of Codices 22k-23d, 582c-583d naming and enumeration of 581g-582b COELE SYRIA 58e, 122ij, 270d, 563b, 566c, 569cg, 575a, 578c COENOBITES, see Monasticism, Prophets, Sons of COHORT, Roman 722a, 801c COINAGE, Types and Values of 70b, 82h, 83ab, 153d, 705fg, 707b, 711a, 736g, 787a COISILIANUS, Codex 581g
 COLERIDGE, S. T. 606f COLLABORATION WITH FOE 453b, 460b, 462j, 463d, 467a, 550o, 559cd, 568a, 575a-d COLLECTION FOR JERUSALEM CHURCH 866g, 882de, 889a-j, 895g COLOCYNTH 274e
 COLONIES, Roman 598h, 864d
 COLOSSAE 909b, 910a
 Church at 909cd heresy at 909d, 910ce, 911b, 912a, 918g Philemon and 909c, 913d, 926c COLOSSIANS, Epistle to the 641j, 661fh, 781c, 905ef, 909-13, 918g and Ephesians 909ij doctrine of 909dgi
 COLUMBARIA, Roman 863h
 COMETS 681d
 COMMA, The Johannine 583e, 955j, 958e
 COMMAGENE, Moschian 121beh COMMANDMENTS 212f (see also Decalogue, Law) the first commandment 847g the great commandments 213c, 586c, 635a, 660k, 713c, 714f, 736jk, 861e the new commandment 624b, 636a, 640f, 660mq, 695d, 803b, 804i, 955i, 956d COMMERCIAL HONESTY 219d, 371e, 528f, 595e, 596e COMMERCIALIZATION OF RELIGION 711a, 736c, 787a COMMODUS, The Emperor 35i COMMON 732a (see also Defilement)
Communicatio Idiomatum 788c
Communicatio in Sacris 265 l, 274i, 276e, 653d, 875ace, 877g, 888e COMMUNION 636, 637, 652i (see also Fellowship, Union) of Saints 735f, 825a, 879cd, 886b, 893g, 894bc, 895c, 896bc, 897e, 965d (see also Church) sacramental communion 637bc, 644j, 650i (see also Holy Communion) with devils 637b, 653c COMMUNION WITH GOD 367d, 397ef, 591c, 596f, 624c, 636d, 877fg (see also Holy Communion) and hope of future life 342d in sacrificial banquet 111i, 176c, 183bh, 186gh, 642e, 644i morally conditioned 182c-e, 183j, 189j, 191h, 192o, 193g COMMUNISM, Primitive Christian 631d, 636ce, 660q, 817c, 819d, 824c, 825bc, 826d-f, 833e COMMUNITY LIFE, Religious 819d, 825b Essenes 588c of Prophets 252d, 254i, 410c COMMUTATION OF DEATH PENALTY 174dgh, 218ae, 569a (see also Compensation)
 COMPARATIVE RELIGION 855d COMPASSION OF CHRIST 671c, 689c, 690e, 731g, 732i, 753b, 770d, 793d, 800e, 927cd, 929e, 930c, 935c, 936c, 937ab, 944c (see also Sympathy)
 COMPASS POINTS, Hebrew, see Orientation COMPENETRATION, see Prophecy COMPENSATION 110i, 174f, 686d (see also Commutation) to the dead 198c
 COMPLUTENSAN POLYGLOT 8d, 396d, 581e, 583e COMPROMISE 874a, 876c, 877h (see also Liberalizing, Syncretism) COMPUTATION, Hebrew 64b, 124g, 157g, 532d CONCISION, The 907f
 CONCUBINES 151g, 152j, 153f, 154b, 156d, 218f, 245h

CONCUPISCENCE 143j, 145b, 401b, 402e, 645i, 683h, 853abfi, 946h, 948a, 956g (see also Original Sin, Propensity) CONDEMNED, Charity to the 770d CONFESSION OF SINS 114f, 185f, 272i, 294cd, 339e, 345c, 346c, 349a, 469d ff., 654a, 760f, 788fg, 956c at John's Baptism 654a, 683b, 750c general and national 294cd, 297gh mutual 948h sacramental 201g, 340f, 654b, 922e, 948h, 956c (see also Penance) CONFIDENCE, Christian 886c, 887h-j, 936c, 942bc (see also Certainty) CONFIDENCES 85j, 399b CONFIRMATION 639a, 640j, 651cd, 820be, 824f, 830c, 831e, 839f, 937e, 938a (see also Laying on of Hands) and Baptism 651e, 820b matter 651e minister 651e sealing 640j, 650 l, 651e, 886g, 967b CONFLATION OF READINGS 582f CONFORMITY 274i
 CONSENSUITY 154f, 192i (see also Marriage) CONSCIENCE 114c, 317e, 371g, 374c, 397g, 848d, 849d, 861b, 862f-i, 937d, 940h of Job 317e supremacy of 862fhi CONSCRIPTION, Jews exempted by Rome 75c, 585h military age 285n Roman 598f, 722b under Solomon 267h, 269g, 270f CONSECRATION, of Aaron and his sons 180a ff., 182d, 183i, 186b, 187a-m of Bishops 919h, 923c (see also Ministry) of Christ and the Apostles 649e, 653g, 806g of high-priests 112e, 941a of sanctuaries, tabernacle 154d, 941a with blood 187kl, 941a (see also Dedication, Mass) CONSERVATISM, Religious 588a CONSTITUTIONAL CONGREGATION 301e CONSOLATION OF ISRAEL, The 749h CONSOLATIONS, Spiritual 886b, 905d CONSTANCY 398c, 850b, 938d
 CONSTANTINE, The Emperor 26b CONSTANTINOPLE 23c, 318i, 365i, 383a patriarch of 4b
 CONSTELLATIONS, The 322k, 328i, 333d, 525c, 527g, 681d CONSTITUTIONAL MONARCHY, Hittite 119c Israelite 252e, 258d, 264c
Consulenti tibi 15i
 CONSULS, The Roman 567b
 CONSUMMATION, The Final 593c, 671km, 767c, 855eh-k, 881gh, 932d, 954a-e, 967c, 972c (see also Eschatology, Perfection) CONTEMPLATION 397e, 640o, 887e and action 620b, 757a, 920e CONTRACT, Law of 657n CONTRACTORS, Building 276k CONTRADICTION, Law of 87c sign of, 749i (see also Simeon, Stumbling) CONTRITION 349a, 889h (see also Repentance) CONTROLS, Spirit, see Familiar Spirit CONVENTIONAL LANGUAGE (Apocalyptic, Judgement, War) 37gi, 282ff, 487f, 716bde, 962g, 970b CONVERSION 447h, 478bcfj, 480 l, 523e, 546a, 643h, 751i, 752b, 753dg, 760a-c, 830e, 850f, 869c, 870c, 873i, 937e, 950e (see also Repentance) CONVERSION TO CHRISTIANITY 632a-c, 634ad, 643h, 787d, 790ad, 794f, 795h, 805c (see also Paul) and apostasy 831f, 852af breaking up homes 660f, 693d, 758g, 970b

(CONVERSION TO CHRISTIANITY) chiefly of lower classes 71f, 584o, 588d, 694c, 844i, 864h, 870d, 947c difficulties and trials of new converts 632b, 638ab, 852a, 873h, 877h Gentile converts 633, 634cd, 638a, 645d, 651e, 652f, 654f, 660b, 817a, 830e, 832c-k, 833a, 834j, 835a grace of faith 648gl Jewish converts 596g, 632def, 634bc, 637a, 660b, 824f, 825ab, 826d-g, 828a, 830a, 836, 859b, 862a-e, 864i, 865c, 893h, 895i, 896c, 949d, 960f Levitical priest converts 929a motives for 632b-f obstacles to 633bf-i (see also Scandal) Pentecostal converts 631c, 632d, 676g, 819d, 823c, 824f, 825a, 831a whole families converted 650o, 790g, 837eg, 840g, 905d CONVERTS TO YAHWISM, JUDAISM 92o, 93f (see also Proselytes) adherents, God-fearers 590d, 633b, 830e, 832e, 834df baptism of proselytes 650b, 824f circumcision of 114h, 115g, 633b excluded peoples 114h, 448b obstacles to 114h, 448b, 633b CONVOCATIONS, Holy 113ce COOKING, bad cooking justifying divorce 596b kid in mother's milk 175k, 215f offerings 186f
 the passover 113g
 CO-OPERATION WITH GOD, Grace 645e, 648gh, 650a, 653d, 729g, 730abe, 788g, 854d, 857p, 903a, 947b
 COPONIUS 69c, 72b
 COPPENS, J., on the Pentateuch 135j
 COPPER 214a, 268n, 269gi, 285c COPTIC 21e, 25 l, 35g bible, liturgy 4ab, 24a, 25 l-n, 726a, 788a COPYISTS 37c
 COR (Measure) 82de, 267jn, 287k
Corban 371f, 526m, 586g, 660e, 702b, 729e, 732b CORE, Qorah, Sons of 166f, 285ij, 286 ll, 347a, 355c CORE, Rebellion of 129e, 203ghjk, 214d, 327n, 960g, 961d CORINTH 572b, 598h, 602f, 631e, 633d, 665g, 816c, 839a, 844h, 864a-f, 914de immorality at 839a, 864e Jewish settlers at 839a, 864g pro-consul 81ce, 839c Roman character of 864de CORINTH, FALSE APOSTLES AT 864i, 865-6b attacks on St Paul 883bc, 886c-e, 887ak, 888i counter-attacked by St Paul 864j, 871b-872e, 883c, 886m, 887fk, 890a-k, 891j, 892a-e laxity and liberation of 864i, 865efg, 866a, 872b, 875a-d, 888d not a 'Christ party' 865g, 869g not Judaizers 865d prior to First Epistle 864i, 865abhi, 870f CORINTHIAN CHURCH 839a, 864h apocryphal epistles to 661c Apollos and 864i, 866b, 869e 'Christ Party' at 865g, 866b, 869g crisis and pacification 846ij, 883c eucharistic disorders at 652f, 878d-g faction at 654f, 656d, 657p, 864i, 866bce, 867a, 869ac-870a first fruits of 659e incest, unchastity at 654b, 866cd, 867a, 872fg, 886jk lax towards paganism 873a, 888d-f letter to St Paul 864i, 866i, 867bcg, 874c, 875c litigation in pagan courts 660t, 873a social intercourse with pagans 875a-877i (see also Idolothya)

(CORINTHIAN CHURCH) spiritual gifts 866e, 878h-881a (see also Charismata) three envoys to St Paul 864i, 866i, 867h, 870a, 872f, 873a, 882g CORINTHIANS, FIRST EPISTLE 636c, 661h, 662c, 671n, 839g, 864-83, 905e, 906a composition 867d-h date 661f, 866g doctrinal value 868b events leading to 864i, 866g-867c historical and biographical value 868e severe letter 884bc spiritual value 868cd vocabulary 919a
 CORINTHIANS, SECOND EPISTLE 840a, 884-92, 905e Christian paradox 883e, 884d, 885b, 886abl, 887gh, 888bc, 891g, 892c events between the two Epistles 864j, 865a, 883bcg-885cg Kennedy's theory 883g-884g, 886ci, 888dj, 891j St Clement of Rome and 884e structure, composition 883d-f (the) three themes 883d-f unity of 884d-f value of 885ab
 CORN, blight 244b plucking ears of 218o, 696a, 728e (see also Gleaning, Harvest) CORNELIUS, Conversion of 633a, 636f, 724f, 726c, 790g, 819ce, 820fg, 822a, 830e, 831d, 832c-i, 833b, 836dbe CORNER-STONE, Chief 40e, 361b, 437e, 547ghi, 711i, 736f, 826b, 898i, 949g, 950de CORNUSTIBI, see Keren-happuch CORONATION 276h (see also Unction) COROZAIN, see Chorazin CORPORAL PUNISHMENT 174f, 219b, 371g, 372 l, 721h, 809a, 890m, 944b (see also Scourging) forty stripes save one 890m CORPORAL WORKS OF MERCY 302bjk, 400b, 595f, 770d CORRECTION, Fraternal 706f
 CORRIGAN, Dr 30n CORRUPTION, Moral 732h COSMETICS 275j, 660d
 COSMOGONY, see Creation COSMOGRAPHY, Cosmology, see Universe
 COST, Counting the 760a COUNCILS, CATHOLIC 37b, 42c, 617a, 836g apostolic, Jerusalem 101a, 657p, 659b, 661f, 676f-h, 819be, 820d, 821a, 834d, 836, 841d, 893c, 895i, 896c, 945d, 960b, 965b Carthage 15h, 17 l, 661d, 928d, 945d, 952c, 959c, 960b Chalcedon 25g, 616ci, 628d Constantinople II 318i, 365i, 383a Ephesus 971e
 Florence 36a, 37f, 106g, 310e
 Hippo 15fhi, 17 l, 94 l, 928d, 959c, 960c Laodicea 15c, 17k, 952c, 960c Lyons 36a
 Orange 804h, 900e
 Rome 661d
 Toledo 35a
 Trent 1df, 3h, 10d, 15kl, 17 l, 22f, 27j, 28abd, 29r, 36a, 37d, 42bd, 53e, 143i, 223a, 226ab, 272a, 289t, 301d, 396g, 661e, 662f, 726a, 731d, 781c, 788b, 791c, 794c, 795e, 812g, 846df, 849dl, 850 l, 854de, 903g, 910b, 928a, 931b, 945d, 946ce, 950f, 952b
 Vatican 6a, 7d, 9f, 36ac-e, 37df, 42b, 53h, 301d, 402c, 813d, 922h Vienna 3h
 COUNCILS, GREEK ORTHODOX
 Constantinople 15m
 Jerusalem 15m
 Trullan 15m
 COUNCILS, JEWISH, Jabne 310e, 382d

- (COUNCILS, JEWISH) Jamnia 12e, 13f, 14a, 234e, 309c, 365i, 376c, 565d, 568a, 572c, 579a, 678a
- COUNSELS AND PRECEPTS 709cd, 735d, 874f
- COUNTENANCE, LIGHT OF 329i, 347c
- COUNTER-REFORMATION 32b
- COURT, Administration of Solomon 267hi
- COURTS, Courtyards of Temple 268gij, 492ehk
- COURTS OF JUSTICE 269c, 358d, 361f
- Christian resort to 660t, 873a
- Sanhedrin 587b, 720f, 740e, 769de, 887b
- Solomon's 268i, 286kk
- temple tribunal 217ac, 218c
- COUSTURIER, J., Printer 29pp
- COVENANT, The 33a, 99d, 110a, 114bh, 136e, 149a, 162c, 172j, 211f, 212f, 213c, 214b, 219eg, 220b, 223e, 282s, 435c, 439de, 484p, 514m, 544e, 857d (see also Abraham, Circumcision, Joshua, Moses, Noah)
- angels and the 593c, 829c, 909e, 911b, 933a, 934b, 944c
- blood of the 176cd, 642e, 644h, 657g, 720b, 739h, 950a
- book of the 44d, 110be, 128, 163gh, 172i, 173a-175k, 176c, 181h, 211a, 215a, 280g
- decatalogue and 212f, 213b
- deuteronomic 210b, 211, 212a
- made with Abraham 151deh, 406b, 748i, 857d, 894b
- morally conditioned 110e, 172j, 525e, 533h, 534f, 848f, 856f, 914e
- obligations under the 110d ff.
- 'of salt' 184e, 204c, 286x, 734e
- renewal of the 114k, 276h, 280i, 286dd, 287fy, 288e, 297cg-k
- ritual laws essential to the 176f
- sacrifice 106e, 110b, 111e, 176c, 463c, 878f
- Sinaitic, Mosaic 61c, 110b, 176c, 748i, 941a
- superstitious trust in the 114lk, 348e, 415g, 525e, 527a, 528i, 534fgk
- temporal exclusion from 67f, 114h, 448b
- COVENANT, THE NEW 100b, 101a, 418c, 447fg, 450j, 462h, 473be, 489j, 490c, 644fh, 650o, 652b, 720b, 739h, 823b, 852d, 887c, 897c, 927d, 930eg, 931a, 940ab (see also Commandment, Dispensation, Testament)
- and the old 733d (see also Dispensations)
- blood of 176cd, 644gh, 653f, 657g, 720b, 739h, 878f, 930g, 931c, 932b, 940a, 944g, 950a
- Mediator of 646c, 930g, 931a, 932b, 939cg, 941a, 944c
- sacrifice of 642a, 657f
- superiority of 931a, 932b, 939cg, 940ab, 944c
- COVERDALE, MYLES 29fm
- COVETOUSNESS 853df, 913a (see also Lust)
- COWARDICE 741cf, 971h
- CRACKNELS 270l
- CRAFTSMEN, Palestinian 584k
- CRANMER, THOMAS 29f
- CRASSUS 70h
- CREATION, COSMOGONY 35h, 141-3, 333c, 398b, 781c, 782abc, 935a
- a free act of God 115b
- and evolution 143k
- Babylonian epic of 142g
- by, through Christ 910ef, 930b, 933d
- cosmogony of Genesis 32j, 135a, 142g
- doctrine of 142c-f
- ex nihilo* 142f, 560f, 576f, 943a
- from formless matter, Chaos 141bf, 392d, 403a
- God's wisdom in 366k, 368hmn, 397k, 403a, 910ef
- 'in the beginning' 142f
- of animals 141ac, 142c, 317h
- (CREATION, COSMOGONY) of fish and fowl 141a
- of heavenly bodies 141ac, 333b, 946i
- of heavens 141a, 142bg, 147a (see also Firmament)
- of light 141abc, 142bf, 946i
- of living creatures 141a-d, 402a
- of man 137b, 141cd, 143abd, 331b, 397gk, 402a, 838e
- of vegetation 141ac, 142b
- of woman 143bi, 878bc
- of world, physical nature 141a, 402a, 403a, 838d, 954d
- simultaneous 142b, 402c
- Spirit of God in 141b, 403a, 751f
- the six days of 32j, 39b, 42d, 141ac, 142bf, 671v
- CREATION, UNIVERSE, divine conservation of 781c, 910f, 930b, 933cde
- final glory, harmony of 881h
- hymn of 358g
- hymn to Creator 397k, 405ef
- travail and pain of 855eh-k
- joy of 333b
- loveliness of 405e
- new creation 451ls, 646a, 750f, 855ehk
- 900e, 925g, 951b, 966d, 967a, 971h (see also New)
- order of 143a, 333b
- primeval curse on 855i-k
- primeval harmony of 141d, 144a (see also Messianic Age)
- unity and diversity in 404a, 405e
- worships God 766bcd
- CREATURES (see also Living)
- and God 142de, 687bcd, 857m, 930c
- defectibility of 397h
- goodness of all 141d, 142d, 397h, 405a, 877h
- purpose for all 405e
- right use of 104ef, 146e
- spiritual value of 396g
- CREED, Apostles' 86k, 676c
- Nicene 35g, 616c, 933de
- CREMATION 526i, 527k
- ceremonial funeral fires 286 ff., 287b
- of Saul and Jonathan 256m, 284a
- CRESCUS 924e
- CRETE, Cretans 79j, 118g, 631f, 843bc, 918c, 925b
- Caphtor, Keftiu 120h, 525d
- Cerethi and Phlethi 120h, 256k, 259i, 261f, 264a, 542g
- Philistine origins 57d, 120h, 149j, 487c, 525d, 528i
- CRIMEA 491b
- CRISPUS 870a
- CRITICISM, BIBLICAL 3j, 5f, 43bf
- by sound 858g
- (the) church and 5f-6f, 43ef, 45ej, 46d-m, 616bcf, 617a
- exegesis and 43e
- historical etc. 43bcd, 45b
- in England 44j, 45h
- Leo XIII and 6b
- literary, see Higher Criticism
- lower, see Textual Criticism
- Pius XII and 6cd, 37g, 45j, 46d-m
- CROCODILE, The 317h, 334d, 488bkl
- CROCUS, The 439l
- CROESUS 420e, 441a, e
- CROMWELL, Oliver 276d
- CROSS, The 388k, 389q, 742a, 810a (see also Atonement, Crucifixion, Passion, Redemption)
- abolishes the Law 912c, 939b, 940g, 941c
- bearing one's 619f, 624a, 644c, 653a, 693d, 704f, 733b, 734a, 742a, 754g, 851d-h, 852f-h, 853f, 887h, 905f, 911d-f, 951e
- (our) confidence in trial 856g
- enemies of 907g
- foolishness of 870c
- offence, scandal of 633g, 642h, 705a, 733d, 755a, 824c, 825ef, 870c, 897b
- sacraments and 653e
- (CROSS) sacrifice of 183h, 446fg, 642g, 768bc, 849f, 903a, 911bc, 940g, 941d
- (our) salvation 849ce, 930g
- shape of 722b, 813c
- sufficiency of 42e, 893eh, 894cg, 929e, 941bc
- wisdom of 868c
- CROSS-BREEDING, forbidden 192p
- CROSS-BUTTOCK 244i
- CROWN, of justice, righteousness 924d
- Wreath, Athletic 876d
- CROWN OF THORNS 722a, 741f, 809a
- CROWN PRINCE 273n
- hair lock distinguishing 270c
- CRUCIFIXION, The 552d, 562e, 722cd, 742, 771a-772h, 809e, 810, 824c, 907a-d, 958d (see also Atonement, Calvary, Cross, Passion, Seven Words)
- all-sufficing, not repeated 653f, 878f
- breaking of legs 40a, 742ah
- centurion's confession at 622b, 742g, 772b
- Christ carries his cross 722b, 742ab, 810a
- Christ mocked, taunted on the cross 722cf, 742cf, 771ab, 787c
- Christ numbered with transgressors 446f, 722c, 740c, 742b, 768f, 771b
- Christ prays for his executioners 771a
- Christ refuses a narcotic 681f, 722h, 742b, 770d, 771a
- Christ stripped of his garments 742ab
- Christ surrenders his spirit 722e, 742f, 829f
- Christ's dispositions at 742ef, 772a, 937c, 941d, 944a
- Christ's thirst and the vinegar 722e, 742f, 771a, 810e
- curse of crucifixion 218h, 221e, 621e, 811a, 874e, 896f, 907g
- date of 676b-e, 719d, 739ae, 742h, 750d, 768a-c, 802b, 823a
- endured for sinners 850h
- Eternal Spirit and 940h
- (the) executioners 742ab
- (an) expiatory, propitiatory sacrifice 446fg, 768bc, 849fg, 903a, 911bc, 927c, 930e, 940g
- foretold by Christ 619f, 620ace, 621h, 733b, 735f, 739h, 752a, 754g, 755ad, 762d, 764ad, 768c
- (the) holy women at 742g, 776e, 810d
- hour of 83c, 742b
- Jewish ignorance and guilt 825f, 827b, 838f
- mortal sin and 878g, 938a, 942c
- (the) nails 722b, 742a
- numerous crucifixions in Judaea 693d, 742a, 754g, 766d
- Passover and 83e, 113g, 719d, 739ade, 768bc, 823a, 833f, 872g
- penitent thief at 742c, 771b, 810b, 811a
- portents at 722df, 742d, 772ab
- pretext and grounds for 720gh, 721af, 740fg, 741a, 762c, 769de, 771b
- scene of 711g
- severity of God and 849g-i
- shared by Christians 619f, 624a, 754g, 851d-h, 852f-h, 853f, 887h, 911d-f, 951e
- shows God's love 788e, 850egh, 856g
- Simon of Cyrene and 725c, 741b
- superscription, titulus 721f, 722bc, 742ac, 771a, 810b
- (the) transfixion 811a-c
- typified in Brazen Serpent (q.v.) 40ef, 797h, 801h
- voluntarily accepted by Christ 740a, 742f, 766a, 768c (see also Death)
- CRUELTY 633f (see also Atrocities)
- CRUSADES, The 4d, 684b
- CUBIT, The 82b, 147a, 492c, 687c
- in the NT 82c
- of Ezechiel 492c
- CULT (see also Centralization, Liturgy, Ritual, Sacrifice, Sexual Worship, Worship)

(CULT) externalism, formalism 114l, 115b, 183h, 348e, 349a, 378d, 457a, 514in, 517h, 518e, 519a, 527i, 536de, 545ef its importance for the Covenant 176f CUMANUS 74b
CUNAXA, Battle of 122h
CUNEIFORM 21g, 76c, 80i, 117b, 119k, 292d CUP, of blessing 720a, 739d (see also Chalice) of joy or sorrow 710b, 720d (see also Jesus) of wrath 471i, 969j, 970d CURDS 240e, 241k
CURETONIAN GOSPELS 25f
CURIOSITY, God's Gift of 377cf CURSES 55c, 185e, 214e, 219fg, 232a, 306fi, 404a (see also Blessings, Crucifixion, Imprecatory) cursing and blaspheming 175g diverted upon the curser 267f named in 451k on Creation 855i-k on the hanged, crucified 218h, 221e, 621e, 811a, 874e, 896f, 907g set on Mount Ebal 214e, 219f superstitious conception of 373f turned to blessings 267d CUSH, CUSHITES (see also Ethiopia) in Arabia 286bb, 287b CUSHAN 239g
CUSTOM, Convention and Divine Law 109h, 110d
CUSTOM HOUSE 691a
CUTHAH, CUTHA, CUTHAITES 278gi
CYAXARES 121l, 420e, 501n, 537c
CYBELE 271l, 590c, 965c (see also Diana of Ephesians) CYNOSEPHALE, Battle of 567b
CYPHERS, Atbash 459n
CYPRESS TREES 267m, 268d, 403b
CYPRIAN, ST 3f, 14d, 27a, 810b CYPRUS 78b, 79j, 120g, 149h, 268m, 434f, 487d, 598in, 631e, 833ab, 834c, 843b
St Barnabas and 951h
St Paul and 661c
CYRENAICA 122i
CYRENE 572b, 631f, 722b, 744c, 833ab (see also Qir, Simon)
CYRIL and METHODIUS, SS 4b, 26f
CYRIL LUCAR, Confession of 15m
CYRIL of ALEXANDRIA, ST 3e, 939e
CYRIL of JERUSALEM, ST 15c, 17k, 35g CYRINUS, CYRENIUS, see Quirinius
CYRUS 122d, 289ch, 290a, 312g, 352d, 420e, 433a, 441ag, 459b, 543cf, 544a, 548c, 909b, 965c Achaemenid 289c character and policy 67a, 122d, 289dfg, 290abd conquers Babylon 33f, 122e, 289c, 290ab, 292c, 420e, 459b, 461c, 467a-j, 501cmn, 544a conquers Lydia 420e, 441e edict of 67a, 282mn, 287ff, 288ce, 289d, 290a, 292d, 420e, 507j-l, 543c empire of 420e
God's anointed deliverer 67a, 289c, 290a, 427f, 441dfg, 443a-c, 444e, 449k, 469a, 507l, 622b memorandum of 292d-f name of 290a originally king of Anzan 122d, 420e religion of 67a, 441g, 443c CYRUS CYLINDER 290a
DAGON, The Philistine God 244k, 250d, 284a DALILA, Delilah 244ck-m DALMANUTHA 703e, 732g, 793h
DAMASCUS 58j, 64bcf, 65ab, 79d, 120j, 121cdfg, 242k, 267k, 271ce, 276fmp, 277e, 278be, 420b, 427b, 431e, 466l, 526cd, 631d, 676fg, 831af, 891d (see also Aramaeus, Syria)
Ahab's trading concessions in 272f

(DAMASCUS) church in 831af falls to Tiglath-pileser III 121c-g, 277l, 278b, 420b, 427b religion of 119b, 271l, 272f, 274l, 431fi revolts from Solomon 267j, 270d street called Straight 831d wilderness, desert of 272c DAMASUS, Pope 8c, 338a DAMNATION 646h, 788ek, 795e, 951a (see also Hell) the number of the lost 92l DAN, City, Sanctuary of 57f, 64a, 134a, 139h, 150g, 211c, 238ef, 245a-cj, 271c (see also Lais) bull cult abolished 278h from Dan to Beersheba 54d Mosaic priests at 63d, 245d DAN, TRIBE of 159b, 160c, 179b, 222h, 236f, 239d, 241h, 244ae, 245acd, 283u absorbed by Judah 270e location and migrations of 57be reprobate 967b
DANAANS, The 120g
DANCE, DANCING 245k, 259b, 285c, 363j, 386d, 701b Baal, Lord of 271l
David before the Ark 259b, 285c in Roman Empire 603b Salome 701b, 731f
DANIEL, Book of 11d, 14dg, 15ce, 20eg, 33i, 115d, 409c, 494-513 angel interpreters in 592e antichrist and 495n, 504b, 915j, 917c deuterocanonical additions 14dg, 494l fiery furnace 269d four beasts 969b, 970l Son of Man 495m, 503gikm, 504d-g, 621h, 704g, 711i, 720g, 728b, 737h, 738c, 740h, 964de time, times and half a time 968c DANIEL, THE PROPHET 66d, 287cc, 477e, 494b in the lion's den 494c, 502a-f, 513ap-r, 543e interpreter of dreams and visions 417f, 496h, 497l, 500c, 501k DANIEL (Cheleab), son of David 283e
DANIEL, Daniel, the Sage, Worthy 484j, 487q DANTE's Inferno and the Apocrypha 94j DAPHNAE, see Tahpahnas DAPHNE 575f
DARDA, son of Mahol 267l
DARDANIANS, The 149h
DARIC, Babylonian coin, Dariku 285s
Persian 82g, 282n, 285s, 290p, 293i DARIUS I, Hystaspes 67d, 122f-h, 282n, 285s, 288i, 289h, 501n, 502b, 505b, 510a, 543cd, 544a, 545k, 555c Behistun inscription 67a, 122f, 530v, 543d, 543d invades Greece 289c, 543c, 544a religion, religious policy of 67a, 122fg reorganizes empire 58d, 122f temple rebuilt under 288c, 291h, 292b-h, 543-4 DARIUS II 295e, 507b regulates feast of Azymes 67a, 293c DARIUS III, Codomannus 122h, 288f, 298d
DARIUS, the Mede 495ce, 501ac, 501m-p, 502b, 507b, 509f DARKNESS (see also Light) outer darkness 689e the power of 769c the works of 861fg
DATHAN AND ABIRON 203ghik, 327n, 349e, 359b DATHEMA 865a-c
DAUGHTER, for Grand-daughter 271a, 275f, 276a, 286w Virgin Daughter, Metaphor 425a, 456l, 458a DAUGHTER of JERUSALEM, The 770d
DAVID 63e, 124l, 265c, 282saa, 284, 285, 313b, 406d (see also Nathan, Samuel, Urias) (DAVID) Absalom, Adonijah and 63l, 260h-262e, 807b achievement of 63g-i, 248kl acquitted of atrocities 284y age of 129b, 257d, 267a anointing of 253cd, 257e, 284b ark and 63h, 178c, 259a-c, 284ijlm army organization 264a, 284e, 285l beauty of 253e biographical sources 253c blessing the people 284m census of 57k, 225e, 226d, 264c, 283s, 285abn, 705e character of 63ei, 253d, 254h, 255aim, 256d, 257m, 258cd, 260abeg, 261a, 267bd chariots, horses of 284v city of 267d, 562c, 806b court memoirs 224d, 260a court, ministers of 63i, 224d, 259i, 284ew, 285p Cretan and Philistine mercenaries of 63h, 259i, 261f death of 267d, 285t genealogy and posterity of 247l, 282en, 283bef Goliath and 38b, 55a, 93k, 226e, 254d, 263d, 284z harem of 63h, 267ae, 285p Hiram and 267m, 284k inspiration of 34e, 35ah, 936a Jerusalem becomes his capital 55d, 57f, 63h, 125c, 215a, 224c, 234e, 239b, 248k, 258ef, 283c Jonathan and 254e-j, 255g, 257b-e, 260b, 263b, 312d, 534d lament for Abner 258k, 315b lament for Jonathan 56e, 224b, 257b, 313b law provisions ignored, altered 112g, 114j, 284j, 285d liturgy, Levites and 112g, 282i, 283qee, 284noq, 285g, 287n (see also Music) Messianic promises to 63e, 102k, 159h, 248l, 259e-e, 265a, 270e, 282d-gs, 284t, 342e, 343c, 350c, 356b, 362c, 397a, 411c, 417g, 421d, 425r, 426ji, 427h, 462p-t, 544k, 735j (his) mighty men of valour of 284dez, 285l name of 79j, 253c, 447g numerical equivalents of name 680f old age of 267ac outlawry of 55e, 63g, 342d (see Adullam) palace of 284k parents murdered 255d Philistines subdued by 238i, 244a, 259g, 280v poet, musician 63i, 253cd, 254ab, 257bk, 258k, 262c, 263fgi, 285e, 313ab, 336, 337, 525g reigns at Hebron 55d, 63g, 124l, 257d, 258e, 283e, 284bch, 285t religious devotion of 63i, 248k, 259a-e, 284u, 285s, 413h Saul and 63fg, 226e, 253c, 254a-i, 255be-j, 256, 257a-c, 263b, 267e, 350a (the) shepherd 343e shewbread eaten by 255b, 696a, 728f sins and repentance of 38d, 63i, 102f, 225b, 260e-h, 264c, 282f, 284y, 342e, 345e, 349a (see also Urias) Solomon and 267b-d, 285cq-t Temple and 63i, 112b, 225b, 259ce, 284sv, 285ac (his) tent, tabernacle for the ark, 178c, 284l, 286a thirsts for the water of Bethlehem 284d trophies of 276h type of Christ 102q, 259a, 282s, 822d wars, conquests, empire of 57bk, 63h, 120l, 134c, 156afg, 223ef, 234c, 258eh, 259g, 260c-h, 265l, 267j, 270c, 284bv-z, 447g, 466f, 493hi, 524b writings of 11f
(at) Ziklag, Siceleg 284f
DAY, The Hebrew 83c (see also Liturgy)

DAYBREAK, Hour of 83c
DAY OF YAHWEH, THE LORD 33gh, 291a, 309o, 328c, 412ef, 413a, 423k, 429c, 433e, 438eh, 488f, 522d-i, 523cj, 527i, 530s, 533ch, 541d, 542ce, 545d, 554ab, 555i, 558d, 594e, 670d, 705c, 715b, 722d (see also Judgement, Messianic Age, Sunday) cosmic calamities, changes at 429c, 435bcfg, 438d, 439h, 522d, 523dj 528g, 533ce, 554a-c date not revealed 622b, 627f, 670m, 671d, 717bc, 737b, 738ef, 746c, 758e, 762d, 767cf, 822b, 914dj-i, 916ac endless light 530s, 545d, 551i, 554a-c the day of Christ 762de, 765c, 886d, 916c, 917a, 948e DAYS OF THE WEEK, The 83d DAYSMAN, see Arbitrator
DAYSPRING, Christ the 545d, 547f, 548d DAYSTAR, 333d (see also Lucifer) DAWN 334d
DEACONS, THE SEVEN 631d, 639g, 659a, 660hq, 815c, 817a, 820d, 828ab (see also Ministry)
DEACONESSES 863f, 921i DEAD, The (see also Defilement) baptism for 881i Egyptian Book of 319a offerings, sacrifice to 219e, 305b place, state of 102d, 137e, 320km, 323j, 324i, 3251, 430c, 473f, 595a, 881f (see also Paradise, Purgatory, Sheol) prayers and sacrifices for 102d, 115f, 400b, 560e, 579e raising the 90c, 91c, 226g, 271j, 274d, 619bc, 620d, 626e, 691f, 730jk, 753b, 800a-f, 832b, 840b remembrance of 944e respect for 400b
DEAD LANGUAGES, Worship in 24f DEAD SEA, The 54d, 55fg, 56a, 150e, 152c-e, 229g, 234e, 273n, 277e, 403b, 493g, 524bd, 554c asphalt, bitumen of 150g, 152c, 164c Dead Sea fruit 392b ford by the Lisan 150e DEAF MUTE CURED 732e
DEATH 333c, 397j, 400g, 405c, 736i, 826f, 906c, 930ce baptismal death to sin 851d-h, 852ef cancelling Law 852e-g conquest of (by Christ) 435h, 881h, 934f, 935c ends chance of repentance 402b eternal, spiritual death 367h, 368t, 388c, 389cf, 402e, 596f, 671r, 690a, 756b, 792cd, 797j, 851k, 878g, 935c, 937e, 964h equality and inequality in 320m, 327j fear of 77f, 326c, 720d, 740a, 769b, 935c first and second 964h, 971dfg (the) firstborn of 326c inevitability of 380a, 387b, 400g longing for 320n, 3211 peace, sleep, night of 320m, 330m, 339f, 341f, 342d, 348d, 403g, 691f, 932cd, 935e, 936ab, 969j personified 964e, 966f
 Sin, Satan and 192d, 307b, 389cf, 397g, 402e, 403e, 471b, 4801, 485f-k, 486d, 645j, 797j, 882c 946h (king of) terrors 326c DEATH OF CHRIST, The 647bc, 722def, 758f, 772ab, 810f, 817e, 930cde (see also Atonement, Burial, Crucifixion, Seven Words) ends old dispensation 736f, 742g dying prayers 343d, 345b, 722de, 742ef, 772a, 829f infinite source of grace 894e necessary 788d
 proclaiming, showing forth 653abc redemptive 735i, 921f (see also Redemption) sacrificial 446fg, 647c, 768bc, 849f, 903a, 911bc, 927c, 930e

(DEATH OF CHRIST) voluntary 696d, 710a, 719f, 736b, 739f, 740c, 742f, 766a, 768c, 799c, 829f wounded side, water and blood 649e, 653gh DEBATE 319i ff.
DEBLATHA, see Riblah
DEBR 285z, 492f (see also Holy of Holies) DEBR 57e, 62d, 80cdh, 224c, 228bc, 233ab, 234f, 239g (see also Qiryath-Sepher)
DE BOOR FRAGMENT, The 607k DEBORAH, DEBORAH 61e, 63bc, 238deik, 240a-c, 241acf, 313b, 351c, 410b palm tree of 240b song, canticle of 20a, 54i, 61e, 63d, 222g, 224c, 238k, 240a, 241
DEBORAH, Rebecca's Nurse 155f DEBTS, enslavement for 175b, 216b, 296e, 321o, 445g, 525b, 584mm moratorium on 175i, 194h remission of 194h, 216a security for 219b sins as 686i
DEBTORS AND CREDITORS 175f
DECALOGUE, The 44e, 45m, 109h, 110e, 128, 135q, 172f-173c, 212f, 213ab, 214b, 270h, 514o, 732b, 861e Babylonian, Egyptian parallels 45m, 61c, 172k Book of Covenant and 45m, 181h Christ reinterprets 685g-686e descriptive title to 77a homiletic expansions of 162f, 172f, 173bc, 213a human solidarity and 412h, 462m Mosaic origin of 45m, 61c, 162f natural law and 110e, 391e original form of 172f, 213a Sabbath law 61c, 173b superior to all ancient laws 61c, 1721 tables of stone 176e, 181b, 214bc, 887a variant divisions of 172g DECAPOLIS 58efhj, 584j, 619c, 684d, 690c, 730ghi, 732ef DECISION, VALLEY OF, see Josaphat DEDAN 433d, 487m DEDICATION (see also Corban, Feasts) of life to God 845d, 860b of Solomon's Temple 269a-e of the walls 298e
DEEP, Apsu, The Great, Cosmic 141a, 142bg, 147a, 160h, 2681, 309o, 328hi, 332ig, 333b, 403, 528b, 968ik DEFENDING THE FAITH 951a (see also Apologetics) DEFILEMENT 199f, 2031 (see also Holiness, Uncleanliness) by divorce 219e
 by sexual processes 85k, 103a, 189k-n, 324e, 586a, 617d, 681c, 691f, 730j, 749g (see also Purification) contagious 185e, 186h, 189cgh, 191cj, 544h, 586a leprous 732c moral 732c with the common people 588d, 751i with the dead 185b, 189i, 193j, 204gj, 208f, 270j, 280k, 285c, 309o, 471g, 544h, 586a, 714g, 832b, 833f with the Gentiles 584c, 585a, 692h, 808b DEFILATION 218j
DEFORESTATION, Re-forestation 56g, 584f DEFICATION, of Babylonian Kings 149i of dead relatives 393e of Greek heroes 598q of Herod Agrippa 1 833f of Pharaohs 287aa, 388e, 393e, 598q of Roman Emperors 393e, 562d, 597h, 622a of Seleucids 562d
DEIOCES THE MEDE 308i, 309a
DEISTS, The English 604c, 621a

DELAY IN DELIVERANCE, The 438d, 448a, 469fh, 968b (see also Parousia) DELILAH, see Dalila DELPHI 600i, 837e, 839c inscriptions at 81cd DELTA, The 163b, 164a, 279g
DE LUBAC 39i DELUGE, see Flood, Noah
DEMAS 913d, 924e
DEMETRIUS I 68ef, 122k, 511a, 560b, 561c, 565e, 566b-569b DEMETRIUS II 68f, 1221, 560b, 569c-e, 571cdf DEMETRIUS, the Christian 959ei
DEMETRIUS, the Historian 23h
DEMETRIUS, the Silversmith 839j, 883c DEMIGODS, Heroes 598q, 891f DEMOCRACY 597g, 601h, 602d in Israel 251d, 252ce, 258d, 260c, 264d, 584j DEMONIAC POSSESSION 87b, 619c, 626e, 690c, 705d, 727f, 730ghi, 733f (see also Exorcism) DEMONOLOGY, see Devils, Satan DEMOSTHENES 838d
DENARIUS 83a, 705f, 709g, 712f, 760d
DENDERA 176g, 177b
DENIS OF ALEXANDRIA, St 17i, 36i, 959b, 962c
DENIS OF CORINTH, St 17d, 35d
DEODORANTS 681f
DEPENDENT RELATIVES, Duty to 922c DEPORTATIONS 120e, 121efgm, 291i, 303b, 420c, 909b (see also Exile) from Judah and Jerusalem 66ad, 67h, 121i, 122b, 278e, 281gk, 463dfa, 469c-e 477efg (see also Nabuchodonosor) from Samaria and Galilee 65be, 121f 278d-i, 291e, 290bn, 303b, 420c, 426n of Benjamites 283aa DEPOSIT OF FAITH 9a, 805d, 919de, 921b, 922h, 961a DEPOSITS 175c, 185g, 923d
DERBE 835e, 837b
DERELICTION, Cry of 3b, 343d, 605b, 722d, 742cef, 746c, 772a DERVISHES 2711
DESERT, see Wilderness DESIRE, Inordinate, see Covetousness, Lust DESPAIR 478gh, 721b DESPOTISM in Persian Empire 311cd in Roman Empire 597gh, 598ab, 601h of Herod the Great 70, 71 of Solomon 64a
DESTROYER, Destroying Angels 113f, 169dg, 279i, 331h, 395b, 483ag, 877c, 967b DESTRUCTIVENESS 218dj
DETACHMENT 2c, 272d, 274i, 660kn, 687ab, 690a, 697g, 700a, 706d, 709def, 731c, 736m, 752h, 758d, 760a, 762e, 825b, 868c, 944c DETRACTION 948c (see also Slander) DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS (NT) 16c, 17defh-i DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS (OT), 23g, 25n, 92d, 226i, 388a, 396b Anglican attitude to 15b-j, 92b Apostolic and Sub-apostolic Fathers and 14d attested in NT 14b
 Greek orthodoxy and 15m
 Jerome and 15efhj Jews ultimately reject 13cdf, 14e languages of 19f listed 11d meaning of term 11d, 13ab, 14efg, 15cde patriotic inconsistency 15b-j DEUTERO-ISAIAH 49k-m, 406f, 419eg, 420e, 421ab, 441-7, 472f DEUTERONOMY 12b, 44d, 127, 132g, 135deop, 210-22, 232a, 267e characteristics and style 33a, 210ce, 211ef, 212g, 215a, 216b, 217e Christian application 211h

(DEUTERONOMY) consistency with rest of Pentateuch 210e, 211abc, 212bc, 213a, 219c Josiah's reforms and 135bdoq, 211a, 280gi law code 135pq, 215-19e law of one sanctuary 132g, 135de, 211cd, 215a-dg, 216c, 217e, 219f, 280g Mosaic authenticity 48d, 135bdeq, 211ab, 222a, 280g
 (the) name 210b papyrus fragments 77ac post-Mosaic additions 135pq, 211b, 213ad, 214ce, 215eg, 216ac, 217cd, 218bdjk, 219dg, 220bc, 222af Priests and Levites and 217e refers to rest of Pentateuch 130ef threatens exile 212g, 220b, 280g DEUTERONOMIST WRITINGS 44df, 135o, 265e, 270 l, 278f DEVELOPMENT OF DOCTRINE 12d, 18f, 39lm, 40g, 84e, 86g, 102d, 104c, 137def, 211g, 397m, 400b, 780f, 805d DEVILS, Demons 92j, 137e, 144ad, 540t, 593a, 643f, 653c, 718h, 856j, 904c (see also Exorcism, Fall, Satan) Asmodeus 302c, 304e, 305j Azazel 191fij
 Babylonian demonology 593a
 Beelzebub (q.v.) 729cd Belial 272h, 593a blind to Christ's divinity 730h, 750ij Christ's Messiahship recognized by 727fg, 728h, 730h disease and 88b, 705d, 757f, 759a, 872g, 891g driving away 179f (see also Exorcism) dwelling in deserts 306c, 429f, 475e, 683c, 697f, 750i, 757g idols, pagan gods as 393d, 475b, 637b, 653c, 693b, 877h limited powers of 302c miracles of 91a personal names of 593a returning sevenfold 757g satyrs, wild animals 429f, 475e theoretical faith of 947e torments 730h unleashed for a while 690c, 730h DEVOTION TO DEATH, Destruction 211g, 272g, 273n (see also Ban) DEW 56e
 D'HULST 6a
 DIADUCHI, see Successors DIANA OF THE EPHESIANS 81f, 839j, 883c, 964q, 965c sacristan of 81f temple of 81f, 600f, 839j, 964g the great θεά, θεός 81f DIARIES 814c
 DIASPORA, see Dispersion
 DIATESSARON, Tatian's 25d-g, 26ad, 81a, 607i (see also Arabic) DIBELIUS M. 609a-c DIBLAH, see Riblah
 DIBON 57i, 80j, 233f, 273 l, 430dei, 435i
 DICHOTOMY OF MAN 916e DICTATION 37c, 77f, 581c, 661h, 844d, 870a, 927e (see also Pauline Epistles) of Scriptures by God 34e, 413c DIDACHE, The 14d, 17hj, 639c
 DIDACTICISM OF SCRIPTURE 223e-g, 301bfj, 308fj Didaskaleion of Alexandria, The 3e, 5a Didaschalia, The 93i DIDRACHMA, The 705fg
 DIDYMUUS THE BLIND 3e DIES, see Jemima
Dies Irae 92o, 541d, 542e DIGGING THROUGH WALLS 328f
 DIMON, see Dibon
 DINAH 59h, 155e, 158b, 309j
 DIOCLETIAN 8b, 309c Edict of 17h
 DIODORUS OF TARSUS 3e
 DIONYSIA, The 576c
 DIONYSIUS, Denis, the Areopagite 838g

DIONYSIUS EXIGUUS 617c, 674b DIONYSOS 959f
 DIOS 267m
 DIOTREPHES 658d, 959ei
 DISCERNING OF SPIRITS 879ab, 958a DISCIPLES, The 657d, 756c, 760a, 765b, 774a, 833d, 834b (see also Apostles, Seventy-two)
 (the) beloved disciple 776f (see also John) false Messianic ideas among 754g, 762de, 764d, 767c, 774b (see also Apostles) flock of Christ 758d friends of Christ 720e, 758c
 (the) holy women 710b, 742g, 754a, 757ab, 772a, 773b Pharisee disciples 742h, 772c pluck corn on Sabbath 218o, 696a, 728e would-be disciples 690a DISCIPLESHIP, Christian 685gi, 704g, 730b, 752g-i, 756b, 797i, 813ef, 818bd, 819c, 826f cost, demands of 690a, 733b, 734ad, 735df, 760a, 763gh, 767e reward of 735f kindred of Christ 697g self-surrender of 752h, 760a, 765a, 767a DISCIPLINE, Church 689d, 699f, 706f, 781i, 819c, 886j (see also Excommunication) DISCORD 948ab (see also Corinthian Church) DISCRETION, Years of, see Age DISCRIMINATION 404e
 DISCUS THROWING 575e DISEASE 190a-g, 397h, 402e (see also Destroyer, Lepers)
 bubonic plague 168b, 279i devils and 88b, 705d, 757f, 759a, 872g, 891g cattle 168a Job's 317b, 320h psoriasis 190bc scab 168b, 190b sin and disease 690e (see also Death) skin diseases 689b DISINTERESTEDNESS 660m, 840f
 DISMAS 771b
 DISOBEDIENCE 145a, 238m, 272g, 470f DISPENSATIONS, Eras, Aeons 715b, 899b the Christian 77h, 674b, 709e, 720g, 852fg, 957a, 971ef from the Law 696ab, 752d, 852e the old and the new 36a, 101b-d, 102p, 366g, 462h, 642b, 653k, 671bc, 678a, 685bh-686e, 693df, 699e, 700d, 705a, 715b, 717a, 733cd, 736f, 737d, 738c, 746b, 747bd, 783def, 786d, 894b, 896d, 927b, 931a, 932a, 933ab, 944c DISPERSION, Diaspora, The Jewish 8a, 12b, 13ac, 71e, 75, 122m, 388bc, 389g, 398a, 403cd, 404acd, 428o, 442c, 444g, 445e, 448i, 450clp, 451s, 453c, 470a, 523j, 545p, 550o, 584bd, 588e-g, 589ac, 682g, 796i, 823c, 828ab, 833b, 835a (see also Septuagint) autonomous communities of 588f city centres of 68a, 588e commerce and 75a, 588ef influence of Hellenism on 589g Jerusalem, the Sanhedrin, and 587ab, 588f, 831a language of 588e, 589c relations with Gentiles 584cc, 588g, 590b spread of Christianity and 14c, 737g, 909b, 914b, 949d writings of 589g
 DISPERSION OF HUMAN RACE 32 l, 147e DISPOSITIONS, Importance of Interior 79h, 1141, 115h, 146a, 183j, 184bc, 187d, 192d, 285s, 325i, 348e, 349a, 370d, 371g, 378d, 397cd, 404c, 423be, 437i, 449cdf, 451n, 457a, 478j, 514n, 517h, 518e, 519c, 523c, 536e, 545ef, 549f, 642e, 685k, 691b, 729gh, 730a, 731b, 732h, 737kn, 752i, 758b, 762e, 925b DITTOGRAPHY 283e, 285j, 286hh, 287t, 480f, 486x, 489d, 492k, 493th, 581b

 DIVES AND LAZARUS 327j, 584k, 761ef DIVIDER, see Bastard DIVINATION, among the Philistines 423j Babylonian 79h, 443p by a pythical spirit 837e, 905d by dreams (q.v.) 550m by ephod 238g, 242 l, 245a-c, 247j, 252 l, 255d by lots 231b, 236h, 252d, 370j, 532b (see also Urim and Thummim) by magic 192s, 193c, 217f by Scriptures 563e by stars 443p
 by teraphim 106h, 154m, 155f, 254c Greco-Roman 600ij with a cup 157k
 DIVINITY OF CHRIST 3b, 40h, 271j, 604f, 620bcg, 622a-f, 628c, 640o, 641a-j, 662c, 680j, 681af, 682b, 688c, 690g, 693h, 695b-d, 696b, 699g, 701f, 704ab, 705de, 717bc, 718f, 726cd, 727c, 728bfh, 730f, 733df, 736f, 738ef, 740h, 742fg, 743g, 746cd, 748ej, 749e, 750bl, 751i, 753abh, 754f, 760ac, 763f, 765a, 766cf, 769e, 776d, 781a-e, 782a-d, 783, 791a, 792, 793h, 795i, 817acd, 829j, 831f, 832h, 833b, 834gh, 840eh, 845deh, 857e, 858de, 871a, 905ef, 907a-d, 911a, 912b, 915a, 920d, 925e, 927c, 930a-c, 933c-934b, 936c, 955d, 957b, 958de, 959d, 964cd, 965d, 972ce (see also Christology, Incarnation) and the Resurrection 881f
 'Christ' for 'Yahweh' in NT 641fh, 694e, 746c, 749e, 801i, 817d, 824b, 826b, 831d, 840h, 858e, 877bc, 907d, 933f, 934b, 951d, 952i, 953i evidenced by miracles 730f, 732g, 733f, 751e foretold or implied in OT 14b, 339a, 340b, 347d, 352d, 421d, 427i hidden from devils 728h, 730h, 750ij lumen de lumine 933d manifested at Transfiguration 733d primitive preaching economic 817c, 824c, 825e, 829f proclaimed at his Baptism 727c, 750c Divino Afflante spiritu, see Pius XII DIVISION OF NORTH FROM SOUTH, see Schism DIVORCE 38e, 42e, 100b, 110h, 219a, 403e, 680i, 686b, 708b-d, 735b, 761d, 763e, 873hi bad cooking as grounds for 596b evils of 400b Hillel and Shammai 686b, 708bcd Jewish grounds for 596b, 735b (a) Jewish male privilege 596b, 686b, 735b mixed marriages and 289k, 294e-i (the) Matthean exception 708b-d, 735b
 Our Lord and 42e, 100b, 110h, 143i, 686b, 708b-d, 735b, 761d, 763e Moses and 686b, 708c paganism and 602b, 874b Pauline privilege 654i, 660f, 873hi remarriage after 219a, 761d Roman law and 735b separation a mensa et toro 654g, 708e, 761d, 873hi DJEBEL QARANTAL 683e
 DJEMET-NASR CULTURE 117ab DOCETISM 769b, 778g and sex relations 145a DOCTILITY 660kl, 735c
 DOCTORS, MEDICAL, see Physicians DOCTORS OF THE LAW 85k, 586d, 617g, 672d, 750a DOCTRINE, see Dogma
 DODANIM 149h
 DODO, Dodai, the Ahohite 243f, 284de

DOEG 255ej, 336, 349b, 822d DOGMA 634a, 648ej, 851j, 919e, 921b, 922h, 944e and morality 623a and Scripture 84bc, 85i, 86gh, 616i-617b DOGMATIC FACTS 1f
 DOGS 242gh, 451n, 687f, 703b, 732d, 761e, 907f hierodules, sodomites 218n (see also Prostitution)
 'is thy servant a dog?' 275d oriental scavengers 275j DOK, fortress of Jericho 568b, 572d DOME OF THE ROCK, Moslem 264e, 268j DOMESTICATION, see Animals
 DOMINATIONS, Dominions, Angelic 909f 910e Domine, non sum dignus 689d, 753a DOMITIAN, The Emperor 633g, 776g, 966g, 967c, 969cg, 970kl DONATISTS, The 580f, 794c
 DOORKEEPERS OF TEMPLE, The 280j, 281i, 283ee, 290k DOR, The Land of 57g, 58cf, 62a, 233cg, 427g DORA 572a
 DORCAS 819a, 832b
 DORIANS, The 120m
 DOSITHEUS 310g
 DOTAN 139e, 156i, 274 l, 309dgh
 DOUAY, Doway 29b, 36c
 DOUAY, Rheims-Doway Version 29-31, 36d, 659d, 782ab (see also Rheims) American Text (1934, 1941) 29ci, 30fiklopq, 31ab Anonymous Edition (1791) 30f authority of 29f AV's debt to 29o
 Benziger's Red Letter Bible (1943) 30p
 Baltimore Bible (1899) 30o
 Cardinal Farley's Bible (1911) 30b Cardinal Hayes' Bibles (1919, 1929) 30mp Cardinal Wiseman's NT (1847) 30k Catholic Board Bible (1807) 30hi Catholic Family Bible 30e Challoner and AV 30bc
 Challoner texts (Early) 29c, 30b (return to) 30cg-31a Challoner text (Late) 30b-fi, 31a Challoner's revisions 29c, 30bcf Confraternity Edition of NT (1941) 31b CTS Gospels 30n current texts 29c, 30cjk current variant readings 30 l-q Denvir's text (1836) 30j
 Dr Arendzen's Edition (1947) 30q
 Douay Bible House NT (1941) 30p
 early printers 29ikpq enriched the English language 29no errors and omissions, in current text 30m-q first edition of OT 29bfcq
 Fr Carey's Edition (1935) 31a glossary of strange words 29n Gregory Martin's original 29beh-jk Hay's Bible (1796) 30fi Haydock Bibles (1811-14) 30 eik Husenbeth's edition (1853) 30e in America 30filn-p in Ireland 30dij in Scotland 30i Layman's NT (1928) 30n
 Liverpool Edition (1816) 30i MacMahon's editions (1783, 1791) 30jfkno original preface 29hl-n original title page 29k
 Philadelphia Bible (1790) 30f pocket edition (1898, 1950) 30n preceded AV 29f Protestant Irish Edition (1820) 30h Psalter 29o
 pulpit edition (1898) 30n Stereotype Edition (1825) 30jl style 29hno, 782ab

(DOUAY) Syers' Bible (1813) 30g Troy's Bible (1816) 30i
 Vaughan's NT (1896) 30n
 Vulgate (why made from) 29m Washbourne's Bibles (1900-31) 30o Witham's revision 29b, 31c Worswick's edition (1812) 30fi DOUBLE PORTION 218g, 273d, 283c, 944c (see also Birthright) DOUBLEDINDEDNESS 946f, 948b
 DOUBLETS, Duplications in Scripture 36i, 38b, 696e DOUBT 318k (see also Resurrection)
 DOUGH-OFFERING 203b
 Doves 147bc, 184c, 185f, 189n, 692h, 711a, 749g, 787b symbolism of 384g, 683b, 727c, 750fi DOWRY 59h, 175e DOXOLOGIES 328g, 330h, 332f, 341a, 342a, 346f, 356b, 359b, 527f, 591c, 640o, 863k, 886g, 901c, 952g to Christ 640o, 857e, 944e, 951d, 954g, 961g DRACHMA, The 82hi, 83a, 290p, 705f, 760d DRACO 328i DRAGON, land or sea monster 353b, 467i, 488ab myth 494el, 513no of Egypt 488ab (see also Crocodile, Rahab) place of dragons 347c DRAGON FOUNTAIN 295f DRAMA AND BIBLE STUDY 3i
 Greek and Roman 603b Hebrew drama or dramatic poetry 33bd, 318f, 382fkn DREAMS, divine revelation by 157bcjl, 242h, 310c, 311a, 312f, 330f, 404b, 414c, 496h, 497 l, 500c, 501i interpretation of 157bjl, 496h, 497 l, 500c DRESS (see also Clothing) at worship, 'Sabbath best' 155f, 284p, 752c Christianity and 833g, 840f, 950h classical pagan 589f, 603a, 878b exchanging 312d
 Jewish 580o
 Joseph's coat of many colours 155h man forbidden woman's 218i origin of clothing 144bd our Lord's 203e, 691f, 722c, 742ab, 810c woman forbidden man's 218i working tunic and tunica talaris 155h DRINK-OFFERING 155f, 180g, 360i, 907e DROPSY 759d
 DROUGHT 271gjk, 272e, 554f
 DRUMMOND, J. 607hi DRUNKENNESS 371d, 372jl, 402d, 425e, 437de, 540n, 601g
 DRUSILLA 842d
 DRUSUS 73c
 DUALISM 289d, 293d, 443c, 599e, 649e, 866f, 922a, 963c DUMB, Curing the 692b, 696e, 757f DUNG FUEL 481e
 DUNGHILL, The 320h, 360g
 DURA-EUROPOS 25d, 81a DUST, cast on head 320j shaken from feet 692h, 731c, 834k DRUMVIRS 837f
 DWARF MALLOW 274e
 DYES 177a

EA, The God 278i
 EAGLE 222a, 333c, 670 ln, 671k, 762f
 St John's 776b
 Roman 670n
 EAR-PIERCING 216b EARRINGS 155f
 EARLY RISING 40f, 602g
 EARS TO HEAR, He that hath 698b, 729fg EARTH AND WATER TRIBUTE 308h
 EARTH, Mother 320g, 405b EARTHLY-MINDEDNESS 153r, 944c

EARTHQUAKE 545i, 554b, 715c, 722f, 723a at Theophany 837g, 944d EAST, Facing 269d, 554c (see also Orientation) EASTERN TEXT OF NT 22kl, 23a-c, 25en, 582e, E-BABBAR 280k
 EBAL, Mt 21 l, 55c, 131e, 214e, 219f, 232a, 237bf, 789c EBED-MELECH, see Abdemelech EBERSBERG MONASTERY 4c
 EBIONITES, The 778g, 836b, 862c
 EBONY 269i
 ECBATANA 289c, 292d, 295b, 302b, 304e, 309a
 ECCLESIASTES 135d, 313d, 314bhi, 315c, 376 ff.
 ECCLESIASTICUS 2a, 313d, 314bh, 315e, 396-408 canonicity of 11d, 13c, 14d, 15e, 396c Christian glosses 396g, 403acd Church book 396bg date of 314h, 396h, 406h Ecclesiastes and 376e Hebrew colophon 396bh, 408b Hebrew original rediscovered 396c Isaiah's integrity attested by 421b Messianic hope in 397a, 404d, 406e primary and secondary recensions 396bd-g, 397a, 398-408 passim prologue 12d, 23i, 396dhi, 398a Proverbs and 365i, 396i, 397d, 403ah (in) Rabbinical literature 396bc secondary additions inspired 396g ECCLESIOLOGY 932 (see also Church) ECLIPSES, see Sun ECONOMY, in Morals 274i in Teaching 33h, 479b, 641a, 670f-j, 671y, 687f, 698c, 702d, 817a-d, 824c, 825e, 826c, 829f, 833b (see also Revelation Progressive) of Palestine (NT) 584f of Salvation 859i, 863 l, 933d (see also Salvation, Soteriology) ECSTASY 34c, 63d, 252d, 254i, 271kl, 275g, 410cd, 412a, 414d, 462g, 489d, 553b, 834f, 856b, 891cef, 893g (see also Baal, Sons of Prophets) EDEN, GARDEN OF 39h, 143b-g (see also Paradise) four rivers of 137h, 143bg, 397b, 403d location of 143bceg trees of 143f (see also Tree) EDEN, Village of 526d
 EDER, Flock Tower of 155h
 EDESSA 801e
 EDIFICATION, Christian 635c, 639c, 862gh, 875d, 879e, 880c-e, 890d, 961g of others 949g, 950eh EDISSA (Esther) 311d
 EDNA 306a
 EDMOD, Edomites 57k, 58bdg, 61b, 140a, 150f, 153jr, 214a, 218k, 238 l, 239dg, 241d, 259gh, 269g, 270c, 273dmn, 275e, 277b, 278b, 279c, 309h, 362h, 406i, 430e, 431a, 433c, 439h-k, 449ji, 466h, 478d, 487adm, 489k, 522i, 524b, 526cel, 556b, 564e aboriginals of 283a conquered by David 134c, 259g, 269g, 284v, 350c, 529a EDMOD-ISRAELITE FEUD 114h, 153j, 204p, 212c, 287hl, 289b, 431a, 439h, 466h, 471i, 478e, 489k, 526cg, 530hr exclusion from covenant 448h forcibly Judaized 58g, 70b, 487d, 590d Idumaeans and 70b, 466h
 King, Rulers listed in Genesis 134c, 155afg, 156f land of 54e, 56c revolts 153r, 265j, 270c, 287a, 530g seize lands of exiled Jews 66e, 448a, 449 l, 478e, 489k wisdom of 466i EDRAI 205h
 EDUCATION 371egj, 372hl, 374a, 403g,

589a, 617f, 688a, 690f, 823c, 826b (see also Teaching, Schools) (EDUCATION) art in 3i athletics in 602d home influence, tradition in 213c of slaves 602c OT in 660c
Pagan 602cd
Wisdom and teaching 400a EGERTON PAPYRUS 776c
EGLAIM 430h
EGLON, King of Moab, 232d, 233ab, 239h EGLON, Tell el Hesi 57e, 80i
EGYPTIAN WAY 837d, 838ab EGYPT, Egyptians 59g, 60, 63a, 118-122k, 149i, 150c, 164b, 214c, 218k, 219f, 238j, 267g, 269gj, 287aa, 432, 464a, 465cd, 477def, 478, 488, 545k (see also Cambyases, Copts, Joseph, Mizraim, Moses, Nebuchadnezzar, Nile, Pharaohs, Plagues, Ptolemies, Rahab, Zoomorphism) art, culture 129a, 176h brick-making 166b brook, river of 57b, 269e, 436e, 493i burial, embalming, and the after life 157b, 161b, 339f Calendar 118e, 123e, 172k, 140b cherubs at Dendera 176g, 177b, 268e childbirth posture 164b Christ in 520bc, 681g, 682c chronology 118e, 123e, 140b, 172k (see also Sothic Periods) circumcision in 230b, 457c contempt for shepherds 158c conversion foretold 432e-q cubit (common and royal) 82b Diaspora in 75a, 122m, 388bc, 389g, 453c, 464ad, 470a, 550o
division of month 172k
excluded from covenant 114h, 448b geography of 170a, 214e God's treatment of 388i, 392c-e, 394-5, 465b-d horses, chariots 217d, 269j ignorance, ideas about age 129a, 161e intrigues against Assyria 277k, 432a, 437i, 438a-h, 477def iron and copper mines of 269g Israel in 78a, 107, 125d-f, 151e, 164b, 217d, 309f, 351a, 519e Jewish dispersion in 75a, 122m, 388bc, 389g, 453c, 464d, 470a, 550o, 682q land tenure and taxation 158e language 118g linen 177a, 432c mercenary troops 465bc obelisks 268k oppression of Israel 163ab, 164a ff., 342a Palestinian, anti-Assyrian intrigues 277k, 279cdo, 280o, 281b proverbs, wisdom, writings 267i, 316ef, 319a, 365g, 370e, 372a, 432d psalms, poetry of 313i, 335c, 358g religion 60e, 118cf, 142c, 157d, 158e, 163c, 172b, 212g, 287aa, 333d, 388e, 392dh, 393eh, 465c, 483bd, 598m, 600c (see also Zoomorphism) reproach of 228e, 230c shaving 157c slaves in 60b spoiling the Egyptian 38d, 164h physique 484m
Rome and 598i, 749b useless ally against Assyria 66a, 79d, 121fgi, 279d, 412c, 420d, 438bc, 456e, 469f, 471h versions of NT 582e, 583a writing 118b xenophobia 60a, 118i, 157j, 158c EHUD, see Aod
EIGHT, symbolic of New Creation 951b EISLER, R. 607m
EKRON, Egron, see Accaron
EL 105f, 155b, 591c
EL ELYON 105cf

EL SHADDAI 105f, 151i, 154b, 155f
ELA, king of Israel 64f ELAH, Ela 266e, 271d (see also Terebinth) ELAM 117bd, 121bchk, 149k, 150ef, 291i, 428o, 433g, 466n, 505b (see also Elymais) ELATH, Aila 65d, 278b
EL-BATEHA 783c, 794ae
ELCANA 114i, 249ab
ELDAD AND MEDAD 201c ELDERS, Ancients, The (see Ministry) in exile 289a of the Apocalypse 966a (the) seventy 201ab, 410c traditions of 702a ELEALE 430ef
ELEAZAR 179a, 205b, 237a, 249d, 283o, 492n, 511f, 943e apocryphal priest 93c son of Dodo 284de, 287i the Maccabee 566a the Martyr 576d, 642f
the Zealot 74d ELECTION, Elect 136e-g, 137f, 149d, 282s, 285g, 525e, 528i, 646g, 670i, 716cd, 738ac, 794f, 795h, 801i, 834j, 856f, 869a, 870c, 874a, 899a, 923cf, 925f, 950a (see also Predestination) and the gift of Faith 915b eternal 857jk favouritism and 857i
God's freedom in 857hilm, 834f, 859k Judaism and 592b, 595e mystery of 115i, 136g, 149e, 212g, 857bhj, 859b number of the elect 688a, 709i, 712d, 718g of Christians 794f, 795h, 845i, 857b, 931a of Israel 61c, 108a, 110a, 115i, 138e, 149acde, 163fg, 211f, 282st, 312a, 404a, 646f, 845i, 857h of the apostles 806d sealing of 967ab temporal 845i, 857j ELECTRUM 480cf
ELEMENTS OF THE WORLD, The 643f, 912a ELEPHANTINE, Jewish colony, temple 67a, 78c, 555k papyri 20eg, 78bc, 82g, 83g, 288h, 289gj, 292b, 293c, 295e rescript of Darius II 67a, 293c ELEPHANTS 93c, 566a, 735e ELEUTHERIUS 777b
ELEUTHEROPOLIS 58g, 527a
ELEUTHERUS, The River 569d
ELHANAN, son of Jair, see Adeodatus ELI, Heli, the high-priest 179a, 249-250c, 283o, 411d ELIAB 283b
ELIACHIM (Joachim), high-priest 308c, 309e, 704c ELIAKIM (Joachim), King, see Jehoiakim ELIAKIM, son of Helcias, Hilkiyah 434b-d ELIAM, Ammiel 283e
ELIAS, Elijah 271g-272di, 273fg, 282i, 406f, 411ad, 413fh, 414a, 415e, 747f assumption of 272d, 273gh, 287b, 348d, 756b (the) drought and 226g, 271gi-m, 272e, 948i, 968c prophets of Baal and 64g, 271kl, 418g (and the) Remnant 272c, 859b sons of the prophets and 272g, 273g, 410ef bewails destruction of high places 112d, 211c, 272b builds an altar 112d, 211c, 271i character of 102f, 271g, 272c dooms house of Ahab 272c, 275h (see also Naboth) Elisha, Eliseus, the servant of 272d, 273gm, 275c forty days' fast 683c invokes fire on would-be captors 273f, 756b

(ELIAS) letter to Joram of Judah 287b mantle of 272d, 273fh, 682e, 943e miracles of 88a, 226gh, 232g, 271hll, 273fg, 415b, 751c, 753b, 969a miraculous cruse of oil 271h, 274ag, 751c miraculously fed 271gh, 272a, 969a (on) Mount Carmel 226gh, 265k, 271k-m, 272b, 574d, 857p name of 271g one of the Two Witnesses 146h, 390c, 968c raises the dead 271i, 274d 753b second coming of 273g, 397a, 406f, 580, 593c, 619f, 671tu, 694f, 705c, 722e, 733d, 742f, 747f, 750e, 756d, 784c (see also John Baptist) sudden appearances of 271g theophany at Horeb 272b (at the) Transfiguration 35f, 619f, 733d, 755a, 774b ELIAS BAR SINAJA 776g
ELIAS LEVITA ON THE CANON 11e ELIASIB, Eliashib, the high-priest 67h, 289jo, 294f, 295j, 296j, 298d, 299cf ELIASIB, the Priest Treasurer 289o ELIEZER, and Rebecca 59h
ELIEZER, of Damascus 151c ELIEZER, son of Moses 171j
ELIEZER THE PROPHET 282i, 286mn ELIHU 153c, 317fm, 330e-332, 334f
ELIM 61a, 171a
ELIMELECH 246i, 247ad
ELIOENAI 283f
ELIPHAZ THE TEMANITE 156c, 317c, 318aj, 321a, 323n, 325a-e, 327i-o, 331b, 334f
ELISHA, Elisa, Alashiya 487i ELISEUS, Elisha 64g, 272cd, 273g-kmm, 274a-275dg, 276no, 406f, 411a, 413h, 414ab (see also Gehazi, Naaman) anointing of 272d anoints Hazael 272c, 274i, 275d call of 271g, 272d character of 274chk children cursed by 273j death of 276no Elias' mission continued by 273g, 274ad, 275cg, 276o fiery angelic escort of 274i house in Samaria 273j Jehu and 272d, 273k, 275g, 411a miracles of 226g, 232g, 273him, 274ad-fhjk, 276o multiplies the loaves 274f name of 272d raises the dead 274d relics miraculous 276o sons of the prophets and 273ghj, 274ek, 410e widow's oil multiplied 274a ELISHAH, Elisa 149h ELIZABETH, St 745i, 747df, 748gi, 749h (see also Visitation) and B.V.M. 85i, 747f, 748f ELIZABETH, wife of Aaron 166f
ELNATHAN 280r
Elogium, The 841i, 842g, 843g ELOHIM 133ad, 135n, 155b, 164h, 181a, 284k, 320e, 341b, 347d, 362i, 591c pagan gods 934b plural of majesty 79c, 105f princes and judges 347d saints and angels 155b, 406e, 934bf sons of 320e, 333b, 356b substituted for Yahweh 133ad, 245d, 320e, 335f, 351b, 352b ELOHIST DOCUMENT (E), The 44df, 46b, 135ikno ELTAQE, Eltekeh, Battle of 121i, 279g
ELALAEUS OF TYRE 278d
ELYMAIS (Elam) 304b, 565e, 577g
ELYMAS, Bar-Jesus 654b, 834c
EMALCHUEL, the Arab 569f
EMATH, see Hamath
EMRYO 323b
EMIM, The 149g, 150f
EMISSIONS, Nocturnal 191b, 198b

EMMANUEL 84i, 86k, 375d, 418d, 420b, 421d, 425p-t, 426, 462f, 681a, 684a, 748c, 971h alleged to be Ezechias 426 l (a) deliverer 426ij diet of 41g, 426cdghk land of 426lf, 427c Messiah 426afhl modern interpretations 425q, 426cg-l
 (the) name 426bfj occasion for the prophecy 425r, 426ij traditional interpretation 425q-t, 426a-i virgin birth of 426abf EMMAUS 58g, 560b, 563ef, 568b, 774, 775b EMOTIONALISM, pagan religions 599a-d, 600d Emperors, Roman 768d, 962g, 970k, 971c
 Caesar's birthday 641 l Caesar's household 905e, 908c entitled Augustus 842g worshipped 393e, 562d, 597h, 633f, 641 l, 704a, 839j, 842g, 858d, 963b, 964gh, 965ac, 969ce EMPIRES, in Daniel and Apocalypse 495g, 497ij, 498a-d, 503bgh, 504a-c, 505a, 506d, 970k ENAC, Enacim, Anak, Anakim, sons of, 57d, 202d, 214b, 232e, 234df, 254d (see also Giants, Nephilim) ENALLAGE, Homiletic 'We' 934b, 937e, 942ad ENCAENIA, see Feast of Dedication ENCRATITES, The 94i, 862c ENCROACHMENT, see Boundary Stones ENCYCLICAL LETTERS 898c-f, 909d, 955d Papal, Episcopal 845a
 ENCYCLOPAEDISTS, French 604c
 END OF WORLD 377, 378, 670, 671, 715ab, 716, 717, 908a (see also Consummation, Eschatology, Parousia) ENDOR 57h witch of 253a, 256ef ENDS AND MEANS 848g ENDURANCE, see Patience, Perseverance ENEGLAIM 493g
 ENEMESSAR (Sargon) 303b
 ENEMIS, gloating over 372o OT and Christian attitude 686e, 860g pagan, Platonic attitude to 860g ENGADDI, Engedi 58g, 150f, 286 ll, 384f, 403b, 493g, 681f ENGANNIM 55b, 275i, 283r
 ENGLAND, Prayer for 354d ENGLISH BIBLICAL VERSIONS (see also Authorized, Douay, Knox, Rheims, Versions) Bede's 4c, 29e before Rheims 4c-g, 29d-g Beza-Tomson 29f
 Bishops' Bible 29f
 Confraternity Edition (1941, 1948) 31bc
 Coverdale's 29fmo defects of heretical versions 29gl English Hexapla 29p Erasmus 29f
 first-printed text 29f Fr Lattey's Westminster Version (1935-49) 31c Geneva Bible 29fmo
 Great Bible 29fo
 Kenrick's Bible (1849-57) 31c
 (Mgr) Knox's version (1945, 1949) 29r, 31c Lingard's Gospels (1836) 31c
 Matthew's Bible 29f Nary's (1718) 31c never wholly forbidden 29el no Catholic AV until KNT 29r original tongues translated 31c Protestant's abuse of Catholic versions 29hmo, 36d Psalter 29o
 Spencer's Versions (1898, 1901, 1937) 31c style of 29no

(ENGLISH BIBLICAL VERSIONS)
 Taverner's 29fm
 Tyndale's Bible 29fmo
 Wyclif's Bible 4d-f
 ENGLISH COLLEGE, The 29bghk, 30a EN-HAKKORE, see Spring of Caller ENLIGHTENMENT, Spiritual 732i, 782d ENNOM, see Hinnom
 ENOCH, Henoch 146ch, 390cd, 406al, 929e, 943b assumption of 146h, 273g, 348d, 756b in apocryphal writing 390c one of the Two Witnesses 146h, 390c, 784d, 968c ENOCH, THE BOOKS OF 92h-j, 348c, 500c, 504g, 584c, 590f, 592d, 593e, 595a, 690c, 963a, 970b
 1 Peter and 951b quoted in Jude 94k, 960ce, 961e vision of the Son of Man 92i, 594a, 964d ENOSH 146f
 ENTERPRISE, Prudence in Commercial 381c
 ENTIN or Yantin-hamu 117 l ENVY 400g, 948a
 EPAENETUS 863g
 EPAPHRAS 659e, 907e, 909cd, 910b, 913d, 926c EPAPHRODITUS 659e, 907e
 EPHAH, Midian and 153f
 EPHAH MEASURE, The 82d, 134b, 185f, 192s, 425d, 493a, 528f, 548b, 699d EPHESIANS, EPISTLE TO 641j, 898-904, 905ef, 907e authenticity of 898gh, 909j Colossians and 898b, 900b-d, 904bf, 909ij date 661f, 898b, 905e, 949e destination 661c, 898c-f, 899a doctrine of 898h, 909j (an) encyclical 898c-f 1 Peter and 949ce style, vocabulary 898h EPHEsus 81f, 661j, 631e, 632a, 666a, 816ac, 819a, 820f, 839ac-j, 840c-f, 844 l, 863h, 864e, 881j, 883c, 886bc, 898bc, 909bc, 918c, 964g (see also Diana, John, Paul) Asiarchs of 81f, 816a magic, divination at 81f, 839h, 964g St John at 776g, 777g, 778e, 781j St John's tomb at 81f, 778e silversmiths of 81f, 632a, 882f, 883c town clerk of 81f EPHOD 179c, 242 l, 249j, 252 l at Nob 178c oracle 179b, 238g, 242al, 245a-d simple 179b
 EPHPHETA, Ephphatha 732e
 EPHRA, see Ophra
 EPHRAIM (mount) 238k, 240bd, 241g, 243f, 245bq (city) 240g, 241f, 517f, 545ikpr, 550jo (the Patriarch) 157e, 158g-i, 283i
 (the region) 569ae
 EPHRAIM, Ephramites 55g, 57fg, 58c, 158h, 235a-c, 238k, 239h, 240d, 241g, 242aj, 243 l, 245h, 271d, 277h, 283xy
 EPHRAIM SYRYS, St 3e, 24h, 25ef, 581f
 EPHRAIMI RESCRIPTUS, Codex C 22j, 581fg, 582a, 863m EPHRATH, Ephrata, wife of Hesron 283c EPHREE, see Hophra EPHRON 64e, 565c, 579e
 EPHRON THE HITTITE 153d EPIC HISTORY 32h
 EPICETUS 602b, 870f EPICURUS, Epicureanism 601b, 602f, 838cdfg and Eccles 376j, 377e EPILEPSY 88b, 705d, 733f, 755c, 762a EPILUCHNIUS PSALM, The 363a
 EPIMENIDES 838e, 925b
 EPIPHANIUS, St 15c, 35g, 672h, 673a EPISCOPATE, see Ministry
 EPONYMOUS ANCESTORS 149f, 159a (see also Genealogies)

EQUALITY, Inequality, of Man 320m, 404a, 950h ER, Her 156k
 ERA, Christian 77h, 674b, 957a, 971ef (see also Dispensations) Egyptian, Sothic 118e, 140b
 ERASMUS 27j, 29f, 583e, 945d
 ERASTUS 839j, 863j, 866h, 882f, 924f ERECH 291i
 ERIDU 268 l
 ERROR HAS NO RIGHTS 595e
 ESARHADDON 121ij, 124c, 278g, 280c, 287u, 291e, 304a, 322b, 538m ESAU 136f, 140b, 153jkqr, 154aq, 155c, 283a, 392b, 466i, 525g, 944c rejection of 857h-k wives of 153p, 154c, 156b ESBAAL, see Ishbaal
 ESCAPISM 633f
 ESCHATOLOGY 40h, 353c, 533ce, 535b, 550b, 554abc, 593c, 594c-595c, 670, 671, 689e, 929c (see also Apocalypse, Apocalyptic, Consummation, Day of Yahweh, End of World, Judgement, Future Life, Last Days, Messianic Age, Resurrection, Rewards and Punishments, Parousia, Signs, Woes) and fall of Jerusalem 625e, 670, 671, 914j, 915d conventional language of 487f eschatological Messianism 593ef eschatological school of critics 655b, 670b in Ecclesiastes 376g, in Ecclesiasticus 400g
 'Interim-Ethics', 655b, 660a of Daniel 495ghn, 508e of Isaiah (q.v.) 419f, 435-6 of Micah 533cef, 535abkl of our Lord 621c, 625de, 670, 671, 767b-i, 916ac (see also Parousia) of St James 947de of St John 957a (see also Apocalypse) of St Paul 715b, 855e-k, 861gh, 874d, 877c, 922a, 924a, 932b-d, 934b, 942bd, 944d of the Petrine Epistles 353c, 950bc, 951c-e, 952gh, 953f-g, 954c-f, 957a of Zacharias 545d, 550b, 554ab the End already come, realized 625ef, 630c, 650j, 652i, 670c, 671a-m, 715b, 932bc (see also Feuillet) ESDRAELON PLAIN (see also Jezreel) 55b, 57h, 58cdh, 269g ESDRAS, EZRA 45b, 67gh, 93b, 224ab, 281i, 282m, 288b-299g, 543c, 545ik, 546d, 968c author (alleged) of Malachias 555b canon (formation of) and 11e, 134b, 585e genealogy 283n Jewish limit to canonicity 11e, 13c law read by 11e, 12b, 67g, 113lm, 130ef, 135fg, 289h, 297e, 584c Nehemias compared with 289ln Nehemias' relation to 67gh, 125g, 288bc, 289fi-r, 293a, 294d, 297be, 298g, 555c priestly descent of 112e, 293a purpose of his mission 293b reformation of 67h, 114k, 289 l, 588d, 555c, 588d (the) scribe 289r, 293a, 586d synagogue possibly founded by 589a writings and memoirs of 224f, 282o, 288e, 289g, 293e, 294c ESDRAS, EZRA, BOOK OF 288 ff. (see also Nehemias) Aramaic documents 20ceg, 67a, 78c, 288fgh confession of Esdras 294cd Day of Atonement and 113 l Feast of Tabernacles and 113j Paralipomenon and 125e, 224a, 282l-a, 287 ff., 288g, 290a royal decrees (authenticity of) 78c sources of 224f
 ESDRAS 3, Apocryphal Book of 92b,

93b, 94k, 288bi, 590f, 593e ESDRAS 4, Apocryphal Book of 11de, 13e, 92bi, 595a, 670e, 966g ESHCOL, Wady 202d
ESHMUN 278i
ESHTAOL 57f, 244ae
ESSENES 376e, 378b, 588c, 592a, 650b, 748q, 862bc, 873q ESTHA 750h
ESTHAMO, Eshtemoa 283g
ESTHER 310bcm, 311b-g, 312bcf ESTHER, BOOK OF 224b, 310-12 archaeology and 79h, 310k Babylonian elements in 79h, 310i, 311bd canonicity of 11d, 14de, 15c corruptions of text 310h, 311f Greek text canonical 226b, 310e inerrancy and historicity of 226b, 310kl, 311c inspiration of 310fj irreligious character of MT 310g-i, 312c (the) note to 310dg original language and form of 310f-h repetitions in Greek text 310h versions of 310d-j, 311c, 312d Vulgate and DV dislocations 310dn Xerxes I in 122h
ESTIUS, on the Pauline Epistles 5e
ETAM 244hj, 283fh, 286f
ETHAN, Iduthun, Jeduthun, sons of 283g, 285gh ETERNAL, meaning Pre-existent 397i ETERNAL LIFE 397j, 560d, 622d, 623g, 649a, 733b, 734d, 756f, 806e, 846c, 849d, 850d, 851k, 855g, 887i, 925a, 955de, 958f grace and 834j ETERNAL PUNISHMENT 52h, 396g, 397j, 400b, 560de, 646h, 689e, 706d, 718b, 734d, 870f (see also Hell, Punishment)
poena damni 917a
ETERNITY 964b
ETHAI, see Ittai
ETHAM 60e, 170b
ETHAN, the Ezrahite 267i, 283b, 356b
ETHANIM (Tishri), The Month 269a
ETHBAAL 271f, 276g
ETHICS 104e (see also Morality)
ETHIOPIA (Cush) 129c, 149i, 201e, 271c, 352d, 420d, 431kl, 528i, 538m, 542im, 830e Bible in 26e, 788a conversion of 26e dynasty XXV of Egypt 279g Ethiopian physique 484m
 language 19i
ETHIOPIA LITURGY 4a
ETHNOLOGY 5a, 44c, 45f, 46h
ETRUSCANS, The 599i, 601k Etudes Bibliques 6e
ETYMOLOGY, Popular OT 146a, 149o, 164de, 171f EUCARIST, The 624d, 637bc, 640h, 649e, 652-3, 687f, 701d, 768c, 774c, 779e, 820cc, 822a, 825ab, 828a, 833d, 840b, 905f, 938a, 944f, 972f (see also Blessing, Bread, Chalice, Holy Communion, Mass, Melchizedech, Real Presence) Agape and 637c, 652f, 660r, 878cdh, 880e, 961d celebrant, minister of 657c, 659d discerning the Lord's Body 653bc eschatological reference of 652i, 653ae extension of the Incarnation 649e, 652b, 653q giving thanks in blessing 269d, 652g, 720a, 731g, 768c, 793e, 794a institution of 100b, 624a, 644f-j, 652bcdg, 653f, 719f-720c, 739gh, 768c, 778h, 780bf, 803a, 825a, 878f
 (the) mystical Body and 794b, 795e lamp before 186a necessary for salvation 795e our Lord's teaching 619d, 624d, 644f-j, 652b, 653aghi, 720c, 731g, 768c, 793a, 794

(EUCARIST) our supersubstantial bread 686h pagan mysteries and 652ce pledge of resurrection 652a, 653ei post-resurrection meals of Christ and 652i prefigured by the Manna 163h, 394c, 652b, 653dhj, 794d, 795abe, 965a, 969a Protestant heresies 652c, 653afj sacrament of life 649e, 653ij, 795ce sacrament of love 652b, 653d sacrament of Unity 637b, 652a, 653dj, 795h, 806h, 825a, 866e, 877ef, 878e St Thomas Aquinas on 405f, 637b the Christian Pasch 720b types of 163h, 171c, 184d, 272a, 386i, 394c, 395f, 642e, 644i, 652ab, 653dgj, 683c, 720b, 731g, 794de, 795abl EUNICE 660e, 835d, 918d, 923a, 924b EUNUCHS, excluded from Israel 218k, 448bc, 830e for the Kingdom of Heaven 708f harem chamberlains 275j meaning only ministers, officers 281i, 463c, 830e Queen Candace's 5a, 39b, 820bg, 830e, 832c EUODIA 908a
EUPHRATES, the Philosopher 890d
EUPHRATES, The River 116-22, 143g, 147a, 154m, 229a, 237f, 291i, 309a, 405a, 406b, 427c, 456e, 550g, 598i, 970e EUPOLEMUS 567b, 575d EUROPE, classical civilization 597-98ko, 599-603 invades Egypt 120f Eusebius 3e, 8b, 26b on NT Canon 14e, 15c, 17ij Onomasticon 430g
 on the Apocrypha 94k EUSTOCHIUM 2c
EUTYCHUS 840b
EVANGELISTS, Evangelism 826c, 830b, 833ab, 840h (see also Philip, Preaching) EVANSON, E. 604f EVE (see also Adam, Fall) creation of 143bi, 878b first sinner 189m, 397g, 403e gratitude for parenthood 146a meaning of name 144d serpent and 340c
 special punishment of 145b temptation and sin of 144, 145ab tempts Adam 144b, 320i
 (the) Second, see Mary
 The Church 811b
EVENING STAR 333d
EVENINGS, The Two 186a EVERLASTING, see Hebrew Idioms, Eternal EVERLASTING ARMS, The 222i EVIDENCE, Law of 174d EVIL 109b, 397h, 690d (see also Devils, Fall, Sin) abetting, applauding 847i done that good may come 848g evil inclination in man 645i (see also Propensity) eye 400g non-moral 397h problem of 92el, 99e, 285b, 317e, 339f, 342e, 346b, 348d, 353a, 365f, 372o, 376f-ho, 388i, 389g, 397h, 457g, 539d, 590f, 671x, 699bfgh, 700c, 847g, 855e, 857bp (see also Job, Suffering) resistance to 562g, 692h, 720e, 740c, 860g, 861b, 950i, 969c EVIL-MERODACH 122b, 281k EVOLUTION, Theory of 42b, 143k (see also Development) of man's body 137b, 143kkm of religion 44bc, 45f, 79i, 104gh, 135b, 163g, 165b, 172i (see also Wellhausen)
EXAMPLE, Good 734e, 736m, 825b, 858e, 907e, 920e, 924b EXCLUSION FROM ISRAEL 169f, 184h, 186hi, 199f, 203c, 218k, 246h, 270j, 448bc, 654b, 704d, 752i, 797bc, 827b,

830e, 872g, 894b (see also Excommunication) (EXCLUSION FROM ISRAEL) barriers to conversion 114h, 448f EXCLUSIVENESS OF ISRAEL 237c, 289r, 299b, 470b, 584e, 587f (see also Judaism) EXCOMMUNICATION 270j, 654b, 704d, 706f, 797bc, 864j, 866d, 872f, 886jk, 892a-e, 894b, 921c, 925h (see also Exclusion) causing sickness 872g, 892c minor 917f
EXECUTION, Places of 771a EXEGESIS, Biblical 3e, 5-6, 39-42, 43de, 59c (see also Bible Study, Forms, Inerrancy, Interpretation, Magisterium, Moral Problems) at worship 101f (see also Lectionaries, Sermons) Benedict XV and 32j Catholic liberty in 6g, 9gh, 39b, 42bdh, 46dklm, 47de, 53i, 135t, 139i, 225c, 301f eschatological exegesis 40h guiding rules 5a, 32i, 39i, 40gik, 41, 42gn, 46hj, 101e, 142a, 339b, 383c Leo XIII and 9fg, 32d, 39k, 42e of prophecy 33e-g our Lord's 3b, 551j, 751bc, 766ef, 774b, 775b patristic and mediaeval method 39i, 40cg, 42dg Pius XII and 9h, 32cfj, 41df sacramental 40h scientific 1gh, 3e, 5abd, 6a-d, 42h, 225c scribal, rabbinic 5a, 38b, 388, 394a, 406a, 584c, 586e, 588a, 850e theological conclusions from text 39f EXEMPTION FROM MILITARY SERVICE 75c, 218d, 585h EXILE, The 66ef, 122b, 268a, 278e, 281gk, 308e, 339g, 358e, 462d, 477ef, 524c, 545i, 682b, 940o (see also Deuteronomy, Deportations, Deuteronomy, Ezechiel, Jeremias, Restoration, Return) Assyrian captivity 66e, 278e, 283m, 303bd, 464a, 519cd, 588e causes of 66d, 212g, 289f, 477g, 478c, 528i, 549f conditions in Babylonia 66ef, 79f, 281k, 289a, 290b, 478fgi, 448c, 461a-d, 464a, 584e, 588e, 589a conditions in Judaea, 66e, 289b, 291c, 292i, 473cd, 477fg, 488d deaths in 290g effects, influence of 12b, 20c, 44g, 66g, 114k, 289r, 584e, 585d, 586c, 588e, 589h Ezechiel and its duration 481ad Jeremias and its duration 66e, 290a, 459m, 461c, 472f, 476b Jews adopt Aramaic during 20c location of exiles 66f, 79f, 289a, 478f, 480b non-assimilation of Jews 293c, 584e, 588e number of exiles 281g, 289a, 290m reluctance to return 66f, 79f, 290c EXODUS, The 119h, 120d, 349c, 351ac, 353b, 354ae, 360h, 392b-f, 394-5, 404d, 525g date of 60, 78a, 123b, 125a-c, 158d, 163a-e, 226c, 228abd, 230gh, 231ef, 233de, 235cd, 238hi, 268a Egyptian geography and 170a route of 60e second Babylonian 441afn, 442h, 444g, 445s typical interpretation of 40h, 42g, 950c wonders, miracles 40h, 60ae, 78a, 88a, 163d, 169h, 170, 176e, 229g, 395d (see also Plagues) EXODUS, THE BOOK OF, name of 162c substantial Mosaic authorship 162d, 176g, 177abfg EXORCISM, Casting out Devils 88b, 689g, 690cd, 692b, 727fg, 730ghi, 731cd, 733f, 743f, 755cd, 756d, 757ef, 837ef, 905d (EXORCISM) Jewish exorcists 689g, 696f, 734c, 776e, 839h Tobias 305h, 306c

 EXPECTANCY 658a, 660ap, 874d, 882i, 914gl (see also Messianic, Parousia, Vigilance) Jewish 634b, 646h, 670de, 719a, 784d EXPEDIENCY 399b
 EXPIATION 180c, 183fh, 184bh, 185, 283g, 585d, 586c, 642efg, 710c, 720b, 735i, 849f, 930c, 935c, 940c, 943c (see also Atonement) by prayers, merits of saints 642ef scope limited in OT 111gk, 114f, 184h, 203c symbolic 218e, 481d value of sacrifice 111f vicarious 46ad virtue of blood 191g, 192bd EXPOSURE OF CORPSES 218h, 221e, 284a, 312h, 621e, 742h, 811a EXPOSURE OF INFANTS 164b EXTRAVAGANCE 719b
 EXUPERIUS, St 151, 941 EYES, beasts full of 92j, 966b eye-paint 275j eye-salve of Laodicea 965e full of eyes 480e, 483h held or opened to visions 273g, 2751, 774 seven-eyed stone 545e, 546b, 547gl, 964b single, sound 687a EZECHIAS, Hezekiah 65d, 66a, 121hl, 124k, 135q, 266fj, 279, 280n, 282ry, 287n-t, 406f, 412b, 413eh, 417d, 420c, 421e, 430c, 484m, 541b (see also Isaias, Merodach-Baladan, Sennacherib) collects Solomon's proverbs 11f, 20a, 66a, 135q, 364el, 432d date of accession 124c, 430b indemnity to Sennacherib 279cjj liturgical music and 66a miracle of the dial of Achaz 279k, 282y name of 279c passover of 66a, 113g, 124c, 287p reformation 66a, 114k, 124c, 135e, 211c, 270o, 278c, 279b, 280ag, 287n-r, 421e, 425t, 437i sickness, care, canticle 66a, 124c, 279k, 420d, 440 Siloam tunnel, inscription 66a, 89g, 267d, 279m, 282dd, 287st, 433i, 797b testament of Ezechias 93e EZECHIEL, Ezekiel 33f, 57b, 66eg, 112i, 406g, 414g, 477-93, 586c, 699c, 731g against Ammon 478d, 486ilm, 487b against Edom 478de, 487ad, 489k, 530h against Egypt 79d, 478d, 488, 538m against Judah and Jerusalem 478bg, 481a-g, 482-84ci-p, 485a-dl-o, 486 against Moab 478d, 487ac against Philistia 478d, 487ae against Tyre and Sidon 478d, 487af-s alleged aphasia, catalepsy, hallucinations of 478k, 480m alleged Palestinian prophecy 13d, 478i, 479d analysis of book 478a-e authenticity of 479cd Babylonian influence on 478f, 487r, 492m, 966b (the) bad and the good shepherds 478e, 479a, 488f-h bound with cords 478k, 480m call of 478bf, 480h career of 477f, 478f character, characteristics 478i, 479ad, 483g cherubs, living creatures 92j, 480adef, 483h-k, 487r, 966b commanded to write 413c, 414a cooking his food on dung 478k, 481ae

(EZECHIEL) dating of prophecies 478f, 479c, 480b, 483a, 486ab, 488aeghk, 492c deportation, exile of 280s, 477e, 478f eating a book 480i, 968b ecstasy of 483a, 489d, 492c forbidden to mourn his wife 478cf, 486aa forgiveness and 318k, 4801, 488c, 489c fragmenta papyri 429e historical background 278-81, 477, 478f inspires the Return 291a interior religion and 478j Jeremiah and 462g, 478ghi, 485ef law code of, and Leviticus 478j lifted, moved by the spirit 480k, 483c LXX text 429e, 481a, 483c, 487n made to lie on right, left sides 478k, 481ad Messianic conflict with Gog, etc. 478e, 479ab Messianic prophecy 291a, 478ce, 479abc, 485d, 489fj, 490a-cg-i, 492a-493, 970f mission, task of 478g-o name 478f omits Day of Atonement 493c omits high-priest 492an new city, land 492a, 493f-k new ritual law 135s, 492jl-493e new Temple 82b, 291a, 478ek, 479b, 492a-l, 968c parables of 478h, 484k-m, 485b-dl, 486r-w, 487k-or, 488h-jkl personal responsibility and 318k, 478cehl, 4801, 483g, 484j, 485ef, 487s, 489c predicts duration of exile 481ad predicts restoration of Judah 478ace (a) priest 478f promises new heart, spirit, covenant 478be, 489j, 490c prophecy applied to our Lady 85c, 492m redaction 479cd, 483ah repetitions 478k, 479cd, 481g, 489ab restoration of Israel 478acg, 479a, 483ao, 484op, 486h, 490a-eg-i, 491j restrictive dumbness of 478ch, 480km, 486aa, 489d sin and fate of Samaria 484o, 486r-t Sedecias (Zedekiah) and 281e, 478bc, 482de, 484abc, 485a-dlo, 486k Son of Man 480h symbolic actions 478begk, 481a-g, 484a, 486x-z, 490gh, 545g theophany to 478b, 480, 483h-kp, 491d, 492k, 962g, 966ab two rods joined 478e, 490g-i valley of dry bones 414g, 478e, 490d-f visions of 478k, 480, 483, 490d-f weights and measures 82bdf, 492c, 493a EZION-GEBER 61b, 64h, 269g, 286np EZRA, see Esdras
 EZRI, see Abiezzer

FABLES 32h (see also Fiction, Parable)
 FADUS 69c, 74b
 FAITH 391, 616cdh, 623c, 643ljk, 645d, 648e-n, 690be, 703b, 735cj, 745j, 746f, 751c, 753ah, 754c, 757a, 762ab, 763b, 794fg, 846d, 849op, 858b, 859g, 900e, 915b, 935f, 942a, 943, 953c, 958f (see also Deposit, Justification, Luther, Unbelief, Works) and Dogma 648e and prayer 736d, 958f and justification, salvation 560g, 641f, 643k, 648ilm, 745j, 751c, 753h, 757a, 762ab, 763b, 783b, 788k, 792cd, 794fg, 797h, 816b, 831b, 832i, 834h, 836d, 842i, 844b, 846dbgh, 849c-p, 893h, 894a-f, 895i, 896a-g, 931b, 936a, 946b, 947e and miracles 91c, 627b, 643j, 705d, 711d, 730j, 731b, 746c, 753a, 762a, 787d, 790df, 825e

(FAITH) and orthodoxy 648j and reason 89b, 616gh, 648jk, 871a and sacraments 846d and sight 812i
 and works 560g, 648ghn, 792d, 846d, 848g, 849k, 858ab, 945g, 946ab, 947e Abraham's 150b, 151i, 153a, 642f, 648hln, 849n-p, 896e, 943c, 945g, 947e Act of 641f applied in conscience 862c blind 643i centurion's 689e, 753a Christ in us by 901b confession of 932a
 Council of Trent on 846d, 931b deficient, lacking 733f, 743e (see also Unfaithfulness) denied to Israel 857-9 eyes of 804b fiducial 648kln, 745j, 762a, 846d, 858e grace, gift, of 181f, 648g, 783b, 879b, 900e, 906c, 915b growth in 648hj imperfection of 880a in OT 540i, 643i, 942a, 943b-e (the) just live by 539d, 540i, 846h, 896f living faith, and dead 648mn manifested in, working by charity 632c, 634e, 648mn, 897b, 947e, 956d, 959g measure or proportion of 860e meditation renews 353a motives of credence 616h, 627c, 643, 648f, 753e, 787d, 838f Naaman's 274i necessity of 425r, 437e, 794eg, 819c NT concept and OT compared 540i object of 648j obstacles to 626a-c, 752b, 838g, 887f overcoming the world 958c Peter's 768e prayer for 762a
 Rule of 2c, 42c, 860e sacrifice of 907e shield of 904d surviving to the Parousia 763b tests, trials of 271i, 317b, 318k, 325k, 328, 334h, 353a, 385o, 397fi, 398c, 399a, 946eg, 949df widow of Sarepta's 271hi FAITHFUL SAYINGS 921c, 922b FAITHFULNESS 211eh, 212f, 213c, 237c, 265h, 302di, 717ef, 718c-e, 924d (see also God)
 FAITH-HEALING 88b
 FALL OF MAN 79b, 84d, 102j, 145ab, 318p, 389f, 397g, 487r, 756g, 8501 (see also Adam, Eve, Original Sin) Babylonian mythology and 145c consequences of 141d, 145b, 397g, 403e, 405b irrational nature and 855i-k Redemption and 850e (see also Protevangel) FALL OF THE ANGELS 86f, 318p, 321d, 593a, 951ab, 952i, 953i, 961b, 972f FALLOW YEAR, The 194gh
 FALSE APOSTLES, Teachers 863i, 864ij, 865, 866b, 869g, 870f, 871b-872e, 875a-d, 879ab, 883bc, 886c-em, 887afk, 890a-k, 892a-e, 952eg, 953hi, 954a-e, 957a, 961a-f (see also Corinth, Heresy)
 FALSE CHRISTS 605g, 6701n, 671c, 712e, 715c, 716d, 732c, 737f, 738a, 762df, 767e, 792f, 957a, 961a FALSE PROPHETS 215e, 265h, 273b, 409ghj, 414c, 415bcg, 416a-d, 418g, 454f, 4561, 459i, 461g, 470f, 483g, 484fg, 534fk, 553a, 639d, 656h, 657k, 659c, 688b, 715d, 716d, 738a, 834c, 961a, 969e, 971bc drunkenness of 416d inspired by Baal 459i inspired by evil spirits 879ab message of 416c miracles of 416c, 716d motives of 416c

(FALSE PROPHETS) popular patriotism of 415b test of 412c, 415e, 416a FALSE WITNESS 175c, 217b, 218c against our Lord 720fg, 740fgh, 770a, 771a FAMILIAR OR DIVINING SPIRIT 192s, 256f, 280a, 837e, 905d FAMILIARITY BREEDS CONTEMPT 700e, 731b, 790e FAMILY, The 143i, 213c, 246c, 247b, 361k, 367a, 654f, 660c-h, 709a, 786d, 903d-904a, 913c, 922c, 925c (see also Holy Family, Home, Marriage) bible in 660e family registers 290m head of 143i, 654f, 660c Jewish family life 213c, 246c, 247b, 367a, 596bc, 660c unity 390a, 462gm, 471j (see also Solidarity) FAMINE 157e, 271ej, 275c, 660q, 675e, 715c, 833e, 895bcg FAR EAST 149g, 444g
FASTING 113dk, 191k, 272h, 302jl, 345f, 449a-c, 532g, 545h, 586b, 686fj, 691cd, 728d, 751l, 752ab, 834b, 862d, 922a Christ in the desert 676b, 883c for holy Communion 878d in memory of fall of Jerusalem 449b, 477e, 486y, 549acdeh, 752a Moses on Sinai 129k national fasts 532g, 586b (see also Atonement Day) prayer and 310c, 733f FATHER, GOD THE 640dl, 641g, 643a, 646a, 695bc, 697g, 750b, 816b, 817b, 903a, 929c, 949h, 950f, 952hi and the Son 640dl, 792, 794ef, 797eghm, 804d his initiative in Redemption 911b
'in the Heavens' 613g, 614ab monarchy of 804d, 881g (see also Subordination) prototype of all fatherhood 640d, 660c, 714c, 901b revealed in, by the Son 640d source of Godhead 910d unity of Church and 902b unoriginate 933d
FATHERHOOD OF GOD 110c, 114b, 302e, 309i, 332a, 358f, 383k, 402f, 451d, 471b, 535f, 624c, 660c, 685b, 686h, 687cg, 714b, 757d, 760ef, 855a-d, 899a, 929d, 935bd, 944b (see also Abba, Adoption, Son of God) his care for us 763a in Christian Prayer 757d, 855ad in Paganism 855d FATHERS 660e, 901b (see also Parents, Piety)
'call no man Father...' 656b, 714c FATHERS OF THE CHURCH, The 15fh, 37ef, 40c (see also Patristics) Apostolic 3d, 14ad-f, 94a, 605c, 606b, 919ab infallible consensus of 9fh, 37b, 42d Cappadocian 3e (see also Gregory, Basil) Latin 3f sub-apostolic 14ad-f FATHOM, The 82c
FATNESS 325e
FAUNA OF PALESTINE 55g, 56f, 270k, 273j, 278h FAVOUR, currying 370o, 374f FAVOURITISM AND GOD 857l FAYUMIC BIBLE 4b
FEAR 394d, 693b filial fear and servile 110b, 907e, 950c, 958b holy fear 935f, 936a, 937c, 944d (see also of God below) in Our Lord 769b of death 935c
of God 106d, 109f, 110b, 154n, 213c, 273f, 314f, 315b, 321b, 325b, 327m, 365a, 366bfh, 375k, 376l, 397c, 398cd,

400d, 405b, 428m, 432f, 693b, 748g, 905f, 907e (FEAR) of the supernatural 774d FEAST, Feasts (see also Atonement, Calendar, Passover, Pentecost, Pilgrimage, Purim, Sabbath, Tabernacles) agricultural and nomadic 113f, 169b, 175j, 586b celebration not recorded before Esdras 113lm liturgical day 113k Mosaic prescriptions long ignored 113j, 216c, 217e Nicanor's Day 566e of Azymes, Unleavened Bread 67a, 78c, 113fg, 169a-fj, 175j, 216cd, 833f of Dedication, Encaenia, Lights 68e, 564c, 565e, 574a, 620c, 708a, 735a, 796abd of first-fruits 83g, 113f of new moon 113d, 493c, 528f of new year 113ef, 193u, 297e, 586b, 752d of obligatory pilgrimage 113cg-j, 114i, 216d, 586b, 750a of Trumpets 297e, 791b FECUNDITY, Hebrew 164b prized by Israelites 424j FELLOWSHIP 635-7, 817d, 819a, 892f, 906b, 907a, 932a (see also Communion, Union) FELIX 69c, 74c, 666f, 716d, 841al, 842a-d, 844g, 890d FENAN 56c
FERDINAND AND ISABELLA 10d
FERGUSON, R., Printer 29p
FERMENTATION 732h (see also Leaven)
FERRAR MSS GROUP 781h
FERTILE CRESCENT, The 45h, 116f, 291f, 546d FERTILITY CULTS, see Ashera, Astarte, Baal, Prostitution, Sexual Worship FESTAL BOOKS OF (OT) 246b
FESTUS, PORCIUS 69c, 74c, 666g, 829f, 831a, 842def-l, 844g FETISHISM 44e, 104h
FEUILLET 709h, 715b, 717ab, 737d
FICTION, Biblical 32h, 33i, 88a, 89d, 90a, 226i, 288ij, 310k, 314c, 382k, 383d, 388f, 394a, 698a (see also Parables)
FIELD OF BLOOD 462k, 551f
FIGS, Fig-tree 437b barren 620f, 626f, 711cd, 717a, 736bd, 762a, 765d, 859h fig poultice 279k
FILIAL PIETY, see Forgiveness, Parents
Filioque, The 796j
FILLETS, Scarlet 190k, 191f
FILLING THE HANDS 180a, 187j, 245c, 270k, 287o, 585b FINANCE (see also Banks, Bills of Exchange, Insurance, Interest) Jewish 79f, 289a pagan 602e
FINGER MEASURE 82b
FIR TREES 267m, 286d
FIRE (see also Coals) altar fire 574d and brimstone 152c and water 442b and worms 309o, 400b, 734d chariots of 273g, 274l from heaven 80c, 146a, 164g, 187o, 226g, 271kl, 272b, 273f, 574d, 823a, 944d (see also Theophany) of Judgement 439f, 451r, 682h, 860g, 871e, 954d of the Holy Ghost 650i, 682h, 727b, 758f, 822a, 823a symbol of purification 650c, 651c symbol of war 526cd, 527g undying, eternal 186a, 438f, 595c, 699h, 706d, 932d, 961b FIRMAMENT, The 141a, 142bg, 147a, 328i, 332fg, 405f, 429c, 441c, 480af FIRSTBORN, The (see also Birthright) Christians as 944a

(FIRSTBORN) sanctity, redemption of 61c, 112g, 114a, 169j, 175g, 276j, 585b, 749dg slain in Egypt 90b, 112g, 113f, 164b, 168g, 169dg, 331h, 395ab subsequent births not implied 672g FIRST-FRUIT 61c, 83g, 113f, 169c, 173e, 184ef, 192r, 193s, 198d, 219e, 274f, 303c, 309l, 350g, 481e, 492n, 585b, 859e of the dead 881g FIRSTLINGS 132f, 195f, 204c, 216c, 585b (see also Firstborn)
FIR TREES 267m, 268d
FISH, Fishing 141ad, 493g Apostolic fishermen 55h, 584k fish eye-salve 305i, 306i Galilean 55h, 687g, 705g miraculous draught of 626f, 751ef, 813a-c nets 540f, 700c, 813c salt-fish 793d
Tobias and 305g
FISHER'S PENITENTIAL PSALMS, JOHN 29f
FLACCUS, Pomponius 73c
FLAMING SWORD, The 79c FLATTERY 735d
FLAX, Smoking 696d
FLEMISH BIBLE 4g FLESH, The, and the spirit 641e, 648c, 653h, 854cdf, 897c conquest of 854c meaning in NT 645k, 870d, 872g works of 897c
FLIES 167h, 273e, 426m (see also Plagues) FLOCK, of Christ 551h, 657m, 692h, 758d, 760c, 799a-fhi, 813d, 820d, 840de (see also Sheep) of Yahweh 489h, 551b-f FLOOD, The 79b, 136eh, 138e, 147-8, 327ln, 339g, 344f, 392b, 401c, 406bg, 650n, 717bc, 951ab, 954d Babylonian 79b, 117b, 148c date of 148d duality of narrative 45b, 148b duration of 147b eschatological 435cf excavation and 148d extent of 147c-e
(the) lost in 951a survivors of 146c, 147de, 951a type of baptism 40h, 650n, 951b FLORA OF PALESTINE 55bgh, 56g, 699c
FLORENCE, Council of 15kl FLORENTINE PAPYRI 721g
FLORUS, Gessius 74de, 716d, 929b FLOWERS 55b symbolism of 384fm, 386e FLUTES, Flautists 691f, 694g FOETUS, not a person 174f
FOGNY, John, Printer 29i
FOLLY, Divine, of the Cross 870c
Fomes Peccati 854d
FOOD LAWS AND PROHIBITIONS 215f, 308d, 481e, 638a, 732a, 907g (see also Slaughter, Ritual) abolished for Christians 344a, 862h, 875cd, 877hi, 925b, 940f, 944e abrogated by Christ 732c blood 101a, 102e, 111e, 132g, 149b, 169e, 186i, 192der, 215d, 309l, 700c, 702d clean, unclean, animals, fishes, etc. 110d, 147a, 189c-h, 215f, 309k, 586a fat of intestines etc. 309l idol offerings 309k, 875a-f, 877hi (see also Idolothya) the patriarchs and 157j rationing 481c
FOOL, Folly 341c, 342a, 353a, 357c, 365a, 366d, 367j, 368ps, 369c, 370al, 371abn, 373f, 374ad, 377d, 381a, 438k, 591b
FOOTSTOOL OF YAHWEH 270h, 470e
FORBEARANCE, demanded of the Righteous 392g (see also God)
FORCED LABOUR 60c, 160b, 164ab

166a-c, 239d, 267h, 270g, 282gg, 286em FOREHEAD, Marking the 483gi, 967b, 969fh FOREMEN 166cd
FORE-RUNNER, Precursor 784d (see also ELIAS) Christ our 938d
 of Christ 397a, 406f, 593c, 704a, 727b, 733c, 747f, 750ci, 753c, 756b (see also John Baptist) FORESTS 56g, 214a, 584f (see also Lebanon) FORGIVENESS 371b, 619b, 620a, 623f, 642ce, 654a-c, 657e, 685e, 690fg, 707a-c, 751h, 753h, 760b-f, 762a, 772b, 930e, 933ce, 940h, 949g (see also God, Repentance, Sin) and forgetting 707c and Justification (q.v.) 850a and punishment 79h 'as we forgive' 685e, 686ij, 707c, 736d filial piety earns 398d in circumcision 106g in the name of Christ 817e, 824f love and 753h not to be presumed on 399b, 400b our Lord on 367r, 619b, 620a, 623f, 707a-c, 726d, 728ab, 736d, 751h, 753h, 760b-f, 762a prayer and 334g, 402b sacramental 654b, 956cf (see also Baptism, Penance) through sacrifice 111gh, 114f, 183c, 184h, 203c till seventy times seven 367r, 706a-c FORMALISM, see Cult, Dispositions, Legalism
FORM AND MATTER 907a
FORM CRITICISM 33k-o, 45kln, 608c, 609a, 630d, 705g, 724b FORMS, Genres, Literary 32-3, 36i, 37gi, 38ab, 41d, 45j, 46hi, 89d, 132a, 138d, 139i, 225c, 301a, 313mn, 376d, 382co, 383n, 384m, 388f, 391ah, 394a, 428k, 429f, 472f, 531e, 545gkl of NT 33j FORNICATION, see Sexual Sin, Idolatry FORTUNATUS 659e, 882h
FORTY, OT Significance of 41c, 123b, 124i, 125a, 147a a generation (q.v.) 212a, 238h, 268a days of fasting, temptation 129k, 147a, 214b, 683c
FORTY DAYS, The Great 214b, 822a, 940g FORTY STRIPES (save one) 219b, 890m
FOUAD PAPYRUS 77ac
FOUNTAINS OF JUDAH 234ef, 295glm, 348a
FOUNTS OF REVELATION, The 1e-f, 14d, 84b, 86k-m, 397m, 630c FOUR CORNERS, Quarters of World 482b FOUR-DOCUMENT HYPOTHESIS 610g FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE 466ef FOXES 244i, 689h
FRANCIS OF ASSISI, St 40j FRANCISCAN BIBLICAL HOUSE, JERUSALEM 6c FRANKINCENSE 681f (see also Incense) FRATRICIDE 146ab
FREEDMEN (see also Slaves) in imperial Rome 597i, 601i, 828b, 864e of Christ 81d, 874b of Apollo 81d
FREER LEGION, The 726a
FREEWILL, Freedom 92m, 137c, 142e, 145d, 146a, 397gh, 401b, 402a, 795i, 825f, 853 i (see also Liberty) answers problem of evil (q.v.) 365d, 379e, 397gh God's foreknowledge, Providence 109e, 165d, 402f, 587d, 592a, 618d, 626b, 739f (see also Predestination) grace and 36g, 388i, 402f, 546a, 697a, 729g, 730abe, 847g, 857gp

(FREEWILL) moral responsibility and 146ab, 401b, 402a of Christ Redeeming 920d sense of sin and 114f stoic denial of 601c vocation and 85k, 383m, 425n war and 102m
FRENCH BIBLE 4cdg, 10c
FRIENDS, Friendship 317cd, 371a, 373ae, 374a, 399b, 400f, 402e, 403h, 404e, 405d, 804i in Christ 914f the comfort of 740b with Christ 653e, 720e, 758c, 804i, 813c with God 397efm, 402a, 931b FRINGES, Tassels 203e, 218i, 586b, 612d, 736j FROGS, Plague of 970f FRUIT TREES 192r
FRUITFULNESS 711cd, 717a, 736bf, 804ghi, 908b
FULLER'S FIELD, The 425s the way of 279d FULLNESS, Pleroma, of Christ, in Church 898k, 900a-d (see also God) of God, in Christ 911a, 912b
FUNERALS, see Burial
FURLONG, The Biblical 82c FUTURE, Knowledge of 417e, 600j (see also Divination, God, Prophecy) FUTURE LIFE, The 99e, 102d, 115cd, 118c, 153r, 206k, 282r, 302g, 314hi, 318k, 339f, 324i, 340f, 342d, 345a, 348d, 353a, 363c, 365e, 369i, 370e, 376ho, 378b, 388i, 389fg, 396g, 397i, 398c, 400ag, 402b, 429h, 560d, 579e, 595a-c, 623g, 625d, 737hi, 824d (see also Heaven, Hell, Sheol, Purgatory, Resurrection) many mansions 803e marriage and 766e paganism and 77f, 598 lmo, 599a-f, 601c FURNITURE, Furnishing 274b, 602g, 880a GAAL 243d
GABAA, see (1) Gaibai, (2) Gibeah GABAON, see Gibeon
GARBATHA 81h, 721f
GABELUS OF RAGES 302b, 305d, 306f
GABINIUS 70f
GABRIEL 159h, 462fi 506c, 507e, 509af, 592d, 748acd
GAD, God of Fortune 451k the Prophet, Seer 248e, 255d, 282i, 285t, 409f, 411a acis, writings 224d, 282w, 285a GAD, Tribe of 57ij, 61b, 159b, 160d, 173d, 222h, 228b, 229b, 234c, 237b, 241h, 283j, 466f GADARA IN DECAPOLIS 58h, 70c, 690c (see also Gerasenes)
GADARA IN PERAEA 58i
GADES, Phoenician outpost 120m
GAIBAI, Gabaa 309d
GAIUS 863j, 870a
GAIUS, The Johannine 959ehi
GAIUS CAESAR, see Caligula GALAAD, see Gilead, Galud GALATIA 567b, 577b, 598i, 834d, 893c, 949d the Church in 893c, 894g, 896h towns of 665af, 666a
GALATIANS, Epistle to the 40i, 661hi, 676f, 836, 862be, 867g, 893-7, 905e, 907f, 914f Council of Jerusalem and 893cdf dependence on Matthew 615a date 661f, 893cd, 894h N. or S. Galatia 41b, 836a, 837c, 893cd Romans and 661h, 844di, 849p, 850b, 852agh, 854f, 855b, 857ab, 862bde style, vocabulary 661h, 893b, 898h GALEN 267a
GALERIUS MAXIMUS 810b
GALGALA, see Gilgal

GALILEANS, date of Passover, Calendar 719d, 768b Judaized 70c nationalism among 72b, 584i, patois, accent of 720i, 748b, 949c Pilate mingles their blood and sacrifice 72c GALILEE 55c, 57hi, 58df, 63j, 65b, 70b, 74f, 121f, 222h, 228d, 233g, 234b, 236be, 236g, 239d, 420b, 427df, 569agh, 584dgh, 684b, 693d, 698b (see also Gennesareth, Public Life) post-resurrection appearance of Christ in 720c, 723bcf, 881d, 953e Roman Galilaea 58hi three regions of 569a under Herod Antipas 72a, 73ab
GALILEO 37g, 232i
GALL, Wormwood 457bc, 459i, 527h, 722c, 967e
GALLICAN PSALTER 27e, 338b
GALLIO 81c, 675fh, 770b, 839c, 864fh, 914e GALLIUM, Gallim of Benjam 255m GALLUS, Cestius 74e
GALUD, The 55g, 242gh
GAMALIEL 662e, 663c, 816b, 827c, 841f
GAMARIAS, Gemariah 459c, 460b GAMBLING 907e (see also Lots) GAME MEAT 215c
GANGES, The River 143g
GARDEN, The King's 281d
GARIZIM, see Gerizim
GARMENTS, of Christ 203e, 691f, 722c, 742ab, 810c spread to walk on 275g, 710h, 736a GARSTANG 231e, 233d
GASGAS, The 120g
GATE, The Strait 688a, 759b
GATES, Business at city 153d, 247j, 275b, 329h, 330c, 366d, 368i, 372c, 375k, 470af, 527h
GATES OF JERUSALEM, corner gate 287i, 554d dung gate 295fk, 298h Ephraim gate 295k, 297f fish gate 287u, 295j, 298h, 542d fountain gate 295g, 298h, 720f horse gate 276i, 295m, 462i Jaffa gate 277c, 808a of Benjamin 554d old gate 295k, 298h potsherd gate 458j prison gate 298h reviewing gate 295m sheep gate 295j, 298h, 777e, 791c Sion (David) gate 807g upper gate 483g valley gate 287i, 295k, 298h water gate 295m, 297e, 298h, 807b
GATES OF THE TEMPLE 65d, 457a, 458k, 460e beautiful gate 632e, 776g GATH 57e, 121h, 284v, 432h, 527j, 542g, 550e (see also Pentapolis) GATH-HEPHER, Geth-hepher 277e
GAUL 749b
GAULANITIS 58h, 70c, 72a, 73b, 701c
GAZA 57e, 58g, 70cf, 71g, 121eg, 233b, 242c, 244kl, 275c, 278b, 279b, 526e, 550e, 569g, 830e (see also Pentapolis)
GAZARA, Gazer, see Gezer GEBA 64f, 245j, 309d, 428j GEBAI 267n, 487 i (see also Byblos)
GEDEON, see Gideon
GEDALIAH, Godolias 80h, 281j, 463g, 464a-c, 550o GEHAZI, Giezi 274djl, 275c GEHENNA 280k (see also Hell, Hinnom) GELASIVS, Decree of 301e GELBOE, see Gilboa GEMATRIA 586e
Geminis Consulibus 676c
GENEALOGIES 41c, 112e, 139a, 149q, 288g, 290m, 346b, 584j antediluvian 138e, 146g, 283a Arab interest in 112e, 149q Edomite king list 156a-dfg, 283a

(GENEALOGIES) gaps, lacunae in 125e, 680e in Esdras 112e, 125e, 283fn, 293a, 750g in Genesis 125e, 138e, 140a, 146g, 283 in Paralipomenon (Chronicles) 282 elzczch, 283 of Christ 37h, 41c, 50g, 125e, 155h, 156l, 246cd, 247bl, 283be, 543fg, 552d, 678d, 680a-g, 750gh of Horites, Hurrians 156e of Jacob 158b, 283a of Levi, the Levites 166f, 283n-r of Mardochai (Mordecai) 310h, 311d of Moses and Aaron 125e, 166f of Saul 282hh, 283aabb of Shem 149kp, 283a of Sophonias (Zephaniah) 541b, 542a post-diluvian patriarchs 283a posterity of Aaron 283qr posterity of Abraham 153f, 283a posterity, line of David 282en posterity of Nachor (Nahor) 153c posterity, tribe of Judah 283b-g qualification for priesthood 112e St Jerome's distaste for 303a reckoned only through males 680e table of the Nations 32l, 149d-k, 283a towns, villages as offspring in 283dfy women in 283cd women in Christ's genealogy 680e, 246cd, 247bl, 680e Genera Litteraria, see Forms GENERATION, Divine, Eternal, see
 Christology
 GENERATIONS, conventional duration, time unit 166e, 226e, 238h, 268a, 472f, 476b, 914k evil, perverse, adulterous generation 697d, 824f genealogies 136j toledoth, History 32h, 136k, 143c GENEROSITY 636e, 660m, 719b, 889ij of God 645h, 646am, 709hi GENESIS 32j-m, 127, 135l-n, 136-61, 283a (see also Biblical Commission, Patriarchis, Pentateuch) archaisms in 20a author 135i, 137gh (see also Penta- teuch) Babylonian mythology and 79b doctrinal value of 137a-f, 142c early chapters of 32j-m, 37l, 39bh, 46l, 48e-l, 53i-l, 138d evolution theory and 143k historicity of 32j-m, 48e-l, 53i-l, 59, 79k, 135l, 138-40
 inspiration of 137i literary genres of 32jkl, 135m
 name of 136c
 narrowing focus of 136f-h, 137f, 138e, 149del, 150a, 152j, 156a natural science and 142a, 143k patriarchal legislation 128 polemical motives in 144ab pre-Mosaic law in 59h, 173g sources (oral) 135a-hlm, 137g-i, 138bc, 139a sources (written) 135a-k, 137g-i, 150g, 156a
 the variants of St Stephen 829b GENITIVE OF DEFINITION 470a
 GENNAIUS OF NOVGOROD 26f
 GENNESAR, Gennesareth 701g, 731h GENNESARETH (Galilee), Lake of 54d, 55cf, 55h, 57i, 234fg, 569h, 687g, 701e, 703c, 732h, 793b cities of 584f fish, fishermen of 584k, 687g, 700c Kinnereth, Chinneroth 55h, 57i, 271c storms on 55h, 705g, 730f GENNESARETH, Plain of 55h GENTILES, The (see also Converts, Luke, Pagans, Paul, Peter, Proselytes, Uni- versalism) call, hope of 102l, 115g, 246f, 271h, 274h, 289a, 315d, 339b, 342e, 345d, 350g, 351b, 355e, 357eg, 358c, 361a, 392c, 403c, 404d, 412h, 419g, 421e,

422a-d, 428g, 432e, 434i, 435a, 441ho, 442ej, 443c-f, 447g, 450c, 451s, 493j, 528b, 533ef, 535abl, 536ij, 543ij, 544g, 549h, 550ag, 554af, 590, 617d, 680e, 696d, 709i, 747d, 749i, 764c, 766c, 801fh, 834j, 836e, 857o, 859c (GENTILES) called into the Church 40f, 543j, 549h, 550g, 554f, 633, 636f, 814d, 817e, 819bde, 822ab, 823a-c, 824f, 825f, 828b, 829a-e, 830e, 832c-k, 833abc, 834bj, 836, 841bg, 857o, 859fg, 898j, 900e-g, 901a-c, 972c (see also St Paul)
 chastisement, judgement, subjection of 363j, 404d, 421e, 436d, 439fhi, 441d-h, 449j, 450i, 550ajk, 552b Christ and 543i, 547f, 550g, 620c, 730i, 754d, 759abdf, 766c, 767f, 834j, 842ij, 862k-m, 900ef
 God, rules, cares, provides for 105c, 108b, 109ij, 178c, 182ac, 391-5, 397, 469g, 525d, 526efi, 545e, 829b, 835c,
 838f
 Jewish exclusiveness and 289r, 531g, 570a, 584ce, 586a, 587f, 588g, 589d, 591e, 592b, 593ef, 595e, 745c, 763c, 841h, 842i, 915d
 Messianic subjugation of 443e, 445e, 447bg, 450cdjo, 451q, 479a, 491a-i, 530u, 542ghi, 593f remnant of 550a sinners, wicked men 635d, 824c
 'the Greeks' 847a uncovenanted Graces of 835c, 838f GENUBATH 270c
 GEOGRAPHY 143g physical, of Palestine 5ae, 54-6 political, of Palestine 57-8 GEOLOGY, and the Flood 147c
 GEORGIAN Bible 23d, 26ab, 788a GERAR, Gerara 105c, 139e, 152gh, 153m, 286hh
 GERASA 58ij, 730g
 GERASENES, Gergasenes 618c, 690c, 730g-j
 GERIZIM, Garizim, Mount 55c, 131e, 219f, 232a, 243b, 576b, 789c blessing set on 214e, 219f Samaritan temple on 21l, 67h, 70b, 299f, 789d
 GERMAN BIBLE 4cg
 GERMANICUS 73c
 GEROUSIA, The 570a GERSAM, Gersham, Gersom, Gerson, son of Moses 164e, 171j GERSON, Gershom, Sons of 236h, 283pr, 285fgik
 GESHEM THE ARAB 67e, 295h GESHUR, Gessur 57j, 63h, 233g, 234a,
 283c GESSEN, see Goshen
 GESSIUS FLORIUS 808a
 GETH, see Gath
 GETHHEPHER, Gittah-hepher 236b GETHEMANE, Gethsemani 81h, 551j, 720ede, 740ab, 755a, 769abd, 776e, 807b, 937c
 our Lord's prayer in 740a, 937c the sweat of blood 769ab GEZER 57f, 62a, 63j, 68g, 82h, 117b, 224b, 227dh, 233b, 235ab, 267k, 269g, 392f, 547g, 566e, 568b, 571ed, 572cd agricultural calendar 19k, 80j brazen serpent of 279b Canaanite sanctuary 80g, 279b Maccabean palace at 80c, 571c Manasseh's rebellion and 79e stables of Solomon 80f, 269g GEZERON 564a
 GHANDI, Mahatma 752i
 GHETTOES, Jewish Quartiers 75a
 GHIZEH 118c
 GHOR, The, see Jordan
 GIANTS 57d, 146k, 202e, 214b, 284z, 309o, 474c (see also Anak, Arapha, Goliath, Nephilim, Og, Rephaim)
 GIBBETHON 57f, 64e, 271d
 GIBBONS, Cardinal 30j

GIBEAH, Gabaa 56h, 57f, 139e, 238m, 245fji, 263bc, 283aa, 428j, 554d the outrage at 63d, 242f, 245e-j GIBEON, Gabaon 57f, 58d, 63f, 178c, 232b-f, 245j, 257g, 263bc, 265k, 267g, 283aa, 284lq, 285b, 286ab, 290i, 461g,
 464c
 GIDEON, Gedeon 63d, 238degl, 242-3a, 245ef, 352d
 called Jerubbaal 242a his ephod 179b, 238g, 242al GIEZI, see Gehazi
 GIHON, Gehon, Paradisal River 143g
 GIHON SPRING 19k, 55d, 66a, 80g, 267cd, 279dm, 287s, 295m, 427c, 433i, 798b
 GILBOA, Gelboe, Mt, 56e, 242f
 GILEAD, Mt 242fg
 GILEAD, Galaad 56c, 57j, 58cef, 65a, 121f, 154no, 208m, 234c, 238d, 241h, 243i, 276f, 277ghik, 278b, 283i, 420b, 427g, 430f, 524b, 526cd, 560b, 565ad GILGAL, Galgala 57g, 178a, 214de, 230acd, 232b, 234d, 235de, 239h, 273g, 274k, 410e, 519f, 520k, 525b prophetic college at 273g, 274k stone circles 214e, 273g GILGAMESH 79c, 144a, 145c, 148cd, 149i GILU-KHEPA 119i
 GIMIL-SIN 117e
 GIRDLE, The high-priest's 179fh symbolism of 428m, 443c, 758e, 950c GIRGASHITES 151f
 GLADIATORS 601k
 GLEANING 110g, 192m, 219b, 247df
Gloria in Excelsis 617c, 745gi, 749ef, 758g, 765b
 GLORY, Glorification 846c, 855be-k, 856, 907cd (see also Ascension, Con- summation, Perfection, Session) grace and 908b
 the hope of 850b-f
 GLORY OF GOD, The 649bd, 686g, 705ab 706g, 749e, 829b, 849d, 857d, 933d (see also Shekinah) Christ, the effulgence of 933d seeking 862k, 899e, 901c, 906c GLOSSES in OT, Christian 396g, 403a-d, 474d
 GLOSSOLALY, see Tongues
 GLUTTONY 372j
 GNOMIC WRITING 314b, 316ef, 365g, 370e, 372a (see also Proverbs) GNOSIS, True and False 639h, 909f, 910c, 911h, 912ab
 GNOSTICS, Gnosticism 92c, 94i, 604f, 607l, 656h, 782c, 909fh, 918fg, 919d, 921a, 922a, 963c, 965ab, 970c GOATS 718g goat-gods 280j, 286s goats' hair 177af GOBRYAS 501n
 GOD (see also Angel, Beatific Vision, Causes, Day, Election, Elohim, Father, Fatherhood, Fear, Glory, Grace, Holy Spirit, Jesus Christ, Judgement, Love, Names, Presence, Punishment, Revela- tion, Retribution, Rewards, Theology, Theophany, Trinity, Union, Will, Wrath of Yahweh) passim access to 930g, 931ab, 939c, 942c accommodation to popular sentiment 152h alpha and omega 285ht, 935a, 943b, 964c, 971h
 ancient of days 503g angel court of 317b, 318q, 320de, 339e, 425k, 547e, 592d the armour of 449k, 898h, 904c-e, 916c author of life 106f, 111e, 115c, 189k author of scripture 34bc, 36a, 928e, 935e, 936a (see also Inspiration) book of 362j, 439k (as a) bridegroom 383ak (see also Israel, Church)
 (and) Caesar 371g, 400d, 562d, 633g, 660b, 712ef, 766d (see also Church and State)

(God) cannot lie 269c, 925a, 938d, 957b, 958e cannot tempt, be tempted, to evil 946h cares for his people, creatures 222i, 441f, 475b, 491a, 545e, 687bcd condescends to human conditions, etc. 36i, 167e, 173d, 938d confessed by pagan kings 450, 494cd, 495k, 496h, 497fk, 499aq, 502h, 503a, 513j (in) conflict with Egyptian Gods 167d
 (a) consuming fire 929d controls all nations, 137c, 238 lm, 391-5, 469g, 525d, 526efi, 545eik, 550e, 592a controls the rain 139a, 143c, 214e, 527 l, 835c Creator Lord 105c, 108b, 109aij, 114a, 115b, 137a, 182ac, 302e, 306c, 308n, 314f, 316a, 317g, 322k, 339e, 341b, 358eg, 362j, 363h, 373c, 375a, 379e, 392d, 393b, 397k, 402c, 412d, 416b, 441c, 525c, 527g, 531dg, 640b, 781c, 817b, 838d, 929d (see also Creation) delivers oppressed 238 lm, 321g, 449j-m demands absolute love 114c, 115j demands sacrifice 173e demands social righteousness 527i desires not the death of a sinner 330f, 331d, 389cf, 485j dwelling in darkness 269b dwelling, robed, in light 425k (the) end of all 929d enemies of 551b eternal 109b, 115b, 357e, 405f, 444e, 471j, 646e, 964b faithful to his promises, people, etc. 228e, 269c, 271i, 283ght, 288d, 308n, 358a, 359ab, 360e, 398c, 846e, 848f, 857g-k, 886fg, 942b false ideas of 213d, 215a, 217b, 514il, 517f, 518j, 525b, 526k, 527adi, 528g, 535i, 555k fatal to see 109d, 151g, 155b, 164g, 191g, 201f, 213b, 242d, 425m father of the soul 397f, 402f final triumph over evil 137f, 145d, 550bj, 551b, 552ac, 969i finger of 757f foresight of 84cde, 85f, 87d, 109e, 115a, 159b, 173d, 415d, 419g, 441g, 442 l, 444cd, 592ab, 739f, 801i, 824c, 856df, 923c, 950ac (see also Predestination, Providence) forgiving, merciful 109mn, 152b, 163f, 238 l, 282r, 309i, 318k, 330g, 345c, 347a, 350d, 358f, 359b, 360e, 392c-e, 393d, 396g, 397i, 398c, 402c, 412e, 425n, 448i, 469g, 471a-c, 489c, 523ef, 531d, 532fhi, 534i, 536h, 545ef, 592b, 624b, 642cj, 646h, 697a, 707a, 745j, 760b, 826f, 848dg, 947d, 956c form of 109cd, 201f, 212f, 339f, 342d, 907a friendship with 397efm, 402a, 931b generosity of 645h, 646a, 709hi, 929d gifts of 181f, 400e, 894c, 925dg, 946i good, the supreme, only good 211f, 238 l, 239f, 365b, 592b, 709b, 735d, 759f, 763f, 848d, 859ikl, 929d greatness of 339e, 402c, 405ef, 934f hates sin 11a, 129 l, 284b, 400b, 423d (see also Holiness) He who IS 109b, 165ab (see also Yahweh) heavenly king 341c, 357h, 358b, 425k, 528h (the) Holy One 109f, 110d, 114d, 163f, 182c, 183h, 188a, 189i, 191a, 238 lm, 250g, 259b, 274i, 339e, 365b, 366d, 404d, 423c, 425 l, 591ch, 686h, 955g, 965cd (see also Holiness) house of 269c (see also Temple) (a) husbandman, farmer 437f human instruments of, rod, scourge, etc. 275d, 276a, 280p, 425h, 426mn, 428gh, 441dfg, 443a-em, 469a, 478c, 486i-kvw, 507 l, 528b, 597j, 712b, 831e, 835e

 (God) immanent 316d, 366k, 368hmn, 389b, 391e, 403a immaterial 151e, 591fg, 648c immutable 87cd, 146k, 165a, 206 l, 358e, 377f, 646e, 859i, 934b, 938d, 946i, 968k impassible 330g, 332a incomprehensible, inscrutable 92 l, 269b, 328c, 375a, 377f, 380c, 381c ineffable 165a intervention of 44bc, 87b, 89bc, 139a, 227e, 228e, 238 lm, 271g, 275a, 312cd, 392-5, 540c, 592a, 593c, 716d, 738b, 762b, 763b, 817a (see also Causes, Miracles) invisible 151e, 212f, 322k, 783f, 799g, 910d, 922h is Light 955g, 956b is Love 649b, 955g jealous 114bc, 237c, 312a, 389b, 538a, 542e, 635d, 890g, 948a joy of 760b-df
 (the) joy of heaven 887j, 972a justice of, righteousness of 33b, 109 lm, 151b, 197g, 214d, 238 l, 239f, 282r, 308n, 317e, 318 l, 323h, 330g, 331gh, 333a-e, 334a-e, 339d, 388i, 392, 402c, 412e, 426d, 435m, 469g, 550b, 648p, 707c, 846e, 848g, 849dg-i, 857gl-p knocking at heart 385o knowledge of us 875d light of New Jerusalem 450f, 545d, 554ac, 972a (the) living 326k, 360h, 591a, 640b, 720f, 929c, 935f, 940h, 964e loveableness, loveliness of 383f, 405e loving-kindness of 114f, 921c majesty of 163f, 317f, 333b, 402c, 591f, 738b, 929d (see also Glory) not responsible for man's sin 243d, 272b, 284b, 379e, 397g, 401b, 404a, 646h, 847g, 946h oath of 222d, 938d, 939cd of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob 104g, 713bd, 736i, 929c, 940h, 943c of battles, war, victory 239bf, 240e, 242g, 245i, 272ge, 425 l, 441n, 449j of history 32e, 225ab, 226f, 238 l, 293c, 392-5, 316a, 425h, 426mn, 441e, 458h, 469g, 525d, 528bi, 592a, 678g of hosts, Sabaoth 271j, 297h, 344a, 363i, 425 l, 429b, 527b, 544a of peace 272b (see also Peace) of the storm 172d, 317f, 333b, 342e, 344f, 348e, 354a, 357h, 525c (see also Theophany) omnipresent, omnipotent 105cg, 109ai, 115ab, 116c, 137ac, 152a, 154d, 157b, 167af, 169c, 215a, 238 l, 282pq, 302e, 308n, 317f, 318 l, 323ho, 328g, 332h, 333a, 334a-f, 339e, 350d, 360e, 361i, 362h, 365b, 405ae, 425 l, 427i, 441c, 443bghi, 444e, 445g, 447h, 469g, 471b, 478k, 480g, 525cd, 528h, 532a, 556b, 642c, 697a, 709d, 735e, 817b, 829b, 857 lmp, 859g omniscient 115a, 282pq, 317e, 328g, 330g, 332h, 333a, 365b, 370d, 371h, 372o, 402a, 405ae, 443b, 592b, 817b, 836d, 871j, 936b one only 137a, 157b, 211f, 213c, 222d, 441cg, 442k-n, 838e, 875d, 947e (see also Idolatry, Monotheism) our home, destiny 875d our knowledge of 879h, 880a patience, forbearance of 272bc, 331e, 392ae-g, 397i, 399b, 402c, 626ab, 646h, 699f, 711g, 712abc, 849gi, 857np, 952i, 954f personal 591a plenitude of 900a-d, 911a, 912b, 966d (see also Fullness) predilection for Israel 392c-h, 394, 556b (his) promises morally conditioned 150d, 151e, 163f, 182c-e, 183j, 212f, 213d, 228e, 229a, 282s, 441fo, 417d, 525e, 533h, 534fg, 848f, 850f

 (God) protects the poor, etc. 330gh, 372g represented as repenting 146k, 214b, 464d revealed in nature 838f, 847de (the) rewarder 931b, 943b (see also Judgement, Rewards) right hand, left hand of 35h, 718g, 743g (the) Rock 222bd, 540e, 877b Sabbath rest, peace of 141d, 929d, 936a sacrificial host 111i, 176c, 183bh, 184g, 186g, 187j (see also Communion, Peace-offerings) sceptre of 312b secrets, mysteries (q.v.) of 317gh, 669ab, 870ge, 871i, 882c, 899b-d, 901a-c, 911g, 925a seeking man 384o, 546a self-bestowing 397m self-originate, un-originate 109b, 165a, 933d (see also Yahweh) self-sufficing 405e (his) service, perfect freedom 102m, 282r, 851j, 855a, 859ikl severity of 846e, 849g-i, 859g, 929d shepherd of his people 158g, 343e, 354d, 358c, 381g, 397i, 383f, 441b, 444g simplicity, unity of attributes 239f source of all authority 950f source of life 144d, 148b, 154h, 331a, 870d source of skill 109k, 366dk special relation to Israel 105d, 110c, 114b, 182c, 211f, 282s, 284u, 312d, 341c, 442j, 443h, 470d, 525e, 736f (see also Adoption) (a) spirit 109b, 115a, 137d, 480f, 591fg (see also Spiritual Being) supreme dominion of 38d, 61c, 106b, 111e, 114a, 137ac, 153a, 230g, 271j, 272f, 274g, 330gh, 331gh, 441c, 531dg, 625c, 690d, 751a, 857 lnp, 859g sure defender 294a, 308n, 339e, 344e, 345cf throned on Cherubim 177c, 285q, 430a throned on clouds 332f, 403a transcendent 114ab, 212g, 215a, 330gh, 441c, 525c-e, 591cfgh, 592c, 633c, 730h trust, confidence, faith in 102e, 212b, 214a, 280o, 283k, 294ad, 365a, 366h, 372a, 435j, 437e, 441c, 471ej, 570a, 596f, 660 l, 680i, 683cf, 687bcd, 692g, 693c, 731c, 732h, 760b, 850be, 855f unapproachable 182c, 197d, 259b, 966b unrequited love of 425bc, 536c vigilance of 545e, 546b, 547g, 766d indicator of the just 326k, 439jl, 445j, 763ab wills to save all 921ef, 925d (see also Salvation) wisdom of 102i, 163f, 238 l, 314f, 316a-d, 317g, 318 l, 334ae, 366k, 368hmn, 392c, 403a, 441c (see also Wisdom) without wife a family (unlike Pagan gods) 109c working in and through man 36h, 37a wrath of 929d zealous for Israel, Jerusalem 438g, 449k, 545e, 546b, 549g, 550m GOD-FEARING, see Converts, Fear GOD-HEAD, The 910d, 912b GODLESS, The 591b (see also Fool) GODLINESS 953c
 GODLIAS, see Gedaliah
 GO'EL, Avenger, Redeemer, Next of kin 194k, 218a, 219c, 246g, 247i, 271d, 276b, 326k, 341c, 372g, 462j (see also Levirate)
 God Job's Go'el 326jk GOETHE 918i
 GOETTSBERGER, J. 32i, 135ip GOG AND MAGOG 478e, 479b, 491a-l, 523g, 671w, 971ef (see also Armageddon, Messianic Conflict) the names 491b

GOLD (see also Calf, Incense, Altar) gold-silver values 83b leaf, gilding, plating 268dfn, 285r, 940c of Ophir, Arabia 269g, 282hh, 329e, 681c panning for 329d
GOLDEN MEAN 364g, 367f
GOLDEN RULE, The 305a, 586c, 687h GOLGOTHA, see Calvary
GOLIATH 38b, 55a, 93k, 233e, 254d, 263d, 284z his brother 284z GOMER 149h, 491b (see also Cimmerians)
GOMER, Ossee's wife 514bf, 515b, 516aefg GOOD, all beings, as such 397h brought out of evil 397i God source of all 365b returning good for evil 950i GOOD FRIDAY 719d, 739e, 742h (see also Crucifixion) GOODWILL 745j, 749f
GOPHER WOOD 147a
GORGAS 560b, 563c, 564a, 577ad, 578a, 579d
GOSHEN, Gessen, in Egypt 60a, 131e, 157m, 158d, 168c, 233be, 309b GOSHEN, Gosen, in Palestine 233b GOSHEN (Jesse), Land of 309b GOSPEL, The Christian Faith 623bc, 626ab, 633ci, 684d, 689a, 730d, 745fi, 747e, 750e, 763h, 845be, 850bg, 893e, 915b, 932c, 969i and the Law 752b, 844bi, 846b, 849dj, 858b Catholic, for all men 715d, 743e, 745i, 746f, 748g, 749fj, 753a, 762b, 893g, 894c, 895eg, 896d-f, 900f, 901a, 913b, 925d Christ is the Gospel 623a, 641a, 746a, 796f, 930a effects of 886m, 950c good tidings, evangel 744i, 745i, 747cf, 751d, 766b, 951a Jewish-Hellenic transition 615a of Love 623de, 624b, 637d of the kingdom (q.v.) 625a-g, 750e new wine 625b, 752b, 820e preached to the dead 951ac preached to the poor 71f, 584o, 588d, 694c, 844i, 864h, 870d, 947c urgency of 626c, 756c, 758g GOSPELS, The Apocryphal 33n, 86j, 94bem, 681g GOSPELS, THE FOUR 35cf, 41e and the Faith 616dg, 746a contrasted with apocryphal 33n, 94em, 681g date of 605fg, 606abg, 608a, 618e, 619e, 630d different manners, aims of writers 36ij, 768c, 773a discrepancies between 604df, 607e, 749j, 750gh, 751abd, 752acg, 753a, 754b, 764bd, 765d, 768cdf, 769bd, 771ab, 772ab, 773abc early diffusion, use of 16ab, 77b, 81a, 101f, 607j harmonized 17d, 750gh, 751ab historicity, trustworthiness 33mno, 604d, 607h, 630d, 699f, 701d, 732h, 740i Tatian's Diatessaron 17d miraculous element in 626d mythical theory refuted 605e-g old Latin prologues to 606b oral tradition and 17c, 609a order of priority 606a-c (see also Synoptic Problem) sources 33lm, 607e, 608c, 609a (see also Matthew, Mark, Luke, John) GOSSIP 660h
GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE 32b GOTHIC BIBLE OF ULFILAS 4b, 26c
GOURD 532i
GOVERNMENT, right functions of 861ac (see also Church and State)
GOZAN 278e
GRACE 87d, 102d, 271h, 282r, 385i, 623b, 643a-g, 645h, 748c, 789e, 823b, 825e, 826b, 834ij, 844b, 846ce, 849d, 854-5, 904dg, 910a, 914f, 929d, 931a, 952i (see also Charismata) (GRACE) actual Grace 36g, 804h, 847g, 931a and Merit 907e, 910b Christ its source 646c, 759j, 781c, 782d, 894e concept unknown in OT 114f effects of 850, 854a, 856a efficacious grace 36g, 794f, 795h, 801i, 857p free, gratuitous 114h, 620d, 643bcd, 645h, 646g, 648n, 859 l, 894c, 925dg freewill, co-operation and 36g, 388i, 402f, 546a, 697a, 729g, 730abe, 847g, 857gp, 903a, 947b grace for grace 783e gratiae gratis 36g, 749i, 860d, 938a gratiae gratum 36g habitual grace 804h, 931a indwelling spirit and 854ab, 855c, 856b, 870g, 886g, 931c lost through sin 114f life of 854a, 922h man created in state of 143j means of 941c mediated by Church 898kl, 900c necessity of 804h offered to all men 388ij, 392e, 401b of OT rites, etc. 106g, 823b of vocation, calling 923b overcomes sin 397i, 854c-f prayer wins 397im, 402f pre-eminent in Mary 85 prenatal 454c prevenient 642c, 794g rejection of 654c state of 2c, 101b, 911c, 938c sufficient 857p unconvenanted 645 l

GRACE AT MEALS 363e, 596f, 701d, 774c, 880e GRADUAL PSALMS, The 336, 361d recited by Christ 339h GRAFFITI OF THE PALATINE, The 810c
GRAFTING 859e-h
GRAPES, plucking other people's 218o (see also Vine) sour grapes 485f
GRATITUDE 211h, 219e, 220a, 274d, 762b, 799f, 859g, 950c (see also Thanksgiving)
GREAT BEAR, see Bear
GREATNESS, True and False 400d, 755d
GREECE, Greeks 451s, 543c, 545ikl, 550j (see also Hellenism, Philosophy) Jewish slaves of 523k measures 82cde Persian invasions 289c, 310m, 311e, 544ac, 597b weights 82hi
GREEK-HEBREW COMBINATIONS 964c GREEK LANGUAGE (see also Koine)
alphabet 19h
Christian Theology and 662d perfect of permanent fact 934ab used in Palestine 584g universal language 4a, 8b, 14c, 21a, 122m, 597d GREEK ORTHODOX 15m, 55e GREEK RELIGION, Aryan origins 598o, 599ii attempt at reform 599f early changes 598o Homer's influence 598p, 599f low popular notion of Divine nature 598q (the) Mysteries (q.v.) 599a-d GREFTING 269c, 804d (see also Salutation, Shalom) with a kiss 740c with praise of God 269c GREGORY XVI, Inter praecipuos 10g GREGORY NAZIANZEN, St 3e, 15c, 17k
GREGORY OF NYSSA, St, on the tower of Babel 3e, 149n GREGORY THAUMATURGUS, St 3e

GREGORY THE GREAT, St 3df, 7d, 10c, 15j, 718e GRIDDLE, Bakestone 481b GRIEF, Oriental signs of 320gj GRIESBACH, J. J. 582e, 604e
GRINDING CORN 244m, 443 l (see also Mill) GROVES, see Asherah
GUARDS, The Royal, Palace 267bk, 269i, 270g, 276h (see also Cherethites)
Sabbath duties 276h GUESTS, anointing of 243c, 343c, 753g polite constraining of 244e, 245g (see also Hospitality) GUILDS, Brotherhoods, Pagan 633h GULLS 215f
GUR 275i
GUTENBERG'S PRESS 8d
GUTTIUM, Gutians 117de, 121b
GYGES, King of Lydia 121k
GYMNASIA 562b, 575d, 603b HABACUC, Habakkuk, 335e, 413cd, 513q, 539-40 canticle of 539de, 540p-y hill of 539b, 540g new MS discovered 80 l of Daniel 539b
HABER, the Cinite, Heber the Kenite 240bd HABIRI, Habiru, The 59d, 60b, 62b, 63h, 78b, 119 l-120b, 163e, 176b HABOR, The River 278e, 283m
HACELDAMA, Aeldama 551f
HADAD, Adad, the Edomite 270c
HADAD, Haddad 119b, 271gkl, 274i, 278i, 284v, 431f (see also Melkart, Rammon)
HADAREZER, Hadadezer 284v HADES 389c, 394d (see also Sheol)
HADORAM, Hadadram 284v
HADRACH 65b, 550c
HADRAMAUT 149k, 269h HADRIAN, The Emperor 530v, 551b colonizes Jerusalem 81h HAGAR, see Agar
HAGGADAH, The 32h, 584c, 586e, 591f, 592de, 593a, 595c, 690f HAGGAI, see Ageus
HAGIOGRAPHY, The 11f, 12de, 13f, 34c, 37b, 282ik, 288b, 382e, 409c
HAI, Ai 118d, 139e, 218d, 228bde, 231ac-f, 232e, 233g, 245efj, 270n, 275b HAI OF MOAB 466g
HAIFA 54j
HAIL 90a, 168c, 333c HAIR 157c, 423h, 603a (see also Nazarites, Tonsure) a crown prince's lock 270c cut for mourning 215c, 430f, 458c offering 198j-m numbered 693c plucking 320g Samson's long 244abelm warriors long-haired 241c, 244a HAIR-CLOTH, Sackcloth 274m, 309e, 413f, 432i HALAH, Hala 278e
HALAKAH 584c, 586e, 690f
HALF-BREEDS 550e
HALF-TIMBERING 268g
HALICARNASSUS 572b
HALLEL, The 336, 360g-361b, 362g at the Last Supper 339h, 360g, 361b, 720c, 739di HALLEY'S COMET 681d
HALYS, The River 893c
HAM, Cham 149c, 938e
HAM, City of 150f
HAMAN, see Aman
HAMARTOLUS, Georgios 607k, 777g
HAMATH, Hamat, Emath 57k, 65b, 121dg, 122c, 149j, 202d, 234b, 269e, 277ek, 278gi, 280p, 284v, 286m, 428ho, 466 l, 493h, 524b, 527j, 550d HAMILCAR 273n
HAMITES 136fh, 149din
HAMLET 374c, 582d

HAMMON 283r
HAMMURABI 117f-jl, 118g, 121a, 125g 150e, 151g Amraphel and 59d, 125g date of 59e
 law code (C.H.) 38e, 61d, 79g, 82f, 117gh, 130k, 173g ff., 193ad, 194e, 198e, 218ae HAMAR, Hemar 829b
HAMPERS 701d, 703d
HAMUTAL, Amital 281a, 485o
HANAMEEL, Jeremias' cousin 462j HANANEEL (Hanameel, misprint in DV) The Tower of 462h, 554d HANANI, brother of Nehemias 67e the Prophet, Seer 276o, 282t, 286ddee, 409f, 413g HANANIAS, the False Prophet 415b, 416c, 461g HANDS (see also Filling) empty 173e, 274g the right hand 718g, 743g uplifted to bless 775c HANDS, LAYING ON OF 199d, 207i, 276n (see also Ministry, Ordination) at commissioning of Barnabas and Saul 834b at sin-offering 180d, 184bc, 185b by our Lord 709a, 751d, in blessing 709a in Confirmation (q.v.) 651e, 820b, 830c, 831e, 839f, 937e, 938a in ordination 820d, 822d, 828a, 835e in penance, absolution 654b on the sick 751d, 831e, 946c on Timothy 639g HANES, see Herakleopolis
HANNIBAL 567b
Hapax Legomena, Pauline 919a
HAPHTARAH, The 751b
HAPLOGRAPHY 283r, 309o, 331h, 332ch, 350g, 571b HAPPINESS 332e, 370a of Heaven 595b, 752h, 850d, 855e, 932c, 936a proverbial OT felicity 267j Haram-esh-Sherif, The 268j
HARAN, Harran 59d, 66c, 79j, 105be, 120k, 122a, 149g, 150a, 154cq, 155f, 280op, 306i, 309f HAREM 152h, 153e, 257h, 261g, 270a appropriation of defeated king's 267e HARLOTS, Harlotry 711f (see also Idolatry, Prostitution) HARMONY, Concord 635a
HARNACK, A. von 35c, 606bg, 607am HAROD, Harad, Fountain 242f HAROSHETH, Haroseth 57i, 240bc HARRAN, see HARRAN
HARVEST, festivals 83g, 113hj, 219e of souls 790cd
 of the earth 970a
HASDRUBAL 567b
HASHMAN 70b
HASIDIM, Chasidim, Assideans 511g, 562h, 566c, 579e, 587c HASMONEANS, see Maccabees
HASOR, City of, see HAZOR
HATHOR, The Goddess 60e, 163c, 172b HATRED 686e, 687a, 947a, 948a, 956d, 957d (see also Hebrew Idioms) HATTUS, Hattush 119a-c, 283f HATTUSIL I 119c
HATTUSIL III 120d
HAURAN, Auran 54e, 493hi
HAWKINS, Sir John 607a
HAZOR, Hasor 57i, 62d, 118k, 228bd, 230g, 233cd, 240ac, 267k, 269g, 277k, 303a, 466m HAZEL OF DAMASCUS 65ac, 272c, 274 lm, 275cdf, 276fp, 411a, 524b, 526d HAZAR-ENAN 493hi
HAZAZON-TAMAR 150f
HEAD-COVER as symbol 247j
HEAD-ROPES for carrying 272f HEALING 88b, 90c, 826g (see also Jesus, Physician) charismatic gift of 831e

HEALTH 403g
HEART, The 377c, 402f, 523e, 643h, 685f, 687a, 702f, 713c, 732c, 758d, 936b (see also Psychology, Sacred) God hardening 109 l, 165d, 212d, 233e, 388i, 425n, 626b, 729gh, 857m of flesh, of stone 940a words from 697b
HEAVEN, the Heavens 40f, 339e, 340c, 528h, 595b, 718e, 855, 887i, 917a, 939f, 943c (see also Beatific Vision, Happiness, Eternal) Christian longing for 887j, 850b-f, 851c, 854b, 855efh, 856 joy of 718de, 887j kingdom of 678f, 682e periphrasis for God 591c, 625a, 678f seven heavens 92j, 591f, 595b, 891e HEBAL, Mount, see Ebal HEBER, the Patriarch 59d, 120b, 149p
HEBER, the Kenite, see Haber HEBREW, Hebrews, Abraham the Hebrew 59d adopt Canaanite language 19j ancestral language 19j (the) Aperu, Habiru, Habiri and 59d, 60b, 78b, 120ab, 163e extension of term 120b fecundity of 164b literary genius of the 99b meaning non-Gentile 250c, 252 l name (origin, meaning of the) 19j, 59d, 60b, 149k, 150g stature of 146k
HEBREW ACADEMY, The 22a HEBREW IDIOMS, Hebraisms 21d, 39m, 918i
 'a hundredfold' 153n
 'all' (meaning of) 130k
 'among' meaning 'above' 748cf
 'answered and said . . . ' 697d, 702e
 'at that time . . . ' 156j
 'Blessed be Yahweh' 133d
 'by the way of . . . ' 212b
 'Children of . . . ' 714d, 761b, 766e conjunction of opposites for Totality 143f, 285ht, 694c
 'eating the flesh of' 653h
 'first-born son' 472g, 749d for a 'man child' 270 l, 271d for energetic action 320g
 'for ever' not everlasting 150d, 151i, 158g for refusal 86a for 'to instal' 180a, 187jo future permissive 686e
 'gates of' 704c
 God's permissive will and 626b
 'hating, forgetting' expressing preference 154g, 157e, 218g, 484n, 686e, 687a, 854j
 'he opened his mouth' 320 l
 'in the name of' 650f irremissible sin and 654c
 'many' as an indefinite number 644h, 735i, 739h, 941b of comparison 756d, 757g opposed statements express uncertainty 38c
 'over against' 151g, 153h quid mihi et tibi? 271i, 703b, 727f, 786b relative denial 457a relative truth expressed absolutely 155b
 'rising early' 287ee sensus praecisus 130c, 133b, 148b, 150b singular used collectively 532i superlative ('Holy of Holies,' etc.) 940c
 'three days,' 'the third day' 157g, 266de, 271j, 532d, 671hl, 697d
 'to see the face of God' 109d, 318c, 331e, 341d, 342d, 423e, 532ae
 'to see the face of the King' 341d 'until' 672f, 681b whole for part 136h, 143c, 146i, 282bb, 284ck

HEBREW LANGUAGE 19g-j, 20ab, 210e (see also Bible) adopted from Canaanites 19jk, 79i becomes dead language 20bc, 24f, 584d, 677f canonicity and 13c, 19f dialects, accents 20a inscriptions in 19kl not the vulgar tongue of Jews 20bc, 24f paratactic subordinates 125c prescinds without excluding 130c, 133b, 148b, 150b punctuation and vowel points 21j, 22bd repetitions 132ef script formerly Phoenician 19 l, 21gh, 80il Square, Aramaic (Babylonian) script, 21hj, 80 l, 685h superlative 149c, 384c, 425 l
 'the lip of Canaan' 19j, 432f verbal modes and tenses 19h, 462f, 550f word division 21j HEBREW PSALTER, St Jerome's 338b
HEBREWS, Apocryphal Gospel of the 607g HEBREWS, Epistle to 642j, 653f, 711g, 836b, 927-44 (see also Priesthood, Session) authorship, Paulinity 17egikl, 661cd, 905e, 928, 930e, 932cd, 933ae, 934bef, 935ade, 936c, 937cd, 938d, 939fg, 940adh, 941a, 942c, 943bc, 963a Biblical Commission on 52a-c, 928ad-f Canonicity of 17il, 928a-d characteristics 905e, 927be, 928b-e, 930e, 931b, 933a, 935d, 936c date of 661f, 928b, 929b destination, addressees 927b, 928e, 934e, 935d, 937d, 944b deuterocanonical references 14b epilogue to 927b, 944g illustrates Jer 31:22, 462h, 931a importance of 929c influence of St Stephen 829a not dictated 928f on the Day of Atonement 135f, 930ef, 939d, 940c-g on the Holy of Holies 191e, 936c, 938d, 940ce on the Tabernacle 163h, 932c, 939ef, 940cf, 941a our Lord's sonship in 930ab, 933c, 935d, 937bc, 939d prologue to 927bc, 933 provenance of 14b, 929b severity of 937e, 942c style, language of 77e, 927e, 928c-f, 933a, 934b, 935ad, 936ac, 937ade, 940cd, 942ad, 943e theme, purpose 927b-e, 929a, 930-2 theory of Aramaic original 928cf three 'terrible things' 942c HEBRON 55d, 57de, 80e, 106a, 118 l, 131e, 139e, 150d, 202d, 224c, 228c, 232d, 233ab, 234df, 239b, 244 l, 283gr, 284c, 565d (see also David, Qiryath-Arba)
 Abraham buried at 55d
 David rules at 55d, 63g, 124 l, 257d, 258e, 283e, 284bch, 285t diverse allocation of 234df, 236i Levitical Hebronites 285k, HEDONISM 376j, 377e, 601b HEGEL 44b, 605f, 606ab, 616b
HEINISCH, P., on Genesis 135is HELBON 487m
HELCIAS, Hilkiah, of Anathoth 453a
HELCIAS, Hilkiah, of Jerusalem 453a HELCIAS, Hilkiah 280g, 281i, 283n, 473c HELI, grandfather of Christ 750h the high-priest, see Eli HELIODORUS 575ad violates temple 68b, 575b, 576b HELIOPOLIS (On) 131c, 157d, 432f, 464e, 488f Jewish Temple at 555k

HELLENISM (see also Greece) and the Jews, Judaism 68b-e, 314h, 316dg, 404c, 559cdg, 562gh, 566ac, 568ad, 575a-f, 576a, 579e, 580a, 584ben, 585cg, 588a, 589d-h, 590ab, 596c, 597c, 607 l, 874b Greek cities in Palestine 584fg Greek language in Palestine 584g Hellenization of Midd'e East 21a, 77e, 122m, 562d, 589d, 597bc, 598i, 744c homosexuality in 562b, 575e, 596d, 602b religion in the Hellenistic world 590c HELL, Gehenna 280k, 686k, 699h, 714h, 718h, 734d, 761e (see also Eternal Punishment) apocryphal, Dantesque idea of 94j fire, worms 186a, 309o, 400b, 438f, 451s, 595i, 699h, 706d, 718h, 734de gates of 545r, 704c HELL, Hades, home of demons 704c mitigation of 752c
HELL, Hades, Paradise 771b, 816b, 858e, 940g, 951ab (see also Purgatory, Sheol)
HELVIDIUS 672i
HEMAN, Hemam, The sons of 283q, 285gh the Sage 267 l HENNA 384f
HENOCH, see Enoch HENOTHEISM 44b-e, 104h, 105d, 108b, 135b, 243j, 271k, 273n, 278h, 480g HEPHZIBAH 486s
HER, see Er
HERACLEOPOLIS 118f, 438b
HERACLITUS 781b
HERACLEON NT 25ij
HERCULES, Herakles 244c
HERCULES, Tyrian (Melkart) 575e, 579e HEREM, see Anathema (Ban)
HERES, Hill of 239d
HERESY 7d, 688b, 836b, 863i, 866cf, 909d-f, 952eg, 953fhi, 954a-e, 961 (see also Protestantism)
Adoptionism 617b, 727c, 845f, 955h, 963c Albigensian 10c
Antinomian 851b, 863i, 960f, 961a-d, 963c Apollinarian 840e
Arianism 85f, 792a, 799j, 928d Cerinthus 776g, 778h, 909h, 955h, 958d, 962b Docetism 145a, 769b, 778g Donatism 580f, 794c Ebionites 778g eucharistic heresies 94i, 652ch, 653befj, 794c Gnosticism 92c, 94i, 604f, 607 l, 656h, 776c, 782c, 909fh, 918fg, 919d, 921a, 922a, 963c, 965ab, 970c Hellenistic syncretism 909e Jansenism 10d
Judaistic errors 909e, 912d, 918g, 919d, 921ab, 925b kenoticism 907bc Mani, Manichees 35fg, 36a
Marcion 7cd, 17dh, 35fg, 607m, 661c, 776c, 777a, 844 l, 863m, 898i, 909h Melchisedechian 938e Monophysites 36j
Montanism 35g, 671u, 776c, 938b, 962b, 965b
Nestorian 36j
NT meaning of 'heretic' 925h Pelagianism 642j, 804h, 854j rigourism 654c Scriptures and 7bcd, 10d sexual catharism 145b, 922a, 966c St John and 955eh, 957ab, 958a, 959g, 963c Ultraquism 794c
Valentinians 7cd, 776c, 909h Waldensians 10c, 36a
HERITAGE, The Christian 854a, 855abe, 925g, 949fg, 950ch HERMAE, The 270n, 562e
HERMAS 17ghj, 18e, 94a, 863g, 919b

HERMENEUTICS, see Exegesis, Interpretation
HERMES (mercury) 835b
HERMON, friend of St. Paul 863g
Mt. 54ef, 55cf-h, 134b, 229a, 233g, 234b, 283 l, 284g, 347a, 356b, 362d, 385e, 403c, 705ad (see also Siron)
HEROD AGRIPPA, see Agrippa HEROD ANTIPAS 58fi, 72a, 73a-d, 619de, 620c, 676d, 689d, 691a, 696c, 727e, 731ef, 770b, 831g, 834b divorce and incestuous marriage 73a, 701ab, 731f John Baptist and 73a, 701ab, 708a, 727e, 731ef, 754e, 772g leaven of Herod 732h our Lord and 73a, 619de, 620c, 701ac, 704a, 728g, 731ef, 732h, 751i, 754de, 759c, 770b, 826c war with Nabataeans 73a, 676dfg, 731f HERODIAN LINE, The 69bc, 70g
HERODIANS, The 618f, 696c, 712e, 728g, 736g, 766d, 865e HERODIAS 73a, 676d, 701a, 727e, 731f HERODION 863g
HERODOTUS 37g, 937c
HEROD THE GREAT 58fg, 71, 81e, 340b, 584d, 617c, 670e, 675a, 676a, 681c, 682abc, 701ab, 704a, 830e, 833f, 841m (see also Temple) a Hellenizer 71f and the Magi, Innocents 71i executes his sons 71i Idumean 70 b marriages of 70d, 71i nominates high-priests 71d rebuilds Samaria as Sebaste 58h ruthlessness of 71dei, 682ab, 749ab HEROES, Demigods, Greek 598q, 891f HEROIC ACT, The 857f HEROIC VIRTUE in OT 102f
HESHON 57i, 61b, 243j, 309f, 386e, 430e, 466a-e HESRON, Hezron 224c, 283bc
HESYCHIUS 8b, 24ab
HETHITES, see Hittites, Hurrians
HETHLON, Hethalon 493h
HEVITES, see Hivites
HEXAPLA, see Origen
HEXATEUCH, The alleged 227g
HEZEKIAH, see Ezechias
HEZEKIAH the Zealot 71a, 72b HIDDEN LIFE, see Nazareth HIEL, rebuilder of Jericho 230g, 271f HIERAPOLIS 909bc
HIERODULUS 218n (see also Prostitution—cultic) HIGHER CRITICISM 1h, 33o, 43cf, 44-6, 581b, 604-9, 630d, 661d, 737a, 776d (see also Form, Forms)
Biblical Commission and 45e Catholic scholarship 6a, 44j, 45a-fj, 46a-m, 621a-d eschatological school of 608c-e, 621c fallacy of verbal statistics 934b historico-critical school 606be-g modernists 45d, 46ad, 621a-d mythological school 605e-g, 608b non-Catholic conservatives 37g, 604b, 606g, 607h, 661d obscurantism 32m, 46ef Pius XII and 37g, 45j, 46d-m rationalism and 6a, 604ac, 605a, 609e sound analysis 661h underrating of external evidence 604e, 606b, 607de, 608c, 609de HIGH PLACES 112c, 209b, 211c, 213d, 215a, 217e, 252b, 265e, 267eg, 271k, 456f, 485f, 535 l and law of one sanctuary 112cd, 211c, 249c, 252b, 267e Canaanite 80g, 211c
Elias bemoans destruction of 112d, 211c, 272b, illicit, not always idolatrous 112c, 211c, 213d, 217e, 270o, 286ddh, 287u HIGH-PRIESTS 111a, 236g, 237a, 249d, 276h, 288f, 289gj, 298de (see also Aaronites, Consecration, Priesthood of Christ, Vestments) (HIGH-PRIESTS) (on) Day of Atonement 111a, 177b, 179f, 191d-j, 406h, 642e, 647e, 930e, 940f descent of 283o emeriti, retired 585c, 750d Herod nominates 71d ignored in Ezechiel's new law 492an (the) Ithamar line 179a married 585b murdered by zealots 737h Paralipomenon and 282cc, 283o (the) Passion and 826ab powers, jurisdiction 585c prophesying 649d, 799a, 800g Rome nominates, deposes 585c, 750d sanctity of 193jk Sanhedrin and 587a utterance of Tetragrammaton 133b, 406h, 591c vicegerent of 281i HIGHWAY, Messianic, see Via Sacra HIGHWAYMAN 367n

HILARY OF POITIERS, St 3f, 15c, 928d
HILKIAH, see Helcias
HILLEL, Rabbi 34c, 376c, 586cf, 596b, 663c, 708bc, 735b, 827c, 850e HIMATION, The 603a, 878b HIMERA 273n
HIN, The 82d, 192s
HINNOH, Valleys of sons of 234e, 235e, 280k, 287 l, 295f, 438f, 448g, 451s, 456f, 457a, 462h, 554b, 595c, 685k, 721c, 734d
HIPPO, Council of 15fhil, 17 l, 94 l, 959c, 960c HIPPOCRATES 745f
HIPPODROME 93c
HIPPOLYTUS 14d, 928b
HIPPOS 58h
HIPPOTAMUS 317h, 334c
HIRAMABI, the Temple craftsman 286gi
HIRAM OF TYRE 57k, 63hj, 124 l, 258g, 267m, 282u, 286d HISTORIANS, Hebrew (see also History) chronological order and 123b, 132d, 146c, 147b, 148b, 150afh, 152g, 153q, 154o, 155h, 157g, 282aa, 284b, 287ax, 532i circuitous, repetitive 32j, 132ef, 135c, 148b, 153q, 154o, 157g, 278f, 279ci, 282hh compared with moderns 36i, 139i, 148b, 225a impartial, frank and truthful 79d, 80c-k, 139bf, 153q, 225a, 226b, 244b, 265j-l methods, outlook 32e-m, 39h, 41cd, 59c, 132d, 139i, 140a, 148b, 225c-f, 531g pragmatic, didactic, edificatory 32g, 265co-i priority, pre-eminence among ancients 38a, 132a, 225cd unique in ancient Near East 225d HISTORICAL INTEREST OF EARLY CHURCH 608c, 609d HISTORICITY OF BIBLE 44bcgh, 46i, 52j, 79k, 80k, 138-40, 223e-225, 226c-i, 265j-l, 282efaa-ff, 310k, 630d (see also Bible, Genesis, Inerrancy, Inspiration) Biblical Commission on 32i, 50gi, 52j, 226i, 301f, 308a hyperbole (q.v.) 136h, 143c, 146i, 282bb, 284ck prolepsis 150b, 158d, 239c, 244j (the) Gospels 33mno, 604d, 607h (see also Matthew, Mark, Luke, John) HISTORY 32e-m (see also Generations, Historians) ancient conception of 32eh, 139i Arab, Moslem historical method 225e edifying 32gm, 265co-i epic 32h
God and 32e, 225ab, 226f, 238 l, 293e,

392-5, 316a, 425h, 426mn, 441e, 458h, 469g, 525d, 528bi, 532c (HISTORY) historical novels 32h (see also Haggadah, Midrash) history proper 32g Incarnation the key to 964e legend and 32h, 318d philosophy of 32e, 211a, 225ab, 226f, 238el, 239e, 265ce, 678g prehistory 32m, 136i, 138 primitive history 32gl prophecy and 12c proto-history 36j, 37gi, 136i, 138ae, 140b, 146d relative proportion of events 563d use of set speeches 41d HISTORY OF THE KINGS OF JUDAH, The 265f HITTITES, Hittim, Hethites 57d, 63a, 76d, 117j, 118kl, 119a-el-k, 120a-g, 121abd, 149j, 217d, 229a, 238j, 239c, 484l law code (H.L.) 45m, 61d, 79g, 173g, 212f surviving states in N. Syria 275a HIVITES, Hevites 57d, 120i, 230g, 232d HOBAB 200c
HOLDA, see Huldah
HOLINESS 109f-h, 110d, 183j, 425 l, 476f, 591h, 851ai, 859h, 899a, 949g, 950c, 951a (see also God, Sanctification) contagious 186b, 189c, 203 l, 205i, 492o, 544h dangerous to irreverence 172e, 250g, 259b objective holiness 859eh (H), Code of 135s, 182e, 192a-194t HOLCAUSTS, Whole-Burnt-offerings 106a, 111d-j, 183a, 184bc, 187l, 242d, 287o, 288c, 457a, 470e (see also Altar) expiatory efficacy of 111f, 320c HOLIFERNE 67h, 308c-309m
HOLTZMANN, H. J. 607ab
HOLY COMMUNION 345e, 624d, 637bc, 644ij, 653def, 753a, 795a-d, 875d, 877efg, 878dg (see also Communion) and Christian unity 637b, 652a, 653d, 825a, 866e, 877ef, 878e by desire 795e fasting and non-fasting 652f, 878d in both kinds 795e of infants 794c, 795e self-examination before 653d spiritual communion 794b, 795e HOLY FAMILY, The 617cf, 681-82c, 731b, 747c (see also Infancy)
 flight into Egypt 520bc, 617de, 681g, 682c
HOLY LAND, see Palestine HOLY OF HOLIES 111a, 112f, 177h, 178e, 191e-j, 268bd, 285q, 286fgj, 296i, 344e, 492fg, 747c, 940e debir 268d, 492fg, 940e doors, bolts of 268df, 269a empty after exile 113 l Hebrews on 191e, 936c, 938d, 940ce
HOLY ORDERS, see Ministry, Ordination
HOLY PLACE, The 111a, 112f, 177h, 492fg, 747c, 940cf HOLY SPIRIT, GHOST, The 451b, 522h, 547g, 640f, 642b, 648a-d, 651b, 748a, 805bc, 818ab, 822a, 904d, 929c, 931c, 932c, 949g, 950b, 951e, 961g (see also Acts, Breath, Charismata, Confirmation, Inspiration, Sanctification, Tongues) anointing of 957b at creation 35h, 141b, 403a, 650n, 750f, 751f at the Incarnation 651a, 931c at the Passion 940g body his temple 635c, 648d, 873de, 915f breathed on Apostles by Christ 812g, 823b Christian prayer and 820f, 856bc

(HOLY SPIRIT) comforter, strengthener, Paraclete 640f, 651bd, 781e, 804a, 818b, 826b, 832a communion, fellowship of 636d, 640g, 653d, 819a, 892f, 907a co-operation with 854d divinity of 818a, 826f (the) Dove 650n, 683b, 727c, 750fi, 784h drinking, partaking of 651b, 938a (the) fire, fiery tongues 650c, 651e, 784h, 823a (see also Fire) fruits of 651d, 757d, 850a, 897c giver of life 331a, 650d, 818d, 819b, 823b (the) good spirit 757d guidance of 639ad, 834ac, 837a, 839i, 840cg in the Church 635c, 651d, 781e, 804acd, 816d, 817a, 818bd, 819abc, 825b, 826df, 827b, 831d, 836g, 898j, 900f, 902ab in the OT 115c, 331g, 389b, 391j, 480deh, 490ce, 651a, 727c, 818a indwelling 640fm, 648c, 651e, 818d, 823b, 824f, 831d, 850abh, 854ab, 855c, 856b, 870g, 886g, 915f, 957d interceding, groaning 640f, 648d, 855f, 972e Jesus Christ and 618b, 622f, 623b, 636d, 648cd, 651e, 683bc, 727c, 750fi, 753e, 756e, 781e, 817cd, 822ab, 832h, 837c, 896h, 897e, 898k, 906c, 922a, 931c, 940g, 957b living water 651b, 697j Mani and 35f manifestations, miracles of 639a-h outpoured before baptism 651e outpouring of 522fh, 523i, 632d, 639a, 651ac, 682g, 727b, 753e, 788b, 796dj, 817ab, 822abc, 823a-c, 824e, 826c, 830c, 831d, 832jk, 836d (see also Pentecost) outraging the Spirit 931ac, 942c personality of 648c, 805bd, 817a, 818ab, 826f, 931c pledge, earnest of 648d, 650 l, 855-6, 886g, 899e prayer to 818b procession of 796j, 906c
 St John the Baptist and 650ci, 682h, 747e, 748j St Luke and 747ef, 748fj, 749g, 756e, 757d, 758c, 816d, 817ad, 818a, 837c sanctifier 931c seal of 650 l, 651e, 840j, 897e, 899e, 967b, 969f, 972f sevenfold gifts of 421d, 428m, 946b sin, blasphemy, against 654c, 729d, 757e, 758c, 818ab source giver of grace (q.v.) 931c spake by the prophets 651a, 818ab (see also Inspiration) spirit of Adoption 648d, 650dj, 855a-c, 896h spirit of love 637d, 640f, 825b, 826d, 850h spirit of promise 822a, 823b, 824e (see also Joel) spirit of truth 781e, 804a, 805d spirit of unity 637d, 823c taking and showing of Christ's 35f, 651b, 804c, 805d victorious over sin, flesh, death 854c-h voice of 855f, 856b walking in the spirit 894c wind 651c, 788b, 823ac (see also Breath) Wisdom and the 330f, 331a, 403a witness of 653h, 805b, 818bd, 827b, 958de HOLY WATER, Purificatory Water 169d, 198g, 199c, 204gh HOLY WEEK 783f, 801a
HOLY YEAR, The 194h
HOLZHEY, C. 301e
HOME LIFE 361 l, 374a, 654f (see also Family)

(HOME LIFE) of Christ 85 l, 86a, 94ce, 584k, 617cf, 676e, 747c, 749j, 750h
HOMER 37g, 135a, 491d, 598pq, 599bcf, 947g, 964d HOMICIDE 213a (see also Blood, Murder, voluntary and involuntary 215a, 286kk)
HOMILY ON THE PASSION, S. Melito's 102q
HOMOFOTELETON 244 l, 245h, 282v, 284d, 581b, 613a HOMOSEXUALITY 106d, 192s, 219c, 245feh, 332d, 526k, 562b, 575c, 596d, 602b, 745 l, 847h HOMS, Lake 278g
HONEY 184e, 244fg, 682e, 727b butter and 41g, 426cdghk milk and 385f
HOPE 688a, 721b, 850bd, 856cd, 887h, 931ab, 935d, 938cd, 942ab, 949i (see also Theological Virtues) in the OT 850e, 943c of glory, heaven 850b-f, 851c, 854b, 855, 856 HOPHNI and PHINEAS 249adi, 250c HOPHRA, Apries, Ephree, Pharaoh 122b, 281c, 463d, 464f, 477f, 485b HOR, Land of 57c
 Mount 205b, 209b
HORACE 584c
HOREB 164f, 166d, 212b, 272a (see also Sinai)
HORITES, see Hurrites HORMA 57e, 134a, 202k, 239c
HORNETS 176b, 213d HORNS (see also Altar) of Glory (Moses) 181j, 540s, 887c of Hattin 567d
 symbolic 325i, 470e, 540s, 546c, 748i HORONAIM, Horonites 67e, 430gh
HORSEMAN, angelic, apocalyptic 546b HORSES 333e, 425h hamstring, houghed 284v in Egypt 118 l, 150c, 168a, 465b Solomon's trade and wealth in 217d, 267k, 269gj visionary 546b, 548c HOSANNAH 361b, 710h, 711h, 736a, 765b
HOSEA, Hoshea, see Osee HOSPITALITY 184e, 238m, 242k, 244e, 245gh, 306a, 731c, 757a, 759e, 785a, 790dg, 860f, 944e, 951d HOST OF HEAVEN 458j (see also God)
HOTELS, Roman 603c
HOURS OF DAY AND NIGHT 83c, 709g, 742b, 824b, 825c, 841 l in the Synoptics 83c, 709g HOUSE, Housing 80d, 274b, 584o, 602f, 757d built on rock, sand 369c churches 81a, 725a, 820e, 825ab, 837a, 839a, 863g, 951d of Forest of Lebanon 268i, 269i, 433h of ivory 64g, 80d, 273c, 527b of John Mark 822c roof-chamber, pent-house 274b upper chamber 86d, 239h winter and summer 527b HOUSE ARREST, Custodia Militaris 842c, 843g HOUSE OF GOD 178be, 269c, 340e, 459n, 460g (see also Tabernacle, Temple)
HOUSEHOLD GODS 280n (see also Teraphim) HULDAH, Oлда, the Prophetess 280h, 281j, 287y, 412a HULEH, Lake 54d, 55f, 57i, 58i, 240d, 269g Humani Generis 135t, 1431m
HUMAN NATURE, RESPECT, see Man, Respect HUMAN SACRIFICE, see Sacrifice
HUME 87e
HUMILITY 42a, 158g, 267d, 275d, 369d, 397i, 398d, 404c, 656c, 703b, 706b, 714c, 724f, 727c, 732d, 734b, 736m

753a, 760e, 762a, 784de, 788j, 790c, 859fg, 862ik, 905d, 906c, 907a-e, 950i, 951g (HUMILITY) false modesty and 759e humble exalted 763d, 768d HUMMELAUER, F. von 32h HUMOUR 71j, 620e (see also Puns)
HUNGER 374a
HUR, Ashhur 176e, 283cf
HURAM, see Hiram HURRIANS (Horites) 57cd, 60a, 63a, 76d, 79k, 118l-l, 119c-h, 120ae, 121a, 149j, 150ef, 156ae, 232d, 238jk, 239b and Hittites 57d, 484l introduce horses 60a, 118l, 150c, 168a law codes 139g occupy Palestine 79k organize Hyksos invasion 118j-l HUS, Uz, Land of 318a, 320b
HUSBANDMEN, Wicked 736f
HUSBANDS AND WIVES 654f, 949de, 950h (see also Marriage, Wives, Women) HUSHAI, Chusai, the Archite 261ae, 262ad, 285p HUXLEY 87e
HYADES 322k, 333d
HYDASPES RIVER 20e, 309a
HYKSOS, The 57de, 60a, 78a, 80i, 118kl, 125f, 139c, 168a
HYMENAEUS 921c, 923g HYMNS 35g, 640o, 641l, 880eg, 922a, 923f (see also Canticles, Psalms) HYPERBOLE 136h, 149o, 225c, 267g, 282bb, 285c, 313n, 488h, 532i, 705d, 714f, 788k hyperbolic universals 136h, 143c, 146i, 282bb, 284ck HYPOCRISY 276d, 341e, 349e, 373i, 398c, 437i, 624c, 686f, 687e, 697b, 714d-l, 717f, 721b, 731b, 732bh, 736gm, 739b, 758b, 792f HYPOSTATIC UNION, see Christology HYRCANIA 67h, 71e, 308h HYRCANUS I, see John Hyrcanus HYRCANUS II 70d-h, 71bd, 570a, 572b HYRCANUS, son of Tobias 68b, 575a
HYSSOP 169g, 190jk, 349a, 810f

IBEX, The 333e
IBIS, The 333d, 439k
IBI-SIN 117e
IBLEAM, Jibleam, Jeblaam 275i, 277gh, 309h ICHABOD 250c
ICONIUM 81e, 816a, 835a
IDDO, see Addo
IDLENESS 917f
IDOLATRY, Idols 172i, 181a, 209b, 211c, 212g, 213d, 237f, 238m, 242l, 245a, 286uy, 287ghlmuvw, 289b, 312b, 345b, 393, 421e, 423fik, 438dg, 441c, 443eg-j, 444c, 470b, 472h, 474b, 475b, 476c-l, 481bc, 484h, 494d, 499b, 511f, 514i, 517f, 519a, 520n, 526cj, 532e, 540o, 541c, 542b, 600g, 633e, 875d (see also Abomination, Calf, Images, Teraphim) as devil-worship 393d, 475b, 643f, 877h as fornication 181i, 193b, 242l, 287a, 383kl, 456cfhi, 459i, 514mno consequences of 847g covetousness as 913a drink-offerings to 312b false religions as idolatry 847ce idol making a folly 442mn idol making sinful 393g in Israel 54b, 63d, 89e, 111c, 112a, 114i, 155f, 239k, 270ab, 281a, 286hhuy, 287ghlmuvw (see also Syncretism) in the wilderness 829c (see also Calf) Jeroboam's bulls not idols 270h permitted to pagans 108c, 212g politically disastrous to Israel 265l prophets and 411de, 412f, 413a, 456hi, 459i IDOLOTHYTA, Idol-offerings, Eating of 77f, 309k, 600h, 637b, 638a, 836fg, 862b, 867b, 875a-f, 877cghi, 964a, 965a IDUMEA, Idumeans 58fg, 70b, 72a, 309d, 559f, 560b, 563cf, 564e, 578a, 579d Edomites and 70b, 466h IDUTHUN, see Ethan

IGNATIUS OF ANTIOCH, St 17a, 35c, 94a, 678a, 908bc, 919c IGNORANCE 373g and the Passion 825f, 827b, 838f extenuating 771a, 838f of law culpable 390d IION, Ahion 271c
ILLUMINATION 782d, 938a (see also Baptism, Light) ILLYRIA 863b
IMAGE OF GOD, The, angels made in 142e Christ the 910d, 930b, 933c-e man made in 142de, 146h, 397gk, 386i IMAGES OF YAHWEH, Golden Calf 181a-d, 197i, 214b, 270h, 351c Jeroboam's bulls 265ce, 270h (see also Calf Worship) Micah's 245a-d, 270i prohibited 109c, 137d, 172i, 173a, 174a, 211c, 212fg, 213a, 214b, 270h, 290d, 589e IMITATION OF CHRIST, The 2a, 40i, 643l, 660jq, 704f, 710c, 732e, 745j, 760a, 813l, 825ab, 829f, 840ch, 841e, 862j-m, 903a, 907a-d, 944a, 946g, 949dgh, 950cg, 955edg, 956edg, 957cd
IMITATION OF GOD 183j
IMMACULATE CONCEPTION 42b, 84cdgh, 85i, 86h, 385e, 748g IMMANUEL, see Emmanuel IMMATERIALITY OF THE SOUL 114c, 115c, 388i IMMORALITY (see also Sexual Worship) a denial of Christ 961a and idolatry 847g IMMORTALITY, Gift of 137i, 143h, 144ad, 881b, 882c Medicine of 795ce in Posterity, Fame, etc. 309n, 346b, 348b, 397j, 404h, 405c, 406a of the Soul 102d, 115cd, 137e, 339f, 365ef, 378ab, 388i, 389c-g, 390f, 560d, 595a, 598l, 601c, 623g, 633h, 881b, 887ij personal 396g, 445m, 579e taught in the Greek mysteries 599a-d IMPANATION 652e
IMPENITENCE 374c, 433ej, 758c
IMPERIAL CONSTITUTION OF DARIUS I 121fg IMPERIALISM, Aggressive 966e
IMPETUOSITY 371a
IMPRECATORY PSALMS, The 33b, 313m, 339d, 360c, 363a, 860g Anglican dislike of 339d IMPROPERIA, The 536c
INADVERTENCE, SINFUL 378d INCARNATION, The 39ef, 40hj, 41h, 85gj, 355d, 368m, 383dm, 384o, 385hi, 386i, 426a, 474d, 545d, 622e, 640a, 641i, 645h, 646e, 649e, 651a, 681a, 690g, 696g, 717bc, 726cde, 736l, 740a, 746acd, 747c, 748d, 750a, 756e, 778g, 781a, 782f, 783cdf, 788c, 794, 834g, 846c, 854df, 892c, 905f, 906, 929d, 930cd, 931c, 933c, 934ae (see also Christology) casts light on Inspiration 36ij, 37a Christian conduct and 925d humility, self-emptying of 907bc descendit de caelis 788c, 794g eternally predestined 84d, 85f extended in the Eucharist 649e, 652b, 653g key to history 641k, 964e, 966c marriage parable 759f pagan incarnations 598q purpose of 757f, 846c, 854c, 956a religious conditions at 115h, 598l-602g, 965b tabernacling of the word 968g

(INCARNATION) unity and harmony of 628d INCENSE 177d, 191g, 283ee, 397c, 403bc, 451i, 482a, 483d, 681cf (see also Censer) atoning 111a composition of 180l daily, morning and evening 111a offerings 112f, 180i, 184df, 185f, 191g, 194a, 442i, 562c, 747e, 748l, 886m, 940f symbolism of 111a, 203n, 403bc, 903a, 966d, 967d use at Mass foretold 556d INCENSE ALTARS 80h, 112f, 180i, 268d, 492g, 940cef horns of 80h, 112f pagan precedents 180i pre-exilic example found 80h, 492i INCEST 152f, 155h, 156l, 166f, 192hi, 218k, 261ab, 390b, 393f, 701a, 708e, 836f, 866d, 867a, 872fg, 886jk and polygamy 192i case at Corinth 872f, 886jk of Herod Antipas 73a of the Pharaohs 390b, 393f, 842g
INCLUSION, Literary 685f, 688c, 702f, 709f, 723b, 792d, 795e, 804d INCOME TAX IN ROMAN EMPIRE 598c INCORRUPTION 846c
INDEFEATIBILITY OF CHURCH 923h, 968cd (see also Inviolability, Remnant) of Israel 593b
Index Librorum Prohibitorum 10dg, 43f INDIA 122fj, 269g, 420e religion of 599be, 660ad INDIFFERENCE 696g, 697f
INDIFFERENTISM 963c, 971c INDIVIDUAL, The 110g, 396g, 402f (see also Personal, Responsibility) individualism 653de, 655a, 656a
INDULGENCE FOR BIBLE READING 4h
INDUS, The River 143g
INDUSTRIALISM, PAGAN 601i, 602e
INDUSTRY, Diligence 369ij, 370e, 370j, 371g
INDUS VALLEY, The 117b, 420e INERRANCY, Biblical 6ab, 34e, 35b, 36aj, 37e-38, 39c, 42a, 52j, 225a, 226a, 289q, 301f, 308a, 426h, 507b, 574b, 577h, 630d, 691e, 692g, 699c, 721de (see also Historicity, Interpretation) alleged inaccuracies, discrepancies 32c, 37h, 64bc, 124ah, 135c, 147b, 155h, 156b, 158b, 225c, 226ai, 245ef, 265i, 275i, 282aa-ff, 287g, 289g-q, 295b, 301a-f, 308a, 472f, 476b, 560ab, 567b, 574b, 728f, 752d, 764b, 773c, 829b, 940c (see also Gospels) ages of the Patriarchs 140b-f chronological order 32j, 123b, 282aa, 710e (see also Historians) citations and quoted opinions 32j, 33d, 37h, 52i, 156b, 225e, 318j, 960e confined to original text 6b, 226ai duplicate narratives 36i, 38b, 696e excludes formal, not material, error 282ff in implications 32j, 38c, 52e in moral teaching 38d-f (see also Moral Problems) inadvertence and 721e Leo XII and 6b, 37dfg limitation of Vulgate's 28b, 37d, 223a, 226a literary devices 32-3, 36i, 37gi, 38ab, 41d, 45j, 46hi, 89d, 132a, 138d, 139i, 225c, 301a, 313mn, 376d, 382co, 383m, 384m, 388f, 391ah, 394a, 428k, 429f, 472f, 531e, 545gkl (see also Forms) orientalisms, semiticisms 9a, 33b, 136h, 155h, 225c, 313m, 339d, 340b, 360c (see also Hebrew Idioms)
our Lord on 35b Pius XII: Divino afflante Spiritu 37g pseudonymity 36i (see also Pseud-epigraphy) scribal errors, glosses, etc. 6b, 21k,

37ef, 38e, 64c, 134a, 211b, 226abi, 266d-j, 267jk, 269egi, 272f, 283aqu, 284wxz, 286i, 287e (see also Textual)

(INERRANCY) sensus praecisus 130c, 133b, 148b, 150b, 155b unscientific conventions of speech (q.v.) 37gi

INFALLIBILITY, consensus Patrum 9fh, 37b, 42b-d of Christ's humanity 627e of General Councils 37b of St Peter 746e, 764a, 768e, 836de of the Apostles 893g, 894h of the Bible 1f (see also Inerrancy) of the Church 1ef, 42b, 836g, 893g, 919e, 922h

INFANCY NARRATIVES, The 50gi, 617c-g, 678d, 680-82d, 744h, 745g, 747b-750b and Samuel 103a, 249h, 748g Holy Spirit in 747e semitic style 745b, 747b sources 85h, 614d, 745b, 747b, 748a, 749f

INFANTICIDE 164b, 484 i, 596c (see also Human Sacrifice, Moloch)

INFIDELITY 218j, 484m (see also Adultery, Unfaithfulness)

INGRATITUDE 242 i, 380d, 423c, 526k

INHERITANCE, Laws of 272h (see also Birthright) inheritance by daughters 79k, 207fg, 334h

INITIATION 633h, 908b

INJUSTICES OF LIFE 346b, 353a, 380b-d (see also Evil, Job, Suffering)

INK 483g, 581c, 662a

INNOCENT I 15ik, 17 i, 928d
Consulenti tibi 15i

INNOCENT III 10c

INNOCENTS, The Massacre of the 71i, 617ce, 682ab

INSECTS, Edible, but Unclean 189f, 215f

INSPIRATION, of Apostles 339f, 348d, 850e, 950b of prophets 1c, 34ce, 35cghi, 36bh, 37c, 184b, 201f, 272a, 339f, 414b, 454bd, 879ab, 952i, 953g pagan prophecy and 600ij, 837e (see also Balaam, Pagans)

INSPIRATION, BIBLICAL 1c-f, 6ab, 34-37d, 39bc, 85 i, 100a, 101de, 102a, 265 i, 301a, 310k, 313mn, 454d, 574f, 630d, 822d, 861h, 924b, 931c, 935e, 952i, 953g adapted to writer, hearer, times, etc. 5c, 6g, 9a, 132a, 142a, 143k, 144a, 232g analogy of musical instruments 34c, 35hi, 36e, 37c analogy of mysticism 37ab analogy with the Incarnation 5c, 36ij, 37a versions and 28b, 37d, 226a personal attribute 18c, 226a transient charisma 18c Anglican notions of 34b, 36d auctor immediatus 6g, 36bh-j, 37c auctor primarius 7bd, 38begi Canonicity and 11b Catholic sense of 6b, 9a, 34b, 36e degrees of 11b, 12d, 14f, 34ce, 36g, 37b divine approval and 318j early Church Fathers, etc. and 35c-i early heretics and 35fg, 36a editorial additions 162ef how revealed 18a-f independent of personal status 223b in relation to sources 137i, 147e, 156b, 574f inspiratio subsequens 36bc Jewish teaching 34c-e modern development of concept 6g, 36e-37d natural gifts and 104d not limited to Faith and Morals 1f, 6b, 37d NT on 35ad
obiter dicta and 6b, 37d

(INSPIRATION BIBLICAL) official Catholic teaching on 6b, 36ac-j, 37def, 225c of NT 17ace, 954g of substantial additions 317i OT on 34e, 413c psychology of 36j, 37a-c theory of verbal inspiration 36dg Thomist theory of 36f-g Vatican Council on 7d

INSTALLATION, Induction 180a, 187jo, 270k, 585b

INSTRUMENTAL CAUSES 6g, 36f-h, 37acf

INSURANCE, Roman 602e

Intellectus Agens and Possibills 37a

INTERCALATORY MONTH 83g

INTERCESSION 152bh, 181bdf, 197g, 201g, 202gh, 203m, 302c, 308n, 317h, 334ig, 359b, 395c, 417d, 528ab and Mediatorship of Christ 921f Christ's heavenly 446f, 939c, 941b, 956c power of Mary's 86ab

INTERCOURSE, Sexual, forbidden during menstruation 192j incurs Levitical uncleanness 191b

INTEREST ON LOANS, see Usury

INTERIM ETHIC 655b, 660a

INTERIOR LIFE, see Dispositions, Spiritual

INTERMEDIATE STATE 102d, 891f (see also Paradise, Purgatory, Sheol)

INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGES, see Lingua Franca

INTERPRETATION, of God's will 331e (see also Daniel, Joseph) of tongues 880dg
of visions 503j, 506c-g, 545g, 546b, 547e

INTERPRETATION OF SCRIPTURE 32-3, 39-42, 691e, 692g (see also Accommodation, Exegesis, Forms, Inerrancy, Inspiration, Midrash, Moral Problems, Mystical, Symbols, Typology) accommodation 40ij, 858c biblical studies and 9h, 39b, 41d-h, 42h by letter-number equivalence 586e, 680f (see also Gematria) by the analogy of faith 42e Church's authority 1bc, 8, 9a-g, 39b, 42bcd, 42b, 819c (see also Magisterium) Christological symbolism 40h forced, wresting of scripture 32d, 40d, 954g Hillel's rules for 850e Hummelauer's system 32hij (see also Forms) implicit and explicit sense 18df, 39f, 84c importance of context in 41g in the NT 40ghi, 551i, 662e, 877a-d, 887c-e, 894f, 895i, 897a, 921g, 950c (see also St Paul) literal, historical, sense 5a-c, 6c, 36j, 38a, 39c-jlm, 40i, 41a, 139i, 225c, 383c, 545 i-r, 551d, 554a literal, proper, and improper 39g obscurantism and 32m parabolic 32hk, 383c-egh (see also Parables) plenary sense 39djkilm, 42f primary and secondary sense 5a, 39cdj, 84gi, 85d private interpretation 9f, 10cde, 40g, 953g, 954g St Augustine's dictum 101e, 102hq, 163h spiritual 36gj, 39cdgi, 40, 41a, 42fg, 102p, 383afm, 894f, 897a (see also Mystical Interpretation) spiritual pre-requisites for 34 i, 42a

INTRINSIGENCE 963c

INVIOABILITY OF JERUSALEM 250g, 289f, 415g, 471f, 478g, 483f, 534 i

Invitatorium, The 338a, 357f

INVOCATION, of angels 321e of Saints 921f
of the name of the Lord 650g, 817d, 831d, 841f

IONIA, Javan 149h, 487m, 543c, 545i, 550j

IRENAEUS, St 606b, 607j, 671v, 777b, 955h, 966b on the age of Christ 676e
on the apocrypha 94k
on the Scriptures 3e, 7bd, 9f, 13c, 14d, 17e, 354h, 37e

IR MOAB 206i

IRON 62d, 80b, 125c, 139d, 146d, 214a, 240b chariots 240bd, 241d introduction of 120g, 146d, 228a mines 269gi

IRONY 144d, 313n, 698d

IRREVERENCE 145a, 188a, 273f, 274j, 275b, 878g

IRRIGATION 143cg, 214e, 473b, 478f, 480b (see also Canals, Water Supply)

ISAAC 102jq, 136f, 139c, 151i, 152a, 153i-154b, 155h, 797n, 943c Abraham's sacrifice of 40f, 106ab, 153a, 642f, 648n age (life-span) 140bcf blessings of 153f, 313b, 943c, 944c election of 857h inherits the promise 137f, 153g name of 59h, 139f, 151i Rebecca and 153e type of Christ 943c

ISAARITES, Izharites 285k

ISAI 283b (see also Jesse)

ISAIAH, Isaiah 41c, 66e, 279bfg, 287j, 303b, 406f, 411e, 412d, 413f, 414agi, 415f, 421c, 545g (see also Achaz, Ezechias) Achaz and 65d, 419f, 420ab, 425pr call of 414a, 421c, 425i-o character and genius of 421ef, 425n, 429a, 433a cleansing of 425m goes naked 432hi historical writings of 224f, 282us, 287b, 413b inspired, commanded, to write 12c, 20a, 34e, 35b, 413c, 427ab martyred, sawn asunder 93e, 280b, 413h, 421f, 943e mocked 437de
(the) name of 421c poetic elaboration of messages 279h policy of 279fi, 420d, 421ce, 425p, 427de, 430c, 433h, 438a-h sun-dial miracle 279k symbolically named sons 418d, 425s, 427b, 935b type of Christ 450i, 698d, 729h, 935ab withdraws from public prophecy 420b writes on tablets 427ab, 438c

ISAIAH, Apocryphal Vision, Assumption of 93e

ISAIAH, The Book of 419-51, 682e, 702c (see also Deutero-Isaiah, Emmanuel, Messianic Prophecy, Suffering Servant, Trito-Isaiah, Virgin Birth) against feminine luxury 423hi against foreign alliances 420d, 421ce, 425p, 427de, 430c, 431k, 437i, 438a-h against idolatry 421e, 423fik, 438dg, 441cn, 442mn, 443e-j against oppression of poor 421e, 423h, 428e apocalypse 419f, 435-6, 716b Assyria, God's instrument 425h, 428gh attitude to sacrifice, ritual 423ba Biblical Commission on 49i-m breaking of the rod 266f citations from 4 (2) King's 419f, 425s, 440a concerning Edom 433c, 439hjk, 449j concerning Egypt 420d, 421e, 432, 437i, 438a-h concerning Moab 430d-i, 431a-d, 435i concerning N. Kingdom 419f, 420d, 423h, 428a-f, 437a-c (see also Syro-Ephraemite) concerning Tyre 434e-i day of Yahweh 423k evangelist of redemption 446g

(ISAIAH) expounded by Christ 751bc, 753e expounded in Wisdom 393c foretells deliverance of Ahaz, Achaz 426g foretells deportation of Judah 424a, 425o, 426c, 433e, 434d foretells devastation of Damascus, Galilee 79d, 426a, 427b, 451ef foretells doom of Assyria 419f, 420c, 425p, 428ghi, 429a, 430a, 431ji, 438fh foretells doom of Babylon 33f, 419fg, 429, 433ab, 443j-o, 444d foretells Egyptian invasion 426m, 429a foretells Galilean ministry 427dfg foretells Sennacherib's invasion 425hp, 427ac, 428j, 437gh, 439ab Gentiles (call of) 115g, 421e, 422abd, 428o, 429g, 432e-g, 434i, 435a, 441ho, 442ej, 443ce, 448b glosses 421a, 425s, 426k, 426n, 430h, 443 l, 444fg, 450d, 451j God a Spirit 137d
 Holy One of Israel 423c inviolability of Jerusalem 412c, 420b, 421e, 427c, 428gh, 437gh, 438g Israel, God's servant 422cd, 447e law of the sanctuary 432f, 442i Micah and 289 l, 423g national, religious restoration of Judah Sion 33f, 423df new pre-MT MS 80 l, 422g, 423e, 424i, 430i, 438k, 442h, 443c, 445f, 446ef on B.V.M. 84i, 86k, 375d, 462f on Cyrus the Great 289c, 290a, 419g, 422f, 441adfg, 443a-c on fasting 449a-c on the rebuilding of temple 451n on the Sabbath 448c, 449e passages of dubious authorship 421a redactor of 419fgh, 421a, 423g, 429am remnant, doctrine of the 412g, 419f, 421de, 423d, 425aoc, 428i, 429g, 430c, 435k, 436b, 438d, 451j Restoration of Israel 418a, 428o, 429ag, 435k-436 return from exile 419g, 420c, 422f, 429ag, 439n, 441abfn, 442cdh, 443bcg, 444dg, 445rs second exodus 441bfn, 442h, 444g, 445s, 447i Seraphim 425k, 966b
 Shebna (Sobna) and 419f Sion rebuilt, glorified 419gh, 445-7, 449jm, 450 text and versions 422g unity of authorship 49k-m, 419e, 421ab warning to Philistia 430a-c ISCAH, Jescha 150a
 ISCARIOT, see Carioth
 ISHBAAL, Esbaal, Ishbosheth 63g, 257d-258a, 282aa, 283bb, 284ab ISHMAEL, see Ismael
 ISHTAR 79h, 117h, 239f, 244c, 279e, 457a, 467f, 476g (see also Astarte) Queen of Heaven 79h, 457a, 464f shewbread of 79h, 177d, 194b ISHVI and ISHVAH 158b
 ISIDORE OF SEVILLE, St 3f
 ISIS 598m
 ISLANDS OF THE SEA, The 312j, 428o, 441ce ISMAEL, Ishmael 133c, 151g, 152j, 153h, 857h, 894f, 897d ISMAEL, Ishmael, son of Nathaniah 281j, 283a, 463g, 464ac ISMAELITES 136f, 137f, 140a, 153h, 290 l, 242c, 309c, 365a, 474c and Medianites 156i ISOLATIONISM OF THE PROPHETS 64f, 265f, 270ac, 271e, 272g, 275g, 278c, 279 l, 280a, 412c, 421c, 423j, 477g, 484m, 486tu, 518i, 519b, 520h
 ISRAEL 108a, 110a, 115i, 163fg, 312a, 404a, 848h, 857d (see also Church, Covenant, Exclusion, Jacob, Jews, Judaism)

(ISRAEL) boundaries of 151e bride of Yahweh 110h, 359b, 383adkl, 384i, 387o, 447cd, 456c, 484 lm, 514m, 635d, 642c, 712a, 890g derivative culture of 45g formalism in 114 l, 115h (see also Cult, Superstition) founded by Moses 104g, 108a God's flock 489h, 551b-f God's servant 441f growth of national unity 63be, 76d, 159b, 238k, 241, 245c guilt of 858
 (a) holy, priestly, people 108a, 110b, 114d, 172j, 397c, 403c, 656a home of Wisdom 397e, 398bc, 402b ideal boundaries of 176b, 436e, 493h in Egypt 60, 78a, 107, 125d-f, 151e, 309f, 351a, 519c indefectible 593b legislation and 108a Kingdom of God and 625a mission to Gentiles of 54b, 441o, 442e (see also Gentiles) mixed race of 149f, 157d olive tree of God 859f-h origins 136c-i pre- and post-exilic 289r related nations 136f, 140a, 152f, 153f religion and life in 108a sanctified by Patriarchs 859e spiritual development of 61c, 114fg, 115a-j, 137a-f, 238k 'Syrian', Aramaean ancestry 120k, 149q, 153e, 154c, 219e tribal organization 57e, 159a type of the Church 5b unfaithful, rebellious 383adkl, 478g, 480hj, 484m, 848f, 858f (see also Idolatry, Syncretism) uniqueness, privileged position of 44g, 45g, 54b, 115i, 163g, 282su, 474ad, 848fh, 857d unity, reunion of 271 l, 428o, 551f Vine, vineyard of Yahweh 354d, 387h, 425bc, 435k, 436c, 711g, 859h ISRAEL, NORTHERN KINGDOM OF 121cf, 265c, 456ce (see also Ishbosheth, Exile, Jeroboam, Restoration) bounds of 58b downfall 121f, 278d-l, 291e, 303bd, 420c, 425p, 427b, 432a, 456e, 462d, 464a, 481a, 519cd (see also Samaria) organization 80e pro-Assyrian party 275g, 277g-i pro-Egyptian party 277k pro-Syrian party 272g, 275g, 277ghjk relations with south 270ghim, 271bcej, 273a-d, 275fi, 276cf, 277ce (see also David, Solomon)
 'to your tents, O Israel' 270g unstable dynasties of 271d, 428d ISSACHAR, Tribe of 57h, 154i, 160b, 222h, 236c, 238k, 239d, 240e, 241g, 243f, 271d, 272h, 283s ISSUS, The Battle of 545i
 ISTHMIAN GAMES 864f, 876d
 ISTHMUS OF CORINTH 864f
 ITALIAN BIBLE 4g
 ITHAMAR 179a, 267e, 283o, 492n
 ITHRITES, Jethrites 283d
 ITHAI, Ethai 261ef, 262c
 ITURAEA 58j, 72a, 750d
 IVORY, Ivory Palace 64g, 80d, 269i, 273c, 527b IZHARITES, see Isaarites
 JA AZANIAH, see Jezonias JABAL 146d
 JABOK, The River 55g, 57j, 154p, 155a, 233fg, 234c, 242k, 243ij, 268n, 270h
 JABES, Jabez 283dg
 JARFES GALAAD, Jabesh Gilead, 57j, 63f, 246ek, 252g, 256 l, 263b, 277g JABIN, King of Hasor 233c, 240ac
 JABNEH 287i
 JACHIN AND BOOZ (Boaz) 268k, 276i, 280i, 281h JACKALS 244ghi, 330b
 JACOB (Accos) 567b
 JACOB 102jq, 106a, 136f, 139c, 153j-155, 156h, 785d, 943c, 944c (see also Esau, Laban, Rachel) age (life-span) 140cf Aramaean in local sense 120k cattle-breeding 154j-l choice of God 105de death and burial 161a-c, 267c, 785ce election of 137f, 154d, 857h-j guile, cunning, deceit of 106d, 140c, 153jqk, 154f, 155c in Egypt 158a-160 ladder to heaven 105e, 106a, 154d, 245j, 785ce marriages of 140d, 192i name of 59h named Israel 155bf Pharaoh and 157n, 158d property of, at Shechem 155d, 158l sets up a massebah, pillar 213d vow of 105e, 154d, 155f wrestles with Elohim 155abf JACOB'S WELL 777e, 788i
 JACOBITES, Decree for the 15k JADASAR, River 309a
 JAEI, see Jahel
 JAFFA 54gj, 57f
 JAFFA GATE, The 277c
 JAHAZ, Yahaz 430e
 JAHIEL, Jael 240bde, 241ck
 JAIR 134c, 243f, 283c JAIRUS' DAUGHTER 619c, 626e, 690e, 691ef, 730jk, 740a, 776e
 JAMBRI, The sons of 568b
 JAMES, Apocryphal Protevangel of 86j, 94d JAMES, Epistle of, St 648n, 657p, 659b, 686ci, 826d, 945-8 authorship 945bc date 945bf kinship with wisdom literature 946d, 947ag St Matthew and 945bg, 947ad, 948ae St Paul and 946b salutation 845a style 945b, 946d
 JAMES THE GREAT, St 636b, 684c, 776e, 785b (see also Zebedee) Boanerges 724e, 728i, 776e early ambition 710b martyred 607k, 657c, 692d, 710b, 767e, 776g, 777f, 833f, 944e suggests calling fire from heaven 756a JAMES THE LESS, St 665e, 692e, 700e, 881e, 895b, 944e, 945c (see also 'Brethren of Lord')
 (an) Apostle 960b Bishop of Jerusalem 659f, 692e, 820d, 836be, 841b, 895bg, 945cf, 960bf brother of St Jude 960b (a) celibate Nazarene 960b Council of Jerusalem and 657p, 819e, 836e, 960b Jewish Christianity and 960f, 961a martyrdom of 74c, 460e, 839f, 929b, 945f, 960g Mary, his mother 722g, 810d St Paul and 895bfg, 960b son of Alphaeus, Cleopas 673c, 692e, 945c JAMNIA 22a, 287i, 678a (see also Councils) JAMUEL alias Namuel 283h
 JANICULUM 970j
 JANNAEUS, see Alexander
 JANNES and JAMBRES (Mambres) 164e, 167a, 758d, 924a JANOE, Janoah 277k
 JAPHETH 149cd
 JAPHETHITES 136fh, 149hn, 491b, 938e
 JASER, Jazer 57jk, 234c, 236i JASHER, Yashar, Book of 224b-d, 227g, 232fg, 257b, 269b, 313b JASHOBEAM, see Jesbaam
 JASON, for Joshua 575d, 589e

- JASON, of CYRENE 37eh, 224f, 573ad, 574f, 575d, 577b, 580b son of Eleazar 567b, 573d, 575d St Paul's Companion 838a, 863j usurping high-priest 68b, 551h, 575cd, 576ab
- JAVAN (Ionia, Greece) 149h, 451s
- JAWBONE of an Ass 244j
- JAZER, see Jaser
- JEALOUSY 367r, 374a, 731b, 788i, 906b God's 114b, 144b, 145a, 237c, 389b, 890g the idol of 483c (see also Asherah)
- JEBEL JARMUK 55c
- JEBNEEL, Jabneel 234e
- JEBUS, Jebusites 55d, 57de, 125c, 151f, 224c, 227h, 245g, 258f, 284c, 344a, 439g, 545ik, 550e
- JEBUSITE KINGS 232d, 938f (see also Melchisedech)
- JECHONIAS, Jehoiakin, Joachin, of Judah 66d, 80h, 114k, 122b, 266f, 280rs, 281k, 287dd, 290g, 311a, 332d, 459dg, 460fi, 461a-d, 473b, 477ef, 478cf, 485bln, 543fg, 544k, 680cf Babylonian records of captivity of 485n
- JECTAN, Joktan 269g
- JEDDUA, Jaddua, the high-priest 288f, 298d
- JEDUTHUR, see Ethan
- JEHIEL, Jahiel, the Gersonite 285s
- JEHOAHAZ, see Joachaz
- JEHOIADA, Joiada 276hil, 283o, 287efg
- JEHOIAKIN, see Jechonias
- JEHORAM, see Joram
- JEHOSHEBA, see Josaba
- JEHOVAH 165b (see also Yahweh)
- JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES 671w
- IEHU 64gh, 65a, 124f, 272chi, 273k, 275cg-276gp, 287c, 410f, 411a, 418g, 460d, 486f, 524b (see also Melkart) fall of dynasty of 276f, 277gi, 515c ferocity of 65a, 225b, 275h-j, 276a-f, 277g offers sacrifice to Baal 276e tributary to Shalmaneser III 65a, 79d, 121c, 124e, 266de, 275g, 276f the Seer 224f, 271d, 276o, 282tw, 286ijmm, 411e, 413g
- JEMIMA 334g
- JEMUEL, Jamuel 158b
- JEPHTE, Jephtha 55g, 59h, 125a, 225b, 238deh-k, 241a, 243g-l alleged henotheism of 243j letter to Ammonite king 224c, 243j sacrifices his daughter 63d, 457a
- JERAMEEL, Jerahmeelites 283bc
- JEREMIAS 45j, 66de, 83h, 265l, 280hip, 281b, 287xyaa, 393d, 406g, 409c, 411e, 412cd, 414agi, 415f, 453-68, 537c, 541c, 543f, 586o, 704a (see also Ezechiel, Lamentations, Uriah son of Shemaiah) author of Kings? 266b authorship of Lamentations 469ef commanded to write 12c, 20a, 413c, 454e curses the day of his birth 458m date and duration of ministry 456b denounces Ishtar-worship 79h, 457a, 467f distaste for his message 414h, 415b, 454a fall of Jerusalem and 124a, 281acdhi, 413c, 414i, 456b-r, 459bfc, 460fi, 740g forbidden to marry 413g Gedaliah, Godolias and 281j, 464a-c hides the Ark, etc 574de, 940e Sedecias (Zedekiah) and 281abc, 453c, 463, 469f prayer of 454b, 462m, 471j in Lachish letters 80k Isaias and 462f, 466d on personal and collective responsibility 412h, 462h on problem of suffering 318k
- (JEREMIAS) on the New Covenant 462h, 940ab, 941e on the virgin birth 85b, 462f opposes flight to Egypt 281j, 464d parallels to Abdias, Obadiah 530ehio (a) precursor 784d predicts fall of Babylon 33f, 467abf predicts 70 years captivity 290a, 434e, 455c, 456l, 459m, 461c, 472f, 476b prenatal sanctification of 454c priestly enemies of 281i purchases a field 462jkl, 721d refrain of his prophecy 456r, 458k, 465b roll of Baruch 460a (the) Sabbath and 458g sacrifice, attitude to 457a stoned to death 174e, 413h, 453c, 943e style of 36i, 472f sufferings, trials of 453b, 454a, 457g, 458cdkl, 459c, 471ad, 943e suspected of collaboration 453b, 460b, 462j, 463d, 467a, 550o true patriotism of 454a, 467a, 473g type of Christ 454g
 The Epistle of 15c, 472cf, 476, 574e
- JEREMIEL 460b, 592d
- JERICHO 56g, 57fg, 58d, 70f, 71g, 117b, 118k, 218d, 228bd, 229c-e, 230ahg, 233d, 235a, 239b, 287l, 295m, 403b, 410e, 710e, 735j, 764bc, 801a Herod's new city 710d, 735j Jerusalem road 56b, 710f Joshua takes 62cd, 90b, 125b, 178a, 230e-h palm trees of 222j, 239bh prophetic college at 273ji, 274k rebuilding of 125b, 230g, 271f, 273c waters of 273i
- JEROBAAL, see Gideon
- JEROBOAM I 64e, 124fgh, 265ce, 266e, 270o, 271acd, 282ff, 411a Ahias, Ahijah and 270ejl, 276f bulls of 64a, 112d, 265ce, 270h-j, 278fh, 286cg, 303c, 410e, 411de priests, priesthood of 270ijk, 286s rebellion against Solomon 270e secession and schism 64a, 112d, 211c, 270g-i, 426m, 529a
- JEROBOAM II 64c, 65ab, 121d, 265i, 266h, 276m, 277em, 283j, 412c, 413d, 430g, 524bce, 528d, 531b
- JEROME, St 3f, 27e, 36i, 37g and deuterocanonical books 15efh-j, 92d, 388a and old Latin versions 27be and the NT Canon 17k, 960c and the OT Canon 15efhi and translation of Job 319eg, 326j, 327j archaeology vindicates 77d, 81b at Bethlehem 338b distaste for genealogies 303a juxta Hebraeos 8a, 27e learns Hebrew and Aramaic 27g merits of his Vulgate 8c, 22f, 27eg, 226ab methods in translation 27e-g, 114d, 141d, 303-307 on bible study 2a-d, 3d on daily communion 345e on Jewish oral tradition 139a on Jonas 531f, 532b on Mosaic authorship of Pentateuch 45b, 134b on obscurity of Zacharias 545t on Psalms in early Church 335a on St Luke 744b on the Lord's brethren 672gi, 673a on the meaning of the OT 101e, 102p on the rivers of Eden 143g on the Septuagint texts 8b on 'Yahweh' in MSS 77d
 (the) Pious Society of 4h Prologus Galeatus 15ej, 127 translations of Psalms 27e, 336, 338a
- JERUBBAAL, see Gideon
- JERUSALEM 62b, 118h, 119l, 120m, 228c, 232d, 245g, 258f (see also Centraliza-
- tion, Gates, Jebus, New Jerusalem, Restoration, Salem, Sion, Walls) (JERUSALEM) and Galilee 584i and Judaea 584i
 (the) apostate city 968d Babylonians besiege and take 64b, 66d, 122b, 124ab, 266af, 281, 282r, 287aacce, 339g, 413ee, 463f, 469c ff., 473g, 477ef, 478b, 481a-g, 483hi, 484k, 485o, 486xz, 530h, 716b centre of Messianic Kingdom 418e, 462s, 546d, 593f charitable women of 770d Chronicer's list of inhabitants 283dd citadel 68e-g, 560b, 562c, 566a, 568bd, 569a, 570c, 571e, 572c, 580a
 'city of David' in 267d, 807b civil and military importance 63h, 258e, 470a David takes and makes his capital 55d, 57f, 215a, 224c, 234e, 239b, 248k, 258ef, 284c Dominican, Franciscan Biblical School at 6d doom foretold 74g, 470d, 457e, 459f, 463b, 534el, 535d, 737af, 738ade, 948e during the exile 470a ff.
 Esdras fortifies 291g excavations 721f, 807bg, 808b fasts commemorate fall of 549a-e in NT times 584fi intended centre of Church 48e, 449m, 450a-y, 462s, 546d inviolability of 250g, 415g, 471f, 478g, 483f, 534l, 767c (see also Isaias, Sennacherib) Joshua and 62b, 125c
 King's house in 459c
 Nehemias repeoples 289hkl, 296l, 298a NT topography 81g population in NT times 602f quarters of 280h, 287y rebuilding of walls 67ef, 288e, 543c religious importance 248k, 259a, 470a Roman siege and destruction of 12e, 13c, 74fg, 274m, 472f, 507p, 585a, 606g, 670fjkln, 704g, 705g, 712b, 715abc, 716a-d, 717a, 733c, 744g, 765c, 767b-f, 781j, 815a, 819b, 834h, 932d, 942b, 962g, 968d siege by Sennacherib 66a, 121i, 279d Sheshonq I (Shishak, Sesac) sacks 64e, 120m, 353b, 354c, 356b Simon fortifies 570c, 571a sins of 546o site and topography 55d, 234e, 295f-m, 298h, 542d St Anne's Church at 791c symbolic of Israel 307g the Wailing Wall 268i under the Persians 290g Vespasian besieges 570c water supply 19k, 54j, 55d, 66a, 72c, 80g, 406h, 425s, 433i
- JERUSALEM, Church of 462s, 658b, 659f, 679b, 819de, 820de, 831dg, 832k, 833ach, 836beg, 839c, 929a, 933a, 944f (see also James the Less) bilingual 815c collections for 637a, 819a, 826d, 833e, 839i, 844g, 866gh, 882de, 883c, 889, 891i, 895g importance of 844f poverty of 826d, 833e
- JESBAAM, Jashobeam 284de, 285l
- JESHIMON 451j
- JESHUA, see Jesus the High Priest
- JESHURUN 222cgi, 442j
- JESSE, Land of, see Goshen
- JESSE, Isai, Naas, David's Father 253, 255cd, 262b, 283b
 the seven sons of 283b
- JESUA and Jessuri 158b
- JESUS, Name of 202b, 228f, 384i, 406d, 543h, 680j, 733c, 748l, 817cd, 824f, 825ce, 826b, 837e, 839h, 907cd, 930a, 936a

(Jesus, Name of) acting in 706cg calling on 650g, 817d, 831d, 841f salvation in 817e used in exorcism 776e JESUS BARABBAS, see Barabbas
JESUS BEN SIRACH, see Ben Sirach
JESUS CHRIST 40a, 102r, 151a, 153a, 163h, 169di, 228f, 383d-387, 389e, 450i, 454g, 544k, 545df, 547f, 551b-f, 618-28, 632d, 682c, 683c, 768b, 829bc, 850bei-l, 934a, 935b, 951ab (see also Apostles, Ascension, Atonement, Bethlehem, Betrayal, Brethren, Burial, Christology, Church, Cross, Crucifixion, Death, Disciples, Divinity, Emmanuel, Genealogies, Herod Antipas, Holy Spirit, Imitation, Incarnation, Infancy, Kingdom, Last Supper, Logos, Lord, Mary, Mediator, Merits, Messiah, Miracles, Mystical Body, Nazareth, New Covenant, Parables, Passion, Pharisees, Pre-existence, Priesthood, Public Life, Redemption, Resurrection, Sacrifice of, Sadducees, Samaria, Seventy-two, Sheep, Son of God, Son of Man, Soteriology, Suffering Servant, Transfiguration, Wisdom) accused for us 218h, 221e, 621e, 811a, 894e, 896f accused of blasphemy 720gh, 740fg, 751h, 769e, 799k, 809b accused of seditious claim to kingship 631a, 721af, 740f, 741a, 808c, 809d agony in the garden 551j, 720d, 740ab, 755a, 769abd, 801g, 807d, 937c Alpha and Omega (q.v.) 972e and disease 689g, 757f, 759a (see also Miracles) and fasting 676b, 683c, 686fj, 691cd, 745d, 754c, 757g, 796de (see also 'Brethren of the Lord') and the Gentiles 441 l, 446abg, 494hk, 543i, 547f, 550g, 620cf, 649d, 657m, 689de, 690c, 692f, 695b, 697de, 699c, 703ab, 709i, 711h, 712b, 723f, 730i, 732d, 749i, 754d, 759abdf, 766c, 767f, 801ef, 862k-m, 900ef and the 'just, righteous' 691b, 760cf and the Law 100ab, 618f, 623e, 685bb-686e, 689b, 728f, 736jk, 748j, 752beh, 755b, 761df, 893f, 894e and the multitudes 588d, 618f, 619ad, 631a, 689a, 701cd, 710h, 711c, 727fg, 728h, 729af, 730j, 731gh, 732ef, 734a, 735a, 736fl, 741cf, 758c, 759f, 764a, 765a, 766c, 772b, 793cdf, 794e, 801d, and the rich young man 660 lo, 709bcd, 735d, 763fg and the Sabbath 91c, 100b, 618f, 619e, 620c, 622e, 696a-cg, 726d, 728efg, 752c-e, 759ad, 779d, 791ae, 792b and the Temple 67d, 85k, 100ab, 404d, 406g, 543i, 554f, 617g, 672d, 711a, 736ac, 750ab, 759c, 765d, 767bd and the two swords 768f and the woman of Samaria (q.v.) 40h, 55c, 58h, 643ce, 757a, 779e, 789c-790d, 794ef and the woman taken in adultery 781hi, 797ab and the women, daughters, of Jerusalem 220b, 745 l, 770d
apocryphal letters to Abgar 94g, 801e Aramaic sayings preserved 732e arrested 720c, 740c, 769c, 807b-d asleep 754c at Bethany 710f, 711b, 719b, 739b, 753g, 768a, 784f, 800a, 801h at Cana 86a, 271i, 626f, 652i, 653g, 684a, 703b, 776e, 777e, 779e, 786a-c, 790fg at Capernaum 654a, 684ab, 689dfg, 690e, 691-2, 695a, 696c, 698b, 705f, 751a, 786e at Jericho 710d, 735j, 764bc, 801a at Nazareth 85 l, 86a, 91c, 94ce, 584k,

617cf, 618f, 619d, 672d, 676e, 682cde, 684a, 700e, 731ab, 747c, 749j, 750b, 751bc, 790e (JESUS CHRIST) at the Feast of Tabernacles 708a, 735a, 779c, 796ad, 797a at the Feast of the Dedication 708a, 735a, 796a, 799ag author, perfecter of our Faith 930b, 944a Beelzebub controversy 91c, 620b, 627a, 631a, 692b, 696ef, 729cd, 757ef before Annas, Caiaphas, Sanhedrin 720f-i, 721a, 785e, 807e-h before Herod Antipas 741c, 770b, 808c before Pilate 81h, 660t, 721af-h, 741a-c, 770a-c, 808, 809, 922g birth 545d, 681a, 749d-f (see also Virgin Birth) boyhood of 617fg, 747c, 749j-750b (the) bridegroom 653g, 718a-c, 776e, 788j (see also Marriage) calling sinners to repentance 654a, 691b, 751i, 753g, 759a, 760be, 775b calms the tempest 532b, 619c, 626f, 690b, 730f, 754c carpenter, carpenter's son 584km, 701e, 731b, 794g casts out devils 88b, 619c, 626e, 643f, 689g, 690cd, 692b, 696efg, 705d, 722g, 727fg, 728h, 729cd, 730ghi, 732e, 733f, 755cd, 756d (see also Exorcism) challenge of 617d, 626c, 633i, 696g, 697b, 780a, 886m
children blessed by 709a, 733b, 735c, 763e
'Christ Myth' theory 330, 605cef, 608b (see also Historicity) Christ the Lord 749e chronology 618e, 619e, 684a, 689abfh, 690e, 691e, 731g, 733d, 736c, 749ab, 750d, 765d, 777e, 779cg, 780e, 787c, 790e, 791b, 793a, 796b, 802b circumcision of 617d, 749g, 862km claims man's devotion 693ad, 695b-d cleanses the temple 215g, 554f, 670f, 711ae, 736ac, 765d, 766b, 787ab compared with Moses 682c, 683c, 935d conforms to current ideas 757f consecrates, sanctifies himself 649e, 806g contemporary speculation about 696e, 701ac, 731e, 733a, 793c, 796hk cosmic activity, functions 782bc, 855i, 899d, 910ef, 930b, 933c-e creator, conservator 781c, 910ef, 930b, 933c-d crowned with thorns 722a, 741f, 809a curses the fig-tree, 620f, 626f, 711c, 736bd, 762a, 765d, 859h date of birth 77d, 617c, 674b, 676ade, 749ab, 750d
Davidic descent of 621g, 680acde, 681a, 748b, 750gh, 845e
David's son and David's Lord 713d, 736 l, 766f, 824e, 933e, 934b deeds, sayings, outside Gospels 94b, 812j, 813g, 840f
demands faith for miracles 91c, 627d, 643j, 692a, 731b, 800c
denied by Peter 724f, 739i, 740ij, 758c, 768e, 769d, 807efh, 826b descent into Hell (Hades) 771b, 816b, 858e, 940g, 942a, 951ab
'destroy this sanctuary . . .' 635c, 644b, 787c dialectic mastery of 620f, 696a-766bdf, 780c dining with Pharisees 753gh, 758b, 759e disputations of 3b, 620b, 627a, 691b-d, 696a-c, 711e, 712e-713, 728a, 729cd, 732abg, 751g-752e, 754d, 757ef, 758b, 765b, 766b-f, 796f, 797i-n, 799g-k drawing men to himself 644b, 649cd, 670j, 695d, 781e, 785a, 794f, 801dh, 806d ecce homo 809ab education of 617f, 628a, 631a, 700e,

731b, 750ab, 796f, 937c (see also Christology) (JESUS CHRIST) entrusts his flock to Peter 624de, 813d, 951f
entrusts his mother to St John 86dg, 672e, 810e eschatology of 625de, 655b, 660a, 670, 671, 688c, 689e, 704f, 715-18, 737-8, 758g, 762ef, 767eghi, 769b-i, 916ac, 932d, 954c (see also Parousia) everlastingly man 881g example of 643 l, 660u, 745j, 756b, 757c, 760a, 949dgh, 950cg fact or fiction 605c, 621a-d (see also Mythology) falsely accused, slandered 694g, 696ef, 712e, 720f, 740fg, 741a, 753f, 770a, 771a feeds five thousand 40h, 619e, 626f, 652gi, 653h, 701cd, 731g, 754d, 774c, 777e, 779d, 793a-f (see also Loaves) feeds four thousand 40h, 619e, 626fh, 652gi, 701d, 703de 732f, 754d, 774c (see also Loaves) final revelation of God 788k, 805d, 910e firstborn of creation 910e, 934b firstborn of many brethren 625f, 934b firstborn of Mary 672, 681b firstborn of the dead 911a, 934b, 964b flight into Egypt 520bc, 617de, 681g, 682c foreknows, foretells, exposes the Betrayal 699f, 709f, 719f, 739f, 795i, 802dgh, 806ef foretells destruction of the Temple 715a, 737ab, 740g, 759c, 767bd foretells exclusion of Jews 689e, 711ch, 759abf, 766c foretells fall of Jerusalem 74g, 670jkl, 712b, 714ij, 715a, 754g, 765cd, 767b-f, 770d, 789g, 797 l, 948e foretells flight of the apostles 720ce foretells his Passion and Death 619f, 620ace, 621h, 644bcd, 649d, 670g, 691c, 704e, 705ce, 710a, 719ab, 720ab, 733abe, 734a, 735fg, 739hi, 752a, 754g, 755ad, 762a, 764ad, 765a, 768bcf, 787c, 797h, 799de, 800c, 801ch, 804d, 805e foretells his resurrection 620e, 644bd, 647d, 649d, 697d, 704e, 710a, 720c, 722i, 733a, 735g, 739i, 740g, 755a, 769a, 774b, 787c, 799e, 805e, 882c foretells passion of James, John 607k, 710b, 735h, 777f
foretells persecution of Church 633g, 660u, 670 l, 671c, 692h, 693abc, 709f, 712b, 714i, 715cd, 735f, 752h, 763a, 767e, 768f, 805ab foretells Peter's denial 720c, 739i, 768f, 789a, 803c foretells Peter's martyrdom 671j, 813e, 952dg, 953e forgiving sins, merciful 102 l, 644a, 654a, 690fg, 726d, 728ab, 751hi, 753h, 771ab, 772b, 797b found in temple 85k, 617g, 672d, 750ab, 786b friend of publicans and sinners 691ab, 694g, 695a, 745f, 746f, 751i, 752a, 753gh, 759f, 760b, 763cd, 764c, 781i, 797k fulfils the Law, Scriptures 3b, 622g, 623bd, 678d, 683a, 685b-686e, 689c, 695d, 705a, 713c, 720e, 722cd, 733d, 751c, 752b, 768b, 773a, 774b, 775ab, 810f, 811c, 852a, 940g, 944f
full of grace 727c, 783de Gentile ancestresses of 246cd, 247bl, 680e
(the) Good Shepherd 479a, 489fj, 643b, 644c, 718g, 731g, 758d, 760c, 799a-fh, 812e, 813d, 820d, 944g, 949h, 951f
(the) great saying 588d, 620b, 622b, 695bc, 756e

- (JESUS CHRIST) heavenly, perpetual, intercession of 446f, 856g, 939c, 956c heavenly reign, session 736l, 743g, 766f, 845g, 850g, 851h, 914hk, 930be, 949h he that is not with, is against 696g hem, fringe, tassel of his garment 203e, 691f, 701g, 713b, 730j his abiding presence 652b, 658a, 723f, 804bh, 806i his affectionate manner 734b, 735cd, 750b, 751h, 757b, 758cd, 760b, 763e, 764f his age 676e, 750dh, 797n his anger, indignation 696c, 709a, 710b, 735c, 752e, 763e his authority questioned 711e, 736ce, 787b his baptism by John 340b, 441j, 618b, 676be, 683ab, 696d, 727c, 748a, 750dfi, 751c, 784ah, 820f, 822b, 826c, 832h, 955h, 958de his baptism of pain, death 644b, 735h, 758f his beatific vision 788c his compassion 671c, 689c, 690e, 731g, 732i, 753b, 770d, 793d, 800e, 927cd, 929e, 930c, 935c, 936c, 937ab, 944c his cup of pain 644b, 710b, 720d, 735h, 740a, 742h, 777f, 807d (see also Passion) his detachment 683c, 697g, 786b his enemies 626c, 631ab, 642j, 670e, 694g, 696c, 703fg, 711e, 712e, 728cg, 732c, 733i, 734c, 735b, 736c, 751g-i, 752ce, 757e, 760b, 765bce, 766b-d, 769c, 770a, 784, 796ehi, 800g, 801d his exposition, application of Scripture 3b, 551j, 685h-688d, 691b, 694c, 702c, 711bghi, 713bcd, 716a, 720c, 736fi-l, 751bc, 766ef, 774b, 775b, 796j, 799k his fear, distress 649d, 720d, 740ab, 769b, 801g, 937c his fearless serenity 627ce, 628cd, 689c, 690d, 766d his feet, head, anointed 384f, 619b, 620e, 643d, 710f, 719b, 739b, 753gh, 768a, 801bc his garments parted by lot 722c, 742b, 810c his gentleness 696d his gift of peace 685f, 693d, 749f, 765bc, 804d, 812fi, 862k (see also Peace) his glory, glorification 705ab, 720d, 733de, 782a, 783ad, 786d, 801eg, 803a, 806achi his high-priestly prayer 671i, 806 his hour, time 86a, 719e, 740a, 759c, 786b, 796aehi, 801eg, 802c, 806b his humility, abasement 652d, 656bef, 695d, 732e, 735i, 742c, 780d, 802c, 806c, 862j, 907a-d, 927c, 930c his last will, testament 644h, 810e, 941a his love 643e, 644j, 646b, 649bd, 715d, 735d, 763f, 802c, 803b, 804i, 856ij, 957d, 958b his mission 642j, 653j, 698e, 728c, 730h, 733ae, 738c, 751cfi, 786b, 788ef, 790d, 846c his obedience 445i, 618b, 647e, 683a, 720d, 739f, 740a, 749g, 750j, 751f, 756a, 758f, 759c, 769d, 930aeg, 937c, 941d his occasional severity 703b, 711c, 745c, 755c, 756a, 758ad, 760ab, 763ehk, 787b his poverty 584ko, 588d, 660q, 731b his power over nature 690b, 751ef, 754e his purity 660g his resolution to suffer 696d, 735g, 756b, his seamless robe 742ab, 810c his service, perfect freedom 102m his supernatural knowledge 695bc, 696d, 699f, 705fg, 717c, 730k, 736n, 739d, 740h, 753h, 759a, 764c, 785d, 787d, 789f, 790a, 795gh, 796f (see also Christology) (JESUS CHRIST) his supreme motive 623d, 683ac, 781d, 790b, 797h, 862k (see also Glory, Will of God) his sympathy with Jewish difficulties 752b his sympathy with man 683h, 935c his teaching 623a-626c, 643ab, 670e, 678c-g, 698a, 699e, 717a, 720e, 738d, 752b, 758e, 780-81i, 796f, 801j (see also Gospel) his tears 462s, 620e, 765c, 779g, 800e, 886i his use of psalms, Scriptures 3b, 335a, 339h, 343d, 345b, 605b, 683c-e, 698d, 699c, 736f, 742ef, 746c, 772a his wisdom 696a, 697d, 749j, 750ab (see also Wisdom) his works attest him 753e, 754g, 792f, 797e, 803g his yoke 695d
 (the) historical Jesus 616df, 621a, 626d, (the) holy, just one 102l, 742d, 817c, 825e, 841f hungers, and thirsts 683d, 736b, 742f, 771a, 789d, 790a, 810f identified with, served in his brethren 660m, 718g, 887h image, reflexion, effulgence of God 14b, 781c, 910d, 930b, 933c-e irony and humour 714f, 757b, 758b Jewish background of 103a Joseph's legal, putative son 680eghi, 681f, 748b, 749h, 750bg, 785c, 794g
 (the) key to history 641k, 964ek 966c
 (the) key to OT 5a, 102h-r, 145de, 634bc, 792f, 877ab, 887de king pre-eminent 881g, 909gi, 910ef, 911a, 927c knocking at door 385o known in Breaking of Bread 774c Lamb of God 649dg, 784g, 785a (see also Paschal) laments over Jerusalem 759c, 767d languages spoken by 584g, 621h, 692d, 730k, 732e, 739g, 780b (the) Life, Life-giver 622dg, 623g, 641j, 781ac, 794ef, 796a, 799af, 800d, 806bc, 911a, 912d life of 617c-20 lifted up 649de, 781e, 788d, 797h, 801h the Light of the World 441l, 444hk, 446abg, 620a, 622c, 684ab, 689a, 710d, 748j, 749i, 758a, 779d, 781ac, 782d-g, 788ab, 796ad, 797c, 798a, 799a, 834j, 842ij, 930b, 933cd, 956b loves his own to the end 715d, 802c, 806i Master, Rabbi, Rabboni, 623b, 709b, 735dj, 788a, 812e master of every situation 627e, 628d, 742f, 766a, 769d Messianic and Divine claims 131c, 605bc, 617g, 618bf, 619b, 620be, 621ceg, 622bd, 627e, 688c, 690g, 693ad, 695b-d, 696b, 699g, 703f, 705fg, 710dg, 711g, 714i, 718f, 720gh, 723f, 726d, 728f, 732g, 733a, 735d, 736afg, 740fh, 741a, 746d, 750bi, 751i, 752e, 756e, 758a, 760a, 764e, 765a, 766f, 769e, 778h, 779b, 787b, 789g, 791a, 794g, 796fj, 797c-h, 797l-n, 798c, 799h-k, 805g, 809b, 922g, 933e Messianic and Divine consciousness of 617g, 618b, 620b, 621ceg, 622bd, 627e, 672b, 727c, 750bi, 752e, 765a, 802c Messianic Investiture of 683b, 750ci Messianic King, Son of David 621g, 625f, 670f, 692a, 696e, 703a, 710d, 721f, 735j, 736a, 741af, 748c, 766f, 781d, 810b, 845e (see also Kingdom)
 Messianic secret 594b, 619cf, 621f, 622g, 626a-c, 627b, 687e, 689c, 691f, 692a, 696d, 704d, 705b, 710d, 732ei, 733e, 754bg, 755b, 765b (see also Messianic Secret) (JESUS CHRIST) miracle of the coin 626f, 705fg, 724f miraculous cures 88b, 91c, 439m, 618f, 619b-e, 620a-d, 626e, 631a, 643j, 644a, 684d, 689b-g, 691ef, 692ab, 696c, 701c, 703bc, 705d, 710de, 711b, 726d, 727fgh, 728agh, 730jk, 731h, 732ei, 735j, 751dgh, 754ac, 755c, 759ad, 762b, 764b, 769c, 777e, 779d, 790fg, 791b-d miraculous draughts of fishes 626f, 751ef, 779d, 813a-c mocked, 740g, 741ef, 770bc, 771ab, 809a, 938ab (the) Morning Star 965b, 972e Mystery of 628a-d, 641j (a) Nazarene, Nazoree 30mnq, 682d, 785d
 new commandment 624b, 636a, 640f, 660mq, 695d, 803b, 804i, 955i, 956d not a thaumaturge 618d, 627a, 790f on anxiety for the future 660l, 683c, 687bcd, 758d on collective responsibility 412h on losing life and finding it 693d, 704f, 733b on rewards and punishments 643c, 704f, 709efi, 717e, 718d-eg, 734c, 735df on serving two masters 683e, 687ab on the great commandments 213c, 586c, 635a, 660k, 713c, 714f, 736jk, 756fg, 861e on the last and the first 709f-i, 735f, 759b on the one thing needful 10b, 757b, 758cd, 759f, 764f on the persecution of the prophets 35f, 276l, 282j, 287g, 453c, 711g, 714h, 736f, 758b, 759f (see also Zacharias) on toleration 696g, 734c on tribute to Caesar 633g, 660s, 711ef, 721f, 736g, 741a, 766d (see also Church and State) only begotten son 683bc, 696d, 705b, 727c, 733d, 736f, 755b (see also Son of God) our advocate 446f, 693c, 804a, 856g, 939c, 956c our brother 386i, 628b, 650m, 697g, 735f, 930c, 935b (see also Adoption) our help 695d, 935c our Judge 360d, 623f, 670-71, 688c, 704f, 709f, 718fg, 738b, 781e, 792acd, 949h, 951c (see also Judgement) our Passover, Pasch 644h, 649d, 720b, 722e outside Palestine, Israel 690c, 703ab, 730ghi, 732def, 733a, 789a, 796c ox and ass at birth of 423c, 540r Palm Sunday entrance of 275g, 545d, 550g, 621g, 622a, 670j, 710fgh, 714j, 719a, 736a, 759c, 765ab, 801d parables of 619c, 625g-626c, 631a, 698acde, 699e, 728f, 729fgh, 730a-c, 754b perfect consistency, harmony of 628d person of 616di, 622cg, 623a, 628d, 633e, 653e, 782ab, 907cd personal traits, gestures of 697g, 774c, 793de, 806a Peter's confession 613b, 616h, 619f, 622b, 701f, 704ab, 733ad, 754dfg, 895af physical gestures, means, used in miracles 689c, 730j, 732ei, 798b physician of souls 691b, 728c poetry of 612ad, 613b polemic utterances of 780ac prayer of 343d, 345b, 618f, 619a, 671i, 701e, 719e, 720d, 722d, 740a, 745gk, 746e, 750f, 752af, 754f, 757c, 768e, 769abd, 771a, 772a, 793f, 800f, 806, 930d, 937c prayer to 822d, 831d preaches from a boat 619ac, 698b, 729f

(JESUS CHRIST) predestination of 750i, 845f preparing a place for us 803e presented in temple 85k, 189n, 617d, 749d present where two or three are gathered . . . 622b, 706g professes ignorance about Parousia 622b, 627f, 658a, 670m, 671d, 717bc, 737b, 738ef, 746c, 758e, 762d, 767ci, 822b, 914dj-l, 916ac put to shame 733b, 930d raises the dead 91c, 604c, 619bc, 620d, 626e, 631a, 691f, 730jk, 753b, 779d, 800a-f (a) ransom for many 644e, 710c, 720b, 735i, 921f (see also Redemption) rationalist lives of 604a, 605bc, 606dg, 607b reading men's thoughts, hearts 690f, 696d, 705f, 736n, 753h, 759a, 785d, 789f, 790a, 795gh recapitulation of all things 641j, 646bc, 899d refuses a sign from heaven 697d, 703f, 732g rejected 446cg, 545df, 551bf, 552d, 618f, 619d, 620acd, 626c, 678e, 694g, 695a, 697ad, 701e, 704e, 711g, 712d, 733ab, 751b, 754g, 759df, 764e, 765b, 782f, 783a, 792e, 857e, 950e rejects popular nationalist messianism 683ef, 718f, 731h, 732eg, 733a, 754g, 762de, 764d, 767c, 793fg rejoicing 756de
 (the) Resurrection and the Life 779d, 792cd, 795g, 800d retires into desert place 701c, 731g, 751g (see also Temptation) riches of 641k
 (the) Saviour 547f, 550g, 641 l, 643e, 644j, 680j, 698e, 749h, 751a, 771e, 790d, 817ce, 930ace, 935a-c, 937c, 952h (see also Jesus, Name of)
 'saw Satan fall' 643f, 756d, 854c scandalizes, offends some 720ce, 781i, 794d, 795gh, 801i, 804e Scribes and Pharisees attacked by 642j, 696c, 697, 702a-f, 703fg, 714, 732b, 766gh second Adam 84f-h, 86g, 145e, 811b, 850bel-l, 881g, 882b, 899d seeking souls 789c seeks human comfort 720d, 740b selfless, unselfish 683c, 772b, 882kl, 936c sending not peace but a sword 660f, 693d, 758g, 970b serving his servants 656b, 710c, 734b, 735i, 758e, 768d, 802c-e, 813c sibylline oracles on 969g (the) sign of Jonas 697d, 703f, 758a silent before his accusers 720g, 721f, 740g, 741b, 809c sin bearer 618b, 888a sinless, innocent 446e, 618b, 683bh, 735d, 741a, 742g, 781d, 797k, 808d, 809b, 930c, 936c, 939d sought by Mary and his brethren 697g, 729abe, 754c, 757g spirit of Jesus 428m, 641h, 648cd, 651c, 845eh, 854a spiritual rock 653bd, 696i stone, living, chief corner 40e, 361b, 437e, 547ghi, 635d, 642j, 711i, 736f, 826b, 898i, 949g, 950de stone of offence, scandal 711i, 739i, 858a, 859d, 950e (see also Simeon's prophecy, Stumbling) strengthened by the Holy Spirit 618b supernatural life and character of 605g, 628c (in the) synagogue 618f, 696c, 701e, 727f, 751bc, 795f teaching in parables 619c, 625g-626c, 631a, 698ac-e, 699e, 728f, 729fgh, 730a-e, 754b teaching in the Temple 796f, 797a

(JESUS CHRIST) teaching with authority 618f, 627e, 628c, 631a, 688d, 708d, 711e, 727fg, 728a, 752be, 787b, 788ck (the) temptation 3b, 214a, 357b, 618b-d, 676b, 683c-h, 727d, 750ij, 764b, 769ab, 935c, 969b that prophet 102o, 114n, 217f, 389e, 409j, 631a, 731b, 758b, 780g, 784d, 792f, 793e, 829c tired 754c, 789c transcends all racial or social barriers 900ef, 901a, 913b troubled, sorrowful 649d, 696c, 714j, 720d, 801g, 802g
 (the) true Vine 635e, 653jg, 804f-h, 953b
 (the) Truth 623a, 627e unchanging 886f, 934b, 944e union with 641j, 650im, 795de, 804bghi, 806h, 846c, 851cd, 852cf, 854e, 861h, 886b, 887h, 894bg, 897e, 909ij, 911d-f, 965ad unofficial believers in 734c, 755d victorious, supreme 84f, 145e, 552ac, 670g-j, 671ac-f, 696g, 736f, 750ij, 757g, 805ch, 854c, 930ce, 932d, 934f, 951b, 964b visits to Jerusalem 708a, 710f, 711a, 714j, 735a, 750ab, 779g, 791a-792g, 796be, 799g, 801a walks on the waters 619d, 626f, 701ef, 731gh, 754d, 779d, 793agh washes disciples' feet 656b, 802b-e (the) Way 623a, 803f weeps over Jerusalem 462s, 620e, 765c, 779g, 886i wounds of 547i, 552d, 553b, 811a-c, 812g, 939c writing on the ground 797ab JESUS JUSTUS 909c
 JESUS, son of Josedec, see Joshua JETHRITES, Ithrites 283d JETHRO 129c, 153f, 164h, 200c, 239b proposes institution of Judges 171j, 211b sacrifices to Yahweh 171j JETUR 153h, 283k (see also Ituraeans)
 JEWELS, Jewelry 424i, 487m
 JEWISH CHRISTIANS 586g, 588d, 864i, 865c JEWISH LANGUAGE 19j
 JEWISH RECKONING 124g, 895bc JEWS, Jewry 289f, 584-96, 642f (see also Judah, Judaism) and the arts 589eg and the Resurrection of Christ 723d and tribute to Rome 827c anti-Christian activities 14ce, 15ae, 75c, 642j, 834j, 835ad, 881j, 897e, 914cd, 915d, 964h, 965d attitude to Gentiles 289r, 531g, 584e, 586a, 587f, 589d, 590, 591c, 595e, 633c, 635e, 642h, 732d, 745c, 753a, 756fg, 763c, 832c, 915d attitude to Samaritans 58h, 756g, 789d attitude to virginity, celibacy 309n, 413g, 748d Babylonian practices and superstitions among 589h, 593a business morality lax 596e education, schools 589a, 617f, 688a, 690f exclusive claim to revelation 570a exempt from Roman military service 75c, 585h expectancy 634b, 644h, 784d (see also Messianic Hope) expelled from Rome 75b, 588g, 839a, 843h false conceptions of Messias 642hi, 748bd, 749h, 750j, 751c, 754g, 767c, 870c family life 213c, 246c, 247b, 367a, 660c grievances against Gentile rulers 404c, 827c, 829c Hellenistic externals adopted 587a, 589d-f the Hellenizers 68b-e, 70d, 71f, 559edg, 562gh, 566ac, 568ad, 575a-f, 576a, 579e, 580a, 584ben, 585cg, 588a, 589e-g, 874b (see also Hellenism) (Jews) independence 700f, 572d Jewish mercenaries 577b liberal 816b, 827c (see also Jewish Hellenizers) memorizing power 139a opposition to St Paul 864gh, 914cd, 915d persecutors of 551b philosophy lacking 589g, 591bg post-Christian vocation of 857-9 post-exilic Israel 289f privileges of 114bkl, 570a, 642h, 692f, 695a, 697f, 703b, 718f, 732d, 736f, 737g, 758f, 759a, 762b, 825f, 834j, 905f, 935c reject Christ 446cg, 545df, 551bf, 552d, 618f, 619d, 620acd, 626c, 784a, 801i, 857a, 950e reject LXX as pro-Christian 14c, 15a, 588c rejected 689e, 711ch, 736bf, 759abf, 766c, 767f, 834hj, 839b, 848f, 857-9, 915d, 935f, 936ab, 940a (but see also Remnant) revolts against Rome 56h, 57f, 74d-g, 462p, 584cgl, 585a, 587e, 590d, 607m, 749a, 754g, 766d, 770b, 771b, 774b, 775b, 842g, 929b social solidarity 584j-o, 595f Sephardim and Ashkenazim 530v superstitious trust in Abraham's line 682h ultimate conversion to Christ 714j, 738a, 759c, 859dh-j, 887e, 967b universalism and particularism 59o JEZABEL, Jezebel 64f, 112d, 114 l, 265j, 271e, 272aghi, 273k, 275j, 943e (see also Achab, Melkart) the Thyatiran 965b JEZONIAS, Jaazoniah, son of Azur (Azzur) 483n son of Maachathi 80h son of Saaphan (Shaphan) 80h, 483d JEZREEL, Jezrahel 55b, 255m, 256h, 271km, 272h, 275h, 276b, 309d, 515c (see also Esdraelon) blood of 276f, 277g, 515c plain, vale of 55b, 160b, 235c, 236c, 240b, 242f, 515ce of Judah 255m, 283f JIBLEAM, Ibleam 275i

 JOAB 257gjk, 259i, 261d, 262cdg-ik, 264a, 267acd, 284cy, 285np (see also Zeruiah) nephew of David 283b, 284c JOACHAZ, Jehoahaz, of Israel 65ad, 114k, 124j, 266f, 274m, 276mp, 280p, 283e, 287bb, 459ae, 477d, 478c, 485lm, 524b, 539e, 680c (see also Shellum) imprisoned by Nechao II 65d, 122a, 280b, 459e inversion of Ahaziah 283c JOACHIM, St 86j, 94dm JOACHIM, Joakim, the priest 473c
 JOACHIN, see Jechonias JOAKIM, Jehoiakim, Eliakim, of Judah 66d, 114k, 122a, 266f, 280q, 287cc, 290a, 332d, 413c, 452b, 459ade, 460b, 461c, 477de, 485 l, 539e, 680c and Urias, son of Semei 413h, 459c, 460b JOANNA, wife of Chuza 745b, 754a, 773b, 783f JOAS, Joash, of Judah 64c, 65ac, 266j, 276h-l, 280f, 287efg, 413h JOASH, Jehoash, of Israel 65c, 124ij, 271g, 274m, 276n, 287h, 406g, 524bc JOASH the Abiezrite 242e
 JOATHAM, Jotham, of Judah 65d, 243c, 266ij, 277f-lm, 283j, 287k, 421c, 524c JOB 317b-h, 318a-d, 334h, 406g, 484j, 749e (see also Mental Suffering, Suffering) appeals for sympathy 326dh challenges God 323j, 324 conscience of 317d

- (Job) curses his day 317d, 3201 historicity of 32m, 318d integrity of 317jk, 321 l, 326k, 334h Job's comforters 33d, 317cdk, 319c, 320jk, 321jn, 323 l, 325fi, 326d-i, 334f negative confession of 319a, 330cd patience, resignation of 317bdejk, 318e, 320ght, 947e, 948e power in prayer 317h, 334fg, 484j priesthood of 320c redeemer, vindicator of 326jk Job, Book of 32m, 33e, 313d, 314bhi, 317-34 (see also Angels, Satan) additions, interpolations 317 lmop, 330d, 334ef and the Resurrection 324h, 326j attributed to Moses 34c, 318g author 34c, 318gh, 320d dislocations in text 319c, 328gj future life according to 318o, 320km, 323j, 324ghi, 325 l, 326j Gentile characters of 318a, 320c, 321d hymn to Wisdom 329c-f literary genre of 32m pagan parallels 319a problem of suffering in 32m, 315c, 317ej, 318ek, 327e-k, 328a, 329g, 334h theory of Retribution (q.v.) 33d, 317bcmo, 318k, 321a, 322f, 323e, 325a, 326cj, 327, 330c, 334fh
 JOCHABED, mother of Moses 133a, 164c,
 165c JOEL, The Prophet 413d, 522-3, 530g, 716e, 818a, 834b
 and the locusts 522de, 523dfh, 967fg JOHANAN, son of Carae 464abe JOHANAN, the high-priest 289gio, 294f JOHANAN, Vitellius's high-priest 607m JOHANNINE WRITINGS (see also Apocalyse, John) alleged dualism of 649e canonicity 662f, 776c, 955c Epistle I 662f, 671p, 781j, 803b, 805h, 955-8
 Epistle I: the Johannine Comma 583e, 955j, 958e
 Epistle I: the three witnesses 583e, 653g, 779e, 958de Epistle II 671p, 959a-dgf
 Epistle III 959ehi
 Logos doctrine 316h, 397m, 604f, 607 l, 781abc, 782-3, 955g, 956a, 962d, 971b on love of God 649b on sin and redemption 649a-g style 777d, 780ab, 781hi, 782a, 783a, 788e, 955bj, 956a, 959c, 962d, 963a, 965d, 968i symbolism of numbers 779e, 813c, 964h, 966a, 967ab, 968ci, 969a-dg, 970b, 972a
 the Epistles and the Gospel 778e, 781j, 955bd, 958f heresies attacked 778g, 955eh, 957ab, 958a, 959g, 963c
 JOHN, Gospel of St 776-813 alleged Alexandrian origin 607m and Genesis 779e, 967a and the Apocalypse 778de, 962cd, 963a and the Pauline Epistles 649abe and the synoptists 83ce, 607 l, 756e, 758f, 765d, 768bf, 773ac, 776cd, 777f, 778h, 779bcdg, 780a-g, 790g, 793a-h, 796b, 801d, 802a, 807a, 811d, 812abfg anonymity 777d, 778c authorship 604f, 607h-m, 676e, 776d, 777-78f, 955b, 963a Biblical Commission on 51c-e characteristics 604f, 607 l, 777ade, 779b-780
 Christology of 622cd, 778g, 779bd, 781a-e, 782a-d, 783cde, 792 (see also Logos) chronology 777e, 779cg, 780e, 787c, 790e, 791b, 793a, 797b cleansing of the Temple in 765d, 787ab date 16b, 77b, 606c, 607hj, 630d, 776d, 778a, 781j detailed, topical, topographical authenticity 777de, 779cd, 780e, 788i, 789c,
 790c
 (JOHN) discourses 604f, 607 l, 671gh, 778h, 779b, 780, 781e, 794-5, 796j, 797c-n, 801e-hj (see also Last Supper) doctrine 781 early papyrus (PRG 457) 77b, 81a, 607j, 776c epilogues to 812j, 813g eschatology 781g eucharistic teaching 653gh, 779de, 793ac, 794-5, 968k
 (an) eye-witness gospel 777de, 778ab,
 780e historicity, trustworthiness 607hm, 695c, 731g, 736c, 777de, 779b-g, 785c Holy Trinity in 781e, 782a, 804bc, 805d, 806h hours of day in 83c integrity, interpolations, dislocations 619e, 781hikl, 788cd, 791ac, 796b, 804e, 807e, 812j
 Justin, Ignatius and 606i, 776c Kingdom of God in 788a, 808c miracles in 779d
 Old Latin and Monarchian prologues 777c, 781j omissions in 778h, 779c on Life, Light, Darkness 642j, 649c, 778g, 779de, 781ac, 782d-g, 783a, 788af, 792c, 794-5, 796a, 797c, 801j pericope de adultera 781hi, 797ab prologue 39ef, 622g, 641i, 643b, 670f, 671u, 731e, 776b, 779be, 781a, 782-3, 968g purpose, plan, theme 778gh, 779ab, 780f, 781a, 796a, 955dh, 958f, 964ac reflexions of the evangelists 783e, 788ek, 801i
 St Bede's translation 4c semitic flavour of 777d, 782cg, 788a septuples in 779de, 962d
 (the) seven 'I am's' 789g, 794f, 797cln 799c, 800d, 803f, 804g spiritual gospel 777a, 779c, 781f style 777d, 780ab, 781hi, 782, 783a, 788e, 955b, 962d, 963a symbolism in 779def, 813c JOHN, St 636b, 658d, 684c, 692d, 776e-g, (see also Zebedee) and Cerinthus 776g, 781g and Our Lady 86dg, 776fg, 777a, 810e, 968k and St Paul 649abe, 653i, 895eg and St Peter 776fg, 825ab at Council of Jerusalem 776g at Ephesus 776g, 777g, 778e, 781j at the Cross 776f, 810e, 811b beloved disciple 607m, 776e, 777g, 778bc, 802g boiled in oil 776g call of 684c, 727e, 776e character of 41c, 710b, 728i, 776e, 777e (see also Boanerges) converts a brigand 776g death of 776g, 777g disciple of the Baptist 776e, 785a early ambition 710b, 776e first meeting with Christ 785ab known to the high-priest 776f, 777e, 807f
 (his) longevity and Christ's word 813f martyrdom (alleged early) 607k, 777g (his) memory 777de, 779cdg, 780e mother of 810d (see also Salome) Polycrates of Ephesus on 607k, 776g,
777b prepares the upper room 719e, 739d, 768b, 776f
 representative disciple 86dg, 810e rests on our Lord's breast 607k, 776f, 777ab, 802g
 runs to sepulchre 531f, 743a, 776f, 812c sufferings, confession 710b, 735h, 776g, 777f, 781j
 suggests calling fire from heaven 756a, 776e symbols of 776bg (JOHN, St) the Benjamin of the Twelve 776f, 778c
 the divine 776b
 the elder 606b, 607m, 724d, 778ef, 959abh, 962cd the prophet 780g (see also Apocalypse) the theologian 777g theme in old age 776g-781g, 803b tomb at Ephesus 81f, 778e vision on the lake 776f, 813ab JOHN DAMASCENE, St 37a
 JOHN FISHER, St 345e
 JOHN HYRCANUS 68g, 70b-d, 560b, 561bc, 571c, 572cd, 789d forcibly converts Edom 58g, 70b, 590d Jewish independence 572d
 JOHN OF THE CROSS, St 963a
 JOHN THE BAPTIST, St 102o, 340a, 413e, 441b, 558ag, 618ab, 619bdf, 625a, 682e-683b, 708f, 711e, 727a-c, 747de, 748ai, 750d, 753c, 758g, 766b, 782f, 784h, 824f, 842d (see also Forerunner) disciples of 691c, 694b, 728d, 731f, 752a, 753bc, 776c, 778g, 785a, 820b, 839ef (see also Apollos) greatest of the prophets 694d-g, 753ce his baptism 650cdg, 682f, 683a, 694d, 711e, 727b, 737e, 750c, 753f, 784e, 824f his burial, tomb 731f his food and clothing 772d, 682e, 727b, 750c, 753c, 784c humility of 784de, 788j imprisonment and death 58i, 73a, 676d, 684a, 694b, 701a, 712b, 727e, 731ef, 733e, 753bc, 754e, 759c, 777g, 778h, 779g, 792e in the desert 747e, 748j kinship to Christ 683a nativity of 614d, 748h
 Our Lord and 618ab, 625a, 649d, 694a-g, 727abc, 733e, 736c, 748f, 751c, 753c-f, 766b, 778g, 782af, 783a, 784a-h, 788ij, 785a, 788ij, 792e (see also Baptism)
 Pharisees and 682gh, 711e, 736e, 753f, 766bf preaching of 643a, 654a, 678g, 682e-h, 688b, 691c, 692f, 694dg, 711f, 714h, 727b, 748j, 750c-e, 751i, 753de, 758f, 764c, 765b, 784b-h questioned by the Jews 784a-e, 792e sanctified in the womb 747f second Elias 273g, 694f, 705c, 727b, 733e, 747f, 750ci, 756b, 784c sends to question Our Lord 694a-c, 753c-f teaches fasting 752a vox clamantis in deserto 682e, 784d JOIADA, Jehoiada, the high-priest 65c, 276hil son of Eliasib 289i JOINT STOCK COMPANIES, Roman 602e
 JOKNEAM 309h JOKTHEEL, Jecthel 277b, 287h (see also Petra)
 JONADAB, David's nephew 261b
 JONADAB, Jehonadab, son of Rechab
 276d JONAS, Jonah, 236b, 270k, 272a, 277e, 409c, 412c, 413d, 417d, 531-2, 697d doctrine of 531dg fact or fiction 277e, 531e-g his fish whale 89d, 531f, 532d, 758a his faults and his virtues 531f, 532ch Our Lord and 531f, 697d, 758a prayer of 531c, 532e the sign of 531dfg, 644b, 697e, 703f, 758a JONATHAN (see also David) age of 257d bow of 254j, 257c warlike prowess of 252 l, 257b JONATHAN, David's uncle, nephew 285p JONATHAN BEN UZZIEL 34c
 JONATHAN, the Maccabee 68d-f, 560b, 561c, 568a-571b conquests of 58e embassy to Rome and Sparta 570a

(JONATHAN M.) made high-priest 560b, 569a Syrian titles of honour 569ab treaty with Rome 560b JONATHAN, the Scribe 463d
 JOPPA, Joppe 58g, 68g, 70h, 267n, 569c, 570c, 571ad, 572cd, 579a, 631d, 660h, 832b JORAM, Jehoram, of Israel 64bg, 266de, 271f, 273fk-n, 274h, 275fh, 276g, 413f, 414b JORAM, Jehoram, of Judah 64h, 124fi, 153r, 266e, 272ai, 275c, 276gl, 286ii, 287abc, 530g JORAM, brother of Tibni 271e JORDAN, The 55fg, 229a-cg, 235a, 236ce, 236f, 237b, 274hk, 284g, 403d, 551a bed (Zor) 55f climate 56d fords 55g, 238hi, 242j, 243 l, 273g, 430g miraculous crossing of 90b, 219f, 229e-g, 230a, 273gh overflows 55g plain of 295m sources 55f, 122j, 704a, 733a
 'this side'; 'that side'; 'beyond' 212a, 267j, 314a tributaries 55g valley (Ghor) 54f, 55cefh, 430g JOSABA, Josabeth, Jehosheba 276g, 287e JOSAPHAT, David's vizier 259i
 JOSAPHAT, Valley of 522cefi, 523k JOSAPHAT, Jehosaphat 64fh, 217c, 266e, 273acdfi-n, 280g, 282ff, 286jj-mm, 287a, 406g, 410e, 411e JOSEDEK THE HIGH-PRIEST 283n, 473c, 543h JOSEPH, St 85hjl, 86kl, 94d, 617e-g, 672bfi, 673a-f, 729e carpenter 584km, 700e, 701e, 731b Davidic lineage of 748b, 750gh, 845e espousal and marriage of 218j, 748d his exemplary virtues 680ij his parents 750h legal, putative father of Christ 680eghj, 681f, 700e, 748b, 749h, 750bg perpetual virginity of 673ae, 748d, 754c powerful intercessor 680j related to Mary? 748b scandal at Mary's pregnancy 218j, 680hi source of Mt's infancy narrative 614d JOSEPH, The Patriarch 943c age (life-span) of 140cf, 156h, 161e and his brethren 156hi, 157gf-m, 829b coat of many colours 156h death and burial 155d, 158i, 786a, 789c eats apart 125f his divining cup 157k his double portion 158i his dream 155h, 157jl, 159d his Egyptian name 157dn, 790d his Egyptian wife 93f, 157d House of 235a-c, 545ikr (see also Israel, Northern) imprisoned 156i interpreter of dreams 157bc sold into Egypt 60a, 78a, 102fq, 125f, 139ch, 156i, 157ad-n, 158d-i, 161, 312d, 354e, 392b type of Christ 829b wisdom of 314g
 JOSEPH TRIBES 160g, 239cd (see also Israel)
 JOSEPH BARSABBAS 822d
 JOSEPH, Joses, brother of James 672e, 673, 700e, 722g
 JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA 660k, 742h, 722c, 811d
 JOSEPH, son of Zacharias 565d, 578b JOSEPHUS, Flavius 12c, 13e, 21m, 34c, 74f, 143g, 172g, 285e, 584c, 605c, 744g, 842g
 JOSHUA, see Josue
 JOSHUA, Jesus, son of Josedec 67b, 288c, 289e, 290g, 543ce, 543h, 545d, 547c, 552d, 968c

JOSIAS, Josiah, of Judah 46b, 66c, 135o, 266f, 280e-o, 287x-aa, 406g, 413h, 452b, 539e, 542c, 680c activities in the North 280 l, 287x age of 280e
 'Book of the Law' discovered 12b, 20a, 66c, 99g, 114k, 135bdoq, 211ad, 227g, 280g, 287y, 457f, 542c death at Megiddo 66c, 79d, 122a, 282dd, 287yaa, 426m, 459e, 465b, 477d, 552d, 970f passover of 66c, 113g, 280m, 287z, 288j reform of 66c, 80k, 114k, 211cd, 217e, 265 l, 270o, 278c, 280ej-n, 287x-z, 477dg, 483c, 537c, 539e, 542bc repairs the Temple 280f, 287y JOSUE, Joshua 57g, 61e, 62, 63d, 105b, 181e, 221ac, 227e-237g, 238hik, 239c, 240a, 333c, 406d, 563a bids Sun and Moon halt 90a, 232f-i, 313b character of 228f covenant with 237eg incompleteness of his conquest 237d inscribed memorial stones of 130k
 'Jesus' in Greek 936a
 Law that he read 130k Moses and 176e, 201c, 207i, 221a, 229a, 234a, 236g, 410b name of 202b, 228f one of the spies 202bfhj takes Jericho 62cd, 90b, 125b, 178a, 230e-h type of Christ 228f, 936a
 wisdom of 314g
 writings of 11f, 34c, 134d, 224c JOSUE, Joshua, Book of 224b, 227a-232 compared with Judges 227h, 228c historicity vindicated 62cd, 224bc, 227g-228d JOT AND TITTLE 685h
 JOY 211f, 651d, 718d, 745fi, 747e, 756de, 804i, 805e, 806f, 834k, 850b, 905f, 907ef in tribulation 752h, 827c, 837f, 850b of Christ 756de of creation 333b over sinner repenting 745i, 760bcd prolongs life 403g through hope 850d
 JUBILEE, The 182e, 194fhi, 425d, 450i, 482d, 584b, 644a, 690c JUBILEES, The Apocryphal Book of 93a, 855d, 921a JUDAEA 234e, 584dgh, 749ab, 753b and Galilee 584hi desert, wilderness of 54h, 55e, 239b during the exile 58c, 289b, 291c, 292i, 471ij
 Our Lord's ministry in (q.v.) 751dh Roman Procurators of 72bc, 74bc, 674a, 675be, 676h, 754g Roman Province of 57f, 58fgj, 72ac, 73, 676a royal administration of 80e under Persians 58d, 289g JUDAH, Kingdom of 58b, 280j, 456i (see also Jerusalem) pro-Egyptian policy 477de stable monarchy of 64c JUDAH, the Patriarch 106d, 137f, 156j, 157k, 159bg JUDAH, Tribe of 57e, 159bg, 238k, 239ab, 245ci, 273c, 283b-g, 939b absorbs Benjamin, Simeon, Dan 270be JUDAISM 44g, 113i, 114k, 169e, 289rs, 584-96, 618a (see also Apocalypstists, Assideans, Essenes, Hellenism, Pharisees, Rabbinic, Sadducees, Sanhedrin, Synagogues, Yahwism, Zealots) and Christianity 815a, 829a, 846be, 852-3, 887c-e, 894bd, 932c, 944f and the Nation 590d angelology 592de Bible in 12b, 289r, 585e-g chastity esteemed 596d communion with God in 585f

(JUDAISM) conception of sin 595d
 demonology 593a
 Divine Names and 591c (see also Yahweh) doctrine of God 591-92c, 596f doctrine of man 397h, 401b, 502b emphasized sin, expiation 585d, 586c, 592b, 596f eschatology 593de, 594c-595c exclusiveness 67c-f, 289r, 531g, 584e, 586a, 587f, 589d, 590, 633e, 642h, 915d externalism of 585g, 586g, 596f, 642h Faith (neglect of) 858b fasts 449a-c, 545h, 586b, 691c, 728d, 752a foreign influence, contributions 589gh, 593a Gentiles (lack of morality towards) 595e
 God depersonalized 591cg, 592b God's transcendence exaggerated 591cfa, 592ce heavenly patterns and realities 964f hopeful and confident 596f legalism of 99g, 100a, 115h, 413e, 585g-586, 858ab Messianism 593b-594b, 670c, 681de, 682f, 718f, 721d, 728b (see also Nationalism) missionary effort 92o, 93f, 114h, 115g, 837f (see also Conversion, Proselytes) morality 591h, 595d-596f negativity of 585g new institutions 113cilm, 172i, 289s, 586-7, 589ab, 617f on biblical inspiration 34ce on eternal punishment 718h on Free-will and Predestination 592ab on the intermediate state, 595a on the Judgement 594e, 595a on the Resurrection 594d, 595b Persian influence on 589h personification of divine attributes 592c Pharisaism and the survival of 587f piety of 585dfn, 586b, 588d, 592b, 596f, 686f, 691c, 747e, 748c, 749h, 756f, 770d prayer in 213c, 585f, 592c, 596f, 686g, 950b Sabbatarianism 448e, 449e, 585h, 587c
 'Sons of the Law' 617g superstitions, credulity 592a universalism and particularism 590 wealth esteemed 596e women's status 596b (see also Women, Wives) JUDAIZERS, Christians 645m, 665b, 667e, 746f, 767h, 815a, 816c, 819e, 836, 839g, 862e, 863i, 865d, 869f, 870a, 882d, 893cefh, 894efh, 895aef, 897b, 906b, 907fg, 909e, 912d, 918g, 919d, 921ab, 925b, 946b
 JUDAS BARSABBAS 836g, 837a JUDAS ISCARIOT 261f, 349e, 466e, 526i, 620eg, 631b, 699f, 719ac, 720e, 721b-e, 728i, 739bcd, 740c, 768bc, 795i, 801c, 802ch, 806ef, 807bc, 822d (see also Betrayal) a thief 801c at the Last Supper 719f, 802h
 (a) Judean apostle 795i Judean native town (Carioth) 692e kiss of 720c, 740c, 769c, 807c motives, character 739bc, 795i predestination and 739f, 768c, 801i son of Simon Iscariot 692e JUDAS MACCABAEUS 68de, 559b-568a, 573a, 576b, 577a-580 (see also Maccabees) offerings for the dead 115f, 560e, 579e JUDAS OF GALILEE 72b, 74b, 712e, 736g, 749a, 827c JUDAS, Theudas, the Zealot 72b, 827c JUDE, Epistle of St 662f, 960-1 and 2 Peter 953h, 960d citation of apocryphal works 94k, 960ce, 961ce

(JUDE, Epistle of) purpose 960f, 961a style 960dg, 961d JUDE, St 804b brother of St James 752f, 960bf, 961a brother of St Simon 672e, 673
 'brother' of the Lord 700e, 960b, 961a humility of 960b, 961a missionary sphere of 960f Thaddaeus, Lebbaeus 692e, 752f, 960b JUDGEMENT, Divine 792acd, 801h, 848d, 859 l in this world 650n, 950c, 951ce judges the heart 762e omniscient 936b proportioned to opportunity, etc. 207h, 525e, 527a, 695a, 718e, 758f, 951e JUDGEMENT, The Last 40h, 92j, 308o, 340ab, 353c, 390e, 401c, 429c, 435b, 439fh-n, 451f-ir, 503g, 520p, 522e-fi, 523k, 533f, 541d, 542e, 594e, 670, 671, 692h, 697d, 712c, 718f-h, 733b, 756c, 758g, 762d-f, 767i, 792acd, 856g, 857a, 861g, 870e, 871i, 914h, 915bde, 917a, 932d, 937e, 948e, 953i, 971g (see also Day of Yahweh, Eschatology)
 (the) criterion 718f last trump 230e, 436e, 542e, 968d of living and dead 832l, 951cd of the Angels 961b on idle words 696c place of 522cfi, 762f the Redeemed judged and judging 873b, 971d JUDGEMENT, The Particular 396g, 400b, 670m, 671e, 717e-718f, 856g, 915e, 924d, 932d JUDGEMENTS, The 212f JUDGES, Book of the 238-45 composite narratives in 238g, 242b, 245bj date of 224b, 238fg inspired editors of 238fgk reference to exile in 224b, 245d JUDGES (Deliverers), The 63a-d, 238dj, 406d, 530w divinely called, inspired 238 l, 242f, 244aegj Law neglected under 112g, 114j, 238fgk, 245ai Minor Judges 238d-fk, 243fm not consecutive 63c, 123b, 125a, 226e, 238hi times of 63a-e, 125a, 238hi JUDGES (Justices) 217ac, 286kk and Judges (deliverers) 238dj, 240cd appointed by Moses 171j, 212b corrupt, drunken 425g partiality, impartiality 373d JUDGING, by externals 400d others 687e, 752h, 763c, 848c, 862f, 948c JUDICIAL PROCEDURE, Jewish 587b JUDITH, Book of 32h, 38e, 223ad, 308-309 canonicity of 11d, 14dg, 15e, 308 canticle of 309o historical background of 67h, 122h, 308e moral conduct of 38e, 308m JULIA 863g
JULIAN YEARS, Hebrew and 124j
 Seleucid and 123d
JULIUS AFRICANUS 14e, 682c, 750h
JULIUS CAESAR 588f, 754g, 905c
JULIUS, the Centurion 843bg JUNIAS 863g
JUNIUS AFRICANUS 318i
JUNIPER TREE 272a, 458f
JUPITER 835b
JUPITER, Capitolinus 511hi, 555k, 599i
 Olympios 68c
Jus Italicum, The 837d, 905c JUSTICE 388i, 438ij, 485gi, 548a, 683a, 685eh, 686d, 846c (see also God, Righteousness) and the Gentiles 584e, 595e, 596e

(JUSTICE) God's communicated 846e, 849dhi, 858e God's distributive 846e
 God's moral perfection 849h God's punitive 846e, 849g-i hungering and thirsting for 685e justness 648nopq, 905f, 906b, 907f (see also Righteousness) of St Joseph 680i JUSTIFICATION 101c, 641e, 642j, 646g, 648l-s, 678g, 846abf, 851, 893h, 894a-f, 895i, 896a, 929c, 931a, 945g (see also Salvation) and the fomes peccati 854d and the Law 101c, 893h, 894a-e, 895i, 896a-c by faith 560g, 648lm, 844bf, 846bf, 848g, 849c-p, 858abe, 893h, 894a-f, 895i, 896a-g, 943b, 945f, 946b, 947e Council of Trent on 846df, 849klm final justification 850m initial and subsequent 849k Luther's 'sola fide' 648kln, 753h, 849m the fruits of 850-2, 854-56a three eras of 894ad through baptism 846d, 848g, 896b works preliminary to 849 l JUSTIN MARTYR, St 3e, 15a, 17d, 25d, 35e, 101f, 606b, 607ij, 724e, 726b, 749b JUVENAL 584c

KAB (Measure) The 82d
KABUL, see Cabul KADESH-BARNEA 212bc, 233bc, 234e KADESH, Cades 57bik, 61a, 239d, 569h wilderness of 202b, 203f, 344f in Issachar 57h, 239d Naphtali 57i, 240de, 303a on the Orontes 118j, 119ei, 120cd, 239c, 269e KADMONITES 151f
KAIN, Accain 283d (see also Kenites)
KANT, Emmanuel 605d, 606e
KARKAR, see Qarqar
KARNAK INSCRIPTION 270o, 286u
KASSITES, The 116f, 117j, 121abi, 149i KEDAR, Cedar, Tribe of 309b, 361d, 384c, 433d, 456d, 466m KEDESH, Qadesh 277k
KEFTIU, see Crete
KELLAM, Printer, Laurence 29k
KENATH, Canath 283c
KENITES, The 151f, 164e, 165c, 200c, 239b, 240b, 253b, 283d, 460d KENIZZITES 151f, 156c
KENOTIC HERESY 907bc
KENRICK, Archbishop F. P. 31c KEPHIRA 57f
KEPLER, J. 681d
KEREN-HAPPUCH 334g
KERIOTH, see Carioth
KERITH, see Cherith KERUGMA 3c, 35c, 286c, 634b, 639c, 645a, 657a, 730b, 817, 818, 819c, 951a (see also Apostolic Preaching, Gospel) and the common life 817d economy, apologetic reserve in 817a-d KESIAH 334g
KETHUBIM, see Hagiographa
KETURAH 136f, 140a, 153f, 283a (see also Tetura) KEWAN 527i
KEYS 239i
 keys of office 434c, 964e power of the 657k, 964e (see also Kingdom) KHABUR WARE 117 l KHAMSHIN, The 168f
KHASEKHEM 118c
KHATTI 78b
KHORSABAD 117k
KHUFU, Pharaoh 118c
KIDNAPPING, Law on 173e, 174e, 219b KIDRON, Cedron Valley, Brook 267d, 280k, 295fgm, 522i, 570c, 710h, 715a, 720cf, 807b KIERKEGAARD, S. 670c

KINDNESS, Humanity 110g (see also Animals) to enemies, if Israelite 110g to the weak and poor 114eg, 318m KINGDOM, UNITED ISRAELITE, division of 64a, 112d, 135n, 266e, 270g-i, 282gg, 426m, 529a, 696f institution of 63e, 251c organization of 235c, 267hi, 470a religion vital to 265 l KINGDOM OF GOD 593f, 619a, 620e, 623bd, 625b-g, 643bgl, 678dfg, 682e, 684d, 685de, 686c, 698-700d, 704g, 706, 707, 746e, 748e, 749f, 750fij, 751ad, 754bg, 756bc, 758d, 759d-f, 760a, 768bc (see also Messianic Age) already in being 625e, 678fg, 694f, 699bfh, 700cd, 704g, 706b, 711f, 746e, 757g, 762c and fall of Jerusalem 704g, 716e, 717a (see also Parousia) and the kingdom of Israel 678deg apostles to rule in 709f, 768d birth pangs of 715c, 737fg, 738c children of 699g
 Christ and the OT conception of 625b, 678de Church and 40g, 625f, 655a, 678fg, 738c, 746e, 754g, 762c, 768b, 822ab, 835e, 915c, 932, 944d coming of 625e, 670gh-j, 671i, 678dg, 716cf, 717b, 728h, 733c, 737d, 738cd, 762c, 767h entry into 625d, 643g, 650h, 685i, 688a-c, 689e, 705b, 711f, 730a, 735cde, 746e, 749f, 759be, 761d, 763e, 788ab eschatological 625d, 670f-j, 671il, 762c, 767h (see also Parousia) eternal, spiritual life, grace 643bg, 734d, 735d, 788a, 872d exclusion, rejection from 643g, 688c, 689e, 736f, 759b feasting in 652i, 689e, 712a-c, 720b, 739h, 761e, 768bc (see also Messianic Banquet) for the child-like 643gl, 706b, 731c, 735c, 763e greatness, status in 607k, 670i, 685i, 694f, 706b, 710b, 734b, 735fh, 755d, 764bd, 768d higher critical theories on 608d in lifetime of disciples, this generation 670f, 704g, 717a, 733c, 737b, 738d, 754g, 767h invincible, irresistible 699d, 704c, 763a keys of 612e, 704cd, 706f, 964e kingdom of the Heavens 678f, 682e morality and 623d
 (the) Law and 678e, 700d, 761d mysteries of 687e, 693c, 694a, 698c, 729g, 742g Lord's Prayer and 625e, 686h, 762c near, urgently at hand 626c, 655b, 678g, 684b, 695a, 704g, 717a, 727e, 733c, 754g, 756c, 758g, 767h (see also Vigilance) new wine in 652i, 720b, 739h of the Son, in power, on earth 678f, 685i, 689e, 704g, 709ef, 712d, 716f, 718f, 720b, 723f open to the Gentiles 699c, 709i, 736f, 754d, 759abf, 766c parables of 625g, 643g, 678f, 698a-700d, 712a-d, 729f, 730a-d, 736f, 754b, 756e, 759bf, 760b Paradise 872d, 873c
 Pauline version of 788a Pharisees and 587e, 759ef, 765b preached by John 682e, 750e realized in Incarnation 625f, 723f repentance and 750e riches and 706d, 763h
 (the) Resurrection and 723f Salvation and 625d
 (the) scribe in 657e, 700d
 'seek first the kingdom' 660 l, 687d, 820b spiritual, not of this world, 670cv, 678f, 680j, 683e, 704g, 712f, 721f, 727g, 731d, 736a, 741a, 808c (KINGDOM OF GOD) strait is its gate 688a, 759b taken, entered by violence 694f, 761d within you 670i, 678f, 762c KINGDOM OF SATAN 654b, 683ef, 696efg, 746e, 750i, 756d, 757f

 KINGS, anointing of 252cdg, 253d, 255i as Divine Sons 248j, 259e as representatives of God, the gods 63h, 117h, 950f as shepherds 252i, 258d brotherhood of 272f Christian loyalty 950f demanded by Israelites 63e, 251c democratic limitation of 251d, 252ce, 258d, 264d, 272h, 276i, 280d divine appointment of 939f extermination of king's enemies 272h fathers of their people 269d (the) Great King 517i, 519j (the) king in Canticles 384b, 385c, 386f law of 130i, 134de, 217d, 493ab polygamy of 110h (see also David, Solomon) priesthood and Kings, royal priesthood 102o, 248j, 252c, 264e, 270j, 282cc, 287j, 403b, 594ab, 656a, 949g, 950de, 964c proverbs concerning 364g, 370h, 371g, 373c religion and Hebrew 248i, 264c royalists and anti-royalists 238g, 245f, 251ad solidarity with their people 264e theocratic limitation of 248j, 251cd, 252k, 264c, 411a KINGS (SAMUEL) Books I, II of 34e, 42b, 224bd, 248-64, 336 KINGS, Books III, IV of 32g, 34e, 224b, 256-81 author, redactor of 265d-e, 266ab, 270kl, 272i chronological order and problems 42b, 265i, 266c-j, 268a, 273dfl, 275c, 277fi, 279a date of 266a, 267j, 268a, 269cdf, 270k deuteronomic influence on 265e, 270 l, 278f didactic pragmatism 265c-i, 278f harmony with Paralipomenon 211d, 267hk, 269i, 270bdfh, 271acd, 273d, 275efi, 276gh, 277em, 278bc, 279im, 280cdjmoq, 281a, 287e historical impartiality, truthfulness 79d, 80c-k, 265j-l, 272i interpolations, glosses 268ad, 269d, 270g, 271d, 272h, 273af, 276j, 277af LXX of 265bc, 266c, 267kn, 268a, 269abg, 270efgk, 271lek, 274hl, 276b, 277g, 278i, 280e selective omissions of 265il signs of Babylonian exile in 267j, 268a, 269adf, 270m sources 265e-h, 266a, 270f, 272i, 276e, 279cj, 280g, 282vy KING'S GARDEN, The 281d, 554d KINGS OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH, listed 64c, 125h regnal years 64bc, 124bf-i relations between 64b-h synchronisms 64bc, 124fh-k KINSMAN, see Go'el
 KIR, QIR 278b
 KIR-HERES, Kir-hareseth 466d
 KIRIATH-, see Cariath-KISH, Cis 79b, 117a-e, 121h, 148d, 149 l, 283bb KISH, Cis, the sons of 283bb, 672b KISHON, The River 54i, 55b, 240be, 241i, 271k Kiss, Kissing 340b, 882i as a religious ceremony 272c, 330c of Charity, Peace 836h, 840f, 882i, 916e, 951h of Judas 720c, 740c, 769c, 807c on lips 373a

KITCHENER, Lord 970k
 KITTEL, G. 10f, 607f
 KITTIM (Cethim) 434f, 456dh, 487 l
 KNIGHTS TEMPLAR 562h KNOWLEDGE, and Virtue 402d, 847d, 953c (see also Wisdom) sexual knowledge 145b KOHATHITES, see Caathites
 KOHEN, Kohanim 259j, 284w
 KOINE, The 21a-e, 41f, 77ef, 662d, 907d (see also Greek) Koinonia 636b (see also Communion, Fellowship) KOPPE, J. 604e KOR MEASURE, see Cor KORAH, see Core KORAN, The 164b, 548c, 600d
 KUDUR-MABUK 150e
 KULTEPE 72h, 118j, 119a, 121a KURIGALZA III THE KASSITE 121b KUSH, see Cush
 KYAXARES, see Cyaxares

LABAN 106h, 140c, 153eq, 154afj-o, 672b
 LABARNA 119c
 LABAYA, prince of the Habiri 119 l LABEO, Notker 4c
 LABYRINTH OF AMENHETEP III 118g LACHISH, Lakish 57e, 62d, 65c, 80c, 118k, 125bc, 228b, 232d, 233ab, 267i, 277d, 279c, 463b, 534d ostraca, letters 19k, 20ac, 38a, 62d, 66c, 80i-k, 125b, 275d, 281c, 453d seals 80h LACHMANN, K. 582e, 583f
 LAGASH 117d, 149 l, 268 l LAGIDS, The 58e, 122l-m brother-sister marriages 390b, 393f LAGRANGE, M.-J. 6e, 135j LAIS, Laish 118h, 150g, 245bc renamed Dan 245b
 LAISA (Eleasa) 567d, 580e LAITY SLAY SACRIFICIAL VICTIMS 111d LAKISH, see Lachish LAMB OF GOD, The 417g, 649dg, 768bc, 784g, 785a, 966cd, 969h, 970j (see also Paschal Lamb) marriage, bride of 671u, 971a (see also Church) song of 970c virgin retinue of 969h LAMECH 32g, 146d, 313b LAMENTATIONS 282z, 287aa, 313f, 335d, 409c, 469-71, 552d (see also Qinah) LAMP (see also Candlestick) house 329h of David 270e of God 194a, 250a symbol of prosperity 369k, 371fg, 372o, 375k LAMP-STAND, seven-branched 41c, 112f, 177e, 194a, 250a, 545b, 547a-c, 797c, 940c lit at night only 111b symbolizes absent worshippers 111b LAND OWNED BY GOD 175i LAND(S), The People of the 291e, 294b
 LAND TAX 905c
 LANDMARK, see Boundary Stones
 LANFRANC 3g, 8c
 LANGUAGE, gift of 880d (see also Lingua Franca, Speech, Tongues) in Palestine in NT times 584g of Bible 19-21f, 41f orthography 20fg, 21k phonetic and structural change 20fg pronunciation change 20f varieties, and Babel 32 l, 149n LAODICEA 898f, 909bc, 965e (see also Councils) alleged destination of Eph 661c, 898f LARSA 117f, 120a, 150e
 LARUS 215f
 LAST DAYS, Things 535b, 554ab, 855g, 932d, 950c, 954c, 957a (see also Eschatology)
 LAST SUPPER, The 462t, 624a-ce, 649e,

652i, 653j, 719e-720c, 768bc, 776f, 777f, 802-3, 950a (LAST SUPPER) and Messianic Banquet 339a, 624d, 625d, 652bi, 653j, 768c and the new Covenant 768c 950a and the Passover 83e, 113g, 163h, 169d, 644h, 653j, 719d, 739e, 768a-c, 802ab, 872g chalice at 360i, 644gh, 720a, 739d, 768e Christ sacrificially offered at 644f-j, 653f, 768c discourse at 651b, 652b, 653gi, 671ghk, 720c, 778h, 779d, 781e, 802e-805h, 824a eaten reclining 739f, 802cg hymn at 360g, 362g, 739di
 'I shall drink no more . . . ' 652i, 720b, 739h Judas at 719f, 768c
 Luke's preliminary chalice 768c the sop 802g LASTHENSES 569e
 LATIN 4a (see also Vulgate) Latinisms in NT 919b the Church's use of 4acd used in Roman colonies 864e LAUDIANUS, Codex 581g
 Lavabo, The 344c
 LAW (see also Law, Mosaic, Natural) and Convention 109h, 110d and the common good 752d and the Gospel 844bi, 846b paramouncy of divine law 861b penal and moral laws 861a pre-Mosaic Israelite 139g, 173g pre-Mosaic pagan 45m, 79g, 139g Roman 597 l, 721g, 854k semitic common law 212f unjust law and conscience 861d LAW, EZECHIEL'S VISIONARY 492a-n LAW, MOSAIC 41e, 92ek, 100b, 212f, 237eg, 351c, 595d, 642c, 687h, 700d, 852c-h, 853g-l, 894b (see also Casuistry, Covenant, Book, Decalogue, Pentateuch, Scribes) ambiguity of Pauline term 852c, 853bd, 858e agricultural and nomadic laws 61d, 173d ancient parallels and 38e, 45m, 61d, 79g, 163fg, 173ghk, 212f angels mediate, promulgate 593c, 645d, 829c, 894b, 896g, 909e, 911b, 933a, 934b, 944c apodeiktic and casuistic elements 45m Artaxerxes I enforces 293d categories, scribal classification of 713c, 736j, 756f Christianity and 101abd, 312h, 339d, 402e, 663c, 664f, 666h, 668c 669ab, 685b-88, 752b, 826b, 832c-k, 836, 852-3, 874d, 875c, 876c, 887ce, 893c-g, 894c-f, 895hi, 896a-g, 909g, 914f, 921b, 946b, 947bd (see also Liberty) Civil Law 110i cohesion, unity of 947d (the) curse of 894de, 896f David modifies 112g divine authorship of 34e, 100a, 213b, 645 l, 893h domestic and social law 182e, 192 l Eden's four rivers and 397b eightfold division of 361c Esdras and 113 lm, 211b, 289hr, 297e (the) fence around 586d, 732ab (the) great commandment in 114c, 115j, 213c, 586c, 716cd, 756f, 861e identified with Wisdom 315e, 316c, 403bd, 472h, 474bde, 893h ignorance c ipi ble 220j, 390d impotent 40i, 101c, 633b, 645m, 685b, 816b, 841c, 843hi, 849cdj, 853k, 893h, 894bd-f, 897i, 896f, 939c legal righteousness 101cd, 379d, 586c meaning the Pentateuch 11f, 12be, 127, 130e, 210b, 340a meaning the whole OT 849dj, 880f

(LAW, Mosaic) mitigating human brutality 110gi, 211g, 218dfg
 morality and 595d
 Mosaic origin 45m, 61cd, 79g, 130e, 135, 184b motives for observance 212f Natural Law and 110e, 391b, 852c non-observance of 99g, 112cd, 114i-k, 135kln-t, 283j, 287ee oral law of Scribes 586ef Our Lord and 100ab, 618f, 623e, 748j, 752beh, 755b, 761df, 893f, 894e post-Mosaic development of 82f, 112g, 128, 131e, 132fg, 134d-g, 135ckln-t, 162ef, 173f, 184b, 211b, 216c, 217e, 478j precepts of 765f
 (the) promise and 645i-n, 849n-p, 894a-f, 896g provocative of sin and death 852h, 853a-f, 887c Sanhedrin and 587b
 Septennial Reading of 221b Sons of the Law 750a source of life, grace, peace, wisdom 406c, 447b, 893h statute law and case law 212f superstitious trust in 115h, 348e, 415g, 525e, 527a, 528i, 534fgk
 'the Lord spoke to Moses' 213b (the) testimony 276h, 287e
 (the) torah 544h, 585g, 586d transitory, pedagogic role of 101b-d, 102h-103a, 115j, 289s, 397i, 702e, 733d, 828ab, 829a-e, 841c, 894bd, 896g written law 99fg, 519c LAW, NATURAL 87c, 110e, 391b, 402a, 481g, 645i, 848d, 852c, 853dk, 861b and Civil Codes 110i and miracles 87cd, 90c and Mosaic 110e, 391b contingent 87cd
 Divine causality in 137b
 LAWSUITS BETWEEN CHRISTIANS 660t, 873bc
 LAWYERS, see Scribes LAXISM, Moral 965a (see also Antinomianism)
 LAZARUS, Dives and 584k, 761ef LAZARUS OF BETHANY 691f, 796a, 800a-f, 801d raised from dead 135c, 620d, 626f, 779de LEAD INLAY 326i
 LEAH, see Lia
 LEATHER ROLLS 662a (see also Vellum) LEAVEN 184e, 186g, 216d, 527d, 732h of sin 216c, 872g of the Pharisees, and Herod 703g, 732h, 758c parable of 660i, 759b LEAVITT, Printer, J. 29p
 LIBANUS, Libanus, Mount 54d, 55c, 57b, 229a, 239f, 269gi, 344f, 354d
 Baal Lebanon 271i, 272f cedars of 63j, 267m, 286d, 403b, 439i, 551a house of Forest of 268i, 269i, 433h iron mines of 269g LEBASHI-MARDUK 122b
 LEBBAEUS 960b (see also Jude)
 LEB-KAMAI 467e
 LEBNA 233ab
 LECHE 244j
 LECTIONARIES 581d,f, 582a, 661e of synagogue 589b, 751b LEGALISM, Jewish 99g, 100a, 115h, 413c, 585g-586, 858ab Legati a Latere, Apostolic 919f LEGENDS 33 lo, 38b and miracles 87f, 89a historical nucleus in 318d of Achikar 301cehi, 303e, 304b, 305c, 306k, 307i of Khonsu 301g of the eagle 358f of the Grateful Dead 301cg

LEGION, The 730h
 LEMUEL 364g, 375ajj
 LENDING, Loans 403f, 686d (see also Interest, Pledges)
 LENGTH, Measures of 82bc
 LENT, Fast of 683c
 LEO, The Sign of 159gh
 LEO I, THE GREAT, St 3f, 733d
 LEO IX, St 36a
 LEO XII's Ubi primum 10g LEO XIII 45i, 101e, 810e encourages Bible reading 4h founds Biblical Commission 9d Officiorum ac munerum 10g, 29r Providentissimus Deus 6abd, 9fg, 32d, 36ce, 37dfg, 39b, 53bh, 137b, 142a, 339b Vigilantiae and Vinea Electa 47bh LEONTES, River 212b LEPERS, Leprosy 65d, 103a, 190a-q, 198b, 201g, 204g, 320h, 727h, 762b and sin 65d, 190alm Azarias' 64c, 421c cured by our Lord 689bc, 727h, 751g, 762b defilement of 732a mild kinds of 115g, 274gj, 275c, 689b, 719a (see also Naaman) mildew, rot, of clothes, houses 190if Miriam 109mn, 201g segregation 183i, 190h, 274gj, 275a, 277f, 287j, 727h showing to the priests 689b, 727h trespass-offering of 111g LESSING, G. E. 605a, 621b LESSIUS 36cd
 LETTER AND THE SPIRIT, The 1e, 10d, 852h, 887c
 LETTER BOOKS 661i
 LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION, Apostolic 865ch, 887a LETTER-WRITING, Ancient 274g, 661gh, 662ab, 845al, 846a, 927b, 933a (see also Salutations) captatio benevolentiae 846a, 857c, 858b LEVI, Levites 112g, 134c, 155e, 158c, 159af, 217e, 222h, 224f, 245g, 282bbgg, 283n-ree, 285d-k, 293g, 478j, 492m, 493k, 710c age limits for 112g, 135f, 199e, 285d bearers, custodians of Ark 214c, 284jlm, 285d, 286j census of 197j, 207e courses 285g-j, 287eq David and the 112g, 282i, 283q, 285dfgk dues payable to 204de, 215c, 234ad duties, functions 197jlmn, 204b, 214c, 280j, 283ee, 285df-k, 287o, 585bd exempt from census, civil duties, etc. 197d flee south under Jeroboam I 270i, 286s God their portion 134g institution of 197h, 199cd laicisation of 112i Micah's 245c musicians, choirs 112g, 283q, 285dgh, 287n, 290k porters, doorkeepers 283ee, 285ij rank of 203n rehabilitation of 159bf relation to priests 197f reprobation of 159b rights safeguarded 215c, 217e substitute for firstborn 112g, 197ik (the) three clans 236i, 283n-r, 287n, 290k zeal in the wilderness 181c LEVI, THE PUBLICAN 691a, 728c, 751c, 752bf (see also Matthew) LEVIATHAN 358g, 528h (see also Dragon) crocodile 334d
 (the) swift, crooked serpent 79i, 436b LEVIRATE MARRIAGE 79k, 156k, 207f, 219c, 246gj, 247bh, 283c, 300g, 309n, 680eg, 713a, 736h, 750h
 LEVITATION 683g

LEVITICAL CITIES 209h, 217e, 236h, 283rs, 290i LEVITICUS 33a, 135rs, 182-95, 287ce, 478j, 519c, 836fg code of Holiness 135s composite character of 182f Mosaic character of 135rs new MS found 80i
Lex Porcia 666e, 837h, 841h
Lex Talionis 110i, 174f-h, 175h, 194e, 239b, 312h, 339d, 360c, 429h, 489k, 686de LIA, Leah 59h, 79k, 139a, 152j, 154figi, 192i LIBANUS, see Lebanon LIBATION, see Drink-offering LIBERALIZING CHRISTIANS 864i, 865ef, 866ad, 872b, 875c (see also Modernism) LIBERALIZING JEWS 816b, 827c
 LIBERTY, Christian 81d, 101ad, 633ab, 648d, 650j, 660t, 797i, 819bce, 832b-k, 833ac, 834c, 836, 841cd, 851ij, 852-3, 874d, 875c, 876c, 877i, 887e, 893ef, 894c-f, 895i, 896d, 897c, 947bd, 950f, 954bg LIBNAN, Lobna 275e
 LIBYA, Libyans, see Lubim
 LICE, Plague of 90b, 91a, 757f
 LICTORS 741d
 LIES, Lying 153q, 305e, 367o (see also Ananias, False Witness, Satan) Abraham's half-truth 150c idols 526j
 LIFE (see also Breath, Blood, Christian, Eternal, Future, New Life, Resurrection, Spiritual)
 (the) Book of 129i, 362j, 398c, 439k, 594e, 646e, 756d, 944c, 971g art of living 364jk, 366a, 370f, daily life 381b, 602gh end, meaning, purpose of 320k, 367d, 376gh, 377d, 899e, 901c inequalities of 404a life-giver 154h, 331a, 870d (see also Holy Spirit, Jesus) long life 161e, 371c, 398cd, 403g, 451i, 480i, 484g, 485g, 486d, 549g, 687c origin of 106f, 141c, 143d, 144d, 189k sanctity of 144d, 148b saving, and losing 693d, 704f, 733b spiritual life 402e, 640h, 650d, 733b, 778g, 779de, 782d, 788a, 792c, 794e, 795a, 801f, 825c (see also Eternal, John, Spiritual) to be enjoyed 376j, 377e, 378b, 379ab, 380b transitoriness 313n, 357a, 376f-i, 380b, 400g, 402c tree of 366k, 403e LIGHT, see Illumination, Jesus children of 761b Christians, the light of the world 685g creation of 887g Feast of Lights 564c (see also Feasts) God, the light of New Jerusalem 450f, 545d, 554ac, 972a of countenance 329i, 347c of the world 685g, 796ad, 797c rejected, sinned against 782f, 783a shafts for 329d wonders of 332g
 LIGHT AND DARKNESS 327m, 328i, 332b, 333bc, 427f, 441i, 642j, 748ij, 758a, 782defg, 788fg, 861fg, 910c, 955e, 956b (see also Dualism) LIGHTFOOT, Bishop 604b, 607h, 661d
 LIGHTFOOT, R. H. 609a
 LIGHTNING 271k, 272b, 332g, 550m, 670il, 671c, 716d (see also Fire from Heaven)
 LIKENESS TO GOD 958b (see also Image) Christians and Christ 887e Moses' face 181j, 887c of angels and man 142e, 146h, 397gk, 386i LILIES, Lilies of the Field 55b, 384fm, 386e, 687d, 758d
 LIMBO 697d

(LIMBO) of the Fathers, the Just 771b, 858e, 940g, 942a, 951ab LINDISFARNE GOSPELS 27h
 LINGARD, John 31c
Lingua Franca, Akkadian, Babylonian 19i, 79j Aramaic 19i, 20d, 67a, 120k, 279d, 291f Canaanite, Phoenician 19i Greek 4a, 21a, 41f, 77e, 122m, 834d Latin 4a
 LINUS, St 924f
 LION OF JUDAH 159gh
 LIONS 244f, 270k, 329d, 485l, 538k, 551a LIP-SERVICE 688c
 LISAN, The 56a, 150e
 LISTS OF RETURNED EXILES 288e, 289h, 290f, 543f priests 545b
 LITAS, River 54di
 LITERACY IN THE ANCIENT WORLD 4a LITERAL SENSE OF SCRIPTURE 225c, 383c
 LITHOSTROTOS 81h, 721f LITURGY 654k, 820e, 825a, 833d, 834b, 835e (see also Kalendar, Lectionaries, Mass, Paralipomenon, Worship) and Lord's Prayer 757c apocryphal books in Christian 92 lo, 93k, 94cf David and 112g, 282i, 283q, 291c, 337, 347a, 410c deuterocanonical books in Christian 14g, 15g (the) Heavenly 939fg influences formation of Canon 12de Jewish 12c-e, 246b, 335b, 346e, 748i, 820e, 825b, 857d, 887e (see also Sacrifice, Synagogue, Temple) liturgical day 113k, 141c, 532g, 654k, 840b liturgical farewells 835e, 840a liturgical hymns (q.v.) 640o, 641 l liturgical languages 4a NT in 17d, 41g, 749h, 791c, 887i, 919h, 925deg of daily moral life 860b of salvation 930e-g order of Epistles at Mass 662e OT in Christian Liturgy 15b, 40c, 85f, 141b, 144d, 246f, 309m, 314b, 336, 338b, 339h, 344ce, 365i, 385e, 386co, 389b, 395b, 396b, 469g, 522f, 536c, 540hpr, 542e, 544g, 547f, 550g, 552d, 553b, 554bc, 559b, 576de (see also Breviary)
 Psalms at Mass 339h, 340b, 344c, 345e, 347a, 350g, 355d, 363ae LIVIA, wife of Augustus 73c LIVING CREATURES, The Four Heavenly 92j, 480adf, 483h-k, 966be LO-AMMI 857p
 LO-RUHAMA 857p
 LOAVES, Multiplied 40h, 274f, 619de, 626f, 683c, 701cd, 731g, 732fh, 754de, 774c LOAVES OF PROPOSITION, see Shewbread
 LOCAL GODS 293d
 LOCKS AND BOLTS 239i LOCUSTS 168de, 467h, 527k, 538o, 967fg (see also Joel) as food 682c, 727b LOG MEASURE, The 82de LOGIA, The, see Agrapha, Q LOGION, The Great 588d, 620b, 622b, 695bc, 756e LOGOS, The Divine Word or 316cdh, 368m, 388g, 395b, 604f, 607 l, 781abc, 782-83c, 936b, 938e, 955g, 956a, 962d, 972b (see also Wisdom, Word) and the Memra 388g, 607 l biblical concept and Stoic 316g, 781b, 963bc creative 397 l, 398b, 781c, 782abc, 910f destroys Egyptian firstborn 395b God's Wisdom externalized 397 lm in the OT 781c of Philo 388g, 607 l, 642g, 653c, 781b pre-existent 368n

LOINS GIRT 428m, 443c, 758e, 939a, 950c
 LOIS 660e, 918d, 924b
 LOISY, A 607m, 670b LONGINUS, on the Sublime 141b the soldier 811b
 LOOM 244 l
 LORD, The title Kyrios 622a, 641f, 692a, 726d, 746c, 749e, 753b, 757b, 817d, 822bd, 824e, 831d, 842g, 858d, 894g, 906bc, 907d, 930a, 933f, 939b Baal 274i mari, maran 65a, 276p, 858d, 882i used for 'Yahweh' 641f, 749e, 751h, 817d, 824e, 858d, 907d, 933f LORD'S DAY, The 653k (see also Sunday) LORD'S PRAYER, The 625d, 640d, 720d, 917f forgive as we forgive 707c lead us not into temptation 686i liturgical additions to 686i, 757c Lucan form 22m, 757cd Matthaean form 22m, 613g, 614a, 686g-i, 757c thy kingdom come 625e, 686h, 762c Loss, Lost Souls 935e-936a, 951a (see also Damnation, Hell, Punishment)
 LOST TRIBES, see Israel (North), Dispersion LOT 59g, 136f, 150ad, 152cdf, 392b, 395c, 672b, 762e, 944c, 953i his wife 152cd, 392b, 762e LOTS, Casting of 102e, 231b, 236h, 285e, 532b, 747e (see also Divination, Purim, Urim) election by 248j, 252d, 822d for scapegoat 191f Hebrew and Babylonian for 'lot' 310l, 311f judgement by 370o on the raiment of Christ 722c, 742b LOUVAIN 36c
 LOVE 637cd, 660m (see also Charity) and forgiveness 753h, 951d Christ's love for the Church 898i, 903d-g Christ's love for us 901c, 920d conjugal 382f, 383d, 903d-g eternal 880a fleshly love 383a for Christ 949h, 950b for God 114c, 115j, 360i, 397f, 687ah, 713c, 756f, 757a, 804af, 956d, 957d, 958bc, 959e fulfils the Law 861e God is Love 649b, 955g
 God's love for Israel 115j, 196g, 211f, 212f, 221c, 339e, 384o, 385i, 386i, 443b, 514m, 516c-g, 520a-e, 521b, 525f, 541c, 555d, 556b God's love for Man 211f, 383e, 392ce, 397f, 531dg, 624b, 633i, 644j, 646abd, 745j, 760e, 788e, 789e, 850begh, 856gh, 899ab, 923c grown cold 715d, 760a, 865c hymn to 387b of one's enemy 175h, 218i, 273f, 660m, 686e, 860fg of one's neighbour 110g, 114e, 192m, 211f, 216a, 218i, 366m, 370gk, 372o, 398bd, 685b, 713c, 736k, 756ig, 660 lm, 907a, 950f of self 760a of souls 86Ref, 875e-g, 876bc, 892ae of the brethren 623d, 624ab, 668ef, 803b, 804fi, 875g, 876bc, 886hi, 892ae, 914f, 942b, 944ce, 950c, 953c, 955efi, 956d, 957d, 958bc, 959de, 967a restricted OT law of 110g, 114e, 192m, 366m, 370gk, 372o, 860g sacred and profane 385hi universal Christian law of 114e, 339d LOVE-APPLES 154i, 386h LOWER BETHORON 57fg LOYALTY, Christian 861e, 950f
 LUBIM, Libyans 120f, 538m
 LUCAS OF BRUGES 5c
 LUCIAN 3e, 8b, 22b, 24a-c, 127

LUCIFER, Day Star (see also Morning Star) Satan 333d, 429k
 Venus 333d, 429k
 LUCIUS (St Paul's companion) 863j LUCIUS CALPURNIUS PISO 572b LUCIUS OF CYRENE 744c
 LUCIUS VALERIUS 572b
 LUCRETIVS 601b
 LUD, Lod, Lydda 57c, 58eg, 118f, 149k, 283aa, 451s, 487m, 569ae, 571c, 631d, 832a LUGALBANDA 149i
 LUGULZAGGIS OF URUK 117c
 LUHITH 430gh
 LUKE, Gospel of St 35f, 271j, 679df, 744-75, 781h, 815c (see also Genealogies, Gospels, Infancy, Malachias, Synoptic) adapted to Greeks, Gentiles 614d, 744c, 745c, 746f, 750c, 751a, 752ci, 753a, 754b-d, 765df, 770ad, 772ab agreements with Matthew as opposed to Mark 610cdfi, 611ac, 751d and Acts 744df, 746e, 752f, 753b, 814bcd, 822a, 825bcf, 826c, 834dfjk, 835e, 837f and Josephus 744f and the appeal to prophecy 746ab authorship 744b-e, 746f attitude to Roman authorities 770ad Biblical Commission on 50h-p characteristics 745b-df-i, 752ehi, 753b, 754ef, 755ac, 756e, 757acd, 763deh, 764ab, 765cd, 767d, 768a, 769acd, 771a, 772a, 773abc, 744c, 755 chronology in 745h, 749a, 750c, 751ab, 775a date of 606cg, 678a, 725d, 744fg, 765c, 767b distribution of discourses in 744h emphasis on prayer 745k, 746e, 750f, 752af, 754f, 755a, 757c, 769a, 770a emphasis on the Holy Spirit 747ef, 748fj, 749g, 756e, 757d historical accuracy of 745g, 749a-c, 816b infancy narratives 614d, 617cdg, 676a, 744h, 745b interest in person of Christ 751a, 756e joy its keynote 745figi, 747e, 748h, 756de, 760b-df, 764b liturgical importance of 745g, 749i matter peculiar to 679f, 744h, 745c, 746e, 747b, 749i, 750cfghi, 751c-ei, 752bef, 753ef, 754ac-e, 755ad, 756acfg, 758c-f, 759ad, 760ac-f, 761ad, 762ab, 763a, 764a-c, 765bc, 766ce, 767fg, 768abdf, 769b-e, 770a, 771ab, 772ab, 773b, 774, 775 omissions of 745cd, 746c, 749dj, 750cj, 751abdgh, 752ceh, 753g, 754b-df, 758e, 763e, 764abd, 765bd, 766cdf, 767egi, 768ae, 769a-d, 770ab, 771a, 772a, 773ab on Faith 745j, 746f, 753ah, 754c, 755c, 757ac, 762ab, 763b, 764b, 768e on Petrine Primacy, Infallibility 746e, 751f, 752f, 758e, 764a, 768e on the age of Christ 676e, 750dh on the Church 746cf Our Lady in 745gl, 748b-g, 749cd parallels with Mark 610c-f, 612b, 614d, 744gh, 745c, 750c, 751abd, 752c, 754bde-f, 762a, 763e, 764a, 765ab, 767b, 768ab, 773b parallels with Matthew 611c-612a, 744h, 745de, 750i, 756b, 757cef, 758ceg, 759b-f, 760ac, 761ac, 762a, 763e, 767b (the) Pauline Gospel 739g, 745ij, 746ef, 747f, 748b, 751bc, 757ad, 759b, 761b, 762e, 763d, 766e, 767fhi, 768c, 769c, 774b place of composition 744e preface to 612b, 744i, 746e, 747a, 772c, 814b, 815c, 816b prophecy of fall of Jerusalem 606g, 744g, 754g

(LUKE) proto-Luke theory 608a quoted as scripture in 1 Timothy 992e rationalists and 746c, 747c, 748a, 753b, 756e, 757f, 765c, 767b Semiticisms in 82d, 745b, 761b, 766e sources 614d, 745, 747b, 748a, 749f, 756a, 768a, 770a style of 607c, 611f, 612a, 744d, 745b, 747a, 756a, 769b theme, plan, purpose of 744hi, 745ch, 746a, 747a, 748bi, 750ci, 752h, 753d, 766f, 769ae, 773a, 775a women prominent in 745gl LUKE, St 18c, 614d, 643h, 664c, 665af, 667fg, 668a, 744b-e, 745bf-l, 747a, 774b, 889f, 919b, 924e, 928c and St Mark 815c and St Paul 744c-e, 745i, 746ef, 747f, 748b, 751b, 757d, 814b, 837c and St Peter 819de, 822d, 826f appreciation of temple liturgy 745k, 747d at Philippi 837ce, 905def careless about topography 754ef, 756e, 757a, 764b, 767d, 772c concern for the Gentiles 41e, 814d, 824f, 825f connexion with Antioch 744cd, 815c, 833ae emphasis on part played by women 745gl, 814d, 822c emphasis on prayer 728i, 814d, 820f, 822c familiarity with synagogue customs 751b, 834d lover of poverty, the poor 814d, 825b, 826e Lucan summaries 749j, 750c, 819a, 825ab, 826dg, 839g names for Christians 833c (his) praise in the Gospel 744d reverence for the Apostles 745d, 755c, 763e, 764ab, 769acd, 819e reverence for dignity of Christ 745d, 753b, 763e the artist 744e, 745gkl, 746b, 748bc, 749d, 751dh, 772b, 775a, 815c the historian 744hi, 745agh, 746f, 749ab, 750d, 814cd, 815c, 816b, 824c, 843b the physician 617f, 744c, 745f, 748j, 754c, 755c, 769b, 771a, 772b, 814d, 815c, 831e, 843f, 898i, 913d versatility 745b vindicated by research, archaeology 77h, 81ef, 745gh, 749a, 750d, 816a, 832e, 834c, 838a, 839cj, 843f LUKEWARMNESS, Tepidity 685e, 734e, 760a, 861g, 937d, 942d, 944b, 965e LULU, Prince of Sidon 434h
 LUNACY 88b, 705d LUST, Evil Desire 61c, 163g, 172gh, 873h, 946h, 956g of the eyes 956g of the flesh 367i, 956g LUTHER, Lutherans 10d, 172g, 301b, 607m, 641e, 648klng, 652c, 746f, 849m, 928d, 945d
 LUXURY 146e
 LUZ, Luza 131e, 235ae, 239c (see Bethel)
 LYCANTHROPY 500h
 LYCAONIA 81e, 834d, 835a, 893c, 918d LYCUS VALLEY 909b-d LYDDA, see Lud
 LYDIA, Lydians 121k, 289c, 420e, 441ae
 LYDIA, the Seller of Purple 790g, 837e, 905df, 908a LYONS 73d, 907b
 LYSANIAS 750d, 842g
 LYSIAS 68d, 122k, 560b, 564b, 565e, 566e, 577dh, 578ad LYSIAS, Claudius 815c, 841ehikl
 LYSIMACHUS, brother of Menelaus 575f LYSIMACHUS, son of Ptolemy 310g LYSTRA 834d, 835a-d, 837b, 864e, 891a, 918d

MAACHA, Machati 233g, 260d
 MAACAH, wife of Roboam (Rehoboam) 271ab, 286twydd MAARA, Meara of the Sidonians 234b
 MACBETH 275d
 MACCABEES, Machabees, Book I, 223ae, 224b and biblical inerrancy 37d, 567b canonicity of 11d, 14bg dates in 83h discrepancy with Book II reconciled 37h, 123c, 560ab Hebrew original of 561a, 562h, 563a LXX and Vulgate diverge 562de, 563b, 564a periphrases for 'Divine Name' 562d, 563b, 564a, 571g, 573b poetical element in 562cf sources 224f, 572d MACCABEES, Book II 223ac, 224b, 870f and biblical inerrancy 36c, 37b-dh, 567b, 574b contrasted with Book I 37h, 573b on purgatory 42b, 560e, 579e synchrony with Book I 560ab sources 37h, 224f, 573ad, 574f, 575d, 577f, 580b MACCABEES, Book III (Apocryphal) 93c, 855d MACCABEES, Book IV (Apocryphal) 93j, 642f MACCABEES, Machabaeans 68d, 69ac, 70, 71d, 102f, 122m, 123c, 308f, 366g, 404c, 495di, 508b, 511gk, 559-80, 584c, 589f and the Sanhedrin 587b fortifications 80c called Hasmonaeans 70b, 562f, 587b high-priest kings 571f, 585c, 594b Maccabaeans psalms 353b, 354b, 562c meaning of term 559b, 562f reasons for success 559d, 560c sepulchre 571bd (see also Modin) union of spiritual and temporal power 289s, 569a, 571f weights, coinage 82h, 83ab MACEDONIA, Macedonian, 122f, 559c, 567b, 598j, 665f, 905c, 914b months 83ef
 MACHABEES, see Maccabees
 MACHAERUS 58i, 71e, 619b, 701b, 753b, 759c MACHIR, Machirites 134c, 235c, 241g, 283c MACHMAS, see Michmash MACHNEH, Plain of 790c
 MACHPELAH 153d, 161ac, 285b
 MADABA, Medaba, Medeba 57l, 70b, 233f, 273l, 284x, 430eh, 568b Nabataean inscription at 430h
 MADABA MAP 789c
 MADAI 149h
 MADIAN, see Midian
 MADON 233c
 MAGADAN 703e, 732g
 MAGDALA 58h, 754a (see also Mary) MAGEDDON see Megiddo, Armageddon MAGI, The 71i, 617e, 680c, 681c-f, 749j date of their coming 681c, 682a their gifts 681cf their star 681def, 682a MAGIC, Magicians 91a, 271i, 274g, 732c, 816a, 830c, 834c, 839h (see also Amulets, Satanism) and miracles 733f Arab 206m
 Babylonian 443np, 484g, 593a Balaam the Prophet 196c, 206e Christian rites not magical 645d, 650bfh, 653d divination 192s, 193c, 217f, 550m eclipses and 320i
 Egyptian 91a, 118h, 164i, 167ae-g, 757f, 924a Ephesian 81f, 839h, 964g females, witches 256ef, 418f forbidden by God 115j, 418f Israelite 424b, 593a

(MAGIC) unable to interpret dreams 497b-e, 500c, 501i use of names, divine names in 213a, 451k, 591c, 965a use of rod, wand 167ac MAGISTERIUM OF THE CHURCH, TEACHING 1c-f, 2c, 8, 9a-gef, 39b, 41bcd, 42b, 819c guards without fettering scholarship 9cdg Leo XIII on the scriptural magisterium 9fg not oracular, automatic 9be Pius XII on the scriptural magisterium 9h MAGNESIA, Battle of 68b, 122j, 559f, 563b, 567b, 575c MAGNIFICAT 85i, 86h, 360a, 745g, 747d, 748gl, 749ei, 763d, 768d, 906c and Song of Anna (Hannah), 249df, 313b, 748g ascribed (wrongly) to Elizabeth 748g MAGOR-MISSABIB 456r, 458k
 MAHALALEEL, see Malaleel
 MAHALON, Moabitic marriage of 246h, 247a
 MAHANAIM 57j, 154p
 MAHER-SHALAL-HASH-BAZ 418d, 427be, 438c
 MAIL, Post 662b, 964f
 MAINTENANCE OF CLERGY, APOSTOLATE 219b, 660mo, 692g, 731c, 840f, 875h-j, 890h, 897d, 908b, 951d, 959j
 St Paul renounces rights to 865i, 866a, 875g, 876ab, 890hi, 891i, 923f MAKKEDA 232e, 233a
 MAKTESH, the Mortar 542d MALACHIAS, Malachi 67e, 282i, 530i, 555-8
 Chapter 3:1 attributed to Isaias 727a date 293a, 555c foretells Catholic oblation, Mass 555dj, 556d Gentiles (call of the) 115g, 555dj, 556d Luke's use of 746b, 747df, 748j, 756b, 758f on the precursor 733e problem of suffering 318k MALALEEL, Mahalaleel 146g MALATYA, the Neo-Hittite 121be
 MALCHUS 626e, 750e, 740j, 769c, 777e, 807d MALDONATUS 3j, 5e
 MALE AND FEMALE, Creation of 136i, 143ab, 145b, 146h MALIK, Muluk, see Moloch MALLOS 575f
 MALTA 843d-g
 MALTHAKE 701a
 MAMBRE, see Mamre MAMMON 403g, 660k, 687ab, 761c, 913a MAMRE, Mambre 131e, 150d, 309c MAMSER 218k (see also Bastard)
 MAMSHAT 80e
 MAN (see also Adam, Animals, Body, Brotherhood, Creation, Fall, Free-Will, Future Life, Immortality, Original Righteousness, Original Sin, Propensity, Psychology, Solidarity Soul)
 achievements of 329cd and woman, interdependent 143bl, 145b, 878c antiquity of 138bc aspic finem 400e bodily passions 144b, 145b, 399b born to sorrow 321acf, 324e brevity of life 313n, 321d, 324df, 357a, 400g, 402c compared with angels 899g, 929d, 934f contrasted with animals 115c, 143dk, 332b, 378a created anew in Christ 900e created upright 379e creaturely defectibility 397h

(MAN) dependence on God, 109k, 214e, 322ejl, 404e, 838e, 945h, 956g dichotomy and trichotomy 916e diet 141d, 143b, 144d, 149b (see also Food) duty to God 104e, 114c, 142d, 182c, 302g, 317b, 318m, 333a, 339c, 398b, 736jk, 860b, 949h, 950f equality of 320m frailty, vanity of 102i, 144d, 282r, 285s, 317h, 318 l, 322j-l, 323bj, 333a-e, 334a-c, 350d, 377f, 379b, 393b, 397hi, 402c, 479b, 480h, 740ab, 929e, 934f head of family 143i his choice of service 851j his failure, God's opportunity 849d, 859i inequality of gifts, talents 371j, 879d intellect of 142e, 317gh, 328cd, 347g, 402a knowledge of God 402a Lord of Creation 141c, 142de, 341b, 397gk, 934f made in image of God 142de, 146h, 397gk, 838e made of earth 143d, 144d, 320g, 405b moral infirmity 397h, 402b-f, 404e, 853h-l (see also Original Sin, Propensity) moral nature 402a (see also Responsibility) nature (constitution of) 102d, 115c, 365c-e, 368n, 378a, 401b, 402a, 645k, 671p original gift of integrity 143ij, 145b original intimacy with God 402a sanctity of human life 149b spirit, will 114c, 371g the heavenly man 647a, 882b the Old (fleshly) and the New (spiritual) 635a, 645k, 650j, 852h, 853hl, 871a, 873d, 882ab, 902ef, 903a, 909g, 913b the price of a 156i, 174dh, 551f, 578b, 719c true beauty of 385i universal sinfulness of 282r, 318np, 321ac, 324e, 325d, 365d, 371e, 379a, 399a, 558d, 847-48i, 850 l, 896g, 956c MAN OF SIN, LAWLESSNESS 41e, 495n, 504b, 671p, 915i, 917cd, 957a, 962g (see also Antichrist)
 MANAHATH 283d
 MANAHEM, see Menahem
 MANAHEN, Manaen 834b
 MANASSEH, Tribe of 57g-j, 158h, 229b, 234bc, 235a-c, 237b, 241gh, 242d, 243aj, 283cijkiwy, 354d MANASSES, Manasseh, the Patriarch 157e, 158g-i MANASSES OF JUDAH 66b, 79e, 121k, 265c, 266f, 277h, 280a-cg, 282r, 287u, 308i, 332d, 541a, 542d idolatry of 66b, 114i, 280a-g, 114i, 308i, 412ch, 458b, 483c martyrdom of Isaias 280b, 413h, 421f prayer of 92b, 93j, 287v reforms of 287v MANASSES THE SCHISMATIC 789d
 MANAT 451k
 MANDRAKES, Mandragora 154i, 386h MANHOOD OF CHRIST 36j, 37a, 627d-628b, 641d, 747c, 750ab, 767i, 778g, 804d (see also Christology, Incarnation) abasement, lowliness of 652d, 656bef, 695d, 732a, 735i, 742c, 780d, 802c, 806c, 862j, 907a-d, 927c, 930c acquired knowledge of 617f, 618d, 622b, 627d-628a, 689e, 696d, 730k, 731b, 746c, 750b, 767i, 789b, 937c (his) body a new temple, altar 635c, 644b, 696b, 787c Docetist Heresy 778g enjoyment of Beatific Vision 627d, 722d, 788c full of Grace 749j, 750b, 931c human emotions 462s, 620e, 649d,

689e, 690e, 696c, 709a, 710b, 714j, 720d, 726e, 728g, 731bg, 732gi, 735cd, 740ab, 746c, 751g, 752e, 753b, 756d, 763ef, 765c, 769b, 779g, 800e, 801g, 802g, 886i, 937c (MANHOOD OF CHRIST) human judgement 683h human soul of 749j human traits, personality of 627c, 628b-d, 697g, 774c, 793de human will of 683h, 720d, 740a, 769b, 792d hunger and thirst of 683d, 736b, 742f, 771a, 789d, 790b, 810f ignorant as man of date of Parousia 622b, 627f, 658a, 670m, 671d, 717bc, 737b, 738ef, 746c, 758e, 762d, 767ci, 822b, 914dj-l, 916ac immune from sickness, corruption 342c, 446c, 689c, 834g natural frailty of 618b, 628b, 720d, 727c, 736b, 740ab, 742be, 746c, 754c, 769ab, 789cd, 801g, 927c, 929e, 930c, 935c, 936c, 937ac sinless 446e, 618b, 683bh, 735d, 741a, 742g, 781d, 797k, 930c, 936c, 939d sympathy, compassion of 683c, 930c, 935c, 969b MANI, Manichees 35fg, 36a, 919d MANIPLE, Detachment, Military 807c MANLIUS VOLSO 567b
 MANNA 61e, 132d, 171b-g, 214a, 220a, 230d, 351c, 353c, 359a, 683c, 703f, 732g, 965a, 969a bread from heaven 171cd, 794de, 795af bread of angels 394c ceasing of 113g, 134c, 230d natural origin of 61e, 171c pot of 171eg, 795f, 940c supernatural increase and corruption of 61e, 171d type of the Eucharist 40fh, 163h, 171c, 394c, 395f, 965a, 969a MANNERS, Good 372d, 373c, 403h at table 759e MANNING, Cardinal 37d
 MANOAH, Manue 244d
 MANUAL LABOUR 663d, 665g, 890h combined with ministerial, apostolic 663d, 665g, 826e compared with intellectual 404g despised by Pagans 602e, 890h highly esteemed by Jews 404g, 584m, 890h of our Lord 584km, 731b of the Apostles 55h, 584k, 663d, 665g, 826e skilled and unskilled 584m MAON, Maonites, Meunim 65d, 255h, 283dh, 286 ll, 290 l MARA 171a
 Maran, Mari, Aramaic Title 65a, 276p, 858d
 Maranatha 641f, 858d, 882i
 MARATHON, Battle of 289c, 543c, 544a, 545i, 563d MARBLE, Judaean 267n
 MARCELLUS, The Governor 830a
 MARCION 7cd, 17dh, 35fg, 607m, 661c, 844 l, 863m, 898i, 909h
 MARCUS AURELIUS, The Emperor 35i
 MARCUS CURTIUS 273n
 MARCUS FULVIUS NOBILIOR 567b MARDOCHAI, Mordecai 66f, 310-12 alleged author of Malachias 555b day of 310 l, 580f royal honours 157d
 MARDUK, Merodach 117h, 149 lm, 273n, 278i, 289ag, 290b, 443h, 467b, 492m MARESA, Maresa 57e, 283d, 579d MARI 76c, 79j, 117i, 120a, 150e, 309a tablets 76c, 79j, 117i, 150e, 447g MARIAMNE 70d
 MARK, Gospel of St 41e, 724-43, 753c, 953e (see also Synoptic Problem) alleged priority of 33k, 604c, 607a-g, 611abe, 612a, 679ae, 724b

(MARK, Gospel of St) authorship 724c-g Biblical Commission and 50h-p, 725d, 726a Christology of 726cde, 727a, 751a chronology 731g, 733d date 606g, 725d, 743h, 744g dependence on Matthew 612c-615, 679cd destination 275c, 692f, 725c, 742b disagreement with Matthew, Luke 731c emphasis on miracles in 724f, 726d, 727f-h ending of 671k, 724g, 726ab, 743c-h, 773c fall of Jerusalem and 606g, 725d Freer Logion 726a historicity, trustworthiness 608bc, 722d, 724bcd, 732h importance of 724b independent oral information in 613e, 614cd, 724d integrity, and canonicity 726ab Latinisms in 725c matter peculiar to 724be, 727dh, 728g, 730fg, 731g, 732aehi, 733f, 734b, 735cd, 736cdk, 739i, 740bdj, 763f omissions in 607b, 692f, 724f, 728h, 733a, 735b, 751e parallels with Luke and Matthew 610c-f, 724b place of composition 725d plan, order of 679e, 724df, 733d records St Peter's teaching, witness 35a, 606bc, 607b-d, 608c, 614c, 615a, 679de, 724c-g, 726c, 727h, 730fg, 732e, 733a, 735cd, 736d, 740bi, 953e St Peter in 724f, 727eh, 728ci, 732h, 733a, 739i, 740bgi short conclusion 726a style 607cd, 614c, 724g, 725c, 729b theme, purpose 726cd Ur-Mark, Proto-Mark theory 608c, 724c vivid details of 690bd, 724bg, 727d, 728g, 730fg, 731g, 732e, 733f, 734b, 735cdj, 736cd, 739i, 740bj, 743c, 744h, 751h, 793e written for Gentile readers 614d, 725c, 726c, 732a, 735b MARK, St 18c, 725ab, 763f, 815c, 833h, 834d, 837a and his cousin Barnabas 725a, 826e, 833h, 834cd, 837a, 913d, 951h apostle of Alexandria 725bd baptism of 725a disciple of Peter at Rome 606bc, 607b-d, 614c, 724c-g, 725ac, 751e, 951h house of his mother 725a, 822c, 833g John Mark 725a, 728c reconciled with St Paul 725b, 837a, 924e rich young ruler 763fg youth who fled naked 725b, 740d, 763f MARK OF THE BEAST, The 967b, 969df MARRIAGE 100b, 383g, 654d-l, 680cg, 686b, 708c-f, 735b, 761d, 763e, 874h, 903fg, 944e (see also Cana, Divorce, Mixed Marriage, Monogamy, Polygamy) Adam and Eve 110h, 142d age of consent 584n, 874h arranged marriages 267g, 270a, 271e, 400b, 596c, 602k, 874gh best man 244g, 691c, 788j bridal tent 261g, 343a, 523e bridal veil 153e bridesmaids 718a brother-sister 390b, 393f (see also Incest) child marriage 584n children of the Bridechamber 691c, 728d, 752a, 788j choice of wife 404e compared with celibacy 654h, 874c-f

(MARRIAGE) concubines, secondary wives 151g, 152j, 153f, 154h, 156d, 283a conjugal love 382-7, 654d, 660d conjugal rights 106d, 145b, 654f, 686c, 874h contract of 366g, 372k, 387de death, the Resurrection and 713b, 737h, 766e, 852e diplomatic marriages 267g, 270a, 271e dowries 59h, 175e duties, responsibilities of 302h, 654f, 660e, 874d-f early marriage 401a, 584n forbidden degrees 192hi, 283c, 596a, 708e, 836f, 872f (see also Incest) graces of 654d, 660g, 873g, 878h heretical condemnation of 145b, 873g impediments to 596a, 654g indissoluble 143i, 383d, 654efg, 708c-f, 874h, 903g inheritance of wives 218j institution of 110h, 142d, 708c, 735b, 903f Jewish ideals, ceremonies 306bc, 747e, 786a (see also Parallels) laver 903e Levirate 79k, 156k, 207f, 219c, 246gj, 247bh, 283c, 300g, 309n, 736h, 750h made in heaven 371b marital chastity 873fg, 915f marital fidelity 366g, 367g, 383ad marital offences 142d, 218j, 302h, 304g marriage lines, documents 306b marriage vows 657n
 married Apostles 689f, 875i Moslem 657n nuptial lyrics 313d, 314b, 347d, 382jn of Christ and Israel, the Church 347d, 383dfl, 384i, 385hio, 386i, 387ch, 635d, 654d, 671u, 718a, 854e, 898i, 927f of God and Man 383dm, 385h, 644h (see also Israel) of Joseph and Mary 84i, 85jl, 86kl, 680hij, 748bd of priests 193jk, 585b, 921i (see also Apostles, Celibacy) of the unbaptized 873h patriarchal marriage 59h, 79k, 139g, 150c, 151g, 152j, 153e, 156kl prayer in 950h preparation for 302h, 305k purchase of bride 154f, 175e, 218j, 387e, 596cd purposes of 302h, 596a, 654fg, 736i remedy against sin 367i, 654g, 660h, 873h Sadika 243a, 244gh sanctity of 150c, 152g, 302h, 305k, 383dg second marriage 309n, 654g, 660h, 867c seizure, abduction of wives 245k spiritual marriage 385i tokens, proofs of virginity 218j wedding dress 153c, 385k, 712cd wine at 786a with a captive 218f with a half-sister 150c with a niece 234f with an aunt 166f with deceased wife's sister 192i within the Church 654g (see also Mixed Marriage) within the tribe 305j MARTHA 135c, 620b, 660gk, 704e, 719b, 757ab, 800acd MARTIAL LAW UNDER ROME 598ab
 MARTIN, Gregory 29bhk MARTYRS, Martyrdom 598ab, 642f, 767e, 879g, 922g, 931b, 942a (see also James, Peter) Holy Innocents 71i, 617ce Isaiahs 93e, 413h, 421f, 943e Jeremiahs 174e, 413h, 453c
 John Baptist (q.v.) 701b Maccabean 99g, 114n, 115d, 174e,

360i, 413h, 453c, 562dg, 576de, 642p, 879g (MARTYRS) merits of 642f, 966d prayers of 966g, 967d prophets slain by Jezebel 112d, 114l, 271j, 943e (the) seven brethren 114l, 576de share merits of Christ 966d MARY, the Blessed Virgin 84-6, 218j, 309m, 343ed, 347d, 355e, 533d, 535h, 680g, 700e, 745gl, 749-50b (see also 'Brethren of the Lord', Magnificat, Protevangelium, Virgin Birth, Visitation) accommodation of wisdom texts to 40j, 85f, 403c and public ministry of Christ 86ci, 729abe, 754c, 757bg, 786a-d and St Joseph 84i, 85jl, 86kl, 218j, 680h-681b, 748bd and Salome 776e and the Church 86di, 822c, 968ik, 969a and the passion of Christ 85k, 86di annunciation 85hi apocryphal lives of 94cdfm Ark of Covenant 163h assumption of 85i, 86efj, 94f, 386c, 757b at Bethlehem 749c-f at birth of Church 86d, 822c at Cana 30dfm, 86a, 271i, 786ab at Pentecost 86di, 822d attitude of our Lord to 30dfm, 86a-c, 271i, 626f, 672e, 703b, 729e, 750ab, 757g, 786b (see also Hebrew Idioms)
 'blessed among women' 748cf, 757g Canticles applied to 85e, 383m, 384o, 385ei, 386i childhood of 86j, 94dm co-operates in redemption 85k, 86di, 383m entrusted to John 86dg, 672e, 776fg, 786b, 810e crowned Queen of Heaven 86efi Davidic descent of 680e, 748b, 845e early veneration for 94d enemy of evil 84h, 86egh eternally predestined 84cd, 85f ever-virgin, perpetual virginity, 81b, 86kl, 130c, 492m, 672, 673c, 680gh, 681bf, 748d, 749d, 754c full of grace 85hijl, 86h, 748c, 749j her care of our Lord 697g, 729abe, 757bg her charity 748f her espousal and marriage 218j, 673f, 680hi, 681b, 748d her faith, 85l, 86b, 748df, 750a her first-born, only son 81b, 731b, 749d her humility, lowliness 85j, 748cg her intercession 86abdi, 786a-d her knowledge 84i, 85l, 750b her knowledge of the scriptures 748g her maternity 84d, 85i, 748c, 750a her mediation 40j, 786d her obedience 85jk, 86c, 697g, 748e, 749g her parents 86j her patience 86a her prerogatives 84d, 85ij, 748c her prophecy 85i her sorrows 85k, 86di, 749i intercessor 786b her temptation 749i her vows 672d, 748d her work on earth 86ci Immaculate Conception 42b, 84cgh, 85i, 86h, 385c, 748g importance in divine plan 85j, 535h, 745g in prophecy 84i, 85a-d, 86k, 462f, 533d, 535h in the Apocalypse 86e-g in the Psalms 85d in Jeremiah 31:22 and Jewish tradition 85b

(MARY) keeping God's secret 85j, 680i, 748f loses and finds her son 85k, 617g, 750ab meditating, pondering in her heart 745b, 747b, 757b, 964a mother of all Christians 86dfg, 810e poverty of 85k, 189n, 617d, 748b, 749g praised by her son 86c, 757g presented in the temple 86j, 94dm purification of 85k, 189n, 617d, 681c, 749g receives the Holy Ghost 86d related to St Joseph 748b Resurrection appearance to 743d saved by Christ 84h, 86h, 748g second Eve 84cfc, 86fg, 145c, 968i-k, 972 sinless, pure, all-holy 85h, 383m, 660g, 748g source of Luke 1-3, 85h, 614d, 745b, 747b, 748a, 749f spring of the Lady Mary 267c standing by the Cross 697g, 742g, 810d the handmaid, slave of the Lord 85jk, 86c, 748g the woman crowned with the Sun 968i-k Theotokos, Mother of God 84cd, 85i, 86i tradition on 84b, 85d, 86ehjkm, 672chi, 673e typical allusions to 85b victorious through Christ 84h with his brethren, seeks Jesus 697g, 729abe, 754c, 757g MARY MAGDALENE, St 722gh, 732a, 739b, 743abc, 753g, 754a, 800a, 812abd
 MARY, MOTHER OF JAMES 722gh, 723a, 743a
 MARY, MOTHER OF JOHN MARK 725a, 951h
 MARY OF BETHANY, St 135c, 620b, 660gk, 710f, 719b, 739b, 753g, 757ab, 800acd the anointing at Bethany 643d, 801acd MARY OF ROME 863g
 MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS 29r
 MARY, SISTER OF MOSES, see Miriam MARY, WIFE OF CLEOPHAS 673, 700e, 810d MASALOTH 567d
 MASCOTS, see Amulets
 MASONRY, Solomon's 268bi
 MASPFA, Masphath, see Mizpah MASS, The 120o, 343d, 555dj, 556d, 820de, 825ab, 840b (see also Eucharist, Holy Communion, Last Supper, Lord's Supper, Liturgy, Real Presence, Sacrifice) altar table 635cf, 877g
 'amen' at 880e
 Benedictus qui venit 759c
 (the) bread, host 877f the Christian Passover 163h, 169d, 644h, 649d, 652f, 653j, 720b, 722e, 768b 653cefjh, 795b, 877ef, 878f, 941e
 (the) celebrant, minister 657c, 659d, (the) chalice, wine, blood 176cd, 644gh, 652h, 657g, 877f, 878f, 941a
 (the) Christian sacrifice 642a, 644f-j, 653cefh, 795b, 877ef, 878f, 941e collections at 882d compared with Jewish sacrifice 653c, 877f (the) consecration 139i, 653c, 739gh, 768c, 877f, 878f, 880e, 940a, 941a contrasted with Pagan sacrifices 653c, 877e disorders at Corinth 652f, 866e, 878d-g
 'Dominus vobiscum' 246f
 'do this' 652c, 653a, 657h, 739g Emmaus and 652g, 774c evening celebration 878d exclusion of unbaptized 687f

(Mass) (the) fraction, breaking of bread (q.v.) 774c, 820ce, 825a, 833d, 843d, 877f
 (the) heavenly liturgy, offering 939e-g heretics dispense with wine 94i, 652h incense to be used at 556d inculcates the Scriptures 10b institution of 100b, 624a, 644f-j, 652b-eg, 653f, 657f, 717f-720c, 739gh, 768c, 825a, 878f
 (the) kiss of peace 882c, 892f, 916e, 951h
 (the) last Gospel 776b
 (the) Lavabo 344c
 (a) memorial 642a, 652i, 653ae, 657f of requiem 936a, 938d
 (the) Offertory ceremony 186k one with sacrifice of cross 653fj, 878f order of Epistles at 661e preparation for 878fg qui pridie . . . 793c said in private houses 637c, 652g, 878e symbolism of the two kinds 657h thanksgiving, eucharist 652g, 880e (see also Blessings) unde et memores 653a MASSACRES 211g, 218d (see also Ban)
 MASSAH 171h, 375a, 683d, 935e (see also Meribah)
 MASSEBAH, see Pillars
 MASSORETES, The 21j, 22b-d, 540e confuse 'to' and 'against' 280o different schools 22cd Massora parva, magna, finalis 22c-e originate vowels points 22bd targum Massora 24f MASTEMA, The 593a
 MASTURBATION 402f
 MATERIALISM IN GREEK PHILOSOPHY 599e MATERNAL AFFECTION 305f
 MATHAN, Mathan 750h
 MATHANIAS, Mattaniah 66d, 281a, 477f (see also Sedecias) MATHATHIAS, Mattathias 68d, 559b, 561c, 562f-i MATHUSALA, Methuselah 138b
 MATTATHIAS, see Antigonos, Mathathias MATTHEW, Gospel of St 41e, 677-723 (see also Synoptic) agreements with Luke as opposed to Mark 610cdfi, 611ac, 679a alleged dependence on Luke 679f, 745e and Epistle of St James 945bg, 947ad, 948ae and the fall of Jerusalem 678abg, 715-17 aramaic original 606bd, 607fg, 614b, 615a, 677c-f, 678ab, 679ade, 687e, 689d, 697b, 700e, 703e, 704c, 714i, 722c, 745de aramaisms, Semitic flavour 614b, 679de, 686ghi, 687ab, 691c, 694b, 695c, 696cf, 697bd, 698b, 699ag, 702aef, 703c, 706d, 708d, 714df authorship, authenticity 677b-e, 678bf Biblical Commission on 50a-g, 51ab, 678b, 679a Christology 680j, 681af, 682b, 688c, 690g, 693h, 694e, 695b-d, 696b, 697a, 699fg, 701f, 704ab, 705de, 717bc, 718f, 751a date of 606g, 677a, 678a discourses in 678c, 679def ecclesiastical, gospel of the Church 678g elements dependent on Mark 679e historicity 699f, 701d, 703a, 704e, 705g, 717b, 722d (see also Gospels) infancy narrative 614d, 617e, 678d, 680-82d inspiration of 35a, 37de, 679g Jeremias for Zacharias in 27:9 37e, 721de Jewish, Palestinian traits of 607g, 614d

(MATTHEW, Gospel of St) (the) Logia 607f, 677d, 678b matter peculiar to 678d, 679a, 699b, 700a-d, 701e, 702c, 703a, 704b, 705fg, 706fg, 707bc, 708de, 709eg-i, 710h, 711bf, 712ad, 718fgh, 721g on marriage of Joseph and Mary 680h-j, 748d order, scheme, style of 132d, 607c, 678cg, 679de, 685a, 688d, 689af, 690b, 694b, 697g, 708a, 719a, 720c, 723b, 724d OT citation on 677f, 678d, 681ag, 689g, 696d, 698d, 699e, 710g, 711b, 721d our Greek version of 677ef, 678ab, 679a-g, 703a, 704c, 713c Papias on 677de parallels with Mark 610c-f, 679e priority defended 9c, 50bl, 607b-g, 610gi, 611c-615, 679a-f reference to Wisdom 388d, 389e sacred number seven in 680f, 697f, 703de, 707a, 712d St Paul and 615a, 661j, 678ag, 704g, 708ef, 709e, 710c, 714j, 715bd, 716cg, 720ab, 914c, 915de, 916a-c, 917bc theme purpose of 678d-g, 752h MATTHEW, St 689a, 690e, 691ab, 692e, 698b, 728c, 751c, 752b (see also Levi) his name 691a
 the publican, taxgatherer 584n, 691a, 692e, 751i MATTHIAS, St 639g, 657ac, 709f, 724f, 752f, 819d, 820f, 822d MATURITY, Christian 907g MAUNDY THURSDAY 802bcde
 MAURICE, F. D. 606f
 MAZZALOTH 280j
 MAZZAROTH 333d
 MCGINLEY, L. J. 609d MEALS 602h, 652fg (see also Manners, Messianic) grace at 636e, 596f, 774c, 880e reclining at 311c, 400c, 433b, 526m, 602h, 719f, 739f, 761e ruler of the feast 786c sacrificial meals 215c (see also Idolothya, Peace-offering) sanctity, religious nature of 652i use of common dish 719f, 739f women's place at 602h MEASURES, see Weights and Measures line, reed 492c, 546d MECCA 269d
 MEDABA, Medeba, see Madaba
 MEDES, Media 121 l, 122d, 149h, 280 l, 283m, 287aa, 289c, 309a, 429ae, 432a, 459n, 467 Cyrus conquers 420e, 429e seven counsellors of 307c, 311c MEDIATION, of Angels 645n, 934b of Mary 40j, 786d of Moses, Aaron 442i, 645n, 646c, 896g of priests 936c of the suffering servant 441 l MEDIATOR, CHRIST THE ONE 640f, 642j, 645e, 646c, 671u, 803f, 881g, 909f, 911bc, 912b, 920d, 930g, 932b, 939cg, 941a, 944c, 950d, 966d (see also Covenant, New) and the invocation of Saints 921f the Colossian heresy 909df, 912bd MEDITERRANEAN SEA 54j, 235a, 554c MEDIUMSHIP 192s, 256f, 280a, 879a (see also Necromancy)
 MEEKNESS COUNSELLED 129j, 374f, 380f, 398c, 685e MEGABYUS 122h (see also Artaxerxes I) MEGALITHIC CULTURE 57d
 MEGASTHENES 500j
 MEGIDDO 55b, 57g, 58c, 59g, 66c, 117b, 119c, 228d, 240de, 241i, 275i, 276c, 280o, 287cfaa, 477d, 552d, 970f (see also Armageddon, Josias, Nechao)
 plain of 55b

(MEGIDDO) stables of Solomon 63j, 80f, 267ik, 269gi stele of Sheshonkh I at 64e, 78a, 120m MEGILLOTH (scrolls) 246b, 382e, 469ab MEHUNIM, Meunim, see Maon MELCHI 750h
 MELCHIZEDECH 120o, 151ab, 232d, 339a, 360d, 462h-r, 547c, 548d, 642g, 653f, 927d, 930af, 938e-939b MELCHOM, see Milcom
 MELITO OF SARDIS 14e, 94f
 MELKART, the Tyrian Baal 64gh, 65c, 114c, 226gh, 265c, 270h, 271fgkl, 273k, 276e, 287e, 418g, 460d, 514i, 575e, 579e (see also Jehu, Jezebel, Jonadab)
 Jehu exterminates cult of 276e, 460d Lord of the Dance, Baal Marqod 271 l prophets of 273abm, 416a, 418g, 459i, 553b sky-god, Hadad 271gkl worshipped in Jerusalem 275ef, 276di MELKITES, The 25c
 MELLO, see Millo
 MELOTHUS 309c
 Memento Mori 381d-f
 MEMORY AND ORAL TRADITION 135a, 139a, 679b MEMPHIS (Noph) 118c, 309b, 432d, 456e, 488f MEMRA, The 388g, 607 l, 592c MENAHEM, Manahem 65b, 266gi, 277hi, 749h pays tribute to Assyria 64c, 65b, 79d, 121e, 124d, 277hi, 425i MENANDER 226g, 267m, 271fg, 881j
 MENDICANCY 660 l
 MENELAUS, the high-priest 68b, 551h, 560b, 562g, 575f, 576a, 580a MENI 451k
 MENINGITIS 689d
 MENSTRUATION 191a, 192j, 691f, 730j MENTAL SUFFERING, of Christ 769b of Job 317dek, 320k, 325j MEPHIBOSHETH, see Merib-Baal
 MERARI, The sons of 236h, 283pr, 285gi MERCENARIES 267ch, 465bc, 559e, 577b of David 63h, 259i, 261f, 264a, 267c of Herod 71e MERCURY 737f, 835b MERCY 110f, 208f, 211g, 545efh, 548a, 549dfg, 685e, 707b (see also God) misplaced 272g vessels of 857n MERCY SEAT, Propitiatory 111ag, 177b, 191g, 285q, 849f, 940c MERENPTAH, see Mernephtah
 MERIBAH 134b, 171h, 196e, 354e, 357f, 359b, 935e, 938a MERIBATH-KADESH 493i
 MERIB-BEAL, Miphiboseh 258ab, 260a, 261eg, 262f, 263b, 283bb MERIT, Doctrine of 642fg, 643c, 856f, 859 l, 910b, 923d, 924d, 938c (see also Rewards) grace and merit 546a, 643c, 924d human frailty and 397i imputed merit 850b merits of Christ 84h, 422f, 426ae, 427c, 642g, 850b, 894e, 895i, 930e merits of patriarchs, saints, martyrs 34c, 214b, 271a, 484j, 642f, 859e, 966d predestination and 857k prevision of merit 84h, 422f, 426ae, 427c, 856f, 857k, 895i source of merit 643c, 909i MERK'S EDITION OF NT 583h MERNEPTAH 120c, 125c and the sea peoples 120f Pharaoh of the Exodus 60de, 62d, 78a, 119h, 163a-d, 228b stele of 62a, 78a, 125c, 163d MERODACH-BALADAN II 66a, 121h, 269c, 279 l, 420d, 433a MEROM 57i, 233cd
 MEROZ 241j, 245e

MES-ANNI-PADDA 117c MESHACH, see MISACH
MESHA, Meša, king of Moab 191, 57i, 64g, 80j, 211 g, 273egl-n, 275e, 430d, 524d a sheep-breeder 273 l human sacrifice of his son 273n inscribed stele, stone of 191, 56b, 80j, 211g, 223f, 241 l, 271d, 273eln, 274j, 349, 430dhl, 439b, 526i puts Nebo to ban 211g MESHECH, see Moschi MESOPOTAMIA (see also Assyria, Babylonia, etc.) archaeology of 79 of Syria 154b the Church in 960f
 'the end of the earth' 425h wide diffusion of culture of 79k winged-bull cherubs of 144d MESSALINA 841h
MESSIAH, Messias 102i, 594ab, 749h, 751c, 753h, 796hk, 825e, 846c, 857ad, 934b (see also Emmanuel, Suffering Servant)
 as levitical priest-king 594b Balaam's prophecy 206op beauty of 385mo, 439g ben David or ben Joseph 102n, 417e, 594b birthplace 681e (see also Bethlehem)
 (the) 'Branch' or 'Shoot' 428m, 459h, 545d, 547f, 548d
 (the) consoler of Israel 749i
 (the) cornerstone 437e
 Daniel's Son of Man 495m, 504fg, 507hjk-q, 508e (see also Son of Man) Davidic King 102ko, 248 l, 249h, 259c-e, 342e, 350c, 356b, 411f, 421d, 426f, 427h, 428m, 439e, 462q-t, 479a, 485d, 489j, 492a, 535dg, 543i, 544gk, 545d, 550aegik, 594ab, 625cf, 680a, 766f, 845be (see also David)
 (the) Dayspring, Orient 545d, 547f, 548d, 748j desired of nations 543i, 544g, 548d false Messiahs 605g, 670 ln, 671c, 762df, 767e, 957a, 961a false, mistaken, conceptions of 593b-f, 594ab, 617d, 670e-i, 727g, 731h, 732eg, 733a, 736g, 748bd, 749h, 750f, 751c, 760a, 822b, 827c, 870c first use of name 249h, 594a good shepherd 479a (see also Good Shepherd) healings, miracles of 439m, 732ei, 748j, 938a his resurrection 446f his suffering 594b, 619f, 733ae, 824c, 825e, 842i (see also Suffering Servant) his weapons 904d his word and breath 428m
 (the) ideal, anointed, king 102i, 252c, 339a, 340b, 343c, 347d, 352d, 426d, 427h, 439e Jesus Christ 33o, 131c, 605bc, 618f, 619b, 620e, 621eg, 727c, 746d, 748c, 750ci, 751i, 752e, 758a, 760a, 764e, 765a, 766f, 769e, 817cd, 824ce, 825e, 827b, 834g, 838a, 842i, 845e, 922g, 933e (see also Jesus Christ)
 office temporary 881g OT title of kings and priests only 594a prince, source, of Peace 102 lm, 339a, 352d, 427h, 428n, 535abil, 547i, 550g, 685f, 693d, 749f, 765bc, 804d, 862k son of Yahweh 339a, 340b, 343d, 417g, 720gh spiritual endowments of 421d, 426acd, 427fh, 428m, 431 b, 441jk Teacher unto Justice, The 522fg, 523h MESSIANIC AGE, Hope, Kingdom 282m, 479a, 593b-594b, 670cde, 718f, 751c, 841i, 842h, 932c, 934e (see also Gentiles, Jesus Christ, Judgement, Kingdom of God, New Heaven and Earth, New Jerusalem, Restoration, Zealots) (MESSIANIC AGE) among the Samaritans 789g animals in 141d, 428n apocryphal teaching on 92eimo, 93h cosmic, catastrophes, changes 428o, 435bc, 437i, 450f, 451 l, 533ce, 535b, 554ab, 593cf, 671p, 738b, 855i, 966h, 967e, 970eg endless day 545d, 554ac

 eschatological Messianism 593ef everlasting 339a, 427fhi Gentiles in 493j
 God universally worshipped 554f in Judaism 593b-594b, 670c, 728b (see also Nationalism) in the Book of Kings 266a its character summarized 102 l, 421d, 425a Jerusalem destroyed and transformed 550a, 552a, 554a Jerusalem glorified 419gh, 445-7, 449jm, 450a-g, 593f Jerusalem, the centre of 418e, 462s, 546d, 593f Levitical priesthood, etc. in 418c longevity in 451 l material blessings in 426k, 451 lq, 523h, 547i, 549g, 550gi, 593cf miraculous fertility in 352d, 425a, 438d, 439cl, 479b, 489j, 490ac, 493g, 522e, 523hl, 529b, 593f new song, 342e, 343d, 345d, 346e, 357g, 358a, 363dj, 966d outpouring of the Spirit 522ch, 523i, 727b, 818a, 824b peace of 102 lm, 339a, 352d, 427fgh, 428n, 432f, 435h, 438c, 535abil, 547i, 550g, 593f, 900f, 902a reunion of Israel and Judah 428o, 551f sacrifice in 343d, 555dj, 556d salvation by divine intervention 593c seventy weeks Prophecy of 508a-c spiritual 102mn, 421d, 479a, 535bl, 727eg
 'the days of Messias' 593cd
 'the end of days' 593ce the Holy Age 397j, 402b, 403d the teaching of our Lord 594b, 625a-g the temple in 291a, 404d, 543i, 593f
 'the world to come' 593d, 934e, 938b, 940d transcendental Messianism 593d two-period Messianism 593df universal 102 l, 339a, 352d, 356b, 423g, 522h, 535abi, 536i, 545af, 934f Victory of Judah 554a victory over evil 550bj, 552ac, 593f, 594e MESSIANIC BANQUET, The 339a, 435h, 624d, 625d, 652bi, 653j, 689e, 712a, 718bd, 759f, 760f and the Eucharist 339a, 624d, 625d, 768c MESSIANIC CONFLICT 340b, 523gk, 535e, 550bj, 551b, 552ac, 593e, 594a (see also Armageddon, Gog)
MESSIANIC NUMBER 969g
MESSIANIC PROPHECY 102h-o, 411c, 412eg, 413a, 634c, 642b, 696b, 732ei, 949f, 950b (see also Abraham—seed of, Protevangelium)
 Abdias, Obadiah 530suw
 Aggeus, Haggai 543i, 544f Amos 529ab apparent conflict in 102hin authenticated in NT 551bf Baruch 472h collective, and singular sense 84f, 85d, 86f Daniel 494def, 495ghm, 498bef, 504c, 507iq, 508cde Ecclesiasticus 397a
 Ezechiel 291a, 478ce, 479ab, 485d, 489fj, 490a-cg-i, 492a-493, 731g, 970f Genesis 137f, 149c, 151a, 159g-h (see also Protevangel)

(MESSIANIC PROPHECY) Isaias 15a, 84i, 86k, 375d, 418d, 419fg, 421d, 422cdf, 425p-t, 426, 427, 428il-p, 429g, 430c, 431bh, 432e-g, 435-6, 437ej, 438de, 439c-n, 462f, 642g, 681a, 684a, 694c Jewish, failure to understand 102h Joel 522c-h, 523j-l, 727b, 818a, 824b
 John the Baptist 625a, 682e-h, 694e Malachias 555k, 747d
 Mary in 84hi materialistic, this—worldly imagery 33f Messianic psalms 49h, 339ab, 340b, 342c, 343c, 346bef, 347d, 348b, 350c, 351b, 352d, 355d, 356b, 357g, 360d, 361b, 362e, 363d, 417g, 421d, 736 l, 742el, 787b, 824de, 826bc, 934abf, 937b, 941d, 950e Micahs 533d-f, 535, 536ij, 681ae Osee 514p, 515de, 516dg, 519o, 520aq the first 102j (see also Protevangelium) the second 102j summarized 102j-p to Abraham 84f Zacharias 545d-fh, 550a-d MESSIANIC SECRET 594b, 619cf, 621f, 622g, 626a-c, 627b, 704d, 705b, 727g, 728bh, 729g, 730k, 732ei, 733e, 754bg, 755b, 765b (see also Jesus Christ)
METAL-WORKING 146c-e, 147e, 268n, 286i METAPHOR IN THE BIBLE 39ghi, 41c METHUSELAH, see Mathusala METRETES, The 82c
METTONS OF TYRE 276g
MEYER, E. 38a
MICAH (see also MICAS, MICHAES)
 the name 245c
 MICAHIAH BEN IMLAH, see Micahs
 MICAS, Micah of Mt Ephraim 179b, 245bcd MICHA 283bb
MICHAEL, St 86f, 230d, 509df, 512a, 592d, 917c, 968h-k, 961c, 971d
MICHAEL, Michol 106h, 254gi, 255m, 259b, 263c, 284m, 672f MICHAES, Micah, the prophet 65d, 66e, 279b, 280a, 415g, 416c, 417d, 459c, 533-6, 545g, 693d on B.V.M. 85a, 535fg relation to Amos, Isaias, Jeremiah 417d, 423g, 533cdh, 534fi, 535hi silent about Isaias 289 l MICHAES, son of Jemlah, 273ab, 282t, 320d, 411a, 413h, 415e, 416a MICHMASH, Machmas 57f, 64f, 68f, 252k, 428j MIDAS OF MUSHKI 121g
MIDDLETON, Conyers 604d MIDIAN, Madianites 55b, 136f, 151f, 153f, 164e, 172a, 200c, 201e, 206d, 207b, 228d, 234c, 238e, 239g, 242acfk, 270c, 309c, 410b extermination of 110f, 208f-h MIDRASH 32h, 38b, 286y, 388f, 406a, 584c of Addo, Iddo 282w, 286y, 411e MIDWIVES 164b
MIGDOL, in the North 60c, 120c, 603e in the South 60e, 119h, 120c, 163bc, 170b, 464f, 488c MILCOM, Melchom 270a, 284y, 466g, 526h, 541b MILDEW 190i
MILE, Roman 82c
MILESTONES 56h
MILETUS 840b
MILK, and Honey 41g, 385f, 426cdk curdled 240c, 241k of the word 937d, 950d seething kid in its mother's 175k, 215f MILL, Dr John 581g, 583f MILL, HAND 219b (see also Grindstone) MILLENNIUM, The 671mvw, 970def Jewish speculation about 593c MILLENNARIAN HERESY 17i, 671vw, 916b, 962bc, 971de

MILLO, Mello, House of 63j, 64e, 66a, 243bc, 258g, 269g MILLSTONES 243e, 459k, 706c
MINA, Mine, The 82fgh, 83b MIND AND MATTER 88b
MINES 269gi, 329d
 MINISTER, the Word 284w MINISTRY, the Christian 1c, 655-9, 746e, 879de, 880g, 887gh, 951f (see also Apostles, Charismata, Ordination, Priests)
 apostolic succession 656h, 658bcd bishops 658d, 659cef, 818b, 836e, 919fg, 920a charismatic 639g danger of clerical avarice 922g deacons 631d, 639g, 659af, 660r, 676g, 828a, 845c, 921hi development of 656i, 658b-f, 820d, 835e, 906a, 918g, 919f-920c founded by Christ 655ab, 657a-o guards the faith 919e marriage and celibacy in 921i ministers of the Word 656h monarchical episcopate 658ad, 659ef, 920b obligation of Bible-study 924b presbyter-episcopi 659ce, 820d, 906a, 919f-920c, 921hi, 925b, 951f priests, presbyters, elders, ancients 639g, 659b-f, 778ef, 820df, 824f, 835e, 840c-f, 876de, 906a, 919f, 920a, 925b, 949g, 951f provisional, inchoate orders 659a qualities required for 656b-f, 660c, 916d, 919e, 920e, 921hi, 922e, 925b, 951f remuneration 875h-j, 890h, 922e, 923f (see also Maintenance) servi servorum 656b, 710c, 714c, 735i women excluded 921g MIPHIBOSETH, see Merib-baal MIRACLES 87-91, 825b, 830c (see also Causes) and magic 91a, 733f and natural law 87cd, 90c and Revelation 89abc biblical and pagan 164i, 226h Catholic freedom regarding particular 89d, 90a coincidental miracles 626f cosmic, nature, miracles 88b, 90ab, 91b, 232f-i, 279k, 626f, 690b, 701c-f, 703de, 730f, 731gh, 754c credibility of biblical 88ab, 226f, 531fg cures 88b, 90c (see also Jesus Christ) demonstrating God's love 627b, 765b diabolical miracles, magic, etc. 91a dial of Ahaz, Achaz 279k economy of means 271g faith and 91c, 627b, 643j, 692e, 730j, 731b, 736d, 746c, 753a, 762a, 787d, 790f, 792f, 825e God's foreknowledge of 87d Judaism and 592a Messianic miracles 439m, 703f, 748j, 938a natural causes and 60d, 88b, 90abc, 91a, 139a, 152c, 164i, 167b, 170d, 226g, 229fg, 230h no guarantee of salvation 688ac not multiplied by Providence 89c, 139a of false or pagan prophets, etc. 91a, 226h, 416c, 716d, 969f of Moses 88a, 89ac, 90b of our Lord 86a, 89ac, 91bc, 439m, 618def, 619b-e, 620a-d, 626d-627c, 632f, 670f, 684d, 689a-g, 690b-g, 691ef, 692ab, 694c, 696c, 701c-g, 703b, 724f, 727fgh, 728agh, 729cd, 730f-k, 731gh, 732defg, 733f, 736bd, 750j, 751degh, 753ab, 754ac, 755c, 759ad, 762b, 764b, 769c, 787d, 792abef, 793agh, 825ce, 832b, 845g of the apostles 89a, 632e, 633d, 639a, 692f, 728i, 731cd, 733f, 819c, 825ce, 826dg, 827ab, 828b, 832b, 938a

(MIRACLES) of true prophets 88a, 89ac, 217f, 226gh, 232g, 265k, 271i-m, 273him, 274ad-fhjk, 276o, 279k, 415c, 751c, 753b, 969a philosophy and 87e-88a, 905c prayer working 282r, 820f, 826g proof of 87e, 88c, 91b promised to the believing Church 743f providential miracles 90b, 152c, 164i, 167b, 170d, 171b, 226g raising the dead 90c, 91c, 226g, 267i, 271j, 274d, 619bc, 620d, 626c, 691f, 750jk, 753b, 779de, 832b, 840b rationalism and 87b-f, 301e, 604c, 605bc, 621a relics working miracles 276o, 826g, 839g St Thomas Aquinas on 90c signs, evidential 87b, 89abc, 91c, 219f, 279h, 632cf, 643i, 695a, 728i, 732g, 734c, 743f, 746a, 747c, 751e, 765b, 790f, 830c, 833c, 934b stopping of the sun and moon 90a, 232f-i teleology of 167b, 226h Vatican Council on 89 withdrawal of Sennacherib 279cef why numerous only in Bible 89c, 226f MIRIAM, Moses' sister 109mn, 129ei, 170h, 201e, 241a, 410a MISACH, Meshach 269d, 496e, 499c-q MISAEEL, see Misach
MISCARRIAGE, through assault 174f MISCHIEF-MAKERS 367o
MISHNAH, The 177e, 191fi, 193o, 336, 376d, 382d, 388f, 406h, 584c, 702a, 720f MISOGYNY 596b
MISOR 233f, 234c, 236i MISSIONS, Missionaries 14ce, 631d-632c, 633, 715d, 817a, 818bd, 822a, 823a, 825f, 826b, 833ac, 834b, 858fh, 863c, 864i, 865ch (see also Apologetics, Apostolate, Judaism, Maintenance, Paul) mission of the seventy-two 620b, 695b, 744e, 746e, 756cd, 774b, 854c mission of the Twelve 619d, 624e, 650c, 670f, 692f-693c, 731cdeg, 743f, 754de, 756c, 758g, 768f, 775ab, 819c, 822b MITANNI 78b, 118jd, 119d-j, 120a-e, 121b becomes Aram Naharaim 120e, 239g Egyptian marriage alliances 119hi MITE, the Widow's 767a
MITHRA, Mithradath 290d
MITHRAS, Mithraism 590c, 645d, 969f
MITHRIDATES I OF PARTHIA 70e, 122i, 563d, 571d, 572b MITRE, The high-priest's 179eg
MIXED MARRIAGES 67fh, 129c, 181i, 192p, 201e, 217d, 218f, 244f, 246h, 247a, 286e, 288e, 289klmr, 294a-l, 299f, 305a, 306b, 311e, 555cd, 557c, 660d, 837b Christian-Pagan marriages 864i, 888e, 950h of Patriarchs 157d of the kings of Israel and Judah 63hj, 267g, 270a Pauline privilege 873hi (see also Divorce) religious upbringing of children in 873i with a concubine 218f MIZPAH, Maspha, Masphath, in Galaad 154o, 243i, 281fj on Nebi Samwil 251b, 464bc, 563e Tell en-Nasbe 57f, 245i, 271c MIZRAIM, Misraim (Egypt) 149i, 269j, 275g
MINASON 841a
MOAB, Moabites 56c, 57k, 58b, 61b, 64fg, 120i, 121h, 136f, 152f, 206d-q, 234c, 239eh, 243j, 271dj, 276fo, 279c, 281d, 286il, 289b, 430d-i, 435i, 466a-d, 487ac, 522i, 526ci, 542h, 877c

(see also Balac, Chemosh, Egion, Mesha) (MOAB) conquered by David 259g, 350b, 466f
 excluded from covenant 67f, 114h, 448b language like Hebrew 80j marriage with 246h, 247a, 270a plains of 205i, 212e revolt of Mesha 191i, 80j, 211q, 273i-n, 275e subdued by Assyria 278b, 430eg-i, 431a-d wines of 431c MODERNISM, Liberalism 9c, 36j, 37g, 38a, 45d, 46ad, 616cd, 621bc, 670bc (see also Rationalism) fallacies, and preconceptions of 616cfi, 621de, 626d MODESTY 143bj, 144b
MODIN 68d, 562fg
 Hasmonean sepulchre at 567d, 571bd
MODIOS, The 82e
MOERIS LAKE 118g
MOHAMMED, Moslems 164b, 267g, 268j, 269d, 286i, 522i, 548c, 585f, 600d, 657n, 686f, 750a
MOLINISM 857p
MOLOCH, Milk 63d, 65d, 114i, 192j, 193b, 243j, 270a, 278ai, 280k, 438f, 448g, 484m, 486g, 541b, 735d, 829c MOLON 577b
MONASTICISM (see also Community) Essene 588c
 pagan 599e
MONDSEE MONASTERY 4c MONEY 83ab, 290p, 296g, 705f (see also Avarice, Coinage, Denarius, Drachma, Mammon, Mina, Riches, Stater, Talent) love of 761d, 767a money changers 711a, 787a (see also Temple) money-lenders 296ef, 526k, 584n (see also Interest) MONGOLS 244b
MONOBIBLICISM ('Bible only') 10d
MONOGAMY 110h, 143i, 320i, 383ad, 386b, 596a, 602k, 735b MONOLATRY, see Henotheism MONOPHYLISM 838e
MONOPHYSITISM 36j, 617b MONOTHEISM 44bcfg, 104h, 108b, 110b, 135b, 137a, 157b, 163g, 302e, 358g, 362f, 441cg, 442k-n, 591c-e, 641fg, 683c, 806c, 838e, 875d anterior to polytheism 45f, 104h Egyptian approach to 598m Israel always monotheist 104b, 105bce, 110b, 271k, 514i peculiar to Israel among ancients 79h, 163g philosophic monotheism 590c, 591bd revived by Osee 514i MONSTERS, Mythical 320i, 322k, 328i, 436b, 439k (see also Dragon, Leviathan, Serpent, Satyr)
MONTANISM 35g, 671u, 776c, 938b, 962b, 965b
MONTH OF YEARS 551e MONTHS, The Hebrew 83ef, 113f, 169e, 172k, 268a, 543c, 546b computation of 83e intercalation of Adar II 83g MOON, The, and Hebrew calendar 405f and the Sabbath 172k blood red 671q, 738b creation of 141ac, 142c Josue stops 90a, 232f-i moon sickness 361e new moon 83eg, 113d, 528f worship of 59d, 142c, 172b, 318r, 330c MORAL CONFLICT 853h
MORAL GOVERNMENT OF UNIVERSE 282r, 317g, 318k, 332b, 333a, 376gho, 591b MORALITY 211g, 213a, 623c-e, 624c, 914f, 915f

(MORALITY) the basis of 173a, 315d, 365ab, 366b, 595a, 623af between Jews and Gentiles 584e, 595e, 596e dogma and 623af health and 366i (see also Sickness) Jewish business morality 595e, 596e Jewish domestic 596a-c kingdom of God and 623d moral corruption, defilement 732ch Philosophy and 590b, 848i, 849d religion and 44e, 598m, 595d, 600ad, 601bcd, 723f, 847cg (a) source of wisdom 316h value of the Law for 397i, 894d MORAL LAW 110e, 366d, 367f, 397dg, 401b, 736k OT revelation imperfect 102d, 110ef, 115j, 339d sanctions to 401b universal 525d, 526ci MORAL PROBLEMS FOR EXEGESIS 38d-e (see also Atrocities, Evil, Retribution, Suffering) conduct of Judith 38e, 308m conduct of Noemi, Naomi 247h disproportionate penalties 109m, 193a, 826f Elias calls fire on soldiers 273f, 756b Elisha curses the jeering children 273j (an) evil spirit from God 243d, 253a, 254agl, 273b
God condoning pagan idolatry 108c, 212g
God hardening men's hearts 109i, 165d, 212d, 233e, 388i, 425n, 626c, 646h, 729gh, 857m Israelite ferocity in war 110f Jahel's, Jael's treachery 240be, 241k Jephthah's, Jephthah's human sacrifice 243k Jewish vengeance in Esther 312f-h man's freedom, God's foreknowledge 109e massacres under anathema 211g, 228e, 230g, 231a, 309o Moses murders an Egyptian 164e, 167a, 758d, 924a Naaman's conformism 274i outbreak on Oza, Uzzah 259b, 284j punishment of Nadab and Abiu 188a Raphael's 'lie' 305e reprisals and imprecatory psalms 339d Samuel's slaying of Agag 38e, 253a slavery and the Bible 38e, 174cf, 194hin-p, 904b, 926d, 950g spoiling the Egyptians 38d, 164h suicide of Razias 580f vindictive gloating over enemies 429h MORAL THEOLOGY 690f, 860g MORATORIUM 175i, 194h, 584n MORDECAI, see Mardochoi MOREH, Mt 214e, 242f
MORESETH GATH 533b, 534d
MORIAH, Mount 63j, 134b, 153a, 264e, 286f MORMONS 671w
MORNING STAR, Stars 333b
Christ 965b, 972e
Lucifer, Satan 333d, 429k
MORTGAGES 525a
MORTIFICATION 308n, 635b, 801f, 876d, 887hi
MOSCHI, Meshech, Mosoch, The 120g, 121b, 283a, 361d, 488p MOSES 61, 76d, 88a, 99f, 102q, 222j, 236g, 238h, 392bd, 395a, 406c, 451b, 486g, 877a, 924a, 935d (see also Canticle, Law, Pentateuch) adopts existing institutions 107 age (life-span) of 129b, 140f, 166e, 221e and Aaron 129aef, 164i, 181a-c, 187a-n and divorce 686b, 708bcd and feast of Azymes 113f and the apodeiktik law 45m anger of 171h, 181b, 207h, 214b assumption of 92k, 273g, 961c

(MOSES) at the transfiguration 35f, 619f, 733d, 755a before Pharaoh 166a, 167a-168, 342a (his) birth and alleged parallels 164d blessing of 134c, 222f-i, 313b call and mission 129d, 164f-i, 166de conception of God 109c death and burial of 34c, 131d, 134c, 222j education 129a, 135a Egyptian name 164d face-veil of 181j, 887de faith, faithfulness of 935d, 943dm (his) faith seeming to fail 129g, 164i, 200c, 201d, 204no fasts 40 days on Sinai 129k, 683c founder of nation 44e, 104g, 108a, 129i founder of Yahwism 44e, 104g, 108a
genealogy of 166f
hands raised in prayer 171i, 231d horns of glory 129k, 181j, 540s, 887c impediment of speech 129a in Midian, Madian 129c inspiration of 34ce intimacy with God 109d, 545g Jochabed, his mother 133a, 164c, 165c, kills an Egyptian 164e, 167a, 758d, 924a learns the name of Yahweh 129d life summarized 129a-e literary activity 11f, 34c, 37i, 80i, 130bc, 132a, 135im, 171i, 176c, 184b, 211ab (see also Pentateuch) Messianic revelation to 792g, 939f mixed marriages 129c (see also Saphora, Zipporah) Mosaic priests at Dan 63d, 245d on Mount Pisgah 222j pre-eminence of 181f, 201ef, 222j, 414e priesthood of 187a-n promised a succession of prophets 99d, 114n, 129k, 217f, 409dij, 410b, 784d, 792fg, 829c (the) prophet par excellence 34e, 129k, 223b, 409ei, 410a reluctance of 164i sets up a pillar, massebah 213d sin and punishment of 129hl, 171h, 207h, 357a, 359b Sinaitic covenant with 149a, 176cd, 939g, 940c, 949a song of 313b tables of the Decalogue 214b trials, affections of 129e-hj type of Christ 40b, 163h, 222j, 682c, 683c, 703f, 829c undeveloped concept of Spirit 114c, 115a, 137d, 143dk virtues of 129ch-j, 201f visions of God 109c, 129dk, 181f, 342d, 783f, 829c MOSLEMS, see Mohammed MOSCH, see Moschi MOSQUE, of Omar 81g, 268j of Prophet Samuel 267g MOSQUITOES, Flies 167g
net 240e, 309m
MOTHER, for Grand-mother 271b MOTHER GODDESS, The Great 590c (see also Cybele, Diana) MOTHERHOOD 654f, 660d saves, sanctifies 654f, 660d, 921g MOTHS 321d, 687a
MOUND, Heap, Tell, City 80a MOUNTAIN, a relative description 147b MOUNTAINEERING 603c
MOUNTAIN-GOAT, The 333e
MOURNING 215e, 320g, 404f, 430f, 432i, 457a, 486aa, 685e, 800c duration of 161bc, 309eio, 320j forbidden to priests 188a, 193jk, 476f for destruction of temple 549c laceration in 192s, 215e mourning women 457c professional mourners 691f, 730k MOWINGS, The King's 528a

MULTIPLICATION OF BREAD 652gi, 653i, 779de, 793ab, 795f MURATORIAN FRAGMENT 17g, 36i, 606b, 661c, 662f, 777b MURDER 110d, 146ab, 174df, 209il, 213ab, 218ae, 267df, 685j (see also Blood, Homicide) MURMURERS 108a, 129e, 321a, 401c, 406d, 877c, 935e, 948e, 961ce MURSIL I 119c; II 120c
MUSACH, The 278c
Music, and prophecy 273m, 285g, 410c, 414b at feasts and funerals 290o, 691f choir boys 336
David and liturgical singing 112g, 283g, 285d, 291c, 337, 347a, 410c Ezechias, Hezekiah, and liturgical 66a Greek choral 600h, 603b in psalmody, worship 66a, 285gh, 335b, 336, 406h, 414b, 585d, 913b instruments 113de, 146e, 285d, 298f, 336, 337, 347b, 363jk, 395f, 527j, 540y Levitical singers, musicians 112g, 283q, 285dgh, 290k musical directions 540pqy (see also Selah) scale, Arabian and Hebrew 336 MUSRI (Cappadocia) 269j, 275a (Egypt) 278d
MUSTARD SEED 485d, 699c, 730d, 759b MUTEMUYA 119h
MUTILATION, in pagan law 174cf, 175b, 193d of captives 239b, 281e self laceration in mourning 192s, 215e self-wounding in prayer 271i, 553b MUTTIWAZA 119j
MUWATALLI 120cd
MYCALE, Battle of 311e
MYCERINUS (Menkaure) 118c
MYNDOS 572b
MYRA 843b
MYRRH 180i, 384f, 385k, 681cf, 722c, 743a, 811d
MYRTLE 546b
MYRIA, Mysians 562c, 572b, 576b
MYSTERIES, The Pagan 392f, 393f, 599a-f, 622a, 633h, 639e, 641i, 645d, 650a, 652c, 790d, 846c, 856d, 862bc, 908b MYSTERIES OF THE KINGDOM 656dh, 729g (see also Messianic Secret) MYSTERY, The Christian 636f, 645cd, 652a, 669ab, 826d, 828b, 859ij, 863i, 870cg, 871i, 882c, 899b-d, 900g, 901a-c, 911g, 925a of Faith 92ii of Godliness 922a of Iniquity 643f, 917d MYSTERY PLAYS, Biblical 3i MYSTICAL BODY OF CHRIST, The 40h, 263c, 462t, 635b, 641j, 650mo, 651d, 794b, 826d, 828b, 854e, 860de, 863c, 868b, 873e, 879cd, 898ijk, 899dg, 900a-e, 906c, 909gj, 911a, 912d, 913a, 965d and the Eucharist 637b, 653b, 657f Christ the Head 635d, 898ik, 899dg, 902d, 909gj, 911a, 912d, 930c inequalities of talents in 879cd its soul, the Holy Spirit 651d members of 860de one, indivisible 620a, 868b, 870a oneness with Christ 145e, 635b, 879c, 887h, 971h, 972f (see also Union) organic unity of men in 263c, 635a-c, 650m, 868b, 879d, 912d sharing in the Passion 899bc, 911df social allegory familiar to pagans 879b MYSTICAL INTERPRETATION 18df, 36gf, 39cdgi, 40, 84c, 102p, 383afm, 894f, 897a allegorical 32k, 40aef, 383cfg (see also Allegory, Typology) anagogical 40efg metaphorical 40e moral, tropological 40efi proper 40e

MYSTICISM 37ab, 624c, 854eh, 852h the false 909f MYTHOLOGY 79b, 144a, 145c, 244bc, 326c, 480d, 484j, 487r, 503c alleged Christ myth 33o, 605ce-g, 608b mythological school of critics 605e-g, 608b, 905e-g NAAMAH, Noema 146d, 318a
NAAMAN, the Leper 115g, 274g-jl, 275cd, 703b, 751c NAAS, or Jesse 262b
NABAJOTH, Nebaioth 154c
NABAL 255 l
NABATAEANS 58e-i, 70ce, 153h, 154c, 277b, 466b, 565a-c, 568b, 681c, 891d, 895b NABATH (Nadan) 306k
NABONASSAR 123c
NABONIDUS 122cd, 285s, 289c, 420e, 500j, 501b-f the Nabuchodonosor of Daniel 122c Cyrus Chronicle 501c
NABOPOLASSAR 66d, 121 l, 122a, 124a, 280q, 281d, 287cc, 320f, 459b, 461c, 477e, 496d NABOTH 265h, 272hi, 275h, 411d
NABU, Nebo 443h
NABUCHODONOSOR, NEBUCHADNEZZAR II, 66d, 83h, 121-2, 123f, 124a, 265 l, 266f, 280q-281j, 287cc, 308e, 354c, 412cd, 459ab, 461c, 465a, 467i, 477ef, 478c, 487fh, 488e, 493h, 496b, 539e enthrones Zedekiah 281a, 463d, 485bl kills Seraiah the high-priest 67b, 290g, 543h name of 477e plunders, destroys temple 122b, 280a, 281h, 287aacc, 307g, 353b, 354c, 470a, 477f, 483n, 562c protects Jeremias 463g repairs tower of Babel 149m sword of Yahweh 478c, 486i-k takes Jerusalem finally 80k, 112b, 124ab, 290d, 339g, 413e, 433f, 463fg, 469c ff., 477f, 486l-q, 543h, 767f takes Jerusalem under Joachim 280qrs, 281a, 282bb, 463d, 477efg, 478f NABUCHODONOSOR, NEBUCHADNEZZAR, in DANIEL 494f-501f identified as Nabonidus 122c the image of his dream 964e NABUCHODONOSOR, NEBUCHADNEZZAR, the Assyrian 308c-i, 309a NABU-NA'ID, see Nabonidus NABUZARDAN, Nebuzaradan 463g, 464b NACHOR, Nahor, Abraham's brother 79j, 105b, 120b, 140a, 149p, 150b, 153c Abraham's Grandfather 79j, 149pq NADAB 64c, 124g, 179a, 188ab, 191e, 266e, 271d NADAN, see Achikar NAHOR, see Nachor
NAHUM, the prophet 413d, 414g, 537-8, 541c
NAIN, Naim, The widow of 619b, 626e, 753b NAIRI REGION, The 121b
NAJOTH IN RAMAH 254i, 410c
NAKEDNESS 143bij, 144b, 327m, 328e, 432i
NAMES 143h, 151i, 213ad, 215a, 264c, 283q, 418d, 427i, 496e, 650f, 686h, 824f, 825e (see also Theophoric) Christian 855b, 965ade double names 691a, 728c Emmanuel named by his mother 426b given by father 426b, 427b, 680j Greek names of Jews 560b, 575df, 673c, 828a, 834c hard to transmit correctly 285h in imprecations, magic 213a, 451k, 965a inversion of syllables 283e new, secret 965ade substitutions, parodies, perversions of 22b, 139h, 175i, 257c, 258b, 281k, 282aa, 330c, 388g, 528g, 540e

(NAMES) symbolic names 418d, 458k, 515c, 857p NAMES, THE DIVINE 806e (see also Adonai, El, Elohim, Jesus, Yahweh) attached to Temple 269c God most High 730h hallowing, holiness of 173a, 213a, 310h, 340c, 556c, 591c, 686h in the Koran 165b incommunicable 393e invocation of 817cd, 824f, 825ce, 826b, 831d, 837e, 839h, 841f manifestations, revelations 213ad, 438e patriarchal titles 105fg periphrases for 165b, 194d, 335f, 351b, 352b, 362d, 563b, 564a, 571g, 573b, 591c, 592c, 678f, 686c, 714e, 740h, 907d suppression of 105f, 213a (see also Yahweh) NAMUEL, alias Jamuel 283h
NANA 273n
NAOMI, Noemi, 246f ff., 247a
NAPATA 431k
NAPHISH 153h
NAPHTALI, see Nephthali
NAPHTHA 574d
NARAM-SIN 117d, 118j, 120aj, 121a NARCISSUS, the flower 384g, 687d NARCISUS, the Freedman 863gh NARD, see Spikenard NAR-KABARA, The 478f, 480b
NARY, Cornelius 31c
NASH PAPYRUS 21hm, 77a
NATHAN, son of David 543fg, 552d NATHAN THE PROPHET 159h, 225b, 259e, 260eg, 267bh, 276o, 282t, 284e, 285t, 409f, 411ad, 848a (see also David) and building of temple 112b parable of 625i, 848a writings, chronicles of 224df, 248e, 265f, 282w 411e NATHANIEL 692c, 785bc, 786a, 813a (see also Bartholomew)
NATHINITES, see Nethinim NATIONALISM, JEWISH 71a, 72b, 74bd, 92f, 584dn, 587e, 590f, 642h, 682g, 736g, 741c, 749a, 754g, 766d, 770bc, 771b, 774b, 827c, 841ae, 929b (see also Zealots)
NATURALIZATION, by Circumcision 114h NATURE 87de (see also Creation) and the fall 855f glorifying God 966bcd renewed, recreated 451ls, 749e, 855f, 855h-k, 951b, 954f, 966d, 967a, 971h sacramental, revealing God 317g, 330h, 333b-e, 334d-d, 397km, 398b, 402a, 835c, 838f, 847de worship 393b, 835c, 965e NAVAL BASES AND HARBOURS, ROMAN 598f, 603c NAVIGATION, ANCIENT 843bc
NAZARENE, Nazoree, The 30mnq, 607g, 682d NAZARENES, Gospel of the 714i
NAZARETH 58h, 236b, 277e, 427g, 682c, 749j, 750ab, 785d, 790e, 796h Christ in the synagogue 618f, 751bc, 753e Christ rejected at 619d, 731ab, 751bc hidden life of Christ at 85 l, 86a, 94ce, 584k, 617ef, 676e, 682cde, 731b, 747c, 749j, 750b unbelief impedes miracles at 731b, 746c NAZARITES, Nazirites 103a, 183b, 198i-m, 526n
 St James 960b
 St Paul and 839c, 841d Samson 244ae
 Samuel 249d
 trespass-offering of 111g
NEAPOLIS OF PHILIPPI 837d, 905c
NEBAHAZ, Nibhaz 278i
NEBO, City and High Place of 57i, 211g, 278i, 430d f Mount 207h, 222j, 271k, 273 l, 430d
 The God 278i

NEBUCHADNEZZAR (rezzar), see Nabuchodonosor NECHAO II, Pharaoh Necho 66d, 122ab, 280q, 281k, 287aa-cc, 477de, 485m defeat at Carchemish 66d, 122a, 280q, 287aacc, 459b, 461c, 465ab, 496a dethrones and deports Joachaz 65d, 122a, 280p, 459e imprisoned by restored by Assyria 66b, 79e kills Josias at Megiddo 66c, 79d, 122a, 280o, 426m, 459e, 465b, 552d, 970f NECK, Feet placed on the 233a, 445q NECROMANCY 106d, 115j, 192s, 193h, 253a, 256ef, 409i, 418f, 432b, 437eh, 451i NEEDLE, Camel and Eye of 660k, 709d, 735e, 763h NEFER-HOTEP I 117 l NEFERITTI, see Amenophis IV NEGEB 54h, 202c, 205c, 229a, 361i, 549e of Arad 239b NEGLIGENCE, Culpable 174h, 175a NEHEMIAS 58d, 67e-h, 283f, 288-99, 537b, 543c achievement of 291c and the Feast of Tabernacles 99g character of 296g cupbearer to Artaxerxes I 67e, 122h first Governorship of 67e, 295d, 296g, 299c fire-miracle of 289t, 574ad memoirs of 224f, 288e, 289g, 295ah, 296a, 298ae, 574d opposition to 289 l, 291c, 296abchi, 530i (his) policy and Esdras' 289 ln prayers of 295c, 296a relation to Esdras 67gh, 125g, 288bc, 289fi-r, 293a, 294d, 297be, 298g, 555c remission of debts 67f, 216a renewal of Covenant 67g, 114k repeoples Jerusalem 67f, 289hkl second governorship of 67h, 299a-g NEHUSHTAN, Nohestan 279b, 460fi, 461b NEIGHBOUR, Christian sense of 114e, 660m love of, duty to 110g, 114e, 192m, 211f, 216a, 366m, 370gk, 372o, 398bd, 686e, 687h, 713c, 736k, 756, 860fg, 950f OT and Jewish sense of 114c, 192m, 595ef, 686e, 736k NEMUEL, Namuel 158b NEO-HITTITES 119a, 121bc NEO-PLATONISM 604f, 624c, 645d
NEPHILIM, The 146k
NEPHTHALI, Naphtali 57i, 58c, 160f, 222h, 236e, 240bd, 283v, 303a-c, 427g, 684a NEPHTHAR, Naphtha 574d
NEPHUSIM 290 l
NER 283aabb
NEREUS 863gh
NERGAL, Nergel 278i
NERGAL SHAREZER 463g, 549b NERO 73d, 74f, 75c, 633g, 744f, 815a, 831e, 842g, 843g, 921d, 929b, 949d, 952f, 966g as Antichrist 969g, 970 l redivivus 970k
NERVA, The Emperor 607k, 776g
NESROCH, Nisroch 279j NESTLE, E. 10f, 583g
NESTORIANISM 36j, 617b
NETHINIM 232c, 283ce, 290 lm, 293g, 294i, 295m, 492m NETOPHA, Netophathites 58d, 283dee, 298f NEUTRAL TEXT OF NT 582fg, 583a-d
NEW ARTICLES, for sacred actions 273i NEW BIRTH, see Regeneration
NEW COVENANT, see Covenant
NEW HEAVEN AND EARTH 451 ls, 640n, 646a, 709e, 717a, 718f, 749e, 855fh-k, 951b, 954f, 966d, 967a, 971h (see also Creation, Messianic Age)
NEW JERUSALEM 248k, 307g, 439g, 447ae, 449jm, 450, 492a-493k, 535bl, 545df, 546bd, 548d, 550b, 552a, 554ab 900g, 971h, 972a-cef (NEW JERUSALEM) as a ziggurat 972a built of, on jewels 447e, 972a-c Church on earth 545d, 546bd, 547ae, 552a, 554a, 932bc, 944c

God its defence 994g
God its light 450f, 545d, 554ac,
972a heavenly city, the Church 40fg, 545df, 546bd, 547ae, 552a, 554ab, 932bc, 944c temple river 493fg trees with healing leaves 493g twelve foundations of 972ab twelve gates of 493k
NEW LIFE 851adeh, 887 l, 894b, 897e, 949f, 950b, 955i (see also Regeneration, Resurrection)
NEWMAN, Cardinal 18f, 37d, 85f, 616c, 668ce, 746a
NEW PSALTER OF PIUS XII, see Psalms
NEW TESTAMENT, The (see also Coven- ant) autographs lost 581b better attested than the Classics 23f, 581f, 583c
Canon of 16a ff., 954g chapters and verses (origin of) 581e Codices of 22i-23e, 581dfg, 582a-c critical editions of 23e deuterocanonical books of 16c, 17defh-l early and wide dissemination 4a early fixation of text 77d excavations, inscriptions and 81a fulfils, harmonizes with OT 39dkl, 40b-g, 41h, 42f, 101e, 102hg, 163h gradual formation of 16-17 Greek of 21a-e (see also Koine) Greek script of 22gh, 581d incomplete without OT 103a inspiration of 17ace, 35acdhi Jewish background of 584-96, 642f MSS families and groups 22k-23d, 582d-583d
MSS lists 582b papyri 16b, 17h, 22g, 23g, 25n, 77ad, 581d, 582c patristic quotations from 582f, 583d printed Greek editions 583e-h semitisms in 21d Syriac versions 25d-k, 583b textus receptus 582b, 583fh total number of MSS 581d variants insignificant 23f, 583c
NEW YEAR 83gh, 193u, 268a, 269a, 280mr, 560ab, 791b
Jewish Civil 83h, 113el, 752d Jewish liturgical 83h, 113f, 752d, 889c Roman 889c
NICANOR (a) 563c, 566e, 579b NICANOR (b) 560b, 566e, 575d, 577c-e, 580deh
NICANOR'S DAY, Feast of 566e
NICHOLAS THE DEACON 828a NICODEMUS 42b, 622e, 643i, 660k, 722h, 742i, 743a, 772e, 779e, 788a-e, 796 l NICOLAITANS, The 778h, 851b, 965a NICOPOLIS 925h
NIKEL, J., on Leviticus 135rs NIGHT, see Light and Darkness NIGHT WATCHES, Hebrew and Roman
470g NILE, River 118a, 143g, 214e, 234a, 333d, 356b, 403d, 405a, 432c, 456e, 528gh, 538m, 550o Blue, White Niles 431k red, bloody 90b, 167e Shihor 284i, 434f
NIMRIM VALLEY 430g
NIMROD, Nimrud, Nemrod 149i
NIMURTA 149i
NINEVEH 63h, 66c, 79d, 121a, 149i, 277e, 279cij, 280o, 302b, 303d, 305g, 307i, 308e, 413d, 417d, 477d, 531cd, 532afi, 537b, 538h-p, 541cd, 542j, 697e, 758a
NINGAL, The Goddess 59d

NIPPUR 79f, 149 l, 289a, 443h, 478f,
480b
NISAN, The Month 83e-h, 113f, 123c, 124ahj, 268a, 269a, 280mr, 311f, 312f, 560a, 567d, 578d, 739ae, 752d Babylonian for Abib 83fh, 113f, 169e, 216d
NITOCRIS 501d
NOADIAS, the false prophet 296i NOAH, Noe 40j, 79b, 136e, 138b, 146hk, 147-49c, 392b, 393d, 406b, 484j, 650n, 670mn, 671d, 717b, 929e, 943b, 951a, 953i, 954d (see also Utnapishtim) age (life-span) of 140e covenant with 137f, 149ab, 435c, 447d sacrifice of 147b, 148c type of Christ 40b, 951ab, 953i NO-AMON, No (Thebes) 118f, 163b, 465d, 537c, 538m
'populous No' 488f, 538m Nob 57f, 178c, 286a, 290i, 428j NOD, The Land of 146a
NOEMA, Naama 146d, 318a NOEMI, see Naomi
NOHESTAN, Nehushtan 279b, 460fi, 461b
NOMADS 113f, 139d, 146de
Egyptian attitude to 60a NON-RESISTANCE 562g, 692h, 720e, 740c, 807g, 860g, 861b, 950i, 969c NOPH, see Memphis
NOPHETH, Naphath, Dor 235c
NORMAN CONQUEST, The 4c
NORMAN-FRENCH LANGUAGE 4cd
NORTH, The, danger from 456b, 480c, 491a, 523fg, 542j, 546d, 548c, 971f (see also Moschi, Scythians) home of pagan gods 328h, 332h, 348c, 429k, 487r
NOSE-RINGS 369f
NOVATIAN, Novatianism 37f, 938b NOVENA, The Apostolic 822c
NUBIA 118a, 119g, 121k NUMBERS, cyphered names 969g exaggeration of numbers 197c, 207d, 208f forty-two months (3½ years; 1,260 days) 968ch, 969a-c in Greek and Hebrew 969g indefinite, vague 123b, 124 l, 125a, 226c, 418b, 526c Johannine septuples 962dh, 967a, 972e letter-numeral equivalence 586e, 671p, 680f, 969dg (see also Gematria)
Messianic number 969g misinterpretations of 226d, 238h of the beast 671p, 969dg origin of 60 mins., secs., degrees 146j, 532i perfect numbers 268a, 969gh round, approximate 41c, 82bc, 124 l, 140b, 149p, 221a, 225ce, 283c, 285e, 481ae, 797n sacred, symbolic, significant 41c, 191k, 268a, 391e, 432e, 498d, 503m, 504ac, 507bgn, 671hp, 680f, 697f, 791d, 951b, 964h, 966a, 967ab, 968ci, 969a-dg, 970b schematized 124b, 125a, 129b, 140b-f, 149p, 152j, 481ae, 680f scribal corruption, exaggeration of 125e, 140e, 166e, 197c, 208f, 226c, 242g, 243 l, 245ef, 266d-j, 267jk, 269egi, 272f, 277i, 282ff, 285b, 481ae textual corruption 21k, 113i, 123b, 124a, 169g, 226c, 566a NUMENIUS 572b
NUMERICAL SAYINGS 79i, 321h, 331e, 364h, 367j-p, 375b-g NUMISMATICS 5e (see also Coins, Money)
Nunc Dimittis 348e, 617d, 745g, 747d, 749hi NUZI, Nuzu 117 l, 118i, 120a tablets 79k, 152j, 154m OAK TREES 214e, 284a, 551a OATHS 152k, 153o, 213c, 517f, 588c, 686c, 714e, 935e, 938d, 948f (see also Perjury, Vows)

(OATHS) Essences and 588c God's oath 213ac rash, unjust oaths 185e, 686c, 731f rites and forms 158f, 250a trial by 175cd OBADIAH, see Abdias
OBED 246j, 247k
OBEDEDOM, Gentile Host of the Ark 178c, 259b, 284jm
OBEDEDOM THE LEVITE 284 l, 285j, 287h OBEDIENCE 216b, 271h, 366h, 369 l, 371e, 372o, 398c, 403h, 444a, 451n, 680j, 851j, 861a, 911f, 929d, 930c, 949dg, 950a, 955e and sacrifice 457a, 941d filial 174e, 623d of Abraham and Isaac 106b, 153ab of wives to husbands 950h safety in 381b, 403h to state 660tu, 736g, 861a-d, 950f to superiors 932a OBEDIENCE OF CHRIST, The 445i, 618b, 647e, 683a, 720d, 739f, 740a, 749g, 750j, 751f, 756a, 758f, 759c, 769d, 930aeg, 937c, 941d learnt by suffering 937c unto death 937c, 941d OBELISKS 268k, 464e (see also Pillars) OBLATION, Ritual of 309j, 527b OBLIGATION, Days of 113cg-j, 114i, 750a
OBSCURANTISM 32m, 46ef
OBSTINACY, of Israel 517g, 518fg, 519n of opinion 334f
OCCAM'S RAZOR 607e
OCHOZIAS, AHAZIAH, of Israel 64bgh, 124f, 266de, 273e, 286mm, 411ad, 413f, 423j, 672b consults Baalzebub 273e, 423j
his name 271f
loss of Moab 273egl (see also Mesha) OCHOZIAS, AHAZIAH, of Judah 271e, 275fi, 276cg, 282a, 287bc OCTAVE PSALMS 336 OCTAVIAN 70g, 71dg, 905c (see also Augustus)
OCTOTEUCH, The 246b
ODED, the prophet 282i, 412a
ODOLLAM, see Adullam
ODOUR OF SWEET SAVOUR 184c, 908b
OECUMENE, The 715d, 749c OFFERINGS OF THE PRINCES 199a
OFFERTORY, The 186k OFFICE, The Divine 3g, 335a, 336 (see also Breviary)
OG, King of Basan 56b, 57j, 134b, 205h, 212c, 233g, 267i, 351c, 362f his enormous iron bed 212e OHAD, Ahod 158b OHOLAH and Oholihah 478c, 486r-w OHOLAI, Oholi, Ahlai 283c, 284e OIL, see Olive, Unction OINTMENT, see Spikenard, Unction
OLD AGE 381e
OLD LATIN VERSIONS 8b, 26c, 27a-d, 396e, 726ab
OLD TESTAMENT 136e (see also Bible, Historicity)
ancient method of reference to 859b and NT 36a, 39dijkl, 40bcfg, 41h, 42f, 101b-e, 102hg, 103a, 625b, 845b, 877a-d, 897a, 932c comparative antiquity of 99b early Christian use of 101f, 388cj heretical attitude to 35fg heritage of the Church 7a imperfection of 99f, 102e materially-minded 591g, 592d meaning the Pentateuch 887e meaning, value, for Israel 99d-g meaning, importance for us 2, 40ch, 102a-h, 625b, 642b, 660e, 877b, 887c-e pedagogic role of 103a prophetic of Christ 5a, 102h-r, 145de, 877ab, 887c-e secular value of 99bc the Scriptures, for the Apostles 14a, 101f, 881d

OLDA, see Huldah
OLEANDER 403b
OLIVE TREES, Oil 56g, 243c, 267n, 268f, 740a oil as wound dressing 731d oil miraculously multiplied 271h, 274ag, 751c oil presses 267n, 329h, 740a symbolism of 271h, 547bc, 859fgh, 968c OLIVES, Olivet, Mount of 270a, 280k, 483p, 710fh, 715a, 720cd, 736a, 767d, 797a, 822b, 937c (see also Ascension, Gethsemane) OLYMPIAS 863g
OMENS 576a, 600j
OMER, The 82d, 134b, 171d
OMNIPOTENCE, Omniscience, see God OMRI, see Amri
ON, see Heliopolis
ONAN 156k
ONESIMUS 898b, 909cd, 913d, 926
ONESIPHORUS 923bd
ONIAS I 551be, 570a
ONIAS II 68b
ONIAS III 68b, 507mop, 508d, 511c, 575a-cf
ONO, City of 283aa
ONOMASTICON OF EUSEBIUS 788i, 789c ONOMATOPOEIA 241j
OOLLA, Ooliba, see Oholah
OOLIAH, Aholiab 180m
OPHEL 63j, 287ku, 295lm, 439b
OPHIR 149k, 269g, 282hh, 285f, 286nmm, 329e, 347d, 400b OPHNI and PHINEAS 249adi, 250c OPHRA 57h, 63d, 242abd, 242l, 283g OPPORTUNISM 861d
OPPORTUNITY 944c OPPRESSORS OF ISRAEL (see also Persecution) in time of Judges 238ej Pharaoh 60c, 78a, 119h, 120d, 163a-e, 164a ORACLES (see also Divination, Holy of Holies) judgement by 231b pagan 409g, 600ij
ORAL TRADITION 33n, 135lmn, 137g, 139a, 724b, 924a, 961c and the Gospel 17c, 607e, 609a, 610d-f, 615a, 780f memory and 135a, 139a, 586f, 679b of Patriarchs 135lm, 137g, 679b of prehistoric times 135lm, 138bc of proverbs 364eg scribal, rabbinic 584c, 586ef ORDEAL, Trial by 175cd, 198e-g ORDINATION, Holy Orders 820de, 835e, 919h character of order 923b grace of 922b, 923bc matter and form 820d, 828a, 922bc (see also Hands) minister, ordainer 658c, 659e, 922b presbyter assistants at 922b selection of candidates 828a, 922e ORDINATION, Levitical 182d, 183i, 186b, 187a-m OREB, the Medianite 164e
ORIENT, Dayspring (Messias) 545d, 547f, 548d, 748j ORIENTAL COURTESY 152ac, 153d, 154c ORIENTAL LANGUAGES AND BIBLE STUDY 6c
ORIENTALISMS, Exaggerations 33b, 155h, 225c, 267g, 282bbcc, 285c, 339d, 340b, 313m, 360c (see also Hyperbole)
ORIENTATION, Hebrew 112a, 141c, 150g, 326c, 427g, 481d, 554c ORIGEN 3e, 5a, 17l, 86d, 172g, 338b, 346c, 582e, 606b, 673a, 724c, 730g Hexapla 8b, 23m-o, 24a, 25b, 479e his allegorism 39i on the Bible 11c, 13c, 14ef, 15d, 37eg, 282k on translation of OT 23k ORIGINAL RIGHTEOUSNESS 141d, 143bij, 145b, 318n, 402a

ORIGINAL SIN 42b, 92m, 145b, 318n, 349a, 397gh, 645j, 683h, 850l, 853e, 855j, 881g, 894c, 900e, 946h (see also Fall) forgiven at circumcision 106g human generation and 145b, 324e Mary's freedom from 84cdgh, 85i, 86j, 385e, 748g pre-natal sanctification of Baptist 747f pre-natal sanctifying of Jeremias 454c ORION, Constellation of 322k, 333d, 525c, 527g ORNAN, the Jebusite, see Araunah ORONTES, see Antioch, Qadesh, Qarqar ORPHA 247ab
ORPHANS 218a, 219b
ORPHISM 599, 862bc
ORTHODOXY, and Modernism 616cd, 628d Protestant return towards 616d OSSE, Josue called 202b OSSE, Hosea, The prophet 65a, 412cf, 514a-521d, 691b, 696b compared with Amos 525f his marriage 38d, 514bf, 515b, 516aefg, 545g
 his name 228f
 on outrage at Gabaa, Gibeah 242f on the blood of Jezreel 276f, 277egj, 515c originates 'divine marriage' allegory 383n refers to ephod, teraphim 245b symbolic names of his children 857p OSSE, Hoshea, King of Israel 64c, 65b, 121f, 124c, 266fg, 277l, 278d-f, 420c OSNAPPER, see Ashurbanipal
OSORKON I, Pharaoh 286bb
OSTENTATION 596f, 686fj, 714b, 736m
OSTRICH, The 330b, 333e
OTHERWORLDLINESS, Christian 874e, 950c
OTHNIEL, Othoniel 57e, 228c, 234ef, 238ei, 239g, 283g, 285l OVEN, FURNACE, Portable 151e
OWD 38b, 835b
OWLS 215f
OX, Buffalo. The 333e, 423c muzzling 219b, 875j, 922e OX-GOAD 239j
OXFORD, Council of 10c, 29e OXYMORON 430i, 431c OXYRRHYNUS 77b
OZA, Uzzah 259b, 284ilm
OZIAS, Uzziah, see Azarias PACIFISM, Christianity and 860g
PADAN-ARAM 154c
PAGANISM, Pagans 597-603, 633f, 641fl, 822c, 838e, 956d (see also Idolatry, Mysteries) absence of teaching authority 600c and divine incarnations 598q and salvation 846c appeal of 600d athletics 575de, 600h, 603b belief in providence 856f clergy of 600bd danger of associating with 865fg, 866ad divination 600ij (see also Divination) divorce 602b dress 589f, 603a, 878b everyday life 602f-603c hopelessness in face of death 77f houses 602f idolatry 600g, 847c intercourse of Christians with pagans 875ab, 877eg miracles of 226h, 969f morality of 590c, 599h, 600a, 601a-602b, 633f, 660g, 836f, 847cf, 861g, 864e, 865ef, 915f optimism and pessimism 853k oracles 34cd, 150b, 409g pagan gods 108c, 693b, 875d pagan writings and Bible 301h, 316ef, 319a, 881j, 947g

(PAGANISM) prayer for 570a priestesses 476f prophets, prophetesses 92o, 196c, 206b-q, 207b, 271kl, 273a, 273m, 280a, 313b, 414e, 416a, 418g, 459i, 547e, 553b, 600ij, 837e, 965b, 969g, 970k psalmody 79h, 313l, 335c, 358h recreations 603b religious emotionalism in 599a-d, 600d, 633h religious guilds, brotherhoods 645d, 652e sacrifices 600h, 875b, 877e Scriptures 600d soothsayers 409i, 418f spiritual condition of 853a-fi-k statues of gods 600g temple architecture 600ef travelling 603c virtuous pagans 645l, 753a, 848b, 861i wizards 409i women in 405d, 476f, 597-8, 745l worship of, prayer 79h, 271l, 686g, 859c PAINE, T. 604d
PALACE, PALACES, the Guards 267bk, 269i, 276h of David 258g of Omri, Achab 64g, 80de, 273c of Solomon 268i
PALAEOLOGUS, Michael 36a
PALAEONTOLOGY 32lm
PALESTINE 54-6, 105cd, 106e, 120gi, 122ij, 212b, 214ae, 219f, 222j, 685e (see also Geography, Fauna, Flora) ancient names for 57a, 271e, 277k beautiful (glorious) land 359b, 505ef, 510gi, 511jk boundaries 54c-e, 57b, 149j, 209c-g, 222j, 227g, 229a, 234b, 245i, 284i Canaanites 57d, 59f, 151f, 213d (see also Canaanites) Cisjordanic 54df-56a climate, weather 56de, 76c, 153r coast, harbours 54j date of Josue's conquest 61b, 62d, 125a-c, 228a, 230gh, 231ef, 233de, 235cd, 238hi division, allocation of 63b, 207e, 212e, 227fg, 230a, 234-36h, 237b, 493jk excavations 80a-k fertile, land of milk and honey 41g, 164g, 202e, 203i, 214ae, 457f
 (the) Holy Land 109g
 ideal boundaries of 176b, 436e, 493h importance, strategic, cultural 54b, 76d, 293d in time of Christ 58fg, 584d, 597c invaded by Hyksos (q.v.) 60a Israelite conquest 40f, 42f, 45g, 57de, 61be, 62, 120l, 125a-c, 209b, 212c, 227a, 228cd, 235c, 237d, 238e, 239a-f, 243j, 309f, 347c, 525g Israelite exploration of 202a-d, 212b land of Omri 271e, 277k Madaba map 81h mixed races of 584g modern, political 54cdg, 55b, 56ag named after Philistines 54c Palestine museum 56h population in NT times 584g pre-exilic economy of 584fhi, 596e pre-Canaanites 59f, 212c, 309o (see also Anak, Rephaim) Promised Land 212g, 237f, 325e, 366g roads, traffic 56h social conditions, strata, in NT times 584dfj-o Transjordanic 54e, 56a-e type of Messianic kingdom 228f under Herod the Great 58fg under the Assyrians 58c, 65, 66a-b under the Babylonians 58c, 66d-g under the Egyptians 59g, 60b, 62a, 64e, 66cd under the Greeks 58e, 68, 122j-l, 559cg, 560-80

(PALESTINE) under the Kings 58a-d under the Persians 58d, 67 under the Romans 58f-j, 70f-74, 584f, 764e
PALIMPSESTS 22h, 23o, 24c, 581f PALLAS 841 i
PALM MEASURE 82b
PALM SUNDAY 275g, 545d, 550g, 621g, 622a, 710f-h, 759c, 765ab, 801d PALM TREES 239bh, 240b, 386g, 403b PALMYRA 569d
PAMPHILUS 8b
PAMPHYLIA 572b, 834d
PANEAS 71g, 704a
PANTAENUS 928c
PANTHEISM 601cd, 781b PAPACY, The 819d (see also Peter) PAPER, Introduction of 581c
PAPHOS 834c
PAPIAS 606b, 607fjk, 671v, 677def, 679d, 724d, 725b, 777c
PAPYRI, The 4a, 6c, 21e, 22gi, 37c, 41f, 77a-78c, 94b, 479e, 661g, 741c, 821a, 907d, 933c (see also Chester Beatty, Rylands)
PAPYRUS 21g, 22g, 76c, 322h, 581c, 662a (see also Boats) recto and verso 662a PARABLES 32hk, 383c-eg, 385oh, 625g, 698acde (see also Kingdom of God) allegorical interpretation of 625h, 698a, 699bcf, 703b, 711g-i, 712a-d, 717e, 718ab, 752ab, 756g, 757df, 758e, 759abef, 760ef, 764e, 766c childhood and the kingdom 706b Dives and Lazarus 327j, 584k, 660k, 761ef interpretation of 625h, 698a, 752b, 754b measure for measure 687e, 730b moral pre-requisites of 729g, 730e, 754b, 756e
new wine, old bottles 331b, 625b, 657f, 691d, 728d, 752b of Ezechiel 478h, 484k-m, 485bcdl, 486r-w, 487k-o, 488h-jkl of Joash 277c of Joatham 243c of Nathan 625i of our Lord 584k, 596f, 619c, 625g-626c, 643cg, 698ac-e, 699e, 728f, 729fgh, 730a-e, 754b, 780a, 799ab of St Paul 859f, 871d-f, 879c-e, 938c of Solomon 364b, 366ab pearls before swine 687f precedence at meals 759c, 763d that seeing they might not see 698bde, 729g, 730e, 754b that which entereth the mouth 702d-f the adversary in the way 685k the barren fig-tree 717a, 759a, 859h the blind leading the blind 702e, 714d the Bridegroom and his friends 691c, 728d, 752a
the budding fig 671d, 717a, 738d, 767h the calculations of war 760a the children in the market-place 753f the children's bread 703b the city set on a hill 685g the door of the fold 799ac the drag-net 700c, 712c the eagles (vultures) and the body 670 ln, 671k, 762f the faithful and the unfaithful steward 656g, 717ef, 758e the good Samaritan 41b, 114e, 584n, 713c, 736k, 756fg, 757a the good shepherd 643b, 644c, 799a-fh, 812e, 813d, 949h the grain of wheat dying 801ef the great supper 759df the green wood and the dry 220b, 770d the house built on sand or rock 657k, 688d the householder and the servants 670mo, 671e
the householder's store 700d

(Parables) the importunate friend 85b, 745k, 757cd the importunate widow 763ab the improvident builder 760a the labourers in the vineyard 620c, 709g-l
the leaven 660i, 699d, 759b the light and the bushel 685g, 730b, 754b, 758a
the lightning 671c the lost coin 760bd the lost sheep 657m, 706e, 760bc the Master called Beelzebub 693b the master's return 670i, 671e the Master who serves 758e the merciful debtor 707bc the mote, splinter and the beam 687e the mustard seed 485d, 699c, 730d, 759b the new patch 657f, 691d, 700e, 728d, 752b the pearl of great price 700b the Pharisee and the Publican 596f, 642j, 643h, 745k, 763cd the poor just man 389e the pounds 670i, 764de, 765b the Prodigal Son 77f, 272i, 274m, 367i, 371f, 374d, 643h, 690d, 709hi, 760bef, 880g the rich fool 660k, 758d, 948c the royal exemption from tribute
705f the savourless salt 685g, 760a the seed growing secretly 613e, 729f, 730c the sheep and the goats 584f, 670m, 671e, 718fgh the shutting of the door 759b the sound, single eye 687a the sower and the seed 613e, 625h, 657k, 660k, 698b, 699a, 729f, 730a,
947a the strong man armed 696g, 729d the talents 670mo, 671e, 718cde, 730b, 764de, 855a
the thief in the night 612f, 670m, 671n, 717d, 758e, 762e, 767gi the treasure hid in a field 700a the tree known by its fruit 688b, 697b the two sons 711f the unclean spirit returning 697f, 757g the unjust steward 761a-c the Vineyard of Yahweh 425bc, 620c the wedding garment 712cd the wedding guests 643g, 691c, 712ab the wheat and the cockle, tares 657k, 699bfg, 700c, 712c the wicked husbandman 642j, 644d, 711g-i, 726d, 736f, 766c the widow's mite 736n, 767a the wise and foolish virgins 620f, 670mo, 671e, 718ab, 861j wolves in sheep's clothing 688b, 969de PARADISE 79bc, 143e, 295d, 595b, 891f
Eden 143be, 487r
Our Lord in 771b, 816b, 858e, 940g, 951ab
PARADOX IN SCRIPTURE 225c, 967c PARALIPOMENON, Chronicles 282-7 alleged bias of 225b, 282e and the high-priesthood 282cc, 283o archaeology and 79e, 80h, 283gi, 285js, 287aa author, the Chronicler 223ac, 224af, 225b, 282loggh, 288cgj, 289g consistency with Kings (q.v.) 124a, 225f, 282yaa, 284abv-z, 285ab, 286fhm, 287bcef1mstxxc et passim date, and position in Canon 224b, 282gikn doctrine 282p-t exaggeration of numbers 282ff, 285bc genealogies, public lists 282elxxcgg, 283 interest in Levites, singers, etc. 282occ, 282gg., 283n-ree, 284l-q, 285df-k, 286lll, 287o-rz interest in the temple, liturgy, ritual

112i, 282il, 283co, 284 l-s, 285ac-kq-s, 286d-l, 287ef, 288gi (PARALIPOMENON) language, style, etc.
20b, 282lggh, 288fg name 282d relation to Esdras 125e, 224a, 282 l-m, 287ff, 288g, 290a sources 224d-f, 282v-zddgg, 283, 285at, 287ty theme, characteristics 282d-icchh, 284a truthfulness of 79e, 80h, 282faa-ff, 283r, 284b, 285bcty PARALLELISM, of natural and spiritual orders 343a, 346d, 357d, 625i PARALLELISM, Poetic 32k, 33b-d, 41h, 135c, 146d, 148b, 313efl, 326k, 335c, 364fh, 369a, 550j, 710g indicated by format 22h in NT 612d, 613b
Ugaritic examples 79i PARALYSIS, Palsy 689d, 751h, 753a, 791d the man lowered through roof 41h, 690e-g, 726d, 728ab PARAN, Pharan 200b, 202b, 270c, 540s
PARASCEVE, Preparation, The 83d, 722i, 739e, 742h, 772c, 809e PARCHMENT 22g, 292d, 581c, 965a PARENTHOOD, Acknowledgment of 154hi, 320 i PARENTS 367mn, 371e, 374c, 405d, 596c, 859e, 904a (see also Education, Family, Fatherhood, Marriage, Motherhood, Piety, Sons)
evil of parental indulgence 261a ff.
honour thy father and mother 213a, 729e (see also Piety) parental authority 218g, 596c sins against 174e, 193d PARIS, University of 4d
PARIS BIBLE, The 27i
PARISH ORGANIZATION 863g PARK, Forest, The Royal 295d PARODY 968t, 969c, 970j (see also Names)
PARONOMASIA 927e, 933a, 937c PAROUSIA, The Second Coming, The 52d-f, 544cf, 545d, 550b, 554c, 625de, 670-1, 715b, 737-8, 759c, 767b, 803e, 804b, 822b, 825f, 861gh, 869b, 874d, 914df, 915be, 916a-c, 917df, 925de, 932d, 941b, 942b, 948e, 949h, 950bc, 951de, 952gh, 953f-g, 954c-e, 968be, 970a, 971de, 972e (see also Apocalypse, Day of the Lord, Eschatology, Judgement, Messianic Age) a de fide dogma, revealed truth 670bc, 671 lm and Christian vigilance, expectancy 658a, 670im, 671e, 737b, 738f, 758ce, 762cd, 767i, 874d, 882i, 914g, 915be,
916c and the coming of the Kingdom 670gh-j, 671 l, 716ef, 720g, 762c, 767h and the fall of Jerusalem, Temple 670j-n, 715ab, 716ef, 733c, 737a-g, 738a-c, 914j and the Judgement 670m, 762ef, 767i, angels at 671st, 915e, 932d, 934b before evangelism of all Israel 693a cosmic change at 738b (see also Messianic Age, New Heaven and Earth)
days shortened for the elect's sake 670 ln death as a Parousia 717e, 718a delay in 717f, 718b, 758e, 763ab, 954c, 968b eucharist and 652i, 653ae in the clouds 716f, 720g its date unrevealed 622b, 627f, 658a, 670m, 671d, 717bc, 737b, 738ef, 746c, 758e, 762d, 767ci, 822b, 914dj-l, 916ac Judaism and 670c like a thief in the night 612f, 670m, 671n, 717d, 758e, 762e, 767gi like the eagles and their prey 670i, 671c, 716d

(PAROUSIA) like the flood 717bc like the lightning 670ln, 671c, 716d like the sprouting fig 671d, 717a many parousias 625e, 671ey, 717de, 733c, 737deg, 738ac
Maran atha 641f, 858d, 882i modern heterodoxy concerning 670bc near, imminent 38c, 626c, 655b, 660ap, 670m, 671dnop, 693a, 704g, 737b, 756c, 758g, 882i, 908a precursor of 671k, 733e revealing of secrets at 730k Our Lord's ambiguity concerning 670f-j, 671f-l, 715ab (see also Economy) signs of the times 737af, 738b-d (see also Signs of the times) will faith survive to 763b

PARTHENON, The 600f

PARTHIA, Parthians 70eh, 71bc, 122 l, 563d, 571df, 598i, 966e, 967f-h, 970e

PARTRIDGE 244j

PARVAIM, Parwayim 286g

PASAGARDAE, The 289c

PASCAL 891c

PASCH 287p (see also Passover)

PASCHAL LAMB 40ah, 102, 103a, 113g, 169e, 216c, 287opz, 417g (see also Lamb of God, Passover) at Last Supper 720a, 722e, 768b not a bone broken 811c type of Christ 40a, 163h, 169di, 644h, 649d, 768b, 811c

PASSION, The 42d, 102n, 338b, 388k, 419g, 422cdf, 441i-m, 444h-l, 445h-k,
446, 689g, 719-22, 739-42, 768-72, 807-11, 896d, 920d, 925e, 929e, 930d, 933c, 934et, 937c, 940g (see also Cross, Crucifixion, Death, Gethsemane)
according to the Scriptures 740bc, 764a, 774b, 775b beatific vision uninterrupted in 722e
(the) blood and water 649e, 779e Christ smitten before high-priest 686d, 721h complete, yet completed by us 42e, 899bc, 900bc, 911df congruent 935a-c
(the) crown of thorns 722a, 741f, 809a drama of 620g ecce homo 721h, 741f effects of 746f, 900bc, 949g, 950g, 951a exemplary 925e, 949g, 950g, 951a for the Church 898i foretold by Christ 619f, 620ace, 621h, 670g, 691c, 704e, 705ce, 710a, 719ab, 720ab, 733ae, 734a, 735f, 739g-i, 752a, 754g, 755ad, 762d, 764ab, 765a, 768bcf Herod Antipas and 754e, 770b
Our Lady and 85k, 86jk, 742g mob's behaviour 721h, 741c, 772b
Our Lord's prayer during 343d, 345b, 722d, 742d, 772a primary importance of 768a (the) sacred wounds 547i, 552d, 553b,
939c
(the) scarlet robe 538h, 722a, 741f
(the) scourging and mocking 721h, 445i, 721h, 722a, 741df, 770b, 808d,
809a
(the) youth who fled naked 725b, 740d, 763f, 807e

PASSOVER, Pasch 103a, 169, 175j, 199f, 216cd, 303c, 360g, 362g, 395a, 714g, 719a, 732h, 758e (see also Paschal Lamb) and Azymes 113gf, 169ah, 719d and the Last Supper, Passion 83c, 113g, 719d, 739de, 768bc, 802b, 823a, 833f, 872g
bitter herbs 169e, 719f blood on the doorposts 169Jg, 642c, 967b Chalice of Benediction 720a (see also Blessing)
Christ our Passover 40a, 169i, 644h, 649d, 768b, 793c (see also Lamb of God)

(PASSOVER) cups of wine at 720ab, 739d date of 83g, 768b development of rite 169a-c, 216c, 292i, 360gi, 362g, 493c exclusion of uncircumcised, etc. 106f, 169i Galilean date of 719d, 768b Hallel hymn 362g, 720c, 739di hour of sacrifice contested 169e in NT times 169e, 360gi, 362g, 719e, 720a linked with Pentecost 193t loins girt for journey 758e, 950c name of feast 113f, 169d, 287p paschal amnesty 741c paschal sauce 739d, 802h paschal sheaf 113h, 193s some historic OT passovers 113g, 280m, 287p standing at 739f temple traders at 765d, 766b type of Calvary and Mass 163h, 169di, 768b whited sepulchres at 714g wine ceremonies at 768c

PASTORAL EPISTLES 641 l, 661b-d, 905e, 918-20 (see also Timothy, Titus)

Apostolic Fathers and 919c authenticity 51 l-o, 918f-919c, 921c date 51 l-o, 661f, 918c (the) ministry in 919f-920c, 951f style, vocabulary of 918h-919b

PATERNAL ADVICE 305c

PATERNITY, acknowledgment of 154hi, 320 l legal paternity, see Joseph spiritual paternity 797i-k

PATROS, see Phatures

PATRULUM, The 722b, 813c, 910a

PATIENCE 42a, 317b-k, 398c, 680j, 938c, 942d, 946eg, 948e, 949dg, 950i, 953c, 969cj (see also God, Job)

PATMOS 776g, 781j

PATRIARCHS, The 59, 60a, 125d-g, 484 l, 857d
ages, longevity of 32 l, 125d, 134c, 140b-f, 149p, 152j altar prayers of 106a altars raised by 106ac antediluvian 138bcd, 140be, 146g, 148c, 283a
customary laws of 59h, 139g, 150c, 151g, 152j, 153e, 156kl daughter's rights 79k historicity of 45gh, 59hi, 79jk, 104g, 105a, 135 lm, 139-40 husbandry of 139d, 318c idolatry and 59d, 106h importance of 104g in heaven 759b laws of 128 merits, prayers of 642f monotheists 105a-c morality of 106d names of 59h polygamy of 110h primogeniture, birth-right 218g reign of 104-6, 113f, 150a, 151i, 154b, 213d
ritual of 106a sacrifices of 106a-c, 146a, 147b, 151a, 154o, 318c, 320c sanctify Israel 859ef sanctuaries of 318c semi-nomadic 59g, 113f, 139d, 152k, 153hn, 156i sins of 106h, 139h status of wives of 79k times of 45gh, 59, 139cd tribal interpretation of 59i twelve 159a vows 318c weaknesses and virtues of 106h

PATRIOTISM, Christian 857d, 925f

PATRISTICS 5e, 6cd (see also Fathers)

PATROBAS 863g

PATROS, Phatures 428o, 464f, 488df

PAUL, Apocalypse of 94j

PAUL, St 631c, 663-9, 776g, 818d, 823c, 829f, 868d, 929c, 930aef (see also Christology)
and Agrippa II 842g-j, 890d and Apollos 839e (see also Apollos) and Felix 842a-d and Festus 831a, 842e-j, 890d and Gallio 81ce, 839c and Our Lady 896h and Roman Government 660t, 843a, 861cd and St Barnabas 831g, 833a-e, 834b-835, 836b, 837a, 893g, 918e and St James 841bcd, 895bfg, 946b, 960b and St John 653i, 895e-g and St Luke 667fg, 744c-e, 745ij, 746ef, 747f, 748b, 751bc, 757ad, 759b, 761b, 762e, 763d, 766e and St Mark 725ab, 834cd, 837a, 924e and St Peter 606ab, 657op, 831g, 832d, 836g, 837a, 893g, 895abe-h, 896c and St Stephen 828b, 87a, 834d, 841ef and the Sanhedrin 841i and Silas 837a, 908: (see also Silas) and the Twelve 641c, 643c, 667de, 831g, 836, 837a, 841bcd, 895a-g and Timothy (q.v.) 659e, 905d (the) apologist 40i, 633c, 648f, 834e, 835c, 838d, 839j, 857b apostle of the Gentiles 115g, 633b, 636f, 669ab, 831aeg, 833c, 834a, 841g, 843a, 859e, 863b, 895fg, 901ab, 914c,
921f apostolic call, commission 656e, 657c, 664f, 831cg, 834a, 869a, 894g, 895a apostolic life and work 656c, 871h-872b, 876b, 887b-l, 888a-d apostolic status of 831a, 863c, 865ahi, 866a, 869a, 873i, 874c, 875g-j, 881a, 890g-k, 893f, 894g, 895abf, 918g appeals to Caesar 660t, 744ef, 842f, 843h at Antioch in Pisidia 3c, 834d-k, 895hh at Antioch on the Orontes 631c, 833a-eh, 835e, 836abg, 839c at Athens 40i, 633c, 838b-g, 876c, 882g, 914c
at Beroea 838b at Caesarea 815c, 840h, 841am, 842, 844g, 898b
at Corinth 81ce, 633d, 676g, 816c, 838b, 839a-c, 840a, 844h, 864gh, 870a, 876a, 882e, 890i, 914de at Damascus 676fg, 831ef, 891d at Derbe 835e at Ephesus 81f, 632a, 816c, 819a, 820d, 839c-j, 840c-f, 863h, 864hi, 867h, 876a, 881j, 882f, 883c, 898c, 909c, 918c, 919h at Iconium 835a at Jerusalem 657p, 676fg, 725a, 831g, 833c, 836, 841a-l, 842i, 893d, 895bc-g, 981e (see also Councils) at Lystra 835a-d, 891a at Parga, Perge 835e at Philippi 81e, 816a, 820f, 837d-h, 876a, 905cd, 915c at Rome 774cf, 815a, 819a, 820f, 841aj, 843ag-i, 882 l, 898b, 899a, 905e, 909d, 918ci, 919b, 949e at Tarsus 831g, 833c, 837a, 838c at Thessalonica 81e, 816c, 838a, 914c, 915b at Troas 652fg, 820c, 837c, 840b, 904f at Tyre 819a, 820f, 840gh attitude to death 840c, 887ij, 906c, 914k, 924d baptism and confirmation of 650g, 831e, 841f
birth, birthplace 94j, 663b, 828b, 831g, 895b (see also Tarsus) boasting 656e, 849j, 875g, 876a, 883c, 890g-891, 906c
bonds, imprisonment 661f, 666d-j, 667h, 744ef, 815a-c, 837fg, 841-3, 844g, 898b, 901b, 904ef, 905de, 906b,

909d, 910a, 911d-f, 913d, 918cd, 923de, 924de, 949e (PAUL, St) Book of Wisdom 388dghk, 389f, 390af, 393f character, genius, personality 41c, 656cd, 668b-f, 669ab, 831c, 840dfh, 843cd, 863c, 865hi, 867e-g, 868de, 871i, 875ag, 887bj, 891b, 893b, 914f, 918hi, 921c, 923a, 927e, 928f Christ appears to 641d, 831a-c, 839b, 841g chronology of 81c, 675f, 676fg, 744f, 777g, 831afg, 835a, 839bg, 841a, 842d, 844g, 891e, 893d, 895c, 898b, 914e, 929b church organization 820d, 835e, 914cf, 916d, 918g, 919f-920c circumcision 665b-e, 837b, 841c, 893cef, 894g, 895e, 914f, 918d citation of Job 318j cloak 924e collection for Jerusalem Church 637a, 660q, 725a, 816c, 839i, 841b, 842b, 844g, 863dej, 866g, 882de, 889a-j, 891i, 895g contribution to Christian Theology 633b, 635b, 641e-l, 643a, 644e, 645bh, 646e, 647a, 662de, 850e conversion of 38b, 633d, 641cdfj, 656e, 664a-e, 676fg, 777g, 801g, 817d, 829f, 831a-c, 832c, 841fi, 842hi, 875h, 881e, 887fg, 893g, 895, 964a desires to visit Rome 816c, 839i, 844ef, 846a, 863d devotion to OT 101f, 102a
 dichotomy and trichotomy 916e ecstasies, visions, revelations 662e, 664h, 665g, 666e, 817d, 819g, 831bg, 834a, 841gj, 843c, 891cef, 893g, 914i, 916a, 921c education, Rabbinic and Hellenist background 646e, 662e, 663bc, 823c, 827c, 838cd, 841f, 842h, 857b, 864i, 869e, 870f, 890g, 905e eloquence 662c, 667j, 870ef, 893b, 898h escapes from Damascus 831f, 891de eschatology 38c, 52d-f, 660a, 671np, 715b, 861h, 874d, 881, 882, 908a, 910b, 914df-l, 915bde, 916a-c, 917adf, 922a, 924ad, 932d, 941b, 942b, 954g eucharistic teaching, regulations 637b, 644gj, 652c-h, 653a-f, 720a, 825a, 878f, 905f excommunication of 654b exegesis of OT 3c, 40i, 181j, 656c, 662e, 779f, 834g, 842hij, 846h, 849n-p, 850e, 857o, 858ceg, 877a-d, 887i-e, 894f, 895i, 897a, 907d, 921g, 928e, 934a-f, 935i-36b eye trouble 831e, 897i farewell to the Presbyters 660p, 819a, 820df, 840c-f fellow-workers 668a, 837a filled, guided by Holy Spirit 639ad, 834ac, 837a, 839i, 840cg good example 633d, 907g (a) Hebrew of the Hebrews 841f, 890 l, 907f, 923a hymn to Charity 879f-880a in 'Arabia' 831fg, 893b in Cilicia 837b, 895a (see also Tarsus) in Crete 631f in Macedonia 840a, 905d (see also Philippi) in N. Galatia ? 837c in S. Galatia 834d, 836a, 837bc, 839d, 893c-f, 914f instructed by the Twelve 641c, 662e, 825a, 881d, 934b Jewish plots to kill 831f, 840a, 841k
 (and the) Jews 665ag, 667h, 668c, 834j, 835aj, 839bc, 840a, 841e-l, 842i, 848g, 863d, 864gh, 907fg, 914cd, 915d, 918d
 (and the) Judaizers 641c, 665b-e, 667e, 836a-c, 841b, 862e, 863i, 893e-h, 894efh, 895ach, 896d, 897b, 906b, 907ig, 914f, 918e

(PAUL, St) knowledge of Gospel, words, deeds of Christ 615a, 641c, 661i, 678a, 745ij, 746ef, 747f, 748b, 751bc, 757ad, 759b, 761b, 762e, 763d, 766e, 840f, 841i, 860f, 861ae, 862m, 914i, 915de, 916a-c, 937c
 (and the) Law 101b, 402e, 645 l-n, 663c, 664f, 666h, 668c, 669ab, 763d, 841cdf, 874d, 875c, 876c, 887ce, 893fh, 894a-f, 909g, 914f, 921b, 939c, 946b love of souls, pastoral devotion 645j, 668ef, 837ah, 840c, 841e, 863g, 875g, 876bc, 886hi, 892ae, 908ab, 914f LXX (his copy of) 661i marks of the Lord Jesus 897e martyrdom 667c, 744g method of composition 661h-i miracles of 834c, 835bd, 840b, 905d miraculous punitive power 892de missionary journey I 631e, 665a, 834-5, 893cd, 894g, 895h, 897e, 918d missionary journey II 41b, 631e, 665fg, 815c, 837-39c, 893c, 914ce, 915a, 951h missionary journey III 631e, 666a-c, 815c, 839d-840, 893c, 904f, 905d, 918e missionary journeys, later 667ab, 918c missionary, pastoral methods 40i, 633dc, 656e, 667fgh, 838d, 874a, 876bc, 887k, 915c, 918i, 919f moral and spiritual conflict 831b, 853cdh-l mysticism 641e, 852h, 854eh, 855b, 898j, 909gi, 914f name for Christians 656a, 831d, 842h, 845i, 869a, 906a, 910a Nazarene vow and 839c, 841d non-Pauline churches 844ef, 863d, 905e, 909ci, 910a old age of 918gh oral teaching 662c (and the) pagan mysteries 645d, 652ce, 662e, 846c, 862bc, 908b parables of 859f, 871d-f, 879c-e patriotism of 857d persecutor of the Church 654b, 827c, 831a, 895a, 907f, 923a personal appearance 663d, 890d personal friends at Rome 843g, 844e, 863g (the) Pharisee 645i, 662e, 827c, 841cfi, 842h, 843h, 857b, 895a, 905e, 907f physical infirmities 744c, 891cg, 897i physiological concepts of 898 l poetry 855i, 856i, 879f predestination of 831e, 895a proof-texts 846h, 858a relations with Hellenism 667de riot in the temple 81g, 841e (a) Roman citizen 588f, 663b, 665f, 666e, 834c, 837fh, 841hi, 842cf, 843b, 844e, 845c, 891a, 905d Saul 728c, 829f, 834c scourged 837fh, 888bc, 890m, 905d shipwrecked 652gh, 814d, 820cf, 843b-f, 891a slave of Christ Jesus 669c-e (and) slaves, slavery 874ab, 878e, 904b, 913c, 922f, 925c, 926d soldier guards 905e, 906b sources of his teaching 662e, 831b, 842i speeches, sermons of 656e, 665g, 666dh, 667h, 819a, 820d, 834e-l, 835c, 838d-g, 840c-f, 841gi, 842bh-j, 843i, 895i spiritual gifts, charismata (q.v.) 639 stoned 835d, 891a suffers for the Gospel 831e, 890k-891b, 897e, 908b, 911d-f, 914c, 923d tent-maker, workman apostle, 584m, 633df, 656e, 660op, 663d, 665g, 839bg, 865i, 866a, 875g, 876ab, 890hi, 891i, 915c, 923f testimony to the Resurrection 641d, 834g, 838f, 841i, 842bhi, 881de trials at Rome 606e, 633g, 815b, 831e, 924f use of Divine names 907d visit to Spain 631f, 863de, 929b

(PAUL, St) women helpers of 660g yoke-fellow 908a
 PAULA 2bc
 PAULINE EPISTLES, The 41g, 511-o, 641e-l, 661b-662e, 666aj, 667abei, 905e (see also Letter-writing, Pastorals) and Acts 815b, 816bc, 817a, 825ab, 834ef, 835ce, 836, 837h, 838a, 839g, 840cef, 841i, 842b, 905d, 908a and St Matthew's Gospel 615a, 641c, 661j, 678a, 841i, 914i, 915de, 916a-c and St Stephen's oration 829a-c, 834e apocryphal epistles 94bh, 661c autograph passages 77f, 581c, 661h, 882h, 892f, 897e, 908c, 913d, 917f captivity epistles 645c, 661bc, 898bck, 905e, 909d, 910a cited by St John 957a copies kept by author 661i dictated 37c, 77f, 581c, 661h, 778d, 870a, 844d, 858g, 908c, 910a, 913d, 919b, 927e difficulty, obscurity 662d, 954g doctrinal presuppositions of 650ai, 662ce, 877ef, 878g, 905f, 907a doxologies 640o, 857e, 863k (an) encyclical, circular, letter 898c-f, 909d equated with OT in NT 954g form of 661g, 933a Kingdom of God in 788a known to St Peter 37c, 662d, 919c, 949ce, 954g literary and non-literary 662c lost epistles 661c, 866h, 873a NT evidence for collection of 16a, 17a, 954g occasional products 16a, 868c order of 661ef papyri parallels 77f salutations 640o, 661g, 845a, 894g, 898c, 904g, 908, 910a, 913d scriptural quotations 661i secretarial interjections 661h style, vocabulary 661h, 662cd, 667j, 834e, 847a, 865i, 867g, 870ef, 886i, 887a, 890dg, 898h, 915c, 918f-919b, 927e, 928e PAULINE PRIVILEGE 654i, 660f, 873hi (see also Divorce)
 PAVEMENT, Lithostrotos 81h, 721f, 777e, 808ab, 809d PAVNING, see Pledges PEACE 692h, 715c (see also Kiss, Messiah, Messianic Age, Sacrifice) depends on Christ and Church 102m, 535 l of, with God, Christ 272b, 758g, 832h, 846c, 850bc, 862k, 873i, 900f, 902a, 904g, 910a, 911b, 913b Pax Romana 597j, 598fk, 601g Pax tecum 692h peacemakers 685f through keeping God's Law 474b PEACOCKS 269i
 PEARLS 687f, 700b, 970j PEASANTRY, Palestinian 267j, 584kn
 PEDAGOGUES 872c
 PEDIAIAH, Phadaia 283e, 291a
 PEKAH, Phacee 64c, 65b, 121f, 124dk, 266gi, 277j-l, 420a, 425ir PEKAHIAH, Phaccia of Israel 277j
 PEKOD 467d
 PELAGIANISM 642j, 845j
 PELATIAH, Pheltias 483n
 PELETHITES, Phelathi 63h, 259i, 261f, 264a, 267bk, 269i, 276h PELLA 581j, 74g, 118h, 716a, 737h
 PELUSIUM 488f
 PENAL CODE 182c, 193a
 PENAL SUBSTITUTION, see Substitution PENANCE 113k, 114f, 523fg, 654a-c (see also Affliction, Atonement, Fasting) by purchase of sacrificial victims 111g, 114f laying on of hands in 654b national 523ce

(PENANCE) repentance 695a, 727b (see also Repentance) sacrament of 201g, 340f, 812g, 922c, 948h, 956cf

PENIEL, Phanuel 64e, 155ab

PENNY A DAY 701c, 705f, 709g, 760d, 793d, 801c

PENS 581c, 662a

PENTAPOLIS, Philistine 57e, 105c, 150d, 234a, 250d, 459m, 465e, 523k, 526e, 542g, 550e

Hellenization of 406i

PENTATEUCH 12b, 32e, 41e, 128, 229r, 237g, 287y, 857d (see also Genesis, etc., Law, Wellhausen)

Biblical Commission 46 l, 47g, 48a-l, 53f-h, 211b characteristics 132-3, 135 l composition, sources 6h, 37ji, 44d, 45b-dn, 46abim, 132e, 133d, 135a-t, 162f, 337

Egyptian colouring in 131ef grouping of laws and narrative 132b-d historicity 59, 135 lo, 138-40 in Jewish liturgy 12c

later glosses 134b linguistic peculiarities, archaisms 20a, 134a literary genre of 33a

Mosaic authenticity substantial 34c, 44dg, 45a-d, 46 lm, 47g, 48a-d, 53i-k, 79g, 88a, 130-t, 134, 135a-t, 137gh, 162e, 184b, 211b, 223b, 396bg

(the) name 21i, 127

non-Mosaic elements 33a, 82f, 112g, 128, 130a, 131e, 132efg, 133bc, 134, 135ck-t, 162e-f, 173f, 184b, 211b, 216c, 217e, 478j

OT and NT names for 127

pre-Mosaic legal parallels 79g pre-Mosaic ritual parallels 79i repetitiousness of 132ef, 135c use of divine names in 133acd, 135bc varied style of 132a, 963a world's first great historical work 132a

PENTECOST, Weeks, Feast of 113hl, 193ty, 216cd, 303c, 304a, 351c, 389b, 579c, 631c, 788b, 823a, 882f birthday of the Church 86d, 823ab, 844j coming of the Holy Ghost 676g, 716e, 817a, 819d, 822a-c, 823a-c (see also Tongues) discrepancy in number of victims 113i pentecostal loaves 113h

PENT HOUSES 274b

PENUEL, Phanuel of Gad 57j, 242ak, 245e

PEOPLE OF THE LAND, The 275i, 588d

Christ and 588d, 753f, 758c, 759f, 760a, 765a, 766g, 772b despised by Pharisees 584i, 587cdf, 588d, 592b, 751i, 759f, 763c, 796 l

Hellenization of 589f true piety of 65c, 68c, 588d, 753f, 826g

PEPI I, Pharaoh 118f

PERAFA 58fh, 71g, 72a, 74fg, 584d, 620c, 701ab, 708a, 756a, 759ce, 799 l

PEREZ, Phares 156 l, 247j

PERFECTION 1g, 2, 41c, 114d, 189j, 686e, 907fg, 909i, 913ab, 920e, 946eg (see also Consummation) commanded by God 106e, 114d, 686e counsels of 709cd, 735d final perfection of Christ 930e, 935a, 937c, 939d (see also Session)

final perfection of man, Christians 932c, 939bc, 941c, 942a, 944c

PERFUMES 384f, 385fgkm

PERGA, Perge 834d, 835e

PERGAMUM 569a, 570a, 572b, 965a

PERIZZITES, Pherezites 57d, 134b, 151f, 239b

PERJURY 185g, 213a, 393f, 686c

PERSECUTION 102b, 361m, 387h, 410e, 411e, 491i, 511behj, 552a, 554b, 631d, 633g, 642g, 692h, 693abc, 730f, 735f, 752h, 805ab, 833ae-h, 834k, 835ad, 837f, 839b, 860f, 861d, 914cd, 915d, 942d, 945f, 949cd, 951e, 963b, 966g, 967c, 968cd, 969a-g (see also Anathema, Diocletian, Domitian, Martyrs, Nero)

(PERSECUTION) benefits the Church 631d, 830a, 831a, 833ab, 906b blessed are the persecuted 685f by Jezebel 112d (see also Baal)

by surrounding heathen 564e faith, confidence under 693bc, 763ab inspired speech promised in 767e, 824a, 826b, 828b non-resistance under 969c persecution-time 968ci, 969a-c prayer in 763ab resisted by charity 752h to be withstood unto death 563e under Antiochus IV 68c, 959g, 114n, 115d, 174e, 360i, 413h, 453c, 503 lm, 504a, 505ef, 506bf, 507qr, 511f, 561, 562, 574a, 576a ft., 968ci

under Manasses 280b

PERSEPOLIS 420e, 577g (see also Susa)

PERSEUS AT PYDNA 567b

PERSEVERANCE 267g, 401a, 648 l, 671c, 797i, 927d, 942-4 final perseverance 693a, 715d, 763b, 850b-f in prayer 757c, 763ab, 913c

PERSIANS, Persian Empire 122c-h, 125e, 282n, 288ef, 289c, 308eh, 420e, 545ip, 550de absolute monarchy 311cd and Palestine 290g, 543cf annals, chronicles of 310cl, 312d collective punishment among 110g constitution of Darius I 122fg

Court etiquette 295d, 311g decree on Feast of Azymes 78c decrees irrevocable 310cj, 311c demonology 304e disintegration of 543d, 545k drinking custom 311c excessive reverences to rulers 310c, 311f, 312a

Greek wars 289c, 310m, 311e, 544ac, 545iklp, 597b introduction of cavalry 218d invade Greece 289c, 310m, 311e

Jewish and Persian Angelologies 307c

Jewish officials at Court 292g, 293a, 295bc, 298c king inaccessible 311g, 312cf king's cup bearers 295c king's tax 296e

king's winter and summer seat 292d, 295b money 290p

palace conspiracies 311f religion, see Zoroastrianism satraps, satrapies 122g, 290d, 291i, 292bc, 293j, 295dk, 543f, 544a seven counsellors 307c, 311c

Tirshatha, Athersatha 290fg weights 82g

PERSIS 863g

PERSONALITY, PERSONS, THE DIVINE 316bd

Christ 907cd

the Holy Ghost 817a, 818ab, 826f

PERSONAL RELIGION 596f, 632c, 634, 794f (see also Piety, Dispositions)

PERSONIFICATION, OT, Jewish 41c, 313a, 341c, 592c of God's Spirit 389b, 391j, 592c of the Word of God 388g, 395b, 592c of Wisdom, indexed separately

PERSONS, Fr Robert 29i

PERVERSION OF NAMES, see Substitutions

PESHITTA, Syriac Version 23c, 24hi, 25j, 26d, 783f

PESSIMISM 633f

PETER, Apocryphal Acts of 94i

PETER, St 414d, 619a, 657i-q, 664h, 665e, 667d, 727h, 751d-f, 776e, 815d, 816d, 818bd, 822-7, 832, 833afg, 875j and St James 831g, 895g

and St John 825c, 826ab

(PETER, St) and St Mark 35c, 606bc, 607b-d, 614c, 679cd, 715i, 751e, 951h, 953e and St Paul 606ab, 657op, 667d, 831g, 893g, 895abe-h, 896c, 951b, 952d apostle of the circumcision 895fg arrested in Jerusalem 675d, 819d, 820fg, 826ab, 833fg, 951h at Antioch 657o, 819e, 833ag, 836g, 837a, 895h at Corinth ? 869f, 875j at Jerusalem 657p, 822-7, 831g, 833fg, 836dg, 960b (see also Councils) at Rome 606c, 819e, 833g, 843a, 844fj, 906b, 949e at the Transfiguration 705b, 733d, 740a, 755ab, 951f, 952gh, 953f bilingual 584g, 832h

call of 684c, 724f

centre of unity 819e, 895gi character of 613b, 614c, 701f, 720d, 739i, 740gi, 751f, 802d, 824a, 826b, 832f, 895hi, 952d

Christ prays for 657 ln, 764a, 768e

Christ washes feet of 802d defends Christ with sword 720e, 740cj, 777e, 807d (see also Malchus) delegated although sovereign 819d delivered by an angel 725a, 820g, 827a, 833g denial of Christ 657 lm, 720cfi, 724f, 739i, 740ij, 758c, 768e, 769d, 813d, 826b disciple of the Baptist 694d entertains Christ at home 689f fellow presbyter 656f, 951f first meets Christ 785b fisherman 55h, 636b, 751f flashes of inspiration 339b follows Christ to trial 720f, 740g forgiven 657m, 743b

Galilaean speech, accent 720i, 740j, 949c

(and) Gentiles 633a, 636f, 657m, 819cde, 824f, 825f, 830c, 832c-k, 833b, 836b great confession 613b, 616h, 619f, 622b, 644c, 657k, 701f, 704ab, 705abf, 733ad, 754dfg, 793h, 795i, 895af humility of 613b, 614c, 656f, 724f, 733a, 740i, 751f, 951f impetuosity of 802d, 832f in Gethsemane, Gethsemani, 720de, 740abcj infallible, indefectible 657 lp, 746e, 764a, 768e, 836de keys (gift of the) 612e, 657kn, 704cd, 706f, 964e knowledge of Pauline Epistles 662d, 919c, 949ce, 954g

Law, Circumcision, etc. and 101a, 820e, 823c, 825ab, 828b, 832bc, 895hi martyred 94i, 725d, 740i, 744f, 781j, 812a, 813e, 952dfg, 953e, 960g miracles of 631c, 632e, 819d, 825c, 832b mother-in-law 689f

native town, house 689f, 692e, 705f, 786e

Petrine faction at Corinth 864i, 869f power to bind and loose 657k (see also Apostles) praised by Christ 704b, 724f preaching, oral teaching 3c, 35a, 606bc, 607b-d, 608, 614c, 615a, 651d, 679cd, 722d, 724c-g, 726c, 816b, 817ac-e, 818a, 819d, 823b, 824a-f, 825d-f, 826b, 832h-k, 834e prepares the upper room 719e, 739d, 768b primacy, pre-eminence of 612e, 619a, 624de, 631b, 657i-q, 692d, 704cde, 705g, 706bf, 707a, 724f, 728i, 733a, 734b, 740bi, 746e, 751f, 752f, 758e, 768e, 812a, 813d, 819de, 822d, 826f, 827b, 832c, 836de, 844f, 869f, 893g, 895gh protests his loyalty 720cd, 739d, 740b, 768f, 769a, 802c, 813d

Quo Vadis ? 94i

(PETER, St) repents and weeps 740j improved, rebuked 619f, 657j, 701f, 704e, 720e, 724f, 733a, 740ab, 754f resurrection appearance to 657mn, 774bc, 881d, 951f rock foundation of the Church 613b, 624d, 625f, 631b, 657knq, 704bc, 706f, 768e, 785b, 813d, 895h runs to sepulchre 531f, 743b, 773ac, 776f, 812c
 sent to prepare Passover 739d, 776f shepherd of Christ's flock 624de, 657mn, 812a, 951f
 Simon called Cephas, Peter 631c, 657q, 692d, 704bc, 724e, 728c, 785b, 869f, 895h, 950a strengthening his brethren 657 ln, 768e successors 658ab use of Mt 614c, 615a, 679c use of secretaries 37c vicar of Christ 657n vision at Joppa 820f, 832f visit to Samaria 816d walks on the waters 701ef, 724f weaknesses of 701f, 895hi wife 689f, 875i witness of 818d, 819d
PETER, St, First Epistle of 631f, 650n, 656f, 725b, 949-51 and book of Enoch (Enoch) 951b and Peter's speeches in Acts 816b, 826bc, 832j and 2 Peter 951f, 952bdj, 954c and the Pauline Epistles 858a, 949ce date 949e ministry in 919h, 951f on the descent into hell 815b, 951ab on 'the last time' 957a, 950c, 957a Petrine authorship 949bd style 37c, 949ci
PETER, St, Second Epistle 636b, 720d, 952-4 and Jude 953h, 960d authorship 35a, 37c, 952b-dj, 953e Canonically 952b-df, 954g on inspiration 35a on Pauline obscurities 662d, 954g quotes 1 Timothy 1:16 919c style 37c, 952bj
PETER DAMIAN, St 3g, 8c
PETER LOMBARD 617a
PETER OF ANTIOCH 36a
PETHOR 206d
PETITION, fasting as 586b PETRA 56c, 277b, 287h, 530in (see also Sela)
PHACCIA, see Pekahiah
PHACEE, see Pekah
PHADAIA, Pedahai 283e, 291a
PHANUEL, see Peniel, Penuel PHARA, Pharathon 568b
PHARA, Phurah 242h
PHARAN, see Paran PHARAOH'S (see also Amenhotep, Ramesses, Shishak, Thutmose, etc.) brother and sister marriages 390b, 393f, 842g
 Cushite Dynasty 420d, 431k worshipped as divine 287aa, 388e, 393e, 488c
PHARATHON, Phara 568b
PHARES, see Perez
PHARISEES, The 70d, 71h, 92km, 93h, 100a, 169e, 376e, 379d, 570a, 579e, 584c, 585c, 587d-f, 618f, 619e, 620b-f, 625b, 640b, 643jj, 682gh, 685b, 690f, 691bcd, 696, 697, 702, 703g, 708b, 711bi, 712e-713, 714bc, 732a, 760c-f, 761d, 763cd, 765b, 766-67a, 826c (see also Assideans, Parables, Rabbis, Scribes)
 and Jewish nationalism 71h, 587e and John the Baptist 753f, 766bf and proselytism 590d and the Hasmonians 70d, 93h, 585c, 587cde and the masses 584i, 587cdf, 588d, 592b, 751i, 759f, 763c, 796 l

(PHARISEES) and the Romans 736g,
 766d and the Sadducees 587cf, 588a, 766e asceticism, fasting 728d, 752a attitude to priesthood, ritual, sacrifice 588a avaricious 761d, 767a belief in angels 587d belief in Resurrection 587d, 713ab, 766e, 841i
 Christian converts from 596g, 772c, 836bg, 893h, 895a (see also Paul) entertain our Lord 753gh, 758b, 759e exclusiveness of 587f, 590ad, 592b, 763c formal legalism 13c, 100a, 115h, 584i, 587df, 592b, 619e, 758b, 761d, 763cd, 853k, 895a (see also Righteousness) hypocrisy of 697bf, 714b-i, 721b, 732bh, 736g, 758bc, 759e Josephus on 763c on Free Will and Predestination 587d, 592a on the Kingdom of God 587e, 759ef opposition to Hellenism 589f, 592b ostentation 596f, 686fi, 714b, 736m pride, self-righteousness 586c, 685bi, 697f, 728c, 732b, 761d, 763c scruples of 691ab spiritual, learned aristocracy 584m, 587f zeal for scripture 12e, 587f PHAROS ISLAND 23h
PHARPAR, Pharpahar 274h
PHARURIM 280k
PHASAEI 71ab PHASE FOR PASSOVER 113f, 287p (see also Passover)
PHASELIS 572b
PHASGA, see Pisgah PHASSUR, son of Emmer 458k son of Melchias 463ae PHATRES, Pathros, see Patros PHELFTHI, see Pelethites
PHELTIAS, Pelatiah 483n
PHENICE 843b
PHEREZITES, see Perizzites
PHEROAS 71g
PHILADELPHIA 96, 965d (see also Rabba)
PHILADELPHIA, in USA 30f, 31c PHILEMON 18e, 660i, 661fh, 666j, 905e, 909cd, 926
PHILETUS 923g
PHILIP, St 589e, 692d, 701c, 785bc, 793d, 801e, 803f
 brother of Antipas 701a, 731f brother, the Deacon, Evangelist 659a, 790d, 815cd, 820g, 828a, 830b-e, 832c, 840h, 928d his daughters 828a, 840h PHILIP, Governor of Jerusalem 576b,
 577b
PHILIP, the Regent 565c, 577h, 578ad,
 580b
PHILIP, the Tetrarch 587f, 72a, 73b, 691a, 701ac, 704a, 733a, 793b
PHILIP II OF MACEDON 905c
PHILIP V OF MACEDON 510f, 567b
PHILIP NERI, St 803c
PHILIPPI 70h, 81e, 598h, 602h, 665f, 744e, 837c-h, 840a, 864e, 883c, 886k, 890f, 905cd
 St Luke at 837ce, 905def
PHILIPPIANS, Epistle to 661c, 837h, 905-8 authenticity 905b
 date of 905e
 doctrine of 641i, 905ef written at Rome 905e PHILISTINES, Philistia 54h, 55a, 62a, 63e-g, 120e-i, 121ehi, 152k, 170a, 238deik, 239c, 244, 245a, 250b, 251ab, 252j-l, 254c, 255b, 256c-m, 257d, 258h, 263d, 271d, 275e, 277f, 278b, 279b, 284gk, 286bb, 355f, 406i, 420d, 423j, 465e, 466h, 526ce, 530g, 542g, 545i, 550e, 563d, 565d, 569g, 578a (see also Crete)

(PHILISTINES) and Dan 236f, 245c as a local term in OT 120ik campaign of Uzziah, Ozias 65d, 420a capture Ark 178c, 250d-g, 353c conquered by Assyria 66a, 279ab, 430a-c, 431 l, 432h conquered by David 57k, 244a, 259g, 437e conquered by Egypt 267g disarm Israel 252k divination of 423j five city federation, see Pentapolis from Caphtor, Keftiu, Crete 57d, 120h, 465e, 487e, 525d, 528i give name to Palestine 54c iron introduced by 120g, 228a, 239c mercenaries of David 259i, 261f religion of 244k, 250d, 411ad, 693b uncircumcised 120i, 244g PHILO 3a, 5a, 23h, 34cd, 35i, 38b, 172g, 395c, 560f, 573d, 588g, 589g, 604f, 808b, 857b, 862b, 870f, 890d, 934e and the Divine Attributes 592c his embassy to Rome 75d, 75b Logos Doctrine 388g, 607 l, 642g, 653c, 781b
PHILOLOGUS 863g
PHILOLOGY 32 l PHILOSOPHY (see also Aristotle, Plato, Stoic, Epicurean, etc.) and Miracle 605c and religion 590c, 591bd Greek 314i, 316dg, 376c, 388bg, 391f, 393b, 398d, 599e-g, 601b-d, 624c, 838c, 907a
 Hegel 44b, 605d, 606ab, 616b Kant 605d, 606e of History 211a, 225ab, 226f, 238el, 239e Ritschl 606f, 608d Schliermacher 604f, 606e word used once in Bible 912a PHILOXENUS, Philoxenian Bible 25ai PHINEES, Phinehas 166f, 179a, 207b, 208g, 245j, 283ce, 562g PHINEHAS, Phinees, see Hophni, Ophni PHILEGON 863g
PHIOBE 844h, 863f
PHOENICIA, Phoenicians 57b, 58d-fh, 63h, 118d, 119ef, 120 lm, 121b-d, 122ab, 267mn, 269i, 271f, 281c, 348c, 434e-i, 459m, 487 l, 550d, 631d, 644c, 833b (see also Sidon, Tyre) alphabet of 19hkl, 21g, 80i called Canaan 434h Christ in 703ab coinage 82f, 83a earliest inscription 19 l, 21g, 80i month names 268h religion 114i, 213d, 215a, 226gh, 239f, 270c, 309d, 418g, 448g, 457a, 464f, 598n (see also Canaanites) script of new Biblical MS 80 l seafaring, trade of 63j, 286n, 434e, 487m
PHOENIX, The 329i
PHOGOR, Mount 206m
PHONETICS 20fg, 21b
PHOTINA 789d
PHRAORTES 308i
PHRYGIA, Phrygians 81e, 120g, 834d, 835ab, 839d, 893c, 909b PHUAH, Puah, the midwife 164b PUL, see Pul
PHURAH, Phara 242h
PHURIM, see Purim
PHUTIEL 166f
PHYLAETERIES 169j, 213c, 586b, 612d,
 714b PHYSICIANS 400d, 404f, 751c (see also Luke)
 'heal thyself' 728c, 751c Hippocratic oath 745f religious needs of 404f PI (π), Value of 37g
PIANKHI, Pharaoh 278d, 279g
PIETISM, German 10f PIETY 249de, 302bij, 303b, 406a,

585df-n, 586b, 588d, 592b, 596f, 747e, 748c, 749h, 756f, 770d filial 155h, 158g, 174e, 183j, 398bd, 596c, 660e, 702b, 729e, 732b, 801e, 810f, 904a, 922c, 944b PIGEON'S DUNG 274m PILATE, Pontius 72c, 81h, 340b, 675b, 676bc, 721af-h, 722hi, 740ef, 741i, 808-9e, 829f, 834g, 922g his wife 721g and the superscription 810b (see also Titulus) washes his hands 721h PILGRIMAGE OF LIFE 7d, 272a, 285s, 932cd PILGRIMAGE TO JERUSALEM 103a, 114a, 216c, 270h, 303, 336, 347a, 355c, 361d-g, 362d, 470a, 585a, 586b, 736c, 750a, 765b, 787a hindered by Jeroboam I 112d women exempt from 750a PILLARS, engraved Temple 268k, 965d fiery, cloudy pillar 151e, 176e, 199g, 200b, 202fg, 203jm, 394e, 403b, 425a, 797c, 877a masseboth, cultic pillars 154do, 176bc, 181i, 213d, 214a, 217b, 243c, 270no, 271f, 276e, 286z, 287q, 431h, 456f, 516g, 535i non-idolatrous Yahwist masseboth 213d of the Earth 429c of Hercules 244c painted 492d pillar of salt 152d, 392b Solomon's Hall of 268i
 PINKARD, R. 30b
 PISGAH, Phasga, Mount 205e, 222j
 PISHON, Phison, The River 143g PISIDIA 835e, 893c (see also Antioch) PISTACHIO NUTS 157i
 PISTOIA, Synod of 10d
 PITHOM 60c, 78a, 163bc, 164ab
 PITY 742f, 745f (see also Mercy, Sympathy) PIUS V 338a PIUS VI, Auctorem fidei 10d brief on Bible Study 4h PIUS VII, and Polish Bible sectaries 10g PIUS VIII 10g
 PIUS IX, Ineffabilis Deus 84dh, 85f
Syllabus of 10g
Tuas liberater 47c
 PIUS X 349a
Ad diem illum Illibatae custodiendae 2b, 6e, 47ce Præstantia Scripturæ 47c PIUS XI, Casi Connubii 903d Rerum Ecclesiæ 810e PIUS XII 28d, 99b and versions from originals 28d Divino afflante Spiritu 6acdfg, 8e, 9h, 28b, 32efj, 36g-j, 37g, 38ab, 41df, 45j, 46d-m, 53il, 76b, 81c, 89d, 225c, 301a, 339b, 388f, 616f
In cotidianis precibus 53c, 338b Mystici Corporis Christi 826d, 898k, 900a on Christian reunion 6h the value of archaeology 76b, 81i PIYASSILI OF CARCHEMISH 119j PLACE, meaning Sanctuary 215c
 PLACUARIUM, Ancient attitude to 37h PLACES OF EGYPT, The 32h, 40j, 114a, 132c, 167b-168, 169g, 342a, 392dh, 394b-e, 395, 757f, 967cdeg and natural phenomena 60d, 90b, 91a, 167b poetical description of 167d twofold documentary source 167d PLATAEA, Battle of 311e, 543c, 545k PLATO 34cd, 560f, 581c, 590c, 599f, 601a, 604f, 781b, 838dg, 860g, 918i, 964f and Greek religion 599f and the cardinal virtues 391f doctrine of the soul 378b PLAY UPON WORDS 143f, 144b, 151i, 152a, 153j, 154ok, 159d, 230c, 244j, 305e, 313n, 379c, 400a, 435i, 456b, 459j, 528e, 534d, 538m PLEASURE-SEEKING, Vanity of 314i, 377d PLEDGES ON LOANS 175f, 185g, 219b, 371f, 525g, 526m PLEIADES 322k, 525c, 527g

 PLINY 605c, 681c, 834c, 969e PLOUGH, Ploughing 756b and turning back 272d POETRY, Babylonian 79h, 313 l, 335c Egyptian 313 l, 335c, 358g POETRY, Hebrew 33bdc, 41d, 79i, 313a-n, 335b-e, 527g (see also Acrostics, Canticles, Parallelism, Psalms) aids textual criticism, etc. 241bg, 326k, 328i, 335cd, 338b, 341efj, 422g, 550j ancient poems quoted in OT 313b didactic poems 313d dirge (qinah) 313g, 335d, 469c, 479e, 485 l, 527g erotic, love songs 382fmo, 383a Job 317kl, 318elf, 319fg metre 313h, 319g, 335d of Jesus Christ 612ad, 613b of the Prophets 313c oral tradition 135 l oriental extravagances 384n, 386ef profane, quoted in Bible 335b rhyme 335e rhythm 313g, 335d strophes, stanzas 313l-l, 335e POETRY, Ugaritic 79i, 313 l POISONERS 971h
 POLICE, Jewish Temple 585b
 POLISH BIBLE, Wujek's 10g
 POLIARCHS 81e, 816a, 838a, 914b
 POLITICS 290b, 296i, 660s, 683e, 685e (see also Church and State, Citizenship)
 POLL TAX 82f, 181k, 276j, 585b, 598c, 736g POLLUTION, see Uncleanliness POLYBIUS 816b
 POLYCARP, St 14d, 17a, 35d, 37e, 606b, 607j, 905b, 919c, 955bh, 962h, 964h
 POLYCRATES OF EPHEBUS 607k, 776g, 777b POLYGAMY 110h, 146dj, 192i, 286t, 311e, 386b, 596a, 602a, 685a
 inheritance of wives 218j
 POLYGLOT BIBLES 24ci, 26d POLYTHEISM 44bce, 61c, 79h, 135b, 142d degenerated from Monotheism 45f, 104h
 'Elohim' and 79c Greco-Roman 598o, 599i of Abraham's ancestors 105b, 150a POMEGRANATES 179f, 268k
 POMPEII 152d, 715c, 969g
 POMPEY 70egh, 71g, 93h, 472f, 561b, 584g, 585c, 828b POOL, The Lower, see Siloam POOL, The Upper, see Gihon POOR, The, Poverty 367n, 369bk, 370o, 371aj, 631d, 685d, 694c, 719b, 736n, 739b, 752h, 761c-f (see also Beatitudes, Classes) and riches 400f, 403g, 584k-o, 945gh, 946g, 947cd food of the poor 584o Gospel for the poor 71f, 77f, 584o, 588d, 844i, 864h, 870d, 947c occupations of the poor 584k-o pauperism 660p poor in spirit 389a, 643gl, 660k, 685d, 752i, 946g poor law relief 110g, 163g, 173h, 175f, 194m, 215g, 219b, 602e, 631d, 660mqr, 814d, 825b, 922c (see also Alms, Gleaning) poverty of Jesus, Mary, Joseph 189n, 389e, 545d, 550g, 584ko, 588d, 660 l, 711a, 749g sacrifice of 184c, 185f, 189n, 689c, 711a, 749g, 787b sufferings of the poor 584mn voluntary poverty 660 l POPES, The 658ab

POPILIUS LAENAS 559f
 POPLARS, Torrent of 430g
 POPPAEA 75c, 94h
 POPULATION STATISTICS 61e, 62c, 139d, 163g, 169h, 171b, 176b, 181k, 226d, 280s, 282ff, 285b, 584g, 602f, 682a
 PORPHIRION, The 215f
 PORTA CAPENA, The 843g
 PORTENTS, Heavenly 576a
 POSCA, The Soldier's Vinegar 722e, 742f, 810f (see also Wine)
 POSITIVISM 44j, 616b POSSESSION, see Demoniacal
 POST, Mail 662b, 964f POSTERITY, immortality in, see Immortality punishment of, see Solidarity POST-EXILIC YAHWISM, see Judaism POTTERY, Potter, classification and chronology 80b the divine potter 443d, 458hi, 642c, 831e, 857m Judean jar-handles 55d, 80e the king's potters 283g the Potter's Field 551f, 721c POUCH, ornament (rational) of Judgement 179bcd POUND, The Roman 82h
 POWERS, The Angelic 856j, 909f, 910e, 912c Præparatio Evangelica 122m, 598q, 599b, 633h, 730i, 744c, 781b in Judaism 115h, 584-96 the Greek Language 4a, 14c, 21a, 122m the Roman Empire 597j, 598k the Scriptures 14c (see also Septuagint) PRAETORIAN GUARD, The 905e, 906b, 908c
 PRAETORIUM, The 81h, 721af, 722a, 741e, 742b, 808b PRAGMATISM, Historical 265d-j PRAYER 596f, 640o, 744gk, 820ef, 855ad, 856c (see also Invocation, Lord's Prayer, Miracles, Worship) ablation before 308d, 309m answers to, power of 282r, 283k, 302c, 308n, 531d, 574a, 687g, 757cd, 829f, 946g, 958f (see also Intercession) asceticism, penance and 271 l cheering the downcast 340f, 948g Christian endings 886g confessional prayer 472h contemplation 397c, 640o, 887e daily 596f, 763d dispositions for 374c, 378d, 404c, 745k, 757cd, 951d ejaculatory 296ah, 299d facing Temple 269d, 286k faith and 353a, 736d, 745k, 946g, 958f fasting and 310c, 345f, 509j, 686f, 733f food of soul 350e for all men 920e, 921d formula of prayer in Tobias 304d for pagans 570a, 920e, 921d for priests 343b for repentance, forgiveness 402b for sinners 958f for state, rulers 660a, 921d for the dead 42d, 102d, 115f, 560e, 579e, 920e, 923d for the nation 197g, 350a, 499h-j, 507cd grace won by 397i habitual awareness of God 913c hands outstretched in 325i, 423e, 921f hours of 502d, 820e, 832e improper prayers 330g, 374c, 948a incense and 111a in marriage 950h in public 596f, 686f in the name of Jesus 640o, 803h, 805g in times of joy or sadness 340f, 948g intellect in 880c Jewish 585f, 592c, 596f, 686f, 763c meditation 353a, 536c of Gethsemane 740a of our Lord 671i, 745k, 746e, 750f,

752af, 754f, 755a, 757a, 806 (see also Luke) (PRAYER) of pagans 79h, 271 l, 686g, 859c of saints, martyrs, the righteous 334fg, 642f, 948i, 966dg, 967d of the Pharisee and the Publican 763cd ostentation 686fj, 714b, 736m our Lord on 686f-ig, 736m, 745gk, 752a, 757cd, 763a-d (see also Lord's Prayer) perseverance in 86b, 745k, 757cd, 763ab, 913c posture in 269c, 286k, 350e, 736d, 921f praise, blessing 950b (see also Thanksgivings) private 302bcj, 304dh, 335b protects from sin, temptation 947g psalms as 335b repetitions 400b, 686g revelation in 397m revives faith 353a
 St John Baptist's teaching 752a sin overcome by 397i, 402ef, 947g Solomon's dedicatory 269cd unanswered prayer 330g, 332bc, 471ac wisdom and 397e, 404h PREACHERS, Preaching 40k, 639c, 648dg, 656h, 736d, 756c, 758c, 826bc, 887d, 888c, 923c, 924bc (see also Apostolic) and the Written Word 16a, 923g Council of Trent on 3h deacons 828a-829e
PRE-CANAANITES 59f, 212c, 309o (see also Anak, Rephaim)
PRECEDENCE, Seeking 759e, 763d, 768d
PRECEPTS OF THE SCRIBES, The 586ce PRECIOUS BLOOD, The 176cd, 644gh, 653gh, 720b, 739h, 849ef, 930fg, 932c, 940h, 944c, 949fh, 950a (see also Eucharist)
 the blood of God 840e PRECURSOR, see Fore-runner PREDESTINATION 233c, 388i, 404a, 425m, 525e, 528i, 646d-h, 718g, 735h, 801i, 845f, 856df, 857bg-p, 899a, 916c, 935a (see also Moral Problems, Providence, Will of God)
 and free will 592ab, 923g and the betrayal of Christ 739f, 768c God wills to save all men 921ef grace, freedom and providence 402f, 425n individual and collective 646h of B.V.M. 84cd, 85f of Christ 750j, 845f Thomism on physical premonition 36g to sin and damnation 626b, 646h, 950e PRE-EXISTENCE, of Logos, Wisdom 368n of Messias, Christ 360d, 535g, 641i, 691b, 781d, 782ab, 783e, 784g, 854f, 907b, 933cef, 934ab of soul, excluded 391g of Wisdom 368n, 397 l, 403b PRE-HISTORY, Proto-history, see History
PRE-MOSAIC HEBREW RELIGION 104gh, 105-7, 108a, 113f, 137a-f, 165c, 173g, 187a PREPARATION, see Parasceve PRESBYTERS, see Elders, Priesthood, Ministry
PRE-SCIENTIFIC THOUGHT 141b, 142ab, 143g PRESENCE OF CHRIST 622b, 706g, 908a (see also Real Presence) PRESENCE OF GOD 33a, 706g, 838e, 913c dwelling amidst his people 114b, 180g, 182c, 186a, 545e in heaven 114a local, in Temple, etc. 112b, 114b, 154d, 178b, 215a, 218 l, 269c, 284iu, 285d, 286 l, 385h, 532ae, 549f, 783c (see also Shekinah)
 'where two or three are gathered . . .' 622b PRESUMPTION 214b, 287ji, 373g, 374c, 399b, 400b, 425i, 478gh, 683df, 688c, 735f, 803c, 813d, 948c, 961b

PRIAPUS 271b
PRIDE 149 l, 369d, 400d, 428bfg, 656b, 756d, 763c, 849j, 946h, 972f intellectual pride 838cg, 875acd Jewish 584e, 587f an obstacle to faith 627a of Life 956g
 root of all evil 145ab, 400d PRIESTHOOD, Royal 102o, 248j, 252c, 264e, 270j, 282cc, 287j, 403b, 594ab (see also Hasmoneans, Kings, Melchisedek, Priesthood of Christ)
 of Christians 656a, 949g, 950de, 964c PRIESTHOOD OF CHRIST, The High 633f, 642gj, 647e, 927cd, 928e, 930nef, 935c, 936c-937c, 938c-939d (see also Sacrifice of Christ) after order of Melchisedek 102o, 151a, 339a, 360d, 462h-r, 547c, 548d, 642g, 653f, 927d, 930af, 938d, 938e and ascension, heavenly session 930e, 937c, 938d, 940g, 941b, 956c and the Atonement Ritual 135f, 930ef, 938d contrasted with Aaronic 936c-937b, 939b-941 eternal 653f, 927d, 938f, 939bc his anointing, consecration 930f, 937b
 his high-priestly prayer 671i, 806 his human sympathy 927cd, 929e, 930c, 935c, 936c, 937ab his perpetual sacrificial pleading 446f, 939c, 941b, 956c his vocation 937ab priest and victim 653f, 903a, 940h, 944f shared by Christians, in his Body 656a, 949g, 950d, 964c PRIESTLY CODE (P) 44dg, 135bfikrs, 211a, 282cc PRIESTS, Priesthood, Christian 639g, 659b-f, 820df, 824f, 835e, 840c-f, 876de, 906a, 919f, 920a, 925b, 949g, 951f (see also Ministry, Ordination)
 Christ the model of 951f
 (a) divine vocation 937a functions of presbyters-priests 659b-e 660p mediatorial 937a of Christians in general 656a, 949g, 950de, 964c
 reward of 951f
 virtues and temptations 656bcg, 820f, 916d, 919e, 920e, 921hi, 922e, 925b, 951f PRIESTS, Priesthood, Levitical 112e-l, 151b, 204b, 214c, 245c, 586d, 937a, 939ab (see also Sacrifice, Sadducees) administrators of temple 736ce an aristocracy 584j, 588a consultation of 545g courses of 112g, 282i, 285de, 287eq, 585b, 747e degradation for infidelity proposed 112i, 492m (a) divine vocation 203h, 404a, 937ab doorkeepers 280j, 281i exempt from temple tax 705f Ezechiel's visionary regulations 112i, 492mno forbidden to mourn 188a, 193jk, 476f forbidden wine 188b hellenizing tendency of 585c, 588a, 589f hereditary 112e, 939b induction, installation 585ab interpreters of Law, Scripture 403b, 534k, 545g, 586d in war 218d, 286x marriage, wives of 193jk, 492n, 585b meaning of kōhēn 259j, 284w (a) model for 344c no ordination of lesser priests 112e numbers, in time of Christ 747e our Lord and 100a, 462qr, 927d perpetuity of 462p-t, 939ab physical disqualification for 193 l, 585b power of 289s, 585b
 (a) prayer for 343b

(PRIESTS) priestly crowns 548d, 550k priestly homes 290j relation to Levites 112e-g, 197f, 217e, 286j remuneration, dues 132fg, 204cdf, 287r, 397c, 492n, 875j, 888f, 939a (see also Sacrifices) respect, reverence for 397c, 400b (the) sacerdotal act 111d, 112f, 151b, 939f sanctity, total devotion 182d, 183i, 187hi, 193i sins of 185a, 188ab, 415g, 517cdg specialization and rank 280j, 281i, 585b teaching office of 112f, 586d vested interests salutary 112e wealthy 588a
PRIESTS, Priesthood, Mosaic (at Dan) 63d, 245d PRIESTS, Priesthood, Pagan 598n, 600bd PRIESTS, Priesthood of Jeroboam 1270ij PRIEST-WORKMEN 840f (see also Barnabas, Paul) PRIME MINISTER, The 267h PRIMOGENITURE, see Birthright
PRINCIPALITIES, Angelic 856j, 909f, 910e, 912c PRINTING AND THE BIBLE 3i, 4cg, 8d PRISCA, Priscilla 839ag, 863gh, 882i, 928d PRISCILLIAN, St 955j PRISONERS OF WAR, a prayer for 354c blinding of 281e execution, massacre of 274 l, 602k in triumphal procession 241f mutilation of 239b
PRISON GUARDS, Roman 833f
PROBATION OF ADAM 143bf, 144
PROCESSIONAL HYMNS 336, 344a, 361bd PROCESSIONS, Religious 336, 361d, 470a, around Jericho 230ef dedication 298gh
 the Greeks and 600h PROCREATION 596a
PROCURATORS OF JUDEA, The 57fh, 69c, 72bc, 74bc, 716d, 721a, 740e, 830e, 841 lm PRODICUS, the Gnostic 92c PRODIGAL SON, The 77f, 272i, 274m, 367i, 371f, 374d, 760bef, 880g PRO-EGYPTIAN JEWS 559g, 575a
PROFANITY, Baseness 944c PROFESSION OF FAITH, Catholic 402c
 the Jewish Shema 213c, 586d, 589b, 591d, 596f, 713c, 736j PROLEPSIS 150b, 158d, 239c, 244j, 915d PROLETARIAT, see People of Land PROMISED LAND, see Palestine
PROOF TEXTS 40ijk, 42b, 632e, 633bc, 824d, 846h, 858a PROMPTITUDE TO SIN 397hi, 401b, 402b-f, 404e, 645i, 853ik, 854d (see also Original Sin)
PROPERTY 110i, 173h, 175a-d, 194fl, 660k-r, 761, 762e, 826d (see also Riches) biblical and pagan law contrasted 173h early Christian community of 631d, 636ce, 660q, 819a, 825b, 826def, 833e house 194 l landed 175i, 194h-j, 425d taxed by Rome 598c women as 154f, 387e, 596bcd PROPHECY, Prophets 1c, 33b-g, 39m, 114m, 201bc, 217f, 223b, 314f, 409-18, 454ad, 461g, 522h (see also Ecstasy, False, Inspiration, Messianic, Miracles, Paganism, Symbols, Typology) and apocalyptic 590e, 962g and free will, human initiative 639d angels in 592e audible revelations 414f call and mission of prophets 414a, 453b, 454c called 'madmen' 275g, 410d cessation of prophecy 13e, 413e, 564c, 568a, 618a Christian prophets, prophetesses

639cd, 818b, 820d, 833de, 834b, 836g, 840h, 860e, 877b, 878h, 879a-c, 880bcfgh, 881a, 921c, 922a (PROPHET) Christ the key to 102i chronological order 413d, 417b, 455ab, 457d clairvoyance 418f (see also Seer) compenetration, foreshortened perspective 33g, 41e, 417g, 418a, 4261, 462f, 479a, 522de, 545d, 547ef, 550b, 554a, 558ag, 670k, 671op, 715b, 737c, 851e, 932d, 942b, 962gh conditional character of 417d, 418e consultation 274d, 287y, 411a, 412a credentials, tests of 33ef, 215e, 217f, 415c-f, 478h, 481g dangerous calling 413h detachment 274i direct and indirect reference 84gi, 145d, 4261 distinctive garb, tattoo, tonsure 272dg, 273j, 413f, 618a, 682e, 943e divine inspiration 33e, 215e, 414b, 415a, 454b-d dreams 414c former and latter 12c, 223a-c, 409d, 412ae, 546a, 549ef function of 33e, 104b, 217f, 409e gifts, payment for 274gi historical writings 265f, 266b, 282w, 286py, 287b, 411e, 413b insight 880b intervention in foreign states 412d, 454c literary form of 33e, 41dh, 313c, 417a, 455d meaning of 'prophet,' 'to prophesy' 166d, 201bc, 409df, 522h (the) message and its envelope 33ef mode and state of life 413g, 414a moral compulsion to speak 414h, 527a music and 273m, 410c, 414b names used for 275g, 409fh, 410ad obscurity and its causes 41e, 151i, 159b, 417cef, 418bc, 454b oral and literary 11f, 12c, 33e, 412a, 413a-c, 417a, 454d, 524e prediction and fulfilment of 33e, 34e, 41e, 215e, 217f, 272ci, 276h, 279hl, 287y, 288d, 290a, 404d, 412c, 415c-f, 416adf, 417d, 420e, 441g, 444cd, 454d, 462p, 467a, 481g, 524e, 531e priest prophets, priesthood and 153b, 282cc, 413gh, 453a, 478f, 545b (the) prophetic Perfect 19h, 418e, 422b, 423j, 462f, 856f prophetic signs 425t (the) prophetic succession 99d, 114r, 217f, 276o, 282b, 409dij, 410b (see also Moses) proverbs concerning 252d, 254gi, 314c, 410cd, 484de, 731b, 790e psychology of 275g, 410d, 414de, 639d, 880h respect, reverence for 273f, 274j, 275b, 731b responsibility of 4801, 489b sacrifice, attitude to 44f, 1141, 213b, 404c, 411d, 412h, 423be, 451n, 457a, 525b, 527i, 536e, 642e, 691b secondary non-fulfilment 33f second section of OT Canon 11f, 12ce (the) slaying of the prophets 35f, 93e, 174e, 267f, 2761, 280b, 287g, 413h, 421f, 453c, 459c, 460b, 736f, 758b, 759f, 829e, 943e sons of, companies of prophets 63d, 252d, 254i, 272g, 273ghj, 274ek, 410c-f, 412a, 414bde, 418g, 462g, 553b symbolic names 418d, 458k, 515c symbolism 454g, 461g synagogue readings of 12c the term 'burden' 540a, 550c
 'thus saith the Lord' . . . 780g trance, ecstasy (q.v.) 34c, 35i, 271l, 414d twelve minor 406g unconscious prophecy 153b uniqueness of 79h, 418fh

(PROPHET) universalism 115g, 412h, 531dg, 543ij, 544g, 545e, 549h, 550ag, 554af use of 3rd person 454e vague about dates 418b visions 273b, 275d, 414g, 469f (see also Seers) vocation, not hereditary 409ij, 413g, 414a women, prophetesses 85i, 170h, 240bc, 412a, 484g, 617d, 877b, 880h, 881a, 965b PROPITIATION, wrought by Jesus Christ 177b, 846c, 849cefh, 930e PROPITIATORY, Mercy-seat 111ag, 177b, 191g, 849f, 940c PROSCRIPTIONS 752i
 PROSCRIPTION TEXTS, Egyptian 59g, 118h PROSELYTES 269c, 590, 714d, 823c, 828a, 830e, 832e, 833b, 834eik, 837e, 905d (see also Converts) the bath of the 650b, 824f obstacles impeding 590b PROSPERITY, and national repentance 238m no sign of God's favour 353a, 380c, 761de PROSTITUTION, Harlots 1561, 366g, 367ghr, 368d, 372k, 379e, 711f, 970j (see also Osee) cultic, religious 38d, 192s, 218n, 270o, 273d, 280j, 332d, 476g, 5261, 598n, 602b, 964g Rahab 229c, 230fh, 680e, 943d, 945g, 947e sons of harlots 218k spiritual 484mn (see also Idolatry, Unfaithfulness) the whore of Babylon 970h-l PROSTRATION, in homage to men 310c, 311f, 312a in worship 736d (see also Prayer) PROTAGORAS, The Axiom of 605d
 PROTECTIVE CUSTODY 236g PROTESTANTISM 36dc, 641q, 671e, 762c, 927d (see also Calvin, Luther, Zwingli) bible societies and proselytism 10e-h biblical scholarship 6ah, 37g, 604b, 606g, 607h, 661d liberal protestantism 606ef, 616b-d, 652c monobiblicism 10d on the Eucharist 652cej, 657g on the Ministry 658bcd Petrine texts and 657k, 658b private interpretation 9f, 10cde, 953g, 954g PROTEVANGELIUM, The 39k, 42b, 84f-i, 85d, 86e-h, 102j, 144cd, 145de, 535h, 792g, 881g, 882b, 968k of James, Apocryphal 86j, 94d PROTOCANONICAL BOOKS 14e, 15k language of 19f meaning of term 11d, 13ab PROTO-HITTITES 119ab
 PROTO-LUKE 608a
 PROVERBS 314c-e, 320h, 364bh, 366ag, 410cd, 484de, 485fi, 691b, 709d, 711h, 714f, 731b, 735e, 751c, 767e, 768f (see also Numerical Sayings) non-Israelite 2671, 314a, 316ef, 365g, 370e, 372a PROVERBS, Book of 313d, 314b-h, 364-75 cited in NT 365i, 373e Ecclesiasticus and 365i, 396i, 397d, 403ah King Ezechias (Hezekiah) and 11f, 20a, 364e, 432d illustrated by Our Lord 365i, 367i, 369c, 371f, 372d, 373e, 374d inspiration of 364b, 365g possible pagan sources 316f, 364g, 365g, 370e, 372a, 375ajj, 432d recensions of 364ei, 373b Theodore of Mopsuestia 365i
 PROVIDENCE 18f, 32e, 102e, 138e, 139a, 150c, 152j, 154b, 157m, 159b, 161d, 212eg, 214a, 219e, 2381m, 246cf, 282q, 323g, 333a, 363e, 370g, 371j, 377f, 380c, 381c, 392cde, 393d, 400e, 406a, 412a, 531dg, 545ef, 592a, 660ck, 683c, 687bcd, 692g, 693c, 731c, 732h, 750j, 789d, 817b, 838e, 856dg, 861d, 944e (see also Predestination) (PROVIDENCE) abandonment to 687a-d and free will 165e, 282q, 587d, 588d, 592a primary and secondary 462s PRUDENCE 687b, 717ef, 718a-c, 899b (see also Wisdom)

 PSALMS OF SOLOMON 93h, 340b, 388be, 472f, 594a PSALMS, Psalter (see also Acrostics, Gradual, Imprecatory, Messianic, Poetry) and future life 339f, 340f, 342d, 345e, 348d Anglican versions 29o, 338b, 339d apocryphal 151st psalm 93k Apostolic use of 335a, 340b, 342ce, 344a, 345ce, 347cd, 349a, 350d, 351c, 352a, 357f, 358fg, 360cf attitude to sacrifice 941d authorship of 336, 363f, 936a Babylonian 79h, 3131
 Biblical Commission on 49a-m, 342c, 360d captivity psalm 291a Christian interpretation of 339b, 352a Christ's prayer-book 335n, 339h, 343d, 344a, 345b, 355a, 360g, 361b, 722de, 742ef, 772a, 829f
 (the) Church in 85e, 343d, 348a companion psalms 340a-d, 342f, 343b, 344ac, 357h, 360d-f consolatory additions 282m dating of 337, 342a, 347c, 349a, 351c, 352a, 353b, 354b, 358e divine names in 133b, 335f, 591c division into Books 335f doctrine of Retribution 318k, 339f, 342e, 346b, 357b Douay version 29o duplicate pss. 335f, 349c, 352b, 360b editing and re-editing of 335f, 337, 342a, 352b Egyptian psalms 3131, 335c, 358g eloistic and Yahwistic Psalms 133b, 335f English versions of New Psalter 338b enthronement of king 360d Greek versions 338a historical references in 339g in breviary, liturgy 335a, 336 in early Church 335a, 913b in Jewish prayer 585f inspiration of 34e, 35h, 936a Lucian text 338a
 Maccabean psalms 353b, 354b, 562c Mass, Eucharist, Holy Communion in 343de, 354e, 360ei musical accompaniment 335be, 336 new songs 339b new version of Pius XII 8e, 28c, 53c, 170e, 313i, 338b numbering of 335f
 (the) Passion described and predicted 343d, 345f, 346c, 349e, 360a, 642g, 742e predict conversion of Gentiles 342e, 343d, 345d, 350g, 351bc, 354e, 357eg, 358e, 361a, 363dj predict rejection of Christ 361b predict Resurrection of Christ 339f, 342c, 343d on sinfulness of man 318n penitential psalms 339c, 340f, 345c, 346c, 349a, 358e, 362a, 382m psalms 104, 95, 105 in Paralipomenon 284o Roman Psalter 335a, 338a Sacraments, Psalm of the 343e Sela 335e
 speaker, subject tacitly changed 156i, 331e, 417c titles of 336, 345a

- (PSALMS) Ugaritic psalms 79f votive psalms 338b, 340e, 345e, 349bf, 350c Vulgate, Gallican Psalter 27e, 338b Wisdom, Sapiential Psalms 314b
- PSALTERY, The 395f
- PSAMMETICHUS II, Pharaoh 66b, 78c, 121k, 459m, 464e, 477f
- PSAMMETICHUS II 281bc, 477f
- PSUEDPIGRAPHY 36i, 92b, 135d, 376d, 388b, 584c (see also Apocrypha)
- PSEUDONYMS, Pseudonymity 36i, 92bc, 222a, 308h, 376d, 388b, 494h-j, 952h
- PSYCHOLOGY, Hebrew, Semitic 45j, 184g, 372h, 377c, 378a, 402f, 457g, 470f, 702f, 713c, 758d, 936b
- PTOLEMAIS 840h (see also Acre)
- PTOLEMIES, The 125g, 559c, 562a, 842g, brother-sister marriages of 390b, 393f, dedication of 388c, 393e
- PTOLIMY I 75a, 510c, 969f
- PTOLIMY II, Philadelphos 23h, 122i, 510de
- PTOLIMY III, Evergetes 122i, 510e, 768d
- PTOLIMY IV, Philopator 122i, 404c, 406h, 510f
- PTOLIMY V, Ephyphanes 122j, 510f-h
- PTOLIMY VI, Philometor 310g, 312j, 511de, 574a, 575e
- PTOLIMY VII 70b
- PTOLIMY, Physcon (Evergetes II) 396h, 511de, 572b
- PTOLEMY, Governor of Coele Syria 578a
- PTOLEMY, son of Abobus 572d
- PTOLEMY, son of Dorymenes 578a
- PTOLEMY, son of Laos 122i
- PTOLEMY, the Jew 310g
- PTOLEMY, the Mathematician 123ef
- PUBLICANS (see also Tax-gatherers) publicans and sinners 588d, 691a, 706f, 728c
- PUBLIC LIFE OF CHRIST, The 73ac, 86c, 507q, 618-20, 631ab, 670g, 684-718, 727ce-742d, 748-72h, 832h, duration 507q, 676b-e, 750d, 765d, 779cg, 791b effects on different classes 774b last journey to Jerusalem 710a-f, 734a, 735, 744h, 756-63, 764a Our Lady and 86ci, 729abe, 754c, 757bg, 786a-d outside Jewry, Palestine 690c, 703ab, 730ghi, 732def, 733a, 789a, 796c the Galilaean ministry 55h, 427dfg, 618ef, 619a-d, 620a, 684 ff., 727-34, 744h, 751-5, 757e, 778h, 780c, 790e-g, 793-5, 796c the Judean ministry 708a, 735a, 744h, 751dh, 773a, 778h, 779g, 780c, 790f-799k, 800-1 the Peraean Ministry 735, 756a, 799-1 the Samaritan Ministry 684a, 756a, 789a-790d
- PUBLIUS, Chief Man of Malta 814d, 843f
- PUL, Pulu, Babylonian for Tiglath-pileser 79d
- PUNIC WARS 567b
- PUNISHMENT (see also Penal, Retribution, Reward) civil right to punish 860g collective 110fg pecuniary 111g, 114f
- PUNISHMENT, DIVINE 238 lm, 270b, 302e, 317h, 323hj, 339ef, 346d, 350d, 397h, 401b, 469g, 525d, 527i, 699f-h, 953i, 954a (see also Eternal, Hell, Judgement) beneficial, remedial 238 l, 317efm, 318k, 331def, 332cd, 392ef, 404d, 423bh, 435k, 437f, 475b, 541e, 878g exemplary 207a, 238 lm, 826f expiatory 435k, 436cd extreme severities discussed 109m, 317e instruments of 222c, 397h, 405a, 425h, 478c, 486i-kvv, 528b natural product of sin 366d, 369fg
- (PUNISHMENT, DIVINE) necessary 146b, 423d, 435m, 436c, 438d, 445g, 541e not vindictive 475b proportionate to offender 207h, 317e, 525e, 527a, 951e retributive 317cf, 388i, 395, 404d to 3rd and 4th generation 412h, 462m (see also Solidarity) vicarious 846e (see also Substitution)
- PUNS 244j, 273f, 489k, 573a (see also Play on Words)
- PUNT, see Put
- PUR, see Purim
- PURCHASE-DEEDS 462 l
- PURGATIVE WAY, The 397f
- PURGATORY 15k, 42bd, 102d, 115f, 560e, 579e, 871e
- PURIFICATION 182d, 189a, 204j, 208i, 681c (see also Ablutions, Uncleaness) after childbirth 85k, 103a, 189k-n, 324e, 617d, 681c, 749g by suffering 304a from leprosy 689c of cups and platters 758b of land, city, foretold 548ab, 550a, 553a, 554f of temple 564c water for 204gh, 553a
- PURIM, Phurim 310chl, 312i, 566e, 791b, 793a, 796b Babylonian terminology 79h, 310 l, 311f epistle of 310gi Mardochar's day 310 l, 580f
- PURITAN PROPHESYINGS, Baxter on 879a
- PURITY 660fg, 685f (see also Chastity) ritual purity 215c (see also Cleanness)
- PURPLE 837e, 905d
- PURSLANE 330a
- PURVEY'S REVISION OF WYCLIF 4f
- PUR, Punt 269g, 451s, 487m, 538m, 542m
- PUTFOLI 843g
- PYDNA, Battle of 567b
- PYGARG, The 215f
- PYNSON, Printer, R. 29f
- PYRAMIDS, The 118c, 320m, 635d
- PYTHAGORAS, Pythagoreanism 599ef
- PYTHIA OF DELPHI, The 280a
- PYTHONS 837e (see also Mediums, Necromancers)
- Q, Quelle, see Synoptic Problem
- QABUL, see Cabul
- QADIS, see Kadesh
- QANTIR 60a
- QARQAR, Karkar 64g, 79d, 121cg, 124e, 266de, 267k, 272c, 273a, 275a, 276m
- QINAH, Dirge Metre 313g, 335d, 469c, 479e, 485 l, 527g
- QIR 56c, 430ef, 431c, 433g, 525d, 526d, 528i
- QIRIATHAYIN 273 l
- QUADRATUS OF ATHENS 91c
- QUAILS 171b, 201d
- QUAKER 682d
- QUARTODECIMANS, The 777b
- QUARTUS 863j
- QUATERNIONS 833f
- QUEEN MOTHER, The 267e, 270n, 271b, 286dd
- QUEEN OF HEAVEN, Astarte, Ishtar 79h, 457a, 464f title of our Lady 85d, 86ei
- QUESNEL, Paschase 10d
- QUIRINIUS, P. Sulpicius 72b, 81e, 749ab, 807f census, tax, under 77h, 92f, 676a, 749a-c
- Quo Vadis? 94i
- QUOTATIONS IN SCRIPTURE 52i, 225e
- RA, Egyptian sun-god 118f, 287aa, 598m
- RABBA, Rabbath Ammon 56c, 234c, 243k, 260f, 284y, 386f, 466fg, 526h
- RABBAN 827c
- RABBI, Rabboni 735j, 777d, 812e
- (RABBI) be not called Rabbi 656b, 714c
- RABBIS, Rabbinism 586d, 646e, 690f, 714b, 732a, 736jk, 750d, 756f, 852e, 857b, 860g, 934e, 939f, 941a (see also Akibah, Exegesis, Gamaliel, Hillel, Scribes, Shammai, Talmud) abba, the title 855d age limit for 750h and manual labour 584m and the common people 584i, 587cdf, 749e, 759f casuistry, exegesis 625g, 626c, 656bd-g, 686c, 702bc, 714be, 732b, 829ac, 894f, 897a credulity of 592a influence of 388j on guardian angels 706e on Messias 417e on miraculous wilderness clothing 214a on the evil inclination in man 397h, 401b, 595d, 853ik, 854d on the Fatherhood of God 855d on the future world 595a, 855i, 957a on the Kingdom of God 625d, 896g on the Memra 607 l on the Messias 594ab on the particular judgement 595a on the powers, merits of saints 34c, 642f on providence 856f on the Suffering Servant 102n, 417e, 594b, 642i query if women have souls 745 l writings of 584c, 591h, 592ad, 594a
- RABBULA, Metropolitan of Edessa 25g
- RAB-MAG 463g, 549b
- RABSACKS, RABSHAKEH 135e, 279d
- RAB-SARIS 279d, 463g
- RACA 685j
- RACE, Running the Christian 858a, 876d, 944a
- RACHEL 59h, 79k, 106h, 152j, 154efi, 155g, 158g, 192i, 462e, 682b tomb of 155g, 158g, 682b
- RACIAL PROBLEMS, Christianity and 846b, 893g, 894c, 895eg, 896d-f, 900f, 901a, 913b, 925d
- RACIAL PURITY 289r (see also Mixed Marriages)
- RAGAU, Rages 302cd, 305d, 309a
- RAGUEL, The Archangel 592d
- RAGUEL, cousin of Tobias 302c, 304eh, 306ade
- RAGUEL, Reuel (Jethro) 164h, 200c
- RAHAB, Egypt 355f, 356b, 436b, 438b, 445n, 972c the harlot 229c, 230fh, 680e, 943d, 945g, 947e the sea-monster 322k, 328i
- RAHLES 10f
- RAIA 283d
- RAIN 139a, 142b, 214e, 527 l in Palestine 56e, 153r miraculous rain 271 lm, 273m prayer for 309i the benevolent and the destructive 332f, 333d the former and latter 56de, 329h, 438d, 550m
- RAINBOW, The 149b round God's throne 480a, 966a
- RAISIN BREAD, Cakes 270 l, 516f
- RAMAH 57f, 64e, 245g, 271c, 428j, 462e
- RAMATHAIM, Ramatha 249b (see also Arimathea)
- RAMATHLECHI 244hj
- RAMSES, Ramesses, land of 60a (see also Tanis)
- RAMESSES II 60c-e, 120d building operations of 60c, 78a, 125b, 158d, 163bc the oppressor 60cd, 78a, 119h, 120d, 163a-e, 164a
- RAMESSES III 62a, 63a, 120fg, 228a
- RAMMAN, Remmon, Rimmon 274i
- RAMOTH (in the Negeb) 236a

- RAMOTH-GILEAD (Galaad) 57j, 64g, 273a, 274 l, 275f, 410e RAMSAY, Sir William 816a, 841d RANSOM (see also Redemption) a man's ransom 156i, 174dh, 551f, 578b, 719c Christ a ransom for many (all) 644e, 735i, 739h, 849e, 920d, 949fh of Israel 441c, 443de RAPE 218j
 of the Siloites 245k RAPHAEL, The Archangel 302bef, 305cde, 307a-d, 592d, 793c alias Azarias 305e RAPHAIM, see Repha'im RAPHIA, 54d, 93c
RAPHIDIM 171h
RASIN, Rezin, of Damascus 65b, 121e, 124d, 277i, 287 l RASPUNA 277i
RAS-SHAMRA TABLETS 19 l, 38a, 82d, 215f, 273e, 328i, 348c, 353b, 356a, 357c, 358g, 484j, 494b, 693b, 729c (see also Ugarit) and Asherah cult 175k, 181i, 239f and the Habiri, SA-GAZ 60b, 120ab language, script 19j, 76c, 79i leviathan in 79i, 430b, 436b poetry in 79i, 313 l proverbs in 364h ritual in 79i, 110d winged serpents in 79i, 430b, 436b RATIONALISM 3j, 5f, 6a, 33o, 40c, 44j, 301e, 422c, 616b, 652cf, 653j and higher criticism 604ac, 605a and miracles 87b-88c and prophecy 33f, 606g and the 'Christ myth' 32o, 605c-g, 608b and the Gospel 746c, 747c, 748a, 753b, 756e, 757f, 765c, 767ab French rationalism 604c, 606d, 621ab Greek rationalism 599e, 870c Rationalist Lives of Jesus 604a, 605bc, 606dg, 607b RATIONAL OF JUDGEMENT, see Pouch RAIIONING, Food 481c RAVEN, Ravens 758d feed Elias 271g Noah's 147b
RAWLINSON, A. E. 613a, 614a
RAZIAS 560e, 580f
RAZOR 481f
READING, Spiritual 4h (see also Bible Study) REAL PRESENCE, The 637b, 653b-ehj, 720a, 739gh, 794b, 795a-e (see also Eucharist) assumed as a fact by St Paul 877ef, 878g, 905f carnal, Capharnaite heresy 794b, 795gh theophany and 163h the resurrection and 795g REASON, and faith 616gh (see also Age) and Revelation 104bc, 616a, 881j REBECCA, Rebekah 59h, 106d, 140d, 144c, 153em, 154af her nurse 155f RECAPITULATION IN CHRIST 641j, 646bc, 846c, 899d
RECEIPTS 908b
RECHAB, Rechabites 276d, 283d, 460de, 747e RECIDIVISM, see Self (divided) RECOLLECTION 378d RECONCILIATION (see also Peace) of penitents, excommunicates 886j the atonement 846c, 911bc the ministry of 888a RECORDERS, Remembrancers 224de, 265f, 267h (see also Annalist) RECREATIONS, Pagan 603b RECRUITING OFFICER 281i
Recto and Verso 662a
REDEEMED, The 360a judged and judging 873b
REDEEMING THE TIME 903c, 913c
REDEMPTION (see also Go'el, Ransom) by Apollo, by Christ 81d by suffering 533g from bondage in Egypt 162c, 360c of firstborn 112g, 114a, 169j, 175g, 276j, 585b, 710c, 749g of land 194k REDEMPTION OF MAN, The 81d, 163f, 383j, 446g, 623f, 642-9, 695c, 710c, 735i, 784g, 817c, 845d, 846c, 849c, 854b, 873d, 896g, 899b, 900h, 909g, 910c, 911bcg, 914f, 920d, 923c, 933d, 939g, 940g, 941a, 949d, 950c, 964c (see also Atonement, Ransom) and the Church 649f, 898i co-operation in, co-redemption 900c divine love in 646ab, 649b eternally foreknown 950c (the) Fall and 850c gradual revelation of 84g, 642e in Johannine theology 649a-g in Pauline theology 645b-648s
 necessary 788d
 the price of 551f, 578b, 645c, 849e, 874c universal, cosmic 911g universal, for all 735i, 739h, 849e, 920d, 949fh RED SEA 423k, 428o miraculous crossing of 40f, 60e, 88a, 90b, 163d, 169h, 170, 229g, 395d, 877, 943d trade 269g, 270c, 277bd REED, boats 322n, 431 l at the Passion 810f measure 82b
REFRESHING, Times of 825f
REFUGE, Cities of 174d, 209ij, 212h, 218a, 236g, 283r REFUSE DUMP 685gk, 734d
REGEM-MLECH 549b
REGENERATION 625d, 649a, 650b, 683b, 750f, 783b, 788ab, 846c, 851deh, 852h, 875d, 899a, 900e, 925g, 946i, 950cd, 958e (see also Baptism, Consummation) meaning of term 709e REGAL YEARS 124bhj, 268h, 286wx post-dating 64b, 123ef, 124ei, 266ef, 277j, 279a, 280r, 286w, 477e, 480b pre-dating 64b, 123ei, 280r, 287x, 477e, 675c (the) ree' sarruti 279a, 280r REHOR 57k
REHOBOAM, see Roboam
REHUM, see Reum
REI 267b
REIMARUS, H. S. 605a-c, 608d, 621b
RE-INCARNATION 599c RELATIONSHIPS, figurative, honorific 410e, 569e, 570a indefinite terms for 271a, 275f, 276a, 286w RELATIVISM 963c, 971c RELICS, Venerated, Miraculous 276o, 826g, 839g RELIGION 104b, 110b, 213c, 365a, 545c and life, in Israel 108a, 110i and pagan philosophy 599e-h and science 871a and the vicissitudes of life 370n dancing in 245k, 259b, 363j Greek Athletics and 600h history of 104h, 163g, 165b Kantian view of 605d natural and revealed 104b personal 596f, 632c, 634, 794f (see also Dispositions, Piety) primacy of 228e Ritschlian view of 606f Schleiermacher and 607e spiritual 545ef state at time of Incarnation 115h worldly, and other-worldly 115d RELIGIOUS LIFE 819a, 825b (see also Monasticism) RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY 10f REMEDIES, ANCIENT, for bad circulation 267a for bad eyes 305i, 306i, 965e for boils 279k REMISSION OF SIN 930e (see also Forgiveness)
REMMON 554d REMNANT, The 222d, 272c, 289r, 291a, 412g, 419f, 436b, 444d, 481f, 482a, 490b, 528i, 533dh, 534i, 535ch, 541d, 542m, 550o, 551h, 642h, 709i, 716cg, 717c, 738ac, 857op, 859b (see also Isaiah, Book of)
 of Gentiles 435hkm, 550a postexilic community 292h, 294c, 295b, 425o St Paul on 428i
REMORSE 390e, 721b-e REMPHA, Rephan 829c
RINAN, E. 606d, 616d, 621b
RENDING, Tearing Garments 320g, 720h, 740h
RENUCINATION 735df, 745fj, 756b, 759b, 761ad, 763h, 868c, 881f REPENTANCE 185a, 194t, 238 lm, 239d, 272i, 317e, 346f, 349a, 396g, 471e, 480 l, 485jk, 488c, 541c, 596f, 643h, 644a, 648 l, 654a, 682c, 711f, 721b, 731cd, 760e, 824f, 825i, 838f (see also Contrition, Conversion, Penitence) always possible in life 519 l benefits of 397i, 402ab elements of 423e fasting and 586b, 728d impossible after death 402b interior as well as exterior 523e joy in heaven at 760b-f needed for forgiveness 194t, 238 l, 423c, 471c obstacles to 938a offered to all 146i, 148a, 392e of Nineveh 532fg our Lord's teaching on 751i, 753dg, 759a, 760b-f, 775b postponement presumptuous 399a, 400a time, respite for 146i, 148a, 857np REPITION, Vain 941e
REPHAIM, giants, tall race 57d, 151f, 284z, 309o, 328h the dead in Sheol 157f, 328h, 356a, 365e, 371j valley 234c, 235e, 258i, 309o, 431g REPROACHES, The 92 l REPROBATION 136e, 592b, 625b, 626b, 646h, 892d, 938b, 950e (see also Predestination) REPILLES 189h
Requiem Aeternam 92 l RESISTANCE MOVEMENT, Jewish 559d, 562f
RESPECT OF PERSONS, Human 192m, 301i, 331b, 391b, 399a, 437i, 731f, 792f, 801i, 947c RESPECT, Reverence 273f, 274j, 275b RESPHA 263b
RESPONSIBILITY (see also Freewill, Sin) collective 1101g, 412h (see also Solidarity) individual, personal 145d, 203j, 213d, 219b, 318k, 327h, 397g, 412h, 458i, 462gh, 478cehl, 480 l, 483g, 484j, 485ef, 487s, 489c, 718b, 853hl RESTITUTION, Reparation 111gh, 175cd, 185g, 276k, 367r, 527b, 764c
RESTITUTUS, St 798c RESTORATION, The 33f, 41e, 220c, 383 l, 384i, 404d, 418a, 428o, 429ag, 435k-436, 462, 473h, 474e, 475e, 478ac, 483ao, 484op, 486h, 490a-eg-i, 491j, 545d-g, 550hio, 554a, 593ca, 825f (see also Messianic Age, Return) nationalistic, materialistic 478g, 479a (see also Nationalists, Zealots) of Gentile Remnant 435m, 550a of lost, northern tribes 428o, 436e,

462b-en, 478e, 490g-i, 530u, 545ikpr, 550jo (RESTORATION) of All Things, The 733e RESURRECTION, The 77f, 115d, 326j, 436b, 446f, 495a, 512ab, 560d, 576f, 713ab, 737h, 766e, 779d, 792cd, 794f, 795g, 800d, 838g, 846c, 859h, 881bck-882c, 930e, 931b (see also Body, Pharisees, Sadducees)
 Christ the cause of 671hij, 838f, 841i, 854h, 855b, 856f, 911a
 (the) first resurrection 971df heresy at Corinth 866f, 881b ff. in apocryphal, apocalyptic, books 92em, 93d, 594d, 595b, 970e indwelling spirit and 854g marriage and 713b, 737h, 766e nature parallels 881 l not just spiritual, or already realized 923g of quick, living, and dead 671r, 881b, 882c, 914dhkl, 916abc, 924c of the unjust 115d, 576f, 595b, 671r, 792d, 842b, 881g redemption of the body 856a second resurrection 671vx transformation 736i, 882a-c, 907g, 916b, 924c RESURRECTION APPEARANCES, The 3b, 620h, 671ijk, 773ac, 774, 775, 822a, 832i, 841i, 881d-h, 951f, 953e Emmaus 3b, 671i, 743d, 774, 775b, 812f in Galilee 671ijk, 720c, 723bef, 739i, 743ae, 769a, 773a, 779d, 812a, 813a-f in the upper room, cenacle 774cd, 812f-i miraculous catch of fish 779d, 813a-f of Saints in Jerusalem 722f to our Lady 743d to St Mary Magdalen 671j, 723c, 743cd, 812ade to St Paul 811b (see also Paul) to St Peter 774bc, 812f, 881d, 951f to St Thomas 812ghi to the Holy Women 723ab, 743b, 810d RESURRECTION OF CHRIST, The 36g, 89d, 90c, 342c, 623g, 626f, 631c, 641b, 657abc, 723a-f, 743a-d, 773-4, 799e, 812a-c, 819c, 824c, 834g, 838cf, 854h, 855b, 856f, 937e, 944g, 949d, 950b accompanied by other resurrections 671i, 722f and baptism 851d, 951b and the Parousia 625e, 670h-j angels at 723ab, 743b, 773b doubters 743d, 774b, 812hi evidence 626f, 812bc, 822a, 824a-e, 826b, 841i (see also Resurrection Appearances, Tomb) foretold 342c, 343d, 446f, 518b, 620e, 697d, 704e, 710a, 720c, 722i, 733a, 735g, 739i, 740g, 755a, 769a, 774b, 882c glorifies God 649b
 (the) grave clothes 812c
 (the) great forty days 775c guards at the tomb 722i harmonization of records 620h, 773abc Peter and John at the tomb 531f, 743b, 773c, 812c proves his divinity 641b, 643i, 805f redemptive 647d
 (the) risen Christ eats 774c-d sign of Jonas (q.v.) 697d stone rolled away 742i, 743b the third day 157g, 532d, 671hl, 697d, 787c (see also Heb. Idioms) witness of St Paul 626f, 881d-h witness of the women 773bc RETON, Land of 57c
RETIBUTION, Doctrine of 101c, 183k, 265chi, 269c, 282ghr, 284am, 339f, 345c, 357b, 365f, 369acdff, 370abg, 371h, 372o, 376ghno, 379c, 381b, 388i, 395, 397i, 398c, 400bce, 402e, 424de, 429h, 448f, 480 l, 484g, 485g, 486d, 527, 761de (see also Job, Rewards, Suffering) RETURN FROM EXILE 41e, 67a-c, 122d, 288e, 289c-f, 290a-p, 301i, 543cdf, 545ei, 546d, 584d, 682e (see also Cyrus, Exile) disillusionment after 67c, 282ghi, 291c, 292a, 419h, 420f, 448a, 449e, 451a-e historicity of name-lists 288e, 289h lists of repatriates 288e, 289h, 290f, 543f, 545b mostly of Babylon-born Jews 290g only wealthy bring wives 290n providential character of 293e religious motives for 291a native opposition to 67c, 281j, 288c, 291c-k, 295h, 543c, 544a new temple 67b, 291c (see also Temple) REUBEN, Ruben, The Patriarch 156i, 158c tribe of 571, 61b, 159ae, 173d, 211e, 222h, 228a, 229b, 234c, 237b, 283i, 430d, 466af, 493k REUM, Rehum 288e, 291h REUNION, of Christendom 6h of Israel 428o, 478e, 490ghi, 530v, 551f REVELATION 104bcei, 640defl, 648d, 695bc, 788c, 933b (see also Divination, Dreams, Economy, Inspiration, Prophecy) and inspiration 1b, 36bgj, 37a and mental effort 18f and moral character 270k and reason 104bc, 616g, 881j and Wisdom 314fi, 397m by the indwelling spirit 870g Christ and 783f, 964a complete at death of last apostle 13e, 18f, 104c final and complete in Christ 1b, 910e, 911g, 969i founts of 1c-f, 14d, 39b, 42ef, 84b, 397m, 917f gift of 899bf implicit and explicit 18df, 84c in nature, natural 317g, 330h, 333b-e, 334a-d, 397km, 398b, 402a, 835c, 838f, 847de in prayer 397m Israel's prerogative 54b, 403b miracles and 89ab not concerned with natural science 141a of NT Canon 18

 on Carmel 271k progressive 39 l, 41h, 84eg, 102d, 104c, 397m, 400b, 695c, 728b, 729g Sinaitic 89c, 104g, 105c, 271k REVENGE 146de, 686d, 860g (see also Blood) REVERENCE 114a, 397c, 950c and clothing 155f (see also Vestments) Revue Biblique 6e REWARDS AND PUNISHMENTS 99e, 101c, 102d, 137c, 183k, 192hk, 194n-t, 219g, 339ef, 365f, 366g, 376f-h, 388i, 390a-d, 394, 395, 397j, 401bc, 402e, 643c, 704f, 709, 734c, 735df, 851c, 854bh, 907f, 910b, 931b, 951afg (see also Punishment, Retribution) in posterity 397j, 406dg in the future life 109m, 114g, 115de, 153r, 282r, 317e, 318k, 388i, 389g, 390e-f, 396g, 397j, 917a, 936a smallest services rewarded 734c, 929d REYNOLDS, William 29h REZIN, see Rason
REZON, Razon, son of Eliada 270d
RHEGIUM 843g
RHEIMS, Rhemes, NT, cost of publishing 29i early printers of 29ikpq enriched English language 29no first edition 29bf-iq Greek text consulted 29imo
 Mary Queen of Scots and 29r

(RHEIMS) miscalled Douay NT 30h preface 29eln Protestant edition of 29p strange words of 29no subsequent editions 29p, 30a title page of 29i Witham's revision 30a RHETORIC 602d, 603b, 869ef, 890d
RHINOCOLURA, Torrent of Egypt 234a RHODES 149h, 487m, 572b, 843b RHYME, Rhythm, see Hebrew Poetry
RIB-ADDI OF BYBLOS 119lm
RIBLAH, Reblatha 57k, 66d, 67b, 122a, 267j, 269e, 280p, 281ei, 287aabb, 290g, 477df, 478b, 482a, 483mn, 485b, 493h RICHEs, The Rich 369bdk, 370eo, 371j, 372e, 374c, 400ef, 403g, 660k, 826d, 945gh, 946g, 947cd, 948d (see also Dives, Mammon, Money, Stewardship) and the Jewish Aristocracy 584j danger, evils of 102g, 146e, 317b, 379a, 660kn, 699a, 709d, 735e, 763gh, 947d, 948d happiness and 332e ill-gotten 327dl insecurity of 317b, 322h, 400de, 758d, 948c Jewish esteem of 596e men rich towards God 758d our Lord and 327j, 584k, 620d, 660kn, 699a, 709d, 735e, 745j, 758d, 761a-f, 762e, 763gh, 764c, 947d, 948c sins of 527bcj, 761ef
 (the) rich youth 735d, 763fg RIDDLES 244af, 314cg
RIFT, The Great 54f RIGHTEOUSNESS 643 l, 648mo, 685e, 846ce, 905f, 906b, 907f (see also Justice, Justification) imputed 746f, 846f legal, pharisaic righteousness 101cd, 379d, 648o, 728cd, 761d, 763cd, 858ab RIGORISM AND LAXISM 586f, 596b, 654c, 781i, 938ab RIMMON, City of 245jl
RIMMON, The God 274i RIM-SIN OF LARSA 117f, 120a, 150e
RITSCHL, A. 606f, 608d RITUAL (see also Ceremony, Liturgy, Worship)
 (its) absence inconceivable to ancients 176f Babylonian and Israelite 79i developed early in ancient world 176f, 478j early date of laws in Exodus 79i, 176fg, 177abf-h essential to Covenant 176f laws 108a, 110bj, 111, 176ff., 182b ff., 397cd of temple 271 l pre-Mosaic Ugaritic 79i RITUALE, The Jewish 182b RIVER OF LIFE 972ac RIZPAH, see Respha ROADS (see also Trade) from Egypt 60ce
 Fuller's Field Road 279d
 Palestinian 56h, 275b, 682c, 684ab Persian 122g
 Roman 603c, 914b trade routes 20d, 54j, 56h, 59dg, 160b, 269b, 271c, 273a, 277bdf, 423j, 427g, 676g, 909b ROBBERY 907b
ROBE (see also Vestments) scarlet, military 538h, 722a, 741f the seamless 742ab, 810c ROBOAM, Rehoboam 64abe, 80c, 124fh, 266e, 270g, 282q, 286qw, 356b, 529a age of accession 286w unites Benjamin and Judah 270b ROCK, Inscriptions 326i
 The Spiritual 653bd, 696i, 877b ROD, of God, The 165d, Aaron's rod 167a

ROGEL 262b, 267b, 295f
ROMANS, Epistle to the 462h, 642j, 661fh, 678g, 838e, 844-63, 905ef, 907f ambiguity of 'Law' in 852c, 853b-d, 858e and Galatians 661h, 844di, 849p, 850b, 852agh, 854f, 855b, 857ab, 862bde and 1 Peter 858a, 860e, 949ce authorship 844d conclusion of 844 l, 862i, 863m date 844g, 863e reasons for writing of 844ef, 863abd salutations 845ai, 898c style 848a, 850dh, 851c, 854e, 857c, 858gh subscription to 863f themes 844bci, 845b, 846b-h, 863k ROME, Romans 120k, 122jk, 551b, 559cf, 562c, 563d, 566e, 567b, 747a and the infant church 744f and the Sanhedrin 70f, 74cd, 587b anti-semitism 75b, 561b, 588g, 839a, 864g army, soldiers 598ef, 719b, 722a, 730h, 807c, 833f autocratic government 597gh, 598k Babylon and 949d, 951h, 968d, 969i, 970g ban on Labour organizations 602e Bible on history, institutions, of 567b bureaucracy 597j census 77h, 180i, 584 l Church of Rome 631e, 816d, 819a, 839a, 844ej, 852a, 853c, 862, 863ab citizenship 588f, 598ab, 663b, 665f, 666c, 834c, 837fh, 841h, 842ch, 844e, 845e, 891a, 905c coins, weights, measures 82ch, 83a coloniae 598h, 816a, 834d, 837f, 905c deified, worshipped 963h, 964h, 969c, 970h doom, downfall of 970 l, 971a-c eastern provinces 41b, 598ij Emperor worship 393e, 562d, 597h, 704a, 963b, 964gh, 965ac, 969ce fire of Rome 75c, 815b Greek spoken at 27a houses 602f
 illiteracy in the Empire 602c imperial post 662b industry and finance 601i, 602e Jewish privileges under 75c, 585h, 588f, 660s Jewish propaganda forbidden 837f Jewish revolts 56h, 57f, 74d-g, 462p, 584cg, 585a, 587e, 590d, 607m, 749a, 754g, 766d, 770b, 771b, 774b, 775b Jews at Rome 75a-c, 588eg jus Italicum 837d, 905c law 597 l, 598k, 721g letters to Simon 572a Levantine policy of 559f, 561a martial law in Provinces 598ab merits and demerits 598k municipal government 598g national character 597ef parental powers 596c Pax Romana 597j, 598f population of Rome 602f prostitution at Rome 970j providential mission of 597jk provincial governors 57fh, 69c, 72bc, 74bc, 81c, 597l, 598ab, 675fh, 770b, 830e, 839c, 841 lm, 864fh, 914e religion of 599ij remand regulations 815b second civil war 914b Senate and Consuls 567b, 597g seven hills of 970ij social evils 597i, 598k, 601h-k, 602c social strata in Empire 597c, 598ab, 602eg taxation 584 ln, 598cd, 749b (the great) whore of 970h-l treaty with Hasmonaeans 570a, 571e ROOF CHAMBERS 274b

ROPES ON THE HEAD 272f
ROSARY, The Holy 10b, 86e, 686g, 745g
ROSE PLANT, see Oleander
ROUSSEAU, Jean Jacques 621a ROYAL DECREE FORMULA 192h
RUDIMENTS, The 937de (see also Catechesis) RUFINUS 15de
RUFUS 725c, 742b, 863g
RULE OF FAITH 860e RULERS (see also Kings, State) temptation of 400d worship of 287aa, 388e, 393e, 562d, 597h, 598q, 833f, 839j, 842g
RULES OF LIFE 862e
RUSA OF URARTU 121g
Ruses de Guerre 275b
RUTH 115g, 219c, 224b, 246 ff., 247a, 462j, 484j, 680e RYLANDS PAPYRUS 16b, 77abc, 776c

SA'ANNIM, see Sennim
SABA, Sabaeans 19i, 180 l, 269h, 320f, 352d, 443e, 450c, 523k (see also Sheba)
SABBATA, Greek for Week 83d SABBATH, The 66g, 75c, 83d, 103a, 110e, 113bc, 114a, 141d, 171g, 180n, 193ns, 203d, 213a, 287e, 297k, 299e, 448c, 449e, 458g, 486d, 493c, 514o, 528f, 585dh, 587c, 618f, 696abc, 727g, 728efg, 742hi, 791e abrogated for Christians 101a, 653k Christ, Lord of 91c, 100b, 618f, 619e, 620c, 622e, 696a-d, 728efg, 752c-e, 759ad, 791ae clothing 752c decalogue on 61c, 113b, 173b duration of 141c, 689g, 727g gathering sticks on 134c God's sabbath rest 141d, 929d, 936a institution, origin of 79h, 113c, 141bc, 172k, 173b, 213a, 929d institution peculiar to Israel 79h, 113c joyfulness of 113b, 752c lighting of lamps for 772c made for man 728f martyrs of 562g Messianic, endless Sabbath 545d, 554ac rabbinic perversion of 113b, 728fg, 752c-e Sabbath day's journey 82c, 585h, 696a, 716a, 755c, 822b SABBATICAL YEAR, The 99g, 113a, 175i, 182e, 194fg, 287ee, 297k, 450i, 493d SACKCLOTH, see Hair cloth SACRAMENTALS, Rationale of 305h SACRAMENTS, The 40h, 650-4, 756g, 820a-d, 852f and justification 648 lq, 846d and the mystery rites 654d, 650a, 652ce conferring character 650 l, 923b eschatological reference of 650j, 652i, 653a Holy Trinity and 640j not magical 645d, 650bfh, 653d principal elements of 923bc SACRED HEART, The 350f, 536c, 695d, 703b, 803a, 811a, 906b SACRIFICE 111c, 182-6, 192a-g, 492eno, 493a-c, 642d, (see also Altar, Anamnesis, Blood, Communion, Cult, Dispositions, Holocaust, Idolothytia, Incense, Passover, Priests, Propitiation, S. of Christ, Victims) abuses attacked 526k, 555d, 556ce acceptable and not 404c Babylonian 79h
 Carthaginian Tariff 186f classification of 169d consecration sacrifice 187j cooked and uncooked offerings 186f covenant rites 176cd, 463c daily sacrifices 74d, 180g, 186a, 291b, 523b, 585d, 737h, 747d, 825c, 939d destruction and 111f

(SACRIFICE) drink-offering, libation 155f, 180g, 183e, 184d, 907e expiating efficacy (limited in OT) 111fgh, 114f, 184b, 203c, 283q, 320c, 642e, 940h, 941a foundation sacrifices 230g, 271f freewill offerings 132f, 186ah, 291b, 349d heave-offering 186k high-priest's oblation 184d, 186d human, child, sacrifice 63d, 106abd, 115j, 153a, 192j, 193b, 211g, 215d, 217f, 238k, 243k, 263b, 271f, 273n, 278ai, 280k, 287lv, 392f, 438f, 448g, 456g, 457a, 458f, 484m-o, 486eg, 536d, 598n, 644e, 734d (see also Moloch) in the wilderness 211c levitical sacrifice inefficacious 183h, 940fh, 941cde meal offerings 180g, 183d, 184d-f, 185bcf, 492o, 941a meaning, nature, intention 106b, 111e, 114a, 239d, 685k, 689c money of trespass-offering 111g, 114f, 276k necessity of 173e, 176f new moon 291b offerings, oblations 180g, 183bc, 242d, 442i odour, sweet-smelling savour of 184c, 908b of daily life 860bc of Faith 907e of praise 186g, 555k, 944f offered daily for Emperor 74d offered for the dead 102d, 115f, 560e, 579e offerings of the poor 184c, 185f, 189n, 689c, 711a, 749g, 787b offerings to the dead 219c, 305b oil in 184d, 185f, 190 lm patriarchal 106a-c, 318c payment for 111g, 114f peace-offerings 111i, 132fg, 176c, 183bh, 184g, 186ghj, 187j, 285s, 442i, 476e, 493c, 642e perpetual 111f, 113a, 186a pre-eminence of holocaust (q.v.) 111f pre-exilic, post exilic, outlook 585d, 586c pre-sinaitic sacrifice 106a-e, 111i, 187a priestly perquisites 180e, 184d, 186d-m, 187k, 188cd, 193n, 195gh, 216c, 217e, 287r, 400b, 492n, 756g, 875j profusion of ancient sacrifices 286 l prophetic attitude to 44f, 114 l, 213b, 404c, 411d, 412h, 423be, 451n, 457a, 525b, 527i, 536e, 642e, 736k psalter and 941d regulations for the poor 185f, 189n, 190m, 941a sacerdotal act (the essential) 111d, 112f, 151b, 939f salt in 184de, 492 l sin-offerings 111fg, 180c-e, 183e, 186d, 187h, 188d, 276k, 446f, 492o, 493c, 554f, 940f, 941a slaughter for food 175a, 192b, 215c slaying not a sacerdotal act 111d, 112f, cf. 492e substitution theories 192de thank-offerings 186g, 327o, 360i, 367e
 'the memorial' 184df trespass, guilt-offering 111g, 114f, 183c, 186e, 192q, 492o votive 318c, 327o, 585b water libation 284d wave-offering 113h, 180e, 186k, 187k, 193st, 328f SACRIFICE OF CHRIST 183h, 647c, 930e-g, 931c 940c, (see also Atonement, Cross, Crucifixion, Death of, Mass, Priesthood of, Redemption) ends, abolishes levitical sacrifices 183h, 507q, 927d, 930g, 939b, 940g, 941cd one, but many in application 941be

(SACRIFICE OF CHRIST) sufficient, final, irrepeatable 893eh, 894cq, 941bce the heavenly offering, liturgy 939cf SACRILEGE 65d, 250g, 259b, 273f, 687e, 716a, 736c, 737h, 848f (see also Core, Holiness) of Antiochus IV 562ce, 576c of Crassus 70h of Heliodorus 68b, 575b, 576b of Pompey 70e, 561b SADISM, Pagan 601k
SADNESS 403f
SADDUCCHEAN, The 70b, 113i, 169e, 376e, 379d, 588ab, 592a, 620f, 625b, 682gh, 703ig, 711b-i, 713ab, 736h, 766b, 827a, 881j accept the Pentateuch only 713b, 736hi and Hellenism 588a, 589f, 736h and Pentecost 113i and Rome 736h, 766e denial of angels 736h, 820g, 841i, 842b denial of Providence 713a denial of survival and resurrection 115d, 339e, 579e, 588a, 713a, 736i, 766e, 820a, 841i, 842b, 881j denial of spirit, immortality 115d, 736h, 841i, 842b extinction of 588b political opportunism of 588b, 736h reject oral obligations 588a scribes of 751j worldliness of 588a
SADLER, Printer 30k
SADOC, Zadok 179a, 249k, 259j, 261e, 262i, 267ig, 283n, 284hln, 285t, 286a SADOCITES 492n
SAFE DEPOSITS 585b
SA-GAZ, The 119 l, 120a
SAGES, The 267 l, 283b, 484j, 487q SAGITTARIUS 967g
SAHIDIC BIBLE 4b, 781h, 783f
ST GALL, monastery 4c
ST PETER'S BASILICA 338a
SAINIS, The 34c, 503jkl, 504e, 931b, 942ab merits of 214b, 271a, 642f, 859e, 966d OT and Christian, compared 102g Pauline term for Christians 656a, 845i, 869a, 906a, 910a prayers of 334fg, 642f, 948i, 966dg, 967d SAKKALA, The 228a
SAKKUTH 278i, 527i
SALADIN 567d
SALAMANU, King of Moab 519p SALAMIS, Battle of 289c, 311e, 543c, 545k in Cyprus 834c
SALATHIEL, Shealtiel 283e, 291a, 543fg, 680e, 750g SALCAH, Salecha 57j, 233g
SALEBIM 239d
SALEM for JERUSALEM 151b, 335c, 360d, 938c
SALIC LAW 173f
SALIM 788i
SALMAN 519p
SALMANA 242j
SALMANASAR, see Shalmaneser
SALMON, Mt 351c
SALOME (see also Alexandra Salome) daughter of Herodias 701b, 731f mother of Hyrcanus 70d wife of Zebedee 710b, 722g, 773b, 776e, 810d SALT 734e (see also Covenant) and nomad hospitality 184e given to new-born children 484 l losing its savour 685g, 734e Lot's wife 152d, 392b of Dead Sea 56a, 152c sacrificial 184de, 492 l, 734d sowing with 243e spiritual 913c symbol of friendship 734e valley of 277b

SALT-WORT, see Purslane
SALUTATIONS 640o (see also Greetings, Pauline Epistles) SALVATION 448ac, 449dej, 450k, 593c, 641 l, 643e, 645g, 648 l, 688a, 693a, 733b, 759b, 844bf, 846bcg, 848g, 849, 850a, 856df, 859i, 927cd, 929e, 930ce, 931a, 950e (see also Jesus, Justification, Redemption) bible-study and 2a, 10b-d certainty and uncertainty of 640m, 645g, 794f, 850bef, 854c, 855eh, 856d-f, 905f, 907e charity needed for 879f demands effort 688a faith and 643k, 648 l-o (see also Justification) for converting others 948i God's initiative in 648o Greco-Roman concept of 846c individual and collective 388i, 392c-h, 394-5 initial and final 625d, 850bfm, 861h, 931b in, through Christ, its author 547f, 550g, 749h, 751a, 817ce, 826b, 827b, 832d, 834eh, 836d, 842i, 930ace, 935a, 937c in, through the Church 657m, 795e, 824b, 825b, 857jk man's supreme need 704f, 758cd, 759f, 764f ordinary, extraordinary means 147f OT concept of 846c, 849j perseverance (q.v.) and 715d riches and 763gh sacerdotal aspect of 930e (the) saved 688a, 712d, 759b, 886 l, 935a (see also Elect) social and individual 794f subjective salvation 931ab through motherhood 654f, 660d, 921g universally needed 847-48i universally offered 448b, 646c, 688c, 735i, 739h, 743e, 746f, 824bf, 834j, 846be, 849c, 859k, 863 l, 921ef, 925d worked out with fear and trembling 640m, 645g, 905f, 907e SAMAL, Hittite State of 275a SAMARIA 57g, 58ch, 64bef, 79d, 80de, 228d, 271e, 274j, 287x, 309e, 386b, 410e, 412f, 413f, 420b, 437a-c, 439h, 478c, 527b, 534e, 692f, 693d besieged by Benhadad III 274m church of 819d, 820b, 832e deportees from 278e fall of 65b, 79d, 121fg, 135oq, 265e, 278de, 279b, 303bd, 318r, 420bc, 425p, 432a, 456e, 462d, 514h, 519cdk Herod's city, Sebaste 58h, 271e Hill of 274j Hyrcanus destroys 70b palaces of Omri, Ahab 64g, 80de, 273c plantation of 121fij, 124c, 275h, 278ghi, 291ei, 304a, 322b, 538m population of 584gh seat of Persian Governor 67e, 289g temple of Melkart in 276e three regions of 569a SAMARITAN OSTRACA, The 19k, 80e SAMARITAN PENTATEUCH 12b, 67h, 232a, 789g ages of patriarchs in 140e, 150a date of 21h Phoenician script of 21h textual peculiarities 21 l, 77a, 125e SAMARITANS, The 58cd, 67c, 121f, 169e, 218k, 278g, 291ei, 406i, 756g, 789d and Antiochus IV 562d, 563q, 576b conversion of 651e, 776g, 820b hated by Jews 58h, 756f, 789d hostility to Nehemias 295e, 296a-chi Maccabaeen conquest of 58e Messianic hope among 789g our Lord and 55c, 114e, 584n, 756afg, 757a, 789c-790d returned exiles and 67c, 281j, 288c, 291e, 295h, 543c, 544a

(SAMARITANS) schism 299f, 584eg syncretism among 278hi the good Samaritan 41b, 114e, 584n, 756ig, 757a the grateful Leper 762b the woman at Sychar 40h, 55c, 58h, 643c, 649d, 670e, 757a, 779e, 789c-790d, 794e SAMARITAN TEMPLE 67h, 70b, 299f, 789df the appeal to Deuteronomy 21 l SAMGAR, Shamgar 238e, 239j
SAMMAEL 718h
SAMMURAMAT 121d (see also Semiramis) SAMSON 57e, 63d, 238dei, 244, 313b, 360d cunning of 160c his strength supernatural 242f, 244aegk Nazarite dedication of 244ae popular hero 244a solar mythology and 244bc
SAMUEL 63c-e, 276o, 406d, 711d Aram slain by 38e, 206n, 253a and sacrifice 114 l ancestors and sons of 283p apparition at Endor 256f attitude to monarchy 251cd, 252h Books of, see Kings I and II character 252h childhood 177j, 249a-250a death of 255k (an) 'Ephraimite' Levite 283pq gospel of the Infancy and 103a, 249h, 748g growth of 249i name 249e prayer of 251b prophetic call 250a prophetic communities and 63d, 252d, 254i, 410c-e reformer, judge 63cd, 251ab regulation of Levites 283ee Saul and 252a-k, 253ab, 254i, 256f, 409f, 411a, 414i, 418f writings of 11f, 224d, 282w, 285t SANBALLAT, the Horonite 67eh, 289gi, 295e, 296ah, 299f SANCTIFICATION 1g, 2, 635b, 846c, 850abc, 851a-ik, 858bc, 929cd, 930g, 931ae, 949gh, 950d, 953a-d (see also Holiness) and suffering 388i, 389g, 457g, 853f, 911ef, 946eg Christ the sanctifier 930e of the people 229f through the Holy Spirit 914f SANCTUARY 174d, 178d, 218a, 267c, 964g (see also Centralization, Holy Place, Refuge) SANCTUARY LAMP 250a (see also Lampstand) Sanctus, The 425 l, 966b SANDAL-WOOD 269i, 286d SANDALS 731c
SANDAY, W. 607ahj
SANDSTORM, see Khamsin SANHEDRIN, The 70ad, 74cde, 289s, 308eh, 310h, 570a, 587ab, 620df, 681e, 682g, 685j, 719a, 720f, 721ab, 722h, 736cef, 739a-c, 740ce-j, 741a, 754g, 766ab, 769de, 772c, 796il apostles before 776g, 826abg, 827bc, 831a, 841i Judicial procedure of 587b meeting-place of 721a, 740g origin of 70f
 Rome and 70f, 74cd, 587b triple division of 681e, 754g, 765e SANITARY PRESCRIPTIONS 109g, 183 l, 189b, 190ir-q, 191a, 218 l SANTES PAGNINI 581e SAPHAN, see Shaphan SAPHON 243 l
SAPIENTIAL, see Wisdom
SAPPHIRA 636e, 654b (see also Ananias) SARA of ECBATANA 302bc, 304-7 SARAA 244aegj
SARACENS 487f

SARAFAND, see Sarepta
SARAH, Sarai, Sara 40i, 79k, 136f, 149q, 150bc, 151j, 152ag, 153d, 943c, 950h Abimelech and 140c, 152gh see (life span) of 140c allegorized 894f, 897a Pharaoh and 140c, 150c
 Sarai changed to Sarah 151i
SARAIAS, see Seraiah
SARAKILL, The Archangel 592d
SARASAR, Shareser 279j, 549b SARCOPHAGUS, Bed, of Og 212e SARCASM 371j, 865a, 867g, 890 i SARDINIA 269i
SARDIS 289c, 311e, 420e, 441a, 965c
SARIDA, Zeredah 270e SARIPPA, Sarephia 267g, 943e
 the widow of 267hi
SARGON I, of Akkad (Agade) 117cd, 149il, 164d SARGON II, of Assyria 121f-h, 278deg, 430b, 433a, 434h, 530v conquest of Israel 58c, 65b, 121f, 124d, 279ehkl, 291e, 303b, 420c, 425p, 427b death in battle 429 i Inemessar, Sarru-ukin 303b-e invades Philistia 60a, 430a-c, 431i, 431i SARON, see Sharon SARPHIT 278i
SARTHAM, Saredatha, see Sereda
SARIG 79i
SARVIA, Zeruah 283b, 284c
SASSANASAR, see Sheshbazzar SATAN 144a, 264d, 285b, 318qr, 320e, 547e, 593a, 683c, 696f, 704e, 718h, 728cd, 730h, 733a, 750ij, 826f, 888e, 935c, 949g, 951g, 957c, 961c (see also Beelzebub, Belial, Devils, Lucifer, Serpent) a murderer 797j assails the apostles 768e bound 971c
 Christ and 84f, 357b, 618b-d, 643f, 854c, 971c, 683c-h, 750ij, 854c, 969b, 971c deceiver, liar, false teacher 144b, 145a, 797j, 890j, 935f, 958a development of concept 144a, 285b, 318qr, 320e does not fight Satan 757f enemy of Mary 84h, 86egh, 968ik, 971d-f fall of 756d, 854c, 967f, 968i ignorant of Christ's divinity 750ij in Chronicles 285b in Job 144a, 317jk, 318qr, 320d fh, 768e in politics 683e inspires Judas 768b kingdom of 696efg, 746e, 872g, 886k, 887f, 930c powers of 872g, 890j, 971f prince of the air 900e prince, god, of this world 643f, 801h, 804c, 969b seed of 145d Self as 397h, 402ef snare of 921i
 the tempter 915e (see also Temptation) SATISFACTION 349a made by Christ 894ce, 900b SATRAPS, satrapies 58d, 67d, 122g, 290d, 291i, 292bc, 293j, 295dk SATURN 829c
SATURNINI, Sentius 676a, 749b
SATYRS 429f
SAUL 55b, 63f, 129b, 245ef, 252-57f, 282r, 284a (see also David, Jonathan, Samuel)
 'among the prophets?' 252d, 254gi, 314c, 410cd anointed 252c at Endor 63f, 253a, 284a character of 63f, 253a cremation and burial 256lm, 263b, 284a

(SAUL) destroys Nob 178c elected king 63e, 252e genealogy, family of 282hh, 283aabb melancholia of 63f, 253a, 254agi, 414b name 252b neglect of the Ark 112i, 114j reburied by David 263b tragedy of 253b, 254a, 256m SAUL OF TARSUS, see Paul SAUSATAR OF MITANNI 119e, 121a
SAWING ASUNDER 717f
SCANDAL (Gossip) 312a (see also Slander) SCANDAL (Offence) 620a, 685a, 699g, 704e, 706cd, 734d, 739i, 836fg, 862h, 875aep, 877i, 950e (see also Stumbling Block) inevitable 762a taken at Christ 633g, 642h, 705a, 753f, 731b, 753f, 781i, 794d, 795gh, 801i SCAPI-goat, Birds, etc. 190kq, 191fij, 548bc Christ and the scapegoat 191i SCARLET ROBE 538h, 722a, 741f SCETICISM 633f (see also Rationalism, Unbelief) SCETRE 159g SCHAEUMBERGER 532g
SCHIDF PAPIRI 479e
SCHISM 795h division of North from South 58d, 63e, 64a, 112d, 211c, 266e, 270g-i, 289qr, 426m, 529a the Samaritan 299f, 789d, 584eg SCHLIERMACHER, F. 604f, 606e, 607f SCHMIDKE, R. D. F., Biblical Commission on 53f-h SCHOLASTICISM 5d, 616e (see also Thomas, Scotus) SCHOLIOPHROS 928c
SCHOLZ 583g
SCHOOLS, Scribal 396hi, 404ah, 408a, 589a, 617f SCHWEITZER, A. 608cd, 621c, 916b SCIENCE 32lm, 37g, 39b, 137b, 142a, 143gk, 147c, 225c, 871a (see also Archaeology, Higher Criticism, Miracles) primitive science 333ac SCIPIO 170d, 510i
SCOPUS, Mt 57f, 428j
SCORPION, Ascent of the 239d
SCORPIONS 270g, 967g
SCOURGE, Scourging (see also Corporal Punishment)
 Jewish 270g, 890m
 Roman 271h, 741d, 808d, 809a, 827c, 837f, 888b, 890m, 891a with scorpions 270g SCRIBES, Royal 20a
SCRIBES, The 289r, 413e, 586d-g, 682gh, 690f, 727f, 728e, 732a, 756f (see also Ben Sirach, Casuistry, Inerrancy, Massoretes, Numbers, Rabbis, Substitution) age qualification 690f copy, preserve and correct Bible 12d, 22b, 991g, 457b divide OT into verses 22b exilic activity on Torah 289r (the) good lawyer and Christ 690a help form canon 12b ideal of 293b, 397b in the Kingdom 657e, 700d influence on our Lord's hearers 626a origin of 66g, 586d our Lord and 586g, 728efg, 729e, 736i-m Pharisees and 587d, 702a, 751ghi, 761d, 763cd post-exilic developments 289s, 293a, 586d-g reward of faithfulness 404h rival schools, parties 586f Sadducean 588a, 690f, 751i scribal knife of 460b

(SCRIBES) substitution, perversion of names 22b, 139h, 175i, 257c, 258b, 281k, 282aa, 283ebb, 330e, 388g, 528g, 540e unpaid, often poor 408a, 586d SCRIPT 292d (see also Alphabet, Writing) division, non-division of words 21j, 22gh cursive and uncial Greek 22gh, 581d Hebrew scripts 19 i, 21ghj, 801l, 685h punctuation 21j SCROLLS 21i, 130e, 265e, 346e, 581c (see also Book, Megilloth) dimensions of 662a the flying scroll 548a the seven-sealed scroll 966c-967c written within and without 662a SCRUPULOSITY 311f, 862a-h, 875aef, 876c, 877hi, 879d, 891b SCYTHIANS 121ji, 280h, 480p, 540f, 971f SCYTHOPOIS 684d (see also Bethshan)
SIA, The 141a, 322c, 328i, 333c, 966b (see also Deep, Gennesareth, Mediterranean) Jews, Semites and 54i, 751f, 971h sea-monster 322c, 328i, 488kl, 968ik, 969bc (see also Dragon, Rahab) the Sea Peoples 120f k
 the Temple Sea 37g, 180k, 268 i, 281h, 406h, 461f, 966ab SEAL, Sealing 156 i, 272h, 333b, 427b, 863e, 933e (see also Baptism, Confirmation) of the Spirit 897e sealing the forehead 976b, 969h seven seals 966c 967c SEAMLESS ROBE, The 742ab, 810c
SEBA, Sheba 262g
SEBAR, Shebat, The Month 83f, 546b
SEBASTIE, see Samaria SECOND COMING, see Parousia SECRETARIES, Amanuenses, see Dictation SECRETS, ultimate revelation of all 730k (see also Confidences) SEDAD 493h
SEDECIAS, Zedekiah, of Judah 66d, 114k, 122 i, 124ab, 266f, 281, 282bb, 283e, 287ee, 463a-e, 465c, 469i, 470a, 477f, 478bc, 482de, 485a-clo, 486k, 551h, 680c, 720c and Jeremiah 281ab, 453c, 463, 469f flight, capture, blinding of 281de, 477f, 484ab changed name 281a
SEDECIAS BEN CHENANANAH and Ahab 273ab SIDECIAS, the False Prophet 416c, 461d
SIDUCION 175e, 596d, 706c SIED 698b, 699 acf (see also Parables) spiritual progeny 106c, 145d, 446f, 877a, 894cf, 896cg SIFERS 206m, 282tw, 285t, 409f, 412a SIGOR, see Zoar
SIGUB 283c
SIHON, see Sihon
SIR, Mount 150f, 156b, 212c, 233e, 241c, 283h, 406i, 433c, 489k sons of 283a
SIRA, Zair 275e
SIRA, Shela 106d, 283h, 430c, 431a (see also Petra) SIRAH, Sela (in Psalmody) 313k, 335e, 540p SLEDSNACH, Printer, James 29p SLEUCIA 510e
SLEUCIDS 82h, 83a, 122i-m, 125g, 491i, 559c-e, 834d impoverishment of 68b, 575a (see also Magnesia) Palestine under the 58e, 68, 122j-l, 559cg, 560-80 politico-religious conditions under 559g, 575a seleucid era, calendar 123cd, 750d SLEUCUS I Nicator 122i, 510cd SLEUCUS II CALLINICUS 122j, 510ef
SLEUCUS III CERAUNUS 510f

SELEUCUS IV EUPATOR of Philopator 68b, 122k, 510i, 511ac, 559cg, 575ad SELF, The divided 853h-1
SELF-ASSURANCE 697f
SELF-CONTROL 143jj, 367d, 370j, 397i, 398c, 399b, 947f, 953c SELF-DENIAL, self-sacrifice 704f, 733b, 734de, 801f (see also Mortification) SELF-EXAMINATION 340d, 341ae, 653d, 892d SELF-FORGETFULNESS 772b SELFISHNESS, self-love 760a, 947a, 956dg SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS 586c, 697f, 761d, 763cd (see also Pharisees) SELLUM, see Shallum, Joachaz SEM, see Shem
SEMEI, see Shimei
SEMEIA, son of Sechenias 282n
SEMEIAS, the False Prophet 410d, 416c, 461d SEMEIAS, Prophetic writings of 224f, 262lw
SEMERON, Shimron 233c
SEMINAL IDENTITY 881g, 939a
SEMIAMIS, Sammurat 121d, 271b SEMITES 136efh, 149cdklp, 466h, 939e
SEMITIC LANGUAGES 19f-20g SEMITICISMS 103b, 225c, 662d SEMLER 3j
SENAA 290i
SENATE, The 567b, 814c
SENECA 94bh, 661c, 839cf, 843g
SENIOR 283 i
SENNAAR, see Shinar SENNACHERIB 121b-j, 301h, 303d, 349c, 430b, 439b, 484m, 577b bas-relief of 279c deportation of Judaeans 281g destruction of his army 66a, 428hk inscriptions of 66a, 236d, 279cdhj, 333e, 427a invasion of Palestine 66ab, 80g, 124c, 279c-j, 287s, 342a, 348a, 420d, 421c, 425hp, 427a, 428k, 434h sacks Babylon 278g, 279 i withdrawal and murder 279cefi, 412c, 433e, 438h SENNIM 240e
SENUSET III 59e, 118g
SEPARATION, Legal 708e (see also Divorce) SEPHEATH 239c (see also Horma) SEPHARAD 530v
SEPHARVAIM 278gi
SEPHORA, Shiphrah, the Midwife 164b
SEPHORA, Zipporah, Moses' wife 132d, 164c, 165e, 171j, 201e SEPTUAGINT, The 8abe, 10f, 12b, 23g-ll-24e, 34c, 68a, 122m, 223a, 336, 338b, 432g, 455a, 461d, 589c (see also Ezechiel, Hexapla, Kings) ages of patriarchs in 140e Alexandrian Canon 12b, 13acf, 14a and spread of Christianity 14c arrangement of Bible 382e authenticity, inspiration and authority of 24e, 34c, 37d, 589c characteristics of translators 21d, 23j, 591g citation in NT 14b, 23 i, 589c differences from MT 21m, 23j, 77a, 226b, 591g, 592e Editions of 24cd Greek of 21ad harmonized with other versions 23 i influence on NT 21d, 589c name explained 23h, 589c name of God in 105f, 858d no Jewish MS extant 14a papyri and 77acd period of composition 23hi recensions 24ab rejected by anti-Christian Jews 14c, 15a, 588c St Paul's use of 661ij Syriac Versions of 25a-c textus receptus 8a, 24c

(SEPTUAGINT) theory of Tychsen and Wutz 23i use by early church 8a, 11d, 14ab ff., 23g, 589c SEPULCHRES, rock, cave tombs 722fi (see also Burial, Tomb) the holy sepulchre 81h, 446e, 722hi, 742i, 772c, 810a, 811d whitened sepulchres 714g SERAIAH, Saraia, Baruch's Brother 460a, 461h, 472b SERAIAH, Saraia, the high-priest 67b, 283n, 290g, 543h SERAPH, Seraphim 425k, 966b SERAPIS, Serapeum 77f, 170a, 598m SERAPEUM, the lake 60e SEREDA 242j
SERGIUS PAULUS 834c
SERMON ON THE MOUNT 216a, 320 i, 345c, 611fg, 619a, 623cd, 643 i, 670f, 684d, 685-8, 723e, 728g, 751g, 780a, 860g, 908b, 946a and Sermon on the Plain 611fg, 685a, 752g inserts from the discourses 685a Jewish atmosphere of 611f scene of 685d SERMON ON THE PLAIN 611f, 752g-i dependent on Matthew 5 611fg SERON (Hiram) 560b, 563a
SERPENTS, Snakes 687g (see also Leviathan)
 (the) brazen serpent 40eh, 102r, 172i, 205d, 279b, 394b, 788d charming of 349g, 381a constellation 328i fiery, flying 79i, 425k, 430b, 436b human antipathy to 144ac, 145d in Gilgamesh Epic 144a, 145c originally walking 144b taking up, immunity from 743f, 843f (the) tempter 84e-h, 85d, 86f, 102j, 137e, 144ab, 145cd, 340c tree-snakes 430b wise as 692h worship of 144a, 145c, 279b, 513n SERVICE, Servant 295e, 400b, 441fj, 644e, 710c, 714c, 734b, 735i, 758e, 802e, 825c (see also Israel, Suffering) service of God 267g, 845d servus servorum 149c, 758 i, 768d, 934b SERVILITY 399a, 845c, 947c
SESAC, see Sheshonq
SESAC, Sheshak, for Babylon 459 ln, 467e
SESAN, Sheshan 283c
SESSION OF CHRIST, the Heavenly 704g, 709e, 720g, 736 i, 743g, 766f, 817c, 822b, 824e, 829f, 845g, 850g, 851h, 907cd, 914h, 930be, 932c, 933c-e, 934bf, 939c, 944a, 949h at right hand of God 39f, 824e SETH 136e, 146af SETHITES, The 136fh, 146f-k SETI 1 60e, 120c, 163c SETIM, Settim, see Shittim
SEVEN, SEVENTY, Significance of 41c, 152k, 153o, 272c, 284m, 304f, 334f, 354c, 367pr, 368q, 372o, 418b, 697f, 754a, 962d, 964f, 967a Festal Calendar 113a seven generations of exile 472f, 476b seventy times seven 707a seventy weeks in prophecy 507a-r seventy years of exile 66e, 290a, 455c, 459m, 461c, 546b, 549e SEVEN-BRANCHED CANDLESTAND, see Lamp-stand SEVEN BROTHERS, The 576e
SEVEN CHURCHES, Letters to 845a, 898f, 955d, 964df-965 SEVEN HEAVENS, see Heavens
SEVEN SPIRITS BEFORE THE THRONE 964b SEVENTY-TWO, Seventy, Mission of the 620b, 725b, 744e, 746c, 756cd, 774b, 854c
SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD 81f

SEVEN WORDS FROM THE CROSS, The 3b, 343d, 345b, 772a
 (i) 'Father, forgive them . . .' 686d, 771a
 (ii) 'Eli, Eli, lamma sabachthani' 3b, 343d, 605b, 722d, 742cef, 746c, 772a
 (iii) 'I thirst' 742f, 771a, 810e
 (iv) 'Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise' 771b (see also Paradise)
 (v) 'Woman, behold thy Son . . .' 672e, 776f, 810e
 (vi) 'consummatum est' 810e, 940g
 (vii) 'Father, into thy hands . . .' 343d, 345b, 722e, 742f, 772a, 810f, 829f SEX 182e, 211g, 218i, 219c, 872ef, 873cd-874h after the Resurrection 713b, 737h, 766e and ritual uncleanness 85k, 103a, 189k-n, 191a-c, 324e, 586a, 617d, 681c, 691f, 730j, 749g heretical views on 145b, 922a Jews' double moral standard 596b menstruation 191c, 192j, 691f, 730j pagan sexual morality 602ab, 660g, 915f (see also Paganism, Prostitution) sanctity of sex, genitals 144d, 145b, 219c, 660d segregation of sexes 405d, 552d, 589b, 750a seminal emissions 191bc, 198b, 218 i sexual sin 175f, 305a, 367ij, 368st, 402f, 593a, 847h, 873dl, 915f, 944ce sexual worship 115j, 192s, 218n, 271b, 289b, 448g, 459i, 476g, 514n, 517e, 526k, 598n, 864e, 865f (see also Prostitution) tree of knowledge and 145b SEXTARY, The, see Hin
SHAALBIM, Salebim 239d
SHABAKA, Pharaoh 279g, 431kl, 432h, 438b
SHABATAQA, Pharaoh 279g
SHADRACH, see Sidrach
SHAKESPEARE, W. 1h, 33d, 56h, 275j, 374c, 582d, 918i SHALISH, A. 441c
SHALLUM, Sellum 65d, 280p, 283e, 459d (see also Joachaz) of Israel 277hj SHALMANESER III 64g, 65a, 121c, 124de, 266d, 267k, 275dg (see also Jehu, Qarqar) obelisk of 123f
SHALMANESER IV 121d, 277e, 462d
SHALMANESER V 65b, 121f, 278de, 303bc, 420c, 430b, 514h Shalom, Greeting 275j, 692h, 804d SHAMASH 280j
SHAMASH-SHUM-UKIN 121k, 287u
SHAMGAR, Samgar 238e, 239j, 240a-c, 241e SHAMMAH, Semma 284de
SHAMMAI, Rabbi 376c, 586f, 596b, 663c, 708bcd, 735b SHAMSHI ADAD I 117 i; V 121d
SHAMSA-ILUMA 117j
SHAPHAN, Saphan 280j, 459c
SHAREZER, Sarasar 279j, 549b
SHARON, Saron 549j, 56g, 58cd, 121f, 228a, 233cg, 283j, 384g, 420b, 439 i, 841m SHAVEH-KIRIATHAIM, Save-Cariathaim 150f SHAVING 157c, 320g, 423h, 603a
SHALTIEL, see Salathiel
SHEAR-YASHUB, Jasub 418d, 425s, 427e
SHEBA, see Seba
SHEBA, Queen of 269ch, 282uhh, 286o, 697e, 758a (see also Saba)
SHEBNAH, the minister 80h, 434b SHECHEM, Sichem 57g, 58h, 59h, 63d, 64c, 80i, 106a, 118gk, 131k, 139e, 150b, 155def, 158i, 214e, 228d, 232a, 237ef, 238ef, 243a-d, 245j, 270gh, 309j, 406i, 789c

(SHECHEM) massacre by Simeon and Levi 155e, 159f
SHEEP, SHEPHERD, abomination to Egyptians 158c and shepherdess 382-7 banned by Rabbis 749e Christ, the Good Shepherd 479a, 489fj, 643b, 644c, 657m, 718g, 731g, 758d, 760c, 796a, 799a-fh, 812e, 813d, 820d, 870a, 930a, 944g, 949h, 951f crook, rod, staff 486h, 551d-e God, the shepherd of Israel 343e, 354d, 358c, 381g, 383f, 397i, 441b, 489h, 545df, 551befj, 552d, 760c, 799e lost sheep 657m, 706e, 760bc Mesha, breeder of sheep 273 l of Bethlehem 749e St Peter 624de, 657mm, 812a, 951f sheep and goats 584f, 670m, 671e, 718fgh sheep not of this fold 657m sheep without a shepherd 273b, 731g shepherds, episcopi of Christ's flock 659c shepherds of Israel 478e wolves in sheep's clothing 688b, 969de SHEKEL, Sicle 82f-h, 83a, 243c, 244 l, 277i, 286g, 296g, 462k, 493a, 528f, 705f thirty pieces of silver (shekels) 174h SHEKINAH, The 359b, 591c, 592c, 783c, 829b, 857d, 968g, 971h SHEM, Sem 102j, 137f, 149cp, 404a Shema 213c, 586b, 589b, 591d, 596f, 713c, 756f (see also Profession of Faith)
SHEMITES, see Semites
SHENASSAR 290d
SHEOL, Hades, Hell 115c, 137e, 156i, 203k, 256f, 260h, 322b, 323dh, 324i, 328h, 339f, 340f, 341c, 342c, 345a, 348d, 352a, 353a, 356a, 360i, 363ac, 365ef, 366c, 367h, 368gt, 374a, 378b, 379a, 400g, 402e, 403g, 429hj, 473f, 488kl, 520q, 527h, 532e, 595a, 951a, 964e, 967f contrasted with earth 340f, 380c, 440c no return from 318o, 320k, 322 l, 324gh, 436a
SHEPHELAH 54f, 55a, 57e, 549e, 570c
SHESHBAZZAR 288c, 289eh, 290d-gm identified with Zorobabel ? 290d, 543f SHESHONQ I, Sesac, Shishak 64e, 270em, 286u inscription at Karnak 78a, 270o invasion of Palestine 64e, 78a, 270o Megiddo stele of 64e, 78a, 120m sacks Jerusalem 64e, 120m, 353b, 354c, 356b
SHETHARBOZNAI, Stharbozanai 292b
SHEWBREAD, Loaves of Proposition 111b, 112f, 113c, 177d, 178c, 194b, 255b, 268n, 283ee, 285q, 297k, 309 l, 492g, 696a, 725d, 728f, 940cf in pagan, Ishtar worship 79h, 177d, 194b SHIBBOLETH 20a, 55g, 243 l
SHIELDS, Golden 269i
SHIGIONOTH 540q
SIHOR, Sihor 234a, 284i, 434f (see also Nile)
SIHOR-LIBNATH, Sihor Labanath 57i, 236d
SHILOH, Silo 57g, 62cd, 63d, 135n, 228bd, 235d, 237a, 270e annual feast, dance at 245k destruction of 46b, 245d, 250g, 415g, 457a sanctuary of 112b, 114i, 177j, 178a-c, 211c, 228b, 230a, 245ai, 249c, 339e, 340e, 353c SHILONITES 283ee
SHILOH (Messias) 102j, 137f, 159g-h, 550g, 792g SHIMEA, Shammua, Simmaa 283e
SHIMEI, Semeia, son of Sechenias 283f Semei, son of Gera 261eg, 262ef, 267df

SHIMEI, Semei, son of Elah 267b
SHINAR, Sennaar 59e, 117a, 149lo, 150e, 428o, 548b (see also Babylonia)
SHIPS 269i, 286n, 487 l (see also Tarshish) ensigns 487 l grain ships 843bfg SHIPWRECK OF ST PAUL 814c, 820cfg, 843e, 891a SHIPWRIGHTS, Phoenician 267n, 487 l SHISHAK, see Sheshonq
SHITTIM, Settim (Acacia) 176g, 177a, 178d, 207a SHOE, Symbolism of the 164g, 219c, 247j, 526k SHORTHAND 662b, 816b
SHOULDER OF THE PHILISTINES, The 428o
SHROUD, The Holy 722bh, 742i, 773c, 811d, 812c SHUHITES, Suhites, Shua 153f, 318a
SHULAMITE 386d
SHUNAM, Sunam, Shunamite 57h, 267a, 274a-d, 275c, 386d, 753b, 943e SHUSHAN (Susa) 505b
SIAMON, Pharaoh 63j, 64e, 267g
SIBA, Ziba 260a, 261eg
SIBRAIM Sabarim 493h
SIBYL, The 92o
SIBYLLINE ORACLES 92o, 951h, 969g, 970k SICCUTH, see Sakkut SICELEG, see Ziklag
SICHEM, see Shechem
SICILY 598n
SICKNESS (see also Disease) converting 330f prayer in, after 345a, 403g, 404f, 440 sin and 402e, 404f, 439g, 446c, 878g
SICLE, see Shekel
SICYON 572b
SIDDIM, Vale of 150e
SIDON, Sidonians 119m, 120m, 121c-e, 149fj, 234b, 236d, 267m, 271efh, 274h, 280c, 281c, 309c, 434e-h, 478d, 487s, 530g, 550d, 695a, 732d, 833bh, 843b (see also Astarte)
SIDRACH, Shadrach, 269d, 496e, 499e-q SIGNET RING 387b, 543i, 544k
SIGNS AND WONDERS (see also Miracles) Gideon's (Gideon's) Fleece 242f natural and preternatural 226fg of the Last Times 522de, 523j seeking a sign 265k, 592a, 618d, 619e, 683d, 697d, 732g, 757f, 758a, 787b, 870c the great sign (Jer 31:22) 85b, 462f
SIGNS OF THE TIMES 670j-o, 671bcdfpq, 703fg, 715ac, 737af, 738bcd, 758g, 762f, 767gh, 914dhj, 917b-e, 938a, 954c (see also Antichrist, Parousia) the great apostasy 917b the sign of the Son of Man 670mo, 671du SIHON, Sehon 56bc, 61b, 205f, 212d, 238h, 243j, 267i, 362f, 430c (see also Heshbon) territory of 61b, 233f, 234c SILAS, Sylvanus 665e, 668a, 836g, 837ag, 838b, 839b, 864h, 886f, 890i, 905d, 908a, 914ce, 915a, 928d, 951h secretary to St Peter 949c, 951h SILENCE, Argument from 113 lm, 289 l, 410de, 412ab Wise 317c, 369e, 370k, 402f SILLO, see Shiloh SILOAM, Siloe 58g, 80g, 267d, 279dm, 281d, 287s, 295gl, 348a, 427c, 554d, 796dj, 798b Ezechias's (Hezekiah's) inscription 19k, 80b, 82b, 89g, 279m, 326i SILLOS, Grain 80h
SILVER 285r
SIMEON 617d, 749hi (see also Nunc Dimittis) prophecy of 85k, 86i, 643a, 749i, 758g, 801h, 944b

SIMEON, Simeonites 57e, 155e, 157g, 158c, 159af, 236a, 239ab, 283h, 309gj absorbed by Judah 222f, 270e, 493k SIMIRRA 121g, 487 l
SIMON, Richard 3j, 5f
SIMON AND JUDE, SS 672e, 673, 700e
SIMON MAGUS 91a, 94i, 632e, 830cd SIMON OF CYRENE, St 722b, 725c, 770c
SIMON THE BENJAMITE 575a
SIMON THE MACCABEE 68dg, 80c, 560b, 561c, 565ac, 568d, 569c, 570c, 571-72d autcomony conceded to 68g, 571e coinage of 83a, 571c, 572a deliverance of the citadel 571c establishes high-priestly dynasty 68g, 571f, 585a, 936c reign of peace, piety, splendour 571d renews Roman, Spartan treaty 571e, 572a testimonial to 571f
SIMON II, the son of Onias 68b, 396h, 397c, 406ah SIMON THE PHARISEE, Leper 719b, 753gh
SIMON THE TANNER 832b
SIMON ZELOTES, St 692e, 728i
SIMONY 692fg (see also Simon Magus)
SIMPLICITY 687d, 695a-d, 706b, 748b, 763eg, 825b of God 239f SIN, The Moon God 59d, 280j (see also Moon) SIN, Wilderness of 57b, 163g, 171bf, 202d, 204 l, 234e (see also Sinai) SIN, Sinners (see also Death, Fall, Freewill, God, Original, Sacrifice, Sex, Tongue) advertent, voluntary, and not 111f-h, 183c, 185abce, 203c, 286kk, 343a, 378d, 402f and disease 690e, 791de, 798a and loss of grace 114f and the Law 848b, 853a-f, 882c and Trespass, distinguished 883c besetting sins 944a capital sins 184h charity covers 951d Christ became Sin for us 888a Christ friend of sinners 745j, 746f, 751i, 752a, 753gh, 759af, 760b, 763d consequences, wages of 141d, 143f, 193d, 307b, 389c, 397g, 402e, 403e, 471b, 480 l, 485f-k, 486d, 488deh, 850 l, 851ik, 853bg, 894c, 930e, 935af, 946h, 948a, 956b, 957c, 970d covering of 183f, 345c, 951d crucify Christ 930a crying for vengeance 146a, 152b expiable and inexpiable 111g, 114f, 184h, 203c (the first sin 84d, 143f, 145ab, 189m, 397g, 403e growth of 146ab hardens conscience 374c, 935f, 938b hatred for sinners explained 339d iniquity, sin, transgression, distinguished 349a mars creation 141d, 358g material and formal 106d mortal sin 1f, 402e, 873c, 875c, 878g, 892d nature of 397h, 947d, 957c negative 397h occasions of 686ai, 734d of omission 110e, 111h overcomings in 397i, 402e, 645i, 851, 930e post-baptismal 851c, 854d, 953c, 957c pre-exilic, post-exilic notions 595d produces its own punishment 366d, 369fg punishment certain 401c repentance and amendment 397i, 402e sense of 425m, 586c, 592b, 596f, 633h sin as debt 183c, 686i sin lists 847fi source of sin 397gh, 645j, 854d state of 760e, 937e (see also Slavery) (in) thought 110e, 163g, 172gh, 334f

(SIN) (the) unforgiveable, inexpiable 111h, 114f, 184h, 203c, 592b, 654c, 697b, 729d, 758c, 938ab, 942c universality of sin 282r, 318np, 321ac, 324c, 325d, 365d, 371e, 379d, 399a, 558d, 642aj, 643a, 847-48i, 850i, 896g, 929e, 956c unto death 958f vernal If, 324c visited on progeny 213d, 219b, 485f (see also Responsibility, Solidarity) warning the sinner 480i, 488b with a high hand 111h, 203c, 333c woman who was a sinner 643h, 739b, 745i, 753gh, 754a SINAI, Mount 61, 172d-f, 211c, 241c, 350d, 351c, 792f, 897a, 944c (see also Revelation) identification of 172a-c monastery of S. Catherine 25f twin peaks of 172bd SINAI PENINSULA 151f, 672a inscription 80i mines of 60c, 80i, 285c, 329d population capacity 61c SINAITIC GOSPELS 25f SINAITIC LEGISLATION 61c-e, 172ff., 211c, 829c, 932b, 933a, 944cd (see also Covenant, Decalogue, Law) connexion with Pentecost 172c, 823ab SINAITICS, Codex S. (Aleph) 22j, 581g, 582acg, 583a, 726a SINGERS, at feasts and funerals 290o
 choir-boys 336 choirs of Levites 112g, 283q, 285dgh, 287n, 290k SINGLE-MINDEDNESS 687ab
SINIM, Sinites 444g
SIN-MURALLIT 59d
SIN-SHAR-ISHKIM 121i
SION 258f, 259a, 526a (see also Jerusalem, New Jerusalem) daughter(s) of 348h, 357h, 470ad glorification of 419gh, 445-7 Mount city of David 562c throne of God 471k SIPPAR 280k
SIRION, Sirion, Sanir, Mt (Hermon) 164f, 212h, 344f SIRIUS, Sothis, Dog-star, heliacal rising of 118c (see also Sothic Period) SIROCCO 722df, 742d SISIRA 57i, 240ae, 241kl
SITTIM, Abel Sittim 229ceg
SIVAN, The Month 473c
SIX-SIX-SIX 671p, 969dg
SIXTUS V. edition of Vulgate 28c Vatican edition of LXX 3e, 24c SIXTUS OF SIENA 13b, 36c
SIXTY, Mesopotamian Numerical Base 532i SKIN OF THE TITTH 326g SKINS, Wine 728d
SKIRT, Covering with 484i
SKY-SCRAPERS 149o
SLANDER 367o, 370j, 403f, 407, 656ef, 721f, 722f, 728cd endured for Christ 949cd, 950ef, 951c suffered by Christ 753f, 764c, 770a, 771a SLAUGHTER, RITUAL 182e, 186i, 192ab, 215cf, 309k and idolatry 192b as a peace-offering 111i not always in force 111i, 175a, 192b, 215c reason for 111i SLAVES, Slavery 212g, 267n, 269g, 463bc, 601i, 660ij (see also Canaanites) beating to death 174f, 595f branding of 146a, 442j, 967b, 969f Christianity and 660ij, 874ab, 878e, 904b, 913c, 922f, 925c, 926d, 949deg, 950g economic effect on poor 596e education of 602c emancipation, redemption 174cg,

216b, 246g, 296f, 463bc, 493d, 595f, 644c, 650b, 660i, 710c, 735i, 845d (SLAVES) enslavement for debt 175b, 216b, 274a, 296e, 321o, 445g, 525b, 584mn, 707b enslavement of children 216b, 274a, 321o, 328e, 445g enslavement of fellow-Israelites 175b, 219b, 287i, 296e, 525b form of a 660i, 806c, 907bc industrial slavery 601i, 602e in NT Palestine 584m, 595f, 596e in Roman Empire 597i, 598ak, 601i, 602ce, 753a, 828b, 908c Mosaic and Mesopotamian law contrasted 38e, 174cf of non-Jews, life-long 194h pagan mutilation of 174f
 pedagogues 872c
 price of a man 156i, 551f, 578b, 719c, 721bcd punishment of 174f, 595f, 660j, 717f redemption by Apollo 81d, 845d release of Israelites at Jubilee of 174c, 194hin-p religion of the slave 218f rights of slaves 173h, 174cg, 595f, 660i runaways, fugitives 218m, 660i, 926 slave-raiding 219b, 274g slaves of Christ 660i, 669c e, 845cd, 874e slaves of God 748g, 851ik, 855a slaves of the (Mosaic) Law 81d, 874d, 887e slaves to sin 81d, 735i, 797i, 851jk, 853b, 874d, 927c, 930e slave-trade 156i, 526ce, 577h, 601i spirit of adoption and 855ab taxed by Rome 598d temple slaves 146a treatment of 404h, 595f, 660cj, 753a two kinds of 377d, 456c voluntary attachment 174c wives of 174c
SLAVONIC BIBLE 4b, 26f
SLOTH 367n, 369j, 370en, 373g, 718cd
SMYRNA 964h
SNFRU, Pharaoh 118d
SNOBBERY 947c
SNOW 322n, 333c, 550m
SO, Sua 278d
SOAN, see Tanis
SABA, Zobah 57k, 120j, 284
SABSA, see Shebna
SORRIERY 950c, 951d
SOCIO, Soc 55a, 57e, 80e, 283g
SOCIAL EVILS 277g, 296ef, 328c, 376d, 378c, 379a, 421e, 423h, 424d-i, 425b, 449g, 525a, 526k o, 527bcg, 528f, 534egil, 536f (see also Classes, Slavery)
 Jewish extremes of wealth and poverty 584k-o, 596e pagan 597i, 598k, 601h-k, 602e SOCIAL INTERCOURSE, Life 364f, 374a, 400, 660ab between Jews and Gentiles 584c, 586a, 587f, 589d-h, 590d, 595e Christian-Pagan 867b, 875-7, 888e, 950hi, 965ab of poor and rich in Palestine 584m pagan sacrifice and 600h, 875b with bad Christians 873a SOCIAL UPHEAVALS 960h SOCIETY (see also Classes) basis of 374d Christianity and 660abr, 921d, 925f inequality in 371j pagan brotherhoods, guilds 633h social background of Gospels 584dfj-o social outcasts among Jews 584n social strata in Roman Empire 597d, 598ab, 602eg, 633h, 864c subordination to authority 143i SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, SPCK 10f SOCOTH, Succoth, see Succoth SOCRATES 590c, 599f, 604f, 860g SUDOM AND GOMORRA 105g, 106d, 150g, 151b, 152bc, 339g, 341d, 362k, 395e, 400d, 401c, 405a, 471f, 478e, 484o, 692h, 695a, 762e, 953i, 961bc, 971bc SODOMY, Sodomites, see Hierodules, Prostitution SOEURS IN EGYPT, The 60, 78a, 107, 125d-f, 151e, 309f, 351a, 519c

SOLAR MYTHOLOGY 244bc
SOLDIERS OF CHRIST 923f armour, weapons of 449k, 898h, 904c-e, 916c SOLIDARITY, of family, tribe 110fg, 152h, 219b, 237b, 246g, 325k, 327eh, 360c, 462g, 485ef, 595c, 642f, 935bc of Christ with man 930c of king and people 264c of mankind 237b, 264e, 412h, 462g, 471j, 645j, 838e of nation 110f, 359b, 458h, 462g, 595f of parents and children 110g, 390a, 462gm, 471j with Christ 645j (see also Union) SOLOMON 57i, 63hj, 64a, 124i, 129b, 217d, 225b, 235c, 256d, 260h, 262fi, 267-70f, 285cq-t, 286a-p (see also Sheba, Temple) accession 238i, 267b-d, 282shh, 285q-t, 286a accredited with Wisdom books, Canticles 314d, 376d, 382a, 383n, 388he age 267g Ahias and 270e, 411a ancestor of Christ 543f and Egypt 267g, 269g, 270c and Hiram 63j, 269ig, 286dmn and law of one sanctuary 112c Annals of 224d armoury of 433h birth 267b book of the Acts of 265fk, 270f buildings of 63j, 64e, 267h, 268i, 269g, 286m (see also Temple) cedes East Galilee to Hiram 63j, 269fg chariots, horses, stables 63j, 80f, 217d, 226c, 267k, 269gi, 286cp completes conquest of Canaan 62c court, ministers, administration 267hi Davidic covenant and 259c David's conquests and 259g death of 270f dedication of temple 269a-e, 282u, 286k empire of 151e, 267gi, 269e, 270f enslaves Canaanite remnants 63j, 267n, 269g, 286cm, 290m external circumstances favouring 265i, 270f forced labour under 267h, 269g, 270fg, 286em God's promises to 267g, 268c, 285c, 286b idolatry of 63j, 64a, 114i, 270abf, 282f, 399a ivory throne of 269i litter and pavilion of 385bc lyrics, psalms of 267i, 269b, 776c merchant fleet of 63j mines, foundries of 268n, 269gi oppresses the Northerners 58b, 63j, 64a, 270ef originally Yedidiah 406e our Lord and 758a palace of 63j piety, prayer of 267g, 286k pool of 295i proverbs of 11f, 267i, 364be, 369a removes his opponents 267ef revolts against 270c-f sacrifices at Gibeon, Gabaon 265k, 267g, 286a social, economic tyranny of 63j, 64a, 267hi, 269ig, 270b, 286c taxation, finance 58a, 63j, 267i, 269f, 270f trade 54i, 63j, 149k, 217d, 267n, 269ij, 270c, 286cn type of Christ 270f, 352d, 934a

- (SOLOMON) wealth 64a, 267j, 269g-j, 270f, 286cop, 387f wisdom of 267gl, 269h, 270f, 285c, 286o, 314d, 364e, 376d, 377c wives, polygamy of 63j, 110h, 267g, 270a, 272i, 286m, 382k, 383ad, 385a
- SOMALILAND 269g
- SON, Various Biblical meanings of 166f, 267h, 276a, 287g, 290i, 303e, 410c
- SON OF MAN, The 618f, 621h, 625e, 690ag, 697a, 705ce, 716f, 718ig, 720g, 728b, 737d, 738bc, 740h, 746d, 767gi, 769e, 781d, 785e, 794e, 829f, 964de, 970 (see also Parousia)
blasphemy against 697a Ezekiel 480h, 503i, 504d, 506e in Daniel 945m, 503gkm, 504d-g, 621h, 690a, 704g, 711i, 716f, 720g, 723f, 728b, 737d, 738c, 740h, 746d, 752e, 758a, 769e, 829f, 964de in Enoch, Henoch 92i, 504g, 964d in Psalms 341b, 740h in the Apocalypse 964de, 970a the sign of 670mo, 671du, 716f
- SONS OF GOD 85b, 316h, 339a, 340h, 622abde, 640de, 641hg, 683bc, 688c, 695h-d, 711g, 720g, 722f, 726d, 727ae, 728h, 730h, 736f, 740h, 742g, 746c, 748e, 750f, 756e, 765a, 766cf, 772b, 781d, 784h, 787b, 788c, 792, 817e, 825e, 826c, 831f, 834g, 855c, 927d, 929c, 930ahf, 933f, 934a, 935d, 936c, 949h (see also Divinity of Christ, Fatherhood of God, Jesus Christ) and Daughters of Men, 593a, 951b angels 41h, 146j, 320e, 333b, 356b, 749e, 934a beloved only-begotten son 640de, 641hg, 650c, 684bc, 696d, 705b, 727e, 733d, 736f, 755b, 782b, 783df, 788efk children of the resurrection 736i Christian sonship 640cd, 650cd, 735f, 783bc, 806h, 944b (see also Adoption) Israel 110c, 114b, 182c, 302e, 309i, 358f, 383k, 404d, 471b, 622b, 857d, 934a men in general 935ab peacemakers 685f
the Sethites 146fij, 148a title of king 248j, 259e
- SONG OF SONGS, see Canticles
- SONS OF THE PROPHETS, The 63d, 252d, 254i, 274ek, 410c f, 412a, 414b-e, 418g, 462g, 553b
- SONS PUNISHED FOR FATHERS 213d, 219b, 485f (see also Solidarity)
- SOOTHSAVERS 409i, 418f, 816a
- SOPHAR, the Naumathite 317c, 318a, 319c, 323e i, 325k, 327a d, 328n, 330c
- SOPHISTICATION 695a-d, 696a, 697f
- SOPHOCLES 947g
- SOPHONIAS, Zephaniah, the priest 281i
- SOPHONIAS, Zephaniah, the prophet 460e, 461d, 541, 542 his song of consolation 542n-p
- SOPORNIC, Bedawin 240e, 241k
- SORA, Saraites 283d
- SOREK, Sorek 244 i
- SORCE, Wall of Partition 560b, 568c
- SORTES, Cham Argument 391c
- SOSPATER 863j
- SOSTHENES 839c, 869a, 906a
- SOSTRAUS 575f, 576b
- SOTTRE, Pope 35d
- SOTERIOLOGY 849c, 859i (see also Atonement, Redemption, Salvation) in I Epistle to Hebrews 929c, 930e-931b pagan soteriology 849c (see also Mysteries)
- SOUTH PELOPONES 59e, 118e, 123c, 140b
- SOUL, Animal 115c, 137e, 378a
- SOUL, Human 704f, 713c (see also Immortality, Spirit, Transmigration) development of concept 114c, 115ac, 137de, 365ef, 378a, 402e immaterial 114c, 115c, 143k, 388c Platonic doctrine 378b pneuma, spirit 115c, 916e
- (SOUL) psyche 916e relation to body 137e, 391gi, 599e, 866g spiritual death of, see Death supreme importance, value of 644c, 733b, 758cd, 759f, 762c, 862g temple of God 875d theory of pre-existence 391g
- SOUL (nepeš) 111e, 114c, 340c, 371g, 378a seat of bodily passions 399b
- SOUR GRAPES 462g, 485f
- SOUTHERN CROSS 322k
- SOWING 698b
- SPAIN 94i, 149h, 269i, 286p, 423k, 434f, 530v, 532a, 567b, 631f, 863de, 882c the Bible in 4g, 10d
- SPAN MEASURE 82b
- SPARROWS 693c
- SPARTA 311f, 570a, 576a
- SPECHS, The Protection of 192pr
- SPECULATION, Bible a check on 85 i Jewish 315c, 316dh, 590e, 591f, 592de, 593a, 595c Hellenic 316h, 909e
- SPEECH 369bh, 370dein, 373d, 399b, 402f, 697bc, 913c, 947a, 950ci, 951d (see also Language, Lingua Franca, Tongues)
- SPENDTHRIFT 370n
- SPIES, Burial 811d
- SPIES 108a, 157g-h, 202c-f, 228c, 234d-f
- SPIKINARD, 385f, 719b, 801c
- SPINOZA 87c
- SPIRIT 114c, 371g, 648c (see also Breath, Holy Spirit, Soul, Spiritual Being) and flesh 854caf, 897c and letter 852h, 887c evil spirit from God 243d, 253a, 254ag, 857p of Christ 428m, 641h, 648cd, 651c, 845e, 854a of Moses 201b of God 480deh, 490ce, 492c, 818a Sadducees denial of 115d
- SPIRITISM 632c (see also Mediumship, Necromancy)
- SPIRITUAL AND TEMPORAL POWERS 74a, 207i, 535k, 660s union of 289s, 571f unite against Our Lord 618f
- SPIRITUAL BEING, Growth of Concept of 114cfe, 115ac, 137d, 142c, 143dk, 591g, 592d
- SPIRITUAL GIFTS, see Charismata
- SPIRITUAL LIFE, The 40i, 623c, 640hil, 699a, 846h, 850a, 854, 856g-j, 898 i, 931ab (see also Christian Life, Mortification, Prayer, Sanctification, Soldiers) action and contemplation 620b, 757a, 920e babes in Christ 871a, 937d bible-study and Ig. 2, 10b-d Christ its source 640hi, 902d Church in 635-8, 902a-d consolations in 950d dangers of active life 920e dying to live 801f growth, progress in 634d, 635b, 640h Kingdom of God 872d principle of perfection 909i, 911a spiritual-mindedness 871ab suffering in 911ef
"to him that hath shall be given . . ." 643c, 698c
- SPIRITUALS, Post-Reformation 851b
- SPIRIT OF VINEGAR (q.v.) 722e, 810f
- SPRINGS 488h (see also Water Supply) Dragon Spring 295f
Spring of the Caller 244j spring of the Lady Mary 267c
- STACHYS 863g
- STADIS, Stadia 82c, 774b, 793g
- STAFF 731c
- STANTON V. H. 607hk
- STAR OF BETHLEHEM, plant 274m
- STARS 322k, 333d, 405f, 525c, 527g, 881 i (see also Astrology, Astronomy, Constellations) creation and nature of 141ac, 142b falling from heaven 738b falling, meteors 429k of the Magi 681def morning 333b, 429k, 749e
"star", a royal title 206o worship of 109c, 114i, 212g, 278f, 280aj, 441c, 457a, 527i, 829c
- STATE, The 660s, 861 (see also Church and Citizenship, Democracy, Government, Kings, Theocracy, Taxation) anti-God States 633g, 671p, 861b, 970kl, 971c
- STATER, The 83a, 705f, 719c
- STATUS, see Pillars
- STATUES 212f
- STEPHANUS 659ce, 870a, 882gh
- STEPHANUS (Estienne) Robertus 581e, 583e
- STEPHEN, St 150a, 631d, 632e, 659a, 664a-c, 676g, 740g, 767e, 785e, 816b, 817ade, 820g, 828, 829, 830a, 831g, 833a, 841ef, 942d, 944e
- STEPHEN LANGTON 27i, 581e
- STERILIZATION 218k
- STEWARDSHIP, Principle of 110d, 360f, 656d, 717ef, 718c-e, 735c, 761a-f, 763h, 871i
- STHABUZANAI, Shethar Boznai 292b
- STIBIC STONE 275j
- STOICISM 593j, 601cde, 693d, 838cdfg, 847i, 859 i immense vogue in Roman times 601e its influence for good 590c, 601f its weakness and falsity 601f Logos, World Soul and Wisdom 316g, 601b, 781b, 963bc popular Stoic preachers 601e
- STONE AGE 138be
- STONE OF STUMBLING, Rock of Offence 427c, 950e
- STONES FOR BREAD 683cf, 687g
- STONING 174c, 215c, 218gi, 272h, 276 i, 287g, 797a, 829f, 833f, 834k, 835d, 929b
- STORAN 157i
- STRANGERS, Sojourners 211g, 214d, 218akm, 219b, 282i, 285c, 286c, 823c, 846i
- STRATEGI, The 816a, 837fh
- STRATIGRAPHY 80a
- STRAUSS D. F. 87f, 604f, 605efg, 606d, 608b, 621b
- STRIETER, B. H. 607a, 608a, 610g, 611e
- STRENGTH IN WEAKNESS, Christian 883c, 884d, 885b, 886abl, 887gh, 888bc, 891g, 892c
- STRIKING HANDS 367m
- STROPHES, see Poetry
- STUMBLING BLOCK (Stone) 427c, 858a, 859d, 870c, 950e (see also Contradiction, Scandal)
- SUA, So 278d
- SUBMISSION TO GOD'S WILL 102e, 157i, 302ab, 304d, 317b, 321h, 333a, 365b, 471b, 745fj, 748e, 751i, 752h, 760a, 765a, 767a, 886c
- SUBORDINATION OF THE SON 671u, 699g, 710b, 735h
- SUBSTITUTION 192d, 644e (see also Commutation, Firstborn, Redemption) penal substitution 61d, 184b, 192d, 642ef, 645e, 846c, 849g i, 859g, 888a
- SUCCESSORS, The Wars of the 122i, 559c, 562a
- SUCCOTH (Socoth, Socoth) in Egypt 60e, 163c, 169g, 170b in Transjordan 57j, 155d, 242aj, 243 i, 245e, 350b
- SUCCOTH-BENOTH, Sochothbenoth 278i
- SUDAN, The 830e
- SULTAN 584c, 605c
- SULZ CANAL 122g, 170a
- SUFFERING 302c, 304ab, 307bc, 314b,

319a, 320n, 326j, 339f, 353a, 366k, 457g, 469 ff., 533g, 685e, 853f, 855ef (see also Evil, Job, Mental, Passion, Punishment) (SUFFERING) educative 935c, 937c, 944b expiatory 435k, 436c, 642f for Christ 827c, 951e glorifying God by 949g, 951e meritorious 388i, 389g remedial, medicinal 238 l, 317fm, 318k, 331de, 332cd sanctifying 853f, 911ef, 935a spiritual suffering 855fh vicarious suffering 422ad, 444h, 446adfg, 689g, 846e with Christ 745g, 886b, 887h, 900bc, 911d-f, 951acef SUFFERING SERVANT 42d, 419g, 421d, 422a, 446g, 618f, 621h, 733a, 735i, 768f, 817ce, 825e, 826c, 830e, 834j additions to the songs 422bf, 441 l
 (the) four songs 422abef, 441i-m, 444h-l, 445h-k, 446 independence of the odes 441d, 444gh, 446a, 447g interpretation of 422cd Jews reject 446c mediator of new covenant 441 l Messias, Christ 422cdf, 441ij, 446c, 618f, 621h, 634c, 642g-j, 644de, 696d, 710c, 950g mission to the Gentiles 441 l, 444hk, 446ab odes quoted in Isaiah III 450hj rabbinic interpretations 102n, 417e, 594b, 642i sacrificial death of 446af vicarious, expiatory, suffering of 446de SUHARD, Cardinal 37gi, 53k-m, 135k, 211b SUICIDE 256m, 262a, 317b, 349e, 580f, 721b-e, 822d, 837g
SULLA 838c
SUMER, SUMERIANS 59d, 117a-c, 117efj, 149 l laws of 45m, 61d, 79g, 173g SUMU-ABUM 117f
SUMU-LA-ILUM 117f
SUN, The 239d, 404a, 505f (see also Ra, Shamash) creation of 141ac, 142bc eclipsed, darkened 79d, 90a, 117k, 123f, 320 l, 528g, 671q, 738b, 742d Josue's miracle 90a, 232f-i myths 244bc, 320 l, 328i pillars of the sun 286z, 287x sunburn 384c sunstroke 274d
 sun-worship 142c, 250g, 280jk, 286z, 287x, 318r, 330c, 483bf, 527i, 588c SUNAM, see Shunam
SUNDAY, The Christian 101a, 653k, 840b, 862d SUPEREROGATION, Works of 841c SUPERIORS, obedience to 932a, 944f responsibility of 944f SUPERSTITION 114 l, 115h, 418f, 593a, 731f (see also Covenant, Law, Temple) pagan superstitions 593a, 598m, 838d SUPPER, The Lord's 652fh, 653c, 878d (see also Last Supper) SUPPILULIUM, King 119di-k SUPPORT OF THE CLERGY, 875h-j in OT 180e, 184d, 186d-m, 187k, 188cd, 193n, 195gh, 204cdf, 397c, 875j SURETYSHIP 367m, 370 l, 371f, 372c, 403f SURVIVAL 137e, 318o (see also Future Life, Immortality) SUSA 79i, 121k, 122g, 289c, 291i, 295b, 310fm, 311ce, 420e
SUSA, Sisa, Siva, Shavsha 284w SUSANNA 745b
 Story of 14f, 513b-h
SUSIANA, Assyrian Province 121k
SUTARNA, of Mitanni 119i
SUTARNA III 119j

SWINE 690d, 730hi, 760e carob pods, husks, for 274m Gadarene swine 690cd, 730hi pearls before 687f SWISS GUARD 259i, 264a SWORD, The 720e of state 660f of the Spirit 904d, 971bc the fiery sword 79c the two-edged 936b
 the two swords 768f
SYCHAR 58h, 789cd
SYCOMORE, The Biblical 524d
SYCOPHANCY 764c
SYENE 488c
SYLVANUS, see Silas SYMBOLS, Symbolism 40ch, 41c, 145d, 164g, 247j, 309o, 325i, 351c, 357c, 384fm, 386e, 454g, 456e, 461g, 470e, 526cdk, 546bc, 548c, 545 l-r, 551b, 734d (see also Apocalyptic) baptismal ceremony 851d, 852f expiatory 218e, 481d in pagan mysteries 633hi Johannine 779ef, 958d, 962bd symbolic names 418d, 425s, 427b, 458k, 515c, 857p of the Holy Ghost (q.v.) 823a SYMBOLIC ACTION 218e, 247j, 253c, 270e, 344e, 349d, 414f, 418d, 432hi, 461f-h, 462 l, 478begk, 481a-g, 484a, 486x-z, 490gh, 514c-g, 515c, 545g, 551bd, 553b, 620f, 650c, 711c, 721h, 732e, 736bd, 740h, 840h
SYMMACHUS 23km
SYMMETRY, Literary 33c SYMPATHY 683h, 742f, 745f, 840f, 862g, 950c (see also Compassion) SYNAGOGUE, The 172i, 274d, 289s, 589ab, 661j a lay institution 589a and Christian missions 834cf, 839ag, 844j buildings 589be Christ in 618f, 727f, 751bc customs 751b furnishings 589b
 geniza 23o
 (the) Great 11e holy convocations 113c in the Dispersion 404a, 589a liturgy, services 12b-d, 13c, 404d, 585f, 589ab, 727f, 750b, 834d of the Libertines 81h, 828b priests in 589ab rulers of 404a, 589a, 691e, 727f, 730j schools 589a separation of sexes 589b triennial lectionary 589b visitors reading, preaching in 589b, 727f, 834d SYNAXIS, The 101f, 840b, 880g SYNCRETISM 212g, 213ad, 220b, 477g, 478b, 482e, 483, 484mno, 486e, 641c, 645d, 652f at Colossae 909e among Jews in Egypt 555k and Book of Wisdom 388j foreign alliances promote 64f, 270ae, 271e, 275f, 278c, 280a, 412c, 421c, 423j, 477g, 484m, 486tu, 518i, 519b, 520h in classical paganism 590c, 598 l, 599j, 858d in exilic Samaria 278hi, 291e Israelite 60d, 64e, 211c, 213d, 238k, 242 l, 251a, 276 l, 278ac, 280a-dk, 281a, 286yu, 287ghlmuv, 289b, 514i, 516bc, 525b, 526k, 527i, 562b (see also Baal, Melkart) liberalizing Jews and 865e St Paul accused of 662e SYNOPTIC GOSPELS, The 33 lmn, 720i, 744h, 779g and John 83ce, 607 l, 695c, 711ag, 714i, 719d, 720c, 731g, 736c, 739e, 740ce, 742b, 743a, 756e, 758f, 765d, 768bf, 773ac, 774d

(SYNOPTIC GOSPELS) differences and discrepancies 604df, 607e, 685a, 689d, 691e, 692g, 710c, 711g, 715a, 719f, 720bi, 722c, 731c, 735j, 740fi, 749i, 750gh, 751abd, 752acg, 753a, 754b, 764bd, 765d, 768cdf, 769bd, 771ab, 772ab, 773abc uniqueness 33n SYNOPTIC PROBLEM, The 9c, 604c-f, 607a-g, 610-15, 679a-f, 724b, 745ce alleged priority of Mark 604c, 607a-g, 611abe, 612a, 679a Benoit's exposition 679d-e Biblical Commission and 51ab, 679a Chapman-Butler solution 614d, 679ce, facts that pose it 610b-f, 679e, 744b, 751d four-document hypothesis 607e, 610g Lattey's theory 610h oral theory 610d-f, 679be
 'Q' 607ef, 610bdi, 611abce, 612a, 677d, 679ad, 756e, 767b Streeter's theories 607a, 608a, 610g, 611e traditional solution vindicated 50bl, 607b-g, 610gi, 611c-615, 679c two-document hypothesis 9c, 33n, 610gi, 611a ff., 612g, 613c, 679ae Ur-Evangelium theory rejected 610e Vannutelli's theory 610h SYNTICHE 908a
SYRACUSE 843g
SYRIA, Syrians 120j, 121cdfg, 122a, 149k, 151f, 244b, 271c, 272cef, 273a-c, 274ghlm, 276m, 277gi, 278g, 284v, 382j, 411a, 420b, 427b, 460f, 466 l, 524b, 525ad, 526d, 527i, 550d, 750d
 Church in 960f named after Assyrians 120i origin of 278b, 525d, 526d, 528i religion of 271 l, 274i, 278i, 284v, 598n, 600d Roman province of 58f, 70c, 122 l, 598i, 732d, 749ab temple design in 268b trading enclaves in Israel 271c, 272f SYRIAC LITURGY, Bible 4a, 479e, 680g, 726ab, 788a (see also Aramaic, Peshitta) SYRIAC MARTYROLOGY 607k, 777g
SYRIAN CHURCH 24hi, 25a-k (see also Antioch, Peshitta) SYRIAN TEXT OF NT 582ef (see also Antiochene) SYRIAN WARS, Lagid-Seleucid 122i
SYRIA OF SÖBA 309d
SYRO-EPHRAIMITE ALLIANCE, War 65b 121f, 124d, 277k, 278b, 287 l, 419f, 420b, 421c, 423a, 425r, 431ae
SYRO-HEXAPLA, The 25b
SYRO-PALESTINIAN VERSION 25ck
SYRO-PHONICIAN WOMAN, see Canaanitish SYRTIS 843c
TAANACH, Taanach 57g, 80f, 118j, 228d, 240de, 241d, 267k TABERNACLE, The 111a, 112bf, 132dc, 135bf, 171e, 176h, 177, 178, 211c, 218 l, 228a, 230a, 248k, 269a, 284 lq, 285k, 286al, 342b, 344d, 347a, 350c, 783c Hebrews on 163h, 932c, 939ef, 940cf, 941a possibly pre-Mosaic 107 separated from Ark 112i, 178c, 284 lq, 286al the temple and 177gi, 391h
 Wisdom and 403b
TABERNACLE OF THE COVENANT (Tent of Meeting) 107, 171e, 181e, 285d, 286b TABERNACLES, Booths, Feast of 99g, 113j, 130ej, 175j, 193wy, 216d, 269e, 286j, 291b, 297ef, 303c, 354e, 361b, 473d, 493c, 520k, 554f, 586b, 708a, 710h, 735a, 779c, 796ad, 797a
TABITHA 660hr, 819a, 832b

TABLE, Altar 492g, 877g of the Lord 877g
the Temple table 111b, 177d manners 372d, 373c, 403g, 759e, 763d, 878e of Blessings 859d reclining at 311c, 400c, 433b, 526m, 602h, 719f, 761e
TABOR, Thabor, Mt, 55bc, 57h, 236bce, 238m, 240be, 356b, 705adf, 733d TABRIMMON 271c
TABUL, The son of 425r
TACITUS 74a, 584c, 605c
TADU-KHEPA WEDS AMENOPHIS III, IV
119i TAHARQA, Pharaoh 121k, 438b TAHPAHNES, Taphnes, Daphnae, 309b,
456e, 488f
TALE-BEARING 370k, 371f, 373h
TALENT (Weight), The 82f, 83b, 177e, 277i, 284y, 293di, 548b, 576b, 707b TALENTS (Gifts), see Parables TALMUD, The 13f, 22a, 169e, 245h, 318di, 365i, 421c, 555b, 596b, 605c, 687b, 690d, 740f, 827c TAMAR, Tadmor 269g
TAMAR, Thamar, and Judah 106d, 152f, 156k-l city of 493h daughter of Absalom 286tw daughter of David 261ab, 271a, 286w, 386g, 680e
TAMARISKS 153k, 284a, 682e manna from 61e, 171c TAMMUZ, Adonis 483be, 511i
TANIS (Zoan), or Ramesses 60ac, 78a, 118l, 125b, 158d, 163b, 164c, 166a, 169g, 202d, 432d, 438b TANNERS, Tanning 832b
TANUT-AMON, Pharaoh 121k TAPHNAS, Taphnes, Taphnis, see Tahpahnes
TAPPUAH, Thaphna 283d
TARES (Cockle) 699bfg, 700c, 712c TARGUMS, The 24fh, 38e, 172g, 263h, 388g, 712a, 902c, 934b
TARICHEAE 793d
TARSHISH, Tharsis 120m, 149h, 269i, 286pmm, 348c, 423k, 434f, 450c, 487m, 532a eye of 480e TARSUS 575af, 602d, 663bc, 664g, 831g, 837a, 838c, 864e, 895b TARTAN, Tharthan, The 279d
TARTAK, Thartak 278i TARTESSUS, see Tarshish
TASSELS, Fringes 203e, 218i, 586b, 612d, 691f, 714b, 736j TATIAN 17d, 25d, 607j (see also Dia-tessarion)
TATNAI, Tattenai, Thathanai 67d, 288e, 292bcf
TATTOOING 192s, 272g
TAU, Thau 483g
TAUNT, of King of Babylon 429h-m
TAURUS MOUNTAINS 835a, 837b
TAVERNER, Richard 29fm TAXATION 660s, 705f, 712e, 861cd Egyptian 158e
land-tax 905c poll tax 82f, 181k, 276j, 585b, 598c, 736g, 905c
portitores 751i publicans 584ln, 598d, 686e, 691a, 711f, 750e, 751i, 764c Roman 584ln, 598cd, 736g, 749b, 751i, 827c, 905c
Solomon's system 267i temple tax 83a, 297k, 705fg, 724f, 736c, 787a
TAXILA 20e
Te Deum 344e
TEACHERS, Teaching 625gi, 626a, 688a, 690f, 732i (see also Education)
Christian teachers, doctors 820d, 834b, 870c-g, 947f in the temple 720e, 736l, 750ab, 825c the Messianic Teacher 522fg, 523h

(TEACHERS) the teacher's chair 408a TEBET, Tebeth, The Month 124d, 311e, 430b, 486y
TEETH, Gnashing of 699g, 759b TEETOTALISM 862a-c (see also Abstinence, Rechabites)
TEISPES, Persian king 122d
TEKOA, Thecua 58d, 261d, 286l, 456q, 524d, 527a, 568b
TELASSAR, Thelassar 279g TELEOLOGY, of creatures 405e of miracles 167b, 226h TELEPINU 119cj
TELL, Heap, Mound 215e
TELL ABIB 66f, 289a, 478f, 480b
TELL CHARSA 289a
TELL EL AMARNA, see Amarna
TELL MELACH 289a
TEMA 122c, 153h, 433d TEMAN, Theman 156c, 318a, 466h, 474c, 487d, 526g
TEMPERANCE 403g
TEMPLE, The Jerusalem 211c, 215c, 217e, 486s, 779d, 929b (see also Altar, Centralization, Holy of Holies, Liturgy, Ritual, Sacrifice, Tabernacle, Veil)
Achaz, Ahaz and 278c, 281h, 287mn alms box 276k, 280f, 287f, 736n, 767a, 797e Antiochus plunders 562c, 576c bases, water-waggons 268m, 278i, 281h, 461f
brazen gates 767d carving 268df, 285r, 286ef, 492dg causeways 285j ceiling, roof 268b
Christ and 67d, 85k, 100ab, 404d, 406g, 543i, 554f, 617g, 672d, 750ab, 759c, 765d, 767bd cleansed by Christ 215g, 299c, 554f, 711ae, 736ace, 765d, 766b, 787ab coinage 83a, 711a continuous worship in 967c court (great, outer) 268gi, 286i, 492k, 568c court (inner) 268g, 286li, 492h, 568c court of women 797e, 825c Crassus plunders 70h Cyrus II and 67a, 122d, 288e, 290b Darius I and 67d, 122f, 288e David and 63i, 112b, 225b, 259ce, 284sv, 285acq-s dedication of 269a-e, 286k, 560b, 564c, 574a
desecrated by Zealots 716a design, layout 63j, 268bd, 285j, 292e, 293i, 295m, 296i, 298h, 425k, 492a-i, 470e, 523e, 568c dimensions of 286fg, 292e doorkeepers 280j, 281i, 283ee, 285ij doors of 268df, 278c extensions of Joatham 277m fortification of 564d, 566be, 569a furnishings 177, 178, 194a, 461f, 468 gates of 65d, 276f, 277m, 285j, 287e, 457a, 458k, 460e, 740g, 825c Gentile Court barrier, partition 81g, 560b, 568c, 787a, 841d, 900f, 901a gilding, gold leaf in 268df, 285r Hill of 274j, 285j
Holy of Holies (q.v.) 177h, 178e, 191e-g, 268bd, 285q, 286fg, 492fg House of God 178be, 269c, 340e, 459n, 460g, 787b
idolatry in 281a, 287mu, 478b, 482e, 483, 705g (see also Abomination) Jeremiah in 457a
Judas Maccabeus purifies 68e, 560b, 564c, 565e, 574a, 577fi kitchens 492e Messianic visitation of 67d, 404d, 406g, 543i
Nabuchodonosor and 122b, 280s, 281h, 307g, 353b, 354c, 470a, 477f, 483n, 562c (see also Nebuchadnezzar) nave of 268bd orientation of 268bj

(TEMPLE) pagan prototypes of 268b pinnacle of 683d plundered by Joash 287h police 585b, 768b, 769c, 784b, 826a Pompey enters 70e, 561b presence of God (q.v.) 112b, 269c, 385h repairs to 276jk, 280f, 287fy, 483n revenues 276j, 287f, 297k, 584l, 585ab, 705fg, 724f, 736c rock of 81g, 264e, 268j, 345a Romans destroy 74g, 462p, 670kl, 737e-h, 738cd, 828b, 929b, 948e royal guards 276h royal place in 276i, 280i, 492m, 493c sacrificial fire 574d sacristies 268b, 492h Sanctuary, Holy Place in 111a, 112f, 177h, 286f, 492fg, 747e, 940cf sanctuary lamp 286i
(the) 'Sea' 37g, 180k, 268l, 281h, 286hi, 406h, 461f, 966ab seized by Zealots 747h Seleucus IV and 122k servants 492m (see also Nethinim) Sheshonq sacks 120m, 286u, 353b site of 63j, 81g, 153a, 264e, 268j, 285a, 345a
Solomon's porch 268b, 286f, 492fg, 777e, 799g, 807b, 825c superstitious trust in 114l, 250g, 415g, 471f, 829d
Tabernacle and 284s, 391h tables for shewbread etc. 285q, 286i tax 83a, 297k, 705fg, 724f, 736c, 787a teaching in 720e, 736l, 750ab, 825c the first, of Solomon 63j, 64a, 82b, 112b, 124h, 125a, 163a, 215a, 264e, 265hm, 266e, 267m-269f, 285jqt, 286d-k, 340e, 492fgk, 857e the second, of Zorobabel 66f, 67a-d, 288ce, 289eh, 290b, 291acde, 292a-h, 397a, 451an, 492a, 543cfl, 544a-h, 545cdijk, 547eg-i, 549a, 585a, 787c the third, of Herod 71f, 81g, 82c, 112b, 492d, 585a, 676e, 715a, 737e, 787c timber for 291c traders, financiers in 215g, 299c, 554f, 711a, 736c, 765d, 766b treasures, treasury 243c, 285ks, 544g, 571g, 585b, 721c, 736n Tribunal of 217ac, 218c, 740g (see also Courts)
two pillars, Jachin and Boaz 268k, 276i, 280i, 281h, 286g type of Church 543j utensils of 112f, 550k, 554f vision of Ezechiel 492a-i visionary, heavenly patterns of 285q, 492a-i, 829d, 938f wealth of 575a windows 268b
Wisdom and 403b
woodwork of 268bdg worship in its ruins 291a TEMPLES, Non-Jerusalem Yahwist (see also Bethel, Dan, High Places, Shiloh) at Elephantine 67a, 122e, 432f at Heliopolis 555k at Leontopolis 432g TEMPLES, Pagan 81f, 600e TEMPORAL REWARDS 219g, 555f, 558c inadequate 376fgo TEMPTATION 683h, 853abg-l, 946h, 951c (see also Satan, Serpent) escape, issue, always provided 877d forty days of 314b
'lead us not into . . . ' 686i of Adam 320i of Eve 79b, 340c of Job 317b of Our Lady 749j tempting God 213c, 618d, 683d, 877c TEMPTATION OF CHRIST, The 3b, 214ab, 357b, 618b-d, 643f, 683c-h, 727d, 750ij, 764b, 769ab, 935c, 969b Messianic significance of 683f nature, mode of 683gh

(TEMPTATION OF CHRIST) purpose 683fh sites of 683cd TENEMENTS AT ROME 602g
TENT OF MEETING (Tabernacle of Covenant) 107, 171e, 181e, 285d, 286b TENT-MAKING 839b (see also Paul) TEPHILLAH, The 686g
TERAH, Thare 59d, 79j, 137b, 149q, 150a, 237f TERAPHIM 179b, 245b, 254i, 280n Michol's 106h, 245b
 Rachel's 106h, 154m, 155f TEREBINTH 106hj, 150d, 232a, 237eg, 240e, 284a, 423f, 456g of weepers 239d, 240d pistachio 157i
 the teacher's 150b, 155f Vale of the 55a TERRORS, King of 326c
Ter-sactus, see Trisagion TERTIUS 77f, 581c, 661h, 844d, 863j, 870a TERULLIAN 7bcd, 14d, 17e, 27a, 35g, 606b, 938b TERULLUS 666f, 842a
TESHUP, Hurrite-Hittite storm-god 119b TESTAMENT, Testator 930g, 941a of the twelve Patriarchs 93g, 590f TESTIMONY, The 276h, 287e
TETRADRACHMA, The 83a TETRAGRAMMATON, The 133a rarely uttered after exile 133b, 406h, 591c TEXTUAL CORRUPTIONS 21kl, 226ai, 283aqu, 284wxz, 286i, 287e, 317i, 396g, 403a-d, 581b, 582f (see also Numbers) TEXTUAL CRITICISM 5e, 6c, 8b, 33c, 43c, 46c, 581b, 610d, 611c family-grouping of MSS 582c-583d NT 581b-583h script and 283a, 581d Shakespearean 582d
THABOR, see Tabor THADDAEUS, see Jude THAMAR, see Tamar
THAMNATA, Thamnath, see Tibneh
THANKSGIVING 219e, 396i, 592b, 596f, 768c, 950b (see also Eucharist, Sacrifice)
THAPSACUS 267j
THARE, see Terah
THARSIS, see Tarshish
THARTHAC 278i
THARTIAN, Tartan 279d
THATHANAI, see Tathnai
THEATRE, Greek and Roman 589f, 603b
THEBATS 929b
THEBES (Egyptian), see No-Amion THEBES (Palestinian) 243c
THEBNI, see Tibni
THECUA, see Tekoa
THEFT, Thieves 175b, 660p (see also Judas, Restitution) mutilation for 175b stealing by finding 185g the two crucified thieves 446f, 643f, 722c, 740c, 742bc, 768f, 771b, 810b, 811a THEMAN, see Teman
THEMISTOKLES 296j
THEOCRACY 63e, 74a, 243a, 248j, 251cd, 264c, 286kk, 360d, 388j, 411a, 470e, 492m, 584d, 593f, 625f, 736g
THEODORE OF MOPSUESTIA 34e, 318i, 365i THEODORET 24b
THEODORE THE STUDITE 581d
THEODOTON 23j-m, 24b, 288j THEOLOGICAL VIRTUES 398c, 403c, 850abd, 854, 879g-880a, 887hi, 909j, 915b, 916c, 931f, 938c, 942ab (see also Charity, Faith, Hope) THEOLOGY, Biblical 43d, 46j, 624-60 dogmatic 85 l, 104d, 617a, 627f, 628a moral 104e, 847de natural 104d, 847c-e Protestant systematic 616b speculative 36j

(THEOLOGY) systematic 104d, 115b THEOPHANY 491d, 803f (see also Angel of Yahweh, Apocalypse, Real Presence, Shekinah, Vision) at baptism of Christ 618b, 622b, 683b, 727c at judgement day 438e at Sinai 109e, 114a, 172a, 181fj, 211c, 212f, 222g, 272b, 333b, 342d, 857d, 944c at Transfiguration 622b, 705b canticle of Habacuc 540s ft. in (the) burning bush 164g, 222h, 414g, 829c in cloud, the cloud 176e, 199g, 200b, 202fg, 203jm, 286 l, 394e, 425 l, 480c, 705b, 755b, 783c, 822b, 829b in earthquake 272b, 528g in eclipse 528g in fire from heaven 187e, 271 l, 272b, 286 l, 451c in gentle zephyr, still small voice 272b in storm 172ad, 241d, 269ab, 272b, 317g, 333b, 342e, 344f, 348, 357h, 480c, 944c, 966a menacing Moses, Sephora 132d, 165e natural phenomena at 222gh, 241d, 333b of the Incarnation 783c the Apocalypse 962g to Elias 271 l 272b to Josue (Joshua) 230d to Ezechiel 478b, 480, 483h-k, 491d, 892k to Moses 109e, 129k, 132d, 164g, 165e, 172a, 181fj, 212f, 222gh, 333b, 342d, 414g, 792f, 857d, 929d, 944c to St Paul 831b voice from Heaven 618b, 622b, 727c, 733d, 831c THEOPHILUS 746ef, 747a, 751d, 814b, 821a
THEOPHILUS OF ANTIOCH 35i, 37e THEOPHORIC NAMES 59h, 66cf, 80k, 155b, 257e, 258b, 278b, 421c, 456di, 496g, 500c, 501g, 516c, 549b, 681a, 855d Theoria 5b (see also Typology)
THEOSOPHY 909f
THERACA, see Tirhakah
THERISE OF LISIEUX, St 362b, 643 l, 795d, 812d THERMOPYLAE 543c
THIRSA, see Tirzah
THESSALONIANS I and II 660p, 661fh, 839b, 905be, 914a-917f Church in 81e, 914c, 915b dependence on Matthew 615a, 661j THESSALONICA 602f, 826ac, 838a, 890j, 914b
 (the) politarchs 81e, 914b THEUDAS, Judas 72b, 827c THEUDAS (II) 74b
THIMNAH, see Tibneh
THIRD DAY 157g, 532d, 697d (see also Hebrew Idioms)
THIRTY HEROES, The 264ab, 284def
THIRTY PIECES OF SILVER 37e, 156i, 551f, 578b, 719c, 721bcd, 742c THOLA, Tola 238k, 243f
THOMAS, Apocryphal Gospel of 94c
THOMAS, St 622g, 660r, 692e, 800c, 803c, 812ghj, 813a called Didymos 692e, 812h THOMAS AQUINAS, St, and the Scriptures 3h, 5d apology for Judith 308m on causes and conservation of Creation 910f on Christ's acquired knowledge 627f. on Christ the Image of God 910d on exegesis 39c, 40adei on Faith and Reason 616gh on imprecatory psalms 339d on inspiration 36bgh on man's need of grace 546a on prophecy 39m on the effects of the Passion 900b

(THOMAS AQUINAS, St) on the Passion Psalm 343d on the Scriptures 232i, 301a on Wisdom and Understanding 429m Pange Lingua 405f
Verbum supernum prodiens 873d
THOMAS OF HARKEL 25j
THOISM AND MOISM 857p
THOTH, The god 333d the month 123e
THOTHMES, see Thuthmose
THRACE 122f, 598j, 599b
THRESHOLD, Superstitious Crossing of the 542c THRISHING 242d, 334d, 371g, 38e, 433b, 436e, 526d, 696a (see also Araunah)
THRIFT, Excessive 379a THRONE OF GOD 929d (see also God)
THRONE, Solomon's 269i THRONEROOM OF SOLOMON 268i
THRONS, The Angelic 909i, 910e
THUCYDIDES 41d, 139i, 286a
THUM, Pithom, Temple of 163c THUNDER, Thunderstorm 172ad, 334b, 342e, 344f, 348, 357h, 381f (see also Boanerges, Voice of God)
THUTHMOSE I, Pharaoh 57c, 119e THUTHMOSE III, Pharaoh 60b, 119e-g, 121a, 269i, 464e the Oppressor? 119h, 163ab THUTHMOSE IV, Pharaoh 119h THYATIRA 837e, 965a
THYNE 269i
TIAMAT 968i (see also Sea-monster) TIBERIAS 22a, 58i, 73c, 701a, 777e, 793c
TIBERIS, CAESAR 75b, 83h, 675c, 676bg, 712f, 750d, 789c, 793b, 804d, 833i, 970k TIBERIUS JULIUS ALEXANDER 74b TIBNAH IN THE SHEPHELAH, see Tibneh TIBNEH (Thamnath) 57g, 236i, 237g, 244e-g, 568b TIBNI, Thebni 64f, 271e
TIDAL, Thadal 119b, 120e, 150e
TIGLATH-PILESER I 120i, 121b TIGLATH-PILESER III, Tiglathphalasar 65b, 79cd, 121ef, 124cd, 275a, 277kl, 278bh, 283ijm, 420c, 430b, 514e, 519p inscriptions of 277kl, 278oc, 279n Israel, Judah pay tribute to 64c, 65b, 124d, 266g, 277i Pulu, Phil 65b, 124d, 277i, 283im subdues Syria, Galilee, etc. 58c, 65b, 79d, 121f, 124d, 266i, 277kl, 278b, 420b, 426a, 427b, 430b, 431a-d, 437a TIGLATH-PILESER IV 266f
TIGRANES, king of Armenia 122i
TIGRIS, The River 116-22 passim, 143g, 147a, 305g, 308a TIMARCHUS 567a
TIME, see Era
 Biblical measures of 83c-h fullness of 84cd, 85g, 899b (see also Praeparatio Evangelica) Our Lord's hour 86a
 redeeming the time 903c, 913c
 set apart for God 61c
TIME, Times, and Half a Time 965c
TIMNAH, Tibnah 234e, 156i
TIMNATH, Thamnath, see Tibneh
TIMOTHY, The Ammonite 564c, 577eg, 578c, 579a TIMOTHY, First Epistle to 921-2, 961f (see also Pastoral Epistles) quoted in 2 Pet 3:15-919c TIMOTHY, Second Epistle to 34d, 35a, 923-4, 961f (see also Pastoral Epistles) TIMOTHY, St 639g, 659aef, 680r, 685f, 667ab, 668a, 835d, 837b, 838b, 839c, 863j, 864h, 866g, 867h, 882f, 89b, 898c, 905d, 905a, 907e, 910a, 914cc, 915ae, 916a, 918cd, 922b, 924e a bishop 639g, 659e, 919f, 922e family life, education of 659e imprisoned 929b, 944g TIRHAKAH, Thera 279g
TIRSHATHA, see Persians

TIRZAH 57g, 64ef, 271c, 277h, 386b
TIRSCHENDORF 581g, 582ef, 583g
TISHRI, the month 831h, 113c, 123c, 124bhj, 175j, 191k, 268h, 269g, 280m, 560a, 752d TITAN, sons of 309o TITHES 714f commutation of 195h Jacob's vow 105c, 195de law of 134d, 135s, 182e, 215g, 219e, 297k, 298i, 939a non-payment denounced 299d, 555d, 558b paid to Melchisedech 938e, 939a storehouses for 297k, 558b three kinds of 300g, 303c tithe-banquet 215g, 219e tithe of the tithes 204f, 297k, 298h TITUS (TITUS) JUSTUS 864h
Titulus, Superscription of the Cross 721f, 722bc, 742ac, 771a, 810b TITUS, Epistle to 657e, 709e, 925 (see also Pastoral Epistles) TITUS, St 37c, 659ef, 667a, 668a, 837b, 895ce, 904f, 906a, 918ce, 925a a Bishop 919f his unnamed companions 889fg, 891j mission to Corinth 864j, 867h, 883bc, 884f, 886k, 888g j, 889be-g, 918e TITUS, The Emperor 74fg, 123e, 177d, 199h, 274m, 422f, 507p, 737e, 789c, 842g, 970k TITUS MANLIUS TORQUATUS 578e
TITUS of BOSTRA 35f
TOB 57k, 243j
TOBIAD (AMMONITE) FAMILY, The 68ab, 559g, 575a TOBIAS, Tobit 66e, 300ace, 311f his big fish 305g his pet dog 305g, 306i TOBIAS, Book of 89d, 300-7
 canonicity of 11d, 14dg, 15e
TOBIAS, the Ammonite 67ch, 68a, 295e, 296jj, 299c TOBIT, see Tobias TOGA, The 603a
TOGORMAH, Thorgorma 487m
TOLERATION 122d-hm, 696g, 734c, 827c, 862f, 866ad, 873i, 874ag, 877i, 878a (see also Anathema, Persecution)
TOMB, The Empty 63ic, 671i, 723ab, 773a-c, 812bc, 824e (see also Burial, Sepulchre)
TOMSON, L. 29f
TONGUE, Sins of the 175c, 217b, 218c, 334f, 341e, 361d, 367o, 370j, 402df, 403f, 702f, 945h, 947afg, 948a
TONGUES, CONFUSION of 321, 149 l-o TONGUES, Gift of 389b, 632d, 639ef, 651c, 743f, 818d, 823a-c, 832j, 939f, 856b, 880bc control of 880g-881a Corinthian abuse of 866c, 867b, 880b-881a inferior to prophecy 880c-f TONSURE (see also Shaving) Arab superstition about 192s religious 204d, 273j, 457b TOPAZ 480e
TOPHET, Topheth 280k, 338f, 457a, 595c (see also Hinnom)
TORAH, see Law
TORRELL 211g, 576de, 707c, 841h
TOSTATUS ALBULENSIS, Alphonsus 134c TOTALITARIANISM 633g (see also Anti-God States) TOTALITY, Hebrew idiom for 143f, 285ht TOTEMISM 44c, 104h, 645d TOULOUSE, Synod of 10c
TOURISIS, Roman 603c TOWN PLANNING 80c, 602f, 864f
TRACHONITIS 58j, 71g, 72a TRADE 61j, 64f, 79j, 118d, 381c, 434ei, 381c, 434ei, 584f, 588e, 833h (see also Roads, Usury) and spread of culture 19i, 20d, 21a, 117i, 588e and syncretism 421c, 423j

(TRADE) and war 491c by sea 54j, 63j, 64h, 65c, 269h, 273d, 277i, 286j, 423k extra-territorial concessions, depots 271c, 272f Greco-Roman trade guilds 965b Jewish commercial morality 595e, 596e languages of 19i
 Palestinian 56h, 267n, 269h j, 270c, 271c, 273a, 277bdf TRADITION (see also Bible, Oral) and the Canon 14d, 15cde-18ae apostolic, Catholic 1c-f, 15g, 37b, 84b, 85d, 86eh, 318d, 919e, 923e family 213c
 Jewish 22c, 24fg, 139a, 330c, 353c, 413e, 421b, 702ad, 732ab, 877b scripture and 1c-f, 7b, 42de, 84bc, 85d, 86k-m wisdom and 322gn TRAJAN, The Emperor 776g, 949c
TRANSCENDENCE, see God
TRANSFIGURATION, The 340b, 441j, 619f, 622b, 644d, 670g, 705abc, 733de, 740a, 754g, 755ab, 776e, 822b, 958e and Peter's Confession 705ab, 755b and the agony in Gethsemane 755a and the resurrection 755a in Petrine Epistles 733d, 951f, 952gh, 953f its purpose 733d
 Moses and Elias at 34f, 619f, 705ac, 733d, 755a, 774b of saints 828b place of 55c, 705ad, 733d St Peter at 705b, 733d, 740a, 755ab, 951f, 952gh, 953f voice from heaven 705b, 733d TRANSFIXION, The 811a-c TRANSFORMATION (see also Messianic Age) in contemplation 181j, 887e at Resurrection 736i, 882a-c, 907g, 916h, 924c (see also Body) TRANSFORMISM, see Evolution TRANSJORDANIA 56bc, 59g, 150f, 151f, 173d, 208 l-p, 212e, 227f, 229b, 233f, 234a, 235cd, 237ab, 277k, 283j-m, 375a, 386f TRANSMIGRATION OF SOULS 599a TRANSUBSTANTIATION 739gh
TRAVELLING 603c
TREASURE IN HEAVEN 687a, 735d, 758d
TREASURES, Temple 243c, 285k, 544g, 571g, 585b, 736n, 848e TREE OF KNOWLEDGE 137i, 143bf, 144b symbolic, sexual, interpretation 145b TREE OF LIFE 79c, 137i, 143fh, 144ad, 145c, 366k, 403, 451 l, 653j, 795b, 964g, 972e TREES, protected in war 218d sacred, worshipped 177, 270n, 423f, 456fg 964g (see also Asherah, Astarte) the green and the dry 220b, 486j, 770d TRENT, Council of, and ecclesiastical censorship 10d authenticates Vulgate 28ab, 29r, 223a defines Canon 7d, 15kl, 17 l on assurance of salvation 850f on Justification by Faith 846df, 849dl on original sin 850 l, 854de on propitiatory death of Christ 849e on the founts of revelation 1df on works 849k-m promotes Bible study 3h vernacular bibles and 28d TRIALS 856g (see also Faith, Persecution, Suffering, Temptation) escape or victory provided 877d joy in 850bd, 950b purifying 397fi, 398c, 399a TRIALS, JUDICIAL, see Courts nocturnal trials illegal 720f, 740f of Christ 81h, 660t, 671i, 720fgh, 721fgh, 740e-j, 741c, 769de, 770a-c, 785e, 807e-h, 808, 809, 922g TRIBES, The Lost 283m, 290bn, 292h, 303b (see also Restoration)

TRIBES, The Twelve 57e; 159a, 271k, 282b, 728i and signs of Zodiac 159degh clans and families 283h TRIBUTATION, The Great 716a-d (see also Woes) TRIBUTE (see also Taxation) from Jews to Seleucids 569ae, 572d from Seleucids to Rome 577b in kind 239h, 308h, 431a Persian symbolic 308h to Assyria 277i, 278c to Caesar 712e, 766d, 827c TRICHOTOMY OF MAN 378a, 916e
TRICLINIUM 719f
TRINITY, The Holy 102d, 345d, 622f, 630c, 637d, 640-1, 650ce, 695b-d, 723f, 781c, 782a, 804bc, 805d, 806h, 817b, 818c, 820a, 824f, 893g, 925g, 929c, 932c, 933cd, 949h, 953b, 958e, 964c, 966d appropriation 859 l OT adumbrations 368m, 388gk, 389b, 391j, 397m, 425 l St Paul's faith in 879b, 892f the order of the Persons 640g TRIPOLIS 566c
Trisagion, The 425 l, 749e, 966h
TRITO-ISAIAS 49k-m, 406f, 419eh, 420f, 421a, 448-51
TRIUMPHAL PROCESSION 886 l, 912c TRIUMVIRS 70g, 71c
TROAS 602f, 652fg, 744e, 837c, 883i, 886k, 904f TROGLDYTES 286u
TROPHIMES 840g, 904f, 924f
TROPOLOGICAL SENSE 40ef, 791d (see also Mystical Interpretation) TRUMPETS 113de, 199h, 284 l, 286x, 671t, 791b, 796d at theophany 944c feast of 113c, 297c, 791b the last trump 230e, 436e, 542c, 671t, 716a, 916b, 967d TRUTH 545elh, 548a, 549dfg, 783df, 788g, 806c alleged double standard of 616f and salvation 919de, 921b, 931c the two necessary truths 931c TRYPHENA and TRYPHENA 863g
TRYPHON 68fg, 82h, 122 l, 560b, 569f, 570c, 571bc, 572a-c TUBAL, Thubal 451s, 487m, 491b TUBIN, Tubianites 565c, 579b TUBINGEN SCHOOL, The 606a, 621b, 661d
TUDCHALIYA I 119b, 150c
TUDCHALIYA IV 120e, 150e
TUKULTI-NINURTA I 121b
TUNIC, The high-priest's linen 179h
TURNING TO GOD 768e (see also Conversion, Repentance) TURPENTINE TREE 403c
TURTLE DOVES and PIGEONS 184c, 185f, 189n, 689c, 711a, 749g TUSHRATIA 119j, 239g
TUT-ANKH-AMON 76c, 360d
TUWANAWA 121c
TWELVE, a perfect number 268a
TYANA, see Tuwanawa
TYCHICUS 661f, 898b, 904f, 913d
TYNDALE, William 29fm TYPE AND ANTITYPE, Typology 5a-c, 39i, 40afghi, 42fg, 102pqr, 147f, 163h, 352d, 383acd, 417g, 451s, 543j, 544k, 779f, 846h, 850bei-l, 857o, 877a-d, 887c-e, 902c, 903d-g, 931c in prophecy 417g, 418e, 551b-f in Song of Songs 383dj of Passover 169d
 the heavenly and the earthly 285q, 829d, 938f, 941bc, 964f TYRANNUS, The School of 839g, 840c, 909c
TYRE 57i, 64f, 120m, 121c-f, 122b, 236d, 258g, 267m, 268e, 271f, 276g, 278d, 281bc, 284k, 309c, 347d, 434e-l, 477f, 487p-r, 526cf, 530g, 550d, 695a,

732d, 819a, 833bh, 840g (see also Phoenicia) (TYRE) (the) ladder of 544g religion of 114i, 226gh, 271i, 418g, 514i (see also Melkart) Tyrian coinage of the Temple 83a, 711a, 787a TYROPAEAN VALLEY 55d, 234e, 279m, 281d, 295f, 433i UGARIT (Rās-Shamra) 59eg, 76c, 117k, 118j, 119k, 333f ULAI STREAM (Eulaeus) 309a, 505bc, 506c ULATHA 71g
 ULFILAS, Bishop 26c
 UNBELIEF 213c, 437i, 438c, 447h, 626a-c 697d, 743de, 788ek, 792e, 794df, 797f, 801i, 859c, 935f, 936c, 961b UNCLEANNESS 111i, 189a, 470b, 471g, 544h, 730j (see also Cleanness, Defilement, Food Laws) childbirth and 189k-n of land 237b of lepers (q.v.) 287j unclean lips 425m UNCTION, Anointing 272d, 751c, 753h at baptism 886g, 957b at confirmation 886g consecratory 154d Messianic 252c, 347d of bodies for burial 719b, 722h, 723a, 739b, 742gi, 743a, 811d of guests 243c, 343e, 686j, 719b, 739b, 753g, 801b of kings 252cdg, 253d, 255i, 347d, 594a (see also Messiah) of lepers 190m of priests, high-priests 180ab, 187cf, 382d, 397c, 403, 594a, 930f of prophets 359a, 414a of shields 433b of tabernacle and vessels 187f of the Holy Spirit 751c, 957b (see also Confirmation, Sealing) oil, ointment 180i, 384bf, 403c (see also Olive, Spikenard) Sacramental, Extreme 731d, 946c, 948g UNEMPLOYMENT 584mn, 709gh
 UNFAITHFULNESS TO GOD 89c, 111c, 112a, 114i, 115i, 211f, 214b, 359b, 383adkl, 386o, 410b, 418f, 423b-c, 441o, 443bc, 445g, 448e-h, 449i, 456ch, 484k, 514mf, 635d, 642c (see also Adultery, Syncretism)
 UNION WITH CHRIST 2a, 635ab, 641j, 646b, 648e, 650i, 652a, 671y, 739h, 846c, 851cd, 852c-h, 854eh, 855b, 861h, 886b, 887h, 894c, 895c, 896b, 898j, 905f, 906c, 907f, 909ij, 911d-f, 931ab, 935f, 953b, 961a (see also Baptism, Communion, Mystical Body) Christ in us 846c, 895c, 898i, 901b, 907f, 911g, 912b in Christ, in the Lord 641j, 846c, 854ae, 898ij, 899a, 906bc, 907f, 912b mystico-sacramental 852h, 854h UNION WITH GOD 384io, 642c, 644hi, 649f, 671y, 910a, 914f, 915c, 953bc, 956b, 957d, 958bc (see also Christology, Communion, Mystical Body) UNITY 635abef, 636, 637, 650im, 652a, 729c, 822c, 825ab, 860d, 862f-l, 868b, 870a, 881a, 895g, 898ijl, 902a-d, 908a (see also Church, Communion, Israel, Mystical Body, Solidarity) and uniformity 902c UNIVERSALISM 282iw, 590, 642i, 643a, 650e, 814d, 815d (see also Gentiles, Gospel, Prophets, Wisdom Literature) UNIVERSE, Ancient Conception of 79b, 141b, 142bg, 160h, 216c, 309o, 328hi, 332fg, 358g, 377b, 403a, 429c, 435cf, 527b, 528h, 548c, 966b
 UNKNOWN GOD, The 838d
 UNLEAVENED BREAD, Feast of 67a, 78c,

113fg, 169a-fj, 175j, 216cd, 732h, 739a, 833f (UNLEAVENED BREAD) and the Passion 719d, 720a, 872g UNTO THIS DAY 224b-d, 269a, 276e, 282gg, 283h, 284j, 287aa Unum Necessarium 10b, 757b, 758cd, 759f, 764f UPPER ROOM, Cenacle 86d, 239h, 639c, 719c, 739d, 822c UPPSALA 26ce
 UR 59d, 76c, 79b, 105c, 117a-e, 118j, 148d, 150ab, 268i, 309f URARTU, Urartians 121ceg, 147b, 467g, 524b URBANITY 370d
 URBANUS 863g
 URIA, Urias, son of Shemaiah, Semei 413h, 459c, 460b URIA, Urias, the high-priest 427b URIA, Urias, the Hittite 165c, 260f, 261a, 282gg, 284y, 349a URIEL, The Archangel 92i, 592d
 URIEL OF GIBEA 271a, 286w
 URIEL THE KOHATHITE 283p, 284i URIM AND THUMMIM 178c, 179bd, 187d, 222h, 239b, 245i, 290m, 403h, 406e, lost at exile 290m prophets take place of 179d UR-NAMMU 117e
 URUK 59e, 117ace, 149i
 USUFRUCT 194j
 USURY, Interest 114e, 175f, 194m, 218o, 296f, 525a, 540k, 584n, 595e permitted in foreign trade 175f, 595e UT-NAPISHTIM, (Um-, Ur-) 79b, 148c UTU-HEGAL 117e
 Uz, see Hus
 UZZAH, see Oza
 UZZIAH, Uzias, Ozias, see Azarias VACCARI ON THE PENTATEUCH 46b VAGAO, see Bagoas
 VALENTIAN HERESY 7cd, 776c, 909h
 VALERIUS GRATUS 740e, 807f VALLEY OF ARTIFICERS 283g VANITY 736m, 956g and vexation of spirit 377c of earthly joys, alone 314i of human life 313n, 357a, 376f-l, 400g, 402c of ultimate speculation 315c of vanities 377b VARUS, procurator of Judaea 754g
 VARUS, Quintilius 72b
 VASTHI, Vasthi 310m, 311cd
 VATICAN, Council of 6a, 7d, 15i, 89, 847e (see also Councils)
 VATICAN, Codex B 22j, 581g, 582ag, 583a, 703e, 726a VAUGHAN, Herbert, Cardinal 30n
 VEDA, The 135a
 VEGETARIANISM 141d, 143b, 144d, 149a, 862a-c VEIL OF THE TABERNACLE, Temple 177h, 185a, 191gh, 286g, 938d, 940cg rending of the 722f, 742g, 772a, 940g, 942g VEILS, Face 129k, 181j, 540s, 686j, 887c
 VELLUM 662b
 VENGEANCE, Vendetta, see Blood
Venite, The 935e-936b VENTRILOQUISM 969f
 VENUS, see Lucifer VENUS TABLETS OF AMMISADUGA 117k Verbum Domini, Periodical 6e VERNACULAR, see Vulgar Tongue VERSIONS OF BIBLE 28d, 29egr, 226ab (see also American, Authorized, Douay, English, Rheims, Septuagint, Vulgar Tongue, Vulgate) authenticity, inerrancy, inspiration of 8d, 29r, 34c, 226ab Biblical Communion on 53abd Canon Law on 10ac
 Catholic use of non-Catholic 4f, 10ace-h Council of Trent on 28d

(VERSIONS OF BIBLE) from original or from Vulgate 28d in early Church 4ab, 8ab Old Latin 8b, 27be
 VERVLIT, Printer, Daniel 29p
 VESPASIAN 74f, 570c, 712b, 842g, 970k VESSELS, The Sacred 550k, 554f touching of 112f
 VESSELS OF WRATH, MERCY 857m-p VESTMENTS OF HIGH-PRIEST 179, 191fj, 406c, 545b, 547d, 554f lost during exile 290m mystical explanation of 395c VESTMENTS, Religious, Priestly 276e, 280j, 492n, 736n Vexilla Regis 357g
Via Sacra, Messianic 439n, 441b, 450p
Via Dolorosa, The 807a, 810a VICARIOUS, see Substitution, Suffering VICTIMS, Sacrificial 183h, 184bc, 193o, 215c, 217b, 911c birds 184c, 185f, 189n humanitarianism and 193p blemished, unclean 217b, 451o sold in temple 736c, 787a why burnt 111f
 VICTOR, Pope 777b
 VIGILANCE, Expectancy, Christian 658a, 670-1, 717de, 718ac, 737b, 738f, 740b, 758ce, 762c, 764e, 767i, 861fg, 874d, 882i, 914gl, 915be, 916c, 947c, 949d, 950c, 951g, 952g, 954f-g Jewish 749h (see also Messianic Hope) VILLAGE LIFE 584k-o VINDICTIVENESS, Oriental 311f
 VINE, The, Christ 625f, 653g, 854e, 879c
 Israel 635e, 653g, 859h
 VINEGAR, The Soldier's Posca, 722e, 742f, 810e VINEYARD, Israel, God's 484k, 642j, 709g, 711g, 736f Naboth's 265h, 272hi, 275g VINTAGE, The 336, 431c, 796d
 of the earth 970a
 VIRGIL 39b, 597k, 935c, 947g VIRGIN BIRTH, The 41h, 42d, 85ghk, 89d, 94d, 218j, 343d, 385i, 386i, 462f, 680efgh-681bf, 748, 783b, 938f, 939a, 940g (see also Emmanuel, Mary) in apocryphal Gospels 749d Jewish expectation of 102k rationalists and 746c, 748a VIRGINITY 654h, 660fg, 708f (see also Celibacy, Joseph) Jews and 309n, 413g, 708f, 748d perpetual virginity of Our Lady 81b, 86kl, 130c, 492m, 672, 673e, 748d, 749d, 754c tokens of 218j vows of 748d, 840h VIRGINS (see also Parables) almah 41h, 42d, 84i, 375d, 426bl, 596d bethulah 426b, 596d the Christian Virgins 660g, 874cg VIRTUE (see also Cardinal, Theological) before and after Faith 849k-m (see also Pagans) devotion and 623e disinterested or not 317bj, 318k, 320d knowledge and 402d, 953c reward of 327o
 VIRTUOUS WOMAN, Poem on 335e, 375k
 VISION OF GOD 792f, 803f (see also Beatific, Theophany) fatal to mortals 109d, 151g, 155b, 164g, 191g, 201f, 213b, 242d, 425m VISIONS (see also Resurrection, Theophany, Angels) as a literary device 545gkl not visible to all 273g, 274i prophetic 275d, 414g, 469f, 480ai seen by inner senses 480ai VISITATION, The Day of 765c, 950e VISITATION OF OUR LADY, The 680hi, 747f, 748f-j VITELLIIUS 72c, 607m, 808b VOCATION 85k, 383m, 404a, 425n, 671n, 874b, 937a (see also Priests)

- (VOCATION) the Christian calling 845i, 856d, 869a, 870c, 874b VOGEL'S EDITION OF NT 583h VOICE OF GOD, from Heaven 618b, 622b, 683bc, 705be, 727c, 733d, 801gh, 831c
 VOLTAIRE 604c, 621a
 VOTIVE OFFERINGS 250f, 268mn (see also Sacrifice)
 Vows 182e, 186h, 195fg, 276j, 355c, 360h, 686c, 714e (see also Nazirite) commutation of 195a-e in patriarchal age 318c inadvertent 378d insincere, evaded 378d Jephthe's (Jephthah's) vow 243j of chastity 748d, 840h of thankofferings 327o of women 208c-e rash vows 63d, 371f, 402d, 731f unjust vows 702b (see also Corban) used against robbers 245c supplementary expenses of 378d votive psalms 338b, 340e, 345c, 349bf, 350c VULGAR TONGUE, Vernacular, and worship 880c-e Hebrew ceases to be 20bc, 24f not used in Jewish Liturgy 24f translations of Bible 4a-g, 9a, 10cdg, 28d (see also Versions) VULGATE, Latin 4d, 8c-e, 27d-28c appendix to 93bi arrangement of Bible 382e authenticity of 22f, 28ab, 29r, 46c, 223a, 226a Biblical Commission on variants in 52k chapter division 22d Clementine edition 8e, 28c, 29kp, 30b, 782c Codex Amiatinus 8c Codex Toletanus 777c Codex Vat. Regimensis 777c Council of Trent on 8d, 27j, 28ab displaces LXX in West 23g editions, recensions 8c-e, 28c, 29kp, 30b first printed book 8d gradual corruption of text 8c, 27h-j inaccuracies in 27g-j, 28b, 114d, 303-7, 952j inerrant only in Faith and Morals 28b, 37d, 223a, 226a merits of 8c, 226ab new Benedictine revision 6e, 8e, 28c psalter 27e revised Psalter of Pius XII 28c, 53c, 170e, 313i, 338b Sistine edition 28c, 29hk superiority to 16th century Greek 29m texts and recensions of 27hi textual family of 23ad WADI 54i
 WADI EL ARISH 54g, 269e
 WAGES, a penny a day 671c, 705f, 709g-i, 719b, 756g, 760d, 793d, 801c, 966e defrauding of 219b, 660n, 948d protection of 192m, 219b
 WAGGING THE HEAD 400f
 WALDESIANS 10c, 36a
 WALES 54d, 147c
 WALL, The Wailing 268i
 WALLS OF JERUSALEM, breached by Joash 277c burnt 291k, 295b dedicated 298e lie in ruins 450n Nabuchodonosor and 281f rebuilt 122h, 281f, 288e, 289fhlmor, 295df-296dh, 545i, 554d
 WAR 213a (see also Atrocities, Ban) battle hymns, chants 279e campaign season 287dd causes of 271c, 945h conventional biblical description of 970b (WAR) desert warfare, 219d destructiveness mitigated 218d fruits of 966e in heaven 968ik, 971d Jews, Assyrians merciless 110e, 211g laws of 218dl, 230g purity in 218 l, 229f ruses de guerre 218d, 241k, 242i, 245j, 275b, 308m scorched earth policy 244bh Semitic religions concept of 211g, 218dl, 279e siege warfare 218d, 272f, 274m, 275a, 278be, 279c-i, 280r, 281cd, 330ab, 470g, 471f, 481b, 487fh, 538h technical development 60a, 118kl, 120g, 218d total war 208f war-cry of Benjamin 241g war-cry of Judah 272c warriors, long haired 241c, 244a women combatants 231f World War I 55b, 243 l 'Wars of Yahweh' 205e WASHING HANDS 273m, 344e, 682f, 732a (see also Ablutions) Pilate 721h temple wash-stands 268m, 461f
 WASTE 701d
 WATCHES OF DAY, Night NT (Roman) 83c, 701e, 833f OT (Hebrew) 83c, 470g
 WATCH TOWERS 572c
 WATER, Water Supply 54g, 56e, 66a, 80gh, 175a, 214a, 279dm, 309h, 385f, 386f, 425s, 433i, 584o (see also Deep, Jerusalem, Gihon, Siloam) for purification 190k, 204h, 268m, 586a from the rock 40h, 220a, 653d, 696i healed by Elisha, Eliseus 273i made wine 779c, 786a-c, 796a, 797a symbol of Faith 779e temple water-wagons 268m, 461f Upper and Lower Pools 279d water and blood 649e, 653gh, 779e, 811bc watering with the foot 214e WATER OF LIFE, living water 1e, 40h, 643e, 651b, 697j, 789e, 796j WATERPOTS, Stone 786c WEALTH, Wealthy, see Rich WEANING 152ij
 WEATHER SIGNS 703f
 WEAVING 244 l
 WEDDING GARMENT 712c (see also Marriage)
 WEEK, Hebrews invent the 61c, 83d, 172k WEEKS, Feast of, see Pentecost WEEPERS, Place, Terebinth, of 239d, 240d WEEPING 154e, 689e
 WEIGHT-LIFTING 552b
 WEIGHTS AND MEASURES 80e, 82, 219d, 247f, 293d, 528f, 548b, 699d WEISS, Johannes 621c, 670b
 WEISSE, C. H. 607a
 WELLHAUSEN, J. 43-6, 135, 478j, 492g, 670b Catholic scholarship and 44j, 45a-fj, 135ct, 211b merits of 6h, 44hj, 45abn, 135t philosophical presuppositions of 44bcej, 45i, 135b scholarly deficiencies of 44ce theory of Israelite and OT evolution 6h, 44a-j, 45abdfig, 79gi, 80k, 104hi, 112g, 113jlm, 114hi, 135a-hi, 176f, 211ab, 225f, 282aa, 337 theory of the Gospels 608cd, 609a
 WELLS 54g, 152k, 153n, 584o, 789ce and wooing 153c, 164e song of the well 313b WEN-AMON 21g, 267m
 WESTCOTT and HORT NT 582efg, 583ag
 WESTERN TEXT OF NT 22kl, 23a, 25efjn, 582cefg, 583bcd, 821a WESTERN NON-INTERPOLATIONS 582g
 WETTSTEIN 581g, 583f
 WHALE, Jonah's 532d
 WHEELS, God's Chariot 480ae, 483hj
 WHITE, Symbolism of 965c WHORES, Whoredom (see also Idolatry, Prostitution) of Babylon 970h-l WICKED, The 699f (see also Evil, Eternal Punishment, Hell, Resurrection, Sin) annihilation theory 595c their prosperity illusory 327a-d, 328o, 329ab theory of temporary punishment 595c WIDOWS 218a, 219b right of inheritance 246i the Christian Widows 660gh, 828a, 922c the widow's mite 736n
 WIFE (see also Concubine, Harem, Marriage, Monogamy, Polygamy, Women) as a chattel 213a, 596b-d as spoils of war 218d, 261g duty of 949de, 950h equal but subordinate 654f, 660c exchange of wives 217d inheritance of wives 218j, 257h, 261g nagging 371b obedience to husband 950h praise of a good 335e, 375k purchase of 154f, 175e, 387e, 596cd spiritual equality with husband 950h status in Mosaic Law 172g, 175e, 211g, 213a, 218j, 596b-d status in patriarchal law 79k WILDERNESS, DESERT, of Edom 273 lm of Judaea 54h, 55e, 239b home of demons 306c, 429f, 475e, 683c, 697f, 750i, 757g Temptation in 357b, 618b-d WILDERNESS, Israel in the 61, 106f, 114j, 129f, 163g, 212b, 214a, 222g, 392d, 486de, 526k, 554f, 796d Amos and worship in 527 l, 829c population statistics 61e type of Christian Church 877a-d, 932cd, 935f, 936ab, 961b
 WILL OF GOD, The 212f, 683a, 840h (see also Causation, Submission) absolute and permissive 108c, 109 l, 212g, 282q, 285b, 322m, 425n, 484h, 486c, 626b, 693c Christ's devotion to 445i, 618b, 749g, 750j, 751f, 756a, 758f, 937c, 941d (see also Obedience) doing, submission, devotion to 397e, 596f, 860c
 WILLIAM, Abbot 4c
 WINDS, prevailing 56d symbolism of 966f
 WINE 375j, 922e (see also Vinegar) Christ a drinker of 753f, 768c drugged, spiced, narcotic 681f, 722ch, 742b, 770d, 771a joyful, gladdening 786a mingled, mixed 368q, 372 l, 602h, 969j new 331b, 625b, 652i, 720b, 728d, 739h, 752b, 820e old is best 752b symbol of earthly pleasures 384b thought evil by Encratites 94i water turned to 85 l, 779c, 786a-c, 796a, 797a wine-skins, bottles 331b, 625b, 691d, 728d, 752b WINEPRESSES 80h, 425c of the Wrath of God 970b the king's 970b
 WINNOWING 456m, 458b, 682h
 WISDOM 315a-e, 316a-d, 366b, 391, 396i, 639h (see also Egypt, Proverbs, Wisdom Personified) active, energizing in the Creation 317g, 397k and age 140e, 322g, 325b, 330fh, 331a and understanding 428m, 899fg

- (WISDOM) as non-moral ability 314g as worldly, human prudence 315b, 364k, 365a choice fruit of 397e contemplation and 397e craftiness contrasted with 402d created, brought forth 85f, 325b, 397 l discipline of 399a, 400a divine attribute 316a, 368jm, 388g, 392c, 396i everlasting 397 l externalized in the Word 398b fear of God and 314fi, 315b, 365a, 366bfh, 375k, 397c, 398cd Bible a prime source of 397i, 398a folly and 365a, 366a 368ps, 377d, 380e, 381a, 400a, 401c, 402e, 545g God the source of 330i, 331ab, 397 l, 474b-d hunger for 403c interior life and 397e, 399a, 403a in tribulation 946f in the history of Israel 314h, 392-5, 396i, 406a h man's and God's 694a, 696 7, 870b-h morality and 315d, 396i, 397ade, 403b of Solomon 267gl, 426d, 428m practical value of 316h, 376 l, 377c, 398a praise of 317 l, 329c-f, 474 prayer and 946f providence and 406a purgation and 397i pursuit of 401a, 404h revelation and 314fi, 316deh, 397m, 403b rewards of 366hk m, 367b, 368 lq, 398c, 399a, 400a, 401a, 403c, 947h seven pillars of 368q speculative, theoretical 315c sustains creation 397k teaching and 400a true and false 694bc, 912ab, 945gh, 947h universally bestowed 397g unsatisfactoriness of 377c worldly 695a d, 696-7 worship and 397c, 398c, 403b
- WISDOM, Book of 2a, 32h, 36i, 314bh, 388-95, 870f alleged Hellenist influence on 589g and problem of evil 388i, 457g canonicity of 11d, 148d, 156g, 388b early Christian propaganda and 388cjk historical fiction in 388f, 391b-dh, 394a midrashic element in 388f, 394a on immortality 115c, 137e, 314h, 388i, 389edfg, 390f on the faithful departed 102d, 595a St Matthew and 388d, 389e St Paul and 388dghk, 389f, 390af, 393f uninfluenced by apocalyptic 388j
- WISDOM LITERATURE 33b, 314bhi, 318e of Egypt and Babylonia 316ef its universalism 315d, 318a, 474d St James and 946d, 947ag
- WISDOM PERSONIFIED, Divine 40hj, 316b-d, 366d, 368hjm, 388g, 389b, 391c-j, 397m, 403a, 781c, 782a (see also Logos) active in tabernacle, temple 403b among the angels 403a and the Logos Doctrine 41h, 316dgh, 368m, 388g, 397 lm, 398b apart from Greek, Stoic thought 316gh as the spirit of God 403a throughout creation 325b, 329cf, 397k, 402ab, 403a, 404a, 405a-e, 781c, 782abc, 910f Christ as 316d, 398b, 403d, 695c, 781c, 910ef description applied to B.V.M. 85f, 403c dwelling in Israel 397e, 398bc, 402b, 474d enthroned with God 403a in Mosaic Law 314h, 315e, 316c, 397a, 398b, 400a, 403bd, 472h, 474bde
- (WISDOM PERSONIFIED) in OT only a divine attribute 316a, 368jm, 388g, 392c, 592c invitation to Gentiles 403c justified of her children 694g, 753fg pre-existent 368n, 397 l, 403b WISMAN, Nicholas, Cardinal 30k Wise Men, see Magi professional sages 314f, 315c, 316h, 367 l WITCHCRAFT, Sorcery 106d, 175f 192s, 193h, 253a, 256ef, 284a WITHAM, Dr Robert 29c, 30ag
WITHERED HAND 696c, 728g
WITNESS, law of 174d, 175h, 215, 217b, 218bc, 272h, 657n, 706f, 720l, 740g, 792c, 796d, 958c, 968c (see also Apostles, False Witness)
WITNESSES, The Two 146h, 390c, 968acd WITS, Prophetic 539d, 540j o, 714a the last woes 554ab, 670kl, 752b, 967c WOGAN, Printer, P. 29p WOLVES 659c, 657m, 692h, 758d in sheep's clothing 657c WOMAN 400c (see also Eve, Marriage, Mary, Wife) at the cross 742g, 776e, 810d barred from priesthood 476f, 921g beauty of Hebrew 309k Christian status of 654f, 660dg, 745 l converse with men restricted 789f, 790a daughters not thought an asset 334g, 596c deaconses 921i disciples of Christ 710b, 754a, 757ab, 772a, 773b exempt from Jewish pilgrimages 750a fighting 231f forbidden male clothing 218i head-covering 878ac in Christian worship 878a-c, 880gh, 881a, 921g inheritance by 207fg, 334h luxury, vanity denounced 424hi man and woman interdependent 143bi, 145b, 878c ministering 660g, 875i natural equality of 110c, 143i, 872c of Jerusalem, at Passion 722cgh, 742b, 745 l, 770d oriental inequality 144d, 602a oriental seclusion of 405d, 789f, 790a OT status, 173c, 207fg, 208c e, 213a, 214f, 596bc, 686a, 735b, 745 l
Our Lord and 40h, 55c, 220b, 384f, 620e, 691ef, 730f, 732d, 739b, 745gl, 753bgh, 754a, 757ab, 759a, 767a, 768a, 770d, 781hi, 789c-790d, 794cf, 797a pagan status 597-8, 745 l, 837c, 905f, 908a pains of childbirth 145b place at table 602h prophetesses 85i, 170h, 240bc, 412a, 617d, 877b, 880h, 881a quarrels of 907e rights of inheritance 79k, 207fg, 209o, 246i, 334h Roman equality of 597 8, 735b segregation at worship 552d, 589b, 750a, 825c (the) sinful woman 739b, 745 l, 753gh, 754a subordinate in family 143i, 144d virgins and widows 651gh vows of 208c-e witnesses of Resurrection 723ab, 743b, 810d, 812bcde
'woman', a title of dignity 786b, 789f woman taken in adultery 680i, 781hi, 797ab
- WOOD, The Green and the Dry 220b, 486j, 770d WORD OF GOD, The 35h, 137a, 699a, 747a, 781c, 782b, 950cd (see also Bible, Gospel, Logos, Memra, Preaching) analogy of Written and Incarnate 5c, 36ij, 37a
- (WORD OF GOD) incarnate 781c, 782af, 783cd, 792 (see also Incarnation) power of 1c, 3c, 137d, 444i, 447h, 730d pre-incarnate activity of 782f the Gospel (q.v.) 648g, 654h the spoken and the written 1c-f, 2c wisdom externalized in 398b
- WORDS, from the Heart 697b idle words 697c
- WORK, see Manual abstinence from 113bek, 191k, 193s-w a source of joy 376j, 380b Christian duty of 660p, 917f, 925h effect of the Fall 144d in Eden 143j, 144d ordained by God 400b
- WORKS, Good 302i l, 303de, 367b, 623d, 648no, 686f, 709i, 736b, 953d (see also Justification, Law, Merit, Righteousness) after justification 849k m, 854d, 902e faith and 634e, 648n, 723f, 792d, 846d, 849i-l, 858a-e, 907e insufficiency of 757a
- WORKS, Ministry of Public 267h
- WORLD, The, as opposed to God 782g, 783g, 806i, 951g, 955e, 956g (see also Eschatology, New Heaven and Earth, Stoicism) children of 761b, 766e its Age, in Rabbinic thought 593c, 970f Satan its ruler 643f, 801h, 804c, 969b the whole oecumene 715d, 749c
- WORLDLINESS 146c, 732h, 752h, 761b, 766e, 871a, 945h, 948b, 955ei, 956g, 958bc
- WORMS 322a bodily corruption 4005d eaten of worms 574b, 577f-h, 833h fire and 400b, 734d
- WORMWOOD, Gall 457bc, 459i, 527h, 722c, 967e
- WORSHIP 101f, 104e, 110e, 183h, 184a, 288gj, 310c, 311f, 312a, 339c, 340f, 378d, 397c, 403b, 406h, 845d, 880c-e (see also Cult, Dispositions, Liturgy, Music, Prayer, Ritual, Sacrifice) al fresco 837e aramaisms, hebraisms in Christian 882i (see also Amen) continuous temple worship 967c decency and order in 880cg dress and 878a-c, 921g early services 891b in spirit and in truth 789g, 828b, 829ad inspires return of exiles 291a nature-worship 393b, 835c, 965e (see also Asherah, Baal, Sex) obedience to fellow-men 311f of angels 909d-f
of dead relatives 393e
of rulers 311f, 388e, 393e, 562d, 622a pre-exilic, post-exilic contrast 585d sexes segregated at 552d, 589b, 750a suppression of 503 lm, 504a, 505ef, 506bf, 507qr, 511f, 561 ff., 574a, 576a ff. understanding in 880cde (see also Vernacular) women at 878a-c, 880h, 881a
- WORTHIES, The Three 484j
- WORTHINGTON, Dr Thomas 29bhk
- WOUNDS, The Sacred 547i, 552d, 553b, 939c
- WRATH OF GOD, The 163f, 222cd, 273n, 340b, 353c, 360d, 448i, 471g, 526a, 682h, 788k, 846d, 847d, 854b, 857p, 915bd 929d, (see also Cup) children of 900e vessels of wrath 857m-p
- WREDE, W. 608bce, 670b
- WRESTLING 244i
- WRITING, development of cuneiform 117b development of Egyptian 118b early diffusion in Palestine 20a, 80i, 99f, 137g, 224c, 242k invention of 44c, 45g, 117a

(WRITING) materials and script 21g, 76c, 292d, 581cd, 662a Moses, Joshua and 20a, 171i, 176c the Mosaic alphabet 80i WRITINGS, The, see Hagiographa WYCLIF'S BIBL 4d-f, 10c, 29e
WYNKEN DE WORDE 29f

XANTHICUS, The month 83j, 123c XENOPHON 604f
XERVES (Assuerus) 67e, 122h, 289h, 291f, 310bcm, 311c-f, 312cdj, 495c, 502b, 507b, 510a, 543c, 909b decrees concerning Jews 311f, 312d invasion of Greece 122h, 289c, 310m, 311e religious policy 122h XESTES 82de
XIMENES, Cardinal 15k, 24c

YAHAS 273 l YAHWEH 109b, 135n, 149c, 163fg, 164h, 165a-c, 427i, 591c, 807c (see also God, Images, Names) consorts supplied for 213d, 215a, 217b, 535 l, 555k identified with Baals 112c, 456i (see also Ishbaal, Jerubbaal) in names 66c, 80k (see also Theophoric) name in the LXX 76d, 858d name possibly pre-Mosaic 105c, 129d, 133a, 165c name rarely uttered after exile 133b, 406h, 591c, 907d name revealed to Moses 129d, 133a, 797 l not a Kenite God 165cd use in book of Job 318b
'wars of' 205e Yah, Yau, Yaho, Yahu 80h, 165b, 555k Yahweh Elohim 133a
YAHWISM 104-115, 215a (see also Judaism, Law) an-eiconic 109c, 137d, 172i, 173a, 174a, 212fg, 213a, 290d, 589e (see also Images) contrasted with Christianity 104c national, not universal 114h post-Mosaic development 114c, 115a-j, 134, 216c, 217e (see also Judaism) pre-exilic and post-exilic, contrasted 585d, 586c, 591ac, 592e, 595d pre-Mosaic, primitive 45i, 104gh, 105-107, 108a, 113f, 137a-f, 165c, 173g, 187a superiority over paganism 61cd, 79agh, 89c, 114cfd, 115j, 173k, 211g, 212f, 836f this-worldliness 153r YAHWIST DOCUMENT (J) 44df, 46b, 135iklo
YAREB, king 517i

YARMUK 55g
YAUBIDI 121g
YEA AND NAY 886f
YEAR, Hebrew 83gh (see also New Year)
YEMEN 697e
YIBLEAM, see Ibleam
YOKE 695d, 888e
Yom Kippur 493c, 642e (see also Atonement Day)
YOUTH, Young Men 763fg, 925c, 951g

ZAANAIM, see Sennim ZABAD, Zabadæans 283c, 284e, 570b
ZABDIEL THE ARAB 569df
ZABULON, Zebulun 57h, 58c, 160a, 222h, 236b, 240d, 241h, 283i, 427g ZACCHAEUS 584n, 620e, 643h, 660k, 735j, 764ac ZACHARIAS, Zachary 747d-f, 748c-fij, 749hi (see also Benedictus) ZACHARIAH, son of Barachias (Jeberechiah) 427b, 545bi, 714i ZACHARIAS, son of Joiada (Barachias) 65c, 276, 282jt, 287g, 413h, 714i ZACHARIAS, Zechariah, the prophet 67d, 289egl, 292ah, 414g, 417f, 427b, 543b-j, 545-53, 721d, 739i and interpreting angels 592e and the Translucion 811c ceremonial, priestly interests 545b, 547d deutero-Zacharias 545m-q the four horsemen 966f the seven eyes of Yahweh 966d ZACHARIAS, Zechariah, of Israel 277g ZADOK, see Sadoc
ZAGROS MOUNTAINS 117d, 118j, 278e
ZAHN, T. 604b
ZAKIR OF HAMATH 277ek
ZAKKARA, The 62a ZALMUNNA, see Salmana
ZAMBRI, see Zimri ZAMZUMMIM, see Pre-Canaanites
ZANOAH, Zanoë 283g
ZAPHON, see Saphon
ZARA, Zerah, the Ethiopian 226d, 286zbbgg ZARATHUSHTRA, Zoroastrianism 67a, 92c, 289d, 293d, 307c, 443c, 559h, 946i ZAREATHITES, Saraites 283d
ZARED, Wady 212c
ZFAL 114 l, 181c, 276d, 280n, 736c, 787bc ZEALOTS 71a, 72b, 74hd, 584d, 618d, 619d, 692c, 716a, 728i, 736g, 737h, 749a, 754g, 766d, 770bc, 771b, 774b, 775b, 827c, 841a (see also Barabbas, Judas, Nationalism, Simon, Theudas)
ZER, Zeeb, the Medianite 164e
ZERAH, Zebee 242j
ZEBEDEE, SONS OF 724e, 728i, 776e (see also James, John)

(ZEBEDEE, SONS OF) and the Jewish exorcist 776e fishermen 55h martyrdom foretold 607k, 710b, 735h, 777f mother of 710b, 776e, 810d (see also Salome) seek primacy 607k, 644e, 670i, 678f, 710b, 735h, 764bd would call fire from heaven 756a, 776e ZEDFKIAH, see Sedecias ZENAS THE LAWYER 925h
ZENOBIA 309c
ZENODORUS 71g
ZEPHANIAH, see Sophonias
ZEPHATH, see Sephaath
ZERAH, Zarah, Zohar, Sohar 283h ZERERATH, Zarthan, Zeredathah, see Sereda ZERUBBABEL, see Zerobabel
ZERUIAH, see Sarvia
ZEUS 835b, 838e
 Apomulios 273e
 Olympios 511hi, 555k, 562e, 564c, 576c, 598o, 716a, 737h ZIBA, see Siba
ZIF, Zio, Month of 268ah ZIGGURAT 149 lm, 972ab altars like 278c, 492 l
New Jerusalem pictured as 792a ZIKLAG, Siceleg 57e, 63g, 256di, 283h, 284f ZIMRI, Zamri, Zabdi 64f, 265c, 271de, 275j, 283b ZIMRI-LIM OF MARI 309a ZINGIRLI 20e
ZIO, Zif, Month of 268ah
ZIPH 80e, 283d, 336
ZIPPORAH, see Sephora ZOAN, see Tanis
ZOAR, So'ar 430gh
ZOAR, Segor 150de, 152f
ZOBAB, Soba 57k, 120j, 284v
ZODIAC, Signs of 159degh, 280j, 967g
ZOHLETH 267b, 295f
ZOOMORPHISM, Animal Worship 109c, 142c, 212g, 392dh, 393h, 465c, 483b, 598m, 847e ZOPHAR, see Sophar ZOR, The, see Jordan
ZORAH, see Saraa
ZOROASTRIANISM (see also Zarathushtra) 289d ZOROBABEL, Zerubbabel 66f, 282n, 283ef, 288ce, 289eh, 290g, 291a, 543cefi, 544k, 545bdki, 552d, 680c fable of the three pages 288ij identified with Sheshbazzar 67b, 290d, 543f type of Messias 545df, 547cf, 548d ZOSIR, Pharaoh 118c
ZUZIM, The 149g, 150f
ZWINGLI 652c

List of Maps

1	The Hebrew Table of Nations	1297
2	Mesopotamia and Syria. Inset maps : Assyria and Chaldea ; Egyptian Empire ; Persian Empire and Hellenistic Empire	1298-9
3	The Holy Land. Inset map : Southwards to Gulf of 'Aqaba	1300-1
4	Northern Palestine	1302-3
5	Southern Palestine	1304-5
6	Egypt and Sinai	1306
7	The Holy Land under Josue and the Judges	1307
8	The Holy Land under Saul, David and Solomon	1308
	Israel and Judah	1308
	Palestine in the time of Nehemias	1308
9	The Holy Land under the Maccabees	1309
	The Holy Land in the time of Jesus Christ	1309
	The Holy Land in later New Testament times	1309
10	General Plan of Jerusalem	1310
11	Jerusalem : in the time of David and Solomon	1311 in the time of the Early Monarchy	1311 in the time of the Later Monarchy and after the Exile	1311 in the time of Jesus Christ	1311
12	Eastern Mediterranean	1312

Index of Names in Maps

ABANA, R. 3 F2	ADAMI (Kh. Damiyeh) 4 J6	ALEXANDRIUM (Qarn Sarjabe) 4 J15 ; 5 O1	ANUATH (Borcaeus, 'Ain Berkir) 4 G15 ; 5 L1
ABDON (Kh. 'Abda) 4 E1	ADASA (' Adasa) 5 L4 ; 9a D8	ALUSA (Khalasa) 3 A11	APHEK (1) (Antipatris, T. Ras el-'Ain) 3 B7 ;
ABEL(A) (Abelmaim, Abil) 3 D3 ; 8b E4	ADIDA (Hadid, el-Haditheh) 5 H2 ; 9a C8	ALUSH (el-'Esh) 6 D5	4 B15 ; 5 G1 ; 7 B5 ;
ABEL-MEHOAH (T. Abu Sifri) 4 J11 ; 7 C5	ADORA (Adoraim, Dura) 5 J9 ; 9ab C9	AMALEC 8a B-C11	9c C7 ; 12 N7
ABEL-SHITTIM (T. Kefrein) 3 D8 ; 7 D6	ADORAIM (Adora, Dura) 5 J9 ; 8b C9	AMATHUS (' Ammata) 3 D7 ; 9a E7	APHEK (2) (T. Kurdaneh) 4 E4 ; 7 C3
ABILA (1) (T. Abil) 3 E5 ; 9ac E6	ADRAMYTIIUM 12 H2	AMMATHUS (Hammath, Hammam) 4 K5	APHEK (3) (el-Fiq) 3 D5 ; 8b E5
ABILA (2) (Sug Wady Barada) 3 E2 ; 9b E3	ADRIA 12 D3	AMMON 2 C4 ; 3 E8-9 ; 8abc F8	APHAIREMA 9a D8
ABILENE 9b E3 ; 9c F3	ADULLAM (Kh. 'Id-el-Ma) 3 B9 ; 5 H7 ; 7 B7 ; 8ab C9	AMMONITES 7 E5	APPII FORUM 12 A1
ABU RETEMAT, W. (Rethma) 6 E2	AEGEAN SEA 12 G3	AMORITE KINGDOM 1 F3	APOLLONIA (1) 12 D2, G2
ABU ZEIAH, W. 4 K10	AENON near SALIM (T. Ridga) 4 K11 ; 9b D7	AMPHIPOLIS 12 G1	APOLLONIA (2) (Arsuf) 3 ; B7
ACCAD 1 F3 ; 2 H4	AFRANI, W. 5 H7	'AMUD, W. el- (1) 4 K9	4 A14 ; 9a C7
ACCARON (Ekron, ' Aqir) 3 B8 ; 5 F4 ; 9a C8	AHLAB (Kh. el-Mahalib) 3 C3	'AMUD, W. el- (2) 4 J4	'AQABA, Gulf of 6 F4-5 ; 8a C15
ACCHO (Ptolemais, ' Akka) 2 B4 ; 3 B4 ; 4 D3 ; 7 B3	AHMA, S. el- 4 J5	AMURRU 2 C2	ARAM 8b E-F5
ACHAIA 1 D2 ; 12 F3	AI (Beth-aven, el-Tell) 2 B4 ; 3 C8 ; 5 L3 ; 7 C6 ; 8c D8	ANAB (Kh. 'Anab) 5 G10	ARAB (er-Rabiyeh) 5 J10
ACHOR ?, Valley of 5 N4	AJALON, Valley of 5 J4	ANAHARATH (en-Na'urah) 4 H7	'ARAB, W. el- 4 K7-8
ACHSHAPH 3 C4 or C5 ; 4 D2 or E4 (T. Kelsan)	AJALON (Yalo) 5 J4 ; 7 B6 ; 8b C8	ANATHOTH (' Anata) 3 C8	ARABAH 3 inset C12 ; 6 F2-3
ACHZIB (Ecdippa, ez-Zib) 3 C4 ; 4 D1 ; 7 C3	AJLUN, W. 4 K12	ANCYRA (Angora) 12 L2	ARABIAN DESERT 1 F-G4-5 ; 8a H6-7-8-9
ACRABA 9a D7	AKRABBIM, Ascent of 3 B11 ; 6 F1-2	ANIM (Kh. Ghuweim et-Tahta) 3 B10 ; 5 J11	ARACHOSIA 2 inset C, G-H4
ACRABETTA (' Aqrabeh) 4 G14	ALALAKH 2 C1	ANTI-LEBANON 2 C3 ; 3 E-F2	'ARAH, W. 4 D9
ADADA ? (Adadah) 5 C10	ALASHIYA (Cyprus) 1 E3	ANTIOCH (in Pisidia) 12 K3	ARAD (T. 'Arad) 3 C10 ; 7 C8
ADAM (Adamah, T. ed-Damiyeh) 3 D7 ; 4 K14 ; 8a E7	ALEMA (' Alma) 3 F5 ; 9a F6	ANTIOCH (in Syria) 2 C1 ; 12 N5	ARAL SEA 1 H1
	ALEPPO (Khalab) 2 D1	ANTIPATRIS (Aphék, T. Ras el-'Ain) 3 B7 ; 4 B15 ; 5 G1 ; 5 B5 ; 9c C7 ; 12 N7	ARAM 2 C3
	ALEXANDRIA 2 inset C, B3 ; 12 K8		ARAM-NAHARAIM 2 D-E1
			ARARAT or URARTU (Armenia) 1 F2

INDEX OF NAMES IN MAPS

ARBATHA (Kh. Beidus) 4 C10
 ARBELA (1) (Irbid) 4 J5 ;
 9a D5
 ARBELA (2) (Betharbel, Irbid) 3 E6
 ARBELA (3) 2 G1 ;
 inset C, D2 ARCHELAIS (Kh. el-'Auja et-Tahitani) 5 O3 ARDATA (Tripoli) 2 C3
 AREIJEH, W. el- 5 M9
 ARGON 3 E5 ; 7 E-F3
 ARIA 2 inset C, G2 ARIMATHAEA (Ramathaim Zophim, Rentis) 5 H2 ;
 9b C7
 *ARISH, W. el- (River of Egypt) 6 E2
 ARKITE 1 inset F3
 ARMENIA (Urtartu or Ararat)
 1 F2 ; 2 inset C, D2 AR MOAB (Rabbath Moab, Kh. er-Rabba) 3 D10
 ARNON R. 3 D10 ; 7 D7
 AROER (1) 3 E8? (Kh. Sufra)
 3 E9 (Ara'ar) ; 7 D7
 AROER (2) ('Ar'arah) 3 B11
 ARPAD 2 C1
 ARPAXAD 1 inset G3
 ARRAPHKA 2 G2
 ARSUF (Apollonia) 4 A14
 ARTUF 5 H5
 ARUMA (Kh. el-'Ormeh)
 4 G14
 ARVAD 2 C2
 ARVADITE 1 inset F3 ASCALON (Ashkelon, Kh. Asqalan) 3 A9 ; 5 C7 ; 9abc B9
 ASHDOD (Azotus, Esdud)
 3 A9 ; 5 D5 ; 7 A6 ;
 8a C9 ; 8bc B8
 ASHER 7 B4-C3 ASHKELON (Ascalon, Kh. Asqalan) 7 A7 ; 8a B9
 ASHKENAZ 1 inset F-G2
 ASHTAROTH (T. Ashtarrah)
 2 C4 ; 3 E5 ; 7 E3 ;
 8a F5
 ASIA 12 J3
 ASOR 9a E5
 ASPHALTIS, L. (Salt Sea)
 9abc D9
 ASSHUR, City of 1F3 ; 2 G2 ASSHUR, Land of 1 inset F-G3
 ASSOS 12 H2
 ASSYRIA 1 G3 ; 2 inset A ; inset B, D2 ; 2 G2 ;
 inset C, D-E3
 ATAROTH (Kh. Attarus)
 3 D9 ; 7 D7
 ATAROTH-ADDAR (Kh.
'Attarus) 5 L4 ATHENS 12 F4
 ATTALIA 12 K4
 *AUJA, N. el- 4 A15 ; 5 F1
 *AUJE, W. el- 5 O3 AURANTIS 9bc F5 AVARIS (Tanis, Zoan, Ramesses, San el-Hagar)
 6 B1
 AZEKAH (T. ez-Zakariyeh)
 5 H6 ; 8b, C8
 AZOTUS (Ashdod, Esdud)
 3 A9 ; 5 D5 ; 9abc B8 ;
 12 N8
 BAAL-HAZOR (Jebel 'Asur)
 5 M2
 BAALMEON (Beon, Ma'in)
 3 D9 ; 7 D6
 BAAL-SHALISHAH (Kefr Thilth)
 4 D14
 BAAL-ZEPHON? 6 C3
 BABA, W. 6 D4
 BABYLON 1 G3 ; 2 H4 ; insets AB, D2 ; inset C, D3

BABYLONIA 1 G3 ;
 2 inset B, D2
 2 (Babylonia-Shinar) H4
 BACA (el-Buget'a) 4 G2
 BACTRIA 2 inset C, G2
 BAGHDAD 2 H3
 BALAH, L. 6 C2
 BALIKH, R. 2 D1 BAMOTH-BAAAL (Kh. el- Queiqiyeh) 3 D9
 BANIAS, N. 4 K1
 BASCAMA? (el-Jumeizeh)
 3 D4 ; 9a E5
 BASHAN 3 F4 ; 7 E3
 BASRA 2 K5
 BATANAF 9bc F5
 BEER (el-Bireh) 4 J7
 BEEROOTH (Bire) 5 L3 ; 7 C6
 BEERSHEBA (T. es-Seba) 2B5 ; 3 B10 ; 6 F1 ;
 7 B8 ; 8abc C10
 BEHISTUN 2 J2
 BENE BERAK (Ibn-ibraaq)
 5 F1
 BENJAMIN 7 C6
 BEON (Baalmeeon, Ma'in)
 3 D9
 BERACHAH, Valley of 5 L8
 BEREIA 9a D8
 BEROEIA 12 F2
 BERTHOAI 2 C3 ; 8a F2
 BERYTUS (Biruta, Beirut)
 2 B3 ; 3 D1
 BETEN (Abtin) 4 E5
 BETHANATH (Ba'aneh)
 3 C4 ; 4 F3
 BETH-ANOTH (Beit 'Ainun)
 5 K8
 BETHANY (el-'Azariyeh)
 5 L5 ; 9b E8? D8
 BETH-ARABAH (el-Gharabeh)
 5 O4
 BETHARBEL (Arbela, Irbid)
 3 E6
 BETH-AVEN (Ai, et-Tell) 3 C8 BETH-AVEN, Wilderness of 5 M3
 BETHBASSI (Kh. Beit-basssa)
 5 L6 ; 9a D8
 BETH-DAGON (Kh. Dajun)
 5 F2 ; 9a, C8
 BETH-DIBLATHAIM (Deleilar)
 3 E9
 BETHFL (Luz, Beitin) 2 B4 ; 3 C8 ; 5 L3 ; 7 C6 ; 8abc D8 ; 9a D8
 BETHMEK ('Amqa) 4 E2
 BETHER (Bittir) 5 K6
 BETHGAMUL (Kh. ej-Jumeil)
 3 E9
 BETH-HARAN (er-Rameh)
 3 D8
 BETH-HOGLAH ('Ain Hajlah)
 5 O4
 BETH-HORON, Lower (Beit- ur et-Tahita) 5 J3 ; 7 B6 ;
 9a D8
 BETH-HORON, Upper (Beit 'ur el-Foqa) 5 K3 ; 8b D8 ;
 9a D8
 BETH-JESHIIMOTH (Sweimeh)
 3 D8
 BETH-KEREM (Carem, 'Ain Karim) 5 K5 BETHLEHEM in Judah (Beit- lahm) 3 C9 ; 5 L6 ; 7 C6 ; 8bc D8 ; 9b D8 BETHLEHEM in Galilee (Beit lahm) 3 C5 ; 4 E6 BETHMAACAH 2 C3
 BETH-NIMRAH (T. Nimrin)
 3 D8 ; 7 D6
 BETHPEOR (Kh. Sh. Jayel)
 3 D8
 BETHPHAGE (Kefr et-Tur)
 5 L5 ; 9b D8
 BETHREHOB 2 C3 ; 3 D4 ;
 8a E4

BETHSAIDA JULIAS (et-Tell)
 3 D5 ; 4 L3 ; 9b E5 BETHSHAN (Scythopolis, Beisan) 2 B4 ; 3 D6 ; 4 J9 ;
 7 C4 ; 8a D6
 BETH-SHEMESH (er-Rumeileh)
 3 B9 ; 5 H5 ; 7 B6 ; 8b C8
 BETHSURA 9a C9
 BETH-TAPPUAH (Taffuh) 5 J8 BETHZACHARIA (Beit-Zekar- iyah) 5 K7 ; 9a C9 BETHZUR (Kh. et-Tubeiqah)
 3 B9 ; 8bc D9
 BFTONIM (Kh. Batneh) 3 D8
 BEZEK (Kh. Ibbiq) 4 H11
 BEZER (Umm el-'Amad)
 3 E8 ; 7 D6
 BEZETH (Beit Zeita) 5 F7 ; 9a C9
 BIR ISIR, W. 4 D10
 BIRUTA (Berytus, Beirut)
 2 B3 ; 3 D1
 BIT-ADINI (Eden?) 2 D1
 BITHYNIA 12 K2
 BITTER LAKES 6 C2
 BIT-YAKIN 2 K5
 BLACK SEA 1 L2 ; 2 insets
 AB, B1 ; inset C, C1 BORCAEUS (Anuath, 'Ain Berkit) 4 G15 ; 5 L1
 BORSIPPA 2 H4
 BOSOR (Busr el-Hariri) 3 F5 ;
 9a F5
 BOSORA (Bozra, Busra) 3 F6 ; 9a F6
 BOSPHORUS 12 J1
 BOZRA (Bosora, Busra)
 3 F6
 BOZRAH (Mibzar, Buseira)
 3 inset D12 ; 6 G2 ; 8a D11 BRUNDISIUM 12 D2
 BUBASTIS (T. Basta) 6 B2
 BUQUE'IA, W. el- 4 J13
 BUSIRIS (Abu Sir) 6 A2
 BUTO (T. el-Fera'in) 6 A1
 BUTO, L. 6 A1
 BYBLOS (Jebeil) 2 B3 ; 3 D1 ; 8ac E2
 BYZANTIUM 12 J1
 CABUL (Kabul) 3 C5 ; 4 F4 ;
 8ab D5
 CAESAREA (Turris Stratonis, Qeisariyeh) 3 B6 ; 4 B9 ; 12 N7
 CAESAREA PHILIPPI (Baniyas)
 3 D3 ; 9bc E4
 CAIN (Kh. Yakin) 5 K9
 CAIRO 6 A3
 CALAH (Nimrud) 2 G1
 CALEB 7 C7 CALLIRHOE (Zareth-Shahar, Zarat) 3 D9
 CALNEH (Kullani) 2 C1
 CAMON (el-Qamm) 3 D6
 CANA (Kh. Qana) 3 C5 ;
 4 G5 ; 9b D5
 CANAAN 1 inset E3 ; 2 B4 ; inset B, B2
 CANAANITES 7 B4 CANATHA (Kenath, Nobah, Qanawat) 3 G5 ; 9c F5 CAPERNAUM, (Capharnaum,
T. Hum) 3 D5 ; 4 K4 ;
 9b D5
 CAPHARSALAMA (Kh. Selmah)
 5 K4 ; 9a D8 CAPHT(H)OR (Crete) 1 E3 ;
 inset, D3 ; 12 G5
 CAPITOLIAS (Beit Ras) 3 E5 CAPPADOCIA 2 inset C, C2 ;
 12 M3 CARCHEMISH 2 D1 ;
 inset A, C2 CAREM (Beth-Kerem, 'Ain Karim) 5 K5
 CARIA 12 J4
 CARMEL (Kermel) 5 K10

CARMEL, Mt. 2 B4 ; 3 B5 ;
 4 D6 ; 8b C6
 CARNAIM (Karnaim, Sheikh Sa'ad) 3 E5 ; 9a F5
 CASPHOR (el-Muzeirib?)
Khushin?) 3 E5 ; 9a F6
 CASPIAN SEA 1 G2 ;
 2 insets ABC, E1
 CEDES (Kedesh, T. Qades)
 3 D4 ; 4 K1 ; 7 D3 ;
 8b D4
 CEDRON (Qatira) 5 F4 ; 9a C8
 CENCHREA 12 F4
 CHAGAR BAZAR 2 E1
 CHALCEDON 12 J1
 CHALDEA 2 H4 ; inset A CHARASHIM, Valley of 5 G2 CHEPHIRAH (T. Kephureh)
 5 K4 ; 8c C8
 CHERETHITES 7 A7
 CHESALON (Keshi) 5 J5
 CHESULLOTH (Lxaloth, Ras)
 4 G6 ; 7 C4
 CHINNERTH, Sea of, or Galilee or Tiberias or Lake
 Gennesar 2 D5 ; 4 K4 ;
 7 D3
 CHINNERTH (T. el-Oreimeh)
 4 K4 ; 8b E5
 CHIOS 12 H3 CHORAZIN (Corozain, Kerazeh) 3 D4 ; 4 K3
 CHUS (Heliopolis, Baalbek)
 3 F1
 CILICIA 12 M4
 CILICIAN GATES 12 N4
 CITIUM 12 M6
 CLAUDIA 12 G6
 CNIDUS 12 H4
 COLOSSAE 12 J4
 COREA (T. el-Mazar) 4 J14
 CORINTH 12 F4
 CORSCA 1 C2
 CORTYNA 12 G5
 COS 12 H4
 CRETE (Caphtor) 1 E3 ;
 inset D3 ; 12 G5
 CUSH 1 E6 ; inset F5
 CUTHA 2 H4 CYPRUS (Alashiya, Elishah, Kittim) 1 E3 ; inset E3 ;
 2 A2 ; 12 M6
 DABARFH (Dabarittha, Kh. Deburiveh) 4 H6 DABARITTHA (Dabareh, Kh. Deburiveh) 4 H6 DARBASHETH (T. esh- Shemmam) 4 E6
 DAMASCUS (esh-Sham) 2 C3 ;
 inset C, C3 ; 3 F2 ;
 7 E1 ; 8abc F3 ; 9ac F3 ;
 12 O6
 DAMIETTA 6 B1
 DAN (Leshem, Laish, T. el-Qaik) 3 D3 ; 7 D2 ;
 8abc E4
 DAN (Tribe) 7 D2 ; B6 DAPHNAE (Tahpanhes,
T. Defenneh) 6 B2 DATHEMAN (Dathema, Ramoth-Gilead, el-Hosn)
 3 E6 ; 9a F6 DEBIR (1) (Kiriathsepher, T. Beit Mirsim) 3 B9 ;
 5 G10 ; 7 B7
 DEBIR (2) 11 C6
 DECAPOLIS 9bc E6
 DECAN 1 inset F4
 DERAJEH, W. el- 5 N8
 DERBE 12 L4
 DIBON (Dimon, Dhiban)
 3 E9 ; 6 G1 ; 7 D7 ;
 8ab E9
 DIMON (Dibon) 3 E9
 DION (T. el-Ash'ari) 3 E5 ;
 9ac F5

INDEX OF NAMES IN MAPS

- DIYALA, R. 2 H3
DOK (J. Qarantal) 5 N4 ;
9a D8
DOPKHAH ? (Serabit el-Khadem) 6 D4
DOR (Dora, Tantura) 2 B4 ; 3 B6 ; 4 B7 ; 7 H4 ; 8abc C6 ; 9ab C6
DORYLAFUM 12 K2
DOTHAN (T. Dotha) 3 C6 ;
4 F10 ; 8b D6
DOTHAN, Plain of 4 F10
DRUSE, Mts. 3 G5
DUMAH (et-Domeh) 5 H10
DURA-EUROPOS 2 E2
DYRRACHIUM 12 D1
- EBAL, Mt. (J. Esلامييه)
3 C7 ; 4 G13 ; 5 C5
EBRONAH (Ain Defiveh)
3 inset, B15 ; 6 F3 ECBATANA 1 G3 ; 2 K2 ;
inset C, E3
ECDIPPA (Achzib, ez-Zib)
4 D1
EDEN ? (Bit-Aditi) 2 D1
EDOM (Seir) 2 B5 ;
3 inset, D13 ; 6 G2 ;
8a E11-12
EDOMITES 7 C9
EDREI (Der'a) 3 F5 ; 7 E4 ;
8ac F6
EGLON (T. el-Hesi) 3 A9 ;
5 E8 ; 7 B7
EGYPT, Lower and Upper 1 E4-5 ; 2 inset B, A-B3-4 ; inset C, B4
EGYPT, River of (W. el-Arishi) 6 E2
EKRON (Accaron, Aqir)
5 F4 ; 7 B6 ; 8ab C8
ELAH, Valley of 5 H6
ELAM 1 G3 ; inset G3 ;
2 K3 ; inset A, D2 ; inset B, E2
ELASA (Il'asa) 5 I4 ; 9a D8
ELATH (Aqaba) 3 inset B16 ;
6 F4
ELEALEH (el 'Al) 3 E8 ;
7 D6
ELEUTHEROPOLIS (Beit Jibrin) 5 G7 ELIM ? 6 D4
ELISHAH (Kittim, Cyprus)
1 inset E3 EMMAUS ('Amwas ?
Qubeibeh ?) 3 B8 ; 5 H4 ; K4 ; 9ab C8
ENAN ? 2 C3
ENDOR (Endor) 3 C5 ;
4 H7 ; 7 C4 ENGADDI (Hazezontamar,
'Ain Jidi) 3 C9 ; 5 N9 ENGANNIM (Ginnea, Jenin)
3 C6 ; 4 G10
EN-HADDAH (el-Hadathah)
4 J7
EN-HAROD ('Ain Jalud)
4 G8
EN-HAZOR (Kh. Hayire)
3 C4 ; 4 G1 ; 7 C3
EN-RIMMON (Kh. Umm er-Ramamin) 5 G11
EPHESUS 12 H4
EPHRAIM (et-Taiyibeh) 5 M3
EPHRAIM, Mt. 3 C7
EPHRAIM, the tribe 7 B-C5
EPHRON (et-Taiyibeh) 3 D6 ;
9a E6
EPIRUS 12 E2
ERICH (Warka) 2 H5
ERIDU 2 J5
ERIHA 5 O4
ESDRAELON, the Great Plain of 3 C5 ; 4 E F7 ; 9a D6
(The Great Plain)
ESHTAOL (Eshwa) 5 H5 ;
7 B6
ESHTEMOA (es-Semu) 5 J10
- ETAM (Kh. el-Khokh) 5 K6 ;
8b D8
ETHAM (Khetem) 6 C2 ETHER (Kh. el-Ater) 5 G7 ETHIOPIA 2 inset B, B4-5 EUPHRATES, R. 1 F-G3 ;
2 G3
EUXINE SEA 12 K1
EXALOTH (Chesulloth, Iksal)
4 G6
EZIONGERBER (T. el-Kheleifeh)
3 inset B16 ; 6 F4 ; 8a C14 ;
FAR'A, W. 4 J15 ; 7 C5
- FAIYUM 6 A4
FARA (Shuruppak) 2 H5
FAR'A, W. 4 J15 ; 7 C5
- GAASH, Mt. 5 K2
GABARA ('Arrabet el-Ba'fuf)
4 H4
GABATH SAUL (T. el-Ful) 5 L4
GAD 7 D5
GADARA (1) (Muqais) 3 D5 ;
9ac E6
GADARA (2) (T. Jadur) 3 D7
GALAADITIS 9a E6
GALATIA 12 L3
GALILEE 3 C4 ; 9abc D5 GALILEE, Sea of, or Chin-nereth, or Tiberias, or Gennesar 3 D5 ; 4 K4 ;
9abc E5
GAMALA (Jamleh) 3 E5 ;
9a E5
GARIZIN, Mt. 9a D7
GATH ('Arak el-Menshiyeh)
3 B9 ; 5 F7 ; 7 B7 ;
8ab C9
GATH-HEPHER (Kh. ez-Zurra)
3 C5 ; 4 G6 ; 8b D6
GATH-RIMMON (1) (T. Abu Zeitun) 4 A15 ; 5 F1 GATH-RIMMON (2) (Rum-maneh) 4 I9
GAUL 1 C1
GAULANITIS 9bc E5
GAZA (Ghazze) 2 B5 ; 3 A9 ; 5 B9 ; 6 E1 ; 7 A7 ; 8abc B9 ; 9abc B9 ; 12 N8 GAZARA 9a C8
GAZER ? (Jazer ? Kh. Jazzir)
3 D7
Geba (Jeba) 5 L4 ; 8b D8
GEDERAH (Je-lerah) 5 H4
GEDOR (Kh. Jedur) 5 J7 GEDROSIA 2 inset C, G4
GELIL HA-GOIM 8c D5 GENNESAR, L. (Sea of Chin-nereth or Galilee) 9a E5 GERAR (T. ej-Jemne) 3 A10 ; 5 B10 ; 6 E1 ; 8a B10 ; 8bc B9
GERASA (Jerash) 3 E7 ;
9c E7
GERIZIM, Mt. (J. et-Tor)
3 C7 ; 4 F13 ; 7 C5
GESHUR 7 D3 ; 8a E5
GEZER (Gazara, T. Jezer)
3 B8 ; 5 G4 ; 5 B6 ; 8ab C8
GHARANDI, W. 6 D4
GHARBE, W. 5 P4
GHAZZEH, W. 5 A10
GIBBETHON (T. el-Melat)
5 G4 ; 8b C8
GIBFAH 3 C8 ; 5 C6
GIBSON (el-Jib) 5 K4 ; 7 C6 ;
8bc D8
GILBOA, Mt. (J. Fuq'ah)
3 C6 ; 4 H9 ; 8a D6
GILEAD 3 E7 ; 7 E5 ;
8ac E6
GILGAL (1) (Jiljulieh) 3 B7 ;
4 C14
GILGAL (2) (Jiljilah) 5 L1 ;
8b D8
GILGAL (3) (Kh. el-Etheleh)
5 O4 ; 7 C6
- GILLOH (Kh. Jala) 5 J7
GIMZO (Jimzu) 5 H3 GINAEA (Engannim, Jenin)
4 G10
GISCHALA (el-Jish) 4 H2
GIZEH 6 A3
GOLAN (Sahemel-Jolan)
3 E5 ; 7 D3
GOMER 1 inset F2
GOPHNA (Ophnir, Jifnah)
5 L3
GOZAN 2 E1
GREECE 1 D2
GUTIUM 2 G2
- HABOR, R. 2 E2
HADID (Adida, el-Haditheh)
5 H2 ; 8c C8
HALAK, Mt. 6 F2
HALHUL (Halhul) 5 K8
HALYS, R. 12 M3
HALZUN, W. el- 7 C3
HAM (Ham) 3 E6
HAMAM, W. el- 4 J4
HAMATH 2 C2 HAMMATH (Ammathus, Hammam) 4 K5
HAMMON (Umm el-'Awamid)
3 C4
HANIS (Heracleopolis Magna, Ahnas el-Medineh)
6 A4
HANNATHON ? (T. el-Bedeiweh) 4 F5 ; 7 C3
HAPHARAIM (Kh. Farriyeh)
4 E7
HARAN 2 D1
HAROD 7 C4
HAROSHETH (T. 'Amr) 4 E6 ;
7 C4
HAURAN 2 C4 ; 3 F5 ;
7 E4
HAVIAH 1 inset G6
HAVOTH-JAIR 7 D4
HAZAR-ENAN ? (el-Hadar)
3 E3 ; 8a J2
HAZARMAVETH 1 inset G6
HAZEROTH ('Ain el-Khadra)
6 E4
HAZEZONTAMAR (Engaddi,
'Ain Jidi) 2 B5 ; 3 C9 ; 5 N9 ; 8b D9
HAZOR (T. el-Qeda) 2 B4 ; 3 D4 ; 4 K2 ; 7 D3 ;
8a E5
HEBRON (Kirjatharba, el-Khalil) 2 B5 ; 3 C9 ; 5 K9 ;
6 F1 ; 7 C7 ; 8abc D9 ; 9ac D9
HELBON (Halbun) 3 F2
HELIOPOLIS (1) (On, T. Husn)
6 B3
HELIOPOLIS (2) (Chun, Baal-bek) 3 F1
HELKATH (T. el-Harhaj)
3 B5 ; 4 D5
HELLAS 2 inset A, A1 HIRACLEOPOLIS MAGNA
(Hanes, Ahnas el-Medineh)
6 A4
HERMON, Mt. (Sirion, Senir)
2 C3 ; 3 E3 ; 7 D2 ; 8abc F4
HIRODIUM (J. Fureidis) 5 L7
HESBAN, W. 7 E6
HISHRON (Heshan) 3 E8 ;
7 D6
HESI, W. el- 5 C7
HIRAPOLIS 12 J4
HITAL, J. 6 E2
HINDAI, W. 4 J1
HIPPOS (Qala'at el-Hu'n)
3 D5 ; 9ac E5
HITTITE EMPIRE 1 E2 ;
2 inset B, B1
HOMS 2 C2
HOR, Mt. (J. Madeira) 6 F2
HOREB, Mt. (Sinai) 6 E5
- HORMAH (Zephath ? T. esh-Sheri'ah) 3 A10 ; 5 D10 ;
6 F1
HUKKOK (Yaquq) 4 J4
HULE, L. (Semechonitis)
4 K1 ; 7 D3
HUMR, W. 5 O1
HURRIE EMPIRE 1 F3
HYRCANIA 2 inset C, F2
- IRLEAM (T. Bel'ameh) 4 G10 ;
7 C4
ICONIUM 12 L4
IDALAH (Kh. el-Hawarah)
4 F6
IDUMAEA 8c C9 ; 9ab C10
IJER-ABARIM (Mahaiy) 3 E11 ; 5 inset E11 ; 6 G1
IJON ? (T. ed-Dibbin) 3 D3 ;
8b E4
ILLYRICUM 1 D1
INDIA 1 K3 ; 2 inset C, J3
INDIAN OCEAN 1 J6 ;
2 inset C, G4
INDUS, R. 1 J3
IRON (Yarun) 3 C4 ; 4 H1
IROATA 2 C2
ISHKAR, W. 4 B14
ISKANDERUNEH, N. 4 C11
ISMAILIYA 6 C2
ISRAEL 8a C8
ISSACHAR 7 C4
ITALY 1 D2 ; 12 C1
ITURAEA 9b E4
- JABROK, R. 3 E7 ; 4 K14 ;
7 D5
JABESH-GILEAD (Deir-Halaweh) 3 D6 ; 7 D4 ;
8b E6
JABNEEL (1) (Yemma) 4 J6 ;
7 C4
JABNEEL (2) (Jamnia, Yebna)
3 B8 ; 5 E4 ; 7 B6
JACOB'S WELL 4 G13
JALUD, N. 4 J9 ; 7 C4
JAMNIA (Jabneel, Yebna)
3 B8 ; 5 E4 ; 9a C8
JANOAH (Kh. Yanun) 4 G14 JANOAH ? (Yanuh) 3 C3 ;
8b D4
JAPHIA (Yafa) 3 C5 ; 4 G6
JAPHO (Joppa, Yafa) 5 F1 JARMUTH (Kh. Yarmuk) 5 H6 ;
7 B6
JATTIR (Kh. 'Attar) 5 H11
JA'UDI 2 C1
JAVAN 1 inset F2
JAZIR (Gazer ? Kh. Jazzir)
3 D7 ; 7 D6
JAZER, Land of 3 D8
JERUS 7 C6
JERUSITE 1 inset F4
JEHUD 8c D8
JERON 4 H10
JEMDET NASR 2 H4
JIRAHMEEL 7 B8 JERICHO
(1) OT site (T. es-Sultan)
3 D8 ; 5 O4 ; 7 C6 ; 8bc D8
(2) NT site 5 O4 ;
9abc D8
JERUSALEM (el Quds) 1 F3 ; 2 B4 ; inset A, C3 ;
inset C, C3 ; 3 C8 ; 5 L5 ; 7 C6 ; 8abc D8 ; 9abc D8 ; 12 N8
JERUSALEM 10 I1
Abalom, Tomb of 10 F4
Achaz's Tunnel 11c D6
Acra 11c C4
'Ain Sitti Maryam (Virgin's Spring 10 D5
Aksha, Mosque el- 10 D4
Antonia, Tower of 11d D3 Aqueduct, Lower 10 B5-6
Aqueduct, Upper 10 A3-4

INDEX OF NAMES IN MAPS

- (JERUSALEM) Ayyub, Bir (Job's Well) 10 D6 Baris 11c D3
 Bethesda, Pool of 11d D2
 Bezetha 11cd C2
 Caiaphas? House of 10 B5, C5
 Calvary 11d B3
 Cenacle, Coenaculum 11d B5
 Citadel, The 10 B4 Conduit, of Upper Pool 11a D5
 Corner (Old) Gate 11bc B4
 Damascus Gate 10 C2
 David's City 11a D5
 David's Tomb 10 B5
 David's Tower 10 B4
 Dome of the Chain 10 D3 Dome of the Rock 10 D3
 Double Gate 10 D4
 Dung Gate 10 D4; 11c D6
 En-Rogel 11abcd D6
 Ephraim Gate 11b C4; 11c C3
 Evil Counsel, Hill of 10 B7 Ezechias' Tunnel 11c D5
 Fish Gate 11c C3
 Fountain Gate 11c D6
 Gehenna 11d C6
 Gethsemane, 11d E3
 Gethsemane Church 10 E3
 Gihon 11abcd D5
 Grotto of the Agony 10 E3
 Haceldama? 11d CD6
 Hammam el-Batrak 10 B4
 Hamra, Birket el- 10 D6
 Hananeel?, Tower of 11c D3
 Hasmoneans, Palace of 11d C4 Herod's Gate 10 C2
 Herod, Palace of 11d B4
 Hinnom 11abc C6;
 Hippicus 11d B4
 Holy Sepulchre, Church of the 10 C3
 Israin, Birket 10 D3
 Jaffa Gate 10 B4
 Job's Well (Bir Ayyub) 10 D6
 Kas, el- 10 D4
 Kidron 10 D4; 11ab D5-6
 Kidron Valley
 11 abcd DE3-6
 Kings, Tomb of the 10 B1
 Lower City (Acra?) 11cd D5 Lower Pool, Royal Pool 11c D6 Made Pool? 11c D5
 Mamilla, Birket 10 A3-4
 Mariamne 11d B4
 Maryam, Birket Sitti 10 D2
 Millo 11a D4
 Mishneh 11c C3
 Montefiore 10 A5
 New Gate 10 B3
 Nikephurieh 11a A5
 Offence, Mount of 10 E6
 Ophel 11ab D4
 Ophias 11c D4
 Phasaelus 11d B4
 Probatic Pool 10 D3
 Rababeh, Wadi er- 10 B6
 St Peter, Church of 10 C5
 St Stephen's Gate 10 D3
 Shelah, Pool of 11c D6
 Siloam 11d D5
 Siloam, Pool of 11d D5-6
 Siloe Canal 11b D5
 Silwan 10 D5-6
 Silwan, Birket 10 D5
 Sinner 11a D5
 Sitti Maryam, Wadi 10 D5-6
 Solomon's Palace 11a D4
 Solomon's Stables 10 D4
- (JERUSALEM) Sultan, Birket es- 10 B5 Temple, see TEMPLE
 Tophet 11c D6
 Tower of the Oven? 11c B5
 Tyropoeon Valley 11c D5
 Upper City 11cd C5
 Upper Pool 11ab D5
 Valley Gate 11bc B6
 Via Dolorosa 10 C3
 Virgin's Spring 'Ain Sittl Maryam' 10 D5 Wailing Wall 10 D4
 Water Gate 11c D4
 Zion Gate 10 C5
 JESHANAH (Burj el-Isaneh) 5 L2 JESHIMON (Wilderness of Judah) 5 M-N7-8-9 JEZREEL (Zer'in) 3 C6; 4 G8; 5 C4; 8b D6
 JEZREEL, Valley of 4 H8
 JIPHTAHIL?, Valley of 4 F5-6
 JOGBEHAH (Abeihat) 3 E7
 JOKNEAM (T. Qeimun) 4 E7; 7 C4 JOKTAN 1 inset G5
 JOPPA (Joppe, Japho, Yafa) 3 B8; 5 E1; 7 B5; 8abc C8; 9ac C7
 JORDAN, R. 3 D6-7-8; 4 K7-15
 JOTAPATA (Jotbah, Kh. Jefat) 3 C5; 4 G4
 JOTBAH (Jotapata, Kh. Jefat) 4 G4 JOTBATHAH (et-Taba) 3 inset C15; 6 F3 JUDAEA 9bc C-D9; 12 N8 JUDAH, 7 B-C7
 JUDAH, Wilderness of (Jeshimon) 3 C9; 5 M-N7-8-9 JUTTA (Yatta) 5 J10
- KABZEEL? 3 C11; inset C11
 KADESH 2 C2; 8a G1
 KADESHBARNEA ('Ain Qedeis) 2 B5; 6 E2; 7 A9; 8a B12
 KANAH (Qanah) 3 C3-4
 KARKARAH, W. 4 E1
 KARNAIM (Carnaim, Sheikh Sa'ad) 3 E5; 9a F5 KARTAN (Kh. el-Qureiyeh) 3 C4 KATERINE, J. 6 E5
 KEDAR 2 C5
 KEDEMOTH? (ez-Za'feran) 3 E9
 KEDESH (Cedes, T. Qades) 3 D4; 4 K1; 7 C-D3; 8b D4 KEILA (Kh. Qila) 5 H7
 KENATH (Canatha, Nobah, Qanawat) 3 G5
 KENITES 7 C7
 KERIOTH (Kh. el-Qaryatein) 3 C10
 KHABARAH, W. 5 M10
 KHALAB (Aleppo) 2 D1
 KHATTUSHASH 1 E2; 2 inset B, B1
 KHETEM (Etham) 6 C2 KHORSABAD 2 G1
 KHUDEIRA, W. el- 4 C10
 KIDRON, Torrent 5 M6
 KIR-HARESETH (Kerak) 3 D10; 6 G1; 7 D8; 8ab E10 KIRJATHAIM (Qereiyat) 2 C5; 3 D9; 7 D7
 KIRJATHARBA (Hebron, el-Khalil) 3 C9 KIRJATH-JEARIM (T. el-Azhar) 5 K5; 7 C6; 8c C8
- KIRJATHSEPPHER (Debir, T. Beit Mirsim) 3 B9; 5 G10 KIRKUK 2 H2
 KISH 2 H4
 KISHON, R. (N. el-Muqatta') 3 C5; 4 E7; 7 B3
 KITTIM (Elishah, Cyprus) 1 inset E3; 2 A2 KURSI 9b E5
- LACEDAEMON (Sparta) 12 F4
 LACHISH (Lachis, T. ed-Duweir) 3 B9; 5 F8; 7 B7; 8abc C9 LACUS ASPHAR (Bir ez-Za'faran) 5 L8; 9a D9; 9b D9 LAGASH (Tellah) 2 J5
 LAHMAN (Kh. el-Lahm) 5 G8
 LAISH (Leshem, Dan, T. el-Qadi) 3 D3 LAODICEA 12 J4
 LARSA 2 H5
 LASAEA 12 G6
 LEBANON, Mt. 1 B3; 3 D2; 7 D1; 8ac E3
 LEBONAH (Lubban) 4 F15; 5 L1
 LEHABIM 1 inset D3
 LEONTOPOLIS (T. el-Yehudi-ye) 6 B2
 LESHAM (Laish, Dan, T. el-Qadi) 3 D3
 LIBBA (Kh. Libb) 3 E9
 LIBNAH (T. es-Safiyeh) 3 B9; 5 F6; 7 B6; 8b C8
 LIBYA 1 D3; 2 insets AB, A3
 LITANI, R. (Litas) 2 B3; 3 D2; 7 C2; 9a E3 LOD (Lydda, Ludd) 3 B8; 5 G3; 8c C8 LODEBAR (Umm ed-Dubar) 3 D6 LUD? 1 inset F3
 LUDIM? 1 inset D4
 LUHITH (el-Mekhayet) 3 D9
 LUZ (Bethel, Beilin) 3 C8; 5 L3
 LYCAONIA 12 L4
 LYCIA 12 K4
 LYDDA (Lod, Ludd) 3 B8; 5 G3; 9a C8; 12 N8
 LYDIA 2 inset A, B1; 2 inset C, B2 LYSTRA 12 L4
- MAACHAH 8a E5
 MACEDONIA 1 D2; 2 inset C, A1; 12 F1
 MACHAERUS (Mukawer) 3 D9; 9b E9
 MACHIR 7 D4
 MADAI 1 inset G3
 MADMANNAH (Kh. Umm Deimneh) 5 G11
 MADON (Kh. Madin) 3 D5; 4 J5; 7 C3
 MAGDALA (Tarichaea, Mejdal) 3 D5; 4 J5; 9b D5 MAGETH 9a F5
 MAGNESIA 12 J4
 MAGOG 1 inset F2
 MAHANAIM (Kh. Mahneh) 3 E6; 7 D4; 8ab E6
 MAKED (T. Migdad) 3 F4
 MALEH, W. el- 4 J11
 MALIH, W. el- 4 D11
 MALLUS 2 B1; 12 A5
 MAMRE (Ramet el-Khalil) 3 C9
 MANASSEH 7 D4, B5
 MAON (T. Ma'in) 5 K10
 MAON, Wilderness of 5 K10
 MARAH? (1) ('Ayun Musa) 6 C3
- MARAH? (2) ('Ain Hawarah) 6 C4
 MARESA (Mareshah, T. Sandahanna) 3 B9; 5 G8; 8b C9; 9a C9
 MARI (T. Hariri) 2 E3
 MARKHA, EL- 6 D4
 MASADA (es-Sebbeh) 3 C10
 MASH 1 inset F3
 MASPHA 9a D8
 MATTANAH (Kh. el-Medeivneh) 3 E9 MEARAH? (Mogheiriyeh) 3 D2
 MEDABA (Medeba, Ma'aba) 3 E9; 7 D6; 8a E9; 8bc E8; 9a E8
 MEDIA 1 G3; 2 J3;
 2 inset A, E2; inset C, E3
 MEFSHUH, N. 4 E2
 MEGIDDO (T. el-Mutesellim) 2 B4; inset B, C2; 3 C6; 4 E8; 7 C4; 8abc D6
 MELEK, W. el- 4 E5
 MELITA 12 A5
 MEMPHIS (Noph, Mit Rahneh) 1 E4;
 2 insets ABC, B3; 6 A3
 MENZALEH, L. 6 B1
 MEPHAATH (Kh. Nef'a'a) 3 E8
 MEROE 2 inset B, B5
 MEROM (Meiron) 3 D4; 4 H2
 MEROM, Waters of 4 J3
 MESHECH 1 inset F2
 MESSINA 12 B3
 MIBZAR (Bozrah, Buseirah) 3 inset D12 MICHMASH (Mukhmas) 3 C8; 5 M4; 7 C6 MIDIAN 3 inset C16; 6 F4
 MIGDOL (1) (T. el-Heir) 6 C2
 MIGDOL (2) (Abu Hasa) 6 C3
 MILETUS 12 H4
 MINOANS 2 inset B, A2
 MISREPHOTH-MAIM (Kh. el-Musheirefeh) 4 D1
 MITANNI 2 D1; inset B, D2
 MITYLENE 12 H3
 MIZPAH (T. en-Nasbeh) 3 C8
 5 L4; 8bc D8
 MIZPEH? (Kh. Gel'ad) 3 D7; 7 D5
 MIZRAIM 1 inset E4
 MOAB 2 C5; 3 D10; inset D10; 6 G1
 8abc E10
 MOABITES 7 D8
 MOABITES 9a E10
 MODEIN (Modin, Mediyeh) 5 H3; 9a C8
 MOERIS, L. 6 A4
 MOLADAH (T. el-Milh) 3 B10
 MOREH, Hill of 4 G7
 MORESHETH-GATH (T. el-Judeideh) 5 G7 MOSUL 2 G1
 MUSA, J. 6 E5
 MYRA 12 K5
 MYRIA 12 H2
- NAARATH ('Ain Duq) 5 N3 NABATAEA(S) 9a E9; 9b D10; 9c B10, F7
 NAHALIEL, R. 3 D9
 NAIN (Neim) 3 C6; 4 G7;
 9b D6
 NA'MEIN, N. 4 D4
 NAPHATH DOR 4 C7
 NAPHTALI 7 C3
 NAPHTHUM 1 inset E4
 NAR, W. el- 5 N6
 NAUCRATIS (Kum Ga'if) 6 A1

INDEX OF NAMES IN MAPS

NAZARETH (en-Nasirah) 3 C5 ; 4 G6 ; 9b D6
 NEAPOLIS (1) (Nablus) 4 F13
 NEAPOLIS (2) (in Macedonia) 12 G1
 NEAPOLIS (3) (Naples) 12 B1
 NEBALLAT (Beit Nabala) 5 H2
 NEBO (Nuba) 5 J7
 NEBO, Mt. (Neba) 3 D8 ; 7 D6
 NEIEL (Kh. Ya'nin) 4 F4
 NEPTOAH (Lifta) 5 L5
 NETOPHAH (Kh. Bedd Faluh) 5 L7 ; 8c D9
 NEZIB (Kh. Beit Nesib) 5 H8
 NICOMEDIA 12 K1
 NICOPOLIS 12 E3
 NILE, R. 1 E5 ; 2 inset B, B4
 NIMRIN, W. 5 P3
 NIMRUD (Calah) 2 G1
 NINEVEH 1 F3 ; 2 G1 ; 2 insets AB, D2
 NIPPUR 2 H4
 NOB (Ras el-Musharif) 5 L5
 NOBATH (Canatha, Kenath, Qanawat) 3 G5 ; 7 F3 ; 8a H6 NOPH (Memphis, Mit Rahneh) 6 A3 NUSRA, W. 5 G2
 NUZI 2 G2

 OBOOTH (el-Weiba) 3 inset C12 ; 6 F2
 ODOLLAM 9a C9
 ON (Heliopolis, T. Hūsn) 6 B3
 ONO (Kefr 'Ana) 5 G2
 OPHIR ? 1 inset F6
 OPHNIR (Gophna, Jifnah) 5 L3 OPHRA (et-Taiyibeh) 4 J7 ; 7 C4
 ORONTES, R. 2 C2 ; 12 N6
 OXYRHYNCHUS (el-Behneseh) 6 A5

 PALMYRA (Tadmor) 2 D2
 PAMPHYLIA 12 L4
 PANIAS 9bc E4
 PAPHLAGONIA 12 M1
 PAPHOS 12 L6
 PARAN 2 B5
 PARAN, Wilderness of 6 F3
 PARTHIA 2 inset C, F3
 PATARA 12 K5
 PATHRUSIM 1 inset E4
 PATMOS 12 H4
 PELLA (1) (Kh. Fahil) 3 D6 ; 4 L10 ; 9ac E6
 PELLA (2) 2 inset C, B1
 PELUSIUM (T. Farama) 6 C1
 PENTAPOLIS ? 3 D8, C11 ; inset C11
 PENUEL (Tulul ed-Dhahab) 3 D7 ; 8b E7 PERAEA 9bc E7
 PERGA 12 K4
 PERGAMUS 12 H3
 PERSEPOLIS 2 inset C, F4
 PERSIA 1 H4 ; 2 inset C, E4
 PERSIAN GULF 1 G4 ; 2 insets AB, E3 ; inset C, E4
 PETHOR ? 2 D1
 PETRA (Sela, Umm el-Bayyarah) 3 inset D13 ; 6 G2 PHARATHON 9a D7
 PHARPAR, R. 3 F2
 PHASAELIS (Kh. Fasa'il) 5 O2
 PHILADELPHIA (1) (Rabbath-Ammon, Amman) 3 E8 ; 9c F8

PHILADELPHIA (2) (in Asia) 12 J3
 PHILIPPI 12 G1
 PHILISTIA 3 A9
 PHILISTINES 7 A7
 PHILOTERRIA (Kh. Kerak) 4 K6 ; 9a E6
 PHOENICIA(NS) 7 C2 ; 8a E3 ; 8b D4 ; 9bc D4 ; 12 N6 PHOENIX 12 G5
 PHRYGIA 12 K3
 PHUT 1 inset G6
 PI-HAHIROTH ? 6 C3
 PIRATHON (Far'ata) 4 E13
 PISGAH, Mt. 3 D8
 PISIDIA 12 L4
 PITHOM (T. er-Rejabe) 6 B2
 PONTUS 12 N1
 PORT SAID 6 C1
 PROPONTIS 12 J2
 PTOLEMAIS (Accho, 'Akka) 3 B4 ; 4 D3 ; 9ac C5 ; 12 N7
 PUNON (Kh. Feinan) 3 inset C12 ; 6 F2 ; 8a D11 PUNT 1 G6 ; 2 inset B, D6 PUTEOLI 12 B2

 QANA, W. 4 C14
 QANEH, W. 7 B5
 QARN, W. el- 4 E1 ; 7 C3
 QARNAIM 8c E5
 QATNA 2 C2
 QELT, W. el- 5 O4
 QUDS, EL- (Jerusalem) 5 L5

 RAAMAH 1 inset G5
 RABADIYEH, W. el 4 J4
 RABBATH-AMMON (Philadelphina, Amman) 3 E8 ; 7 D6 ; 8abc E8
 RABBATH MOAB (Ar Moab, Kh. er-Rabba) 3 D10 ; 8a E10
 RAGES ? (Ecbatana) 2 K2
 RAKKATH (T. Eqlatiyeh) 4 K5
 RAMAH (1) (er-Ram) 5 L4 ; 7 C6 ; 8b D8 ; 9b D8 RAMAH (2) (er-Rameh) 3 C4 ; 4 G3 RAMATHAIM ZOPHIM (Arimathaea, Rentis) 5 H2 RAMESSES ? (1) (Qantir) 6 B2 RAMESSES (2) (Tanis, Zoan, Avaris, San el-Hagar) 6 B1
 RAMOTH-GILEAD (Datheman, el-Hosn) 3 E6 ; 7 D4 ; 8abc F6 RAPHANA (Raphon, er-Rafeh) 3 F5
 RAPHIA (Rafah) 6 E1
 RAPHON (Raphana, er-Rafeh) 3 F5
 RAS SHAMRA (Ugarit) 2 C2
 RED SEA 1 F5 ; 2 inset B, C4 ; 3 inset B16 REHOB (T. es-Şarem) 3 D6 ; 4 J10 REHOBOTH (Ruheibeh) 3 A11
 REPHAIM, Valley of 5 L5
 REPHIDIM (er-Refa'id) 6 E5
 RETHMA (W. Abu Retemat) 6 E2 REUBEN 7 D7
 REZEPH 2 D2
 RHIGIUM 12 B3
 RHODES 12 J5
 RIBLAH 2 C3 ; 8a G1
 RIMMON (1) (Rammun) 5 M3
 RIMMON (2) (Rumman) 4 G5
 RIPATH ? 1 inset E2
 RISHT EL-HAUWAR 6 F3
 RODANIM 1 inset E3
 ROGELIM (Bersinayah) 3 D6
 ROME 12 A1
 ROSETTA 6 A1
 RUBIN, N. 5 E3
 RUEIB, W. el- 4 K13

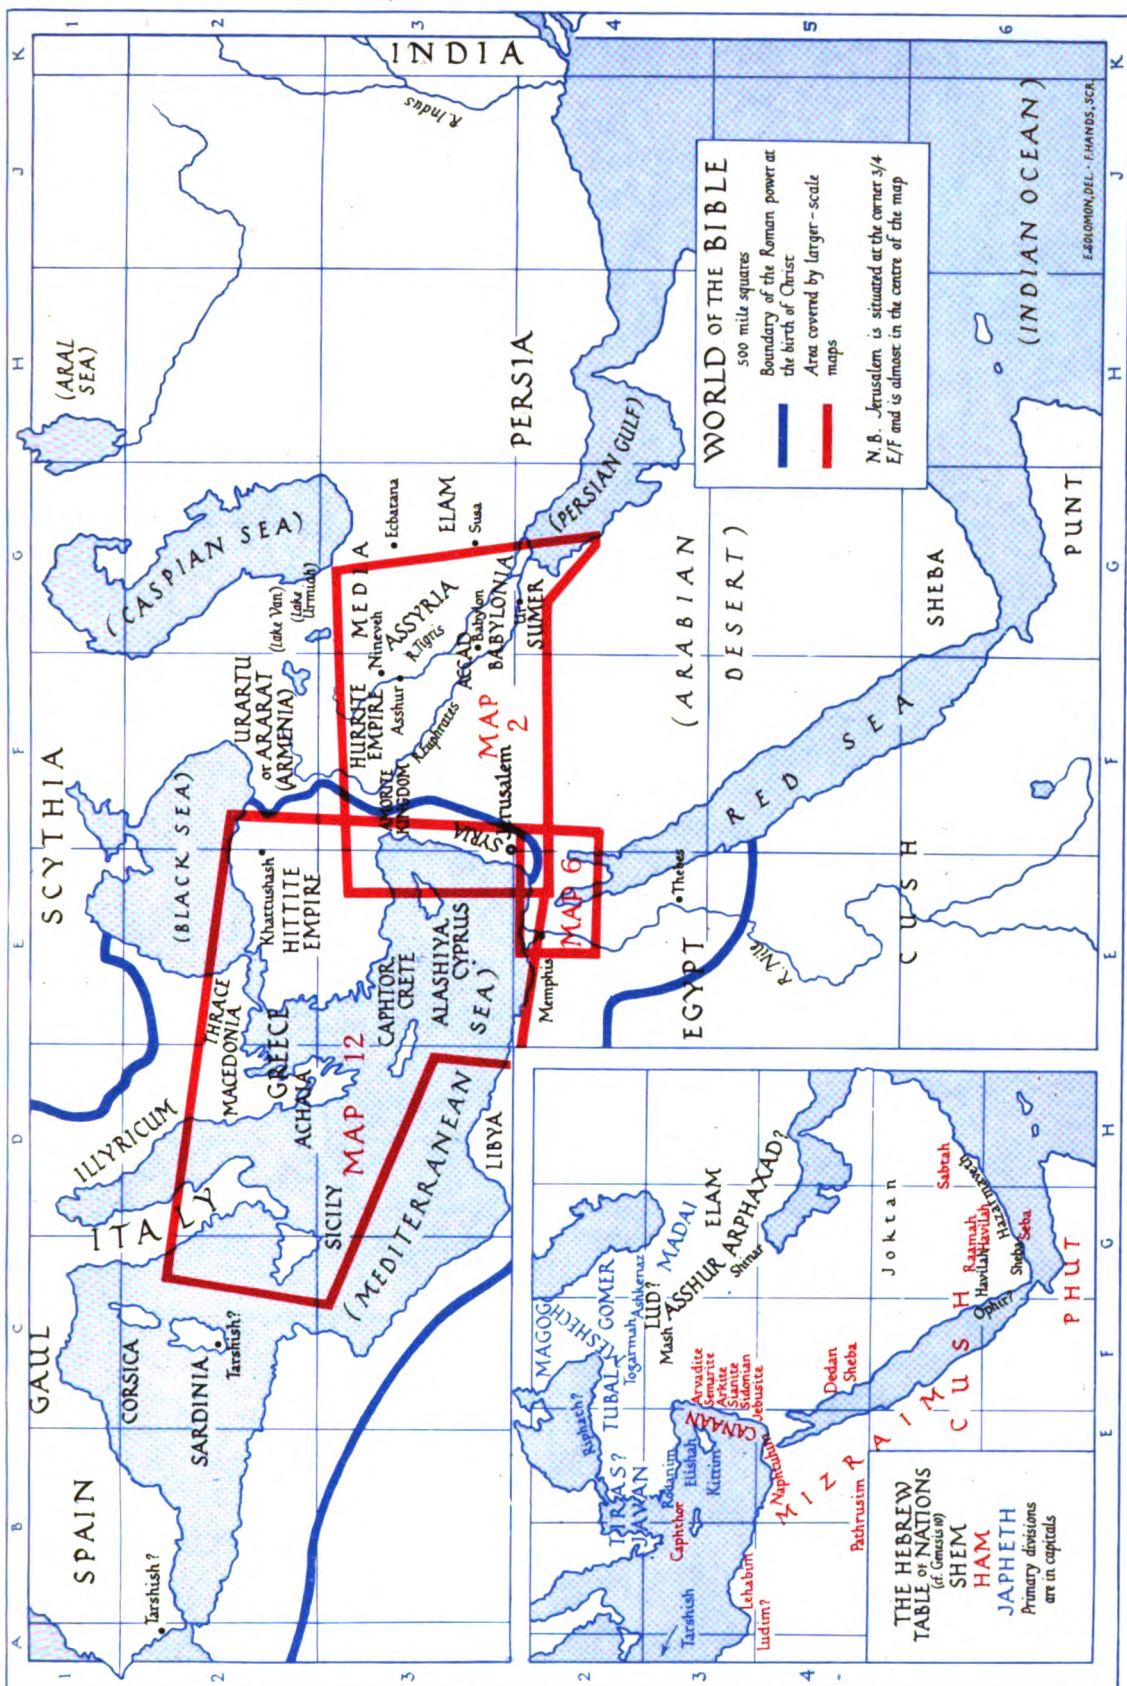

SABTAH 1 inset H5
 SAIS (San el-Hagar) 6 A1
 SALAMIS 12 M5
 SALKHAH (Salkhad) 3 G6 ; 7 F4 ; 8a H6
 SALHAB, W. 4 E10
 SALMONE, C. 12 H5
 SALT SEA (Lake Asphalitis) 2 B5 ; 3 C-D9-10 ; inset C-D10 ; 5 N-P6-11 ; 6 G1 ; 7 C7 ; 8abc D9
 SAMAL (Zenjirli) 2 C1
 SAMARCAND 2 inset C, H2
 SAMARIA (Sebaste, Şebaşti-yeh) 3 C7 ; 4 F12 ; 8bc E7 ; 9abc D7 ; 12 N7 SAMERINA 8c D6-7
 SAMOS 12 H4
 SAMOTHRACIA 12 H2
 SAPHIR (Kh. el-Kom) 5 H8
 SAQARAH 6 A3
 SARAR, W. es- 5 G5
 SARDINIA 1 C2
 SARDIS 12 J3
 SAREPTA (Sarafand) 3 C3
 SARID (T. Shadud) 4 F7
 SCYTHIA 1 E-F1 ; 2 inset C, D1
 SCYTHOPOLIS (Bethshan, Beisan) 3 D6 ; 4 J9 ; 9ac D6 SEBA 1 inset G6
 SEBASTE (Samaria, Şebaşti-yeh) 3 C7 ; 4 F12 SEIR (Edom) 3 inset D13 ; 6 G2 ; 7 C9 SEIR, Mountains of 2 C5 ; 5 J5
 SELA (Petra, Umm el-Bayyarah) 3 inset D13 ; 6 G2 SELE (Zilu, T. Abu Seifah) 6 C2 SELEUCIA (Seluqiyyeh) 3 D4 ; 9a E5
 SELEUCIA, port of Antioch 2 C1 ; 12 N5
 SEMARITE 1 inset F3
 SEMECHONITIS, L. (Hule) 3 D4 ; 4 K1
 SENNABRIS (Sinnen-Nabreh) 4 K6 SENOAH 8c D8
 SEPHATH (Safed) 4 J3
 SEPPHORIS (Saffuriyyeh) 3 C5 ; 4 G6
 SERAPEUM 6 C2
 SERBAL, J. 6 D5
 SHAALABBIN (Selbir) 5 H4 ; 5 B6
 SHA'IR, W. el- 4 E12
 SHALUF 6 C3
 SHARON, Plain of 3 B6-7 ; 4 BC9-14
 SHARRAR, W. el- 4 H7
 SHARUHEN (T. el-Far'ah) 3 A10 ; 6 E1
 SHAVEH 2 C5
 SHFBA 1 G6 ; inset F4, G6
 SHECHEM (Sychem, el-Balatah) 2 B4 ; 3 C7 ; 7 C5 ; 8ab D7 SHEPHELAH 3 B9
 SHERIAH, esh-, W. 5 C11
 SHILOH (Seilun) 3 C7 ; 5 M1 ; 7 C5 ; 8b D7
 SHIMMON (Shimron, Semuni-yeh) 3 C5 ; 4 F6 SHIMRON (Shimeon, Semuni-yeh) 3 C5 ; 4 F6 ; 7 C4 SHINAR 1 inset G3 ; 2 (Babylonia-Shinar) H4 SHION ('Ayunesh-Sha'in) 4 G6
 SHUNEM (Solem) 3 C6 ; 4 G8 ; 8b D6 SHUR, Wilderness of 6 D2-3

SHURUPPAK (Fara) 2 H5 SIANITE 1 inset F3
 SICHEM (see also Sychem) 9a D7
 SICILY 1 C2 ; 12 A4
 SIDE 12 L4
 SIDON (Saida) 2 B3 ; 3 C2 ; 7 C1 ; 8abc D3 ; 9abc D3 ; 12 N6
 SIDONIAN 1 inset F3
 SIKKF, W. es- 5 J5
 SIKLAB, W. 4 K9
 SIMFON 7 B7
 SIMIRRA 2 C2
 SIN, Wilderness of (Debbet er-Ramleh) 6 D4 SINAI, Mt. (Horeb) 6 E5 SIPPAR 2 G4
 SIR, W. 4 D13
 SIRBONIS, L. 6 D1
 SIRON (Senir, Hermon) 3 E3
 SMYRNA 12 J3
 SOCHO (Kh. Shuweikeh) 5 H10
 SOCOH (1) (Kh. Shuweikeh) 5 H6 ; 8b C8
 SOCOH (2) (Kh. Shuweikeh) 4 D11 SOGDIANA 2 inset C, G2
 SOREK, Valley of 5 H5
 SPAIN 1 B1
 SPARTA (Lacedaemon) 12 F4
 SUCCOTH (1) (T. Akhsas) 3 D7 ; 7 D5 ; 8a E7
 SUCCOTH (2) (Theku, T. el-Maskhutah) 6 B2 SUEZ 6 C3
 SUEZ, Gulf of 6 C-D4-5 SUEZ CANAL 6 C2
 SUKREIR, N. 5 D5
 SUMER 1 G4 ; 2 H5
 SUSA 1 G3 ; 2 K4 ; inset C, E3
 SUSIANA 2 inset C, E3
 SYCHAR 9b D7
 SYCHEM (Shechem, el-Balatah) 3 C7 ; 4 G13
 SYRACUSE 12 B4
 SYRIA 1 F3 ; 2 inset B, C2 12 N5

 TAANACH (T. Ta'annak) 3 C6 ; 4 F9 ; 7 C4 TAANATH-SHILOH (Kh. Ta'anah el-Foqa) 4 H13 ; 7 C5
 TABOR, Mt. (J. et-Tor) 3 C5 ; 4 H6 ; 7 C4 ; 9b D6
 TADMOR (Palmyra) 2 D2
 TAIPANIES (Daphnae, T. Defenneh) 6 B2
 TANIS (Zoan, Avaris, Rameses, San el-Hagar) 6 B1
 TAPPUAH (Tiphah, Sheikh Abu Zarad) 4 F14 ; 7 C5 ; 8b D7 TARENTUM 12 C2
 TARICHAEA (Magdala, Mejdel) 4 J5
 TARSHISH 1 B2 ? C2 ? inset C3
 TARSUS 2 B1 ; 12 N4
 TIBTUNIS 6 A4
 TEKOA (Tequ'a) 3 C9 ; 7 L7 ; 8bc D9
 TEKOA, Wilderness of 5 M7 TELL HALAF 2 E1
 TELL HARIRI (Mari) 2 E3
 TELLOH (Lagash) 2 J5
 TEMAN ? (Shaubak) 3 inset D13 ; 6 G2 ; 8a E12 TEMPLE 11abcd D3-4 Beautiful Gate 11d D3, 4 Bridge 11d D4
 Council Chamber 11d D4
 Court of Israel 11d D4

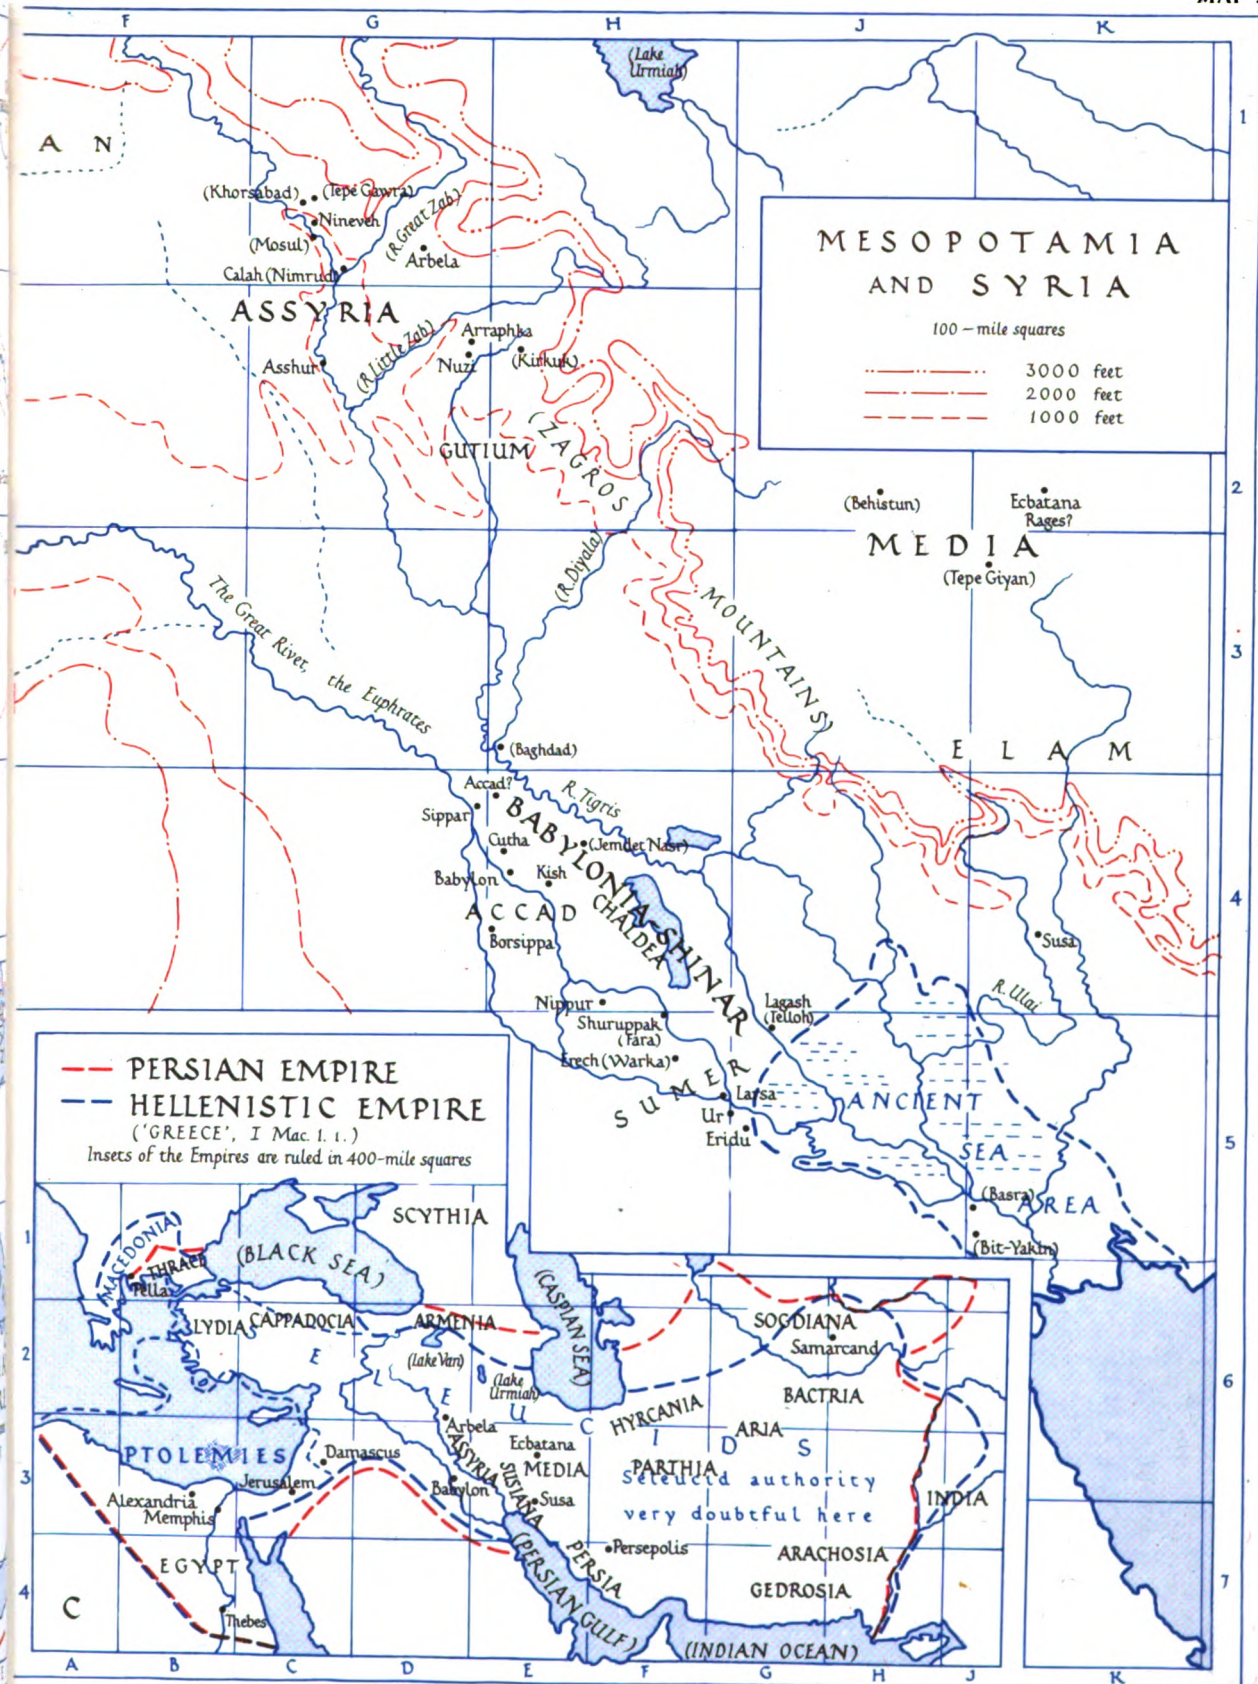

INDEX OF NAMES IN MAPS

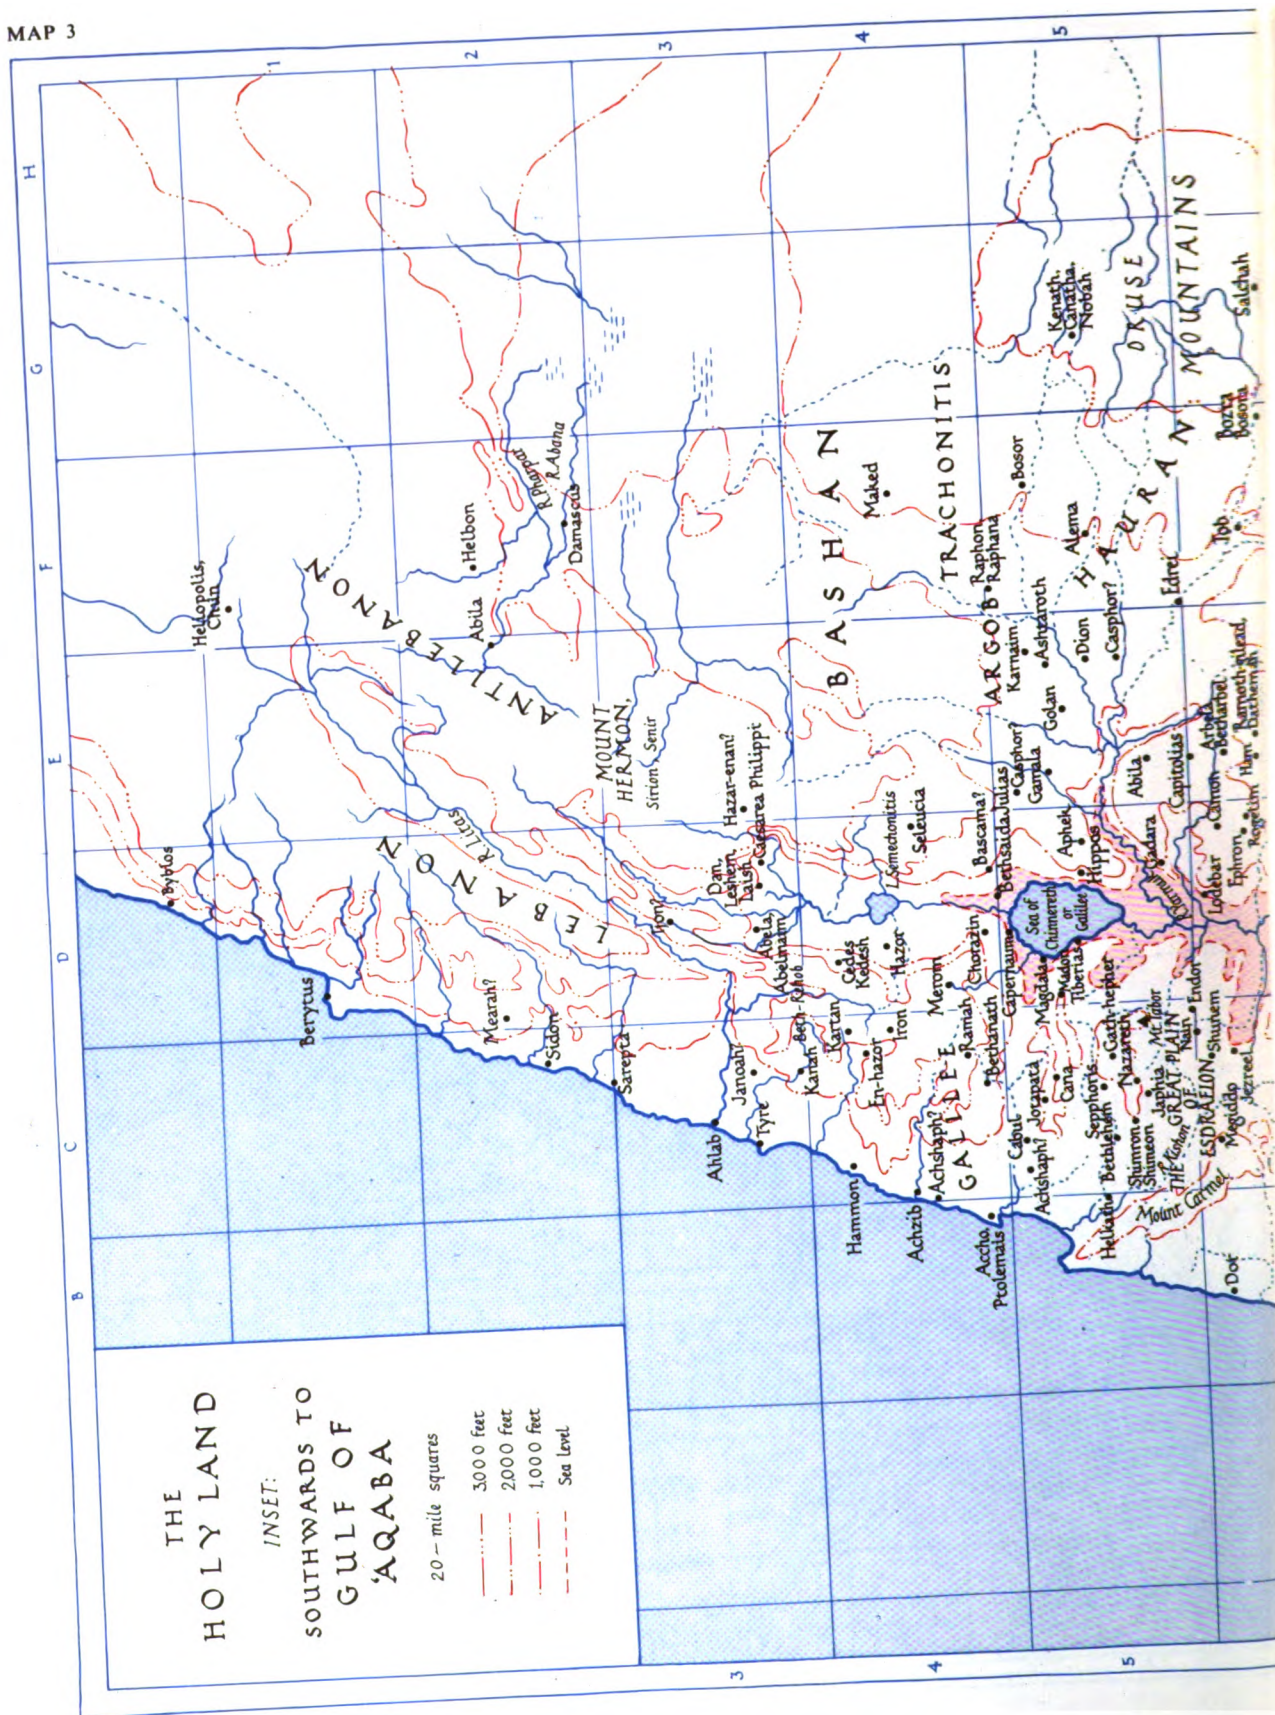

- (TEMPLE) Court of the Gentiles 11d D4
Court of the Women 11d D4
Golden Gate 10 D3
Holy Place 11a D3
North Porch 11d D3
Royal Porch 11d D4
Sheep Gate 11cd D3
Solomon's Porch 11d D4
Triple Gate 10 D4
West Porch 11d D3
Xystus 11d D4
TEPE GAWKA 2 G1
TEPE GIYAN 2 K3
TEPHO 9a D7
THAMNATHIA 9a D8
THEBES 1 E4 ;
2 insets ABC, B4 ;
7 C5
THIKU' (Succoth, T. el-Maskhutah) 6 B2 THESSALONICA 12 F2
THRACE (Thracia) 1 E2 ;
2 inset C, B1 ; 12 H1
THREE TAVERNS 12 A1 THYATIRA 12 J3
TIBERIAS (Tabariyeh) 3 D5 ;
4 K5 ; 9bc D5
TIFERIAS, Sea of, or Chinnereth or Galilee 4 K5 TIGRIS, R. 1 G3 ; 2 H4
TIL-BARSIP 2 D1
TIMNAH (1) (Tibnah) 5 G6 ;
7 B6
TIMNAH (2) (Tibneh) 3 B9 ;
5 J6
TIMNATH-SERAH (Kh. Tibnah) 5 K2 ; 7 C6
TIMSAH, L. 6 C2
TIPHSIA 2 D1
TIPHSAH (Tappuah) 8b D7
TIRAS ? 1 inset E2
TIROA 2 E2
TIRZAH ? (1) (Jemma'in) 4 F14 ; 8b D7
TIRZAH ? (2) (T. el-Far'ah) 4 G12 ; 7 C5 TISHREH (Lisdib) 3 E6 ;
8b E6
TOB (et-Taivibeh) 3 F6
TOGARMAH 1 inset F2
TRACHONITIS 3 F4 ; 9bc F5
TRALLES 12 J4
TRIPOLI (Ardata) 2 C3
TROAS 12 H2
TROGYLIUM 12 H4
TUBAL 1 inset F2
TUMILAT, W. 6 B2
TURRIS STRATONIS (Caesarea, Qeisariyeh) 3 B6 ; 4 B9 ; 9a C6
TYRE (es-Sur) 2 B3 ; 3 C3 ;
7 C2 ; 8abc D4 ; 9abc D4 ;
12 N7
TYRE, Ladder of 9a D5
UGARIT (Ras Shamra) 2 C2 ULAI, R. 2 K4
ULATHA 9b E4
UR 1 G4 ; 2 H5
URARTU (Ararat, Armenia) 1 F2 ; 2 inset A, D1 URMIAH, L. 1 G2 ; 2 H1 ; insets AB, D1 ;
inset C, E2
VAN, L. 1 F2 ;
2 insets AB, C1 ;
inset C, D2
WARKA (Erech) 2 H5
YABIS, W. 4 K11
YARMOUK, R. 3 D5 ; 4 K7 ;
7 D4
ZAB, Great R. 2 G1
ZAB, Little R. 2 G2
ZAGROS, Mts. 2 H2
ZANOAH (Kh. Zanuh) 5 H6 ;
8c C8
ZAPHON (T. Sa'idiyeh) 3 D7 ;
4 K12 ; 7 D5
ZARETAN 3 D7 ; 4 K14
ZARETH-SHAHAR (Callirhoe, Zarat) 3 D9 ZEBULUN (Zabulon), 7 C3—4
ZEDAD 8a H2
ZEPHATH ? (Hormah, T. esh-Sheri'ah) 5 D10
ZEPHATHAH, Valley of 5 F7
ZERED, Brook (H. Hesa) 3 D11 ; inset D11 ; 6 G1 ;
7 D8
ZEREDAH (Deir Ghassaneh) 5 J1
ZERQA, N. ez- 4 C8 ; 7 B4
ZIKLAG (Kh. Kuweilfeh) 5 G11
ZILU (Sele, T. Abu Seifah) 6 C2 ZIN, Wilderness of 6 F2
ZIOR (Sa'ir) 5 K8
ZIPH (1) (T. Zif) 5 K9 ;
8b D9
ZIPH (2) (ez-Zeifeh) 3 C11
ZIPH, Wilderness of 5 K—L 9—10
ZIZ, Ascent of 5 M8
ZOAN (Tanis, Avaris, Ramesses, San el-Hagar) 6 B1
ZOAR (T. Iqtanu) 3 D8 ZOBAB 2 C3 ; 8a, G—H
ZORAH (Sar'ah), 5 H5 ;
7 B6 ; 8b C8

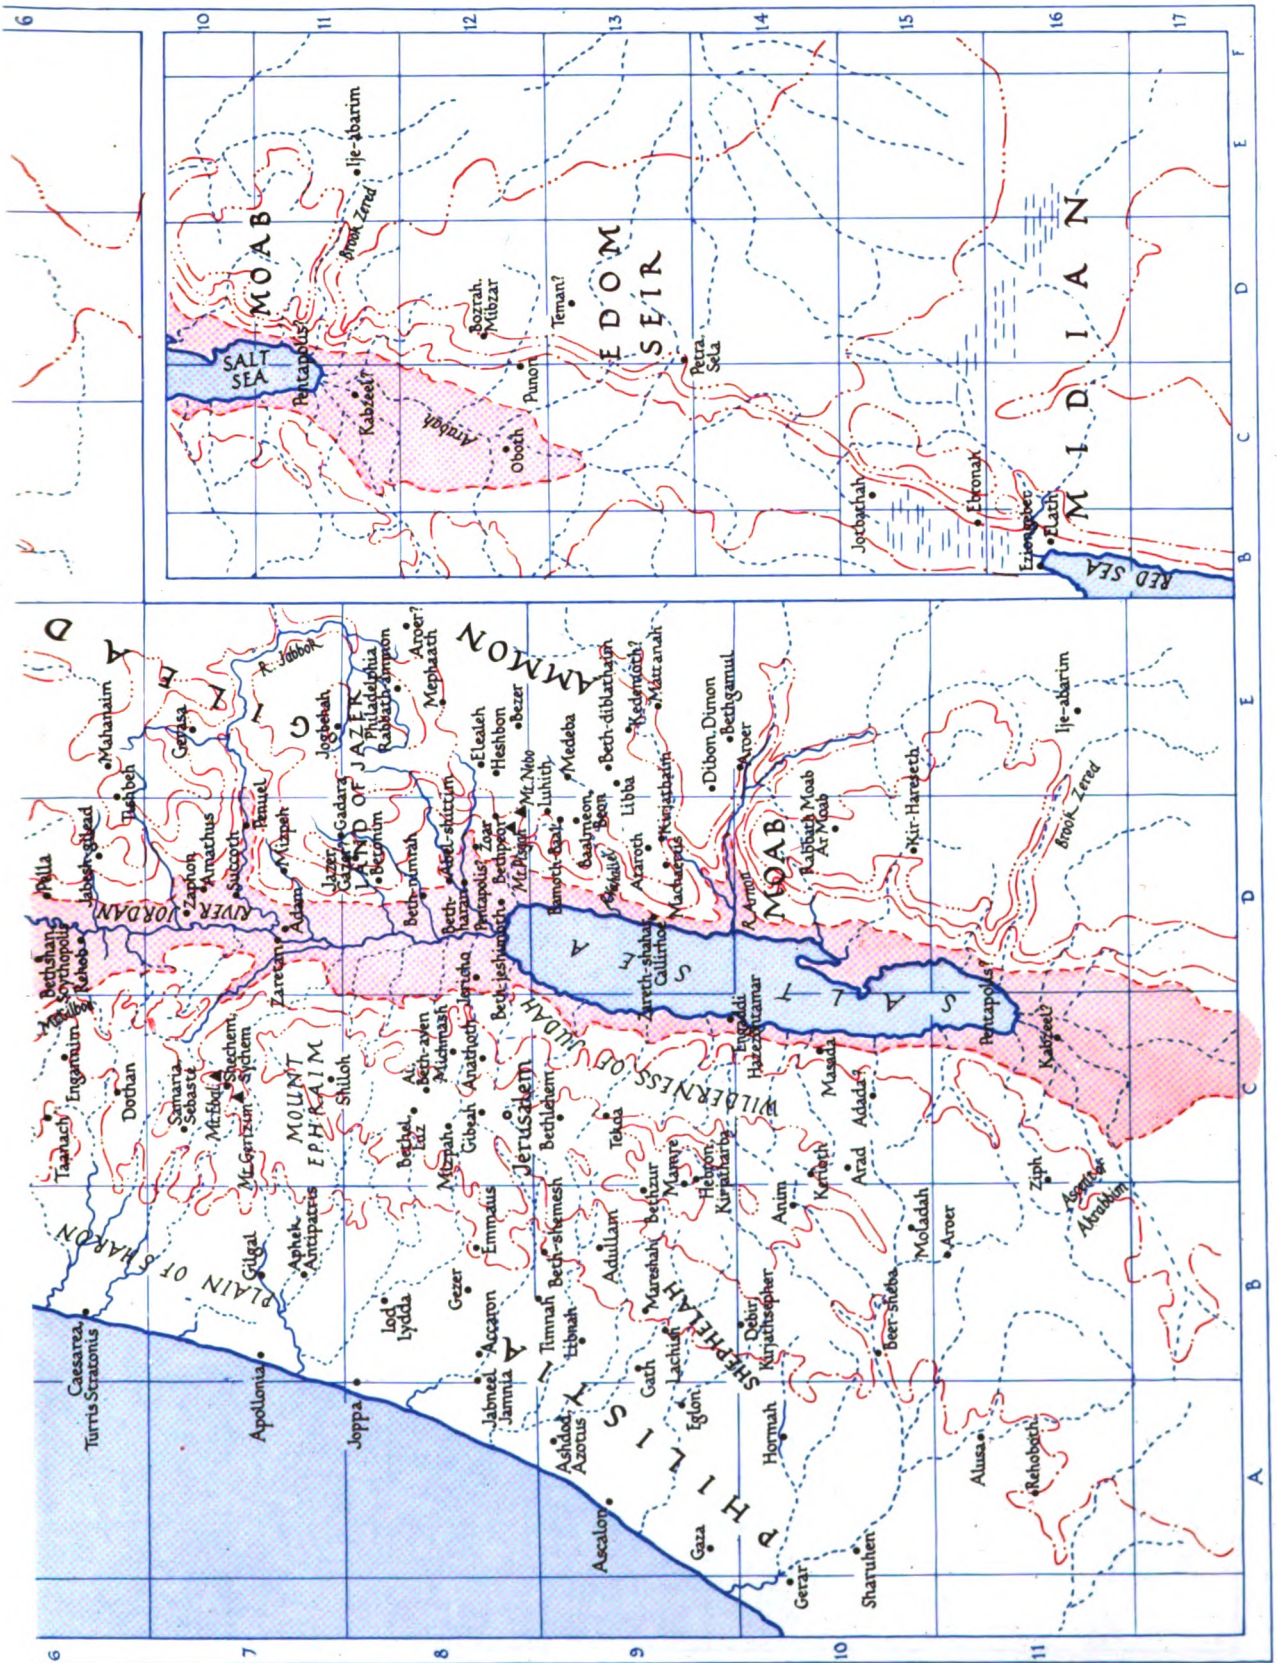

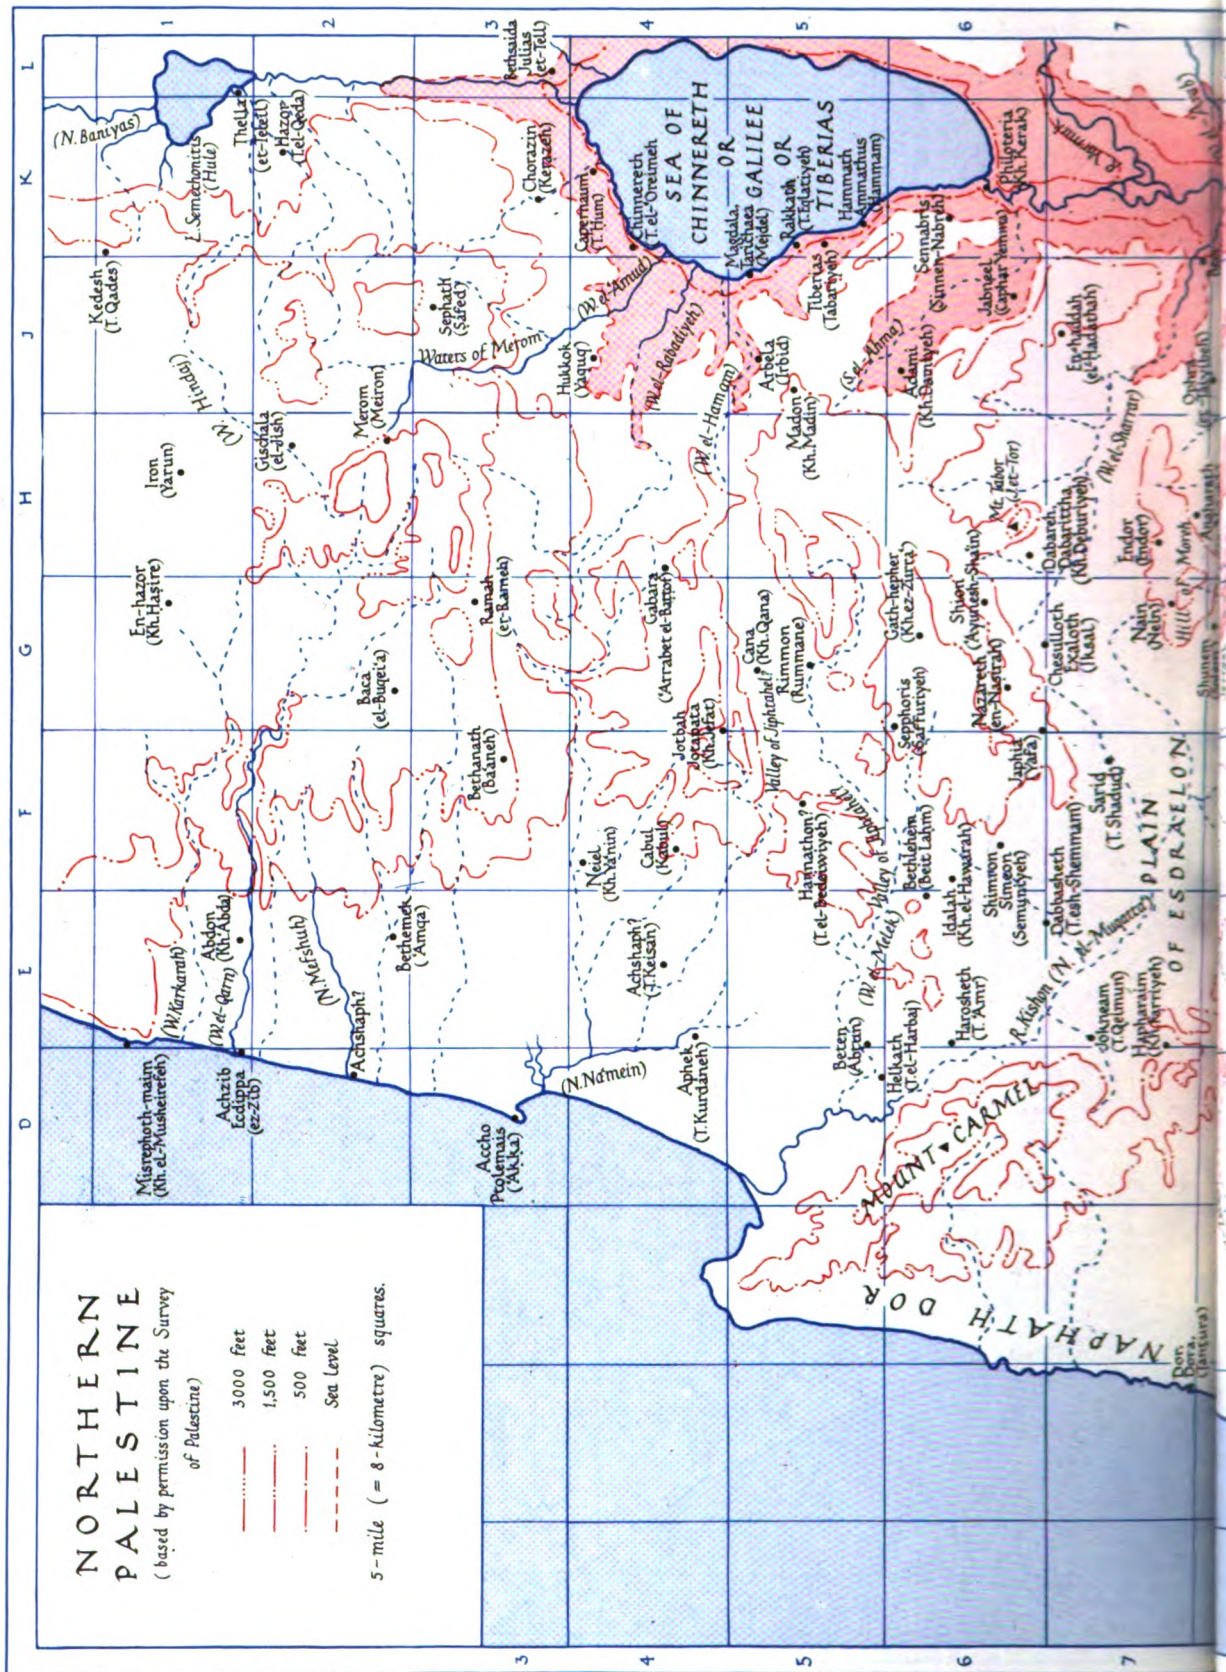

MAP 2

SOUTHERN PALESTINE

Same scale, etc. as on map of
NORTHERN PALESTINE
(based by permission upon the Survey of Palestine)

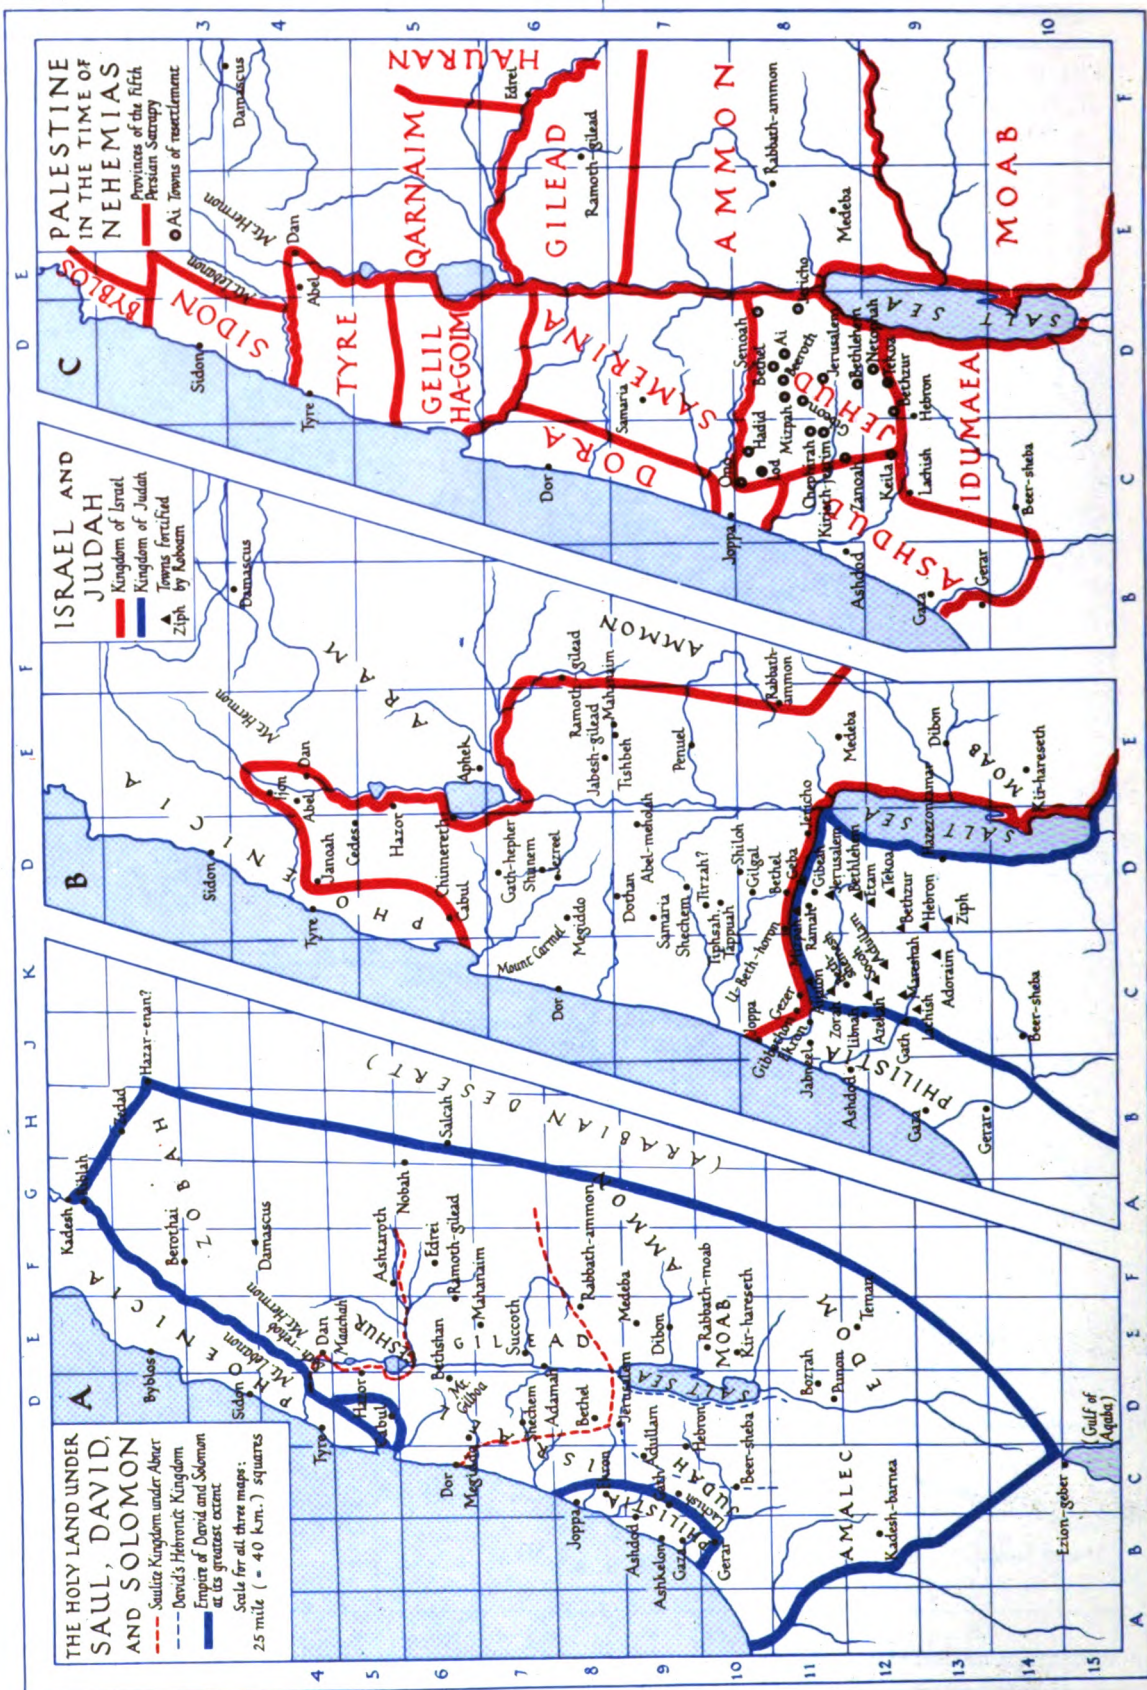

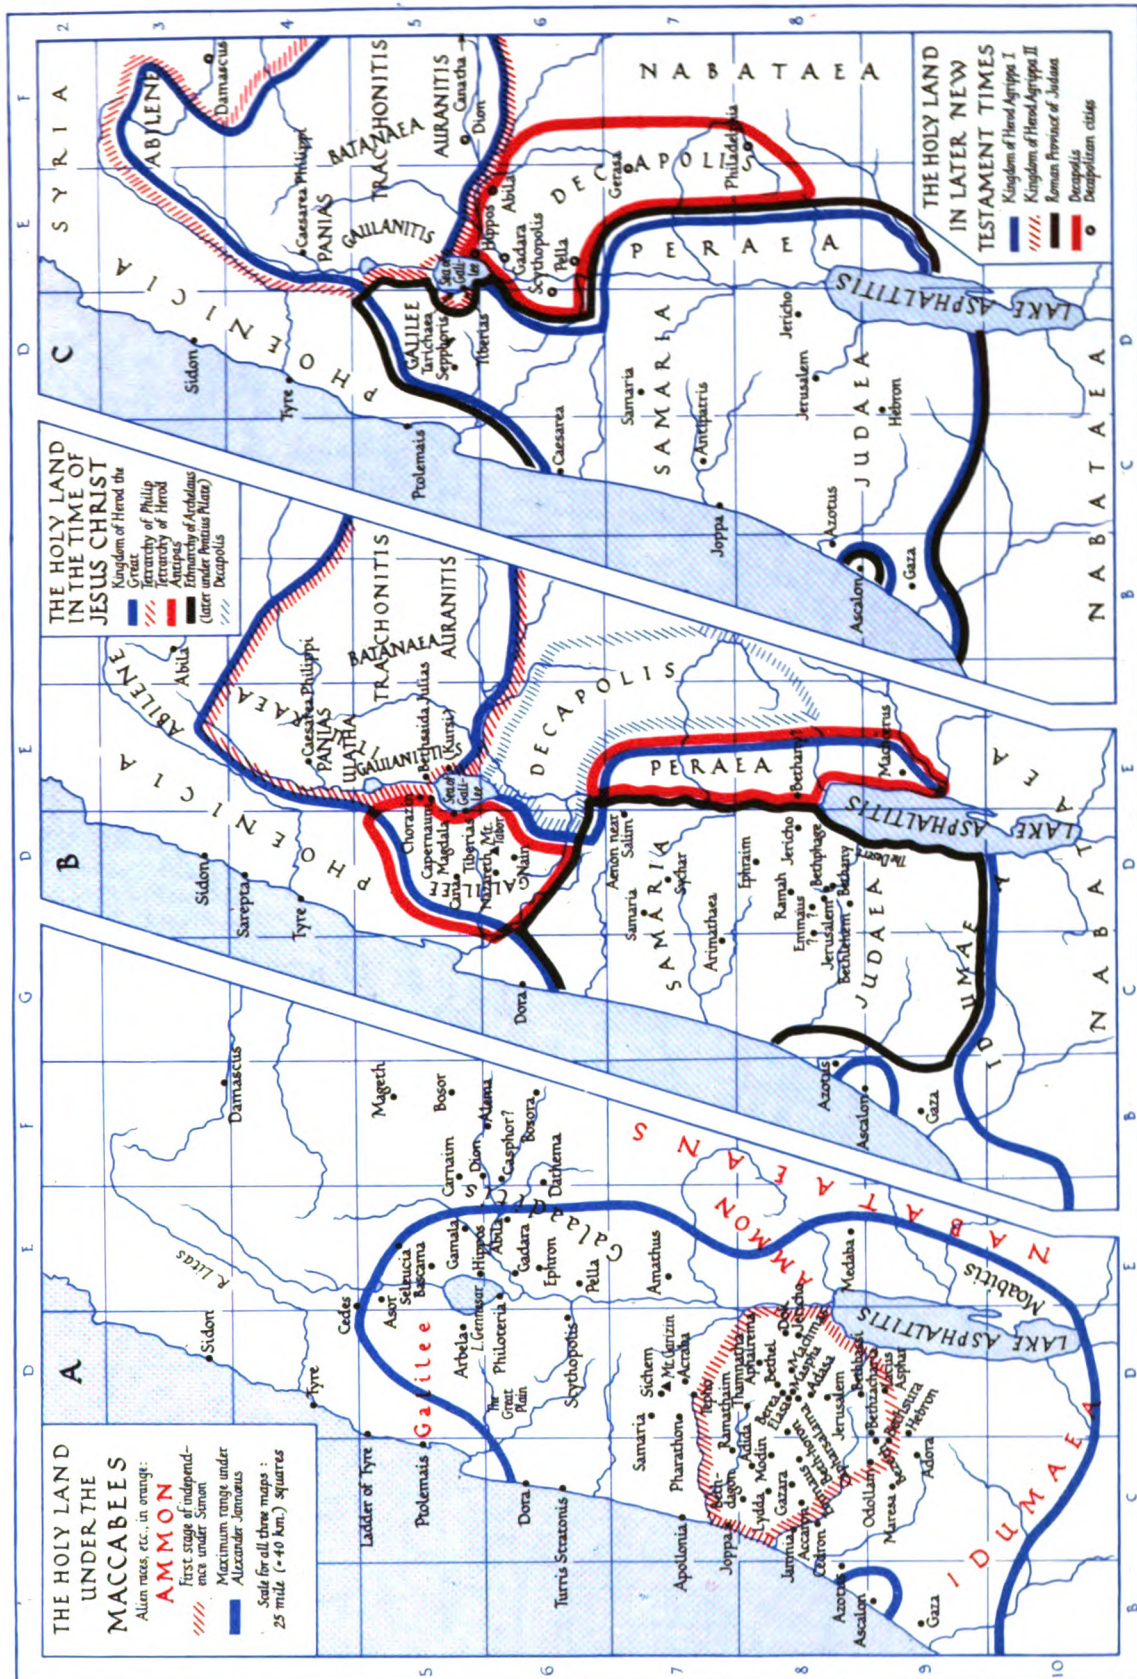

MAP 6

GENERAL PLAN OF JERUSALEM

Quarter-mile squares

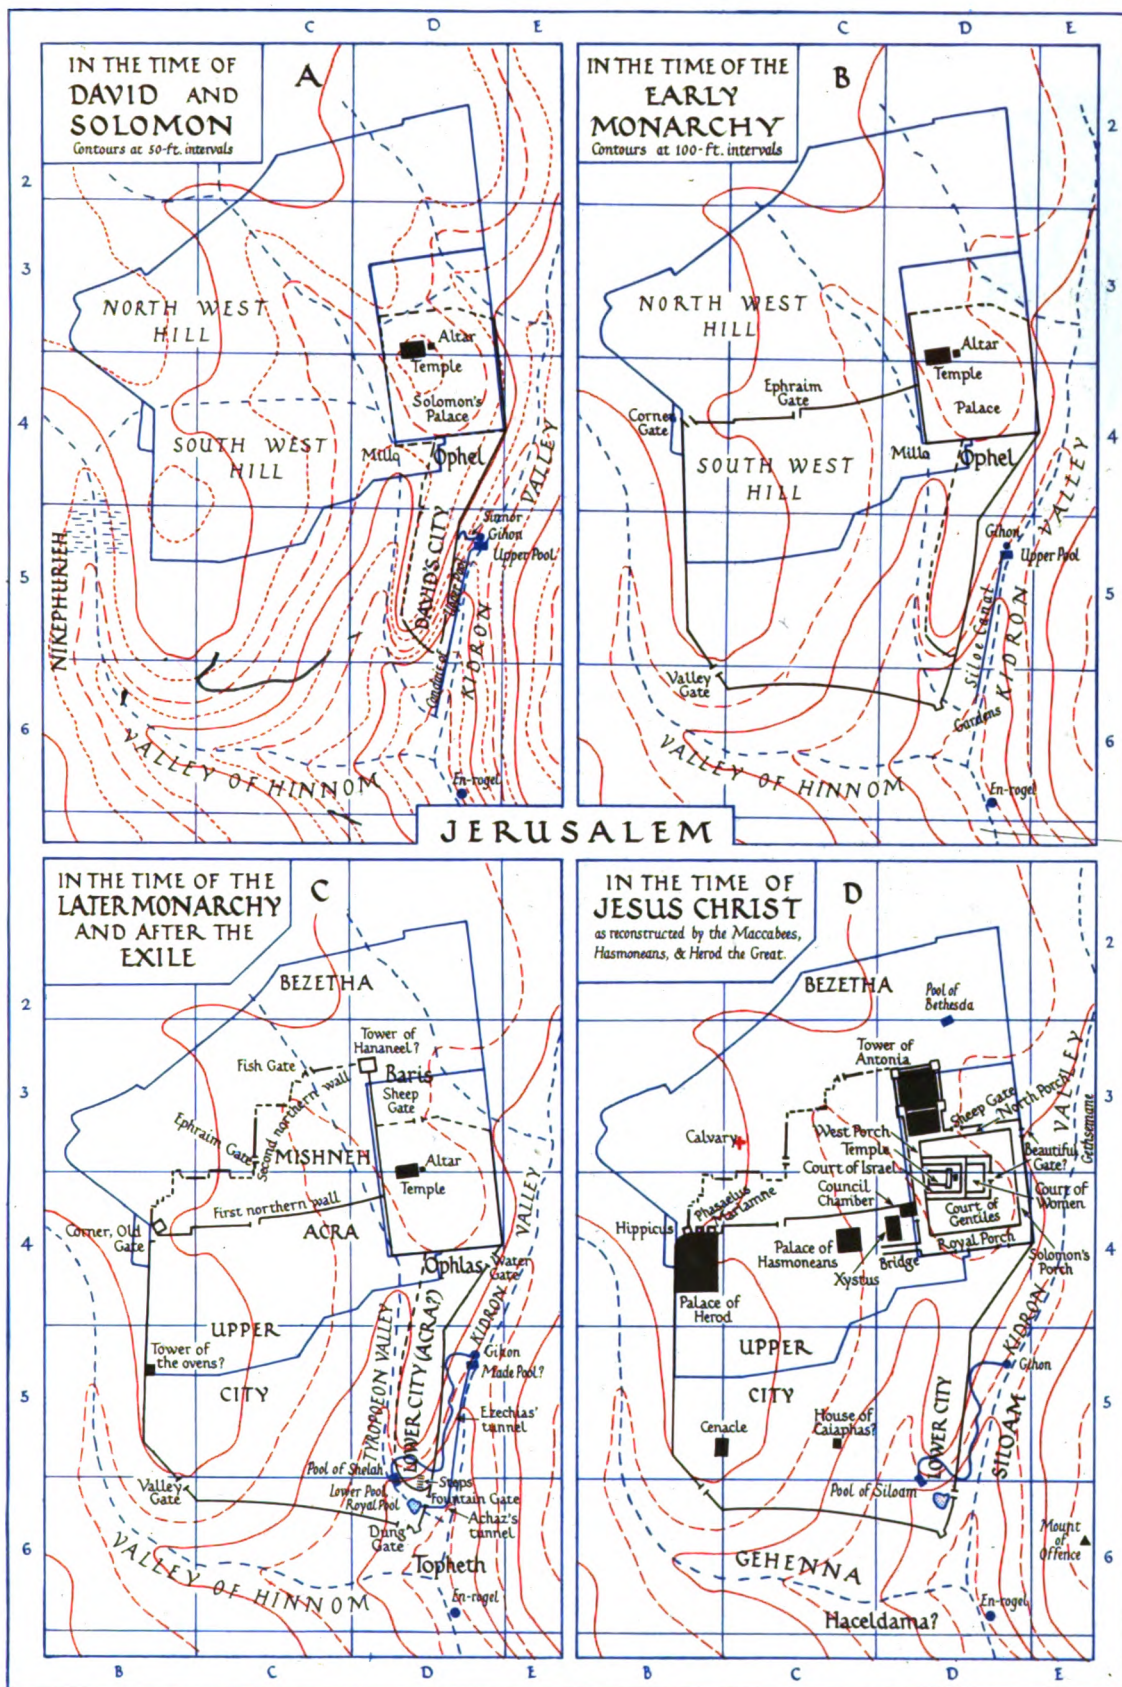

Line of the present walls

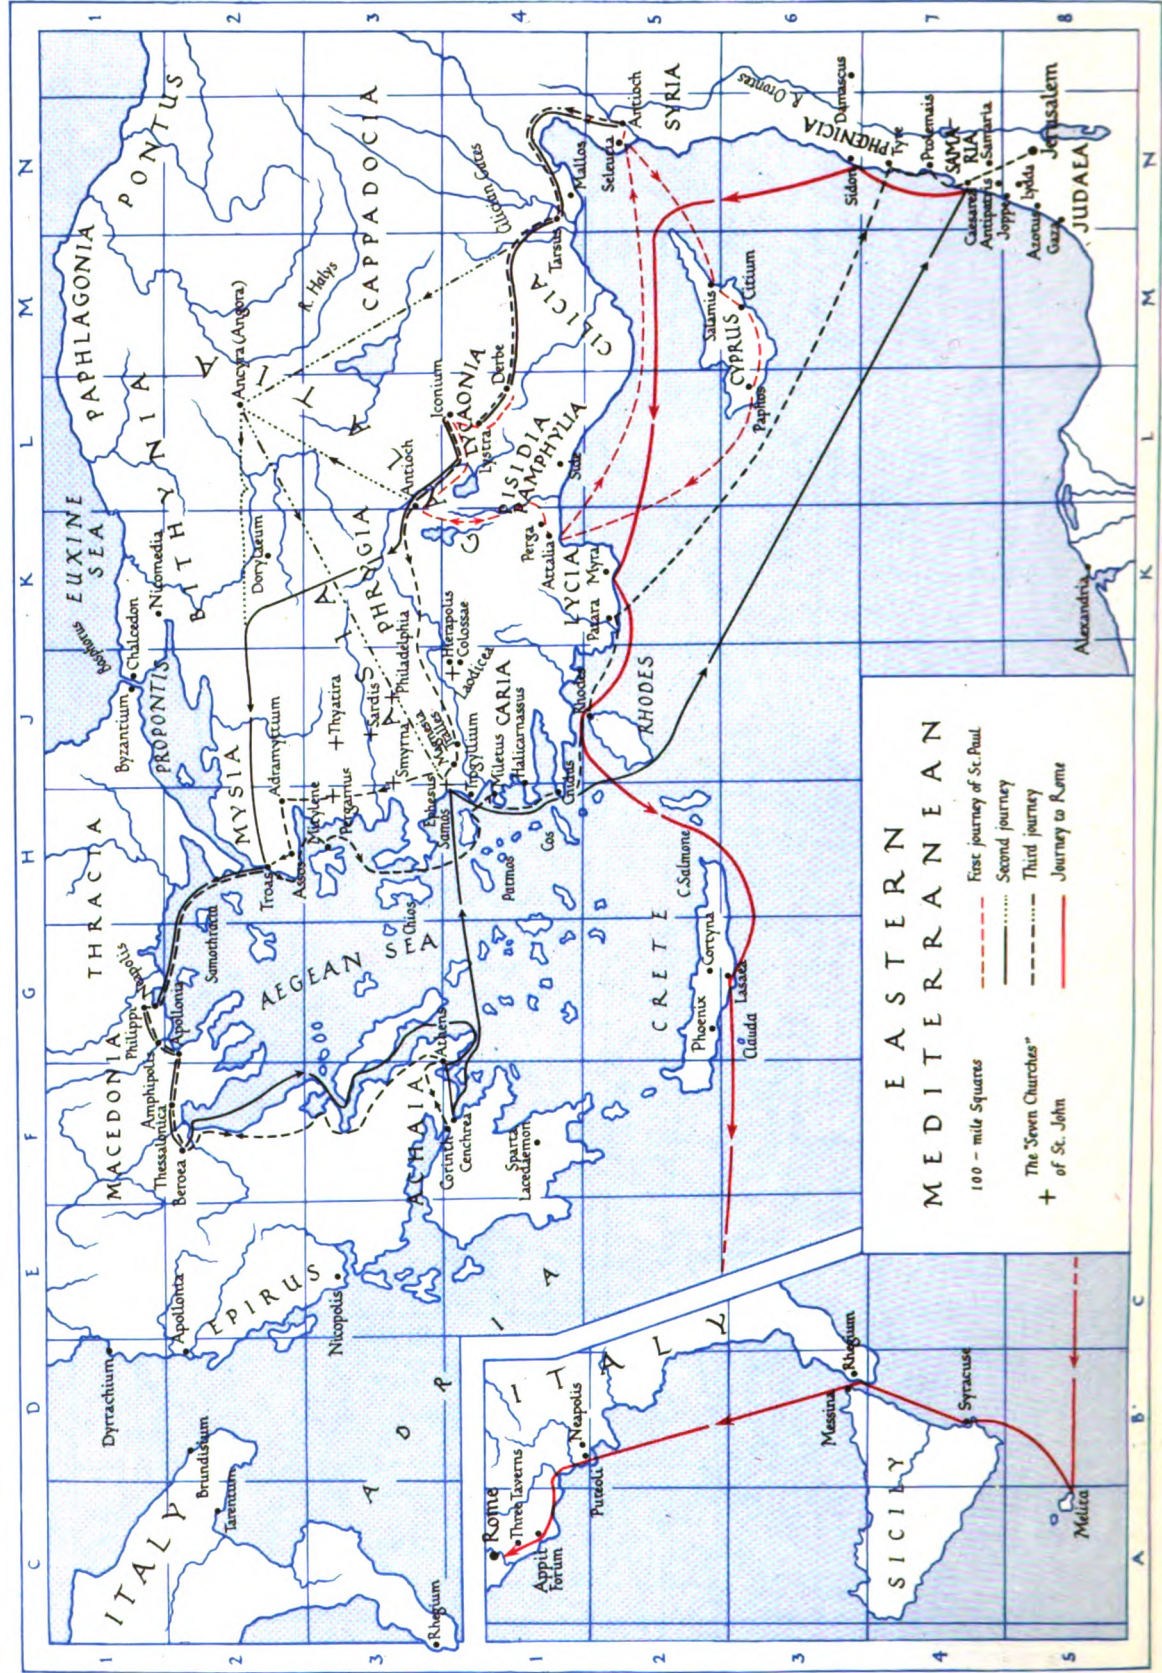

Line of the walls at other times

— Aqueduct

--- Valley

In the period maps opposite, the line of the present walls is indicated in faint blue, and the walls of the period in black line, continuous if certain, broken if uncertain.

U.C. BERKELEY LIBRARIES

C005630823

